All Protista have sensation. Some seek the light, others avoid it. A jar will arrest their activity, which will be resumed as soon as the fear caused thereby is abated. The Didinium shows more than such responsive sensation.

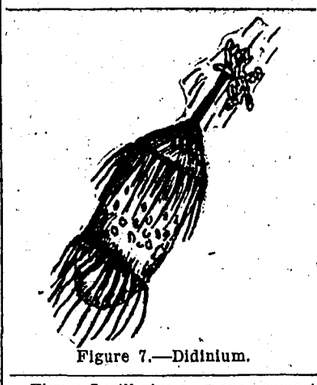

Figure 7.—Didinium.

Figure 7 will give a more correct idea of this creature than any description. It reminds one of a handleless jug rounded off at the bottom. Above and below are two rings of celia which by a forward and backward motion propel in either direction, or by simultaneous movement in a circular direction, drive the animal with remarkable swiftness round like a wheel. Or by rotating the celia of one ring in one direction and those of the other ring in the opposite direction, it is able to remain still. The Didinium is an incessant hunter, and has a most wonderful equipment. From the mouth of the jug projects a long and flexible tongue, and by the side of this is a tuft of what might at first be taken for celia, but carefully examined they prove to be a quiver of arrows, the substance of the soft celiae being hardened and like glass rods drawn to the finest point. These can be loosened and projected at its prey. They seem to have more than mechanical action. The infusoria they strike immediately succumbs, or becomes helpless. They are poison carriers. When the Didinium finds an infusoria, it approaches and lets fly a shower of arrows, some of which always reach the mark. Then it approaches the helpless creature, runs out its long tongue which takes hold of it and draws it to the mouth. It is not an indiscriminate feeder, although it will take one of its own kind. It prefers the algae feeding Paranaccium, one of which it is in the act of seizing.

These monads manifest in degree the same intelligence in pursuit of food; selection and rejection; the avoidance of obstacles; caution, fear, and cunning in capturing their prey, that is shown by higher animals. Intelligence is not estimated by weight, or measure, and size does not count in its manifestation. A bee exhibits along the line of the necessities of its existence, as perfect reasoning powers as man,—narrower limits, that is all.

The mouse is as cunning in its sphere of life as the elephant. And here these monads, so minute that thousands of them heaped together would be no more than a mote scarcely discernible, display all these psychic phenomena.

(To be continued.)

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

The Future Revealed.

And a Murder Committed, Predicted Eighteen Years Previously.

A HORRIBLE PROPHECY.

Marie Thierault, One of the Most Beautiful Women of Paris, Has Been Murdered by Her Rival, Lucette Youquelet, and the Prediction of a Clairvoyant, Made Over Eighteen Years Ago, Has Been Fulfilled to the Letter.

The murder itself, one of the most atrocious and cold-blooded and seemingly without reason beyond jealousy of the superior beauty of Mlle. Thierault, was enough to shock Paris, but when the story of the fulfillment of the prediction was brought out the case created a sensation seldom if ever equalled as a result of any crime.

The case is one of the most striking fulfillments of a prophecy in the annals of crime. Over eighteen years ago, when Marie Thierault was a babe in her mother's arms, a clairvoyant named Mme Picquinot prophesied that the child would grow to be amazingly beautiful, admired by scores of men, would reign as a popular favorite in Paris, and then before she was 20 years old she would be murdered by a rival, a blonde, and furthermore, that she would be killed by a dagger riven into her breast while she slept, and that the dagger would pin to the body of the girl the queen of spades.

This prophecy has been fulfilled to the least detail, for the body of Marie Thierault was found in her rooms in the Rue Alvard, a dagger driven into her breast and pinning upon her bosom the fatal queen of spades.

Murderess Never Hears Prophecy.

The most astounding feature of the case, seemingly, is that neither Marie Thierault nor her murderer, Lucette Yoquelet, ever heard of the prophecy.

The prophecy itself, written by the clairvoyant, now dead, has been presented to the court by the mother of the murdered girl and it will be used by the defense in an attempt to prove that in committing the crime Lucette Yoquelet was moved and governed by some mysterious power, and was not responsible.

Eighteen years ago at Bregny there lived a hard-working honest couple named Thierault, to whom was born in August, 1887, a daughter. Neither Mme. Thierault nor her husband was handsome and both were approaching middle age when the child was given them. They had longed for children and when baby Marie was born their happiness was unbounded. It was baptized Marie.

When the child was about seven months old her mother, who was a woman of small education and superstitious, took her to Mme Picquinot, an old woman who had much renown as a clairvoyant and teller of fortunes among the poorer people, and who at times was patronized even by the wealthier classes.

Death Predicted When Baby.

The prophecy written by Mme Picquinot threw the mother into terror. It read as follows:

"The child is born to a life of happiness which shall end in terrible form. I see no way to avert it, although I pray her parents to keep her close at home for the three moons after January 14, 1907. I cannot see the date, but the date, January 14, 1907, appears many times, and always there is a new moon shining.

"This child, baptized Marie, will live with her parents until she is 14, and will become more beautiful than all others. She will be sent to a convent school and when she returns home all persons will be amazed at her exceeding loveliness. I pray her parents to keep her always at home with them, although in the trance I see her going to Paris. I see men raving over her beauty. I see her best friend, a tall, beautiful blonde. I see a moon light night, with the light shining in at a window. I see Marie Thierault dead with a dagger driven into her beautiful white breast. I see a queen of spades, smeared with blood, pinned to her breast with the dagger. I see her friend, the blonde woman, with blood on her hands, fleeing.

"I pray that these things may not be true. I pray the parents of this child to keep her from Paris, and from a blonde woman. I have seen all these things in a vision."

That is the queer document, written by the now dead clairvoyant, which has served to make the murder of Marie Thierault one of the strangest the world has ever known.

Gives No Promise of Beauty in Youth.

Now, when Marie Thierault was a little girl at Bregny she was not beautiful, nor did she show any promise of beauty beyond the long limbs, and the glorious black hair, and a pair of fine eyes. The photograph taken after her first communion shows her an angular child, evidently shy, too highly colored and awkward, with an awkwardness that appears even in the picture. The mother was comforted. She looked upon her rather homely child and was almost glad that she was homely, for surely the clairvoyant was wrong. Then, when she was about 12 she suddenly became beautiful. It was as if the butterfly had burst from the chrysalis. So great was her beauty that even men stopped to gaze at the child-woman whose perfection of face and figure attracted every eye. At 14, her head already filled with romance, and with admirers and flatterers at every turn, she was sent to a convent school. The sisters feared that her beauty would prove her fatal gift. They wanted her to take the veil and her mother, with the memory of the prophecy terrorizing, urged the child to become a sister. She herself, her mind filled with high ideals, half decided to renounce the flesh, but her father, although a churchman, refused to consent.

Suddenly Shines Forth in Brilliancy.

At 17 she came forth from the school so beautiful that all who saw were amazed. She was a brunette, with perfect complexion, a wonderful mass of hair that seemed to live. Her black eyes were glorious and in figure she was tall, straight, as supple and as graceful as the young deer.

The mother prayed daily that the prophecy might not be fulfilled, but when she saw the wondrous beauty of her child she feared. A year ago an offer of a position as model in one of the great millinery stores drew the girl to Paris. The mother wept, prayed, begged, and entreated, but the family was poor and the father insisted that the girl be permitted to take advantage of the salary offered her.

From the first her beauty caused a sensation in Paris. The masculine beauty judges who parade the boulevards and inspect every girl in the shops, who rave over the newest beauty and who wine and dine the models, found her out. The artists, who always are searching for perfect womanhood, discovered her and pleaded with her to pose. In a few weeks she was the rage of that part of Paris which crowns some beautiful girl its queen and then strives to dethrone her.

Makes Blonde Friend in Paris.

The admiration, the flattery, the temptations passed over Marie Thierault. Ignorant of the world, but innocent and protected by the prayers of her mother and the good sisters, she mingled with the immoral and was clean. Like a child she enoyed the clean. Like a child she enjoyed the jewelry, the fine raiment. She wrote to her mother and told her everything and she promised to come home on January 14, and remain until three new moons had passed. She planned to visit her mother, and then pay a visit to the sisters and remain in the cloister until after the time set by her mother.

Late in the fall Marie Thierault met Lucette Yoquelot, another model employed by a rival firm. Lucette posed in the studios in the Latin Quartier. Between the two there appeared to spring up a wonderful friendship. The Yoquelet was as perfect a type of blonde as the Thierault was a brunette. After a few weeks they took a tiny partment in the Rue Alvard, and established themselves there and seemed happy. Mlle. Yoquelet urged Marie Thierault to pose in the studios, and increase her income. After a time she prevailed upon the girl to do so. About that time Marie Thierault wrote to her mother telling her about her new friend. She received an instant reply, asking if her friend was a blonde, and telling her, pleading with her, to leave the other woman if she was a blonde. The intensity of the letter impressed the daughter, but she laughed at her mother's warning and wrote her that her friend was blonde, but one of the dearest and best girls in the world, and that they loved each other.

Mother Tries to Separate Them.

For weeks Mme Thierault pleaded with her daughter to leave the blonde woman, and prayed her to come home. The girl at first laughed, then was annoyed, then angry at her mother.

She wrote a letter telling her mother that she was foolish. Then came letters pleading with her to come home, as she had promised. Instead of having the desired effect the new entreaties served only to anger the girl, and when the date for her promised visit came she wrote, postponing it, and saying that she would come in a fortnight. The mother wrote wild, appealing letters, telling her daughter that she was in terrible danger, and praying that she come home at once. The girl, worried, but exasperated, remained in Paris.

So far as can be learned there never was the slightest quarrel between her and Lucette Yoquelot. But, on the evening of Jan. 18, the two girls dined with a crowd of students at a boulevard cafe. There were other women present, but these two overshone all in beauty, and finally, when the men were flushed with wine, they decided to choose the queen of beauty—and they conferred the crown upon Marie Thierault, proclaiming her queen of spades—only one voting for Lucette Yoquelet. It was Lucette Yoquelet whose hands placed a crown of roses on the head of her rival, and she drank the toast as heartily as the others.

The girls rode home together.

Killed by Jealous Chum.

At 3 o'clock in the morning Louis Predal, an artist, whose apartment is in the building on the Rue Alvard, was sitting at his window, smoking. The area-way was flooded with moonlight. His eyes rested upon the window opposite, and after a moment he made out the form of a woman, and then, as the moonlight moved across the room, he saw the body of a woman, half-disrobed, reclining upon a couch, and watched until, as the moonlight moved up inch by inch, it revealed a dagger sticking into the bosom.

They found the body of the beautiful Marie Thierault there, with the dagger pinning the queen of spades on her breast, and later they found Lucette Yoquelet, her hands covered with blood, whimpering in a corner, in terror over the deed she had done.

Thus was the prophecy fulfilled to the bewilderment of the men of science who scoff at clairvoyants and prophets.—Chicago Tribune.

The Cause in Indianapolis, Ind.

To the Editor:—It is a pleasure to again write in regard to the work here of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists. I have had charge of the meetings and in face of the terrible fight with Kingsley we have succeeded beyond our expectations.

At first our crowd was small, but deeply interested. Every Sunday it grew, and now we see success written in every line. We do not intend to give up the good work, but with the noble aid of all good workers will climb the ladder to the topmost round.

It is also a pleasure to mention Mrs. Frances Ruddick, a most wonderful slate-writer. She has been faithful and without her aid I could not have succeeded as I have with the work here. Every Sunday night she has given up her own service at home to come to our aid for almost nothing. She deserves great credit. February 17, she received a message on a book slate in plain view of the whole audience, in gold letters, saying, "Love and greeting to all, and success to the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.—J. W. Westerfield." This was a message from their first president, and was plain proof of spirit return.

We are still holding forth at 135 N. Delaware street, and have good attendance. The second Sunday in March we will have Mr. Wattles, and hope to give him a hearty welcome. We are also looking forward to a Sunday during April with Mr. Grimshaw of St. Louis, and last but not least, we have made partial arrangements for Algernon S. Crapsey, of Rochester, N. Y., who has been lately expelled from the Episcopal ministry for heresy, to lecture for us.

We are looking forward with pleasure to be able to meet all our obligations, and to give to our hearers the best, knowing as we do that all that is true, good and beautiful can be ours if we live the life that will show but one spark of the divine within us.

Last evening Mrs. M. C. Jacobs held a social for the benefit of the I. S. A. S., and will hold another one next Wednesday evening. I also have been holding them and so far Mrs. Jacobs and myself have made them quite profitable. She gave many beautiful messages, independent voices all around her.

Mrs. Carrie H. Mong was with me a few days last week and we did some good work in the short time, soliciting aid. She left feeling much rejoiced over the little that had been accomplished, feeling it would certainly grow in the near future to much good for all concerned.

The Helping Hand Fresh Air Club is growing steadily and we are looking forward to be able to make some heart happy and smiles return to some sadder face.

I wish to say that much good is being done here for the cause I love so dearly. Could I only live to see all the world converted and say,

The angel world is all around us
We shall ever with them stay;
We shall gather by the wayside
Gems to brighten every day.

MRS. MARTHA WOOLSEY.

AT HOME AGAIN.

After Three Weeks of Visiting and Work.

To the Editor:—I am at home again, after three weeks' visit with friends in different parts of Michigan and Ohio. While in Detroit, Mich., I was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gates. On February 12, Mrs. Gates invited a company of friends to meet me. The evening was spent with music, recitations and pleasant conversation, after which we were served with a delicious luncheon.

Mesdames Gaffney and Smelt assisted Mrs. Gates at serving. The afternoon of the 14th Mrs. McDonald gave a valentine party. Several mediums were present, and the afternoon was pleasantly passed with messages and words of cheer from the guides.

At 6 o'clock we were called to the dining room where a well-laden table decorated in national colors and lighted by candles, and loaded with delicacies. Neatly folded in our napkins we found valentines as favors. It was an afternoon long to be remembered, a feast for both soul and body.

The evening of the 14th attended a public social given under the auspices of the Earnest Workers' Society. Met many pleasant people and had a good time.

The president, officers and members with one accord invited me to lecture to them, and on Sunday evening, February 24, I occupied the platform and spoke to a very large audience. The hall was packed to the doors. Many stood all through the service, and as many more were turned away. Too much cannot be said for the officers of this noble band of earnest workers. The president and minister, Rev. Mary Stein, now on her third year as pastor, is loved and respected by all. In Mrs. Dr. Fisk the sweet message-bearer, who is also vice-president, she has an able support. Mrs. Fish, by her untiring efforts, endeared herself to all.

On Sunday evening the 26th, a reception was tendered me by the earnest workers at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Fish, on Trumbell avenue, where between seventy-five and a hundred people gathered to give me a welcome. Rev. Mary Stein assisted Dr. and Mrs. Fish in receiving. After the formalities of the reception were over an elaborate musical and literary program was rendered by home talent, and later came a social, and all entered into the spirit of the occasion and enjoyed themselves. The ladies brought well-filled lunch boxes that were sold to the highest bidder, and from the satisfied expression on their faces and the scent of turkey, chicken, fruits, etc., in the air and from my own palate I would say the food was fit for the gods. In the wee small hours of the morning we separated, they bidding me God speed on my way.

I look back over my visit with the dear ones of Detroit as one of the pleasantest experiences of my public life, and words are inadequate to express what I feel toward them all for their expressions of kindness and love toward me. Enroute home I stopped over at Lansing, Mich., and gave the First Spiritual Society a lecture for the benefit of the temple fund. The ladies are working hard and hope some day to have a temple in Lansing where our state meeting and conventions may be held.

I met many old friends and some new ones. I enjoyed every moment with them.

While there I was initiated into the Magi Temple of Learning.

With kindly greetings to all workers in the field and best wishes for The Progressive Thinker, I am fraternally,

MRS. AMANDA COFFMAN.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

SEE A PHANTOM TRAIN.

Strange Apparition Said to Have Sped Through Watseka, Ill., at Rate of Sixty Miles an Hour.

Bloomington, Ill.—A phantom freight train on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois is worrying some of the trainmen and engineers of that road. The train is said to have whirled through Watseka at a speed of sixty miles an hour.

A heavy freight train in charge of Conductor Fox and Engineer Hazard was occupying the sidetrack there when the phantom raced by. Operator Eckery, who was on duty, also saw the train and made an entry in his train book. When he reported the train to the dispatcher the latter reprimanded him, stating that no such train was on the division and for him to wake up. When the crew corroborated the story of the operator and described the train rushing by regardless of the stop signal, the engineer at the throttle and the fireman shoveling coal, the dispatchers began to take notice and ask for further particulars.

When Operator Burnett of the Toledo, Peoria & Western, which crosses the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at that point, also reported seeing the strange train the phantom began to take on the appearance of reality. All crews are on the alert to see if there will be a repetition of the strange phenomenon.

YOUR REAL LIFE TOLD AT LAST.

REMARKABLE PSYCHIC ASTROLOGER, TELLS PAST AND FUTURE WITH AMAZING ACCURACY TO ALL WHO WRITE, ABSOLUTELY FREE.

WHAT DOES YOUR STAR SAY YOU WILL DO THE BALANCE OF THIS YEAR?

Would you like to know for the asking, what the future has in store for you? Would it be any advantage to you to know how your health will be; how your business will go; whether you will be happy or unhappy; what your weak points and strong characteristics are, and how to improve your condition, financially, socially and physically? If so, here is an opportunity you should grasp at once. It will cost you nothing. If you are pleased, tell your friends. That's all. You will be doing them a favor.

Professor H. Spencer Lewis seems to have lifted the veil of mystery that has enveloped the science of Astrology for centuries past. Combining his knowledge of Psychic Force with his wonderful system of Astrology, he has brought his method down to an absolute scientific basis, reading the strange workings of the planets under whose sign one is born with amazing accuracy. So startling are his predictions that those who receive them are almost carried to the days of great miracles and forced to believe that Professor Lewis must be possessed of a strange but wonderful power. Even astrologers stand amazed at the accuracy with which he foretells the future.

If you wish a free reading of your life, with predictions for the balance of the year, on a beautiful Astral-Psychic Chart; if you wish to know your lucky and unlucky periods; what pitfalls to avoid; what opportunities to grasp; suggestions on business, friends, enemies, love, marriage ties, travels, sickness, deaths, etc., write a short letter to Prof. H. Spencer Lewis, Room 13, No 1566 Broadway, New York City, and you will receive it by mail without delay and absolutely free. Be sure to give date of birth and age, and spell out your first name and last name and write your address plainly. Kindly send two-cent stamp to cover cost of mailing, and Prof. Lewis will send you your reading and a free copy of his new and finely illustrated book entitled "Your Past, Present and Future Revealed," without any charge whatever. Be sure to tell your friends.

OGEANIDES

A Psychical Novel.—Price Paper, Cover, 50 Cents.

This great novel is written with a distinct purpose, to set forth certain phases of spirit life and experience, as related to the gifted and inspired author. The question of soul mates, or of the united male and female constituting the completed ego or angel, is advanced as a vital truth of spirit experience in the higher realms. The work radiates a good spiritual influence, and is very interesting.

It is a spiritual book for Spiritualists, and interesting for everyone.

MARY ANNE CAREW

Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.—Neat Cloth Cover, Price $1.00.

This great work relates the experiences of a young wife and mother, early called to the portals of death. It is very realistic, and the narrative is charmingly natural, and beautiful in its tone of sweetness. It brings that other world very near to us; the comfort it brings to those bereaved of the dear ones of the home and family, is beyond one's power to describe. All readers will be charmed with it as well as spiritually aided and uplifted.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How it Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Fiber or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary; "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

TWO IN ONE

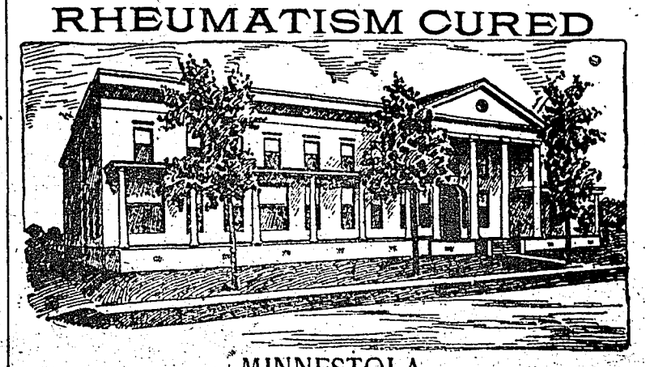
A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books combined at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED



is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year,	$1 00
Six Months,	50cts
Thirteen Weeks,	25cts
Single Copy,	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE:

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Truth the Savior.

"Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

Detached from its connections here is a text, one of the very best in the Bible. There is an incentive for wisdom with a promise of freedom. The ignorant and the enslaved are assured that the acquirement of truth brings that freedom.

The words are peculiarly applicable to all who inquire into the origin of the dominant religion, and become acquainted with the shameful frauds on which it was based; who reject those frauds and accept Truth and nothing but the truth; who build anew with Truth alone for guide. He will escape the multitude of errors which have been imposed on him and the world by a designing priesthood. He will become freed from the false teaching of the fall of man; of original sin; of total depravity; of an unending hell to punish inherited sin; of a devil to preside over a bottomless pit; of a junior God to die on a cross to rescue a world doomed to endless woe, conditioned they believe he is what the clergy say he is.

It has been maintained with much force, that the few wise things claimed to have come from the lips of Jesus were abstracted by the writers of the Gospels from the "Morals of Seneca," and this quoted passage, so unlike other words credited to Jesus, and so identical with the style of Seneca, lends countenance to such an opinion. How very unlike Jesus' own words, as given, Matt. 23:15—

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves."

Reader, don't mistake, and suppose the above words were addressed to the missionary element of to-day, however close the resemblance between the hypocrites of those times and the propagandists of the faith in these later years.

The text, a gem in a mass of rubbish, is an admirable one for Spiritualists, as well for Agnostics, and it may with great propriety be called into service by them, not because Jesus or Seneca—born before him—used those words, but because a great truth is there declared without regard to who uttered them, that merits immortality.

THE "DEAD EASIES."

The "Rev." "Dr." Hugh Moore has been a notorious character in Spiritualism, his principal phase of mediumship being "materialization." Special prominence has been given to the man by the insatiate gullibles and the "eminent" "Dead Easies," who have recognized at his seances their cousins and their aunts, etc., etc., and who have cast a dark shadow over our cause, by their lack of ordinary discrimination and intelligence in matters of this kind. In New York Moore reaped a rich financial harvest, but the end has come, as has been expected for some time.

DELAYED ARTICLES.

Prof. W. M. Lockwood's Article on "Divorce," and several other communications of special importance which we expected to have space for this week, will appear later on.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

Who plays for more than he can lose with pleasure stakes his heart.—Herbert.

Genius always gives its best first; prudence at last.—Lavater.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

Solitude and concentration will reveal a world of thought, the likeness of which man had never dreamed.—Abolt.

A LETTER AND A REPLY.

To the Editor:—Of late I have been reading your paper with both interest and profit, and admire the zeal and earnestness of some of its correspondents, but must confess to no little surprise at some things I find, and disgust at others—the latter but seldom, however. Now, your spirit or that of The Progressive Thinker, rather, seems to be one of freedom for all and if I am not in error about this observation, I want to submit a few reflections founded upon what I see from time to time in the paper.

I note on the editorial page (p. 4) under the caption of "A Crushing Arraignment," the following: "Christianity has retarded the progress of the human race by at least fifteen hundred years." This is the reputed language of a Dr. Oswald in "Secrets of the East."

This statement I deny emphatically and unequivocally. The author can not prove this assertion. It would be just as correct to say that science or civilization had so done as to attribute this obstruction to Christianity in any degree. Had he affirmed this of the corruptions of the system, he might have had more of a truthful basis for his statements. The writer of the article under the foregoing caption would find it as difficult as impossible to show that at any time in the past Christianity ever wasted a day disputing about "idiotic dogmas" or attempting "to gain the heaven of a future world by despising the blessings of the present."

I am not only astonished at such reckless assertions, but disgusted as well. That the Christian church ever sacrificed "eighteen millions of the noblest and bravest of our fellowmen," I insist is impossible of proof. I challenge the evidence! His entire reference to butchery in the name of the Christian church is misleading and false. When he says that "Christianity has turned whole nations of freedom-loving men into slaves and flunkeys," I deny it, and say that it is impossible for him to prove his assertion. Let him proceed to the test. Some things in his article are true enough, i. e., "the worst tyranny that has ever oppressed the children of earth was perpetrated in the name of God." But, there is sore need for care and discrimination in the usual wholesale, hot-headed charges against Christianity.

In the article immediately below the one I except to and under "Tricks That Are Vain," I read, "Sometimes, in searching for the cause of things we have to go below the surface; a superficial examination will not reveal all the facts." This is good reading and a good rule to impress upon all who would rush into making wild and impossible charges against Christianity. Strict and impartial observation to this commonsense safe rule of criticism and investigation, will reveal the astounding error of the hasty aspersions cast upon Christianity in the excerpt from "Secrets of the East."

Christianity, pure and simple, has nothing to fear or dread in the way of exposure, at the hands of any fair, honest, truthful investigation. Not a thing. It will sustain itself in any encounter. The corruptions of Christianity is a different subject altogether and I am not god-father to any of the spawn.

The object of investigation should be to arrive at truth, pure and undefiled. Any other object is a waste of time and to no good purpose. Few, indeed, are equal to such exploits, since the majority of instances reveals "the axe to grind" at the expense of truth.

I rejoice in every effort that endeavors to better the existing conditions where it is needed, and hail all true attempts with a prayer for success; and I am equally disgusted, and now and then ashamed, of efforts transparently plain to belittle truth to gratify prejudice or bigotry.

MACK O'DONNELL.

Warsaw, Ind.

Reply to a Critic.

We suspicion our correspondent who takes exception to the article headed "A Crushing Arraignment," in our issue of February 9, has never read Draper's "Conflict of Religious Ideas," nor the same author's "Intellectual Development of Europe," and probably never saw Foote and Wheeler's "Crimes of Christianity," nor White's "Warfare of Science with Theology." Until he has read and fully comprehends the force of facts therein taught he is not well equipped for a contest in the direction he assumes.

"The Secrets of the East," extracts from which filled our correspondent with "disgust," is the production of that eminent scholar, Felix L. Oswald, a Belgian, and graduate of the University of Brussels. He was the author of numerous publications, and was killed in a railroad accident at Syracuse, N. Y., September 6, 1906. Living he would have delighted to reply to his gentlemanly assailant.

If our critic is not barred by the Index Prohibitorious from reading facts in regard to the outrages of Christianity on humanity, if he will turn his attention in that direction for a few years, we are certain, if a churchman, he will be expelled for heresy; for no honest man, knowing the true history of Christianity, can long retain connection with a system of religion founded on fraud and violence.

The denial that "eighteen millions of the noblest and bravest of our fellows were sacrificed by the church," and a challenge to prove it, would be cordially accepted, had we the ambition and leisure to follow the subject.

Leaving out the vast millions of lives wasted in the so-called crusades; the loss of life during warfare in subjecting populous nations to the banner of the cross; the Inquisitorial sacrifices; the witch killing, protracted for centuries; the numerous massacres in the name of God, we turn our attention with horror to the slaughter of natives in our own America, by Christians, and their almost entire extinction. Las Casas, a Catholic missionary, noted for his mildness of character, who was commissioned "Universal Protector of the Indies, wrote:

"Forty millions of natives were ruthlessly slaughtered by their Christian conquerors in Peru alone."

Prescott, the historian, in his "Conquest of Mexico," Vol. 1, Book 1, Chap. 3, Alden's edition, p. 77, relating the Christian barbarities against the Aztecs, said:

"Strange, that, in every country, the most fiendish passions of the human heart have been those kindled in the name of religion."

The same voluminous author, justly the pride of every American scholar, in Book 2, Chap. 1, p. 165, relates the following:

"One chief named Hatuey, who had fled from St. Domingo to escape the oppressions of the invaders, made a desperate resistance, for which he was condemned by Velasquez to be burned alive. When urged at the stake to embrace Christianity, that his soul might find admission into heaven, he inquired if white men would go there. On being answered in the affirmative, he exclaimed: 'Then I will not be a Christian; for I would not go again to a place where I must find men so cruel.'"

We have just re-read the quotations from "The Secrets of the East." It was not only a crushing, but a terrible arraignment; and we don't wonder that "the wounded bird flutters." It cannot be too widely read; because it relates facts the churches labor to suppress; facts on these subjects are not placed in the hands of ministerial students, and are carefully excluded from public libraries. School books, generally compiled by a superannuated D. D., contain nothing which hints at the wrongs of the church, or of the vices and crimes of its founders. Those who dare tell the truth are soon silenced as heretics, and the "idiotic dogmas" are rehearsed with increased energy.

Our friend takes exceptions to the expression by Dr. Oswald, of "The idiotic dogmas of the church." What other name can better designate the nonsensical idea of piling the sins of the world on one person, then sacrificing that person on a cross to placate the wrath of an angry God? If that is not the climax of idiocy, then we have it in feasting on the body and blood of that dead God, as administered by the church in the eucharist. And, if not brutal, does it not border on idiocy to teach that a parent, all love, has doomed all humanity to eternal and undying torture, unless it will believe one Jesus is its conditional savior? Instead of censure for the expression "idiotic dogmas," it seems to us the culmination of educated thought.

"It is the corruptions of Christianity," says our friend in substance, which have produced these terrible excesses complained of." The founder of that system is presented to us as saying:

"Those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me."—Luke 19:27.

Is there not in that direction of the Master full authority for all the terrible crimes against humanity which have followed? What if he did talk of nonresistence when he was instructing to acts of violence! The truth is, the Christian system, whatever it is in theory, has been corrupt in practice from its very inception.

We are glad our correspondent is a reader of The Progressive Thinker. As an honest, truthful man he will find much to admire and instruct in its columns. The more he reads it the more fully will he be convinced that all our correspondents aim to relate only truth. We would most earnestly impress on him, and on all our readers, that "opinions are neither criminal nor virtuous;" that when a well-informed writer gives it as his opinion that Christianity has retarded science fifteen hundred years it is of no more worth than the opinion of another equally learned in the same direction; but of much more value than of one not learned at all.

As before expressed in these columns, from the very nature of theological education, the majority of preachers are wholly ignorant of remote, or even of the medieval past. The bible, a good concordance, and some favorite ecclesiastical history, possibly somebody's Commentaries, with the art of sermon construction, constitute the average dominie's educational course. He who goes beyond these, and gains the truth from a thousand sources, becomes the doubter, and is silenced because he is too well informed to occupy an orthodox pulpit. It is not an ignoramus who is expelled from the church for heresy, neither was he one who wrote "The Secrets of the East."

FAKE MATERIALIZING MEDIUMS.

They have found in the Light of Truth an organ. However rank the deception on the part of the mediums,—that made no difference—the paper rushed to their defense, and that course has proved a losing game—the paper has never paid expenses and never will. So low has it sunk in the estimation of Spiritualists generally, that not a single prominent speaker in our ranks but what would shrink from having his (or her) name mentioned in its columns.

HE IS FAILING.

Mr. Theo. J. Mayer has for some time been lying dangerously ill in Washington, hovering between life and death. Mrs. Longley, secretary of the N. S. A., writes:

"Our dear Theodore J. Mayer seems to be failing rapidly. The doctors have forbidden any callers to enter his apartment. He is very low. I have feared from the first that this is his fatal illness."

DR. PEEBLES IN INDIA.

To the Editor:—Dr. J. M. Peebles has established a Spiritual Research Society in Calcutta, India, and the prospects of its success as a center for the dissemination of spiritual truth, are good. A call is made on the liberal people of the States to send spiritual literature, books, pamphlets, etc., to the people of Calcutta. The N. S. A. has sent a package of tracts, and asks others to forward any useful books or papers they may have to spare.

Mrs. Eva Rachel Armitage, who has been entertaining Dr. Peebles, makes the call. She says they will gladly pay cost of transportation of the literature. She may be addressed at 173 Down Circaar Road, Calcutta, India. MARY T. LONGLEY.

Washington, D. C.

Legerdemain Spiritualism.

The Part It Is Acting in Bringing Disgrace Upon Spiritualism---The Dead-Easies Who Have Endorsed the Moores Should Hang Their Heads In Shame.

To the Editor:—You have doubtless seen the newspaper accounts about the Moores. The chief spirit, the leading lady of the Moores has "fessed up," and her accounts of the "goings-on" in that house have been corroborated in detail, apparently, by several other persons; and Moore himself, it is reported, has returned to Dayton, Ohio, his former home. You should see that he does not appeal to the Spiritualists in that locality, and set up business again. He might be bold enough to attempt this. I went to a seance at their house a year or so ago, and was so disgusted with the rot I saw then, and the credulity of the sitters, that I never took the trouble to go again, even to expose them, as I knew my story would not be believed in that crowd. I could have sat down and duplicated the whole thing immediately; and you will find all their tricks explained in detail in my book on "The Psychical Phenomena in Spiritualism," which should have a large sale among your readers. I enclose you circular herewith. I attack Podmore's methods of dealing with the Home case, and that should appeal to your readers especially, I think. I want to get all the facts in connection with this Moore business, and have a note on it in the April Journal. Sincerely Yours, HEREWARD CARRINGTON.

New York City, N. Y.

"Rev." "Dr." Hugh R. Moore is in trouble. He was in serious trouble at Lily Dale when he was expelled from the grounds; in Philadelphia, too, he had his troubles, and now in New York trouble again has commenced for him, according to an article in the New York World of March 6, which is reproduced below.

In connection with this exposure of Moore, comes another from Anderson, Ind., showing that legerdemain still plays its part in producing "spirit" manifestations for the entertainment of the insatiate gullibles. Once before at the Blake seance a piece was surreptitiously cut from a "materialized spirit handkerchief passed around the circle. An examination thereof in the light showed the handkerchief was composed of ordinary silk. The piece, of course, never "dematerialized." It was of material origin. This last exposure ought to prohibit the Blakes from entering any camp-ground.

In a late Progressive Thinker, Mr. Berry of Washington, relates how he tested a materializing medium by clasping in his hands the materialized dress of the spirit. In his strong grasp it completely dematerialized, leaving nothing. Let every camp official demand that test. It is a simple one. Gather up with a kindly, harmonious, loving feeling, a handfull of the materialized dress, and NINETY-NINE TIMES OUT OF A HUNDRED you will have a garment made specially by human art to deceive the public.

The history of Spiritualism will have to be re-written in connection with the physical phenomena. Legerdemain has been such a prominent factor therein, that the manifestations are overshadowed with doubt throughout. The Moore exposure has long been expected by the prominent Spiritualists of New York, and it has not come any too soon. Thoroughly endorsed by the Light of Truth and a few "Dead Easies," he has reaped a bountiful harvest in New York City. The exposure of Moore and Mrs. Blake furnishes another Object Lesson for Spiritualists to consider, and they will begin to realize that legerdemain has played an extremely prominent part in our Cause, and they will thank The Progressive Thinker for the course it has pursued in trying to eliminate the same from our ranks.

Another Object Lesson.

Another of the Questionable Light of Truth mediums has had to undergo the ordeal of an exposure, affording an object lesson of deep significance for Spiritualists to consider. As a matter of news to our readers, to which they are entitled, we spread before them statements made in reference to "Rev." Hugh R. Moore of New York, and the Blakes of Anderson, Ind.

Operators of fraudulent Spiritualistic manifestations in this city, particularly in the Spiritualist stronghold bounded by Sixth and Seventh avenue, between Thirteenth and Twenty-third streets, are in a state of panic and many are preparing to flee the city as the result of a bomb thrown into their camp by Mrs. Harriet E. Strickland, a real live spirit, now living at No. 526 East Twenty-fourth street, Flatbush.

Mrs. Strickland has retained Andrew Macrery, a lawyer, of No. 31 Nassau street, to institute proceedings against the "Rev. Dr." Hugh R. Moore, a medium now operating at 120 West Thirteenth street, and pastor of the First Church of Progressive Spiritualists, upon whom personal service in the suit was made Monday afternoon. Mrs. Strickland charges "Dr." Moore with defamation of character, and names a score of persons to whom he is alleged to have defamed her, in order, she says, to protect his spook business from exposure. She asks $25,000 damages from Moore.

In proving the case Mrs. Strickland says she will bring about so conclusive an expose of the phenomena of "materialization" as to leave no doubt in the minds of even lifetime believers of the fraud which has been practiced upon them. Mrs. Strickland says that she served as a spirit in Moore's materializations for one year at a salary of $12 a week, and gives the names of eight other persons who were employed as spirits. She also goes into details of the inside workings of the spook fraternity.

The other persons who were employed as spirits, Mrs. Strickland says, are Martin C. Tieten of No. 154 West Twenty-first street; Ferdinand E. Wieboldt, of No. 30 West Eighteenth street; Louis Cohen, of Havemeyer street, Brooklyn; Tessie White of No. 1086 Second avenue; Lena Cassl, who lives in the Moore home; Mrs. Cora H. Moore and her two daughters, Niobe, 11 years old, and Irma, 6 years old.

World Verifies Her Story.

The World was informed some time ago of the approaching suit and made an investigation of its own. It found that every statement made by Mrs. Strickland as to the inside workings of the spook house at No. 120 West Thirteenth street was true. It was found that one of the "spirits" is a barkeeper, as was formerly Moore himself; another was formerly elevator man in a department store; a third was a cash girl in the same store; one is a servant girl of the Moores. The small daughters of the Moores, Niobe and Irma, were pressed into the service at every seance held at the spook house.

Five materializations are held regularly each week at $1 for each person admitted. Sunday nights the regular services of the First Church of Progressive Spiritualists is held at Berkeley Lyceum at 25 cents each. Friday nights "a broad light" seance is given in the spook house in West Thirteenth street. This costs the investigators 50 cents. All this money went to Moore personally.

Moore has had experiences in several cities. He narrowly escaped arrest on a charge of perpetrating a fraud in Philadelphia. Tar and feathers were being prepared for him in Lily Dale, N. Y., when he suddenly departed, and in 1904 Moore and his wife were exposed in Brooklyn and arrested. Evidence of fraud was lacking, and they were soon released, and at once left that borough and set up their spook shop in the West Thirteenth street house.

His Head Spook Nearly a Year.

Mrs. Strickland, in her statement, says she was Moore's head woman "spook" from December of 1905 until November of 1906. She left him, she states, because a young man, Robert Crowe, of No. 1788 Amsterdam avenue, to whom she appeared as the spirit of his dead sister Lizzie, discovered that she was not a spirit. She went to Moore and told him that she had been found out; that Crowe knew her name and all about her and that, in her opinion, she had better stop spooking. Moore, she says, said that he was sorry her identity had become known because he considered her one of the best spirits in the business, and he would have a hard time finding another woman to take her place, but that it would be well for her, under the circumstances, to disappear from the spook colony.

Here is where the defamation of character comes in. Mrs. Strickland was known to all the believers, who frequently saw her about the Moore home as a companion to Mrs. Moore. There had been some suspicion that she was one of the spirits at Moore's seances, but the dealer in spooks succeeded in explaining satisfactorily that the believer was wrong in such an impression. When Mrs. Strickland was no longer seen about the house, which was in November of last year, and at the same time a spirit answering her description as to height, build and walk had also disappeared from Moore's group of eight spooks, explanations were demanded, and she asserts that Moore, to prevent further talk, told several persons that she was a bad woman, a woman of loose character, and he had been obliged to ask her to leave his home.

Moore's Letter to Her.

Following is a copy of a letter which Mrs. Strickland received from Moore when she was living in Minnesota in 1905. He was at that time regularly holding seances at Spook House, in West Thirteenth street. The letter reads:

Sept. 22, 1905.

"My Dear Friend Hattie:

"* * * Now to business. Martin tells us you do not know what you will do this winter. Now, little girl, we have a nice big house, not elegantly, but comfortably furnished. We have a big, strong, fat Dutch servant girl who has been with us two years. Cora [his wife] and I have our own private offices and our own work. Cora is unable to look after the house and must depend upon the girl for all. Now, what we want is a good girl, just like you, to come and be managing housekeeper. Make the girl do all the rough, hard work and you act as house mother and wife to all. We want a girl who will take the house as though it was hers and not like a servant in any sense of the word. You should have as much freedom as a regular wife.

"After talking over with Martin what I wanted, he suggested you, and said that nothing would do his heart more good than to have you near him. Now Hattie, we tender you this offer, and will give you $5 per week, with opportunities for extras. We want some one who will keep neat and able to answer door calls and 'phone calls. Lizzie cannot do it. You would have a good home and be with good friends. Consider the matter and let us know as soon as possible. Martin is a fine-looking boy, tall and graceful, and always dresses in the height of fashion. He has worked for me for over a year and I expect him to continue indefinitely. We are doing a land office business and pay out over $60 per week wages alone, besides two telephones, electricity, gas, $116 rent, and in all over $400 per month expense outside of table and clothing. So you can see we must be busy.

"I always said, give a thousand dollars to me, and I would control New York, and I have done it. This will be our banner winter in the work. We are incorporated and chartered, and so trouble is not expected. We open meetings for lectures and tests, in Berkeley Lyceum, on Forty-fourth street, Oct. 1. The meetings will be free to the public and our expenses there will be nearly $50 per Sunday.

* * * * "HUGH."

Won Her to the Work.

Mrs. Harriet Strickland's maiden name was Foster. Martin, referred to in the letter, is her brother. Mrs. Strickland and her husband, Louis, and her brother, Martin, both of whom came here from Minnesota to help in preparing the suit, will leave New York this morning for Northern Minnesota, where both men are in business, and will return when the case is called.

Mrs. Strickland has known the "Rev. Dr." Moore for the last seven years. Her father, while on a fishing trip to Onset Bay, Mass., made the acquaintance of the medium, who was there at a Spiritualists camp-meeting. The Fosters at that time lived in Quincy street Brooklyn, and soon after the fishing excursion the Moores went to Brooklyn to live and rented a house next door to that of the Fosters.

Mr. Foster did not take much stock in the medium; in fact, tried to keep away from him as much as possible, without deliberately insulting the man. Martin Foster, however, was willing to hear the medium tell of his powers, and soon Moore had Martin where he wanted him. He got him so deeply interested in Spiritualism that the young man began to neglect his business and soon became one of Moore's spooks at a small salary. This method of earning a living he began in 1899, and traveled about the country with Moore, putting up physical seances at camp-meetings. Mrs. Strickland was 16 years old at this time, time and knew it was wrong for her brother to travel about as a spirit with Moore, because she had heard her father say so. She pleaded with her brother not to lead such a life. She finally married and moved West with her husband.

Martin stayed with Moore and received letters from his sister frequently and in one she told him she wished she could find something to do whereby she could make a little extra money to help along her husband. Martin told Moore about his sister, and the letter printed here soon followed.

Spirits Were Crude.

As an example of the crudeness of Moore's materializations it can be said that he can take a person who has never been to a seance, show that person one performance of spirits, and that same day turn the applicant for work out as a full-fledged spook. This he did with Mrs. Strickland.

She arrived in New York on a Wednesday morning in December, 1905, and went at once to Moore's house. At the midday dinner she was introduced to all the persons who were performing as spirits, and after the meal went up to the parlor, and there sat around until the believers began to arrive for the afternoon seance. She was introduced to many of these persons as a new believer of the faith, and that afternoon she sat in the dark seance room and watched Moore's assistants deceive the men, women and children. She really did not know then that Moore had not some way of really bringing spirits to earth.

After the seance it was all explained to her, and when Mrs. Moore rigged her out in the phosphorus gauze all the spirits used, she rebelled, and declared that she did not believe she could go into the room and fool people. "I really believe," she told them, "from the inward feeling I have that I am doing wrong, and something tells me not to do this."

The "Rev. Dr." and his wife pleaded with her to help them along in their business and the other spooks told her she was foolish; that the public was a good thing, and because it was so easy that it was not a crime to take all they could get from it. Finally the young woman gave in, and, heavily veiled, she followed the white-robed figures down stairs to the main floor for the evening seance and made her way into the room behind the big organ. She stepped out from between the curtains as the spirit of the wife of Colonel Charles MacArthur of 1341 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. Mrs. Moore had been appearing as the Colonel's wife up to this time and was glad, she said, for the relief.

She Was 60 Spirits a Seance.

From that time Mrs. Strickland's jobs increased until she performed as many as sixty characters in one night to about twenty persons, going to each in the guise of three different spirits. There was one person to whom she went who succeeded in getting her away from Moore's spook house.

This was Robert Crowe, an honest, sensible Scotchman. Crowe had not been going to Moore's place long before Mrs. Strickland appeared to him as his sister, Lizzie. Crowe's mother, Jane, and another brother, Harry, were also patrons. Mrs. Crowe was a very happy woman when the spirit of her daughter appeared to her. At that time it would have been impossible to make her believe that she was being duped and she became greatly attached to the spirit. Its voice usually brought tears to her eyes and she would go back to her seat thoroughly exhausted after the ten minutes spent with "Lizzie."

The Crowe family could not keep away from the spook emporium. They went there three times a week, and paid a dollar each on every occasion, making $9 a week, and when Moore started other schemes to rake in the dollars Mrs. Crowe was always one of the first subscribers to his propositions.

When Moore arranged for the summer vacation for his believers, with the idea of getting them corralled in one place and away from their homes, the Crowe family decided to go along. He hired a small hotel at Budd's Lake, New Jersey. Mrs. Crowe stayed there from July 4 until the season was over, Sept. 1, and the boys went there from New York often.

Ends Career in Spookland.

It was this vacation season that ended the career of Mrs. Strickland in the spirit world and shocked all the inhabitants of that segment of the universe. She had been discovered. Moore said it was a lie, that some person was trying to injure him as a medium. His spooks upheld him in the argument. Of course, it was a lie, they told others. There was nothing to be discovered, because as soon as a person doubted that the white-garbed figure was a spirit that spirit lost all interest and dematerialized.

Robert Crowe was too bright and too much of an investigator to suit Moore. The latter had intimated often that it would please him if Robert did not attend the seances; but Robert threatened to make trouble if he was not permitted to talk with the spirit of his sister Lizzie whenever she appeared to his mother and brother. Robert did not believe as his family did that the spirit was that of Lizzie. He knew better, but he did not know who was the spirit and had made up his mind to find out.

Before the seances had been trans-

(Continued on page 8.)

"The Great Work."

The Veteran Worker, Lyman C. Howe, Gives a General Survey and Concluding Review of this Epoch-Making Book.

In this, as preceding volumes, the author makes his own definitions, without respect to lexicons. This enables the reader to understand his meaning. Spirituality is, according to his definition: "A state or condition of the soul of man wherein it is brought into conscious and immediate contact with the world of spiritual material, and spiritual things, through the channels of the five spiritual senses."

"Morality is man's established Harmonic relation to the Constructive Principle of his own being."

Consciousness is found difficult to define. It embraces so much, and has so many subtle suggestions, and shades of meaning that it is regarded as well nigh infinite. Nevertheless, "The Great School" makes the attempt to corral it long enough to condense some salient meanings into a sentence thus: Consciousness, the fundamental receiving attribute of the intelligent soul." "The sensorium of the soul."

The general trend of this unique volume is to urge the importance of constructive evolution, moral living, individualization and development of character; and disparagement of mediumship.

All development by means of the "destructive principle" is deprecated, as devolutionary and wrong. But nature employs that process in her normal methods of advancing individual life. Death is the climax of the destructive process, and inevitable in all progressive individualization. It accomplishes in a few hours, the great desideratum for the attainment of which the Great School requires many years of discipline, self-control, and moral exaction. Here is the Great Psychic Conundrum.

Why are such rigid moral requirements indispensable to the evolution of those psychic conditions that enable the Master to see, hear, and converse at will with excarnate spirits? It is agreed that death does not change the moral character; but it does open the spiritual senses, and presumably, any spirit can exercise the same powers, at will, which requires years of strenuous living, and earnest effort for students in the Great School to accomplish; and they must heed and live the moral law to attain it, and lose it as soon as they lapse from that moral standard; whereas, the death-emancipated souls come into possession of the same powers at once, and without effort or any moral preparation. If the unfleshed are as immoral and degraded as they are represented to be, surely it cannot require much moral discipline to fit any of us to share in their companionship.

The only hindrance to the free and full possession of this power seems to be the physical body, and death removes that, by the destructive process. Since this is the only way it can be removed, it must be nature's normal process and in no way harmful to the individual soul. I know of no evidence that the most moral spirits have any advantage over the immoral so far as it effects the spiritual senses in seeing, hearing and conversing with each other.

In this world, any man with good eyes and ears, can see, hear and converse with all grades of moral and immoral people, though he be of the lowest moral character, or a desperate criminal. But the claim is that these powers (seeing, hearing and conversing with the unfleshed) are exercised at will, at any time or place, while the seer is in a perfectly normal condition, in the full, active exercise of all his faculties, capacities and powers. That he can mingle freely with various grades of spirits, and survey the different spheres and societies in the spirit world, with as much freedom and familiarity as he converses with people in this world. Now this is a condition that must be gained by practice, and long continued discipline, and when attained, is it a normal condition? Evidently not.

The author uses the egg and the hatching process to illustrate this method of pushing the soul out of its shell into familiar touch with the spirit world before its normal ripening. To make the simile complete the chick should begin to see, and use its wings while yet in the shell, and the body but half grown. But this would be abnormal; and if the effort were successful, it would likely be fatal to the life of the bird. Besides the hatching process depends as much upon outside influences as the inside. Keep the egg at a temperature of 34 degrees Fahrenheit, and no amount of inside effort will produce a living chick. When it is full grown in the shell, under the congenial warmth of the mother's body, lower the temperature 10 degrees and all progress stops and the chick dies. But when all goes well, it often happens that the shell is too much for the struggling chick, and it must have help or die. Then the hypnotist comes to the rescue, and gently removes the obstruction, and perhaps warms the young bird with his magnetic hands, and sets it free. I have done this myself, and I could never see that I or the chick was the worse for it.

But the encouragement of morality is always to be commended. Spiritualism teaches that. The gravity that draws spirits together and unites them in harmonious groups and societies is in the moral nature, and all variations are determined by the degrees of moral evolution in each individual.

A short chapter on "Desire and Choice" makes so many illogical statements that the limits of this letter will not permit any approximate analysis of it. A few samples will indicate its character. He refers to those who "Profess to believe that Will is an automatic instrument of Desire," and assumes that "if such could be demonstrated as a literal fact of nature it would carry with it the following inevitable results: It would reduce man from the status of an individualized intelligent entity to that of an automatic instrument under the absolute domination and control of his inherent desires." Well, if his "inherent desires" do not control him, what does? Is it outherent desires? All that he does consciously and voluntarily, he does in response to desires, whether inherent or not. Can the author tell us how the will can act without the authority of a motive behind it? Are not motives constructed from desires? Is there a sphere of effects without causes?

"2. It would destroy completely and irrevocably man's acknowledged power of individual choice." This is an assertion without proof. Automaton as defined by Webster is "a self-moving machine, or one which has the moving power within itself." Is not man a self-moving, organized individual? Nothing can destroy man's power of choice, except a rule of chance, which all advocates of independent free will, consciously or unconsciously, support. If choice is not caused it is accident. If accident, it has no merit or demerit attached to any of its proceedings. There can be no responsibility attached to any conduct that is dictated and directed by independent free will (or chance) The moment you set the police on its track with threatenings of the penalties that follow disobedience, your independent free will disappears. What is the object of police if it be not to control the conduct of persons who may be disposed to evil? If they are controlled, in whole or in part, where is the freedom of the will? Those policemen are vigorous manufacturers of desire. They create motives, and dictate the authority of the will.

If individuals could be free and independent no law could reach them, no punishment could touch them, no authority could hold them responsible. But I must omit much that is very significant in this particular sphere of thought, and refer to one more illustration.

The author supposes a soul between two conflicting desires. He cannot respond to both. He must choose between them. Here is the way this situation is analyzed. "In this instance there were two desires." "The will acted in the line of only one of them." * * * "There was at least one of these desires that did not control the action of the will." "This proves at least that there are some desires that do not control the will." Who ever suspected that all desires control the will? But the illustration is extended. He supposes fifty different desires from which the soul must make its choice. "It finally chooses but one of these." "It matters not what may have been the motive which actuated that particular choice. The important fact is that forty-nine desires have been set aside, denied, or overruled by the Soul."

"Now if the will were an automatic instrument of desire it would be compelled by the law of its relation to respond, in this instance, to fifty different desires at the same time instead of one."

If that is not sophistry, where will you find it?

Because the will obeys the strongest appeal, as it always must, is no reason that the other forty-nine desires do not exercise their influence in deciding the motive for action; nor is it any proof that the will is not controlled by causes acting through the intellect to determine the choice which rules the action. No man ever consciously and voluntarily exercises the will without a motive; and the strongest desire, or desires, that make up the choice, invariably rule the will in action. If this be not so, then the choice is a chance, and cause and effect are ruled out of the case. No amount of sophistry, or special pleading can disturb this position. The author seems to think it necessary to establish uncaused choice and independent free will to justify his claim that the vast majority of the human race take the "Pathway that leads to the North toward the land of spiritual darkness and death." Just what is meant by these two "pathways," the one to the North and the other to the South, is not clear. Are they real "pathways"? Do they represent the points of compass on the earth? Or are they mere figures of speech, to express imaginary conditions? At best, the picture, as presented, is almost dismal, improbable—not to say impossible—and irrational travesty upon the order of Nature. It represents Nature as an infinite abortion. After toiling up the ages in progressive evolution of types, and reaching the climax of individuality in man, she ceases her work, and places the issues of eternity in the keeping of weak, undeveloped individual men and women, with conditions, and acting causes, which assure the final destruction of all but a fated few who by accident choose the "pathway that leads to the South." Is there a more doleful picture of human destiny, and of the mad mockery of nature and her works, to be found in the creeds of savages, or the dark ages of Christianity? In what infinite contrast is the spiritual philosophy, which presents a consistent system of progressive evolution that continues the work of past ages in a universal advancement of the splendid attainment expressed in man, and loses not one individual out of the triumphant march of human progress from plane to plane and from sphere to sphere through the countless ages of eternity.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

Fredonia, N. Y.

Transmutation of Metals.

To the Editor:—

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep or touch not Pierian Spring."

Replying to Mr. Howe's criticism in his review of "The Great Work," of Feb. 23, anent "the facts" regarding the transmutation of metals as given by Prof. Kennedy Duncan, it will be difficult, and probably inexpedient, to explain through your columns the error into which he has unwittingly fallen.

In the work referred to, "The New Knowledge," Part V, chapter I, this subject is made very clear. The following quotation may help those who have not studied the work in question. On page 143 he says: "But [you say] do you mean us to infer that the element uranium [the element, mind you] is transformed into a totally different body? We may as well face the issue squarely; yes, we do."

This particular paragraph from N. K., copied by Mr. Howe from those quoted in The Great Work are from the concluding chapter, reviewing the whole of the preceding statements, not as qualifying them. How difficult it is to "know" without effort, and how impossible it is to judge without having the "facts before us." And in this case how apt is Pope's couplet.

M. B. OLIVER.

Chicago, Ill.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, phyiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price, 25 cents.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. Price, 25 cents.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, the revelation of reserve power, etc. Price, 30 cents.

"The Great Work."

It Has Created a Cyclonic Brain Storm all along the Line.

It is highly interesting to note the different views of the intellectual lights now illuminating the world. All of them who are admitted to the columns of The Progressive Thinker firmly believe in Spirit Return and its attendant multifarious phenomena, but when you attach an "ism" thereto—Spirit"ism" or Spiritual"ism" many of them strenuously object to being so labeled.

There are thousands of intelligent men and women in all the various walks of life—in every sect, cult or literary club—who firmly and unqualifiedly know that Spirit Return IS A FACT, and though they do not make a specialty of making converts, and ignore all "isms" in connection with their belief, yet they are doing a MOST WHOLESOME WORK in calling attention to psychic laws, to their experiences, to the benign influence of a belief that the soul actually survives the death of the body, and their influence is most excellent without being tagged with any "ism."

There are others, equally intelligent, who imbued with a reverential feeling, have formulated a RELIGION out of Spirit Return and its attendant phenomena, and they are exerting a fine beneficial influence in connection therewith.

But with Spirit Return there comes an endless variety of conflicting views and all are uplifting from a spiritual standpoint, if founded on right ETHICAL teachings, inspiring each one to DO GOOD and Be GOOD, to live moral lives, ever striving to aid the unfortunate, to feed the hungry and clothe the naked—with that foundation the diverse views from the spirit side of life do no harm, but possibly do great good, as different lines are sought wherein to uplift humanity. Among these divergent views as to Spirit Return, none stands out more prominently than the following communication:

To the Editor:—Mr. Lyman C. Howe's "review" of "The Great Work" seems to be a very friendly one. AS A SPIRITUALIST I take exception to it. AS A CHRISTIAN and a believer in God's divine word as revealed in the Holy Bible, I absolutely refuse to agree in any way with the postulates laid down in the first chapter, which is passed over by Mr. Howe without any comment, except, "it may serve as a nucleus for the evolution of vigorous discourse, which an hour's thinking will not exhaust."

It has never been proven that "Nature evolves a man." We read from God's word, that man was a special creation. If the first postulate therefore is founded on false premises, then what is the value of the fantastic claim of "Man evolving a master," and the impious suggestion, or rather the sacrilegious inference to be drawn from "The Master Man evolves a ——?"

This is trifling with the truths of revealed religion. An author who is capable of thus attempting to lead his unsuspecting readers from the direct paths of GOD'S WRITTEN MESSAGE to his own creation, into the bewildering mazes of so-called "spiritual enlightenment," endeavors to lure his victims by a simulation of morality to a belief in his sincerity and assumed powers. He surely must invoke the Divine wrath, by denying the divinity of Jesus (God incarnate). To such an one, the further blasphemy of claiming the Savior as a member and initiate and "Master" of the "Great School," is only parallelel by the latter statements of his acquaintance with another "Master" of like or greater power with Jesus. It is almost to be wondered at that he does not for himself claim acquaintance and equality with Jesus. We know our Lord was the Son of God and coequal with him. We have so many friends in spirit land who testify to that, and we have so many friends here who can supplement our own knowledge of SPIRIT RETURN that we are fortified by our own perceptions and the statements of our blessed controls, in stating that the author of this book has committed a "Great Psychological Crime" in publishing it.

Let all of us who have the privilege of direct conscious communication with the spirit world, bend our best endeavors to PROVE THE TRUTH OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES BY THE EVIDENCES OF SPIRIT RETURN AS GIVEN IN ITS PAGES.

Let us treat with SCORN AND CONTEMPT the efforts of THE CHILDREN OF SATAN to overthrow the hallowed beliefs of the past, the faith of our parents and our own determination to adhere to those cherished beliefs and faiths, which some of us are privileged to have confirmed by our spirit friends.

I would not say that this book should not be read because of its manifest insincerity. As far as my reading of it is concerned, I see that it emanates from one who while acknowledging spiritual manifestations, has presented the most ingeniously subtle and dangerous array of specious arguments against mediumistic Spiritualism with which we have yet had to contend. It would seem well for us all to be acquainted with the avowed tactics of one who has attempted to destroy our faith, so that we may be doubly armed by having a knowledge of the worst attack that can ever be made against us, and confirm our own faith in our sense of the "super"natural which does not depend upon intellectual understanding or reasoning power.

Yours very respectfully,
J. S. BENSON.
56 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

All these divergent views endorse Spirit Return, hence must be kindly tolerated. Even the author of THE GREAT WORK knows from actual experience that Spirit Return and its attendant phenomena are facts, hence this discussion between Lyman C. Howe and other celebrities is exciting great interest all along the line.

BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL SERVICE

For Rev. Moses Hull, at San Diego, California.

On Sunday, the 24th of February, the Union Society of Spiritualists of San Jose held memorial service for our arisen brother, Moses Hull. It was before this society that Mr. Hull gave his last address, and its officers and members gladly united in making the memorial service a fitting tribute of love and respect for the memory of one who for many years has been a fearless champion of Modern Spiritualism.

Upon entering the hall at 10 a. m., we found the committee on decoration had transformed the rostrum into a bower of beauty. Across the rear of the platform a bank of evergreens had been placed, and over it hung a large and most beautiful wreath, at the right resting upon an easel, in a handsome frame of white and gold, was a large life-like portrait of Mr. Hull. In the center of the rostrum stood a large chair draped in purple and white. There were many lovely wreaths and vines, their dark leaves shining among the long pendants of white and purple ribbon; a profusion of beautiful flowers stood in groups, or drooped in graceful clusters down the steps of the rostrum to the floor.

The services were opened by a musical selection from Mrs. May Muntz's orchestra, followed by a tender and pathetic invocation by Mrs. Hull. Never did the writer witness a more inspiring scene; Mrs. Hull stood among the flowers, her small hands clasped, the silent tears falling like glittering pearls upon the lilies at her feet, her low vibrant voice thrilling with emotion as she breathed her soul in prayer. The effect upon the audience was marvelous, each heart seemed to cease beating, each breath was hushed, and each soul lifted into a sphere beyond the mortal. At the moment the silken fringes of the misty curtain hanging between the two worlds was lifted, and a vision no earthly language can clearly describe was presented. Standing back of Mrs. Hull as if he had at that moment arisen from the draped chair was Mr. Hull. He was surrounded by a group of those who had been his co-workers in earth life, they all appeared to be draped in long, graceful garments that glistened like the brightest moonlight and seemed to scatter radiance as they moved; each face was luminous, no taint or stain of earth-life marred their bliss; among the number it was thought the refined, spiritual face of Jessie B. Furgason was recognized. Mr. Hull extended his hand over his wife's head and moved his lips as of in speech, but no sound was heard, and in a moment the curtain dropped.

Mrs. Hull, Mr. J. Harker and the writer each gave a brief address. Mrs. Bock and Miss Zink sang those beautiful words written by C. Payson Longley, "Open Those Pearly Gates of Light." Mrs. Barker read several sympathetic letters from friends of Mr. Hull. Our president, Mrs. H. L. Bigelow, in her quiet and effective way rendered a beautiful poem which was greatly appreciated. Mrs. C. Ringlep read appropriate selections from The Progressive Thinker. The services were closed by music and benediction.

NETTIE P. FOX.

"The Great Work."

Dr. J. D. Buck, an Eminent Author and Physician, Has Something Important again to Convey to Our Readers in Reference to The Great Work. He is a firm Believer in Spirit Return and its attendant phenomena.

"REVIEWS" OF "THE GREAT WORK."

Spiritualism going back to the Fox Sisters and the Eddy Brothers was the first agency in bringing to the attention of modern times a group of psychic phenomena INCONTROVERTIBLE AS TO FACTS, extending the boundaries of consciousness far beyond that ordinarily experienced, and demonstrating the existence of disembodied intelligences, and excarnate individuals as communicating with those still in the flesh. This, in brief, is the record of Modern Spiritualism. It is, in itself, a great work, and will stand. The agnostic may deny it; the materialist scout and ridicule it.

Who cares?

Back through the ages the same phenomena extend. Mediums were burned as witches or confined as "insane." It remained for the present age to recognize the psychical facts, and investigate them in a scientific spirit.

But Spiritualism has done another thing. It has CULTIVATED MEDIUMSHIP. Previously the psychic came spontaneously, sporadic, or, as in certain epidemics of the middle ages, it came like the plague or the "Black Death," running through a convent, or affecting a whole community.

A physician may seize the opportunity of studying a peculiar case or form of insanity in order to learn something new regarding disease, or an undiscovered principle of the human mind; but what would be thought of the doctor who should induce or promote insanity in order that he might study it? Cruel and inhuman as is vivisection, would not such a doctor be regarded as still more cruel and inhuman?

Now, admitting the facts of mediumship, another question is raised: Is mediumship, per se, a healthy and desirable psychic condition for the individual? Does it, per se, "promote bodily health and vigor?" or tend to anemia, malnutrition, nervousness? etc., etc. Does it promote, per se, balance, equilibrium, self-control and rational volition? In other words, does mediumship ennoble the man or woman in an all-around sense of health and promote normal evolution? It is claimed by no one that every medium is a mental, moral or physical wreck, or degenerate.

Neither IS IT DENIED by anyone that some, if not all these disastrous results occur in some cases. They "know the dark side of mediumship," and then excuse it on the plea of "voluntary self-sacrifice of the individual for the cause of truth and humanity."

In the first place the sacrifice cannot be "voluntary," if the medium is ignorant of the principles involved, and let us say of the possible results. I have known of scores of young people "sitting for development," knowing no more of what it meant or involved than they knew of the planet Mars. It would be so "interesting" and so "nice" to be a medium! Now these are facts, equally with any other facts of Spiritualism.

Now comes a writer who from long observation and study of mediumship admits all the facts and gives Spiritualism FULL CREDIT FOR ITS WORK, and all the good it has accomplished, but says the effect of mediumship, like hypnotism, is sometimes exceedingly disastrous to the individual, and the tendency is always dangerous, and needs to be safeguarded to say the least.

Nearly every intelligent and honest Spiritualist admits those statements as to facts in some cases—"the dark side of mediumship." This writer in a calm, kindly and scientific spirit goes over the whole ground, and says, "THERE IS A BETTER WAY" of accomplishing the result, viz., demonstrating a future life without sacrificing the well-being of a single human being, or endangering his evolution, but on the contrary, promoting it in every way and to the highest degree.

Now, as a cold matter of fact, what is the result? One might suppose that Spiritualists and writers in Spiritualistic papers, would give such a proposition a candid and intelligent hearing, and decide on the merits of the case in the interest of the simple truth. As a rule, they do nothing of the kind. This is their attitude: "This writer condemns mediumship as being both dangerous and unnecessary," "therefore we must down him and his book, and defend mediumship, right or wrong." The animus of hostility or special pleading is constantly in evidence. Writers wobble through column after column that has no more to do with the thesis of the book than the North Star; or they garble extracts, draw false and illogical deductions from them, and call this "reviewing" the book! Scarcely one of these writers has ever touched the real thesis of the book.

Some are outraged because the author conceals his name, and they cannot get at him personally (possibly to make faces and call names), judging from the methods they have employed.

It is this method of treatment of important truth that I am here commenting on. To attempt to follow the lead of these "reviewers," would lead anyone into endless labyrinths that have nothing whatever to do with the question at issue; nor do they see or attempt to discuss any real issue in The Great Work. The danger or desirability of mediumship was the thesis, in part, of a previous volume, The Great Psychological Crime." The Great Work discusses from title page to finish the "Constructive Principle of Nature in Individual Life." These reviewers neither discuss this principle, which is the keynote in all human evolution, nor as a rule show that they have grasped or are capable of grasping the idea, no matter whether they accept it or not.

Now in conclusion: It is a mistake to assume that such reviews, such special pleading, and befogging of the real issues will pass for law and gospel with the great mass of intelligent truth-seeking Spiritualists. They will prefer to read the book for themselves and form their own judgments. They are too far removed from Calvinism to accept their mental pabulum in that way, even when it bears the label of Spiritualism.

Second: The writers of Spiritualism in great part, are losing the grandest opportunity of a higher evolution and opportunity for Spiritualism itself to broaden its field of vision, utilize the purest and best in all its past, and move to higher planes.

By the present methods, they can hope to influence only the more ignorant and thoughtless, and to hold only those swayed by prejudice. They have already seen their ranks injured by fraudulent mediumship, obsessions, and the charge of free-love doctrines.

Please observe! I am not charging Spiritualism, per se, with any of these things, but is it not true that those claiming to be Spiritualists have dragged them in, and dragged the name of Spiritualism down? The methods of review and discussion to which this article is devoted, will equally dishonor and degrade Spiritualism, or any other cult, or association of individuals who indulge, countenance, or stand for such things.

The Progressive Thinker has done me the honor of publishing one of my brief and imperfect reviews of The Great Work. I trust, Mr. Editor, you will give space to this review of some reviewers and let your thousands of readers judge of the real issues involved.

I am as much a Spiritualist as Theosophist, or a scientist; neither of these cults is all-inclusive, or a finality. Each is good just so far as it contributes to a knowledge of self and the laws and methods that promote the higher evolution of man, and secure individual well-being and happiness.

I refuse to be "labeled" without defining and qualifying myself, the "trade mark."

Truth and righteousness, wherever they may be found, are free to every earnest, honest seeker. To prejudge or obscure for the sake of party, creed, cult, or "for the glory of God" or the "good of the church," is simply the same politics under different names. When I am ready for that I will repair to Rome, kiss the pope's toe or ring, and get the best of its kind, and no cheap imitation! THE GREAT WORK was under way ages before the chair of St. Peter was ever heard of, and it will endure long after its detractors and misinterpreters are forgotten; for it means the building of character and the evolution of man toward the ideal selfhood, the real Christos! It seeks no man, but he that earnestly seeketh it with singleness of purpose, and with the determination to "honor every truth by use,' will surely find it.

J. D. BUCK.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

The discussion is continued on page 7 by Thos. M. Stewart and Wm. Omer Butler.

SEARCH FOR CONTENT—AND YET.

I searched the human race for true content,
But never found it without some alloy,
Some longing undefined, or some vague hope
Does ever fullness of content destroy.
I questioned many people, old and young,
In many spheres of life were those I met;
Oh, yes; they were content, had peace of mind,
Were resigned "to fate," and yet, and yet—
I found some children whom I questioned close,
And asked them if they were happy at their play?
One shot a glance of pity and exclaimed:
"Us happy? well, now, Mister, I should say!
We run, play hide and seek when days are fair,
And puddle round and wade when it is wet;
We have a lot of fun at any time;
I guess we're happy as can be, and yet—
I watched a maid and youth who smilingly
Walked hand in hand along a shady lane,
Their very mien betokened true content;
Perhaps with these contentment will obtain?
And begging pardon for intruding thus,
I asked if they were free from care and fret?
"O, yes;" said they, "we're happy in our love,
Nothing can mar our bliss, and yet, and yet—"
I sighed and let them pass and went my way;
A pang-like pain was tugging at my heart:
Perhaps in wedlock there was true content?
Some wedded couple could this truth impart?
I sought one out and put the question fair,
If they were happy, and had no regret?
"Yes, we are happy," spoke the two at once,
We think we are; and yet, and yet, and yet—"
But still undaunted, and as last resort,
I turned to those who were replete with years,
Perhaps a well-spent life brought full content?
Had stilled all longings, and vague hopes and fears.
Imagine my surprise, my sad dismay,
When told by these that they would fain forget
Life's troubled dream, and then would rest content,
But could not yet, not yet, not yet, not yet—

La Envoye.

Since all the progress of the ages past
Sprang up through agitation, not content,
'Tis well to prove all things, and then at last,
Contented we shall die when life is spent.

J. H. YENNI.

Chicago, Illinois.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT RESTORES EYESIGHT.

SpectaelesCan Be Abandoncd.

This instrument, which the inventors have patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventors of "Actina" claim there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye for most forms of disease. Cataracts, pterygia, and other abnormal growths can be removed and weakened vision improved or restored by the new and more humane method. If this is a fact there will be no need to go blind or to wear spectacles.

"Actina has been tested in hundreds of cases and has affected marvelous cures. So confident are the inventors that this device is an article of great merit that they give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid:

They issue a book of 100 pages—a complete dictionary of disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will cure, what others think of it, what marvelous cures it has affected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all is sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the library of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342R, 811-813 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED
WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

903

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.
By Lilian Whiting,

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music-Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.
LOVES OF THE POETS. The Predestined Friend; Vita Nouva; "One Day, My Siren."
IN THAT NEW WORLD. Pisa and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.
ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.
LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.
For Sale at this office.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

PROGRESSION Or How a Spirit Advances in Spirit Life. The evolution of Man. By Michael Faraday. Price, 15c.

ROMANISM EXPOSED Is a pamphlet of 80 pages, in reply to Prof. David Swing, Priest Cashman and Dr. Withrow, and is principally in defense of Protestantism. A concise little pamphlet. Price 15 cents.

Works of Thomas Paine
A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising;
Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.
This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK.
Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.
BY DR. T. A. BLAND,
With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.
"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.
"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.
Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.
For the home, the lyceum and societies. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture. By Emma Rood Tuttle. A book by the aid of which a progressive lyceum, a spiritual or liberal society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents; by the dozen, 40 cents. Express charges unpaid.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.
By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.
By Thomas Carlyle.
A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

A MASTERLY WORK.
Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth
By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.
A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth, $1.00.

THE SOUL; ITS NATURE, RELATIONS AND EXPRESSIONS IN HUMAN EMBODIMENTS. Third edition now on sale. Price $1.00. This is one of the best books given by the guides of Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond. They are really lessons, published primarily, as a book of reference for those who have been members of the classes receiving them. This volume is a careful compilation from reports of lessons, containing the bases of the teachings.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

During March and April Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie will be located at 180 Calhon street, Battle Creek, Mich. She has a two months' engagement to lecture there, and will answer calls for funerals or week evening lectures.

The Church of Spiritual Revelation will hold services every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at Butler Hall, 57th Court and State street. Conducted by Edward A. Dierkes and T. D. Jones.

Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley was called to the bedside of her sick mother in Portland, Ore., on Tuesday, March 5, and will of necessity be obliged to cancel all engagements for the present and until further notice. The one at Rockford, Illinois, for the two Sundays of March 10 and 17 will especially have to be called off, to the deep regret and disappointment of the admiring friends as well as to herself Her mother has pneumonia with an inclination to heart trouble. Send the afflicted mother and sorrowing daughter your loving thoughts and feeling of good cheer.

That popular lecturer, Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie, writes: "I am most comfortably situated at 180 Calhoun St., Battle Creek, Mich., with Mrs Rose Snow. The society is in a prosperous condition in its new quarters on Main St., and all are working in harmonious relations, and I feel sure our two months' engagement will be a successful one. Anyone desiring my services for funerals will find me at above address."

Auditor writes from Battle Creek, Mich.: "A large, earnest and enthusiastic number assembled at the First Spiritualist Hall in this city on the evening of Sunday, March 3, and were highly entertained and enlightened by a profound discourse delivered by that fearless, undaunted and zealous advocate and exponent of the beautiful philosophy of the continuity of life and spirit return, Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie of Pittsburg, Pa. Would that it were possible—and space permitted—to publish her utterances verbatim. Would that all humanity would live the pure, noble, spiritual, honest, upright, loving and good lives so ably and eloquently described, advised and recommended by her. The first Spiritualist Society of this city is certainly to be congratulated on having secured the services of Mrs. Gillespie for the months of March and April. Mrs. Gillespie should be greeted each Sunday during her stay here by large audiences. It may be truthfully said of her, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

D. G. Hill writes: "A few days ago I sent you a notice of an expected visit to the Golden Rule Spiritualist Society of the Wattles Quartette. I shall have to ask you to stop the publication of same as they have notified us of the serious illness of the aged mother of the leader, and they have been necessitated to cancel all engagements for this month of March."

Henry Clough writes: "A couple of days ago I received the premium book, 'The Unknown Life of Jesus Christ,' and am much pleased with it. I learned by reading it, some things I never knew about. It is a book, I think, that should be in every house, and I would not part with it for a great deal."

Correspondent writes: "Again a pleasant report from the Psychical Research Society of Rockford, Ill., announcing that on Sunday evening, March 3, the president of the State Spiritualist Association of Illinois, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, ministered to a very good house. If the Doctor had racked his brain for a thousand years, studying what to say, he could not have worked up a lecture better adapted to the occasion than the one given us. He was grand and frequently eloquent, always logical and convincing, and the frequent applause showed how well pleased were those who heard him. President McDougal related some telling scientific facts in introducing the speaker. Messages were given by Dr. Hammond after the address. The society has seemed to languish for a few weeks, from inability to secure good outside talent, but it is hoped a new impetus is given the cause by the address of Dr. Warne, whom all esteem as the central figure in the Spiritual movement of Illinois, even aside from his official position as president of the State Association."

Ferd C. Suhrer writes: "Sunday, March 3, proved a record-breaking day in attendance for the First Society Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, nearly 300 people being with us. Polite ushers made them feel at home, and all were comfortable. In the afternoon the reading of sealed letters by Sisters Caird, Hilbert, Staner-Adams and Brother Chas A. Thompson occupied about an hour, which was an interesting and profitable one to all. Spiritualists, like almost everyone else, like to get their money's worth, and they do this and more when they visit us, and the remark by one who spoke from experience, that 'Every Sunday is bargain day up here,' seemed not amiss. Our circles at 4 o'clock bring into view new mediums who fall in line willingly and help out in the good work. The sight of a number of circles with one or two standing in the center of each reminded many of former years and brought forth many pleasant recollections. We were favored by the presence of Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley and others prominent in public work, who were surprised and pleased at the popularity of the Fraternal Order, and our president, Dr. Caird, was warmly congratulated. We are making special preparations to fittingly celebrate the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism on Sunday, March 31. Extra instrumental and vocal music, readers, and the most popular platform speakers before the public, will give us a veritable spiritual feast. Our professional talent will surpass anything of a like nature ever attempted on the West Side. All are welcome. Come early and spend the day as ample provisions are being made to take care of the 'inner man' also."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

John Wallace writes from Ashtabula, Ohio: "Onward is the direction our cause is moving here in Ashtabula; seemingly slow at times, but surely onward. Work on our temple is at a standstill on account of weather conditions, but everything is in readiness to proceed when the weather is favorable. We are encouraged in our efforts to assist all good progressive people. Our temple will be an ornament to the locality in which it is situated, and an honor to the society. We have D. A. Herrick with us this month, five Sundays, two lectures each Sunday. We held our meetings in the City Hall last Sunday. The attendance was fair. Bro. Herrick seemed at his best, and the line of thought presented was of a very high order. He gives us two seances each week for the benefit of our building fund; this with the efficient work of the Ladies' Aid, keeps the temple work progressing. We have Frank Ripley for April, after which we expect to have something to say in regard to the dedication of our temple."

Geo. A. Letford writes: "While at Tampa, Fla., I was invited to help the meeting there. I find that Mr. Ireland, the speaker, has done a remarkable work there. He has developed to be a fine inspirational speaker, and has some fine controls. He always has good audiences, and from among the most intellectual ones of the city. His talks are instructive. I was more than pleased to see the grand work he has accomplished. Mrs. Endy generally follows his lectures with messages. I was glad to have the pleasure of following Mr. Ireland, and the messages were recognized quickly."

Mrs. E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters held their semi-monthly meeting in Atlas Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, March 6. In the afternoon they gave readings to quite a large number of friends, and in the evening at 6 o'clock they served supper, which a large number partook of. We had two gentlemen visitors from Kentucky who took supper with us, and said that it brought back to their memory the home circle, where everything was peace and harmony. This is one of the main features that we are trying to bring about in our society. In the evening at 8 o'clock, we held a short entertainment, when the following talent took part: Tests by Mrs. Switzer, a mandolin solo by Miss Ross and a song by Mr. Zimmerman, accompanied on the piano by Miss Ross. Our meeting came to a close with a song from our president, Sister Alice Sexsmith, after which we all went over in a body, and paid a visit to Sister Susie Thompson in her new home, which we found packed to the doors. After having a few tests from the many mediums present, and having the inner man satisfied, with good things to eat, we felt that the promise of the Infinite Spirit had been fulfilled when He said that "where two or three are gathered together in my name, I will be there to bless." We then went on our way rejoicing."

J. J. Rittenhouse writes of The Great Work: "I not only have the book, but have read it, and find it is truly valuable. It is filled with truths in reference to morality, temperance in all things, self-control, the continuity of life, and independent spiritual unfoldment, or mastership. I think it should meet with a large sale."

Marriage.—At the residence of the bride's parents at Elyria, Ohio, Jan. 30, Miss Laura Winslow and Lawrence H. Farrell were united in marriage. A large number of friends witnessed the ceremony which was performed by D. A. Herrick of Akron, O. After an elegant repast the happy couple left for an extended visit in the East. A large number of beautiful presents were received, both being popular, earnest Spiritualists. March 1 will find them at home at 719 E. River street.

Miss M. B. Hedrick of Brooklyn, N. Y., is spending the winter in Jacksonville, Fla. Her many friends will be pleased to know that her health has sufficiently improved to enable her to resume her work.

Mrs. Sadie Herrick writes from Akron, Ohio: "It was our pleasure to visit Alliance, Ohio, two weeks ago, when Mr. Herrick held two fine seances, and at their earnest call, returned again on Feb. 29, when the church was opened and a lecture by Mr. Herrick, followed with messages by myself were given. Although a rainy night a goodly number braved the storm, and it seems too bad that with such a neat little church of their own, Spiritualists sit down, waiting for camp season to come again. Our seances were composed of earnest investigators who live in their midst, and who are eager for the truth. Mr. Herrick serves the Ashtabula society for March; Elyria for April; Martinsferry, O., for May, and then East where we expect to meet the friends at Lily Dale in July up to the 20th; then on to Freeville Camp, where we both work the entire camp session. The Cleveland temple is the next engagement which lasts until Oct. 7, and where the best in every worker is called forth by the earnest souls laboring there. It certainly is a pessimist (or dyspeptic) who says Spiritualism is on the wane, or even at low ebb, for there are more calls than there is time to fill them. I cannot see why one worthy worker need be idle. Our periodicals are better than ever."

Mrs. E. B. Wilson writes: "On February 18, the Hyde Park Occult Hall was filled by friends of Dr. Burgess and Mr. Cleveland, the occasion being Mrs. O. B. Wilson's birthday. Dr. Burgess made some fitting remarks for the welfare of the society and its president. Dr. Warne, in his pleasing and witty way, made some very pleasing remarks. The doctor presented a beautiful pillow made by the vice-president, Mrs. Ware, and the proceeds of the door were presented to me for the benefit of the society, which I turned over to the financial secretary, Miss Stewart. I wish to thank Dr. Burgess and Mr. Cleveland for their pleasant surprise, and my many friends that were there, hoping they all may come to my next birthday. Our Sunday meetings are well attended. February 24, we had Mr. and Mrs. Bloom, both good and cheerful workers; March 3, Dr. C. S. Tisdale gave us a fine lecture. We have with us every Sunday Mr. H. Fraser. He is doing good work. March 21 will be our social dance. Come and have a good time."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Mrs. L. A. Reck writes: "Mrs. Georgina Ripley, of Toronto, Canada, has just closed a two months' engagement with the Independent Association of Spiritualists of Toledo, Ohio. Mrs. Ripley's ability as a lecturer and message bearer is well known among the Spiritualists all over the country, and her advent among us was hailed with delight. She is a sincere and earnest worker in the cause of Spiritualism, and her meetings were enthusiastically attended, and productive of much good. Her good works, pure life and kindly manner have won for her a large circle of warm friends, to whom her departure is a source of regret, and who will always be ready to give her a hearty welcome on her return to our city."

E. R. Fielding writes: "The lyceum of the First Association gave a masquerade to the children, conducted by Mrs. M. J. Stevens. Our favorite, Mrs. M. T. Longley, addressed the lyceum children in their masquerade suits. She, too, was dressed in a costume which Latela has her wear on such occasions, a white dress worn with moccasins. Latela, through Mrs. Longley's organism, gave her experiences here on the earth plane and in the spirit world, and how she came to Mrs. Longley, and assisted her in her work; and also to be helped by Mrs. Longley. The children were delighted with the little Indian girl's advice."

The lecturer known as Mrs. Virginia Bryan, and her husband, N. G. Burroughs, are holding meetings at Superior, Wis., where they are meeting with excellent results. They will remain there until April 1, when some other good workers should step in and carry on the meetings. Mrs. Bryan writes: "Our messages have done their work well and started many to thinking for themselves. Mr. Burroughs' messages have been very convincing, especially when he goes into homes and cemeteries, and describes them accurately, though many, many miles away."

Mr. Chas. Morrow, of Allegheny, Pa., has ust closed a two months' engagement in Oil City, Pa. He has given general satisfaction and made many converts to Spiritualism. He is now doing good work in Franklin, Pa.

Mrs. Carrie Sawyer, the materializing medium, of St. Louis, Mo., denies that she bought "ordination papers" from one Reis. Glad to make the correction.

Max Hoffmann has been engaged again for the Delphos Camp, from August 9 to 25. He lectures and gives tests at Dana, Ill., March 16, 17 and 18. He has many calls from different parts of the country.

Mary B. Hill writes: "Each meeting of the Band of Harmony becomes more and more interesting. At our last one, March 7, the question of Child Labor was presented, and there were several ways pointed out to banish the overtaxing of the very young, but the best method to reach that question will be to eliminate selfishness from the lives of those who make such conditions possible. Our next meeting will occur March 21, Room 512 Masonic Temple. The annual dollar meeting will be held April 4. Each one expected to earn their dollar in some unusual way; if not, then in the usual way, go to your husband's pocket; then tell your experience in getting it. We anticipate a full house, full treasury. Bring your supper. Come and join us, and learn of all the good things we have at the Band of Harmony."

Samuel A. Huntington, Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritual Society: "We had another very interesting revival meeting on Thursday evening, 28th ult., with the Rev. F. A. Wiggin of Boston as speaker and message bearer. He took for his theme (by request) 'Reincarnation,' giving a very able address, and then devoted forty minutes to ballot reading. The hall was well filled. Mr. Wiggin will serve our society the three coming Thursday evenings, 7th, 14th and 21st of March. The meetings on Sunday, March 3, were very interesting. At the circle in the afternoon, Mr. Lichtman of Roxbury, Mass., made a very pleasing address on 'Cause and Effect, or Natural Law,' and then gave several messages. Mrs. Raulett, also of Roxbury, spoke interestingly on 'Love,' after which she gave several fine messages. Mrs. A. F. Duren of Cambridge, Mass., also spoke and gave messages. Mrs. W. S. Butler of Boston, was the speaker at the evening service. She also gave many fine messages. Speaker for Sunday, March 10, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, of Marlboro, Mass., and March 17, Prof. Graham of Boston, Mass."

Mrs. Hattie F. R. Peet writes: "On Monday evening, March 25, a BIRTHDAY PARTY will be given by the members of the Illinois Sunflower Club, to celebrate its second anniversary, at Washington Hall, No 70 Adams street. A fine supper will be served at 6 o'clock, followed by an interesting programme; good talent, and later, music and dancing. All are cordially invited to join us on this festive occasion. Business meetings of club held second Tuesday of every month; tea party every fourth Thursday from 2 till 5 p. m., at Lincoln Hall, 70 Adams street. Good mediums in attendance. All are welcome to these social gatherings."

Carrie L. Hatch writes: "The Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists will commemorate the birth of Modern Spiritualism, in Berkeley Hall, 3 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass., on Tuesday, March 26, all day and evening. The following talent has been invited to take part: President George A. Fuller, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Miss Susie C. Clark, Mrs. N. J. Willis, Mrs. Kate R. Stiles, Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie C. Mason, Mrs. N. S. Abbott, Mrs. A. J. Pettingill, Mrs. Maude Litch, Mrs. Alice Whall, Mrs. Emma Smith, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, Mrs. Carrie S. Thomas, Rev. F. A. Wiggin, Rev. A. P. Blinn, Mr. J. S. Scarlett and Mr. Osgood Stiles. Mrs. Haydee Hall will be the soloist; Mrs. Grace C. Crawford, pianist. The meetings are all free, and everyone is invited to attend; they will certainly receive much food for thought."

Mrs. A. N. Burnham, recording secretary, writes from Boston, Mass.: "The American Psychical Research Society, Harvey Redding, president, held its meeting as usual in the month of February, in Legion of Honor Hall, Huntington avenue. The meetings have been well attended. Mr. Redding's lectures are scholarly and inspiring, and seem to meet the needs of the people, especially his convincing tests by which he is able to prove the continuity of life. Occasionally Mr. Redding is assisted by Mrs. Stackpole and Mrs. Williams, test mediums. It has been my pleasure to speak for this society many times this season. Thursday evening of each week, Mr. Redding holds a seance at his home, 202 Main street, Everett, assisted by Mrs. M. E. Dean of Malden, and others. These seances have been well patronized, and afforded an excellent opportunity for those desiring to learn more of true mediumship. A social will be held at Mr. Redding's home the last Friday in March; all are cordially invited. We are glad to have The Progressive Thinker on sale at our Sunday services. As a Spiritual paper it seems to fully meet the needs of the hour."

Dr. J. H. Randall, who has been seriously sick, has recovered, and is now prepared to serve such societies as desire his services to lecture. Address him at 1058 Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Frank T. Ripley has the Sundays of May and June open for engagements to lecture and give messages. Address all letters to him in care of General Delivery, Cleveland, Ohio, for March; after that to Oxford, Ohio.

Regular monthly meeting Chicago Spiritualists' League, in K. & K. Hall, 106 Randolph street, Thursday, March 14, 1907, at 8 p. m., sharp. An exceptionally good program has been arranged, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and a debate upon the question, "What are the necessary conditions for the individual to obtain the best results from the spirit world?" The following workers will participate in the exercises: Dr. C. A. Burgess, H. F. Arnold, Dr. J. H. Randall, Dr. A. Gustafson, Mrs. Dr. Freedman, Mrs. J. E. Sexsmith, Mrs. Dodge, Dr. Temple, and Prof. Vogel's Orchestra. This will be one of the most interesting Spiritualist meetings of the season. Bring your friends and have a good time.

Mrs. Carrie Hatch writes from Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, ton: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society held its meeting as usual with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Albee, in the chair. The following talent took part during the evening: Mrs. Alice S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Litchman, Mrs. Annie Chapman, Mr. Temple, Mrs. Sears-Hill and Mrs. Kate R. Stiles; Mrs. Mary Lovering, pianist. Supper was served at 6:15. Meeting every Friday. On Friday, March 29, the anniversary exercises will be held when the following talent will take part: Mrs. Waterhouse, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Mrs. N. J. Willis, Mr. Wiggin, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Kate Stiles, Mrs. Whitlock, Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Belcher, Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. M. J. Butler. Good music throughout the day; three sessions. Dinner and supper served at the hall. Come and spend the day with us. This is the oldest society and will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary next October. This is the home society, and the place to celebrate."

Bro. Leisk writes from San Diego, Cal.: "The First Spiritualist Society of San Diego, has been enjoying an exceptional treat through the grand inspirational work of W. J. Colville, the world-renowned author and lecturer. Mr. Colville can do what very few workers are doing; that is, to attract the thinkers of other cults. Many of our leading Theosophical friends, Christian Scientists and orthodox believers have attended his course of lectures. He has been with us for over three weeks, lecturing twice every day with the single exception of Saturday. The San Diego Union published very fully one of his lectures on the Ideal Co-Operative Commonwealth. The educational value to all students of progressive ideas of Mr. Colville's work cannot be overestimated. Mr. David A. Leisk will occupy the rostrum on Sunday, March 17 and 24, April 7 and 14. The anniversary services celebrating the rise of Modern Spiritualism will be held on March 31, when we anticipate having with us, Brother John W. Ring."

AN INFIDEL.

"An infidel, how easy said; but wherefore comes the name?
What is 'infidelity'? I ask. And is it cause for shame?
Is it to take for truth and right what reason has weighed well?
To prove all things Hold fast the good? Then am I infidel?

"Is it to trust with fearless faith the light within the soul?
Heeding the voice that speaks within, spurning all false control?
Trusting in inspiration past, in inspiration now,
Selecting wheat from out the chaff, where'er it comes or how,
Believing heaven oft fills our souls with promptings pure and high—
If this be infidelity, then infidel am I.

"Unflinchingly I face the scorn, freely accept the shame (?)
For if an infidel mean this I glory in the name.
With angel breathings round me oft, with hopes most bright and clear;
With earnest soul-pants after truth, I cannot stop to fear.
With love to God, and love to man, to justice, truth and right
Heaven grant I ne'er be infidel to past or present light.
To creed-bound dogma, false though old, I've bid a last adieu—
Your fetters ne'er can bind my soul, I'm infidel to you." —Reason.

Lyceums, Attention!

Help us to obtain a complete list of all lyceums before March 31. Since my former request many have complied and sent list and report, but am sure there are more to hear from. Those who have reported are as follows: Los Angeles, Cal.; Parkland, Pa.; Chesaning, Mich.; Pittsburg, Pa.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Decatur, Iowa; Portland, Me.; Portland, Ore.; Galveston, Tex.; Baltimore, Md.; Detroit, Mich.; Billings, Mont.; San Diego, Cal.; Hoboken, N. J.; St. Louis, Mo.; Seattle, Wash.; Rupert, Ark.; Washington, D. C. So you see the list is growing. Send in the name of your lyceum and the number of children or adults who are members. Address me during March and April, at 180 Calhoun street, Battle Creek, Mich.

ANNA L. GILLESPIE.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

MRS. JENNIE HAGAN BROWN.

A Glowing Tribute Paid to Her Work and Life, by William F. Nye.

To the Editor:—Through your columns I desire to thank Mrs. R. S. Lillie and Mrs. Richmond for their beautiful tribute to Jennie Hagan Brown, one of the dear workers of earth that we have all adored and worshiped from her girlhood to womanhood; even a personal loss to many of us is her untimely passing away.

I knew her as the sweet little girl that came to Onset from Vermont, introduced there by the late H. B. Storer and I. P. Greenleaf, the two veteran Spiritualists who were lecturing in Vermont, and first met with her there. She fairly captivated the large audiences we then had at that summer camp, and with all the spontaneity of my warm manly heart, I could but lavish flowers and love upon her, and from that time forward I have freely and fondly accepted her claim of "Father Nye" upon me.

Often it was my pleasure to aid her and her good mother as from place to place they afterwards journeyed. But a few years ago she came to me to purchase her two nice houses she owned in South Framingham, Mass., when she and her noble husband established their fine home at El Campo, Texas, and during the winter of 1904 and '05 I spent some months with them, and during the time as a tribute to my adopted daughter, I added a large library room to their domicile, and reaped the pleasure of aiding her in arranging her accumulation of rare publications presented her by almost every writer, particularly of the Spiritual philosophy, together with her thirty years' collection of minerals, fossils, and other thousands of rare specimens of nature's handiwork that only such diligence and taste as she possessed could bring together.

She was ever a welcome guest to my home.

I have often called her to speak at funerals of some departed one, on which occasion she was ever as charming and surprising in her address to the departed one whose presence she often seemed to feel on such an occasion.

Her last visit to my home was in answer to my call to speak at the funeral of my aged sister. At the time, I was pleased to call in some of my near neighbors for an introduction to my daughter Jennie, and among them an ex-Congressman who could not understand how she could have possessed herself of so much poetic knowledge. His family consisting of only a wife and a pet squirrel, I suggested that Jennie give him a poem on the squirrel, which fairly charmed the erudite statesman.

As I have written Mr. Brown, it seems impossible that Jennie has passed from that pleasant home they had established on the plains of Texas. I mourn with him and share his loss. Only a short time before she passed away I received a letter from Jennie urging me to again visit El Campo, but I feel that tears would still fill my eyes should I ever again step into that home where she last greeted "Father Nye."

WILLIAM F. NYE.
New Bedford, Mass.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About seven words constitute one line.]

Mrs. Martha H. Bacon, widow of Henry Bacon, passed to spirit life, at her home in Rocky Hill, Ct. She was a firm and devoted Spiritualist, and respected and loved by all.

In South Wallingford, Vt., Feb 6, 1907, Lewis E. Stafford, for many years a Spiritualist, peacefully passed unto his loved ones in waiting. Jennie Hagan Brown, J. Clegg Wright, Chas. Sullivan, Nellie T. Kenyon, Fanny Davis Smith, Dr. Bronson, and others, found sweet hospitality under his roof.

EVA AMES.

At East Liverpool, Ohio, Feb. 4, William Lewis Calhoun passed to spirit life, aged 79 years. Grandpa Calhoun was an ardent Spiritualist who lived what he called his religion, Spiritualism, and was a yearly visitor at Lily Dale and Lake Brady for the past seventeen years. He was preceded to spirit life by his beloved companion a year ago, and was only waiting the call, "Come home." D. A. Herrick of Akron conducted the services.

Mrs. Isabella A. Hall departed from the mortal plane, Monday evening, March 4, 1907, at the home of her son, 525 Fifty-third avenue, Chicago. Born February 26, 1842, near Ogdensburgh, N. Y., she was the eldest of the nine children of Thomas and Agnes Rutherford and the fourth member of their home circle, besides the parents, to pass from earth. Oakland, Jefferson county, Wisconsin, became the family residence when she was four years old, her father's house being widely known as a center of pioneer hospitality. After marriage she settled at Cresco, Iowa for fifteen years, but for the last twenty-five years Chicago was her home. Two sons, Albert J. Fuller and A. Clarence Fuller of Chicago, survive her, besides two brothers and three sisters, Mrs. Margaret Ross, Chicago; Mrs. Ada Gould, Racine; Mrs. Clara Potter, San Jose, Cal.; T. J. Rutherford, Cresco, Iowa, and Gilbert Rutherford, Columbus, Wis. Never in rugged health and a great sufferer for months before her transition, yet she had a cheery nature which radiated sunshine among relatives and friends. Always liberal in religious views, her reading ranged through many topics including Theosophy and Christian Science, but Spiritualism was the sheet anchor of her life. As a conversationalist she shone because of her readiness, wit, wisdom, and her sweetness of disposition which made her sympathetic for all. She was a facile writer of prose and poetry, her poems, especially, bearing the impress of a high order of inspiring intelligence. At her request Dr. Geo. B. Warne conducted the funeral services on the 7th inst., at the home which had been her last earthly harbor, closing with one of her own poems entitled "Change," a favorite of her brain children with herself. Burial followed at Lake Mills, Wis. The departure of such as Mrs. Hall leaves earth circles sadder but brightens those of Summerland.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
Box 580, Seattle, Wash.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list or titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL.

Series one, two and three. By Lilian Whiting. Three choice volumes, each complete in itself, in which spirituality is related to everyday life in such a way as to make the world beautiful. Price, $1.00 each.

THE BIBLE

New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE

—PART I.—The Pentateuch.

Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gestefeld, and Francis E Barr.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.—PART II.

Judges, Kings, Prophets and Apostles. Comments on the Old and New Testaments, from Joshua to Revelation. The comments are keen, bright, spicy, full of wit, the work of radical thinkers who are not ignorant of the higher criticism. There is not a dull page in either of these books, but each is a galaxy of the bright minds of the day and throw a new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. Price of each, paper, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wolstoncraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

Song Books

New and Enlarged Edition of C. P. LONGLEY'S Choice Collection of Beautiful Songs.

Containing ninety charming songs for home, camps, circles and meetings—words and music, including "Only a Thin Vail Between Us," and its companion piece; also beautiful words set to choice music, from the poetical works of Lilian Whiting. Of the latter, Miss Whiting writes Prof. Longley her pleasure at his setting to her poems and declares herself honored at the dainty music he has given her words. President Barrett of the N. S. A. writes that wherever he goes he finds the songs of Mr. Longley sung at meetings and by the friends and he affirms it as his opinion that Longley's musical compositions have ennobled the world. Price per copy, 50 cents bound in boards; 75 cents in cloth, wholesale rates made to societies and dealers.

Maxham's Melodies.

Arranged for Solos, Duets, Quartets, Also Six Poems.

This is a song book adapted to the popular spiritualistic taste, and is eminently fitted to do good service in the lecture hall or family circle. Price, 15 cents.

Echoes From the World of Song.

A collection of 50 charming songs with chorus and music, sheet music size. Price $1.00; postage 15 cts.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.

A collection of original and selected Hymns for Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50 cents.

A. P. A. MANUAL

A complete expose of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association. A book for all patriotic American citizens. Price, 15 cents, or two for 25 cents.

—THE—

Christs of the Past and Present.

By MOSES HULL,

A comparison of the Christ-work or Mediumship of Biblical Messiahs and the conditions they required, with similar manifestations in Modern Spiritualism. This is a good work to study for arguments with which to meet the very common orthodox question, "Why do you always require conditions for your spiritual manifestations?" Cloth bound, 35 cents; paper 25 cents. For sale at this office.

The Wonders of Life.

By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is continued to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

Sheet Music. Three Beautiful Spiritual Songs.

"We Are Passing But Once This Way." Song and refrain, by P. O. Hudson; price, 25 cents.

"Satisfied." A reverie. By A. J. Maxham. Price 25 cents.

"The Light of Reason." English and German words; sung to the tune of "Lead, Kindly Light." Price 25 Cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

Man and the Spirit World

as Disclosed in the Bible. By Rev. Arthur Chambers, Associate of King's College, London. An excellent book for Christian people who would investigate and learn the facts of Bible teachings as well as modern spirit phenomena. Price, cloth, $1.10.

RADIANT ENERGY

and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price cloth, $1.75.

THE WIDOW'S MITE, AND OTHER PSYCHIC PHENOMENA.

BY ISAAC K. FUNK.

A remarkable book, of intense interest to all, whether Spiritualists or Materialists, investigators or believers.

The author has embodied in this book an account of his wonderful personal experience, and has culled from other sources the experiences of others, including scientists of world-wide repute, making a volume of great value. 538 octavo pages. Price, cloth, $2.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best peoms of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

"NO BEGINNING."

An Excellent Work for Thinkers.

This book, "No Beginning," is by William H. Maple. The Arena says of it: "The argument is unanswerable. The book will at once appeal to the reason of every reader, and leave him more amazed than ever at the prevalence of the theory of Creation." The Two has always been a fateful number. Free Thought Ideal says: "We found it full of glittering thoughts for thinkers, and the very death warrant of Christian superstition shines upon its pages." Price 75 cents.

Discovery of a Lost Trail

BY CHARLES B. NEWCOMB,

Author of "All's Right with the World." Cloth 370 pages. Mr. Newcomb made a distin

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Thos. Waldron: Q. I am prompted to ask this question: What is the most deplorable in spirit life, the condition of the drunkard, or the believer in orthodoxy?

This correspondent adds by way of explanation:

"My object in asking you this question is that the spirit of a business friend of mine who was recently killed was an ardent worker in the M. E. Church, but now comes to me as a spirit and asks me to pray for him. He is apparently in a fog, not knowing what to do or which way to turn."

A. The states of the drunkard and superstitious believer are so unlike they are not comparable.

It is not to be wondered at that a person who has all his life believed in the orthodox dogmas, of a God on a throne, of Christ at his right hand, hell, the Judgment day, should, after awakening from the death of the body, and finding everything but a continuance of this life on a higher plane, should "be in a fog," and unable to realize the new life. Yes, they need the prayers of those who know, and more instruction. I had a communication from a spirit who had for years been in search of God and Christ. He expected to at once be ushered into their presence. He had seen no more of them than he had in the earth life. He was perplexed, bewildered, the more as all the spirits he inquired of gave him the answer that they had not seen. Yet his faith had not weakened, and he eagerly went his way determined to find God and meet him face to face. I take a passage from "Life in Two Spheres." The spirit of Maryin, a wealthy and creed-bound man, almost immediately after the transition meets a group of spirits. He does not know or believe that he is dead. He cries out protestingly. Then they take him to his home, show him the casket containing his earthly body. He tried to make his friends hear his voice, failing, "Frantic with anxiety, he clung to the wreck of his mortality, and refused to arise." When the casket was placed in the vault, he came away, joining the spirit group, declaring he was in a dream, an awful dream and would soon awaken.

"Nay," they said to him, "your body is dead. You live and are a spirit in the spirit world."

"In heaven?" he exclaimed. "I in heaven?"

"No, not heaven to you, but to us."

"Why, this is not heaven! Where is it? I cannot see it!"

"What kind of a place do you expect to find heaven?"

"What kind of a place? I believe it is as the Bible describes. It says heaven is paved with bright gold, and walled about with precious stones so no sinner can get in through the narrow way I have traveled. And you are sinners, were on earth as I knew you; you are waylaying me and declaring me dead, while I live. Am I in all the heaven I shall ever find? If I am in heaven, where is God, to whom I have prayed three times each day all my life?"

"He is here."

"Where?" he exclaimed in terror.

"We are around and within us."

"No. I see him not. And thus you have proved that I am not in heaven. God is in heaven. The Bible says so. If he were here, I could see him far plainer than I see you. He sits on an ivory throne, with scepter in his hand, dealing out laws and punishment to the nations. All around are elders and angels with golden harps singing his praise. Where is all this? I hear nothing."

"You hear them! You never will."

"Oh, sinners, evil angels sent to tempt me! Where is heaven?"

The group endeavor to persuade him, when he becomes angry and cries:

"Heretic! heretic! No wonder you have not seen heaven. I'll argue no more with you, but return to my house, and show you I live there yet."

In a few moments he rushes out from his splendid hall with frantic gestures, exclaiming:

"Oh, they have buried me, and believe me dead, and have already divided my property that I have striven night and day to accumulate, that in my old age I might enjoy it. They are quarreling like wolves over a carcass. When they opened my safe and I saw how determined they were to waste all my savings, I shouted in their ears, and though they must have heard, they gave not the least attention."

This is hades.

The mental condition of the drunkard is equally wretched and may or may not be associated with this mental and moral distortion. At death the body carries with it the habit, unless the inebriate belongs to that class who are impelled by heredity which is stamped into the spirit, and not acquired as a physical habit. In this case as there is no possibility of gratification, the condition of the hopeless victim may be imagined, not described. There are always devoted spirits ready to assist those who desire to escape the bondage of beliefs or the results of erring conduct, but there is small chance of assisting until this desire is awakened. Truly those who assume their perfect salvation, through the blood of Christ, and their superiority thereby, will find, in the next life, that they are in need of prayers, more than the "sinners" they scorned.

CORRELATIVE REFLECTIONS.

Suggested by an Article From B. G. Sweet.

To the Editor:—In No. 893 of your peerless paper is an interesting article from B. G. Sweet, Empire City, Kan., on the cause of lightning. His special vision was a notable demonstration of the promise "seek and ye shall find," He was entitled to see by the soul vision through its ethereal relation, the accumulations of gas that is a factor in the product we call lightning.

He is right as to its being gas; it is carbonic acid gas that has been given off in so many ways by so many processes, and centralized in clouds because the vapors have an affiuing property, and are equal to sustaining the globules of gas while they of their own volition or attraction aggregate themselves into masses.

The motion of currents of air, of gathering clouds—anything producing movement generates electricity and this coming in contact with the gas causes an explosion or sudden and violent disintegration, the vapors taking it up again in its re-chemicalized form and precipitating it to the ground for use again in vegetable growth.

In the great laboratory of the air are carried on vast processes that only illuminated souls are able to discern, and these souls are those long-unclothed of mortal form. These bring to the seeking ones that which is sought for through the law of correspondence in vibration.

Whatever line of thought we are following we are sure to attract the attention of those who have engaged in like studies, and from them by our magnetism or thought-voltage we attract additions to our fund of knowledge. Are we literary or scientific or religious, or philosophical? The doors of the spirit world open at every call and we receive of their fullness.

What, then, are our limitations? Simply the measure of our application. Have no fear. Enter the arena of the Cosmic University and ask by studying by delving in the mines of knowledge, by using your own interior forces, searching for the reasons of things, and note results, remembering meantime the charge that applies to every effort "learn to labor and to wait."

To strengthen our faith or possibility of reliance upon those equal to helping us, we have the promises reiterated by the Nazarene medium, "ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." These words are the voice of science, or of religion, if that ideal suits you best, it is science all the same, for nothing that can bear the name of religion can exist or be demonstrated except upon a scientific basis, through scientific methods. Religion in its purest light is the sentiment of science.

MRS. M. A. CONGDON.

Hood River, Oregon.

BRIEF JOTTINGS.

From the Progressive State Spiritualist Convention of Missouri.

Aside from the regular routine of a State Convention, the one just closed here gave forth scintillations of incidents well worth recording. Supplementary to the secretary's report, please permit a few jottings from the note-book of one of your old correspondents.

The opening address of Paul McArthur, (re-elected president) on "The Need of Spiritual and Mental Growth in Our Movement," breathed a spirit of devotion, of unselfish love for the cause, that stirred the hearts of his hearers as no mere worded eloquence could do. For it was backed, as we all knew, by works, by sacrifices for the cause that few are ready to make.

At the conference and business deliberations there was marked harmony throughout. The only ripple was when applications for the dignity of ordination came from those of doubtful qualifications. But personal friendship for the applicants gave way to the desire to discourage illiteracy and partially developed mediumship from a conspicuous place in the ranks.

As a monument to our brother Moses Hull, a fund was started to purchase a scholarship in the Morris Pratt Institute.

The cause under Brother McArthur's management, in Missouri, according to the various reports, is decidedly prosperous, with a falling off in the seeking after sensational phenomena, often of questionable character. The desire being to eliminate the false and establish true phenomena and philosophy; to grow in spirituality to the heights of personal communion with our risen loved ones, instead of trying to drag down to us through the ofttimes miry channel of commercial mediumship.

The speaker of the First Colored Spiritualist Society, J. B. Bates, was ordained with an impressive ceremony, by Mr. McArthur.

Mesdames Armstead and North, of this society, gave messages and tests that were beautiful and satisfactory to all receiving them.

Mrs. G. A. Baldeck, who is in charge of the Golden Rule Colored Spiritualist society of Kansas City, was introduced, and gave a short, but stirring address. Her enthusiasm threw such a magnetism over the audience both colored and white that she was enthusiastically recalled. Her encore speech spoke volumes in a few words. Said she; "Spiritualism is so tall you can't reach above it; digs down so deep you can't get under it, reaches out so far in all directions you can't get round it, so there's no place for you but right in it."

All the local mediums on the program did excellent work, but that of a Mrs. J. C. Stevens of Kansas City, and the inspirational lecture by Miss. Elizabeth, Harlow, of Columbus, O., together with some remarkable demonstrations given to the writer by local mediums, will be reserved for a future communication.

MATTIE McCASLIN.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price, 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

The Great Work.

A Leading Intellectual Light Has Something Interesting to Say of the Constructive and Destructive Principles at Work in the Universe.

Mr. Howe, in his concluding review, says: "All development by means of the destructive principle is deprecated (in the book "The Great Work") as devolutionary and wrong." Then he attempts to justify destructive or devolutionary methods by claiming that nature in the transition of death reaches the climax of the destructive process.

We shall first quote from the book, "The Great Work," that the reader may have a clearer undtrstanding of the terms "Destructive and Constructive" Spirituality, as used by the author of the book.

Page 137: "Destructive Spirituality is reached by a process of negation, by the surrender of individual consciousness, and by subjection to and control by other intelligence."

Page 138: "Destructive Spirituality is reached by surrender and subjection to the will of another intelligence either in our out of the physical body. The motives which impel the controlling intelligence may be either good, bad, or indifferent. The result, however, is the same, in that the responsibility is transferred from the one who should retain it to another who has no right to exercise it. The process is called DESTRUCTIVE, to the individual subject to it, because it injures the essential being or soul and its tendency is to destroy its most valuable capacities and powers."

Page 137: "The other (Constructive Spirituality) is attained by positive assertion of the individuality, by marvelous extension of individual consciousness, by complete liberation from all possibility of physical subjection to, or control by, any other intelligence."

Page 138: "Constructive Spirituality is attained by intelligent assertion of one's own rights and privileges, and the discharge of one's own duties and responsibilities. It involves the gradual but inevitable assumption of greater and higher responsibilities under and in accordance with nature's evolutionary process and purpose. It results in the preparation of the Individual Intelligence for life on higher planes of evolution. It is called CONSTRUCTIVE, because it builds up character and increases the capacities and powers of the essential being or Soul."

Mr. Howe has become confused, for the author of "The Great Work" does not class the natural change called Death in either of the kinds of Spirituality (Destructive and Constructive) Death comes to all, whether we evolve on Constructive lines, or sink to or below the Destructive line. Death does destroy, but only the physical body, and the principles of Constructive and Destructive Spirituality refer to the capacities, faculties and powers of the Soul, and not to the physical body.

Again Mr. Howe does not clearly apprehend that death does not accomplish the opening of the spiritual senes, TO THE SAME DEGREE in all souls, and thus it cannot do in a few hours that which the Great School requires years of discipline, self-control, and moral exaction. One student may accomplish in a year, that for which another one might require several years.

If the individual has conformed his life to a MORAL standard, indicated by doing the right as he sees it; aided by independent, self-conscious, and rational reasoning, and in the light of a conscience ever quick to recognize one's personal responsibility, such an individual may accomplish along Independent and Constructive lines the evolution of the spiritual senses here and new. Death to such an one is a very different experience, than to the one who has violated the dictates of conscience, and who has intentionally and deliberately evaded that which his reason plainly showed to be right. It is a travesty on the just and equable law of evolution to assume, as does Mr. Howe, that Death accomplishes for both these souls the same thing, namely, opens the spiritual senses to the same degree.

One soul has evolved to a greater degree, and death enables it to take a correspondingly high place in the spirit world.

Mr. Howe does not seem to see that the author of The Great Work shows the moral standard necessary for those who wish TO KNOW the reality of the spirit world NOW. Not as a medium, who as THE LINK between the physical and spiritual worlds in the Destructive process of mediumship; and AS A MEDIUM knows nothing of the messages he may have transmitted, or what those attending the seance may have seen; but as a Master, with all his faculties and powers under the control of his own will, in the perfectly self-conscious and rational manner of the Constructive process of real Mastership.

There is also a difference between those who have clairvoyant and clairaudient power, naturally or developed by the independent method of Constructive Spirituality, and who live up to a high moral standard, and those who do not. The powers are more reliable and of greater range in those who adhere to a moral standard. While a lax morality, or none at all, may not deprive one of all power, it curtails it, and makes it so unreliable that tricks are often resorted to if the possessor thereof exploits it more or less selfishly. Death to this individual puts upon the liberated soul the necessity of working out and evolving on right lines, that the soul powers may be properly developed in accordance with nature's law of evolution, known as the Law of Constructive Spirituality to the students of the Great School of Natural Science.

In Mr. Howe's discussion of Chapter XV., "Desire and Choice," it would clear up the matter if he had also quoted from page 242 of The Great Work, viz: "To those who insist that the power of the will is the automatic instrument of desire, there is one way to put the subject that may help to disclose their sophistry. It is this: The will (which all agree is the soul's power of initiative), is either an automatic instrument of desire or it is not. In the very nature of things it cannot be both.

"If it is such an automatic instrument, then be good enough to explain why you hold your fellow-men and woman responsible for their acts and conduct. You can give but one reply, and that is: 'Because we are obligated by the law of our being to control our desires.' But by what power are we to accomplish that end? There is but one power of the individual soul by which such an obligation can be discharged. That is by the power of the will."

If Mr. Howe thinks that "the will responds to the strongest appeal, and that it always must," he ought to know that the will can be made to control that "strongest appeal," and it might be wise for him to try the personal experiment and prove whether or not his will can or cannot do it.

Again Mr. Howe deplores the fact that the author of The Great Work finds it difficult to define "Consciousness. This need not scare any one, for the chapter on Consciousness will make the reader think, and it will give him new relations of this basic fact and most potent factor in the life of man. Sometimes we are not able to clearly define some terms, like consciousness and life, for instance, but nevertheless we are able to learn a great deal about their manifestations and to discover many facts and laws which enable us to apprehend them. Thus we can truthfully say that we comprehend something of their range and application. Definitions, or the lack of them, must not be allowed to disturb us too much in pushing on for a greater knowledge.

The author's beautiful and poetical use of the "parting of the ways, one leading to a broad, smooth avenue to the North, the other the straight and narrow path to the South," is the same old idea of the right hand path of "living the life to know the doctrine," and the left hand path of the thoughtless and careless only, or the deliberate choice of others of evil mind.

This brings me to Mr. Howe's characterization of the teaching of the School of Natural Science as representing nature as an "infinite abortion," because after man evolves to the human plane nature relinquishes her hold upon the evolving individual intelligence, and FIXES upon man the responsibility of making a good or a bad use of his power of will, his faculty of consciousness, and his capacity to determine for himself the right and the wrong. Mr. Howe's plan would keep us children all the time, playing the little childish games we at one time loved so well; in which case who would or could assume the responsibility for our early education, and the training so necessary to put us in possession of a knowledge and understanding of ourselves, to enable us to anticipate the natural and logical results of our own acts within the scope of our acquired knowledge.

In conclusion, death as Mr. Howe's spiritual philosophy teaches, may "not lose one individual out of the triumphant march of human progress from plane to plane and from sphere to sphere through the countless age of eternity," but the author of The Great Work would have the interested inquirer also know that (page 449) "A lifetime of viciousness, immorality, or crime fastens upon the individual the encumbrance of the Physical Magnetic body (see page 449). The degree of his indulgence of his baser nature seems to measure the natural gravity of that body. This, in turn, determines the depth to which he will be carried downward into the darkness of the Magnetic Field."

"But what of the moral and upright man (page 450) who may have no definite knowledge of what is involved in the process of physical dissolution? He may not know that MORALITY is the foundation of Constructive Spirituality.

"He may not even have a definite belief or conviction that there is a life beyond the grave. He may be wholly in doubt as to the great problem of immortality. It matters not. For if he has lived his life free from envy, jealousy, fear, anger, lust and other destructive and degrading appetites, passions, emotions, and desires; if he has lived a clean and moral life; if he has dealt justly with his fellow man, and kindly toward his dumb brothers and servants of the animal kingdom; if he has lived as nearly as possible to the standard of his own highest ideas, and by the light of his best knowledge he has lived a life of cooperation with the Constructive Principle of Nature, and there is nothing that can deprive him of the benefits and rewards of such a life."

"But when the Master (page 455) comes to the final transition called physical death, he himself has no doubts as to the issue. He knows that this is but another step in the evolution of the individual. He knows that death does not end his career. He knows that his personal identity will not be lost, nor even clouded for an hour. He knows that in death there is no sting.

"When he approaches the final hour for parting with the physical, it is to him but the hour of his liberation and his reward.

"From his earthly environment he passes with all his faculties and powers intact. He is conscious of what is taking place about him and within him. * * * He knows that his work and his place are awaiting him, and that he will be able to take up the one and to fill the other. Every step of the way from the plane of earth, through all the phases and mysteries of the Magnetic Field, into and through the First, Second, Third and Fourth Spiritual Zones, beyond these still upward and onward to the highest point of individual attainment, is already familiar through his previous experiences."

The Great Law of Compensation, Chap. XVI, shows the necessity for us to do the best we can and to make the most of life as ordinary individuals, and if we strive for Mastership it is but to turn back and to help in the GREAT WORK OF EVOLUTION, as conscious and intelligent factors in shaping the destiny of the race, that all may in time share in the benefits of spiritual unfoldment.

THOS. M. STEWART.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

NORSE LULLABY.

The sky is dark and the hills are white
As the storm-king speeds from the north to-night,
And this is the song the storm-king sings,
As over the world his cloak he flings:
"Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep";
He rustles his wings and gruffly sings:
"Sleep, little one, sleep."

On yonder mountain-side a vine
Clings at the foot of a mother pine;
The tree bends over the trembling thing,
And only the vine can hear her sing:
"Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep;
What shall you fear when I am here?
Sleep, little one sleep."

The king may sing in his bitter flight,
The tree may croon to the vine to-night,
But the little snowflake at my breast
Liketh the song I sing the best—
Sleep, sleep, little one, sleep;
Weary thou art anext my heart,
Sleep, little one sleep.

—Eugene Field.

THE GREAT WORK.

An Eminent Liberal Divine Replies to a Certain Point in Mr. Howe's Article.

To the Editor:—The last paragraph in Mr. Howe's closing article, in his review of "The Great Work," may be taken as fairly illustrative of the attitude assumed throughout the entire review. As an illustration of unwarranted and wholly gratuitous assumption, it is certainly "the limit." I do not pose as an exponent of the Great School, (though I should consider it the highest honor, were I entitled to do so) yet I have read enough of the literature emanating from that school to be able to confidently assert that no such teachings and conclusions regarding the destiny of the human race as imply "the final destruction of all but a fated few" are to be found therein.

It is true the author of "The Great Work" states (a fact which is only too evident) that in this present life the majority of people are traveling the "pathway which leads to the North." (And although Mr. Howe seems unaware that in symbolic language the "North is the place of darkness," there are, nevertheless, thousands on earth, besides the Masonic Fraternity and students of Eastern religions, who are familiar with the figure.) But to state that the Great School declares the final destruction of the majority of the race is wholly gratuitous, for it does nothing of the kind. The Masters of that School would doubtless acknowledge that they were all once travelers upon the "pathway which leads to the North," nor do they in any way imply that all those who are now traveling that road (that is, under the dominion of the senses) will continue to do unto the end, nor that what is known as physical death forever ends the possibility of man's choosing the better way.

But the author of "The Great Work" does teach that, the Human Will is supreme, and that it is by virtue of his will that man is man, that the only hope of individual evolution lies in the will being free and inviolate. Surely, this is nothing new to us, for it is most evident to all thinkers in these days that there is no moral progress possible without freedom of choice. Consequently, if God is Love, if Heaven is Harmony, and if eternal felicity is the result of a state of unselfish love attained only by moral evolution, which evolution can only take place in one whose will power is preserved inviolate, it must be evident that human destiny rests finally and necessarily with the individual himself.

It is no disparagement to the Divine Omnipotence to say that there are some things which even God cannot do. He cannot do that which involves a contradiction. As God cannot "make two mountains without a valley between them," (one of the puzzles of our boyhood days), so neither can He force spiritual evolution, for in each case there is a contradiction of terms implied. As the very expression, "two mountains," implies and includes the intervening valley, so the expression, "spiritual evolution," implies freedom of choice. These facts are certainly not new or unknown, and it sounds strange to hear a thinking man in this day and age compare such reasoning to the "creeds of savages or the dark ages of Christianity." The unreasonable doctrine of "universal salvation" (compulsory growth!) is really much nearer to the dark ages, "perseverance of the saints," etc.

But what is the "spiritual" philosophy" to which Mr. Howe refers, and where can we learn exactly what its teachings are on this particular point? Presumably reference is made to those reports and opinions which come to us from excarnate human beings. But do all these intelligences teach that all those now in hell will some day begin the moral evolution and finally reach the "land of light?" By no means. One of the most remarkable books in all Spiritualistic literature is "Spirit Teachings," written by exalted intelligences through the hand of William S. Moses, known as "M. A. Oxon." In this book the statement is made that, though such cases are few, yet there are those in the lower worlds who, as a result of their love for and continuance in evil, continue to sink lower and lower in the scale of being until they finally lose conscious existence.

That all souls are on the upward path, is taught, I am aware, by some spirits, as are also many other absurd and contradictory ideas. Spirits holding these opinions are not necessarily evil. They simply do not know. Having a large hope and observing that many do arise from the lower world, they conclude that in time all others will necessarily do the same. They are no more to be blamed for ignorance in this regard than are some men now living on earth who are unable to see that there is in operation a destructive as well as a constructive process; who, seeing only the truth that nothing destructive can come from God (good), fail to see that a destructive process may be instituted and continued in by the Human Will.

I am aware that the awful revelations of those wonderful books, "A Wanderer in Spirit Lands," and "The Strange Story of Ahrinziman," are not particularly popular even among those who pride themselves on their "spiritual" philosophy, yet a real philosopher wants facts and refuses to build upon the sand, however "beautiful" and convenient it may be. To him the revelations of "The Wanderer" are what might reasonably be expected (since death does not change sinners into saints) and the declarations of those exalted spirits, in "Spirit Teachings," to the effect that man may continue to devolve after death until he "finally loses conscious existence," is both reasonable and in entire accord with known laws. The philosophy taught by the Great School will be found in perfect accord with all that is true in the Spiritualistic philosophy, as well as that of Theosophy, New Thought, etc. It is true that the Great School points out the fact that at the present time most men are yet under the dominion of the senses, and that this state continued in, becomes the "North," or land of spiritual darkness and destruction, but it by no means follows that it does not hold the broadest possible hope for the race as a whole consistent with that incontrovertible fact,—the Sovereignty of the Human Will.

WM. OMER BUTLER.

Savanna, Ill.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine," contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 490 pages. Price $1.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.
BOOKS FOR ALL SPIRITUALISTS TO PERUSE.

Ten Commandments Analyzed. By W. H. Bach. Price, 25 cents.

The Arcana of Spiritualism. A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. A splendid work by the seer and philosospher, Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

The Aristocracy of Health. A Study of Physical Culture, and Our Favorite Poisons. A masterly work on the subject, by the gifted writer, Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson. Price, $1.50.

The A, B, Z, of Our Own Nutrition. An excellent work and guide to perfect health. By Horace Fletcher. Price, $1. Price $1.25.

The Candle From Under the Bushel, or Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy. Nuts that are hard for them to crack. An interesting book. By Wm. Heart. Price 40 cents.

The Crisis. By Thomas Paine. Price, 25 cents.

The Demonism of the Ages. Spirit Obsessions so Common in Spiritism, Oriental and Occidental Occultism. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Cloth bound. Price $1; postage, 19 cents.

The Development of Spirit—After Transition. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. By the late M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

The Dream Child. Reads like an inspiration. Treating clearly upon the laws of affinity, love and the attendant pain and sorrow invariably experienced therewith. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

The Fairy Land of Science. This beautiful book fills a niche in the hearts of the young people. Lyceum library literature. By Arabella B. Buckley. Price 50.

The Great Psychological Crime, which claims that subjective mediumship is injurious, is edited by Florence Huntley, author of "The Dream Child" and "Harmonies of Evolution." Price $2.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. A dainty, helpful book. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price 35 cents.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Fourth edition. 62 pages. "An effort to purify our 'Idea of God' that it may be greater, sublimer, and more awe-inspiring to future generations than it has ever been yet."—Literary World, London. Paper cover, 15 cents.

The Kingship of Self-Control. Full of most helpful ideas, and bound in white covers with pretty floral design. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cents.

The Life of Jesus. By Ernest Renan. Translated from the original French. Price, cloth, gilt top, 75 cents.

The Life Radiant. For every one in every walk of life. By Lilian Whiting. Cloth binding. Price, $1.

The Living Decalogue. From Sinai to Zion. By W. J. Colville. Price 50 cents.

The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature. Demonstrates the continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences. Free from all theories of superstition. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Price 25 cents.

The Lover's World. A Wheel of Life. Treating on the subjects of love, marriage and parenthood. By Dr. Alice B. Stockham. "The Lover's World, garnered sheaves from the wisdom of books and life's experiences, is now returned to the heart of humanity." Price, silk cloth, $2.25.

The Majesty of Calmness. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cts.

The Mystic Thesaurus. By W. F. Whitehead. Leatherette, Price, $1.

The New Life. By Leroy Berrier. Price 50 cents.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional. This is a most valuable book. It comes from an ex-priest, whose character is above reproach. By Father Chiniquy. Price $1.

The Prophets of Israel. Popular sketches from Old Testament History, than which no branch of science, in the last generation, has undergone a more profound revolution. By Carl Heinrich Cornell. Price 25c.

The Other Side of Death. Scientifically examined and carefully described by C. W. Leadbeater. Price, $1.50.

The Relations of Science to the Phenomena of Life. Ideas of life scientifically expressed in contradistinction from the old theories. By Spirit Professor M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Religion of Cheerfulness. By Sara A. Hubbard. Price 50 cents.

The Pathway of the Human Spirit. By J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

The Romance of Jude. A story of the time of Christ, given through the mediumship of Mrs. Longley. Cloth bound. Price, 50 cents.

The Riddle of the Universe at the close of the nineteenth century. By Prof. Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. Bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

The Soul. Its Nature, Relations and Expression in the Human Embodiments. This is clearly a book on re-embodiment, or the principles of reincarnation. By the guides of Cora L. V. Richmond. Price $1.

The Soul's Song of Triumph. A prose poem by Harrison D. Barrett Price 10 cents.

The Spiritual Alps, and How We Ascend Them. A few thoughts on "How to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it." By Moses Hull. Price, cloth, 40 cents; paper, 25 cents.

The Spiritual Birth, or Death, and Its To-Morrow. The Spiritualistic idea of Death, heaven and hell. A logical statement, proven both by facts and the Bible. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

The Spiritual Significance. By Lilian Whiting. This book is all that the name implies—a spiritual book. Price $1.

The Strange Story of Ahrinziman, the Persian Mystic Emperor. A wonderful and interesting occult story, written by the author of A Wanderer in the Spirit Land. Beautifully bound. Price, $1; postage 10 cents; paper, 60 cents.

The Talmud. Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry and legends. Also sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polang. Price, cloth.

The Unknown. By the scientific writer, Camille Flammarion. Price, $2.

The Widow's Mite and Other Psychological Phenomena. A new book of 538 pages by I. K. Funk. A most remarkable and valuable book. Price $2.

The Wonders of Life. A popular study of biological philosophy. By Ernst Haeckel, author of The Riddle of the Universe. Bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

The World Beautiful. Series One, Two and Three. Choice volumes of restful and educational reading, uniting the ideal and the real in this life. By Lilian Whiting. Price, each volume, $1.

Three Jubilee Lectures. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price 35 cents.

Thomas Paine's Examination of the Prophecies. A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old and called Prophecies concerning Jesus Christ. Price, 15 cents.

To the Women of America. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price 10 cents.

Truths of Spiritualism. This book narrates many of the striking experiences of its author as a lecturer and test medium in the earlier days of Spiritualism. By E. V. Wilson. Price $1.

Twentieth Century Guide to Palmistry. By the Zanzigs. A good book for all those interested in this study. Price, cloth, 75c paper, 25c.

Two In One. A compendium of Biblical Spiritualism. A combination of "The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" into one volume. By Moses Hull. Price $1.

Uncooked Foods and How to Live on Them. By Mr and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00. Paper, 60 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

President McArthur's Report.

To the Officers and Members of the State Progressive Spiritualists' Association of Missouri, In Annual Convention Assembled, Greeting:

One year has elapsed since the votes of the members of organized Spiritualism placed us at the head of their State organization. Many problems have confronted us during the year that were especially trying in view of the fact that at all times we were crippled by a lack of funds and must do not as we would, but as best we could. Still we believe that much has been accomplished toward laying at least a good foundation upon which the incoming board may erect a lasting and permanent State Organization.

Change of Name, Constitution and By-Laws.—There was presented at last State convention an amendment to change the name of our State Association, also its constitution and by-laws, which was adopted without the delegates being aware of the fact that it would be necessary to petition the courts for permission to do so, involving an expenditure of considerable money. In view of this, and being also informed by members of the State Association, that additional amendments would be presented for your consideration at this convention, we deemed it advisable to lay the whole matter over for further attention.

New Societies.—Since last convention the following societies have been granted charters by the State Association. The Spirit of Truth Society, Springfield, Mo.; Temple of Spiritualism, St. Louis, Mo.; The Golden Rule (colored), Kansas City, Mo.; The Truth Seekers (colored), Martinsburg, Mo.

Reinstated Societies.—The St. Joe Spiritualist Society of St. Joseph, Mo., paid up and was re-instated in good standing. It has been delinquent for the past two years.

Societies Dropped from the State Roll.—The Springfield Spiritualist Society of Springfield, Mo., returned their charter to the State Association last August. Their medium, Mrs Mary Garrett Sharon Shaw, having left Springfield under serious charges, leaving a mortgage of $1,000 on the Temple, which was sold for debt. A number of the better element headed by Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Ellis, organized and applied to the State Association for a charter under the name of Spirit of Truth Society, which was granted December 29, 1806. Mrs. Great, secretary of the old society, applied to the State Association for letters of endorsement for Mrs. Shaw, which was refused.

Recent Happenings in Springfield, Mo.—Two months ago, a Mr. Figuers, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, but for some time connected with the Stewart-Folsom outfit here at St. Louis, bobbed up at Springfield, denouncing the State and National Associations, and giving out the "Stewart-Folsom Conspiracy" pamphlets. He finally succeeded in getting together a few dupes and applied in the Circuit Court for a pro forma decree of incorporation. On being notified of this move, we at once wrote to Brother Peck, who happened to be lecturing at Cleveland, and asked that Figuers' Cleveland record be secured and forwarded without delay. In a few days we received a reply containing facts concerning Figuers which we will not mention before this body. The letter is here for your inspection. This much may be stated: Figuers is not his real name. We forwarded a copy of this letter at once to Springfield with instructions to place without delay before the Circuit Judge.

The Folsom-Stewart Case.—The petition of the Scientific and Religious Truthseekers Society, C. W. Stewart and Josie K. Folsom Stewart pastor and medium, for the pro forma decree of incorporation before Judge Taylor, was contested by your State Board on the grounds that they were unfit people to represent or teach religion, having been tried and convicted of questionable practices by the State and National Associations. After a two-days' hearing of the same evidence which had resulted in their conviction and expulsion from State and National Associations, Judge Taylor on October 16, 1906, denied their petition. Since writing they have petitioned for a rehearing, which was granted, and the case set for March 21.

Mass Meeting.—A joint mass meeting of your State and National Associations was held at the Odeon, June 13, 14 and 15, which, we are sorry to report, was not a financial success, and which resulted in the loss of some $35.00 to the State Association. There were several reasons for this failure, one of the greatest being the lack of co-operation on the part of some of your State Board. Your president accommodated three of the visiting talent, engaged the Odeon, arranged the program, presided as chairman at the meetings, in fact did all one small man could do to make the meeting a success. The newspaper work was especially neglected. We believe, however, that much moral good resulted from the able statement by Dr. Geo. B. Warne of the State and National's position in the Folsom-Stewart matter.

The Special Meeting was held by your State Board in Carondelet on December 16, 1906, resulted in much good being accomplished and some $25.00 being cleared for the State Association.

Lay and Associate Ministers License Granted During the Year.—Mrs. M. Gerhold of the Spiritual Research Society, Associate Minister; Mrs. Nelson Armstead of the First Colored Spiritualist Society, Associate Minister.; Mrs. Mary North of the First Colored Spiritualist Society, Associate Minister; Mr. J. B. Bates of the First Colored Spiritualist Society, Lay Minister; Mr. J. B. Bates of the First Colored Spiritualist Society, Full Ordination.

Ordination Amendment.—Previous to the N. S. A Convention, we drafted the following amendment to the National "Ordination Usages and Other Rites": "An Associate Minister of the gospel of Spiritualism may by serving a society in the capacity of both speaker and medium for a period of one year, be eligible to full ordination; providing, the society, by a two-thirds vote request it, and providing also the work done for said society is of such a character as in the opinion of the Ordination Committee of the N. S. A. or State Association to warrant it." This amendment we believe was necessary not only for Missouri, but for the cause at large. It was endorsed by your present Board and at their request was presented by your president to the National Convention at Chicago as a State amendment. It was adopted unanimously.

Press Work.—During the year it was necessary in the interest of truth and fair play, to reply in The Progressive Thinker to an attack made on the old State Board by the secretary and president of the First Spiritual Church of Kansas City, Mo., who had sent in their charter; also misstatements made by William John Ward of Clinton, Ia., concerning the local societies here at St. Louis. This was done by your president to the best of his ability, and in each case, owing more to the justice of our cause than any merit we possessed as a writer, the victory was won for the Missouri State Association. The official act of the old board in regard to the Kansas City Society was upheld and approved by the brightest minds in our movement. Mr. Ward also manfully and publicly acknowledged that he had been misinformed, and apologized for his misstatements. We have also from time to time sent The Progressive Thinker write-ups of the various anniversary celebrations of our local societies, also a report of our joint Mass-Meeting with the N. S. A. and a full account of the Drumm Case.

Our position on the fraud question has been bitterly denounced not only by the fake element (which was to be expected) but by many Spiritualists who seem to feel that the movement was being injured. We desire to state frankly that we have no apologies to make for what we have said and done along this line, our only regret being that we could do so little where so much effort is imperative for the good name of real Spiritualism. What we have done has been without money or price for the good of the cause. If we have failed it has not been from lack of effort or enthusiasm on our part. We lay our office down with the consciousness of being actuated in all that we did in our official capacity, by an earnest desire to see a cleaner, more intelligent exposition to the world of our beautiful religion.

Vacancies on the State Board.—L. F. Beauvais, first vice-president, dropped for non-attendance. G. A. Gilbert, Editor-at-Large, dropped for non-attendance. Mrs. L. Dorner, trustee, dropped for non-attendance. Mrs. Ferris, trustee, dropped for non-attendance. Mr. Renicke, 6th vice-president, resigned. Mrs. D. Padman, trustee, resigned. Mr. T. W. Goethe, trustee, resigned. Mrs. James Cornelius, trustee, resigned.

Personal.—I wish to make this public expression of my gratitude toward those esteemed friends and co-workers, Mrs. Gates, Mrs. Hary, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Mrs. Jones, Mrs Wallace, Dr. Green, and J. M. Pierce, who have been associated with me during the year, and whose friendship and hearty support has been an inspiration to me at all times. Dr. Whittier, Prof. W. F. Peck, and Rev. Thomas Grimshaw, have also assisted and co-operated with the State Association and myself throughout the year, and I earnestly recommend that a vote of thanks be tendered them by this convention.

I also wish to publicly express my thanks to J. R. Francis, the able editor of The Progressive Thinker for the many favors he has so freely extended to both State Association and myself. Every article and notice sent him by your president for publication has been cheerfully inserted in spite of the fact that space in his popular paper is at a premium. I most earnestly recommend that a vote of thanks be tendered him, also that every Spiritualist in Missouri show their appreciation of his sturdy stand for honest mediumship and pure Spiritualism by becoming a subscriber to The Progressive Thinker.

Also the adoption and strict enforcement of the following rule: Only such workers shall be employed on our platforms as are endorsed by this association, or hold letters of endorsement issued by other State Associations and officially certified by this Association.

We also recommend that an index book be purchased by the incoming board and that a record be kept of all fake mediums, also all speakers and mediums guilty of immoral conduct, with their names, descriptions and all the information obtainable concerning them. Also that the incoming Secretary be instructed to write and urge that similar steps be taken by our National and sister State Associations, and that information be exchanged one with another to the end that an up-to-date record be kept, for the protection of the public and the good name of organized Spiritualism.

We recommend also, that so-called developing circles for pay be discontinued by the mediums affiliated with the State Association, for the following reasons: First, because the idea conveyed that an individual can be developed by anyone is opposed to the philosophy of Spiritualism, which teaches that we must INDIVIDUALLY work out our own salvation.

Second, the idea conveyed that this development can be purchased is also opposed to both reason and the philosophy of Spiritualism; the words of Scripture: "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the GIFT can be purchased," is as true now as it was 2000 years ago. Every faker and commercial medium has so misused and abused the term "developing circle" that your president earnestly recommends that the term "consecration circle" be adopted in its stead, and that no charge be made at such a circle. The more the almighty dollar is forgotten at such a time, the higher and purer the influences that will be attracted.

In view of the fact that quite a number accepted office on the State Board last year, who took no apparent interest in the work, and who were finally dropped for non-attendance, we earnestly urge, for the good of the cause, that no Spiritualists accept office on the State Board who does not feel that he or she can devote some of their time and thought to the welfare of our State organization.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PAUL McARTHUR.
President S. P. S. A. of Mo.

HAECKEL'S LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION.

A popular retrospect and summary. By Ernst Haeckel, Professor at Jena University. Translated from the second edition by Joseph McCabe. With three plates and Haeckel's latest portrait. Price, cloth, $1.00 net.

CONTENTS:—Introduction. Preface. Chapter I. —The Controversy about Creation; Evolution and Dogma; Plate I; Genealogical Tree of the Vertebrates. Chapter II.—The Struggle over our Genealogical Tree; Our Ape Relatives and the Vertebrate-Stem; Plate II.; Skeletons of Five Anthropoid Apes. Chapter III.—The Controversy over the Soul; The Ideas of Immortality and God; Plate III; Embryos of Three Mammals. Appendix.—Evolutionary Tables; Geological Ages and Periods; Man's Genealogical Tree—First Half; Man's Genealogical Tree—Second Half; Classification of the Primates; Genealogical Tree of the Primates; Explanation of Genealogical Table I. Postscript.—Evolution and Jesuitism.

"The Attainment of Womanly Beauty of Form and Features. The Cultivation of Personal Beauty, Based on Hygiene and Health Culture. By twenty physicians and specialists. Edited by Albert Turner." Of special interest and value. Price $1.

LEGERDEMAIN SPIRITUALISM.

(Continued from page four.)

ferred to Budd's Lake, Robert had often thought that it was peculiar that there should be a welt, as he called it, in the center of the hand of the spirit Lizzie. He knew that his sister, when she died, had no such welt. He asked the spirit on one occasion what made this welt, and she stated that one day when in the kitchen, before she left this earth, of course, she had burned her hand, which left a life mark, and such disfigurements even stayed with spirits.

Caught in His Own Trap.

Moore hit upon a scheme to bring Robert Crowe back as a good believer. He proposed that the people in the hotel should go out on the lake boating. Several rowboats were soon pressed into service. It was Moore's plan to put Robert and Mrs. Strickland in one of the boats and let her give the young man a good spiritual lecture. The several parties started off and left Robert and Mrs. Strickland standing on the boat landing. Robert is a fine oarsman and was going to show his skill by letting the others get a long way off and then overtake them.

When he decided that it was time to start he took Mrs. Strickland by the hand to assist her in the boat. He said, in his statement:

"I saw a welt in the woman's hand, rubbed my fingers over it, and knew at once that I had solved the mystery of Lizzie's spirit.

"Forgetting that I had spoken of the welt at the New York spook house, Mrs. Strickland paid no attention to my feeling it at this time. I said nothing, however, but I asked her to change seats twice while on the water, so that I would have to take her by the hand each time and convince myself I was not back in a dark room holding a spook's hand.

"I had felt the welt when I assisted her in the boat; I felt it twice while on the lake, and I felt it a fourth time as I assisted her out of the boat. I could not sleep that night. I was wild with anger, and at 3 o'clock in the morning found myself walking in the hall of the hotel in my stocking feet, revolver in hand, looking for the bedroom of the 'Rev. Dr.' Hugh R. Moore. The deception I thought would kill my mother when she learned of it, and how I was going to break the news to her I had no idea. All this occurred on the day before the closing of the Budd's Lake season."

She Confessed All.

Early the next morning Crowe was out of the house waiting to see Mrs. Strickland appear on the veranda. Mrs. Strickland appeared and he proposed another boating trip. As soon as breakfast was over they went out on the lake, and here he told her that he knew that she was a spook, that she had appeared to him as the spirit of his sister Lizzie, and that it was the same welt in her hand that had given her away.

The young woman acknowledged the deception and then told how the whole business was worked. She broke down completely when Robert told her his mother had at times gone without food and fuel in order to save money to pay Moore that she might hold and kiss the spirit of her daughter Lizzie. Robert told her, also, of other families he knew that had not the money to spend, but who had gone without food, coal and medicine in order that Moore and his family and the spooks might live on the fat of the land. He also told her how, when his mother had gone up near the cabinet one day to see the spirit of another relative, and had carried her hand bag on her arm, a spook had opened the bag and extracted all the money she had, $3. He told her of other persons whom he know that had claimed they had been robbed by some one of the spirits. This was all news to her.—New York World, March 6, 1907.

BOSS OF SPIRITS, EXPOSED, LEAVES TOWN IN HURRY.

The "Rev. Dr." Moore, After Reading the Disclosures in The World, Quickly Departs for Dayton, O., for a "Rest"—Three of His Chief "Spooks," Tessie White, Martin C. Tietjen and Louis Cohen, Also Leave New York—Other Spook Emporiums Pull Down Their Blinds—Suit of Mrs. Strickland, Former "Spirit" in Moore's Seances, With Its Attendant Disclosures, is like a Bombshell in the "First Church of Progressive Spiritualists."

The "Rev. Dr." Hugh R. Moore, pastor of the First Church of Progressive Spiritualists, has fled the town and his spooks have dematerialized from New York as a result of the story printed in The World yesterday regarding the suit brought by Mrs. Harriet E. Strickland, of No. 526 East Twenty-fourth street, Flatbush, in the sum of $25,000, charging the "Reverend Doctor" with having slandered her.

It was exactly 8:15 o'clock yesterday morning when Moore left his house and purchased a paper at the corner. An intimation had reached him the night before that something might be printed concerning his "spook" emporium, and as soon as his eyes fell upon the news he hurried back to his home, and in less than an hour departed with a dress-suit case and a handbag.

A World reporter and a representative of the law office of Andrew Macrery, of No. 31 Nassau street, followed the "spook" manipulator to the foot of Chambers street, where he bought a ticket for Dayton, Ohio, and soon afterward was on his way to that city, the place of his birth.

Won't Risk a Legal Fight.

The exposure was too much for Moore. He did not attempt to stand his ground and put up a legal fight as he did in Brooklyn in 1904, where, with George Gordon Battle, his attorney, he came out with flying colors from the Court of Special Sessions. In that case there was little or no evidence against the man, notwithstanding the fact that one of his patrons had been struck down with a blackjack in his parlor. The several charges against him were dismissed, and he then moved to the West Thirteenth street house in this city.

Coincident with Moore's departure yesterday was the sudden disappearance of Tessie White, the "Reverend Doctor's" most valued "spirit," who, through her "cute" way of talking with believers, managed to make them return and spend more money before they learned all they wanted to know from the spirit world.

Another "spirit," Louis Cohen, who, when not living in Havemeyer street, Brooklyn, stops at a boarding-house in Far Rockaway, and who was formerly an elevator man in one of the big department stores, also has left New York. His destination is unknown. Cohen ranked as third-best "spook" in Moore's house, and received $2 for every seance he "spooked" at.

One "Spook's Statement."

Martin C. Tietjen, twenty-seven years old, a fine-looking young man, who sometimes assisted his brother-in-law in the keeping of books for the Morgan Line Steamship Company, was the Adonis of the male "spooks" of Moore's. Tietjen made himself most popular with the believers by meeting them before and after a seance. After The World's exposure he packed his grip and left for Washington yesterday afternoon. Before he left, however, he was convinced, in the interest of justice, that he should make a statement concerning the inside workings of Moore's house, and after a little persuasion, finally accompanied a reporter to The World building, and there in the presence of four persons, told how he had been taken into the business, and corroborated Mrs. Strickland's story in every detail as to the inside workings of the house.

the inside workings of the house—New York World, March 7, 1907.

THE BLAKES CAUGHT.

Made Oath That Blakes Held Trumpets When Light Was Flashed on Sunday Evening Seance, While Spirits Were Supposed to Be Talking—Affidavit by Bookhart.

Harry Bookhart, secretary of the local branch of the State Association of Spiritualists went before Justice of Peace Kimberlin last evening, and made this affidavit:

"I do solemnly swear that at a seance at Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Blake's residence on the night of March 3, 1907, in which I was present, I saw Mr. and Mrs. Blake holding trumpets to their mouths in a manner which would indicate that they had been talking through the same.

"The above incident occurred during the trumpet phase of the seance in a room which had been totally dark till a flashlight had been turned on the seance, which was done while the seance was at its height and the said light being turned on made it possible to see as above stated."

"HARRY BOOKHART."

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this fourth day of March, A. D. 1907,

"LEWIS E. KIMBERLIN,
"Justice of the Peace."

Mr. and Mrs. Bookhart then went to the residence of R. E. Bragdon, on Nichol avenue, where the official board of the local branch held a metting. The affidavit was reported at the meeting and turned over to the board and it is understood that the matter will be reported to the State Association.

The Alleged Exposure.

The incident grew out of an alleged expose of a Spiritualistic seance held Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Blake, at 1504 Pearl street. It is said that a flashlight played a prominent part in the alleged expose. There were thirty-six people in the circle, seven of whom were from Elwood, and four from Marion, while the remainder were Andersonville people.

According to the story told by persons who were there the rooms had been darkened, after which that part of the program dealing with materializing of the spirits and ethereal manifestations was begun.

Spirits Get Lively.

The spirits, it is said, were just getting livened up to a good pitch when Cal Perry and Frank Shores, who were in the circle, each turned an electric pocket lamp on the scene. According to the story told by those who flashed the light, Mrs. Blake was standing in front of the cabinet with a trumpet to her mouth while her husband was on one side and Charles Hendrick, of North Anderson, paper hanger, was on the other side, each with a trumpet in his hand. It was at this instant that Sol. Merriweather yelled for the men to shut off the light or the medium would be killed. At this some one is said to have struck Merriweather and the entire party made a break for the door.

Return Seance Fee.

The affair, it is said, has caused quite a great deal of excitement among local Spiritualists, many of them holding that the seance was a fake. Among the local people present were M. C. Perry, Ed. Heinold and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bookhart.

After the excitement of the alleged expose subsided Mr. and Mrs. Blake returned to all persons the money they paid to sit in the seance. They strenuously denied they had attempted any fraud.—Anderson (Ind.) Morning Herald, March 5, 1907.

IMMORTALITY IN BEING.

Immortality is in being, not seeming,
The facts of the present but
The wisdom of the past, and the teaming
Swift changing centuries be
While the thoughts of a Plato and Sa—th you,
And Horeb's mystical spell
Are being's living ever-changing and new
Embodied for ever they dw—
We hear the world's great di—inging,
A Patti, a Nellson, a Lind,
And the music in our souls goes ringing
Like the mighty sweep of the wind;
And the story of their lives is repeated
In peans of praises that dr—
The soul of their music we gre—
By love's immutable law.

We look when the West blazes red,
And the stars are dully seen,
And the world is uplifted and fed
By its radiant matchless sheen,
And the earth's narrow lim— seem false,
Man a creature of but a da—
When the star-ships through the vasty deep sail,
He longs for the eternal wa—

Man impetuous by nature and being,
Sees his life race only begi—
And the cycles of worlds but a pas—ing
Of the soul's unfading sun—
And the millions of years in their sweep, q—
To his being are but as a da—
And though time and eternity pass,
His soul pursues its glad wa—

Man immortal by nature and being,
Counts not the swift fleeting years,
But by his intuitive soul's far seeing,
And the music of infinite spheres,
He sees the world's vast systems and things
With the eye of a prophet and seer,
And mounts as on eagle's swift wings
Undaunted by sorrow or fear.

BISHOP A. Bl—d.
Summerland, Cal.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Drawings by Webster Heston. With Critical and Humorous Comments upon the Texts." Heston's drawings are incomparable, and everlastingly funny. Price, in boards $1.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S ANNIVERSARY.

It Was Duly Celebrated in San Jose, California.

The 170th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine was duly celebrated at Hale's Hall, Feb. 3, under the auspices of the First Spiritual Union, assisted by the Mutual Helpers and Patriotic League of America.

The day's services opened by Sunset Lyceum under the management of Miss Merle Muntz. The children all took an active part by quotations and selections on the life of Thomas Paine. Conference opened at 11 a. m., by the congregation singing "Tell Me the Blessed Story." Joseph Murray, vice-president of the F. S. U., in the chair, gave a short speech on "The Day We Celebrate," followed by Mrs. L. N. LeMay, on "The Great and Good Man; Thomas Paine."

Mrs. Mattie Hull then spoke of the Paine Memorial Hall in Boston, and the struggle the Liberals had to save it to posterity. Mrs. H. L. Bigelow, president of the First Spiritual Union, read a beautiful poem written by a man blind from birth, "A Poetical Tribute to Thomas Paine," followed by A. R. Woodhams, member of Patriotic League of America, who read an address eulogizing the character of Paine and denouncing his traducers. W. D. J. Hambley, another member of P. L. of A., was called upon and gave a short and earnest address on Patriotism, drawing attention to the great difference as represented in 1776 and until the civil war, and the patriotism of to-day.

A banquet was served at 12 M., under the management of the Mutual Helpers' Society. Many of the ladies are members of the First Spiritual. They received many compliments on the nice banquet furnished by them for the occasion. Dr. H. C. W. Johnson, member of the P. L. of A., acted as chairman of the afternoon and evening sessions. At 2 p. m., a large attendance listened to the able address of Mattie Hull on the awakening of the people to what America owed to Thomas Paine, giving several sketches of his life, closing with a poem rendered for many years on similar occasions by Moses Hull (author unknown) "The Author Hero, Thomas Paine." Miss Josephine R. Cole gave a strong address on "The Constitution of American Liberty To-day."

Mrs. E. B. Marcene spoke on "Thomas Paine, the Humanitarian." She opened her address by reciting "Abou Ben Adhem," and compared Paine's life with the subject of the poem. Mrs. H. L. Bigelow read an address by Alonzo Danforth, "The Advocate of Humane Doctrine," Mrs. Bock and Miss Linda Zink rendered a duet, "The Dear Old Day." N. C. Westerfield of Phenix, Ariz., spoke upon the works and books of Paine, in England, France and America, giving several interesting incidents that indicated his true character. J. W. Hines delivered a clear, concise argument to show that Thomas Paine was the man of the day and time. Mrs. L. N. LeMay spoke on the vibrations that permeate the world.

At 7:30 p. m., a good audience assembled to listen to an interesting program. The audience sang, "They Come, the Angel Band." Invocation by Mattie Hull. Miss Merle Muntz then read an original poem. An address was then given by Dr. H. C. W. Johnson, which was a glowing tribute to the patriot Paine.

Mrs. Hull gave the closing address, quoting from Paine's works to show reasons why Paine attacked the Bible, using these words: "My disbelief in the Bible is based upon a pure and religious belief in God." Then she said, referring to the charge of Paine being an infidel, accepting the definition of Webster: "An infidel is a disbeliever in the prevailing faith." "Every one who is familiar with history knows what the prevailing faith was; presumably nearly every one in the audience is an infidel in the same sense that Paine was." The speaker quoted from Paine's theistic arguments as presented in a discourse before the Theo-Philanthropists' Society in Uaris, to prove that Paine believed God's power, wisdom and mercy could be studied, not through written books, but through his creation. Mrs. May Muntz's orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
Cor. Sec'y F. S. U.
San Jose, Cal.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM.

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies; a Review of Rev. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated attacks upon Spiritualism." By Moses Hull. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualist Meetings.

It is important when a meeting is suspended, that notice be given us, so that inquirers may not be mislead. We want new notices of all meetings being held here in public halls at the present time.

The Church of the Soul, Rev. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor, holds regular services every Sunday at 11 o'clock, in Hall 309 Masonic Temple (corner State and Randolph streets). Sunday-school at 10 a. m. All are invited.

The Band of Harmony (auxillary to the Church of the Soul) holds regular meetings the first and third Thursdays of each month, at 3:30 to 10 p. m. Ladies bring lunch. Coffee served at 6 p. m. All are made welcome.

The Christian Spiritualists will hold services at the Van Buren Opera House, corner Madison street and California avenue, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Hamilton Gill will lecture and give spirit messages.

The Progressive Spiritual Society. Services at 8 p. m., 183 E. North avenue, corner Burling street. Mrs. B. Hilbert, speaker.

First German Spiritualist Society on the West Side. Meetings every Sunday at 3 p. m. in Garselman's Hall, corner Ashland avenue and W. 18th street.

The Light of Truth Church will hold services in Hopkins' Hall 528 W 63rd street, near Stewart avenue. Conference at 3 p. m. Lecture at 7:45. Messages at each service. Midweek meeting Thursday 3 p. m. Mrs. Jeffery Burland, pastor.

Central Spiritual Church holds services each Sunday evening at Trimble Hall, 1977 W. Madison street (near 40th avenue) commencing at 7:30 sharp. Conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Howes.

The Church of the Psychic Forces holds services at Wilcox Hall, corner Champlain avenue and 43d street, every Sunday. Conference at 3 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m. The hall number is 361-363 East 43d street. Conducted by Mrs. Isa Cleveland.

The Society of Spiritual Truth holds services every Sunday at 2:30 p. m., at 3539 Calumet avenue. Lecture and spirit messages. All are welcome. J. K. Hillis, Psychic.

The Spiritualist Church of Students of Nature will hold its services at Flynn's Hall, 461 North avenue, corner Robey street and Milwaukee avenue, every Sunday evening at 7:30. The hall can be reached by Milwaukee avenue North avenue and Robey street cars, and the Logan Square and Humboldt Park Metropolitan elevated. Mrs. M. Schumacher, pastor.

The Christian Spiritualists Society will hold meetings during the winter months, conducted by Miss Sarah Thomas, every Sunday afternoon and evening, at 3 and 8 o'clock, at Conway Hall, corner Western avenue and West Lake street; entrance on Western avenue, over drug store.

Golden Rule Spiritualist Society, Nora E. Hill, pastor; Dr. J. H. Randall, assistant pastor. Holds services every Sunday evening during July and August, at O'Donnell's College Hall, Paulina street, near Washington Boulevard. All welcome.

Temple Light and Truth, 370 Wabansia avenue, near Robey street and North avenue. Sunday-school 10:30 a. m. Lectures and spirit messages given at 3 and 8 p. m., by Mrs. T. Loll, pastor, every Sunday, in German and English.

The Hyde Park Occult Society holds regular Sunday evening services, 7:45 o'clock, at 319 E. 55th street, between Kimbark and Monroe avenues. Jackson Park cars pass the door. The best talent available will be secured for all meetings. To spread the truth is the object of this society. Address all communications to Miss Eva L. Stewart, corresponding secretary, 455 E. 55th street. Entrance to hall, 319 E. 55th street.

Spiritual Mission Chapel (Old 77) 77 East Thirty-first street. Services every Sunday at 3 and 8 p. m. Scientific and philosophical lectures; best psychic and message bearers in attendance. Prof. F. M. Stoller, conductor.

The German-English Society, Bund der Wahrheit No. 18, holds services every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in Brand's Hall, 152 North avenue, between Halsted and Clybourn. Also every Thursday evening in Math. Jung's Hall, 1071 Lincoln avenue, southeast corner Ashland and Lincoln avenues; entrance first door north of Howard's theater. Frank Joseph, medium. Everybody welcome.

Church of the North Star Spiritual Union, incorporated. Meetings Sundays at 8 p. m. sharp, at Perls Hall, 1546 Milwaukee avenue, near Western avenue. Mrs. Letzter, speaker and medium. All welcome.

Chicago Spiritual Alliance Church, in Vincennes Hall, 35th and Cottage Grove avenue. Mrs. May Elmo, pastor. All welcome. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

Mrs. Mary Hill holds meetings every Sunday and Wednesday evenings at 320 Flournoy street. Good speakers and messages.

Lake View Spiritual Union holds services Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock in Wells Hall, 1629 North Clark street, corner Fletcher street, conducted by Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Wickland, assisted by others. All are cordially welcome. Residence, 616 Wells street.

The Golden Center Spiritualist Society meets at Star Lodge Hall, No. 378 S. Western avenue, between Harrison and Polk streets. Conducted by Prof. McLane and J. E. Coe.

First Society Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Dr. Alex Caird, president. Services at Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street. Every Sunday, afternoon 2:30; circles, 4; supper, 5; song service, 6:30; concert, 7; evening, 8.

The Brotherhood of Spiritual Truth meets Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p. m., in Temperance Hall, 330 West Sixty-third street. Services conducted by Prof. J. K. Hilles and wife.

The Church of Spiritual Revelation will hold services every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at Butler Hall, 57th Court and State street. Conducted by Edward A. Dierkes and T. D. Jones.

[Advertisement.]

NOW IS YOUR TIME—
PRICE REDUCED.

In order to place that valuable book, "MYSTERIES OF THE SEANCE," (written by a life-long Spiritualist) in the hands of as many Spiritualists and investigators as possible this winter, I have decided to CUT THE PRICE IN TWO, and will, until the supply on hand is exhausted, mail it to any address for 12 cents per copy—less than half the former price. This book gives all the methods employed by fake mediums in producing bogus manifestations in all the different phases, and instructs the reader how to detect and expose the fraud. A silver dime and red stamp brings you the book, prepaid, by return mail. Get it and avoid being fooled. Address, ED LUNT, 119 Cedar street, Roxbury, Mass.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

ADOLPH LANGNER,
Aluminum Trumpets for Spiritual Manifestations, 1149 N. Hamlin ave., Chicago.

PHOTO FRAME.—Send six 2-cent stamps and get a beautiful celluloid photo frame. For limited time, only. Address E.J. Howell, Dubuque, Ia.

"CLAIRVOYANT READINGS."
Send full name and date of birth. Six questions answered on business the present or future. $1. Address Mary Frances Woodford, 146 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Mass.

WANTED—A good self-sustaining medium can have, free of charge a nice room cottage, garden, spring, chicken house, all kinds of fruit for the summer in the Ozark Mountains, 2½ miles from St. Louis, Mo. H H. Grieme, Barnhart, Jefferson Co., Mo.

"Neltzel," The Astrological Seer, gives truthful predictions. Send 25 cents (silver) and date of birth, for a trial reading with prospects of coming year. Full reading with Horoscope, $1 to $2. Address F. F. NEITZEL, Box 988, Spokane, Wash.

MRS. MAY A. PRICE.
Clairvoyant Readings by mail, regarding material and spiritual conditions. Diseases diagnosed, Mental—Spiritual treatment given. A specialty of nervous and mental troubles. Obsession cured. Laws and safe conditions of mediumship taught. Send lock of hair, date of birth, and $1.00. Ask questions. 1718 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

LET ME HELP YOU—Old or young, I will give you a scientific character reading from your zodiacal sign telling you what business or profession you are adapted to by nature to follow with success, also how to choose your companions, and live in harmony. Start right now and "success is yours." Send date of birth; trial reading, 25c.; full life reading, $1.00. C. E. L. BROOKS, 41 Savin St., Boston Highlands, Mass.

CUT THIS OUT This offer will not appear again. To those wish to Take Up MENTAL SCIENCE, we offer them one volume of "THINK ARIGHT," (which comes in four volumes of one dollar each), for 15 cents to help pay postage.
Gringhuis' Itemized Ledger Co.,
No. 129 Canal St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . . . of Your Spirit Friends,
can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.
FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

TRUMPETS:
Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal; insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark seance, T P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.
JAS. NEWTON, 423 Dorr St., Toledo, O

Are You a Psychic?
A psychic is one who is sensitive to supernormal vibrations. Everyone is a psychic and can demonstrate a certain phase or degree of power. My "System of Philosophy Concerning Divinity" when applied develops you psychically. Proof of the pudding is in the eating. Apply my system and prove it. Send for circulars, terms, etc., enclosing a stamped addressed envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Road, Brookline, Mass.

HELEN STUART-RICHINGS,
Lecturer and Psychic,
Gives Psychometric and Prophetic Readings,
By mail, full, $2.00. Concise, $1.00. Send money per draft, express, or P. O. money order. No attention given to letters unaccompanied by stamp for reply. Address Gen. Del., Boston, Mass.

FRED P. EVANS,
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.
Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address
FRED P. EVANS,
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

"MISS INCOGNITO"
That's All!
You will be surprised and delighted to know the rest.
If you want to know who she is, and what she does, and the good things in store for you just write us a postal card.
We furnish a Positive Guarantee as to results.
Address
THE P. P. COMPANY
Box 804, Rome, Ga.

AN OPPORTUNITY.
Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents. Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.
FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 10,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYE-GLASSES perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. P. POOLE, 157 Winthrop Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER
Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your dis

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 23, 1907 NO. 904

EXCELLENT ADVICE.

Frauds Should Not Be Encouraged.

Much has been said regarding fraud being added to mediumship, but as yet I have heard no warning against its encouragement that has been given by some of our speakers and mediums. From our platform and from other places I have heard that mediums could not be blamed for adding fraud to their mediumship, as so much was required of them.

I wonder if those who make such strong remarks have any idea what encouragement they are giving to those who are standing in the balance of right and wrong. Surely if they would stop to consider what power their words would have, they would not give out charity to anything so cruel as defrauding innocent and ignorant people. I know the world asks much of mediums—more than they are able to give, should instruments whom the angels have chosen blacken their mediumship with a lie to tickle the ears of those who come to them for light, curiosity, or whatever it may be? That should make no difference to the medium, for his or her duty is to live a true, honest life. They should not do wrong even though the world in its ignorance tempts them to do so.

If mediums have not backbone enough to be self-poised, we don't want them in our ranks; that is the kind of charity I send out to fraudulent mediums. I give no encouragement for their wrong-doing, for by doing this it only helps them to darken our grand philosophy. Not only have speakers and mediums given encouragement to this practice, but societies as well, for it has been said, "We must have sensational mediums even though they are dishonest, for they draw the crowd and bring the money."

Now, if Spiritualism is propped up with this kind of material, no wonder it totters, and much is being said in trying to rebuild it with more solid timber. No one claims that all sensational mediums are untrue, for it is well understood that many of them are bright, shining lights, but when it is said: "We can not help it if our workers are dishonest," this is the part that brings discouragement to all honest Spiritualists.

I greatly rejoice that Spiritualism at large has begun its work in rooting out the obnoxious weed that has so profusely grown within its ranks. We all know that flowers cannot thrive when smothered with weeds; so it is with Spiritual mediums when crushed by impostors.

When referring to speakers, mediums and societies; I do not infer that such encouragement to fraudulent mediums is given by the majority, but those who have thoughtlessly encouraged it, surely have caused an effect. Those who are practicing fraud will cling to such encouragement as a drowning man to a straw, especially when it is given by prominent people. Therefore be careful in giving encouragement with poorly chosen charity.

I, as a medium, have been advised to defraud my audience. My answer was: "If my mediumship does not give satisfaction, I will take up another occupation." After each refusal my test work was unusually good, therefore it pays to be firm and honest.

Brother and sister mediums; let us all be strong enough to say no, when the temptation comes. Positiveness in the right does not injure our receptivity. If mediumship takes from us our individuality, I have no use for it. Without individuality we are not fit subjects to practice our spiritual gifts for the good of humanity. We must not consider ourselves only as instruments, for we are placed here to unfold into higher attainments. Nature requires of us the same soul culture as it does of those who are not acted upon by spirit control. We must not look to our guides as saviors, but work out our own salvation.

MRS. JENNIE MARTIN.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

SPIRITUALISM.

The Light Which Shines From the Inner Soul-Life.

Spiritualism is the light which shines from the inner soul-life from far and near, into the darkened recesses of mortal mentality.

Those who, by mental unfoldment and vibratory relations, are enabled to behold the heavenly light and in it behold the divine workings for material effects, are also the chosen workers with the immortals and become the light-bearers to masses of people who do not as yet, behold these grand and natural facts for themselves.

How grand it is that by these means the travelers from Earth planes heavenward can learn the truth of those worlds, their naturalness, their laws, habits of life, learning and enjoyments and that most truly real, personal immortality endures forever. How eager mortals should be to learn these lessons of endless life. How greatly should be prized the truth that death of the mortal means the release of the immortal entity to enter upon life's higher duties on planes of expression which are in harmony with the soul's unfoldment and which provide the necessary experiences for greater unfoldments and services.

However slow this may be in finding its way into the consciousness of the greater part of humanity, it is certain that it will permeate all in time. Yes; time is the greater revealer of all relative truths which in their true parts form the units of all great truths and principles in which all humanity is included as parts and as factors of all that is and ever will be realized by the separate individuals as well as by the entire human and angelic family.

One of the primary truths concerning the immortal soul's descent into the material form for the purpose of becoming a complete individual by conforming to the laws of nature in all her evolutionary processes of changes and refinement of necessary substance for a tangible, personal existence on all planes, is, that on Earth alone the outer form of man, woman and child, as beheld by mortals, must die so to say, and be buried. This, because the outer form is an almost entire loan from Mother Earth. She claims back in substance that which she furnishes, this to maintain her balance in the associated system of worlds as per plan it is purposed and per evolutionary processes worked out.

However, all that has been indrawn and exchanged as intelligence, and what substance has been refined through the mortal mechanism for use forever the individual's own, to which is added wisdom and force on all succeeding planes, until this soul form is completely rounded and angelhood, immortal, tangible and eternal is attained.

On all planes above Earth, substance is interchangeable, so when souls have their promotions no death is experienced. The refining processes of the mechanism are so gradually and continuously taking place, in order to keep pace with the soul's unfoldment and spirit's promptings, that it is like going from one place to another without realizing other than the pleasantest sensations of anticipation and fulfillment.

It is stated by all of the higher immortal teachers, that soul is form in seed or essence and is builder of the outer form after its own pattern, so that the inner and outer mechanism unfold together and the earthly one serves as a true likeness of the heavenly one. Spirit works through the soul as life and intelligence of which much could be said here, but it is deferred until another time.

Whenever our scientific electricians can build a dynamo in imitation of the human form as it is now known to be, they can then attach their system to nature's fibre or nerve system and do wonderful things in the realms of mind and matter.

MRS. M. KLEIN.

Van Wert, Ohio.

BROTHERHOOD.

The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood;
For it will bring again to Earth
Her long-lost Poesy and Mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race.
And till it come, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.

Come, clear the way, then, clear the way:
Blind creeds and kings have had their day.
Break the dead branches from the path;
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran;
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for Man.

—Edwin Markham.

I belong to the great church that holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.—Ingersoll.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

More Notes of a Lady's Experience.

I have received scores of letters from hungry souls, pleading for a message from their loved ones who have passed the pearly gates. My heart aches when I have to tell them that our powers do not lie in that direction. We are not mediumistic in any sense of the word. One member of our family possesses strong electric force; while I have the power of concentrating my thoughts upon a given person. But I must have known the person in order to think of them as they are, and in order to put sufficient force into my thoughts that will enable them to be carried on the vibrations of the air until the spirit is reached. They respond immediately. Doubtless there are many families in our land which possess the same qualities that have been given us. Judging from my own observation, the laws governing Spirit Return are very simple, and are founded upon the principles of telepathy. We must send our thoughts to the one desired, then furnish a medium of electricity through which they make their presence known; and expect nothing miraculous, for the laws governing the spirit world are as rigid as our own, and the spirits have their limitations, and cannot do the impossible. But they have proven to us beyond all question they can and do return, and by that token all may know that life is immortal and that each and every home is visited by the loved and absent, who would gladly make their presence known if the proper medium or instrument was provided.

Last evening I sat by the stand and my spirit boy came for a visit. I said, "Harry, where have you spent the day?" He wrote: "We went to the group of islands called Bareum. They are resting in a vast ocean resembling broken rainbows. I see tall, stately ships with sails of silver gossamer, that glinted and gleamed like star rays on a lover's night in June. The islands are dreams of magical beauty. Tall trees colored with all the tints you could imagine, silvery green, pale orange, and long festoons of brilliants gleaming like strands of diamonds, swayed in a breeze so soft, so full of the odors of the varied and wonderful flowers that encrusted the ground. The water was covered with the spirits of swans and other water birds. I don't know why the colors are so beautiful. Some swans were the palest rose, some the daintiest purple, with big gold top-knots on their heads. Great butterflies a yard across flew all about. Their wings were so dazzlingly beautiful I cannot tell about it—gold and velvet, cream and silver, but why do I try to tell. When you come you will see it all. I saw leaves in the water ten yards long, and such green and crimson and gold. And the song birds. Oh, their voices were so mellow, so plaintive, as softly beautiful as the breath of angels blowing on the heartstrings of a sleeping child. And the grand men and lovely women. Oh! so beautiful—gods and goddesses in the pure state of natural innocence. All were supremely happy. The very air danced with the glory of Light."

I asked, "How far did you come?"

He wrote, "More millions of miles than you have sands on the shore."

"How long did it take?"

"I came instantly with the rapidity of thought."

Oh, I should love to tell the readers of your valuable paper all the wonderful things the spirits have written about, and show them all the wonderful musical instruments they have drawn, totally unlike anything ever conceived of on earth. But I am intruding too much upon your space already, so will close with the kindest wishes for your continued success.

MRS. ALICE D. GREEN.

Hamilton, Ill.

PRESIDENT H. D. BARRETT.

He Replies to R. F. Little of Seattle, Washington.

A most excellent article recently appeared in the columns of The Progressive Thinker over the signature of R. F. Little of Seattle, Wash. Bro. Little always writes interestingly and instructively, but in this instance he has placed so many important facts before the Spiritualists of America as to sweep far beyond any point to which he has hitherto attained, and laid his every reader under special obligations for the enlightenment he has given. The article should be studied in detail by every Spiritualist in the land, whose purpose it should be to receive the instruction given in such a kindly spirit as to make it a prompter to immediate action. If the great army of intelligent men and women who read The Progressive Thinker every week will but allow themselves to be touched by the spirit invoked by Bro. Little in both heart and soul, the future of Spiritualism on this planet is assured.

I shall not take up Brother Little's thought in its entirety, for it would make my article too long. I want to consider his references to the N. S. A., and some phases of its work, as they are, to my mind, the strongest features in his essay, besides they involve me personally to no small degree. He makes the point that the president of the N. S. A. should be located in Washington, D. C., or in some central city where he would be easy of access to people from all quarters of America. This point is well taken. The president should be within reach of the Spiritualists of the country, hence should either be at headquarters, or, as he says, in some city centrally located. There is work enough for both the president and secretary at headquarters, provided the several positions now united in the president remain as they are. The president is expected to do the work of Historian, Editor-at-Large, Missionary-at-Large, besides attending to the special duties of his own office.

To have this work done, and done as it should be done, the Spiritualists of the nation must do one of the two things—either elect a president who can afford to serve them without salary, and do all of this work gratis, out of his deep love for the cause, or else they must endow their National Association so that a living salary can be paid the one whom they appoint to these important posts. At present, the treasury of the N. S. A. will not stand heavy monthly drafts upon it to pay large salaries, plus the necessary expenses incident upon the collection of historical data, or that of attending to the work of the Editor-at-Large. The trustees are as generous as the funds of the National Society warrant them in being, but it is their duty to prevent the depletion of the treasury to even the slightest degree. In other words, they are in honor bound to keep the expenditures within the receipts, and if they do not do so, the people will ask why, most emphatically, just as they did last year when it was found that the N. S. A. had spent $4,400 more than it had taken in. Upon examination of the books, it was found that every dollar had been used for a good purpose, yet on the surface, it appeared to be a large deficit, and the natural query was—why?

Some national religious bodies do elect men of wealth to serve as their official heads, who donate their labor out of their love for their religion. One of the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the late Mr. Justice Miller of Iowa, was president of the American Unitarian Association several years, serving without pay. This is also true of the late Hon. George F. Hoar, the distinguished senator from Massachusetts for more than a quarter of a century. I am told that our millionaire Vice-president Fairbanks holds some official position in the national organization of the Methodist church, serving without pay. No doubt there are wealthy laymen in all other bodies who are doing the same thing. There are Spiritualists of large means who would grace the high office of president of the N. S. A. and bring to it a dignity socially it does not now possess. No doubt some of them would serve us, if they were invited to do so. Bring forward the man who will do all of the needed work gratuitously, out of his devotion to Spiritualism, and I will resign the high office of President by next mail. The welfare of Spiritualism comes first with me—personal considerations afterward. I want the N. S. A. to become the working force in American life that A. U. A., the Universalist General Convention, the M. E. National Conference and all similar bodies now are. If my retirement from office, in favor of a man of wealth, will bring about this result, I will cheerfully stand aside. Let me say here that the American Unitarian Association now pays its president a salary of $3,600 per year, while the secretary of the same body is paid $5,000.

Brother Little's next point as to the location of the present president is open to argument. The present president was offered a salary of $150 per month to take up the work of the four positions united at our last convention, and placed in his hands. This was all the N. S. A. could afford to give and more than it could afford from the fact that very little money is now flowing into the treasury. Had there been an endowment of $100,000 whose income could be used for the purposes named, all would have been well. I did not want to stand in the position of being a receiver of one hundred and fifty dollars per month from the N. S. A. with no chance to put some money back. I concluded that I could do much more for the N. S. A. if I were to go where I could be paid a salary for my Sunday lectures, and be permitted to do N. S. A. work on week days. Seattle kindly offered me just such a chance. The society here pays me for my work. Whenever I do a day's work for the N. S. A. I am paid for it, as soon as I render a bill, but I am not receiving one hundred and fifty dollars per month from the N. S. A., besides my salary from the society in Seattle! Any statement to the contrary is wickedly and maliciously false. The N. S. A. has kept its every promise to me, and all of its officers have been most kind. Did they have a proper endowment fund, all of the reforms named by Brother Little could and would be speedily brought about. Spiritualists, endow the N. S. A., and give it a chance to do its work.

H. D. BARRETT.

PRESENT CONDITIONS A HERITAGE.

Man's Thought and Action the Source of Improvement.

As the present new year is opening her eyes to the conditions and realities of life which the old year has left for her to place upon her young shoulders and carry down the journey of time for the next twelve months, one can scarcely resist in thought what a wonderful amount of joy, pleasure and happiness, and what an amount of sorrow, pain and burden the new year has had thrown upon her. What will come of it? How will she handle it? That is the question. She must do with it according to the means she has to do with. The things that the new year has had thrust upon her, are the results or effects of the previous year.

Now let us look the matter over thoroughly and find if we can, what and who are at fault, and are we in any way responsible for its existence.

The only reasonable answer to the question is, that man alone is responsible. Faults if any exist, came through man's thought and action.

If present conditions are to be made better, man's thought and action is the only power or source to draw from to make a coming year better than the one just past. If this be true, it makes the duty of man plain. It is the possibility and the duty of all mankind to improve upon what their parents have done. We would not belittle nor cast reflections upon the work of our parents, but the natural trend of progress demands and compels us to improve in some degree upon our parentage.

There is improvement. Good has been accomplished, yet there is much to be done. The greatest stumbling blocks in the way of the steady march of progress are false teaching, and false education, and the teaching of reward and punishment for good and evil, we have had for many centuries. We have heard it preached from the pulpit many times that good morals are not essential to salvation. What are the conditions to-day? Do we know positively there are any less wrongs in existence than there were centuries ago? There are wrongs to-day that in the minds of the people once were right. There are rights to-day that once were wrong. These conditions exist now and probably always will to some extent, for when it does not exist man's object and motive in life will have been annihilated.

This endless change of ideas regarding the laws of life is nature's evolution, as boundless and steadfast as the universe.

The fact is man has risen from a lower plane of life to a higher one. He is rising step by step, whether he recognizes the cause or not. Reason says that if man was intended for a higher plane of life or better conditions, the power for him to become so he must possess.

Listen to the small, true unerring voice which dwells within the breast of every child of nature. The same voice spoke through the organism of Wm. Lloyd Garrison, who faced the mob at Boston. He stood with folded arms and said that the slave had a right to freedom. The voice came not from his lips, nor from the power of the deadly cannon, nor from the guns of the army, nor from the power of the church of faith and worship; it came from an intelligence within him which burned and blazoned itself into the minds and souls of humanity, and physical slavery was crushed. What this subtle power did for the wrongs of long ago, it is doing and will do for the wrongs of to-day.

Let us begin at once to bring forth and develop this power to greater activity. The idea is the foundation of building character, the important subject of education.

Begin in the home.

F. G. WHITE.

Oregon, Wis.

TO BE PURE IN MIND

Is the Secret of True Mediumship.

Does anybody suppose that the spirits are not cognizant of the material at their disposal for work here on earth? Do we think ourselves fit subjects to represent the highest thoughts of the angels? Are we pure in mind and body? Is our object in seeking mediumship solely for the good we can do others, or do we see something in it we can turn to pecuniary account?

These are a few of the questions we ought to ask ourselves before deciding why we should be called for the sacred duty of mediumship.

If we understand some musical instrument, let us try to render a soul-stirring piece upon a bad instrument and we will see why it should be exceedingly difficult for the spirits to give expression to their higher thoughts through defective instruments.

The spirit of love can never find expression through the organism of hatred; self-sacrificing devotion through selfishness; enlightenment through ignorance and so on.

We may be very magnetic, and this accounts for much in certain phenomena, but who imagines they can command the co-operation of good spirits when their own motives are of a selfish, money-grasping character?

Let us try to be pure in mind and then these spiritual gifts shall be added to us.

"The pure in heart shall see God." How can any man or woman see God in anything through eyes filled with impurities?

As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

It is the thoughts and motives which open up hell or heaven to our gaze, and no two men can view the same thing alike, because their thoughts are not alike.

Let us ponder over these facts and ask God to help us to see him in all our everyday walks through life. And then we cannot fail to reflect the impression of his holy angels.

FRED DUGGAN.

New York.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would desire to be

TOLERANCE OF BELIEF.

As Opposed to All Dogmatism and Bigotry.

There seems to be an epidemic of "Articles of Belief." Some of the victims have the malady in an acute form. Let us hope that the infection will not prove contagious.

Doubtless Spiritualism stands in need of some general fundamentals as a working basis. But, as an "article of belief" all that is necessary to me is, to grant the same freedom, and tolerance of belief to others as I want myself.

I am a Theosophist, yet a Spiritualist. I identify myself as a Spiritualist by a membership in the Clinton local society. I have publicly advocated Spiritualism here in the face of a numerous and very conservative church element, and at the expense of my business prospects.

If that is not a test of sincerity, what is? I plead for liberalism and tolerance of belief! I stand as a Spiritualist, squarely opposed to all dogmatism and bigotry.

A very prominent worker told me that there was more bigotry among Spiritualists than in any other church sect; and that worker is one of the most esteemed by every Spiritualist to-day, and is not identified with the Theosophical society; yet I regard this movement, noble enough, fundamentally, as a liberalizing factor in the religious and scientific world, to take a hand and advocate its principles as to Brotherhood, the continuity of life, and the immutability of Nature's laws, as applied to evolution and the conduct of men, one to another. There seems to be, and is, a want of tolerance for those of us who believe in reincarnation as a method of evolution.

I say that if only one member believes in reincarnation, he or she has a sacred right to that belief, and that it ill becomes anyone to ridicule or object.

Individually, because of indisputable psychic or spiritual evidence, I am a firm believer in reincarnation. The evidence brought forward in this forum against it is, for the most part (with due respect to the critics) illogical and absurd. I will take the article of "Rayah" as an instance, and point you to the heading, in big type, of his essay.

As a general contradiction to his premise, let me say that Ella Wheeler Wilcox stated in the Chicago American that she knew that reincarnation was a law applied to human beings, yet that lady, who stands in such a prominent manner before the public, makes no claim, that I have seen, as to being royal, or tied to a crown in a previous birth. Nor have I heard Annie Besent, nor Col. Olcott, nor Leadbeater, nor Mr. Mead, nor Dr. Buck, nor the Countess Wachtmeister make any such claim.

All of those people are very prominent Theosophists.

So much for the mere premise; but even the logic drawn from the premise, even though it be true, falls to the ground at a mere touch.

Rather than the ego "retrograding," by stepping from royalty to the mechanic; the exact reverse is true in every instance. It is progression!

Would "Rayah" think it progressive if he had to take the place of a Leopold of Belgium, or the Sultan of Turkey, or any of the tainted European Royalty?

I, for my part, would shudder at the prospects. Such egoes, inhabiting the bodies of such people, have to progress by learning the noble lessons; gaining the humanitarianism that poverty will surely teach in the more humble sphere of the mechanic. Where is the "retrogression?"

Again, "Rayah" says: "To teach the theory of reincarnation is to hold the mind solely to the earth plane, and the mind cannot rise to the spiritual realms."

Listen to him! Such logic is enough to make Socrates turn in his grave! I want to say to "Rayah" that, holding the belief of reincarnation, I have twice in my life, been united to my Diviner Self, and I will leave those spiritual experiences on record in these pages at a future time.

And such is the tenure of most all the objections against that theory. As to what the spirits say, they contradict each other! Do you suppose that they know the enigmas of existence? They are as we are in our world, thus: The persons who can give us the last word on the riddles of life, are not to be found!

I am not advocating the theory of reincarnation. I never did. It is a matter of supreme indifference to me whether my bosom friend believes in it or not. But I do advocate, plead, and fight for tolerance and liberalism, as against the fanaticism of intolerance and bigotry which is but the offspring of the spirit of the Dark and Middle Ages!

WM. JOHN WARD.

Clinton, Iowa.

HAVE SCIENTISTS FOUND GOD?

Interesting and Suggestive Statements for Philosophers to Consider.

To the Editor:—Von Hartman in Philosophy of the Unconscious likens God to the universal atmosphere which surrounds the globe—just as much of his Divine Presence in any given square or portion of the universe as in any other square or portion thereof. He further characterizes God as a being who sees all things, hears all things, knows all things and does all things, in His own way and time, but beyond this he does not attempt to particularize. Whether God is what we call substance or what we understand as spirit, we are therefore left to conjecture.

The Mystic Maitland in the work called the Perfect Way defines God as a Divine Substance, infinite in quantity, filling all space, perfect in quality, eternal in duration, and from which all things proceed.

Davis in his Divine Revelation declares that all forms are brought forth by virtue of an eternal and self-executing principle.

Herbert Spencer declares that all we know and all we can know about God is that we are at all times and everywhere in the immediate presence of an eternal, omnipotent and everlasting energy.

And now comes Professor Larkin of California in a series of articles in The Progressive Thinker, in which he brings forward a most amazing array of facts and suggestions calculated to show that there is no thing or entity in all God's broad universe but corpuscles [illegible] are corpuscles [illegible] absolutely astounding. The corpuscle the Professor declares to be only one seven-hundredth part in dimension of an atom of hydrogen, while the atom of hydrogen is so minute that the human mind cannot conceive of its dimensions. The corpuscle is further described by the Professor as possessing what he calls directivity; that is, it is imbued with the inherent knowledge of what to do and where to go, and with the power to do it. The Professor further declares that the corpuscle is either electricity or the carrier thereof; that it is eternal; that it always has existed and always will.

It is impossible to study the matter of the several essays of Professor Larkin on this subject without asking one's self, without irreverence I hope, have the scientists at last found God? Have they at last found the God immanent in nature of the Greek philosophy, the God of Jesus and of Paul, not the anthropomorphic God of St. Augustine?

Have they at last found the God of Von Hartman; of the Mystic Maitland?

Have they at last found the eternal and self-executing principle of Davis?

Have they at last found the eternal, omnipotent and everlasting energy of Spencer?

Have they indeed found the Immortal Mind of Christian Science, and the Infinite Intelligence of the National Spiritualists' Association?

Has Prince Haeckel's Riddle of the Universe been solved? H. B.

Reason must be our last guide and judge in everything.—John Locke.

IS THIS A FREE COUNTRY?

Medical Legislation in the State of Washington.

One is often induced to ask, "Is this a free country?" We call it such, and the governing class in Russia think the same of that country. The doctors here are rampant, and if they carry their point, I and some others will have to leave this "land of the free and home of the brave," for the British monarchy, hard by us, to have the privilege of the enjoyment of that liberty which is denied us in this boasted land of freedom.

I am here for the purpose of healing the sick. I am not interfering with the practice of the regulars in any way. My patients are those that neither they nor patent medicines will cure. One of my first patients had been living on milk fourteen days, under the direction of the doctors, and every one thought he would be in the land of souls within three weeks. In 18 treatments I had him well and sound (now the healthiest man in this city). Another came to me after paying out thousands of dollars, and was soundly cured within one week. Another party came to me after traveling all over Europe and America, exhausting the skill of the best physicians of two continents, paying out several thousand dollars, and was cured within two weeks by me for $10. Others had taxed their skill without any benefit, and were invariably healed. Something must be done, so a law was framed and sneaked through the Senate Committee on Medicine and Surgery, lest some one should find it out, and is now waiting the senate's action. If it passes, I shall have to move to Victoria, B. C., as I have no means to fight the bill in the courts.

The bill is most sweeping in its restrictions, and will not permit even the poulticing of an old sore except under the supervision of some M. D., under a penalty of $50 fine or six months in jail, or both, for each day of practice. I give below the restrictions:

While the bill is to license osteopaths, it contains an amendment to the existing law intended to shut out persons not authorized by the state board of medical examiners to practice medicine. The amendment defines the "practice of medicine" as follows:

"Any person shall be regarded as practicing medicine within the meaning of this act who shall within this state, (a) by advertisement, or by any notice, sign or other indication, or by any statement, printed, written or oral, in public or in private, made, done or procured by himself or herself, or any other, at his or her request for him or her, claim, announce, make known or pretend his or her ability and willingness to diagnosticate or prognosticate any human disease, ills, deformities, defects, wounds or injuries; (b) or who shall so advertise or make known or claim his or her ability and willingness to prescribe or administer any drug, medicine, treatment, method or practice, or to perform any operation or manipulation or apply any apparatus or appliance for cure, amelioration, correction, reduction or modification of any human disease, ill, deformity, defect, wound or injury, for hire, fee, compensation or reward, promised, offered, expected, received or accepted, directly or indirectly; (c) or who shall within this state diagnosticate or prognosticate any human diseases, ills, deformities, defects, wounds or injuries, for hire, fee, reward or compensation, promised, offered, expected, received or accepted, directly or indirectly; (d) or who shall within this state prescribe or administer any drug, medicine, treatment, method or practice, or perform any operation or manipulation or apply any apparatus or appliance for the cure, alleviation, amelioration, correction or modification of any human disease, ill, deformity, defect, wound or injury, for hire, fee, compensation or reward, promised, offered, expected, received or accepted, directly or indirectly; (e) or who shall act as the agent of any person, firm or corporation, in the practice of medicine as hereinbefore set forth; (f) except it be in the advertisement or practice of pharmacy, or in the usual business of opticians, or of venders of dental or surgical instruments, apparatus or appliances."

I shall try to meet it in the committee when it comes before the House. As there are only three weeks more of this legislature, there is a bare possibility that it may not be reached in the House calendar. But the M. Ds here are watchful, and will do all in their power to advance it on the calendar. I have appeared with several M. Ds. at the same time on difficult cases, and though they have been forced to consult me, I have been time and again informed that they are determined to get me out of the state.

D. W. HULL, M. H.

Olympia, Wash.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

Festivities Reign in Washington, D. C. —A Tribute to a Popular Medium at the Capital City.

Monday, March 4th was the anniversary of the birth of Mrs. M. J. Stephens, one of the most prominent mediums of Washington, and as she is leader and instructor of the Children's Lyceum, as well as a prominent officer in the First Association of Spiritualists, and its Ladies' Auxiliary, a number of her friends in these societies matured a plan for the surprise of Mrs. Stephens that must have been highly gratifying for all concerned.

On the morning of the 4th, Miss Florence Ahl, a highly artistic and skillful decorator, took possession of the dining-room of Mrs. Stephens' home, and when her work was done the apartment presented a scene of beauty that resembled the pictured realms of fairyland, rather than the prosaic eating-room of a mortal habitation; the color-scene of pink was carried out with beautifying effect, and no pen description can give an idea of the result.

In the afternoon, the lyceum children came with greetings of love to their conductor, and presented her with a magnificent array of beautiful flowers, in which roses and azaleas predominated. A few hours of music, song and sport, with a bountiful collation for the young people served as a prelude to the exercises of the evening when the elders arrived in large numbers to pay their tributes of affection and respect to their beloved co-worker in the cause of Spiritualism. A mammoth box of expuisite roses, lilies of the valley and golden daffodils from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinberg arrived to add to the floral adornments of the scene. Music, song, dancing, speeches and the reading of original poems comprised the intellectual portion of the entertainment.

The exercises were opened by the president of the First Association of Spiritualists, Mr. Frank A. Wood, who was master of ceremonies and whose fitting words well expressed the sentiments of all; he presented Mary T. Longley, who, as president of the Ladies Auxiliary, gave welcome to all present, spirits and mortals; she spoke feelingly of the great work of Mrs. Stephens for humanity, prefacing her tender remarks with the reading of a poetical greeting to the honored guest of the evening, and concluding with the presentation to Mrs. Stephens of a massive and beautiful bracelet of gold set with gleaming amethysts, as a token of love from the assembled friends.

Rev. Oscar A. Edgerly made remarks of a similar character to the preceding ones, and Mrs. M. L. Willis read a poem written for the occasion. After more music, Miss Susie C. Clark, of Boston, the well-known author, recited a poetical effusion of wit and eloquence which she composed for the occasion, in which she referred feelingly to the life work of the medium, and at the conclusion of which she presented, also in the name of the assembled friends, a beautifully wrought chain of gold, set with many a topaz; designed as a fan attachment. The surprise of the recipient of these tokens of love was unmistakable as she endeavored to express her gratitude and appreciation for the gifts and the love that had inspired gratitude and appreciation for the gifts of love that had inspired them; but all felt that her words were eloquent with feeling and choice enough to be preserved in the annals of memory for all time to come.

No mere description can do justice to the scene and the event, but this brief synopsis is penned in faithful and loving thought to a dear and loyal worker for humanity who enjoys her labors for mankind.

The bountiful and dainty collation that awaited the company below stairs was enriched by the extensive culinary preparation and skill displayed by Mrs. Thomas, as a labor of love only, the center piece of which was a mammoth cake so closely resembling a watermelon as to elicit exclamations of surprise and pleasure from each beholder, and which proved to be a delicious compound, and the hundred persons who partook of this repast showed their appreciation of the good things with no uncertain sign. Mr. Joseph Stephens, the good and helpful husband of the medium, who has been very ill for a long time, was enabled to attend the exercises of the evening and to enjoy some part of the pleasures of the repast, a fact for congratulation to himself and his good wife and for the pleasure of his friends. COR.

Note From G. H. Brooks.

I am very glad to state I am on the gain, am able to be up and around, and get up town. I hope to be able to resume my labors after a short time. I desire to thank the many friends for their kind expression of sympathy, it was indeed most helpful. Owing to my sickness I have been unable to report the memorial exercises held in Whitewater, at the Morris Pratt Institute, in honor of the arisen president of the school, and the friend of humanity, Moses Hull. As soon as I am able and can get to it, I will send in a brief report, not only of those services, but of our mass meeting held in Milwaukee, which was not only a success, but a great uplift. I desire to remind the friends everywhere, especially of Wisconsin, of our coming convention to be held in Milwaukee, in Ethical Hall, 558 Jefferson street, on April 16, 17 and 18. It is desirous there be as large an attendance as possible from all over the state, and from that gathering go out a spirit of enthusiasm and upliftment that shall extend all over the state, and a great work be done this coming year. I regret much that sickness has prevented my doing a certain work I had laid out for the state, but it could not be done. G. H. BROOKS.

President Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association, 114 President street, Wheaton, Ill.

COMPARE THEM.

Catholic and Protestant Nations—The Protestants Far Ahead in Some Respects.

Compare the product! Look at the Roman Catholic nations of the world, where the priests and nuns control education. Compare these with the Protestant nations! Compare Scandinavia with Spain and Portugal! Compare Germany with Austria. Compare Great Britain with Italy! Compare Protestant Ireland with Romanist Ireland! Compare the Province of Quebec with the Province of Ontario! Compare North America with South America!—Citizen.

In Re Spiritualism

President Barrett Replies to Aspersions and False Charges Uttered by a Methodist Minister.

Editor Los Angeles Times:—My attention has been called to an excerpt from a sermon on "Spiritism," recently delivered in Los Angeles by Rev. Robert S. Fisher of the M. E. Church. In behalf of the Spiritualists of America, some two millions in number, I respectfully request a portion of your valuable space in which to reply to the reverend gentleman's animadversions. There are at least five thousand of the most intelligent and progressive citizens of Los Angeles who are either avowed Spiritualists or are interested in its sunny philosophy.

To deny them a hearing would be an act of injustice of which a great paper like the Times would never be guilty. Outside of Los Angeles, our people everywhere are interested in common with their brethren in that great city, in having the truth, the whole truth, given to the world. They feel, as a body, that they are entitled to a hearing in common with all other religious organizations in America.

It is not necessary to argue the question of the possibility of spirit communion, nor that of the verity of psychic phenomena. Prof. Thomson J. Hudson, in his excellent work, "The Law of Psychic Phenomena," declares, "He who denies psychic phenomena is not entitled to be called a skeptic; he is simply ignorant." Other scientists of equal and superior rank, notably Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge, Prof. Camille Flammarion, Prof. James H. Hyslop, Prof. Caesare Lombroso, and their compeers, take the same high ground, and pronounce emphatically in favor of the Spiritualistic hypothesis as to the origin of these phenomena. In fact, the consensus of opinion on the part of all well-informed men and women is to the effect that excarnate intelligences can and do interfere in the affairs of this lower world and give reliable messages as to the state in which they now live. Life beyond the tomb is as clearly proven as any proposition in chemistry, or any problem in mathematics.

With Mr. Fisher's statements regarding the subjective and objective mind, it is not necessary to deal. Prof. T. J. Hudson has said all that can be said on this subject, and has admitted so much with regard to mental phenomena as to sustain the claims of the Spiritualists, rather than overthrow them. He went so far that he proved too much, hence the weight of his deductions must also be thrown into the balance on the Spiritualistic side. Mr. Fisher's assumption that the so-called "spirit information" is limited to the bounds of the mentality of the medium and sitter is wholly gratuitous. He has not read the works of Rev. Stainton Moses, of Judge John W. Edmonds, of Maria M. King, and of Andrew Jackson Davis. In the experiences of these gifted teachers, what they received from the spirit side of life not only contravened all of their previous opinions, but also transcended anything and everything they had read or heard. Rev. Fisher is simply not informed upon a subject concerning which he presumes to speak. "No man can teach that which he does not know." Better inform yourself, Mr. Fisher; you will be a better man, a safer teacher when you do. The teachings of true Spiritualism rest upon higher than mortal authority. The book of revelation is not yet closed.

Mr. Fisher admits telepathy. If an intelligent force dominating a mortal form can commune with a mind yet in the body in vibratory sympathy with it, by what law is the sympathetic relation broken, and the communion interrupted when one of the two intelligences has gone out of the body? Telepathy is the gateway to spirit communion. I am glad Brother Fisher admits that psychic phenomena really exist. He could not be a true Methodist if he denied them. The psychic experiences of the Wesleys, the founders of Methodism, would have to be rejected by him did he do otherwise. Let him now be consistent yet further and admit that many of them are produced by excarnate intelligences, and he will be still more in harmony with the Wesleys, who openly avowed their knowledge of Angel communion. Read up, Brother Fisher, read up! Swedenborg, Wesley, Owen, Peebles, Davis, Hull and other illumined minds will do you good.

In common with all intelligent Spiritualists, I freely admit that many of the phenomena of Spiritualism have been shamelessly counterfeited by unscrupulous persons for the sake of pecuniary gain. Every counterfeit coin is amply proof that there is something genuine of which it is a duplicate. All intelligent Spiritualists greatly deplore the evil practices of the counterfeiters, and are trying with might and main to rid our ranks of all such impostors. They have also raised the bar sinister against all tricksters, voodooism, charm selling, and the various expressions of legerdemain. They want only the truth, knowing that truth alone can make men free. Bible phenomena and the phenomena of the present age are found to be one and the same order. The law by which they were produced in the days of the prophets, of Jesus and the apostles has never been abrogated.

Brother Fisher claims that Spiritualism has had a tendency to draw people away from accepted faiths, or to wreck faith altogether. I grant the first premise. Spiritualism does draw men out of the darkness of ignorance, away from the bondage of creeds, into the larger light of the clearer truth of Spiritual verities, where they may enjoy the religion of "On earth peace, good will to men." That Spiritualism does destroy true faith is another gratuitous assumption on the part of this self-elected judge of his fellow-men. It obeys the command of all of the great teachers of the world, and adds to faith, knowledge.

It gives its followers a more comprehensive view of life, and relates them consciously to the Infinite. Its very first declaration to the world is this: "We believe in Infinite Intelligence." Its second great principle is equally as direct: "We believe that the phenomena of Nature, physical and psychical, are expressions of Infinite Intelligence." Its third affirmation has no uncertain sound: "We affirm that a correct understanding of such phenomena and living in harmony therewith constitute the true religion." Fourth: "We affirm that the process of life is not interrupted by the change called death." Fifth: "We affirm that communion between the seen and the unseen worlds is a fact, scientifically proven by the phenomena of Spiritualism." Sixth: "We affirm that the highest morality is found in the Golden Rule, Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." Do you find any lack of faith, any indication of infidelity in those principles, Brother Fisher? As Spiritualists, we have come to know God, and to realize that we are indeed His children. We have demonstrated a living, loving, omniscient God, infinite in all things, as the Ruler of the Universe. Have you been able to do this, Brother Fisher?

Brother Fisher next refers to marriage and unblushingly declares that Spiritualism is its arch enemy. Reverend sir, bring forward your proofs! I note your statistics. Cite your authority for this assertion! Did you presume to deal only in glittering generalities or have you found evidence to warrant you in saying that divorce is more common among Spiritualists than other people? If it is, we want to know it. It seems to me that I have heard of the "Divorce Colony" in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. What per cent of the people who make up that band of divorcees are members of any organization of Spiritualists? Is there one, man or woman, who really believes in Spiritualism at all? Speak up, Brother Fisher; you have made the charge, now bring forward your proofs. Brother Fisher, I have not been able to find a Spiritualist in that entire colony. If you have inside information by reason of your intimate acquaintance with the people there, or with the officers of the law, be so kind as to give it to the public. As a Christian minister you owe it to your conscience, to the American people, to the Spiritualists in particular and to your God, to tell the truth respecting this question. Spiritualist clergymen want the facts, so that they may be able to find and apply a remedy for the conditions of which you speak.

I have visited every state and territory in the Union in my work as a minister of the religion of Spiritualism, and as president of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States and Canada, I have found some Spiritualists who are divorcees, and some who have established happy homes through re-marriage, thereby correcting the mistake made at the butset of their careers. But, Brother Fisher, I have also found many members of Christian churches who are divorcees, your own denomination furnishing its full quota. Can you blame Spiritualists for that which is done by the members of your own church? Be honest now, my brother; are there not some men and women in your denomination who ought never to have married, and, now being married, would be far more moral, far more useful in society if they were legally separated? You will say, "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." All true Spiritualists say Amen! to that declaration, but they add "What God hath put asunder, let not man presume to join together!". What is more in accord with the religion of Christ—your statement or my own? When God joins human souls together, divorces will be unknown, but so long as man assumes the prerogatives of God, divorces will be a necessity in civilization, and members of all religious denominations, as well as persons of no religious beliefs whatever, will resort to it as a remedy for their mistakes.

Brother Fisher, you say "Mentally it (Spiritualism) upsets common sense and often helps to people lunatic asylums with its victims." What proof have you to substantiate that assertion? Have you examined the records of the insane asylums of the land for the purpose of ascertaining the religious beliefs of the inmates? In this connection have you likewise gone to the prisons of the land to determine the church memberships of the unfortunates confined therein? Did you find evidence to warrant you in making the sweeping assertion quoted above? A few years ago I examined the statistics regarding the insane and criminal classes in twenty-seven states and I found out that Spiritualism notwithstanding the great number of its followers, furnished one-tenth of one per cent of the two sets of defectives named.

There are forty-nine states and territories in our Union. Pro rata it is safe to say that the other twenty-two states will not increase the per centage given. Even if they do, it will not make good Brother Fisher's charge, for the increase could not bring the average up to even one per cent of the total. I found out that the Catholics furnished the largest quota of both classes, with the Methodists a close second. This is not strange from the fact that both of these denominations have millions of followers. But there are one-fifth as many Spiritualists in the United States as there are Catholics, and one-third as many as there are Methodists. Should not the Spiritualists furnish one-fifth as many insane and criminals as the Catholics, and one-third as many as the Methodists? Brother Fisher, please explain the enormous falling off in favor of Spiritualism! Can you do it, sir?

The vast majority of the Catholics and the Methodists are good people, and no man has the right to cast any reflections upon them because of their religious beliefs. Many Catholic priests and Methodist ministers are my personal friends. I ask for none better. They do not cast aspersions upon my religion, neither do I upon theirs. Brother Fisher you overstepped the bounds of discretion in your zeal to serve your church. Methodism and Catholicism have both done a vast amount of good in the world. If a few of their followers have gone wrong, it is by no means sequential that all are wrong. The same statement will hold good with regard to Spiritualists. A few of them may be insane, a few may have gone wrong, but it does not follow that all Spiritualists are insane or criminally inclined in consequence of the acts of the few. They are diseased, mentally and physically, just as are the church members who fall into evil ways. A great teacher has said, "Except we have in us the sin, or the possibility of the sin, that we think we see in someone else, what that someone else may say or do will never affect us." Brother Fisher, please apply those words to yourself.

Brother Fisher refers to the penalties attached to the practice of mediumship in Bible times and by inference if not by open admission, seems to long for the re-enactment of those murderous decrees in our own day. The Bible says, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." All who possess psychic powers are deemed witches by those who oppose occult phenomena. Obeying this cruel command of a fiendish Jehovah, the Jews put the Lord Christ of Nazareth to death. The same decree cost the pure and gentle Maid of Orleans, Joan of Arc, her young life at the stake. John Calvin cruelly killed Michael Servetus in harmony with that command. In the reign of Charles the Fifth, one hundred thousand persons were put to death in Europe having been condemned as witches. The Bible edict is responsible for the unspeakable infamy of "Gallows Hill" in Old Salem, Mass. Would Brother Fisher re-engage in those horrible practices today? Surely he is too highly civilized to believe in murder, legal or illegal. I believe him to be a better man in thought, word and deed than his language would make him appear.

I write only in the interests of justice and fair play to all classes of people. The Spiritualists are entitled to considerate treatment and respect so long as their lives are such as to show the world moral characters of unblemished lustre. The same is true of Methodists and all other people. Abuse is not argument, and Rev. Fisher in maligning the Spiritualists of America as he did, descended to abuse the exploitation of which is not only illogical but absolutely unworthy of a true Christian minister. He owes it to the people whom he tried to insult, to his own conscience and to his God to retract his every falsehood, innuendo and misleading statement. Such men as he bring contumely upon the church of God, and make the Christian ministry an object of ridicule, and reproach on the part of those who believe in fair play, equal rights and straightforward truthfulness.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

REINCARNATION.

Why It Is so Objectionable to Many Persons.

Reincarnation seems to be objectionable, but let us see if we can find a cause for so much disappointment among our learned ones.

It is true, it does seem objectionable, if we take it in a material sense; but let us take it away from the material entirely, and then see what we can make out of it.

While we live in the material we have to call things by their material names, and in that sense it would be very hard to think our Mr. Brown would become Mr. Jones after he had worn out his material body. But, says some one, does not Mr. Brown remain Mr. Brown throughout eternity? Let us see about that. Mr. Brown is of a particular family, he is known as Mr. Brown as long as that family exists, but after that family of Browns is extinct, then does not some other family take their respective place in the material plane of life?

"Yes, but someone will say, "Do they not always exist?" In a material sense they do, but when it comes to living in the ethereal atmosphere of life then comes another problem to solve entirely.

We must remember that there are two separate and distinct conditions in life. One is the material and the other is the elemental, ethereal, and so long as they remain in either condition of life, then there is no such a thing as reincarnation. But when the soul has developed out of these conditions, let me ask you what becomes of the soul then? for we must all admit that the process of life is continual development, for life is never-ending, and when it has finished its mission in one sphere of life, then it must take up its mission in another sphere, or else we must throw away the oft-repeated words progression, development and evolution; neither one of them has any place in life if we throw away reincarnation. But for one who is so engrossed in the material it is a very hard matter for them to comprehend the difference between the material and the ethereal.

They are too apt to stop in the elemental ethereal and take it for the ethereal, while there is as much difference between the elemental and the ethereal as there is between the material and the elemental ethereal, and there is where most of our friends stop. They think when they have gotten into the elemental ethereal they have solved the problem of life, while in fact they have only gotten into the first rudiments of life, and taken the first degree, as it were. They are like a child that is just born. They are just trying to open their eyes and look about them in wonderment, expressing the idea where am I?

Now, just for a matter of illustration to bring out our thought of development, let us take our florist and go into the vegetable kingdom and there make a transmigration.

We will take a plant and propagate it until we have an entire new species of plant. We keep up in rotation until we find we have many different species. Some thoughtful person will say, what has become of our original plant? The answer will be, we kept it as long as we could, but we propagated from it and the family until at last the old ones died, but in the process of propagation we have developed an entire new species and it seems to please the eye much better than the old one. So you see that even in the vegetable kingdom, there has been an improvement made by the process of rotation.

Does not reincarnation mean that to reincarnate you must develope from a lower to a higher condition. Has it not been proven that to make an improvement we must continually reincarnate by propagating from the old to the new. Yes, but someone will say that sometimes the new ones do not seem to show as much vitality as the older ones do. That is possibly true, but let us see: Here we have a new-born babe, can we expect it to have the vitality that the sire had? Was not the sire a weakling when it was born, but by proper care and nourishment did it not become strong and healthy? But someone says that one was never strong. Oh, then, here is our proposition again; let us now go back and see from what family of plants it came, for we find there has been a reincarnation, and we find that family is not robust at all—but we find them a very weak family. What are we going to do? Are we going to let that plant or family become extinct, or are we going to transplant them to a more congenial clime, where they will thrive and prosper? These are thoughts worth considering, and when we have considered all there points then we may take in reincarnation with a grain of salt, and consider—as the Queen of Sheba did when she visited King Solomon, "That the half had never been told."

J. M. BARTSCHERER.

Pomeroy, Ohio.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine," contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 480 pages. Price $1.

"New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated. Drawings by Wm. Heston. With Critical and Humorous Comments upon the Texts." Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. Price, in boards $1.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

THE GREAT WORK.

The Discussion Has Brought Its Friends to the Front.

It is said that in our country of "most religions and the last religion," to prevent the birth or rebirth of an Ethical Idea would be dangerous. "The Great Work may be called an ethical idea. This grandly inspired book was conceived and matured for the enlightenment of souls, incarnate and discarnate, and sooner or later it had to be born, making Truth's wilderness like an Eden, and her Desert as the Garden of Allah."

In discussing a subject so vast, so vital, ninety-nine men out of a hundred would show less discriminating courage, less of simple grandeur, less fidelity to established fact, and less of loyalty to demonstrated Truth; but the author is the hundredth man, so he dares to hint among other wholesome truths that shadow-land, also, is preyed upon by many a spiritual "confidence man," making it wisdom on the part of the psychic student to "try the spirits," and judge them as we ourselves are judged—by the works performed.

Ages ago Solomon said: "Of the making of books there is no end"—the saying itself a part of the book he was then writing for all ages.

It is still true now, even more than in King Solomon's day—that "Of the making of books there is no end," and "So mote it be" throughout the ages of coming time, for souls, carnate and decarnate, are in all stages of development, from a Troglodyte to Thorwaldsen; from a Bushman to Beecher; from a Laplander to Lincoln; from a Patagonian to Thomas Paine; from an idiot to Ingersoll, or from a savage to a seer.

Therefore every message written, spoken or thought, must bear a wholesome lesson to the right receiver.

'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.'

Surely then, it is pertinent to enquire "What lesson does 'The Great Work' bring to the legions of pilgrim souls who, whether they be still plodding through the thorny marshes of doubting, investigation, or toiling up the rocky foothills of dawning hope, or triumphantly marching over the sunlit Highlands of Individual Demonstration, yet they, one and all, seek for "More Light" in the luminous columns of The Progressive Thinker.

Many will say, as Lincoln said after the Battle of Gettysburg: "This war is being fought over our heads.'

Others will agree with the Rabbi who found in the ethical philosophy of Jesus, common ground for belief with the Bishop, "God bless us; that which makes you a Christian makes me a Jew!"

But whether we be a voice in the forum, or a mere echo in the market place, to all of us the great author of "The Great Work" re-establishes the two fundamental propositions of Spiritualism—the two Pillars of Truth—"Boaz and Jachin," which stand for the entrance of the Temple:

I. The only "Death" on this plane is the "separation" of the soul still wearing its spiritual body, from its no longer useful physical body.

II. Life before and after such separation, is so much the same that each of us on the human side, may sooner or later independently learn to perceive and consciously commune with those who have passed beyond the veil, and in due time, if we prove worthy and earn the right, we, too, may have and enjoy all the power, potency, privilege and blessing vouchsafed to the highest of these "over there."

Theauthor shows the best two ways of proving the truth of these two glorious propositions:

I. By the testomony of those who have personally in this life demonstrated the exalted truth.

II. By the individual experience of each free, rational, intelligent soul, guided by instructors who in this life have thus successfully passed over the known way to each personal demonstration.

Thus our faith has a foundation of cold fact, and error's adversity becomes Truth's opportunity, while we need no longel grovel in the moral debeneracy of pessimism, but may join the Optimist Club, and realize that nothing is less needful, or more useless than the weakness of self-pity, since we may also realize the universal law of compensation which has always rich rewards for those who are loyally, patiently brave.

The higher science is a consistent body of internal relatives, (not of external facts), which we may safely accept on the testimony of others till we are ready to understand. But a principle is practically useless in our ethical development till accepted by our wakened consciousness and thus made an element in our personal responsibility. The author shows that with the extension of our WAKENING CONSCIOUSNESS, the fundamental attribute of every intelligent soul, acting out o free, voluntary, rational purpose, in harmony with its own nature, there will come a WIDE AND DEEP REALIZATION OF THUTH, by whichfaith will be changed to knowledge; hope to fruition, and prayer to praise, because the soul will have been freed from the tyranny of the "dead," as well as from the potent spell of tyrants that live, seen and unseen.

A book which so closely sets forth such grand possibilities is surely WORTH THE MOST CONSCIENTIOUS STUDY with the most intense concentration of mental powers, supplanted by all available psychic dynamics, thus more swiftly and surely to reach the flood tide of achievement; for, in the microcosm, as well as in the macrocosm, the Ptolemaic theory that the earth-body is the center of the system, has given way to the Copernican theory that the Soul-Sun is the center, and thereby is the front of the ethical universe changed. In the microcosm, also, are atmospheric, hydro spheric and lithospheric tides and tidal waves, all produced by the Sun of Truth and the Moon of Wisdom, and all subject to the law that the denser the vabrator the more rapid and the less discordant are the vibratory results.

We feel that THE GREAT WORK PULSATES WITH TRUTH in its simple grandeur—thuth that now appeals to Lincoln, to Beecher, Walt Whitman, Ingersoll and Thomas Paine, as well as to every other universal soul to whom Truth has been brought his own measure of freedom, making "religion" not a mere "belief," but a study, a realization, a harmonious methodical state or condition in which the Divine Will is being ever more perfectly and more cheerfully because more intellectually, obeyed.

Does not the convincing argument of this wonderful book, this MAGNUM OPUM, demonstrate in a lorge way the SOUL'S KINSHIP TO DEITY? To every waking consciousness Deity represents its own noblest conception of the true, the beautiful and the good in kinetic action, adopted and adapted to its own individual needs while striving to fulfill its own primary purpose; which persists far beyond the roll and din and rub-a-dub of reform presses and lectures on this mundane sphere during the soul's long delightful turning to NEWLY DISCOVERED LIGHT.

With a dearer experience we may know thatat noon as well as at sunlight our shadows may reach the stars, and that we may follow them when the hour has struck. With that heartfelt gratitude, which is not only full recognition of good received, but also a lively sense of favors yet to come, may we not say to that great unknown author, "GOD SPEED," knowing that where so much is given, there must be much more yet to come?

Meanwhile all VISIBLE AND INVISIBLE HELPERS may rejoice,
For light is light, and ever comes from God;
If blazing from a star, or glowing in a sod,
It gives new courage to the striving soul,
And points us ever to the shining goal.

Cincinnati, O. W. LeNOIR.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. P. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

The Cherished Name of Our Loved Moses Hull.

A MAN.

I saw a man. He stood erect, well poised,
His every muscle rounded out and firm,
Nor moved was he by every passing breeze,
Nor dashing tide, nor quakings of the earth;
Nor moved by ebb and flow of human ire,
Nor taunts and jeers, nor praise by human tongue.

I heard the voices of a multitude.
From every clime they came with songs of praise,
And bearing rarest flowers of fragrance sweet;
And laid them at his feet, and humbly bowed,
His benediction to receive.

In awe I stood
And gazed with wondering eyes upon the scene,
When, lo! in shining robes, with radiant brow,
Just at my side a heavenly presence stood,
With satisfaction beaming from his eyes,
As he beheld such worship of a man.

"Kind sir," I asked, "Who is this man that doth
Receive from this vast multitude such love,
Such adoration, humble, deep, devout?"
With earnestness, and still in kindliest tone,
He made me this reply:

"Behold a man
That's every whit a man. A man that used
The days, the hours, the minutes of his life
As best he could to grow himself into
A perfect man in stature, mind and soul.
When but a youth he quickly brushed aside
Those bright but silly baubles that appeal
To vanity alone, and grappled with
The hard and stern realities of life;
Nor faltered if he failed at first to win.

"'Twas not alone the problems of the mind;
He studied deep the mysteries of the heart,
And early learned to hold his fellowmen
In pure affection's fond but firm embrace.
Thus early armed against internal foes,
He quickly found a place amid the ranks
Of those who fight to set their brethren free
From all that wrecks and blights the joys of life.
Fearless he fought, willing to fall with truth,
If truth must fall, but never doubting its Triumphant victory at last, o'er all.
'Twas his to do the right nor fear results.

"Consistently he held the rights of all
As equal to and sacred as his own;
And danced his heart with joy if he could help
A fellow-being over places rough,
Or up the steeps too hard for them to climb.
His strength was spent, but not for sordid gain,
But wealth of heart, of mind, of soul, of all
That goes to make man all that man can be.

"To him the raging tempest brought no fear,
For he could look beyond the havoc wrought,
To peaceful shores, bedecked with sweetest flowers,
By gentle zephyrs fanned, where springs o'er flow
With cooling draughts, and where love points the way
To lives of purity and happiness.

"He looked not with austerity upon
The pigmies at his feet, but took their hands,
And with a gentleness that won their love
And confidence, he taught them how to grow.
He stood as one who knew full well his power,
He knew the weakness of his fellowmen,
But scorned the tyrant's part, the braggart's roll,
He scorned to rule by base authority.

"He fought a gallant fight. About him lay
The dead and dying errors crushed by bolts
Of logic hurled with fautless aim from out
His citadel of power impregnable,
Because equipped with everlasting facts,
Too strong to break, too weighty to resist.

"He wore not the insignia of a king,
He wore a crown set thick with rarest pearls
Of richest hue, that shed upon the world
A radiance all their own; rich pearls of truth,
Blessed light divine, to light the paths of men
To ways of sweetness, cheerfulness and love,
To make this world of children, flowers and song
A land of purity, a land of peace.

"His name is found in his prolific works;
'Tis stamped upon the logic of his thoughts;
Embossed upon the progress of the age;
But deepest written in the hearts of men;
Engraven large on heaven's scroll of fame."

And there upon the glowing twilight clouds,
In loveliest rays of mellow light shone forth
The cherished name of our loved Moses Hull.

Lansing, Mich. S. B. PERSON.

They Were Singing in Spirit Life the Song They Loved So Well.

To the Editor:—I have just been apprised of the transition of my much loved and devoted friend, Mrs. Isabelle Rutherford Hall of my home city. Mrs. Hall was a devoted and loving mother and friend, and I know that her sons Albert J. and Clarence will greatly miss her love and presence in their home. My friend was a beautiful and wonderfully inspired writer in prose and poetry, and had volumes of manuscript ready for publication, and it was the highest ambition of her life to get them before the public, but through the long months of pain and suffering she was denied that privilege. She was a devout Spiritualist, and none enjoyed communion more with our dear departed ones than did my dear friend Belle.

We all have this consolation, though hard to part with the material body, the dear mother and friend can return to us; in fact she has come to me. On the evening of her transition, the 4th, I was sitting in my daughter's room, and I heard her father's voice, and then my dear friend's voice, and they were singing the song they both loved so well. I turned to Gertrude and said: "I believe my friend, Mrs. Hall has passed on, or is just now doing so, more proof that our loved ones continue to live after the mortal has been cast aside for the immortal. Oh, the joy and happiness she is now enjoying with those she loves so dearly, and who were so anxious for her coming."

Oh, what a comfort we as Spiritualists have in knowing we can still communicate with our loved ones, and that so-called death does not end all, but draws us closer and closer to those friends who have preceded us to that higher and more spiritual life. The words of that beautiful poem, "My Own Shall Come to Me," gives us greater hope and courage still.

I greatly regret my not being able to attend the last sad rites of the material body.

I expect now to leave here in a few days for Webster City, Lehigh and Lemars, this state, and will then be through with Iowa.

My stay in Cedar Rapids has been pleasant and profitable inasmuch as I have done a good work for our cause. The only thing I regret in my being here is this. I find that two public workers who purport to be spiritual mediums are selling charms for nefarious purposes. I have been informed by two different persons that these charms are sold to the poor seeker after truth, for the sum of $2 per charm. Is it any wonder that Cedar Rapids has very little use for Spiritualism? No!

ELIZABETH J. JAQUET.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

EASTER THOUGHTS.

(Composed by Rev. Wm. F. Trinthammer Hanan, Germany, May, 1861, and dedicated to his children in America. Contributed by Emily L. Trinthammer, Milwaukee, Wis.)

True, wild ocean waves are flowing,
Ever you and me between,
Yet the heaven above me, glowing
O'er you, too, extends serene.
Kindlier sunbeams dart their splendor
From a sky of cloudless blue,
And Spring strews around her tender
Blossoms o'er the earth anew,
Sorrow, pains, now disappear,
Faith and trust renewed shall be,
You unto my heart so near,
Be rejoiced and think of me!

We have kept the eastertide
When arose the Lord of Life,
What bright proofs on every side
Of creating might are rife.
In the churchyard's sacred ground,
Violets bloom, sweet buds are seen,
And the graves we cherish, crowned
By the friendly evergreen.
Therefore with new blithesome cheer,
Let us gay and hopeful be,
You, my children, good and dear,
Thank God, too, and think of me.

From the slumber deep recovering,
Life behold on every side,
Over hill and valley hovering,
Beings swarm in myriad tide.
Hark the swallows chirp again,
Build their nests, and roundabout,
Hear you not a joyous strain,
Calling, greeting, warbling, shout?
Added to these thousand lays Shall our grateful voices be,
Up! Our Heavenly Father praise,
So, dear children, think of me.

With the sun, existence gloweth,
With the sun it sinks to rest,
Yet a pledge the heaven showeth
Bright it flameth in the West.
View! the evening star is sparkling,
Gaze upon Orion bright,
Lamps of God throughout the darkening,
Anxious, dreamy, earthly night.
Should not I long for yon sky,
Where there all must glorious be?
When my soul hath passed on high,
Children, then still think of me.

That Sandusky Fire.

Recently the Psychic Research Society of Sandusky, Ohio, lost all of their belongings, including piano, chairs, tables, dishes, books and other things in a fire that destroyed several business places in the heart of the city. Naturally one would expect to find the members who had worked so hard to gather what they possessed, to be discouraged; but not so; they did not allow their loss to interfere with even one meeting, but with the strength and courage that comes of true Spiritual knowledge they proceeded to look for another place and secured the Chamber of Commerce at which place well-attended meetings are now being held. The fact that the fire had been predicted by a few hours by Mrs. Charlotte Exton of Lorain, Ohio, contributed its share to arouse the interest of some who had heretofore hung back a little doubtful, and perhaps we shall have occasion when speaking of the society's material loss, to say "it was all for the best." In the meantime let us congratulate them for their courage, and wish them still more of hope and confidence in the unseen helpers whom they all know are near.

ELIZABETH SCHAUSS.

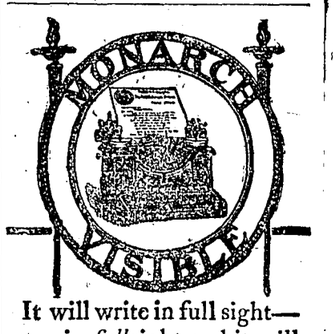
"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

RHEUMATISM

CURED

Through the Feet

Anyone Can Try Without Cost This Great External Remedy Which Is Curing Thousands.



Send Your Name To-day and Get.

A $1 PAIR FREE TO TRY.

We want every reader of this paper who suffers with Rheumatism to send us his or her name. We will send by return mail a pair of the celebrated Magic Foot Drafts, the new Michigan external remedy which has brought more comfort into this country than all the internal medicines we know of. If they give relief, send us One Dollar; if not, don't send us a cent. We take your word. You decide.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn as shown in the picture, relieving pain in every part of the body through the feet. Our Free Book is fully illustrated (in colors) so that anyone who reads it can understand the relation of the foot pores and nerves to nature's plan for ridding the system of pain-causing impurities. Don't delay, but send to-day for our Free Book, and the Free Trial Drafts. They are curing cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, after doctors and baths and medicines had failed. It costs nothing to find out whether they will cure you. Will you try them? Address Magic Foot Draft Co., X012 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Write to-day.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

EXCELLENT SONG BOOKS.

Echoes From the World of Song. Volumes 1 and 2. By C. Payson Longley. Choice inspirational songs, suitable for all occasions. This book is well bound in cloth with gilt illustration on cover, and frontispiece bearing portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Longley. Words and music, sheet music size. Price $1 each; postage 15 cents additional on each book.

Maxham's Melodies, With Words and Music. Songs, sacred and secular. Price 15 cents.

Comrian Hymn Book. A collection of original and selected hymns for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. Price, paper cover, 50 cts.

Selected and Inspirational Hymns for Spiritualistic Gatherings. By Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley. Words only. Price, 15 cents.

The Spiritual Songster. By Mattie E. Hull. For the use of circles, camp-meetings and other Spiritualistic gatherings. Words only. Price, 10 cents.

The Lyceum Guide. A collection of music, golden chain recitations, memory gems, choral responses, funeral services, programs for sessions, parliamentary rules. Containing instructions for organizing and conducting lyceums, for physical culture, calisthenics, marching, banners, badges, standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. Compiled for the use of progressive lyceums and societies, by Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, (cloth binding), 50 cents per copy, or when ordered by the dozen, 40 cts each.

STARTLING FACTS,

OR

Deeds of Darkness Disclosed

This work devotes special attention to Auricular Confession and its relations to sacerdotal celibacy, convents, monasteries, morality and civil and religious liberty. It is intended to be an embodiment of facts and documentary evidence of the pernicious influence of the confessional; a trenchant showing up of Romanism, based upon standard Catholic authorities; an eye-opener concerning the methods and spirit, the moral turpitude and evil works of Romanism. Cloth, 75 cents.

Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; The Relation of Its Principles to Continued Existence and to the Philosophy of Spiritualism. By Prof W. M. Lockwood. Paper, 25 cents.

FROM INDIA TO THE PLANET MARS.

A MOST REMARKABLE WORK.

Fascinating, Interesting and Instructive.

By Th. Flournoy, Professor of Psychology in the University of Geneva.

"This is an account of the experiments with the 'Geneva Medium,' Helene Smith. In her trances she lives the dual existence of an Indian princess and of an inhabitant of the planet Mars. Professor Flournoy and his fellow scientists have for more than five years experimented with these astounding physical phenomena."

This is a work of thrilling interest. It has excited great attention in this country and in Europe. Price, $1.50.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force, Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

PROTISTA.

The Kingdom of the Unseen, as Explored by Hudson Tuttle.

(Continued From No. 903.)

Germs and Diseases.

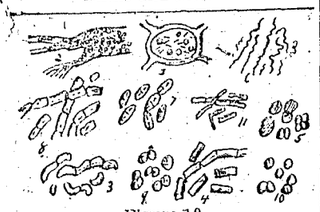


Figure 10.
1—Lung cell, showing blood corpuscles and bacilli tuberculosis.
2—Blood vessel gorged with micrococci.
3—Comma bacillus, of cholera.
4—Bacillus anthrax.
5—Micrococci in human sputum.
6—Spirilla, in blood of patient suffering relapsing fever.
7—Bacillus of meat poisoning.
8—Typhus fever bacillus.
9—Bacterium termo, the cause of putrefactive change.
10—Micrococcus of septicaemia, or blood poisoning.

Our ancestors knew little of the origin of diseases, and believing that they were inflictions of providence, submitted patiently, taking no measures to guard against them. The discoveries of recent times by bacteriologists have revolutionized medical theories and treatment. Although there are doubts yet to solve, it is as certain as most statements of biology, that a large proportion of the ailments which afflict mankind are the result of the attacks of micro-organisms which being introduced into the system, set up the pathological changes which characterize them.

That these germs are present when the disease, of which they are the supposed cause, is not manifested, does not prove that they are not the agents, for the condition on which their growth depends may not be favorable. That they are always present with the disease is more conclusive.

The microscope has opened the portals of a realm unseen by the unassisted eye, and an element of terror is added to our astonishment, by a knowledge of the beings which swarm around us, of the presence of which we before had no intimation.

Air, water and food teem with countless species. Happily most of them are beneficial, and only a small number enemies. A tiger escaped from its cage and roaming through the fields, frightens a whole countryside, and people dare not leave their doors until the animal is secured. If there were not only one but thousands of tigers, lions, leopards, and other beasts of prey, lying in wait everywhere ready to devour, and poisonous serpents quick to strike their fangs into the flesh; the prospect would be appalling; yet less terrible in being surrounded by swarms of invisible beings more merciless and torturing than these beast of prey.

The latter may be seen and avoided, but the others are unseen, and we know so little of their character that we cannot guard against them. When a lion seizes his trainer and devours him before the horror-stricken crowd, it is heralded far and wide, yet every day thousands of victims are seized by these disease germs, subject to merciless tortures, and brought to the grave, and it passes without comment. The congestion of liver, kidneys and lungs, the obstruction of air-passages, the burning fever—a demon only could invent tortures comparable.

We stand at the couch of those dear to us and helplessly watch and wait the result of the attack of the unseen foe that by the force of infinite numbers breaks down resistance and storms the citadel of life.

The clearest, sweetest, sparkling water, may be laden with the germs of typhoid fever, and the breath of morning bear the germs of malaria and consumption. If this be true, we must be protected in some unknown manner, for notwithstanding the presence of these germs, it is an exception when they find a victim, and during the visitations of the most malignant contagions there are many who escape.

This leads to the conclusion that there are states of health that resist the attacks of the germs, by destroying them after they enter the system, or they find the blood antagonistic to their growth. There is no doubt in the minds of those who have studied this department experimentally, that these organisms are the cause of disease. But there is difference of opinion as to the direct agency of the microbes, whether they by their presence cause the ailment, or if this is not due to the poisonous products they secrete, or yet to chemical changes they produce in the blood.

It is difficult to describe these organisms because of their minuteness and similarity. Thus the harmless bacillus found in hay, and the deadly bacillus of anthrax have been mistaken for each other by leading microscopists, and Buchner thought he had demonstrated that they were the same. Others by careful experiments have proven that he was mistaken. The lens leaves much to conjecture, and the observer sees what he wants to see. If the magnifying power could be doubled, a great deal that now passes as demonstrated would become obsolete.

It is difficult to realize that a being so small that it cannot be seen by the unassisted eye can overpower and destroy the largest. They picture themselves in our minds as horrible forms with voracious appetite. So different are they in every feature from all living beings with which we are acquainted, that were they large enough to be seen they would pass unnoticed except to the experienced eye. If the expectation is to see creatures with legs and claws, of monstrous shape, there will be disappointment. Some enterprising venders of microbe-killing patent medicine, have carried this idea into their illustrations. When the germs are said to belong to the vegetable kingdom, as fungoids, the picture of molds and toad-stools arise in the mind, quite as erroneous as the other.

What really is seen when a preparation containing these bacteria or bacilli is submitted to the microscope, is nearly round, olive-shaped, or cylindrical bodies, according to the species present. They are simple, transparent masses of jelly-like substance, sometimes with an enveloping membrane, sometimes without. They have no mouths or organs whatever, and grow by absorption of the fluids containing them. If watched for a little time, the sphere or rod will be seen to contract in the middle, assume an hour-glass form, and break in two. If conditions are favorable, this process is rapidly repeated. If this division takes place every five minutes, at the end of an hour, the original individual becomes 4096, and at the end of a day the number would be incomprehensible.

Attempts have been made to measure these forms and the most delicate instrument contrived, yet when it comes to measuring a thing that cannot be seen without the magnifying power of several hundred diameters, it must be confessed that there must be more guesswork than accuracy.

Some measurements make the diameter of a full-grown bacterium .0006 of a millimeter one way, and .0014 mm, the other. Or we may say 40,000 of them laid down closely in line would extend an inch, and 160,000,000 would cover an inch square surface. Something like forty-one billions possibly might weigh a grain.

Multiplication by division is not the only method. When disease germs are mentioned correctly, the mature forms are not intended, but their spores or seeds. If the process of division be watched for some little time, under circumstances promotive of rapid growth, a granule or graniules will be seen to form in the substance which is so transparent as to allow them to be distinctly seen, and these burst through the enveloping mass and become free. These granules are the spores or seeds. They are incomparably more hardy than the parent stock. The mature forms are sensitive to changes of temperature and of the solution containing them. They are destroyed by dessication, a continued heat of 135 degrees F., and by cold somewhat below freezing. But provisions are made for the preservation of the species under conditions which would destroy all other forms of life. These spores or germs, will bear the most intense cold and the heat of boiling water for a little time, and may be dried to any extent and their vitality will remain unimpaired. Blown by the wind or carried by water they become universally diffused, and where they find a soil prepared, they quickly mature and commence to increase.

They are also observed to pass into a dormant or encysted state, usually when the food supply is exhausted, in which they are able to withstand adverse changes almost as severe as borne by the germs.

Bacteria.

The Bacteria form one of the largest groups which include the most deadly disease germs. They are of the lowest and simplest fungi, and according to the classification belong to the vegetable kingdom, but it must be confessed that among these beings the distinction between plant and animal almost disappears. Thus the anomaly that while Bacteria are placed with plants, they live only in animal substances. They are among the smallest beings perceivable and apparently are only specks of protoplasm. They are two distinctive forms. One is spherical or ovoid, and all forms approaching this shape are termed Bacteria. The other type is cylindrical or rod shaped, the rods being jointed and breaking apart at the joints, each joint forming an individual. Both multiply by division. The globular body constricts through the middle, changing rapidly into the form of an hour glass and breaking apart, when if conditions are favorable, the process is repeated. The cylinders of the Bacilli multiply by like division cross-wise, and if growth is rapid there is not complete separation, and long-jointed filaments are formed by the union of many individuals.

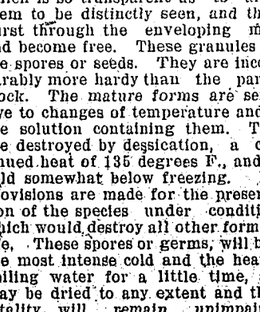

Figure 8.
This illustration shows the appearance of healthy human sputum after exposure to the air and fermentation, under the microscope. The micrococci appear in chains, masses and singly.

The Micrococcus

found in putrid sputum, is globular in form and multiplies by division. It is quite different from that found in the sputum of sufferers from consumption, which contains the Bacillus tuberculosis.

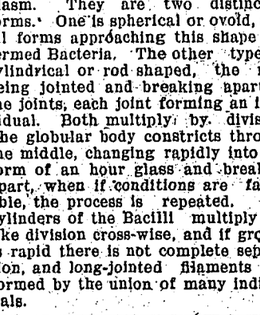

Figure 9.
Illustration of human sputum of a subject of tuberculosis.

These appear like lengthened rods and tangled masses of threads. At certain stages of growth, rounded bodies, called spores or germs, really the seeds, form in the interior of the rods or spheres, break through the cell-walls and become free. These spores are not only unlike in form, but are more hardy. They will endure a degree of heat that would kill the parent cells, are unaffected by cold and drying into dust remain dormant for an indefinite time. As the germs are not destroyed by any heat or cold to which they are commonly subjected, it makes their exclusion more difficult. Hence the sputum of consumptives or those suffering from pneumonia is most dangerous. The dried matter is blown by the winds everywhere, and when the spores find a prepared soil, they at once develop into bacilli, the rapidity of multiplication varying according to the conditions. It will thus be seen that too stringent measures cannot be taken to prevent the spread of the spores.

The enforcement of the law against expectoration on the streets shows an awakening of public attention to its dangers. This feeling is quite different from that which has hitherto prevailed, which regarded it as simply a nuisance. It becomes of interest to know what the danger of this practice really is, and if it demands such strenuous measures for its suppression. If there are not ample reasons for the law's enforcement, it becomes a ridiculous farce; and if there are, their understanding will justify the law and go a long way in assisting in its enforcement.

The discussion of this subject opens a wide field, for it embraces not only the dangers from germs of consumption, but of all germ-diseases and the precautionary measures for their suppression.

In pneumonia the tendency of the Bacilli is to form by rapid growth, rod-like forms, and these become tangled masses and chains.

Scarcely distinguishable from these is the diphtheria Micrococcus, and there is so little difference in the simple cells that the slightest modifications have to be relied on. Taken into the lungs with the breath, they find lodgment and by their poisoned secretions, destruction of the nutritive quality of the blood, and mechanical action in obstructing the circulation, bring on the vital changes marking their presence. In diphtheria the throat is the local point of attack. Other malarial germs find their nidus in the spleen, liver and kidneys.

The Comma Bacillus has not been proven to be the cause of the cholera, although the dejecta of cholera patients have them in great numbers, with many other species of bacilli, bacteria, and putrefactive germs. Dysentery shows all of these, and in severe cases the intestinal lining is filled with thread-like bacilli surrounded by extravisated blood vessels.

Typhoid Fever.

Whatever may be said of the germ theory in a general way, the history of typhoid epidemics has been too well studied to admit of a doubt as to their origin. Wherever they have occurred, they have been readily traced to their source, and with our present knowledge it is little short of criminal to allow the disease to become epidemic. Typhoid germs do not enter the system through the air, but by means of food and water. Only by excrementious matter gaining access to the water supply, or the food, are the germs conveyed.

The Bacterium of tetanus breeds in garden soil, dirt and filth, and hence is always ready to be carried into wounds, and unless such wounds are thoroughly disinfected, the disease is sure to follow.

Micro-Organisms Multiply in Darkness and Filth.

There are species of bacteria which cause great trouble in healing of wounds. Their presence is both cause and effect of suppuration. In all cases where there is pus there will be found septicemic bacteria and spirillae in abundance on the borders of the inflammation, gorging the blood vessels between the diseased and healthy flesh.

Leucocytes—The White Blood Corpuscles.

With seeming prescience of threatening danger, the vital forces build a protecting wall around the wound, by thickening the walls of the blood vessels producing congestion or inflammation by which the absorption of the germs into the general circulation is prevented. The enemy thus walled in are subject to the attacks of the white blood corpuscles or Leucocytes, which in every feature resemble micro-organisms and are independent in their individual existence. Were they found anywhere else than in the blood, the microscopist would without a doubt take them as specific forms. In health there is about one white to 250 red corpuscles, but often the ratio is greatly less, or in certain diseases may be greatly more. However small this proportion their number is beyond realization, and they gather around and in the most exposed organs. Disease germs are constantly entering the blood through the lungs, stomach, or mucous surface. They enter exposed wounds. The white corpuscles swarm at the exposed points of attack. When a disease germ passes through the barrier it is seized by a Leucocytes, and if this is strong and healthful, the germ disappears in the substance of its antagonist. These corpuscles stand on the ramparts of life, like an army of vigilant soldiers, and are merciless in their treatment of the enemy.

If, however, as is often the case, the white corpuscles are weak, or too few in number, instead of destroying the germs, they are destroyed thereby. The defense is made with the same unwavering courage, but the enemy absorbs them and rushes in. It may happen that the number of these germs inhaled by the air or taken in food, is so great that after a time the never ceasing attack so weakens the forces of defense that it yields, and the invaders meet no further resistance in their invasion of the citadel of life.

This knowledge of micro-organisms shows the error of the ideas of healing prevalent, to almost the present times. It was thought from Hippocrates' time, by physicians, that a wound must suppurate before healing, and in their bulletins, so late as the death of Garfield, the most eminent doctors spoke of "healthy pus," as indicating a favorable condition. This is the height of nonsense and charlatanism. There can be no pus without the presence of the pus creating germs. There need never be a vestige of pus in a wound, and if proper antiseptics are used there will not be. Pus shows the destruction of tissue, and the theory that the microbes, instead of being its cause, feed on the decayed matter, is quite unwarranted.

This knowledge shows how essential the care of wounds should be. The most severe laceration may not be as dangerous as the prick of a nail, or a sliver of wood—for the first may not carry with it inoculation with these germs, and the other may. The punctured wound is an ideal lodgment for the development of the tetanus and septicaemic bacteria.

A knowledge of these beings has enabled physicians to combat them with success and conferred a boon on mankind.

How to Guard Against Their Attacks.

This knowledge enables us to guard against their attacks. It is well known that the most virulent, as typhoid, small pox, and cholera, are multiplied by foul streets, badly ventilated dwellings and all conditions and habits which corrupt the body and make it a prolific soil for the reception and propagation of these germs. Cleanliness of surroundings and elevation of the standard of health, make their lodgment difficult if not impossible.

Bacteria are not the only septic organisms. The Vibrones which are rod-shaped, wavy and interlaced, and the Spirilla, like rods twisted into spiral form, are equally active agents. When any of these enter a wound they immediately begin to multiply, and absorb the plastic material, producing according to the species that have found lodgment, yellow, greenish, or ichorous pus. If the vitality of the patient is low, the forming cells of the healing process are attacked by the microbes and destroyed. Ulceration extends into the healthy flesh and there may be absorption of the septic product, septicema, or blood poisoning, or there may be production of septic matter so virulent that death of the tissues occurs before its absorption. This is gangrene, which has its own micro-organism. By the antiseptic treatment, the use of disinfectants, and absolute cleanliness, wounds, such as are produced by the surgeon, are expected to heal by first intention, and if there is suppuration the operator knows that he has not been sufficiently careful, for such result is not necessary. Wounds that have not been immediately attended, especially punctured wounds, difficult to reach in their deepest parts with antiseptics, are more dangerous.

There is one provision which prevents the uninterrupted multiplication of these organisms. In all cases they flourish only in a medium exactly suited to them, and the toxin they produce is not only poisonous to other beings, but to themselves. After the fluid in which they thrive, becomes charged with a certain proportion of this product, they cease to multiply, and if the vitality of the patient is sufficient, there is excretion of the foreign products and restoration.

Another explanation of the crisis reached by such diseases is that the blood becomes exhausted of the material essential for the growth of these organisms and they die of failure of food. It would be scarcely possible for the patient to survive the complete exhaustion of the blood this implies, and were it true, the fatality would equal the number of cases.

The poison secreted by these organisms is an alkaloid almost identical in effect with that of toadstools. There is no known antidote, and reliance for recovery must be placed on maintaining the vitality and eliminating the poisonous matter through the secretory organs.

The Trichina does not belong to the microbes, for it is a giant compared with them, and the process of growth and multiplication approaches that of higher animals. It, however, belongs with the beings, whose existence has been made known to us by the microscope. It has awakened too much attention by its terrible effects when introduced into the system, to be passed by.

Taken into the body of the pig it finds lodgment in the interstial spaces of the muscles and at maturity becomes encysted and filled with germs or eggs. When such infested flesh is taken into the human stomach, imperfectly cooked and in this state the germs require high and prolonged heat to destroy their vitality, the external envelop is digested, the germs set free and their minuteness enables them to pass into the blood and be carried to every part of the body. They attach themselves principally in the muscles and rapidly mature. The Trichina like all these beings secretes a poison or toxin, which with the mechanical irritation produces fever and the most excruciating pain. After the Trichina has passed the stage of growth, should the patient survive it becomes encysted and remains unchanged during the life of its victim. As the developed Trichinae are no more in number than the germs taken in the food, as will be inferred, the violence of the disease depends on the number of germs taken into the stomach. Local, rheumatic pains, usually referred to other causes shade into the saturation of the system, with death the only release from the horrible torture. The circle of this organism's life is maintained by the infested flesh being eaten by another animal, and it seems that when it enters into the flesh-eaters that are not food for others, there is a break and the transformation ends. There must be some provision for its continuance, and perhaps the germs relieved by decay mingling with the soil or water, or blown by the air may find lodgment in living beings.

The poison secreted by these organisms is an alkaloid or ptomaine of the most virulent character, as is shown by the effects of meat and cheese infected by them. Almost identical in pathological effects, are these ptomaines and poison of mushroom or toadstool.

The silk worm has a deadly foe in Botritis, a mould-like fungus, the spores of which find lodgment in the air passages which they fill by rapid growth, causing the death of the worm. Before the famous Pasteur investigated the subject and finding the cause suggested a remedy, the silk industry of France was threatened with extinction by this disease.

Animals are not exempt from the attack of these micro-organisms. The visible parasites which infest them are not as formidable as this invisible foe.

The Bacillus anthrax is one of the most fatal, causing the contagious fever by that name.

The tumor affecting the jaws of cattle is caused by a fungus called actinomycas which is represented in plants by gall-growth. The tumor is formed of nodules resembling tubercles each one of which is a nidus for the growth of these organisms. These nodules after a time develop abscesses and the affection extends into various internal organs, the lungs being most susceptible. The same fungus is sometimes met with in man. In swine it has been found in the flesh as whitish spots larger than those of the Trichina.

The common house-fly is subject to the attack of a similar mould and may be seen attached to the window pane by the filaments of the fungi pushing out of the air passages. These filaments are covered with spores or seeds to be brushed off and breathed in by other flies. There are almost unnumbered species of these fungi which find the heat of the animal body promotive of their growth and it is appalling to think what the result would be were human beings by some change of climate or physical conditions to become susceptible to their influence.

Nor are plants exempt from enemies. Mildew and rust of wheat, the smut which destroys the kernel replacing the substance with dust-like spores; the blight and rot of potatoes; the ergot of rye; the decay of fruits; the scab of apples are a few of the effects of the infection by these germs, or spores, which are everywhere present, endowed with vitality which resists heat and cold, moisture and dessication and whenever there is a favorable combination of these they grow out of the unseen as though spontaneously.

In conclusion we are not to say what cannot be cured must be endured, but prevented. It is far better to preserve health than restore it after it has been lost. There is a condition of the system immune to attack of any and all of these germs, to discover which should be the ambitious aim of students of hygiene.

(To be continued.)

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

Education a Liberator.

Considered With Especial Reference to the Marriage Relation.

The subject of education is one of of ever-increasing importance, particularly as the requirements of humanity increase and we reach out for higher and more ideal conditions of life.

To the mind unaccustomed to think except along general lines of thought, or in old conservative grooves, the demand for a better educational system may not at first be apparent. If we have been in the past only superficial observers of the conditions of our common life and not deep students, then may our lecture this evening stimulate us into broader and deeper channels of thought. To the individual possessing a truly humanitarian spirit like the Nazarene of old, the great deficiencies existing in our educational systems of life must be apparent, for the woes of human society are not adequately reached and wrong is multiplied upon wrong until the whole earth groans under the pain of its ignorance.

A great poet has well said that, "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn;" but we would like to add that man's inhumanity to woman is a blight on our fair escutcheon, and is the cause of much inherited suffering.

The primary technical education which prepares us for a business career and gives us the ability to earn the almighty dollar is only of minor importance in comparison with the knowledge we require of some of the great principles of life; so that education has a broader aspect than some of us may be prepared to grant, and it requires the diligent and constant application of our mental forces along other educational lines than that of the ordinary school curriculum, to obtain the knowledge which rounds us out in our true manhood.

Just as we require education along certain lines to prepare us for the entrance into a business career, so in our undertaking of other responsibilities such as our union in marriage and our becoming parents, it also becomes an urgent duty for us to know what these conditions involve and their attendant responsibilities.

That young men and women should be taught some very important things relative to the condition necessary for a true marriage and the begetting and rearing of healthy offspring, we think of sufficient moment as to demand instruction in special classes. At the root of marital inharmony, resulting in divorces, diseased children and suicides, is ignorance of natural law. If we elect to remain ignorant of these things, indifferent to the dawning results of such ignorance, then must we be prepared to abide by the necessary consequences.

The foundation of human society, its morals, its social life, its healthfulness and its civic and national purity, lie in its correct understanding of conjugal life. Are we, to-day, building that structure upon proven principles of being, or are we negligent of its demands, careless of its responsibilities, indifferent to the needs of our prospective offspring? The generations of to-day are working out the sins and ignorance of their progenitors; for the present is built upon the past, and so will the future be built likewise upon the present.

So life is constructed in one vast unbroken chain, and we as links in that great chain are either going to strengthen these links through knowledge, or weaken them by ignorance.

"Merit lives from man to man, and not from man to Thee, O God," So sang Tennyson, the sweet singer of poetical fame. If merit there be in our lives it will not come as the resultant of our many prayers, our religious observances, our worship of God, but inasmuch as we helped our common humanity nearer to God through our love for its welfare in all things. "If we say that we love God, then let us love our brother man, for he who says he loves God and hates his brother is a liar," so the Apostle John affirms in his epistles of ancient day.

I am virtually hating my brother when I am indifferent to his welfare, and if I refuse to acquire that knowledge which would help him to be a more perfect man. Our religion must not consist only in hero worship and church ritual, but be the resultant of the practical understanding of the laws of our life, that which goes to make us sane, healthful, spiritual men and women.

We have not made commercialism the foundation of a perfect human society, for we do not consider it the end, only a means to attain the end, and sometimes it is a very much exaggerated means which causes a great deal of worry, crime and general foolishness. To train men and women that to be commercially successful is to be truly great, and is of primary importance, we think is straining the question and to lose sight of more important issues. We are perfectly well aware in this age of dollars and cents that in order to compete successfully in the business world one requires to be well-equipped technically, but this is only a part of life, not the whole, and has been given undue prominence by men who are commercially mad men, who are monomaniacs, absorbed in one thing. Thank Providence that the round of life has not been bound up in one section, that man possesses other faculties, other sources of enjoyment, which are of equal if not of more importance in many respects than the acquiring of money.

One cannot help being touched and made to think seriously when coming into contact with the mass of humanity, and may ask the question, "If there is no balm in Gilead," no power which can ameliorate and emancipate from such conditions. We have already stated that at the foundation of a healthy community was the right understanding of the marriage relationship, and we will repeat this statement and endeavor to prove it.

The kingdom of heaven on earth is the most valuable assurance we can have of the possibility of such a condition in another state of existence. What we know and enjoy in our experiences on earth we can readily believe will not add less to our own felicity in a future existence, and to have the kingdom of heaven within ourselves in manifestation in our earthly environments would certainly be a precursor of what would in all probability be our condition in life after physical dissolution. The next life would seem to be uncertain, whilst this one is substantial and real.

We want heavenly and ideal conditions of life here and now, not to wait for some future state in which to realize the beauties of existence and to be free from the pains of ignorance.

Marriage, when rightly understood, will be the result of the blending of two souls in mutual magnetic and chemical affinity and will constitute the highest condition of human happiness and experience. True marriages are not the resultant of attraction through sexual passion; that is the lowest basis of its divine consummation, but of mutual attraction on the physical, mental and spiritual spheres of our natures. Physical appetite is a perishable asset of the human soul and will soon wane, leaving its votary diseased morally, mentally and physically. To marry on that plane is folly, and the concomitant results of such a union will strew with wreckage the pathway of those who are drawn into its snare. True marriage must always be the resultant of true love, love which has for its attributes companionship, friendship, self-respect, self-control, mutual admiration, and gentleness.

True marriage is one long courtship, a continual drawing of our natures together in closer fellowship, higher understanding and more forbearing love. True love does not grow apart but is attracted like the needle to the magnet in the closest rapport of soul. It grows like the creeping ivy in strength, throwing out constantly more branches wherewith to cling to the object of its affection. The central point for each is each other, and round the pivot of their mutual understanding, and fellowship they revolve and grow in the knowledge of their divinity.

The standards for marriage cannot be held too high, provided they are practical, for through its ideal conditions will come the salvation of the human race. Therefore, we consider that instruction anent the conditions for a proper marriage union essential, and if this education cannot be obtained at home, then classes should be available, so that young men and women contemplating this most serious and important step of their lives might be rightly informed.

Organically diseased people should not be permitted to marry and beget offspring, for the children of diseased parents are liable to the same diseases through inherited predisposition. The reason for this is easily accounted for, as the minds of the parents would be afflicted, and through this mental affliction, which is practically an involuntary condition, the children of such people would receive prenatally impressions which would psychologize them into a predisposition to the diseases of the parents. One of the most important factors in the begetting of children is the understanding and application of prenatal and post-natal suggestion. Prenatally children should be begotten not of accident, but as the resultant of mutual desire on the part of the husband and wife.

Motherhood should never be forced, and children should come as welcome additions to the home life. The primary object of marriage is the production of the race, not the gratification of sexual appetite. Preparation before and after should be made for each child, and children should always be made welcome to our hearts and home. Children who come as accidents or through forced motherhood may not be very welcome, and are liable to cause trouble to the parents in the future of their lives. It is not necessary to have large families, more than you can reasonably take care of and educated properly.

Let the laws of common-sense and self-control govern the life, and things will adjust themselves accordingly. Inharmony, disease and chaos come as the result of lack of self-control, ignorance of the true marriage relationship, and inordinate sexual appetite. We must learn to govern and control and understand these things prior to our ever getting married. The prospective mother of a child during gestation and full pregnancy requires the best of surroundings; her environments should be congenial, her mind calm and reposeful, free from worry, and she should know how to give the best of suggestions to the yet unborn child, so that it shall grow in character and likeness according to their wishes. If this is true, then it can be readily understood why people about to get married should be able to govern themselves, control their impulses and emotions, gaining that self-poise and equilibrium of mind which denotes rationality and a sound physical constitution.

The heritage of the past in preconceived mental bias and conventional stultification, requires the potent forces of "harmonial philosophy" to awaken within humanity true ideas of life. Ignorance with its bondage of popular opinion, dogmatic statements and foolish hero worship must pass away forever. The individual must be taught how to become individualized, potentialized and free, in harmony with rights of his neighbors.

Children require training in the power of thinking properly in the necessity for becoming students of the phenomena of life. Knowledge can only come as the resultant of earnest investigation, reasonable comparison, and the establishment of a just equilibrium in the essential principles of our natural life. The perfect poise of proper mental action can only be attained by the activities of the spiritual selfhood working in harmony and conjunction with the physical operations of our material natures.

Education must include and recognize always that man is lastly and finally a spiritual being and that only through cognizing this stupendous fact can we ever hope to establish the era of harmonial life and universal brotherhood.

DAVID A. LEISK.

San Diego, Cal.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

A $1. Package FREE TO TRY if you have PILES

To every person answering this advertisement at once we will send—Free to try—our complete new three-fold absorption cure for Piles, Ulcer, Fissure, Prolapse, Tumors, Constipation and all rectal troubles. If you are fully satisfied with the benefit received, send us one dollar. If not, we take your word and it costs you nothing; you decide after a thorough trial. This treatment is curing even cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, as well as all the earlier stages. Act now and perhaps save yourself great suffering. Our three-fold treatment cures to stay cured because it is constitutional as well as local, and we want you to try it at our expense. Our valuable new Pile Book (in colors) comes free with the approvel treatment, all in plain package. Send no money—only your name—to Dr. Van Vleck Co., X012 Majestic Building, Jackson, Mich. Write to-day.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man; Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How it Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary; "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office.

Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH OR Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the

FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

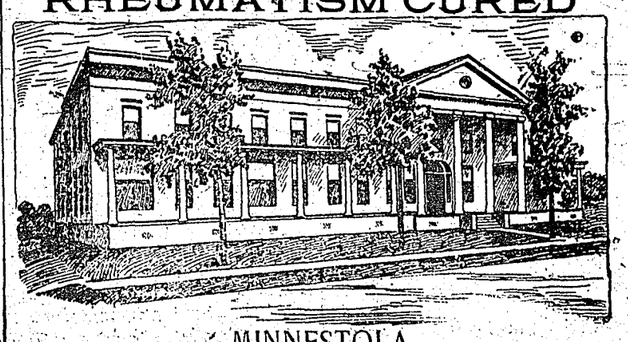
Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.60. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.



By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS.
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 50cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE:

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Such Men Are Teachers.

Rev. Robert J. Lockhart, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Nichols, N. Y., is reported by the Chronicle of this city, to have said during a discourse a few weeks ago, at Handel Hall:

"Robert G. Ingersoll is not dead, and his works will endure for hundreds of years. Never was a man nobler in character, brighter in mental capacity; never was a man more abused. He was great and honest; a man of honor, and was the greatest exemplar of the English language of his time. His lecture on 'Liberty' should be laid by the side of the Bible, and the two should be read together. He was a man who practiced what he preached.

"I do not ask any man to follow him, but I do ask every man to acknowledge the truth when he sees it. This world is a much better place because Robert G. Ingersoll has lived. I love, and cannot help loving the man. If all were like him, were as good as he was, the world would be better. He was a reformer who struck at the root of the evil."

Rev. Lockhart had read Col. Ingersoll's productions, knew what he had said, and had brains to appreciate ennobling sentiments, with bravery enough to declare his convictions. How different from the large mass of pulpit-pounders, who denounce the great thoughts of others unread, and who exhaust the entire vocabulary of billingsgate in belittling those whom they have not intellect to comprehend. Such men and teachers as Lockhart are the seed of the church which will culminate in lifting superstition out of the deep rut in which it has groveled for centuries.

Merely a Suggestion.

Now the great Intersynodical Foreign Mission of the Persbyterian church, late in convention at Omaha, has determined to take immediate measures for the evangelization of the entire world. They assume responsibility for the conversion of a hundred million heathen and Mohammedans. They want to add 4,000 American missionaries, at an annual cost of $6,000,000, to their present number.

If our Christian brothers can raise six millions of dollars, to invest in saving souls, The Progressive Thinker is of the opinion the money expended in saving the lives of Chinese, Japanese, and Russians, who are in a starving condition, would be more conducive to human happiness and the glorification of God than it would be possible by any other method.

Not Wanted.

Rev. Van Slyke, of Kingston, N. Y., has just reached home from a tour, probably of a missionary character, in South America. At Caracas, Venezuela, he was arrested and thrown into prison. Inquiring the cause, he was told: "The Venezuelan laws prohibit foreign clergymen of any denomination, from entering the country, and that he had disobeyed the law." The American consul gained the release of the unwelcome intruder by getting his promise to perform no religious services, and leave the country within seven days.

Venezuela is a Catholic country. It was colonized by Spain, in the days of the Inquisition, when that church was supreme, and the only church representative of Christianity. The government in excluding Protestant clergymen from entering Venezuela is doing just what Catholicism would do in every government where it is dominant, could they do so with safety. Would not Protestantism do the same by all they class as heretics, had they the power?

In all countries where Christianity is in the minority they are greatly in favor of toleration; but wherever clothed with authority they persecute opinions adverse to theirs.

Another Critic Reviewed.

Said a correspondent two weeks ago:

"The time has not yet arrived for ancient faiths to be wholly discarded."

If ancient faiths are false, when will the time come to discard them if not now? We were innocently taught: "The time to discard a falsehood is the moment of its discovery;" that truth is always in order, and should be pressed to the front with as little delay as possible. Policy may do for the intriguing politician, who has no regard for morals; but it is terribly out of place when the sole motive for action is to advance a great truth. As the twin companion of Justice, Let Truth prevail though the heavens fall."

If "the Bible to many Spiritualists is history" it is time they were taught to the contrary. The Old Testament is a compilation of the crude ideas prevailing at the dawn of civilization. It may be worthy a place with the mythology of paganism; but it has no rightful place in this age of culture and scientific knowledge; and the New Testament, if interpreted by its own words, is but a slight improvement.

Our correspondent says: "The Bible has been revised and moderned so much it is very readable now." And yet two parties have been prosecuted under United States statutes, since its last revision, and found guilty for sending extracts from its pages through the mails which the courts pronounced obscene.

Right here is a good place to relate what Bible revisers have found:

Rev. Joseph Barker, a Methodist clergyman of England, of some sixty or more years ago, who later removed to the United States, is a good witness. He was discoursing on that revised Bible when he said:

"It should be understood, the oldest Greek and Hebrew Bibles are not printed books, but written ones. They were written before the art of printing was known among Jews or Christians. * * They are the work of different men, in different countries, and different ages. And no two of them are alike. They differ from each other almost endlessly. Some contain more, some less. Some have passages in one form, others have them in other forms. John Mills compared a number of those manuscripts of the New Testament, and found they differed from each other in thirty thousand places. He marked and collected thirty thousand various readings. Other men have compared the Greek manuscripts of the New Testament, and discovered upwards of a hundred thousand various readings—a hundred thousand places or particulars in which they differ from each other.

"A similar diversity of readings is to be found in the Hebrew manuscripts of the Old Testament. Now it is from these imperfect and discordant manuscripts men have to make their Greek and Hebrew Bibles. They have nothing else from which to make them. And those Greek and Hebrew Bible makers have no means of knowing which of the various and contradictory manuscripts are the best. * * It must be understood, the original writings from which the manuscripts now in existence originated, perished many centuries ago. It is probable the last of them were lost more than sixteen hundred years ago, [provided they were ever in being.—Editor]. We have, therefore, no opportunity of comparing existing manuscripts with the original writings, in order to find out which are the original readings. The discordant and contradictory manuscripts, therefore, can never be corrected. * * It is not only of the common English Bible that these words are true, but of every Bible known, whether printed or written, whether in Greek or Hebrew, or in modern languages."

These extracts are accurately copied from the biography of Mr. Barker. Since his day other revisions have been made, and a multitude of errors have been corrected; but as these revisions eliminated the "believe or be damned," and numerous passages making Jesus a God, the revision is not well received by the churches. They aid, however, in proving the fraudulent character of this "inspired word of God," and the creeds derived from it.

Our correspondent says: "Fictitious characters serve a purpose." Yes, in misleading and corrupting those who place trust in fiction and take it for a guide. Our public libraries abound with fiction, and these fabulous creations of imagination are only second to the Bible in corrupting youth, and instilling into their plastic minds false conceptions of life.

"Some of us," continues our critic, "have learned the lessons of tolerance." And others have learned to never tolerate a wrong. We are frank to own, we hold the latter class in great esteem. Jefferson well said in his first inaugural: "Error of opinion may be tolerated when reason is left free to combat it." Reason enthralled, then Error strides over the world crushing everything in its path. The task of The Progressive Thinker is to install Truth with Reason as victors over all opposition, and we are proud to believe its many thousands of readers are glad champions with us in defense of such ennobling virtues.

Again the critic: "We do not go about telling ecclesiastics their teachings are false." His mission seems different from ours. It is our purpose to correct the false, whether taught by priest, prelate or pope. A falsehood never became truth because of its antiquity; for the good character of those who gave it currency, nor for the sacred books in which it is concealed.

We meant by "flummery," in the article to which exceptions are taken, just what the lexicographers said in defining the word: "Anything insipid and out of place." It includes many features the Christian church inherited from their Pagan ancestors, some of which, rendered into plain English, would grate harshly on ears polite.

And vituperation is not the logic used in these columns. We war on error and false teachings, but on persons never, though criminal action may become the subject of animadversion.

Exeunt our critic and his criticisms.

A Catholic Lady's Opinion.

Miss Kate O'Connor, a business and literary lady of Rockford, Ill., who toured Europe last summer, and visited the place of nativity of her mother, in Ireland, and who during the winter has been heard many times on the rostrum, both in Chicago and elsewhere, and is understood to be a zealous Catholic, as were all the members of her family, in an address to the Men's Club of the Second Congregational Church of Rockford, on the evening of the 7th inst., among many other most excellent things she was reported in the next morning's Star of that city as saying as the result of what she saw in Ireland:

"Between the government and the church the people are crushed, is the conclusion reached after my observation. If the clergy of both churches, Catholic and Protestant, could be wiped off the slate, and the people be allowed to work out their own salvation they would be better off. The children have been the sufferers from the religious controversies, and have missed the education that should have been theirs. As a result of the restrictions placed on education in the Catholic portion of Ireland, the Southern, the children and older people are illiterate far above those of the North part of the island. This on account of the persecution."

All know this statement of Miss O'Connor is strictly truthful. She was doubtless educated in the common schools, and may have graduated at the Ladies' Seminary in Rockford, mingling with students of all denominations.

As we read Miss O'Connor's address we recalled the proposition of Dr. Osler to chloroform all persons reaching sixty years, as of no longer any value. Possibly the anesthesia could be applied to the clergy of all denominations, at a still earlier age with advantage to the people. We don't know.

The Marvel of Distance.

The distance to the nearest fixed star is so tremendous that, like many of the facts of astronomy, it is beyond the grasp of the human imagination, though not beyond the reach of mathematical demonstration. Light, which travels at a speed of 186,000 miles in a single second of time, takes over four years to reach us from the nearest star. The thread spun by a spider is so excessively fine that a pound of it would be long enough to reach around the earth. It would take ten pounds of it to reach to the moon and over 3,000 pounds to stretch to the sun. But to get a thread long enough to reach the nearest star would require half a million tons. If a railroad could be built to this star and the fare fixed at a cent a mile the total cost of the journey would be $250,000,000,000, or more than sixty times the whole amount of coined gold in the world.—Exchange.

And that star, so distant, is only one of fifty millions, each the sun of a solar system, with a multitude of planets and their satellites revolving around it; and yet churchmen are angered when we deny the Creator of that boundless wilderness of worlds, did not create them out of nothing in six days, and climaxed his labors by overshadowing a Jewish maiden, and fathered a son, whom they assure us is co-equal with the Father, is the Savior of the world, and all who will not believe the ridiculous tale will be eternally damned. A person with brains is already damned who does believe such a foolish fabrication of priestly nonsense.

Life Went Out in Delirium.

"Peace be with you!" Fitting words at the close of life from any mortal. They were the last utterances, in feeble voice, of John Alexander Dowie, whilom leader of Zion, as he closed his earthly existence, at 9:40, Saturday morning, March 9, of Bright's disease, at Shiloh House, Zion City. His has been an active and eventful life, and it went out in a rambling delirium, probably only an exaggeration of all his last years.

Whether self-deceived, and inflated with the idea that he was indeed the successor of Elijah, or only assumed hoping thereby to gain better control over his followers, he posed as such, and assumed the authority of a prophet.

Dowie's name must figure hereafter along side of Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism; of Ann Lee, of Shaker fame; and the still surviving, though, if reports are true, in a rapid decline, Mrs. Eddy, the founder of Christian Science. Perhaps the quintuple should be completed with the name of Madam Blavatsky, of Theosophy notoriety.

Dowie, faithful to his teaching, declined the service of a physician, and conducted religious exercises, sang hymns, and glorified in the pomp of power, while the spirit was taking its departure.

And we say: Peace to John Alexander Dowie.

Figures Don't Lie.

Upwards of a year ago the Young Men's Christian Association of Pittsburg, Pa., refused admission of an actor to membership, because, as they allege, his profession was an immoral one. Henry E. Dixey, a well-known actor, felt outraged at the decision, and offered to give one thousand dollars to charity if it could not be shown actors, man for man, are as good as ministers. No one accepting his challenge, he then offered $1,000 if there could not be found in prison a minister, equal to one for every state in the Union. Investigation followed, when forty-three clergymen were found in the prisons of the United States, and only nineteen members of the theatrical profession.

Does this prove that ministers should be listed with the criminal class?

Moore Easily Led Into a Trap.

At First Call He Materializes Reporter's Imaginary Sweetheart, "Mary Kennedy," Who Never Lived —Materialized "Mary" Even Promised a Kiss.

The following accounts of two seances held at the Spook House, No. 120 West Thirteenth street, by the "Rev. Dr." Hugh Moore, are the personal experiences of a World reporter who was sent to attend them:

Within one hour after I had furnished my own name and that of my dead sweetheart, Mary Kennedy, to Moore in his house, No. 120 West Thirteenth street, she was "materialized." No such person as Mary Kennedy ever existed, so far as I know. This was the afternoon of Wednesday, Feb. 13. That evening she came to me twice again, saying naively the second time that she "could not keep away from me." I was heartily congratulated by the believers and assured that it was a most unusual and "beautiful" manifestation. I had been careful to inform her at her very first manifestation that during the ten years in which she had been dead I had made a great deal of money and I wished to know from her how I should spend it. This she promised to tell me the next time she could come to me.

The Materialization of Mary.

Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 2:25, I rang the bell of the house at No. 120 West Thirteenth street. The house is one of the best type of the older New York houses of the period when West Thirteenth street was in the centre of a fashionable locality. The door was opened by a little old man, who held a bunch of money in his hand. Later in the afternoon I heard him called Brother Merritt, and was told that he was Titus Merritt, secretary, and in charge of the Spiritualist literature.

I asked him if I could enter. He said to come into the hall-way, that a meeting was to be held there. I said I knew it, and asked if I might have a word with Mr. Moore. He entered the front room, and in a moment Moore came to me, carrying a copy of the Bible.

"You remember, Mr. Moore," I said, "that I had some conversation with you Sunday night about a dead sweetheart, and you told me to come here Friday." He nodded. "I wish to explain," I went on, "why I have come before that day. Sunday night, my sweetheart, whose name was Mary Kennedy, came to me in a dream, and it was very vivid. She told me that I was on the right track at last, and urged me to take advantage of the first opportunity to come into communication with her. That is why I am here this afternoon in the strong hope that I may see her. Do you think there is any chance for that?"

"Well, that's good," said Moore. "The conditions are certainly remarkably ripe for it. Her constant presence near you must only mean that she is trying hard to come into your atmosphere and communicate with you. I don't know, but I shouldn't be surprised if we could get her for you this afternoon. It isn't usual with so early a beginner, but go in and sit down and we will do the very best we can for you."

I thanked him and said: "I feel that you should know my name, Mr. Moore. My name is George L. Sullivan." He seemed not to pay the slightest attention to this and kept walking down the room. I then paid Mr. Merritt a dollar and entered the room. I saw several women paying their money to Merritt.

When the seance began the lights were all turned on full and the door leading into the hall was locked, but the key left in the door. The beginning was a trifle delayed, due to rings at the doorbell, which were answered by Mrs. Moore. With one exception no one entered the seance room after the service was actually begun. This exception was a Mrs. Baker, whose name I learned later, as she sat next to me and talked freely with me. She was called by several of the spirits and it transpired that she was a regular attendant and known to all.

In the brief talk which followed Moore told in a conversational sort of way how it was impossible to see spirits as spirits and how to-day, as with the "affrighted" disciples of the risen Christ many people, especially beginners in Spiritualism could not reconcile the tangibility and bodily substance of materializations. This, he said, was perfectly understandable. When any one in the room spoke of seeing him, for instance, they did not see him, his ego, but the fleshly material tabernacle in which he lived. So it was when the "beautiful" manifestations came from the cabinet. What were seen, were not the spirits of the dear departed ones, but actual fleshly bodies materialized for a time, so that the spirits, the Egos, could inhabit them and enable their friends "on the earth side" to communicate with them. Else the "earth side" friends could not communicate at all, as it was impossible to talk with dematerialized spirits. He did not explain how the spirits got these bodies or how the bodies were made, but one of my neighbors told me later.

After this the organ was started again and did not cease at all with one or two exceptions during the rest of the performance.

Spirits Made in Darkness.

Moore reached over his head, turning out one by one the lights in the chandelier nearest him and directly in front of the cabinet. Then he threw the room into total darkness with a switch operated from the side of the room opposite the organ. This room was made so dark that one's hand held within half an inch of the eyes could not be seen. There were a few moments of perfect stillness. Moore interrupted it once by telling us to send out our best thoughts and assist the "doctor" all we could.

A woman at my left told me, after I had told her of my sweetheart, that she came down from Hartford to attend the seances. It later developed that her name was Marcy. She explained to me that the "doctor" whose voice we heard, was Mrs. Moore's guide or control, and that he was Dr. James, a high chemist. When I ventured to ask what functions a chemist performed, she said that he made the bodies for the spirits to inhabit, securing the material, atom for atom, and molecule for molecule from the vibrations given off by the believers. That was why, she explained, it was necessary for us to send out our best thoughts, so the vibrations could be strong and right.

In a moment the room was flooded with a green, sickly, bilious light which came from behind us, the source of it being a lantern between the two windows opening on the street, and this is also regulated by a wire from Moore's position close to the cabinet. A form soon appeared, floated toward Moore, and the name of Mrs. Beard was called. This form came through the curtains from the cabinet and was all in white, with a rather beautiful luminosity that seemed to play about it almost as the aurora leaps on a frosty night. It was a tall form, evidently a man's. It clasped Mrs. Beard about the shoulders and she retired to a dark corner with it, where they remained for some time. Other "dear ones" were reported and called friends so that three or four couples were communing at the same time.

Some of them were only "controls," my friends on either side told me—Indians and Hindoos, strong as teachers and builders—and to have a call from a guide was deemed a prize-package.

"Little Pansy" a Wonder.

This went on some time. Then a childish form floated out. "Little Pansy," murmured everybody. "She is Mr. Moore's special guide," said Mrs. Marcy on my left, "and is really a woman almost 100 years old. Sometimes she appears to us in that older form."

After a few minutes the room was again made perfectly dark, and directly at my feet the spot of light came again.

"It must be for you," whispered my neighbor. The effect was as of a light cast through a glass floor, as in Loie Fuller's fire dances. In a moment this form stood in front of me, stretched out a hand and said in a whisper: "George." I gave it my hand and was led to the further end of the room.

"I am Mary," it whispered in a voice so low I could barely distinguish it. I was overjoyed to see Mary again, and told her so. Her hands, which I clasped in mine, had the warmth of a healthy woman's hand.

She told me that it was good of me to have waited for her and that she had come to me last Sunday night in a dream—or that what I thought was a dream was really her real materialized presence speaking to me. She said I must believe and keep my mind strong so that she could come to me again, and as she got strong she could come more frequently.

I went back to my seat where I gave way to my emotions, rather loudly I fear, but with such sincerity that Mrs. Marcy and Mrs. Baker comforted me and told me that I should be happy and not feel bad. One of them said kindly and thoughtfully to the other: "Well, it's the nervous reaction—just think, he's not seen her for ten years."

The Evening Seance.

In the evening there were forty-seven paying attendants, and there were more men at this service than in the afternoon. The preliminary services were shorter, and it was about 9 o'clock when the manifestations began again. I had not long to wait. My name was called and there was Mary waiting at the fireplace. She received me with outstretched arms and told me she was sorry I felt so badly in the afternoon. I was duly impressed by this evidence of her knowledge, and she said she understood perfectly that it was the nervous reaction. Then I told her again that all the money I had made was in the bank, and that while I had spent the last few years simply trying to amuse myself and replace her memory with new scenes I had spent very little of it. I said I wanted her to spend it for me and to tell me how.

She promised that at the next seance she would tell me a plan whereby I could spend it wisely and as she would have me do. When I asked her if it were at all possible for her to be materialized in the form of some girl now living on the earth side, so I could marry her and live with her, she said no, but that she would be always near to me and come to me as often as she could.

When I asked her if she knew all I had done since she died she answered, yes, perfectly, and approved. "Do you love me just as you did ten years ago?" I asked. "Yes, indeed," she answered. "How could I help it?" This was emphasized with a very human squeeze.

Then she faded away, but within half an hour she came again, saying she could not keep away from me. I was flattered.

Promised a "Spirit" Kiss.

This time also her embrace was very human and as if meant to convince me that she was my sweetheart of the "dear old days." We talked again about my "vulgar wealth," and she spoke endearingly about it. Most of this interview was devoted to reminiscences of earlier days, nearly all of which I supplied myself. When she left me I complained against the futility of kisses filtered through a veil and she said: "Just as soon as I am stronger I will raise the veil." Then she faded away after having been with me about twelve minutes.

At this seance Mrs. Challoner, a firm believer, sat next me and told me a long list of books which I should certainly read, she said. But she seemed to be willing to save my money to the loss of Titus Merritt, for she told me that books he would charge me one dollar for I could get at Macy's for seventy-nine cents.

This meeting was terminated with a blasphemous imitation of the Lord's Supper served by Alcibiades, "our head chemist." Assisting him were two female forms, who passed grape juice in sherbert cups and fig-paste cakes. After everybody had been provided Alcibiades came around, and, dipping his finger into the grape-juice, he pressed it to the forehead of each in turn, whispering, "I bless thee in the name of Spirit and Truth."

Later, after the lights were turned up, we all turned in and finished up what was left of the cakes and the grape-juice. I again thanked the Moore's for the great happiness they had conferred on me and left the house.—New York World, March 7, 1907.

Caution to Revivalists.

A late news dispatch from Logansport, Ind., says:

"When Rev. A. A. Mainwaring, pastor of the Logansport Baptist Church, preached from the text, "Awake, thou that sleepest," he brought his fist down upon the pulpit with such force as to fracture the small bones of the hand. While suffering pain, he continued until there had been three conversions."

Souls must be saved, else preachers would gain no reward for their services, but they should abate a portion of that vehemence which culminates in broken bones.

He Went Like a King.

Theodore J. Mayer, the Large-Hearted Friend to Humanity, Passes to Spirit Life.

To the Editor:—Our mutual friend and co-worker, the staunch Spiritualist, philanthropist and man, Theodore J. Mayer, treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States, has passed from these mortal scenes of labor to the glory he has earned in the spiritual world.

In the ruling of his life by the higher spiritual mandates and obligations, he lived like a king, born to command; his dominant power was felt in every walk and affair in life that he had dealings with. Often the writer of these lines has told him that he should have been a military man, for his executive skill and his born leadership would have brought him to the front in military tactics and made him a commander of armies. "That may be," he said, "but my work is to lead and dominate as far as my ability goes, in the army of Spiritual Truth which makes for Peace instead of Combat, even though we have to resort to mental war to bring it about." He was a Warrior, yea, even a King in his bearing, and his broad and philanthropic expressions of thought for humanity; his subjects loved him and his vassals did him honor. Like a Spiritual King, the Soul dominant in the last weeks of his mortal life, sure of his conquests, and convinced of his destiny, he went into the sundown hour of the physical life. Like a King he has arisen in the glory and majesty of a quickened spirituality; in the morning of the new birth to a kingdom built up by his good deeds and his humanitarian powers.

In his last illness, two weeks before his passing, he said to me: "I have settled all my earthly affairs according to my best judgment and to help as many broad interests as I can, without being unjust to anyone. I shall try to pull through this sickness and stay here to do more for the world, but if I go now, it will be all right. I feel that I have done the best I could, and I will die game."

I said to him, "Go down like a King."

"Yes, Mrs. Longley, I will go down like a King," and he did, as none can better testify than myself.

One week before he quietly slipped away I saw him for the last time. He was very weak, but smiling and full of cheer. The interview was to me a precious one, and will be treasured as one of the sacred memories of my life. While there I conversed quietly with him on mortal and spiritual affairs. He said: "It's a hard battle, but I am fighting it." Yes, he did fight it well, and he died with the courage of a giant, ever maintaining his clear and powerful mentality till the kindly offices of physical insensibility stole upon him and eased his going.

Much must and will yet be said of our dead brother's work and life; not yet has the last service been performed over the mortal form. We have that sad, spiritual duty yet to discharge. Nearly two years ago he left a copy of the form of Funeral Rites and Bequests, issued by the N. S. A., filled out by himself, in the hands of Mr. F. A. Wood, president of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, and his wishes as expressed in this document are to be carried out to the letter. As you have requested, Mr. Francis, a stenographic copy of this service will be furnished you for The Progressive Thinker. The secretary of the National Association is to deliver the address. The body will be cremated. Mr. Albert T. Mayer, the only and beloved son of our lamented friend, is doing all in his power to carry out the wishes of his father. Further accounts of the work and benevolent enterprises of Theo. J. Mayer will be furnished you, ere long. The following from the Washington Daily Star of March 13, will give all necessary information for the present.

MARY T. LONGLEY,
N. S. A. Secretary.
Washington, D. C.

The death of Theodore J. Mayer, member of the firm of W. M. Galt & Co., and one of the most prominent business men of the District, occurred at 10 o'clock last night at his home, 214 B street southeast, after an illness of about seven weeks. Although Mr. Mayer had been confined to his residence for a protracted interval, his death was totally unexpected, and the announcement of his passing away came as a shock to his numerous business associates and friends.

The funeral services will be held at the family residence at 11 o'clock a. m., Friday, and the friends of the deceased have been invited to be present. The interment will be private.

Mr. Mayer has been actively engaged in the work of upbuilding this city and increasing its prosperity since he came here in 1866. He usually took a leading part in philanthropic effort, and was especially interested in the welfare of East Washington, in which his home was located. He was nearly sixty-one years of age. It is remarked that he retained his mental and physical vigor to a remarkable degree, and until stricken by the ailment which ended in his death was an active man of affairs. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity; a director of the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital, and also a member of the directorate of the Central National Bank, the Union Trust Company and the George Washington University. For fifteen years he had been president of the Swiss Benevolent Association, and as such is said to have "carried sunshine into many saddened homes."

Senior Member of Firm.

Since the death of Mr. William M. Galt, January 3, 1889, the firm had been composed of Mr. Theodore J. Mayer, Mr. Ralph L. Galt, the active members, and Mrs. Harriet T. Galt, widow of Wm. M. Galt. Ever since the death of Mr. Wm. M. Galt, Mr. Mayer has been the senior member of the firm. He was described as one of the self-made men of Washington.

Mr. Mayer was born in Geneva, Switzerland, in April, 1846, where he received his education in the public schools, followed by a collegiate course. He graduated in 1863. From that time until 1866 he was prominently connected with a large banking concern and commercial establishment at Fridrichshafen, Germany, first as correspondent and afterwards as bookkeeper.

In June, 1866, he came to this country, his total capital, it is said, being $12 in gold. He came to Washington, and for seven years filled the arduous position of clerk in a grocery store. His health finally broke down under the strain and he went to Europe to recuperate and regain his health.

Returning from the old world after a stay of four months he entered the establishment of W. M. Galt & Co. During his long connection with the company he was more particularly in charge of the flour department and was a widely recognized authority on all grades of flour and cereals.

Mr. Mayer married Miss Susannah Hitz, daughter of the late Florian Hitz, in September, 1876, the American centennial year. Mrs. Mayer died in 1880, and deceased never re-married. His son, Mr. Theodore Albert Mayer, who is in the real estate business, survives him, in addition to a brother, who is a citizen of Ohio.

Liberal Contributions.

Shortly before his death Mr. Mayer gave a practical illustration of the exemplification of his religion of humanity and charity by making certain munificent bequests. It is said he gave to the George Washington University extension and improvement fund upwards of $200,000, while $100,000 by his recent direction will be apportioned among the hospitals and charitable institutions of the District of Columbia.

One of the intimate friends of deceased to-day described his great interest and zeal in behalf of the George Washington University and his desire to see it become the greatest seat of learning in this country. It was added he studied the needs of the university for a long time and finally came to the decision that to erect the structures on the proposed 17th and B streets site would be a calamity to the city as well as to the university. He contended that as that site is on low territory and near the made ground of the Potomac flats considerable sickness would result among the students in the dormitories.

Plans Changed.

This so impressed him, it is said, that, through his personal magnetism, earnestness and persistency, he induced the board of trustees of the university to change its plans as to the location of the institution. He offered the trustees, without cost to them, his site at Chevy Chase Circle as the nucleus for a building site. This place contains about four acres of ground and contains several buildings, and is valued at about $168,000.

The trustees declined to accept the offer as the tract of land was deemed to be too far from the city. The Dean property was then selected and Mr. Mayer is said to have induced the owners to take $800,000 for it, which sum is said to be far below its real value. Mr. Mayer also announced that if the trustees would decide upon the Dean property he would give them his Chevy Chase holdings, to be sold and the proceeds to be applied to the extension fund.

Mr. Thomas W. Smith, an intimate friend and associate of the deceased, spoke to-day of Mr. Mayer's love for charitable work, and especially his interest in the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital.

In addition to the $20,000 he donated to this institution in the first instance when it became necessary to procure a new building for its use, he recently gave to the management of the hospital a corner lot at 8th and D streets northeast, increasing his total contribution to that institution to about $30,000. It was his habit to visit the hospital nearly every day and take a personal interest in its management and welfare, and he was especially interested in beautifying the building and grounds with flowers, etc.

The deceased was regarded as a most loyal and lovable companion and was of such a happy and jolly disposition that he at once became the life of any company he might be in.

At the time the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital was seeking new quarters Mr. Mayer gave the management of that institution valuable assistance, and when the present structure at 708 Massachusetts avenue northeast was secured he gave $20,000 toward the purchase money.

"These bequests of Mr. Mayer," said one of his friends to-day, "illustrate that he lived up to his creed, which is Abou Ben Adhem, 'Write me as one who loves his fellow-man.'"

Mr. Mayer was a member of the organization of Spiritualists who believe in psychical manifestations, it is said, and died in that faith. Some years ago he presented to that branch of Spiritualists a modern building at the corner of 6th street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast for use by their society for national headquarters.

England to the Front.

England has evidently caught the contagion of separation of church and state by late events in France. In the House of Commons, on the evening of February 27, a resolution was adopted, 198 to 90, in favor of disestablishment and disendowment of the church, both in England and Wales. A member from Ireland made the sensible remark:

"I fail to see how the continuance of the established church can be justified. The church has done the state no good."

It seems more than two-thirds of the House were equally blind, hence the majority for the separation. It is hoped the House of Lords will confirm the action of the Commons, thus allowing all churches in the great empire to rest on a common base. "Justice to all, favors to none" should be the policy of a state in its dealings with churches, as with individuals.

DRASTIC MEASURES.

A Discourse by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Chicago, March 3, 1907.

"If thy right eye offend thee pluck it out." "If thine hand offend thee cut it off and cast it from thee."

"And he took a scourge and scourged the money-changers out of the temple."

A great many people who believe in war among Christian nations, who believe in hanging people for murder, do not want to believe that Christ did this. We hope he did, and we hope he set the example to all Christendom, for it was not only a literal act of righteousness, but the symbol of casting everything unworthy from the temple of holiness. Here is a temple of worship; now if this is what is going on here, if these money-changers are here, if they are selling these doves and lambs, if they are making this place a den of thieves, tell them to depart—make them go.

That law of nature and of God, the law of "overcoming evil with good," is the beginning at the roots of evil; and in order to begin at the roots whatever is unworthy or anything that you do not wish to grow must be removed, overgrown or outgrown by that which is better. The farmer takes two ways to eradicate an obnoxious weed—he sows the land with something that is rapid-growing and that will overcome the weed, as grass, or something like that; if that will not do it he plows up the soil and burns it off and then sows the seed anew. That farmer or horticulturist who neglects his orchards or vineyards will find there destructive worms or insects and he must either burn them off, or cut off the obnoxious branches or the whole orchard will be overrun. He might have prevented it by earlier noticing the larvae or germs; if he did not do that he must cut the branches off.

Every human life meets these things, not only physically, but morally and mentally. The story about the lion is so good: This savage beast that is called the king of terrors of all the forest, but which is really not as savage as many human beings—when the thorn is in his foot. Perhaps you have seen the beautiful painting, where the hunter with great tenderness is removing the thorn from the foot of the lion, the operation hurting, of course, but in the expression of the animal's countenance there is almost, nay! more than, human gratitude. So this part of surgery that hurts to cure is valuable; the only mistake is, many of the surgeons want to cut you all to pieces so there is not enough left to get well. But the principle is right, that if you have not been able to prevent this thing, if you have not lived right, if you do not know the lines of health, then when something comes that must be removed in order for your better expression, let it be removed. If materia medica will not do it, surgery sometimes will. Surgery has perhaps this advantage, that if it does not help you it almost always kills you, and then you are set free.

Our plan of removing objectionable things is not only the plan of nature, but of the moral law. Many people say, "Why this is contradictory, when we are told to overcome these things with good, and then are told to remove them." But the overcoming of evil with good is not only a slow process, but it must also be accompanied with drastic measures. People do not want to hear about things that are good sometimes. They do not want to hear about changes, even if they are for their physical well-being. The smoker says, "I will smoke my cigars, I will smoke all my life even if I think it will shorten my life ten years." But what about the cancer in his throat? That has to be cut out. He has taken his choice. So with moral delinquencies; individuals, people, nations arrive at a culmination.

One culmination is war. Now there are thousands and thousands of very high-minded people who are endeavoring to establish "universal peace." There are those who are advising the "disarmament of nations." Of course, there is no consistency in any Christian nation having a standing army; there is no consistency in any Christian nation having a navy. But that which does occur is, that these are not Christian nations, they are not imbued with the spirit of Christ in the beginning. They began largely by violence and diplomacy and deception, taking the vantage ground over primitive nations, and they reaped the reward of riches for the bearing forward of their wars of conquest.

When the time comes that the few oppress the many, that the titles, the crowns and wealth oppress the multitude, war is just as inevitable as an explosion in a mine when the air shaft has been stopped up, and the "fire-damp" or foul gases produce an explosion. The suppression of human rights, of human liberty, of human conscience must lead to the inevitable explosion. Now we do not want to stop that explosion at all, but we want to stop the cause of it; we want shafts to be sunk every few feet in the mines that are under ground, so that the stoppage in one place will not produce danger in another place. We want fresh air introduced all along the lines, in the slums in the crowded cities, not in one place or another where it is convenient for local politics; we want pure air introduced into the political condition of the nation. Of course, it is rather dangerous when people have not had it for a good while. But it will do them good in the end. There is need of it.

And this purifying, purging process must come one way or another. The only condition is that the things that are laid bare are ill-smelling, but clear them out, clear them out! During the late exposition in St. Louis (notwithstanding the sneers of Chicago, St. Louis is a beautiful spot for a thing of this kind), every morning that summer the streets of St. Louis were flooded with at least one foot of water, of running water, to cleanse and purify the streets. What do you suppose would happen to Chicago if something like that was done here? Why, the dust, vermin, insects and people would think a new deluge had come. If you should awaken some morning and find the streets of Chicago actually clean you would think the millennium had come. But the time will come when there will be no city official elected, no city council permitted to act that does not pledge themselves that there will be clean streets in Chicago.

There is no knowing how it will come. We do not want to predict. But there is not one millionth part of the filth in the streets that there is in the politics of the city. Of course there must be drastic measures to wipe that out. Who is going to do it? You do not want to. You are too busy; you do not want to soil your hands, and you are afraid of the results to your business, or something else that you are interested in. Nobody wants to undertake it.

Do you suppose there will be a modern Hercules who will go to Congress (not as John Morrissey did), but for the purpose of cleaning out the politics of the nation? Sometime there will be. There will be just such lives in your city council, in your politics, in your state politics, in your churches and in your society.

Think of the way the citizen is treated; that is with reference to criminals and crime. Somebody is killed, something is stolen, United States treasury is robbed (of course when citizens have been robbed it does not matter so much, but the United States treasury has been robbed) there are men who are legally empowered to suspect people, whether they are guilty or not, even to arrest those people, and in order to prove their suspicions they are afforded every means and the aid of the government to persecute the supposed criminal to the verge, nay! beyond the verge of insanity. You talk about the "rack," the "torture" and the "guillotine" of past ages!—do you suppose there ever was anything more infamous than the so-called "third degree"? Under its strain, people who are weak and unbalanced would confess to anything rather than be tortured in that way. But so long as it carries out the theory, why not this man as well as another?

When people realize what they are doing they will not intrust the lives, the sanity and the morality of their people in such hands. But the magistrates, those who come in contact with humanity should be softened, then you would have better judgments and decisions. You know of plenty of people who think they are guilty of all the things they read in the newspapers, which is the result of nervous excitement and psychological strain. Talk about the "freedom of the press"; if ever there was anything in the world that needs to be regulated, it is the unbridled license of the American press. You cannot have a newspaper in your house if you respect the innocence of your children. And this is called liberty!

There comes a time when that which is called liberty is so far removed from it that it becomes one of those excrescences that have to be removed.

But this is not only the case with those who administer the laws, and are supposed to keep the peace of your city, but it is true, eminently and uncontrovertibly of the legal profession. The privileges of the lawyers in the courts are supposed to be regulated by law, and by the judge who is presiding. But in all the history of municipal and legal corruption and of the mal-administration of justice, has there been any such a period of time when lawyers, by hook or crook, by fair means or foul, have had such preposterous privileges as at the present moment? And if this is true of lawyers, it is also true of prosecuting attorneys and of magistrates. We do not know how you feel, but we hope you feel exactly what we are going to say now: That the time will come in the history of morality, of humanity, of justice, of true equity when there could not live in any community so dastardly a thing as the prosecution that is now going on in New York. We do not need to speak the name, but that kind of an excrescence that flourishes upon the so-called civilization of the nation should be wiped out, and will be by a tidal wave of such indignation as has never swept over a community.

"Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more." "And as He spoke He stooped and wrote upon the sands." "Let him among you that is without sin first cast the stone." "And He wrote," say the early fathers of the church, "the sin that was uppermost in each of the lives of those condemning her." But the Master is not here to write, the judge is not here to enforce it, and so these monsters of so-called law are spreading before the world the great infamy of their moral natures. So that which is highest and best in human nature will rise for very humanity's sake to put it out of the way. If you can, do it, by the ballot box; but if you do not it will come in another way. We shall not be responsible for it, we only tell you it will come. Because it comes when a nation claiming to be the flowering out of civilization and society, claiming to be the highest and best, like that of America and Great Britain, cannot produce that sort of monstrosity without that which is highest and best rising to protest against it. And there will be Drastic Measures and you will feel them, everyone will feel them in this purging and purifying process that is going on in the world to-day. Of course, there will be periods of disturbance, periods of trials, there will be the stress and strain, perhaps, greater than any that have ever been known.

It is a wonderful thing that great moral revolutions can take place, oftentimes, without bloodshed. It will be a wonderful thing if there can arise within the midst of this beginning of the twentieth century such a moral force as shall sweep over the community, not only wiping out the sin which this great exposure exhibits, but wipe out the exposers root and branch. This deadly upas tree that saps the vitality and foundation of your highest and holiest impulses and aspirations. When this is wiped out you will come face to face with the great integrity of that divine law that regulates, and must regulate, man and woman to the same exalted standard of morality. There will be no two interpretations of the law, one for the rich and one for the poor, there will be no two interpretations of the law, one for man and one for woman. The gilded palace doors will no sooner open for the libertine than they will open for the young girl, his victim. There will come into the consideration of social life the wonderful proposition, that all lives are equal in God's love, and all are equally responsible in the light of His kingdom.

Of course it is so. But there is a tradition, that that which passes under the name of "law," "law-makers," and "law executors" is in a measure sacred. But since when has it ever been justifiable that there shall be a mal-administration of law which has such tradition that corruption gives use and custom to can go on and on forever? and where does it abide? In what book of laws is it found? We know that there is such a thing as the impeaching of an official. There is such a thing as the dismissing of an official. There is such a thing as the changing of the statutes. That indeed would be a helpless condition of bondage if every act of any official were held to be just and true merely because of the official position.

There will be a re-awakening of the public conscience. You will read again this letter of manhood and womanhood imprinted and stamped in your own lives and you will grow to understand that neither religion nor politics can cover the enormity of the things that are done in their names. You will realize that out of this new growth and new humanity there will come greater loving kindness, and a greater preventive of all these ills, and that the moral pleasure is greater than any mere external pleasure. There must be the awakening to the application of the Golden Rule; man's conscience must be awakened before he shall wish to "do unto others as he would have them do unto him." Because if a man is in such a position as that which we have named and his conscience is suddenly awakened, would he not ask you to scourge him off the face of the earth? You scold yourselves for small daily offences. You would not allow your friends to tell you what you tell yourselves in the privacy of your own conversation with yourselves. You would not allow your neighbor or friend to call you a fool, yet you call yourselves this very often. So when a man in such a position becomes suddenly aroused to his own condition, do you not suppose he would call upon the mountains, the rocks and all things to fall upon him to hide him from the face of his fellow-man?

So if there is any pain, get rid of the disease in this temple of the spirit, overcome this great moral imperfection, and begin with the individual; by not having any two laws, one for your neighbor and one for yourself; by not having two laws, one for yourself and one for your wife; one for yourself and one for your sister. Begin by insisting that there shall be the same law through and through, in the community, in the church and in the state, and lo! there will be a renovation.

This spring every housekeeper and all the landlords will be busy turning the rest of mankind out of doors to "clean house," and the men will have to go wherever they can, to the restaurants, clubs or whatever. But there is a state of house-cleaning and repairing that no one knows when it is done; it is done perfectly, it is done all the time. The house never needs to be thoroughly and actually overturned. That is "good housekeeping." But nature does not always do it this latter way; there comes a time when she has to have a general upheaval of things, so there are earthquakes, storms and tornadoes. But these are adaptations largely to the human state. We often think there would be no venomous serpents, no wild beasts—poor beasts, it is too bad to compare them to human beings—there would be none of these ravaging things if it was not for the state of human beings. Think of a "tiger hunt" for pleasure! Think of going out on the plains and killing off the buffaloes just for the pleasure of going home and telling of it. Men have that within them that breeds all these tigers, serpents and venomous things.

When the steps are taken that indicate that people have outgrown tiger-shooting and things of that kind; when the steps are taken that enable people to live out of doors for wholesome human exercise without taking pleasure in killing something, then all this hunting for pleasure, or "sport," all this hunting of doves in the human form, or this seeking out for personal enjoyment will cease.

Man was placed in charge of the earth, and the man and woman were expelled from paradise because of their first offending. As said before the woman should not have eaten the fruit, but the fruit was ripe, she took it and in the kindness of her heart gave it to Adam. But what did he do when called to account. "The woman gave it to me and I did eat." This has been the way ever since. It is said of lawyers, doctors and professors: "Oh, what a pity! that such a good man has fallen; there must have been a woman in the case." Of course there was a woman. Ever since the nursery rhyme of Jack and Gill who started up the hill together. It was Jack that fell down. Of course the woman, having no other choice, had to fall down too. It is together in shadow and light, in season and out of it. In the high, sanctified and reconstructed state, whatever be the conditions of falling away from each other, the blaming of each other does not remedy it. Inate in human life equal elements of goodness abide. When both are brought face to face, or before the same bar of moral justice the life that tempers justice with mercy will come to both when both are ready.

Now having said this, if the earthquakes and the tornadoes come that accompany this great Glacial cycle and your climates change, and your cities are blotted out, and portions of buried continents are uplifted, if all this can come in the regulation of the geography of the earth, there also, will come still greater throes, more wonderful upheavals and larger changes in the structure of human society; and the new Eden will have a woman who is not so easily tempted, and a man who is not so cowardly as to deny his own shortcomings. The new Eden will have those who love, truly, thoroughly and perfectly accept the light of that love, and together make up the beginning of the restoration of the Eden-time that is for the future, not the past, when Eros comes again to rule the light of Love and Truth; and Infinite Wisdom shall so abide that behind no corrupt legislature, no scheming of the political "bosses," nothing that constitutes the great whirl and machinery of human selfishness can abide, but only the light of that true self-government that means the uplifting and strengthening of the weak, that means the equality of the strong, that means the preparing of the way for the Lord of Hosts who comes to dwell among the people of Earth whenever they are ready.

"The Great Work."

Lyman C. Howe Makes Sturdy Reply to Some Critics.

Wm. Omer Butler, replying to my suggestion that "if the claims of the Great School are entirely true, it seems to me it should have been possible and easy to have settled the question of a future life for every intelligent person in the world centuries ago," says: "The objection * * * might be raised with even greater force against Spiritualism."

NO! A thousand times NO! Spiritualism, as an incipient science, demonstrating by innumerable facts, establishing communication by means of mediumship, and challenging scientific investigation, is not yet sixty years old. It is not claimed that all of its phenomena are conclusive. Mediumship is not yet perfectly developed or understood; and many manifestations are mystifying. But it has in sixty years settled the age-long question to the satisfaction of millions, who could find it nowhere else.

Let it have 60,000 years of growth, and it would probably settle all doubts for all rational people.

The "Great School," it is claimed, has had ages of opportunity, and its masters claim to be as familiar with the spirit world, and its denizens, as they are with this world, and its people; and that this knowledge has been familiar to them for many ages past. Now it seems to me that if this claim is entirely true, the Great School should have been able to produce such positive proof of life after physical death, as to convince and satisfy all intelligent people, and that, too, without their having the special experience of seeing, hearing, and conversing freely with excarnate humanity, at any time, at will. The objection does not apply to Spiritualism in any degree or any sense.

Again Mr. Butler asks, in reference to my criticism of the assumed indolence of human nature, "Does the author assert, or in any way imply, that mankind are habitually indolent?" I think he does. True, in the passage referred to, he is speaking of "intellectual inertia," but the whole trend of his reasoning shows an inclusive meaning—more defined in intellectual efforts than in physical perhaps; but general constitutional laziness seems to dominate the author's language in all. I think my criticism was consistent with the author's words.

Referring to my statement, "Light may extinguish light and produce darkness," Mr. Butler says: "Is it not evident that that is just what the author is speaking of—'ordinary experience,' or rather ordinary normal light, and of such it not only may be, but invariably is true." "If we confine ourselves to this subject, the author's subject, we will probably find that his statements are true in every particular; and that the analogy fails in no point." * * * "As is well-known, ordinary light is not simple in its composition, but is the result of a mixture of colors." "It is true, that between two of these component parts, under certain conditions, a conflict may be instituted, and the one made to destroy or neutralize the other." "But under no circumstances is this true of normal light (the only kind in question) taken in its entirety and composed according to nature's formula." "Such light may be increased infinitely, for aught we know, without introducing a destructive or neutralizing principle." "The analogy between Light and Truth will be found to hold good to the last detail."

Mr. Butler may have sources of knowledge that are out of my reach. He may have made discoveries in the origin and nature of light of which I know nothing. But I am glad he can give us the assurance that the analogy between light and truth will hold good to the last detail. My source of information is mostly physical science, as interpreted by its masters. The wave theory of light is enforced by many strong facts, and the fact that "By adding light to light we can produce darkness," is the most conclusive. Mr. Butler speaks of light as a compound. But I know of no physicist who regards light as a chemical compound, or as a substance at all. It is credited to motions in the ether; and the various colors that impress our optics are due to the wave lengths, and rapidity of the motions. It requires no exceptional kind of light to produce the phenomena of light extinguishing light and producing darkness. The only essential is to so direct one system of waves as to follow another system at a specific distance. Good, honest sunlight, electric light, or lamp light, or even the pious, old-fashioned prayer-meeting tallow dip; all obey the same law.

Mr. Butler tells us that: "As is well known, ordinary light is not simple in its composition, but is the result of a mixture of colors!"

If such a thing is "well known" to Mr. Butler, I would be interested if he would tell us how it became known, and to whom it was revealed. I understand that color is a property of light. Prof. Tyndall was pretty good authority, and he said: "The color of light depends on the number of ethereal waves which strike the eye in a second." (Light and electricity, page 66.) Instead of light being "The result of a mixture of colors," all color is a result of light. All around us the phenomenon of light extinguishing light may be, and probably is, transpiring; but in an unlimited field, there are so many billions of systems of waves constantly touching each other, that the extinguishment of one system, by the coincidence of sinus in another system is not observed except under such condition as exclude the classes that do not so coincide. I know nothing of light "composed according to nature's formula." As I understand it there is no composition requiring a formula. Light is supposed to be due to ether waves, initiated by the vibration of atoms, and each class of atoms determines its own wave lengths in the ether, and determines the color. Inasmuch as the author says, without reserve or qualification, that: "The presence of one light does not extinguish another light;" and immediately follows it with this: "In like manner one truth does not extinguish, nor in any manner conflict with another truth," I think my criticism is valid, and is not disturbed by Mr. Butler's analysis.

If, as it is said, the author "does not ask anyone to accept him as final authority, but invites each one interested to become the final authority himself, to make the demonstration and final settlement for himself," he surely cannot expect one in a million to respond; for the difficulties he presents, and the discipline indispensable for every one who is to "make the demonstration" are positively prohibitory to all but a very limited number of the elect. Hence no "demonstration" is possible for the great, needy, hungry world, and the millions must continue to grope in outer darkness. "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

By its own showing the "Great School" is not qualified to meet the demand of the world on the question of a future life. As society is constituted, it cannot demonstrate to the anxious millions. At best it can only reach a very select few. But while it is preparing to begin a cosmopolitan work, that may show fruits in a million years, Spiritualism can reach the people, and carry conviction, and comfort to all—or nearly all—who seek it with honest purpose and receptive minds, even in the present generation. It can, and does, demonstrate. It has convinced many thousands of obstinate intellectual skeptics, and proven itself the one supreme means by which the millions can be convinced, comforted and blessed.

A few words in response to the "Student." Of course I "would not on account of the elusiveness of the N-ray have us deny all of our other experiences with electricity." Neither would I, because the author of the Great Work makes some mistakes, deny the value of the many truths he utters. The use of the N-ray problem was not for the purpose of proving, or disproving, the existence of the ray, but to illustrate the uncertainty and unreliability of even personal experience in settling scientific questions. The author of "The Great Work" seems to regard personal experience as the key to the whole problem of a post-physical life; and it evidently is an indispensable factor. But the experience of others, and the testimony of witnesses, count for something, while the N-ray mystery, with many others shows that personal experience may deceive us. All that is true and helpful in the book, and in the teachings of the "Great School" intelligent Spiritualists will be glad to profit by as soon as they know it is true. But the teachings we know are not true we would eliminate, before we endorse either the book or the school.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

EXCELLENT PHENOMENA.

A Spirit Extracts a Tooth Without Causing the Least Pain.

To the Editor:—As my hobby has been spirit phenomena for the last fifty years, I will present your readers with some of my experiences in that line. Some thirty-five years ago I had seances in my home in Kansas, and one evening we were getting independent spirit writing on the table in the dark, I asked, "Can spirits make the hand visible that is doing the writing?" Immediately the thumb and two fingers that held the pencil appeared like illuminated wax fingers. There were five persons present, and all saw it.

We used to have materialization, but always in the dark, so one night I made up my mind to see the spirit, if possible, and while the same was ringing a bell and I was playing on the violin, I induced the control to get as far from those who were sitting at the table as possible; then I struck a light, and I saw the spirit glide, as it were, and pass into a young man at the table. The others saw it also.

About thirteen years ago I heard of a lady in Wisconsin who had spirit pictures, and I decided to go and see them. When I met her I told her my business, and she willingly produced the pictures for my inspection. She had three; the first had six male faces with numerous hands. She recognized only one face, her husband who was killed by a boiler explosion; the next had a full size lady's face in the center with numerous hands on the plate; the next had a number of faces and hands.

I then asked her how she happened to get the pictures? She said she went to get her photo, as anyone else would; but when the plate was developed, as she was not on it, the photographer told her to come again. After waiting a few weeks she went again, but her picture did not show up, and the third time was a failure. She then prayed that the spirits would leave her, for at that time she could not sleep in a dark room. Eventually they began to leave her, and after about six months, she got a photo with no sign of any spirits on it.

Another incident I will mention. A little girl about 10 or 12 years old, gifted with a controlling spirit, was living once where I boarded. When I came home one evening she told me she had a horrible toothache, and asked me what I could do to help her. I told her to ask her spirit friend to do so. The idea made her laugh, but I persuaded her to get the slate. The control directed her to take hold of the tooth with her finger and thumb, and step out into the darkness. She did so, and in less than six seconds came in, and had the tooth in her hand. She said that when I closed the door, she got so frightened she tried to let go of her tooth, but could not, and that she never felt any pain when it came out. This all happened inside of ten minutes. This girl could thread a needle blindfolded, or read a closed book, and do many other wonderful things.

About three years ago I experimented with spirit photography. I got spirit pictures with four different sensitives, and not one of them was a Spiritualist or knew anything about Spiritualism. I believe that any medium who can get the raps or table movement can with due patience get spirit photos of their departed friends. As a matter of course I have spoiled a great many plates. For instance, one evening I had arranged to take a flash-light picture with a boy medium sixteen years old. We were all alone in the house. I told the spirits to make three loud raps when they were ready, but instead of the raps they made three bright flashes above the boy's head. Then I struck the flash-light, and in developing the plate it turned black. We tried it again, with the same result; then it occurred to me that the spirit lights did the mischief; so the third time we asked the spirits to rap, and not make any lights; then we got a picture of a girl standing beside the medium. But it is better to take them in mid-day, and the brighter the day the better. We all know there have been fake spirit photographers, but I want to impress all honest mediums with the knowledge that the genuine is within their reach, and I feel confident that in a few years from now, spirit photography will take first rank among the wonders of spiritual science.

J. M. JORDAN.

Minneapolis, Minn.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published; to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"Immortality, its Naturalness, its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Feebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D. Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price 10 cents

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

Restores Eyesight

Spectacles Can Be Abandoned

"Actina," a Wonderful Discovery That Cures Afflictions of the Eye and Ear Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for the cure of most forms of disease, for a new system of treating afflictions of the eye has been discovered whereby all torturous methods are eliminated. There is no risk or experimenting, as hundreds of people have been cured of failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye through this grand discovery, when specialists, they state, termed the cases incurable.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, special agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Having used Actina for several years, I cheerfully recommend it for the cure of eye, ear and throat affections. It cured my mother, of cataracts."

Susan Cardwell, Lincoln, Kan., writes, "I am 73 years old. I was so blind I could only know persons by their voices. After using Actina I can now thread a needle without glasses."

Rev. W. C. Goodwin, Moline, Kan., writes: "My honest opinion of Actina is that it is one of the most marvelous discoveries of the age. It cured my eyes, and cured my wife of asthma."

Hundreds of other testimonials will be sent on application. "Actina" is purely a home treatment and self-administered by the patient, and is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept 342B, 811-813 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive absolutely free a valuable book, Professor Wilson's Treatise on the Eye and on Disease.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

904

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

By Lilian Whiting,

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music-Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.
LOVES OF THE POETS. The Prefigured Friend; Vita Nuova; "One Day, My Siren."
IN THAT NEW WORLD. Pisa and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.
ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.
LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.

For Sale at this office.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising;

Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

The Poetical and Prose Works —BY— ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created. With portrait of author. Price $1.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

The Universe By L. M. Rose. This booklet contains 71 pages of explanation regarding force; the beginning of creation; what matter is; what life is; immortality; psychic science; the soul of things; and ends with a poem entitled "Song of Psyche," by Emma Nickerson-Warne. Price 25 cents.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK. Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Mrs. L. A. Hall writes from Leominster, Mass.: "Through the efforts of the writer, a veteran Spiritualist, and the assistance of a few friends who have the interest of our cause at heart, on Feb. 28, in G. A. R. Hall, we held a Spiritualist meeting, procuring the services of Miss Helen M. Putney of Lowell, Mass. The meeting was opened promptly at 8 o'clock. E. R. Stuart presided. After the singing, the reading of a poem and invocation, Fred Thompson rendered a beautiful solo, 'The Homeland.' The medium delivered a short address and gave many beautiful messages that were readily recognized, awakening the hearts of the people to a deeper interest in the truth. There was a large attendance, and so much interest manifested we are in hopes to have more meetings in the near future."

Adelle A. Hutchins writes from Burlington, Vt.: "My mother, Mrs. L. A. Hutchins, celebrated her 90th birthday last Saturday. She has not worn spectacles for two years; her sight and hearing are remarkably good, and all of her faculties are fine. Her children in spirit life sent a written message they would be with her on her birthday and bring presents. She is in excellent health; takes walks of two blocks without a cane. She enjoys reading The Progressive Thinker every week. She has been a Spiritualist since the Rochester rappings."

Mrs. A. A. Averill writes from Lynn, Mass.: "The work of the Lynn Spiritualists Association, under the direction of President H. C. Chase, has made steady progress since the last report. We have had with us, Mrs. C. Fannie Allyn, Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, Mrs. S. C. Cunningham, Thomas Cross, Mrs. Abbie Atwood, Mrs. M. A. Jacobs and R. A. Macurda, all of whom have rendered good service. Since the holidays have been over, the meetings have been well attended, and the attendance is increasing. The local mediums have done grand work in assisting with circles, both on Sunday afternoons and Wednesdays. Concerts have preceded the evening service each Sunday, with first-class musicians and vocalists. The program for the remainder of the season is as follows: March 17, J. S. Scarlett; 24, Mrs. Abbie Atwood; 31, anniversary service, with a large array of talent; April 7, Mrs. S. C. Cunningham; 14, Prof. Macurda; 21, Thomas Cross; 28, Mrs. A. J. Pettengill; May 5, Mrs. Kate M. Ham; 12, Mrs. Cunningham; 19, Mrs. Jacobs; 26, Mrs. Ham. The numerous friends of Doctor and Mrs. Caird are much pleased to read the reports in your paper of the success of the First Society of the Fraternal Order. Business will never get very dull as long as they are at the head. We wish for them a full measure of prosperity."

A. C. Doane writes: "I have just finished reading the supposed Unknown Life of Jesus Christ, by Notovitch. I don't know Notovitch, neither do I know Jesus Christ, the Christian's savior; neither do I know the Christian's angry God, who punishes the sinner eternally in hell, because he doesn't believe in the atoning blood of his only son; but this I do know by experience: If I transgress nature's divine laws, physically, morally or spiritually, I have to pay the penalty."

Mrs. Jessie F. Fallon, secretary, writes from Montpelier, Vt.: "The Montpelier (Vt.) Spiritualist Association met at E. J. Fallon's, Feb. 27, for their annual meeting, and elected the following officers: President, E. J. Fallon; vice-president, Dr. P. L. Templeton; secretary, Mrs. Jessie F. Fallon; treasurer, Lizzie Childs; auditor, J. G. Scribner; managers, Mrs. Dell Scott, Lizzie Childs, and Amelia Wakefield. Four new members were accepted. Then came the reading of the will of Mrs. Susan B. Shumway, who left five hundred dollars in trust for the benefit of the society."

Mrs. S. A. Ziegler writes from Indianapolis, Ind.: "Spiritualism in Indianapolis never had such a lasting boom, with five well advertised Sunday night meetings, all having full and sometimes crowded houses, besides the many afternoon and night meetings unadvertised, all doing a good work. Sister Throndsen, with her heart to heart talks and convincing messages, is making converts as well as causing skeptics to think. Our lyceum! Well, I cannot find words to tell you of the success we are having in every way with conductors, workers and children; so don't you think the sun is beginning to shine for us?"

Wilson Fish, M. D., writes: "The cause of Spiritualism in Detroit is advancing as never before. There is an ever-increasing interest manifested and thinking people are rapidly being convinced of the grand truths of spirit return and spirit communion. The Earnest Workers Spiritual Society is ably officered and their hall at 333 Michigan avenue is filled to overflowing on Sunday evenings. The pastor and president, Rev. Mary Stein, is an excellent speaker and test medium, and has proven her worth by her able leadership. The kindness of her heart wins all who come in contact with her. The society was favored on Feb. 24, by an address by Rev. Amanda Coffman of Grand Rapids. The hall was packed and the speaker electrified her audience by her eloquence, the cogency of her logic and by the inspired truths she expressed. They were truly like apples of gold in pictures of silver to the members of her large and intelligent audience. She has many friends in Detroit who will always welcome her whenever she may pass this way. We feel it a duty and pleasure to commend Mrs. Coffman as an inspirational speaker and test medium of the very highest order and also for her kindly, sweet, humanitarian disposition and purity of life in thought, word and deed. These are qualities needed in every public advocate of spiritual truth in order that conviction may follow the uttered word."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

In answer to a correspondent we will say that the address of Mrs. Sara C. Scovell, the lecturer, is Galena, Kansas.

Correspondent writes: "The Psychic Research Society of Rockford, Ill., had a very good meeting on the evening of March 10, with more than an average attendance. Music on the piano, led by Dr. Booth, was followed by a brief address by Mrs. L. W. King. Mrs. K. speaks under spirit control, and her words are always instructive and in place. As a home member of the society, and a conscientious worker in the great field of truth, she is destined to become prominent as a public speaker and probably message bearer. Mrs. Alice Sexsmith of Chicago, followed Mrs. King with an excellent address, which was well-timed and adapted to the needs of the society. Then music and messages from the unseen, all of which were recognized by those to whom they were addressed. The lady was applauded when she promised to visit the society again. Mrs. Weaver is expected to occupy the Research Society platform on the evening of the 17th."

The Spiritualist society over which Mr. Blinn presides as pastor, at Norwich, Ct., had great success in the presentation of a two-act drama, "Above the Clouds." The Bulletin of that city says: "Not often has a better amateur production been seen in this city than delighted a packed house at the Spiritual academy on Thursday evening, when members of the society, assisted by others, presented the two-act drama 'Above the Clouds.' The stage settings were complete in every detail, with special scenery built under the direction of Charles E. Case, and painted by him, assisted by Dr. Clarence E. Capron. The music used was all arranged especially by musical director Charles A. Dowsett, who at the piano, with Mrs. Dowsett, violinist, added much to the success of the production. In unfolding the tale of villainy thwarted and a riven family happily united, varied with numerous pretty little love scenes and comedy elements as side dishes, abundant opportunity was offered and convincingly accepted for each of the cast to prove histrionic ability. Mr. Case's dramatic passages were among the strongest parts of the play and were easily matched by the finished work of Mr. Nirom as the villain. Miss Leopold made a pretty heroine, and Mrs. Burdick portrayed well the injured woman, while the coquetry of Mrs. Harris with her two suitors, admirably represented by Mr. Pratt and Mr. Mowry, was one of the hits. Dr. Capron drew a laugh at every sentence and Miss Blackstone had a part which she filled to a nicety. Mr. Blinn and Mr. Carroll were likewise favorites in the general praise bestowed. During the evening home-made candy was sold by Mrs. A. P. Blinn and Miss Elsie Bogue, and between the acts Dr. Capron sang to loud applause."

R. G. Lee writes from Headrick, Okla.: "We wish to say through your columns that complete arrangements have been made for a six-days' camp debate to take place at Headrick, Oklahoma, between our John W. Ring and Rev. J. W. Chism, Christian evangelist, of Denton Texas. This will be advertised in all the Christian papers, and promises to be well attended, especially by the orthodox, thereby giving us an opportunity to sow the seeds of the everlasting gospel of Spiritualism on ground that has previously been occupied only by the insipid weeds of tradition. It is sincerely hoped that Mr. Ring may accomplish a good work in this undertaking, and he desires some good medium or mediums to assist and prove the statements made. Each side will hold alternating night services aside from the debate, which will be in day-time only; so it can be seen that we will have about all the features of a camp with the debate to draw the people together. Camping ground will be free to all. Bring your own outfit and come to hear it all."

Miss Ada M. Came, secretary, writes: "The Cambridge (Mass.) Spiritual Industrial Society held its regular meeting, Friday, March 8, in Cambridge Lower Hall, 631 Mass. ave. Mrs. Katie Ham was the message bearer, and also gave a very fine lecture. She is officiating at Ayer's Temple in Boston, Sunday evenings during the month of March. She will be with the Cambridge society March 22."

Mrs. Ruth McMenamin writes from Buffalo, N. Y.: "I have just returned home from a two months' cruise through Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. While passing through Delaware, an angel friend asked me to visit our esteemed friend, Samuel L. Forbes of Wilmington. On my arrival I found him quite ill. I knew then why I had been called. Brother Forbes is well known among Spiritualists, having entertained for weeks at a time many well known in our ranks. I will kindly ask all Spiritualists to devote three minutes' silent thought for the return to health of our brother. I sat with him six days, and when I left I found him much improved, but still quite ill. Friends let us all with one accord give to our brother the strength he needs, and I know the angel world will bless each and every one for their kind thought."

Mrs. C. H. Mathews of 319 East High street, New Philadelphia, Ohio, desires the address of Helen Stuart-Richings, the lecturer.

Carrie L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass.: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid met as usual, with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Alibe in the chair. A very pleasant meeting was held; those taking part were Mrs. Alice S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie C. Mason, Mrs. S. C. Cuningham, Mrs. Kate R. Stiles and Mrs. Woodhall. Mrs. Hall sang several selections. Miss Edna May Slate sang two fine selections. This young lady has a very fine voice, and undoubtedly has a musical future before her. Next Friday meeting will be held as usual. Friday, the 29th, will be anniversary day, and everyone is expected to be present upon that occasion. The following talent will be present: Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie C. Mason, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Mrs. N. J. Willis, Mr. Wiggin, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Stiles, Mrs. Whitlock, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Belcher, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. M. J. Butler, Mrs. Maude Litch, Mrs. Whall. Good music throughout the day; dinner and supper served at the hall. Be sure and come. Meeting, morning, afternoon and evening."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Mrs. Geo. Williams writes: "Frank T. Ripley is drawing crowded houses every Sunday at the Spiritualist Temple of Cleveland, Ohio. His lectures are good and messages fine; also each Thursday evening large audiences are in attendance to get answers from questions they write on paper at home, the answers being perfectly satisfactory. There will be a supper served on Saturday evening, March 23, given by Mrs. Bloomfield in behalf of the Temple Fund. A large crowd is expected."

Laura L. Crawford writes from Detroit, Mich.: "Sunday evening, March 10, the First Church of the Soul, 46 Grand River avenue, had the pleasure of listening to an inspired lecture by Mrs. Georgiana Ripley of Toronto, Canada, Mrs. Ripley voicing the messages. They were well recognized. The hall was crowded to its utmost. To all wishing a good speaker and message mediums, we can heartily recommend them."

Erin Mary Chassee writes from Seattle, Wash.: "I would like to have you correct through your paper a wrong impression that has been circulated here in the state of Washington. It has been reported that I have given up my work, have, indeed, gone out of Spiritualism. It is a mistake, and as it has made a great deal of misunderstanding I would like to be set right. I have never given up my work, only in case of illness for a few weeks. I am a missionary. I am ready to respond to calls in any part of Washington, and I do not set a price on my work, only asking expenses, and will accept free-will offerings. My whole soul is in my work and money cannot pay for the effort. I will respond to a call from any society in need of a worker. I can make temporary or permanent arrangements for any work. Address me at No. 2238 Gilman avenue, Seattle, Wash."

Ferd C. Sumner writes: "The services of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists were held as usual Sunday, March 10, in Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street. Mrs. Briggs, popular with so many because of her spirituality, gave an address made up from questions from the congregation. Our platform message mediums were successful in reading quite a number of sealed letters which gave general satisfaction. Mediums from every part of the city come and take part in the circles at 4 o'clock, and many are reached in this form. Our supper committee is as popular as ever and deserve all the praise they receive. On this occasion we were treated to an old-fashioned 'Dutch supper,' with sauer kraut, etc., with all the necessary trimmings, and it was immensely enjoyed. Our song service and concerts are being popularized by the additions of new hymns and voices which make an attractive program. Bro. Thos. Seeley Warner was our speaker for the evening, and we enjoyed listening to the words of advice as they were timely and indicative of high inspiration. His address was brief and at its conclusion messages were given by Sister Lichtig and Bro. Chas. A. Thompson, their guides surprising many by the accuracy of detail. Geo. B. Warne, M. D., speaks for us on Sunday, March 24. We call your attention again to our coming celebration of the 59th anniversary, popularly known as the Spiritualist Easter, March 31. One of the features will be an inspirational invocation by three of Chicago's youngest and brightest mediums, Miss Helen Harvey, Winifred Thompson and Grace Kaiser, to commemorate the three Fox sisters. We note with pleasure that several of our platform mediums are filling engagements in neighboring cities. All who are advertised on our monthly bulletin will make reasonable terms to those desiring their services. The Progressive Thinker is our official publication and to keep posted on what is transpiring here and in other cities, you should subscribe. One dollar per year; six months, 50 cents. See our secretary."

Kate W. Grove writes: "Those who have been attending the excellent meetings conducted by Mrs. Hamilton Gill at the Van Buren Opera House, corner Madison street and California avenue, will be gratified to learn that she will hold a unique service at this hall Easter night, March 31. It will be a flower service. Every one attending is invited to bring a flower. The service is the suggestion of her spirit guides. Two of them, Nannie and Lissa (the latter is a German spirit and speaks German only) will give messages from spirit friends to the bearers. None will be missed. Mrs. Gill held one of these flower services at Pittsburg, several years ago to the great delight of a crowded audience. Mrs. Gill's meetings have been very successful. The number of satisfactory tests is truly astonishing."

A few more dates are open for Jestram's Grove, which is for rent for the benefit of the home for aged Spiritualists. Address Mrs. Gartelman, 762 W. 13th street, Chicago.

Carrie L. Hatch writes: "The Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists will celebrate the anniversary of Modern Spiritualism in Berkeley Hall, Berkeley street, Tuesday, March 26, at 10:30 a. m., 2 and 7:45 p. m. A fine array of talent will be present. President George A. Fuller; treasurer, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring; director, Mrs. Maude Litch; Mrs. N. J. Willis, Mrs. Kate R. Stiles, Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie Mason, Mrs. Nellie Abbott, Mrs. Alice Whall, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, Mrs. Emma Smith, Mrs. Carrie S. Thomas, Mrs. Chapman, Rev. F. A. Wiggin, Rev. A. P. Blinn, Mr. Osgood Stiles, Mr. R. F. Churchill, Mrs. Hydee Hall (vocalist), Mrs. Grace C. Crawford (pianist). Miss Edna May Slate will sing in the evening. The sessions are open, free to all. The best talent is presented at this time in line with missionary work. People will become interested when they hear such testimony as will be given at these meetings. Come and stay with us all day. This state meeting opens the celebration for the week, and truly the week of March 25 will be one of great interest here in Boston, for all Spiritualists patronize the meetings."

Laura Cummings writes from Hardwick, Vt.: "Several of the members of the Spiritual Society met at the home of O. Rogers in Caboe, Mar. 10, and enjoyed not only a mental feast, but also a bountiful dinner, for which Mr. Rogers' table is well known. Selections from Mr. Neal Lyford's Graphophone were well appreciated, together with duets upon the violin and guitar by the Messrs. Sathorn. The president, Mr. Jennings, gave very pleasing remarks and outlined the possibilities of the cause here in this vicinity, and hoped the time was not far distant when the whole state would rise to its level and show greater interest, and more earnest efforts for the spreading of our whole religion. Much interest was evinced in the subject of affiliating with the N. S. A., feeling it to be the center and circumference of our philosophy and the right step to be taken at this time. Brother George Hill gave two very grand, inspiring poems, he should be kept upon the public platform continually. Mrs. Laura Cummings read the beautiful poem entitled "Gradatim," and made remarks therefrom and our meeting closed with feelings of harmony and good cheer."

M. Lizzie Beals writes of the Worcester Association of Spiritualists, G. A. R. Hall 35 Pearl street, Mass.: For the month of February the phenomena have been well represented from our platform. Mrs. Carrie F. Loring of East Braintree served our Society the first Sunday of February, in her usual sweet and impressive manner. Mrs. Alice M. Whall of Malden, occupied our platform Sunday, Feb. 10. Her work was satisfactory, and pleasing to all. Mrs. Maude F. Litch was unable to be with us February 17, on account of illness. Mr. Richmond L. Bishop of Lynn, filled her place very acceptably. Sunday, February 24, Mrs. Litch occupied our platform. Her lectures were well received; her messages accurate and convincing to all. The "Auxiliary" hold their regular supper and social the last Wednesday of each month. We hold our annual Fair Wednesday, March 27."

The subject of the discourse at the Church of the Soul on Sunday morning, March 24, will be, "Our Day of Victory."

On Monday evening, March 25, a Birthday Party will be given by the members of the Sunflower Club, to celebrate its second anniversary at Washington Hall, No. 70 Adams street. A fine supper will be served at 6 o'clock, followed by an interesting program; good talent, and later, music and dancing. All are cordially invited to join us on this festive occasion. Business meetings of the Club held second Tuesday of every month; tea party every fourth Tuesday, from 2 till 5 p. m. at Lincoln Hall, 70 Adams street. Good mediums in attendance. All are welcome to these social"

Samuel A. Huntington writes: "The third meeting in Mr. Wiggins' series held March 7, proved as interesting and instructive, and even more so, than the previous ones. The meeting opened with two anthems, beautifully rendered by a quartet. After the invocation, Mr. Wiggin was introduced, and chose for his theme, "A Psychic Riddle," the title of a book by Dr. Funk of New York, and "Spiritualism, Genuine and Unprincipled Mediumship," all of which was treated in a very able manner. He gave many fine messages, reading from ballots. Sunday services, March 10, proved as interesting as usual. At the afternoon circle Brothers Dickson, Greenlaw, Berry and Sister Morton took part. Mrs. B. W. Belcher of Marlboro, Mass., was the speaker at the evening meeting. She chose for her theme, "Trust and Receive," giving a fine address, after which she devoted nearly one hour to giving many beautiful messages. Prof. Graham of Boston, will be the speaker on the 17th and Mrs. Nellie Abbott, of South Lawrence, on the 24th."

Important Notice to the Spiritualists of Indiana.

Your attention is hereby called to the third annual convention of the Indiana State Spiritualist Association, which is to convene in Indianapolis, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 29, 30 and 31, 1907. The meetings will be held in Orpheum Hall, 135 North Delaware street.

As there is much important business to be transacted, it is especially urged that all Spiritualists be in attendance. Aside from the business features of the convention, there has been prepared a most excellent program for the edification of the visitors and delegates alike. Among those who will participate are Miss Elizabeth Harlow, of Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Will J. Erwood, of Peru, Indiana, and Mrs. Anna Throndsen; Mrs. Josephine Ropp; Mrs. Francis Ruddick and Mrs. Mattie Hayden. In addition to those already mentioned I would say that the Wattles Quartette is expected in the city at that time, and will participate.

Spiritualists, this is your convention! Will you not aid it by your presence. It will be profitable to you as well as to all concerned. Come and join in the spiritual feast which awaits you. E. A. SCHRAM, President.

CARRIE H. MONG, Secretary.

OUR WORLD IS AS WE MAKE IT.

There can be but little reason for one wishing himself dead,
Unless it be within him, in the wasted life he's led.
This old world is full of beauty and of Nature's own sweet yield,
And no being need go hunting for a more prolific field.

There are flowers, rain and sunshine,
  and sweet fragrance everywhere;
There is plenty of sweet pleasure intermingled with the care;
There are storms and raging tempests,
  and succeeding them the calm;
There are pains of soul and body, and for each a healing balm.

Every chord of sweetest music finds responsive vibrant tone;
Every love thought pressing onward,
  seeking sometime finds its own;
Every fit of angry passion stirs life's calm and placid sea;
Every selfish thought and action robs
  the soul of sympathy.

All the world is evoluting, ever changing, low to high;
All unfolding, growing, rising, but can never fully die,
And a suicidal spirit only leaps across the bay,
There to find the scenes more gloomy
  'till the clouds are brushed away.

Any world or sphere of action has its darkness and its light;
Has its pleasures and its sadness; has its growth and has its blight.
There is no escaping loophole near the winding golden stair;
One's whole life is as he makes it, on the earth and everywhere.

If we have but woe and sadness on this lovely earthly plane,
To expect it on another will most surely be in vain,
'Till we light the lamp within us, and then any world will be
From the darkness, and the evil, and the blindness ever free.

DR. T. WILKINS.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1. Price, 25 cents.

MAKES AN EXPLANATION.

Mrs. Virginia Bryan Tells of her Work and Relates an Incident Where a Plumber Lost Consciousness, and Had His Watch Restored to Him in a Mysterious Manner.

To the Editor:—Will you kindly correct an error in your late issue. My name is still (as it is always in my work) Mrs. Virginia Bryan. I believe I mentioned the fact that my husband was here with me, where H. G. Burroughs and myself have been holding meetings since the last week in December. I am sorry this mistake has been made as there are so many ready to grasp the smallest atom of scandal in order to elevate self by tearing down another.

My husband returned to Minneapolis Sunday afternoon. Burroughs and myself remain until April 8th; after that time I expect to make this point every two weeks. We have done a good work here and made many friends. We have succeeded in making the people think to such extent that just across the street from us in a little news and music store they have taken their bibles and congregate there to argue their points; ofttimes it is quite lively.

Now, Mr. Editor, I want to add a little more of my own experience and that which has occurred in my home. I could not tell you half of the demonstrations which have and are taking place in my home. The last was a very large hand and arm. As the hand struck my pillow I watched the arm and hand as it fell off the side of my bed, while my rocker rocks and papers rattle. But I, or we, have another young man living with us (I mean with my husband, daughter and self) whose name I withhold, who while plumbing in a basement dropped his watch in a cistern filled with waste. He sat down on a box to study out how to get it, as there was nothing near with which to reach it. He suddenly became sickened, then unconscious. When aroused, there was his watch which he brought home opened and sat on the mantle to dry out. He—as well as we—is much disturbed over what occurred, and would like an explanation of how it was done.

Now, Mr. Editor, please say to your people that I still have the same husband I have had for years, and have no desire to run away from him or trade him off, and I am sure Mr. Burroughs would want a wife nearer his own age, and I have children of my own to care for. Don't worry about me and the boy medium! We work nicely together, and need no guardians; at least my husband is satisfied; others should be. He is one of the best message bearers we have. He is young in the cause, yet is very accurate in his descriptions, which makes our meetings a success. I would separate, if I could, the phenomena from the philosophy, and have a mid-week love feast in spiritual messages, and make of our lecture halls a place of learning in place of curiosity; but so long as our state officers put both on same platform, what can we do but to follow? Messages are all right in their place, but I do not believe they should follow the lecturer.

MRS. VIRGINIA BRYAN.
Superior, Wis.

Mrs. Bryan is right; the mistake occurred by one who wrote the item in this office.—Editor.

Proof of Spirit Guardianship.

While in Washington City recently, I attended a seance held by Mrs. Ripple, a medium for independent voices. I had just received a letter from my wife informing me that she had been taken suddenly ill the night before, and I was very anxious about her.

I did not introduce myself to the medium or to anyone else in the circle, yet, soon after the seance opened my mother gave her full name and said: "My dear son, I know that you are very anxious about Mary. I have been with her all day, and I assure you, that although she is quite sick, her condition is improving and she will recover. You will get a letter tomorrow morning telling you that she is better."

That letter came the next morning from her physician, and it contained the information that my wife's condition was improving quite satisfactorily. Later in the seance Pearl, the heroine of my book, "In the World Celestial," greeted me, giving her name, and on my asking her if she knew how my wife was, she said: I have not seen her to-day, but I will go at once to your home and bring you the latest news as to her condition. In about fifteen minutes she announced her return and said: "Your mother is right; Cora is much better."

My mother had called my wife by her first name, Mary, as all her friends did fifty years ago, while Pearl called her by her middle name, Cora, the name by which she has been known since she began her literary career. This is, therefore, a good test.

I asked Pearl if my wife had pneumonia. "Her left lung is somewhat inflamed, but the inflammation is subsiding. She is not coming over to us now, so don't be alarmed about her." The letter from Dr. French, which I received the next day, confirmed Pearl's diagnosis and hopeful opinion of the case. T. A. BLAND.
Chicago, Ill.

OHIO SPIRITUALISTS, ATTENTION.

The Ohio Spiritualists Association will hold its tenth annual convention at Carnegie Hall, Sandusky, Ohio, May 24, 25 and 26, 1907. A cordial invitation is extended to all Spiritualist societies of the state to come and co-operate with us for the furtherance of our glorious cause. All societies not now affiliating with the O. S. A. can, by applying to the undersigned for a charter, become eligible, and take part in deliberating and transacting the general business of the association. We make this appeal as we need your assistance for the future progress of Spiritualism in our state. In unity lies success and strength. The program will be published later. For further information, address

C. A. SOLLINGER,
Secretary O. S. A.
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
Box 580, Seattle, Wash.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, phyiological and psychic science Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price, 25 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.
2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.
3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.
4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.
7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.
8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.
9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.
10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.
11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.
12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.
13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

THE BIBLE

New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

Song Books

New and Enlarged Edition of C. P. LONGLEY'S Choice Collection of Beautiful Songs,

Containing ninety charming songs for home, camps, circles and meetings—words and music, including "Only a Thin Vail Between Us," and its companion piece; also beautiful words set to choice music, from the poetical works of Lilian Whiting. Of the latter, Miss Whiting writes Prof. Longley her pleasure at his setting to her poems and declares herself honored at the dainty music he has given her words. President Barrett of the N. S. A. writes that wherever he goes he finds the songs of Mr. Longley sung at meetings and by the friends and he affirms it as his opinion that Longley's musical compositions have ennobled the world. Price per copy, 50 cents bound in boards; 75 cents in cloth. wholesale rates made to societies, and dealers.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

RADIANT ENERGY

and its Analysis, its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

AFTER HER DEATH.

The Story of a Summer. By Lilian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL.

Series one, two and three. By Lilian Whiting. Three choice volumes, each complete in itself, in which spirituality is related to everyday life in such a way as to make the world beautiful. Price, $1.00 each.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorcet, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

M. R. Borden: Q. In The Progressive Thinker for Feb. 16, in an article entitled "The Search of Science," etc., it is stated that the "twenty years' study of Mrs. Piper cost $75,000," and Prof. Hyslop "asks an endowment of $1,000,000 with which to carry on the work." As a Spiritualist, I ask how so much money could have been spent in the investigation of one medium? and the result?

A. Having especial attention drawn by this correspondent to the article, other points arise which awaken curiosity. For twenty-four years the Society for Psychical Research has been "investigating." It has published twenty-one volumes of facts accumulated, and has "bales" of manuscript on hand, not as well authenticated, that did not pass the censorship. It has gone out bidding for ghost stories, haunted houses, apparitions, premonitions, etc. It has a ghost library such as was never before gathered. Yet after all this travail "the society itself has never attempted to formulate an official opinion." Members of the society have in several instances, more brave than the society as a whole, come out and unqualifiedly given their support to the spiritual origin of such phenomena. Myers, Crookes and Wallace have published books containing their researches, the facts on which their conclusions rest. Richet, now president of the society, has recently acknowledged the spiritual source. Now this peculiarity is observable. The members who arrived at certainty, unitized the vast collection of facts gathered by the society, by knowledge derived from another source. They studied the phenomena through mediumship which can be in a measure controlled, and by making the right conditions the manifestations evoked. The ghosts of the society came and went so unexpectedly that observation was almost out of the question. They were not to be recalled. With mediumship all this is changed. The ghost may be observed and studied. It was by such observations, these members came to the conclusion that spiritual beings came and conversed, and having this key, the ponderous store of facts of the society become comprehensible. Without it, the twenty-one volumes and "bales" of MS. are rubbish, simply rubbish. I do not wish to disparage the much-lauded work of the S. P. R., yet I fail to see how it has taken a single step toward the solution of Spiritualism. As for ghosts coming and going, that is just what Spiritualism teaches.

That these ghosts are spirits, the point the society may determine, Spiritualism has asserted from the first.

As for the investigators of psychic phenomena, how much more profitable would it be to apply at once to the source through mediumship, than to expect to find solution of the problem in illusory ghost stories. If twenty-one thick volumes of these leave the society just where it began, without sufficient evidence to hazard an opinion, how many volumes will be necessary to bring about that result? Twenty-four years of waste, unless the phenomena of Spiritualism are supplemented thereto. This is the promise of the proposed million dollar institute. Yet it is to be noted that it is not Spiritualism that is proposed to investigate, but psychical phenomena! That may mean Spiritualism, and perhaps it does, for Prof Hyslop recently announced with eclat that he had discovered six mediums! That is an excellent beginning. Spiritualists have already discovered several thousand.

Fifty years ago, Prof. Robert Hare, one of the most eminent chemists of his time, inventor, and professor in the University of Pennsylvania, gave his attention to spiritual manifestations for the purpose of exposing them. He was an atheist, and as he did not believe in future existence, knew the phenomena were fraudulent. His researches were prolonged, exhaustive, and without shadow to break their clearness. His report is the strongest scientific evidence that has ever been given on the subject. He became fully convinced of the presence and communion of spirits. Not only did he make this investigation, he made it at his own expense. He did not wait for a million-dollar collection, and would have thought it an absurd prophecy, had he been told that half a century thereafter, anyone would have asked for that sum to pay them for going over the same grounds, and reaching the same conclusion.

As for the $75,000, how that sum could be used in the investigation of one medium, I must confess is as dark to me as to this correspondent. Prof. Hyslop is reported as saying that investigation of psychical phenomena is "expensive." With the above figures no one will be apt to doubt his statement. The only possible source of expense in Mrs. Piper's case was her own salary and that of Dr. Hodgson. Seventy-five thousand dollars would give each a big salary and have a margin left for "cigars and stationery!"

That is a good wage for a two hours' sitting now and then. There are many mediums, peers of Mrs. Piper, who would gladly accept one-third of this salary, and it would not be difficult to find doctors and professors to act as recording secretaries for the same lessened fee. An itemized account of this $75,000 would be interesting, as illustrating the difference in the methods of "trained scientists" and old-fashioned Spiritualists!

Glancing across the page of The Progressive Thinker containing this article, there is a column on "The Home Circle," by a true and sincere Spiritualist, R. Bayles. Therein is stated the true method of gaining a knowledge of Spiritualism, and in that one column is packed more genuine information, gained in an hour in the home circle, than is contained in the twenty-one volumes, to which has been given the "scientific attainments" of two score—more or less—of "trained scientists," for twenty-four years. It is information obtained at such circles that gives vitality and value to these volumes. Without it their narrations are meaningless and tedious repetitions.

If one has $75,000 to give to a medium, it is his own business, and if a psychical institute can gather a million or ten million endowment funds no one who favors Spiritualism should object. If a man thinks the way to prove the continuance of life in the future, is to ransack history for stories of ghosts and haunted houses, he may satisfy himself by that method. At the same time, to those who have made a life study of this field, it seems strange that these musty legends should be sought, while the living fountain may be found at one's own hearth.

If the records of manifestations in thousands of homes could be compiled, they would form an unanswerable evidence that the "psychic force" underneath all these manifestations is from spiritual beings. All the psychical institutes, and psychical research societies in the world can do no more than this—no more than has been proven to the satisfaction of millions by the unheralded private, and publicly unknown medium and the home circle.

More than this, what do they propose to prove? We are to infer that all investigations for fifty years, to the present time are worthless, and only by the "expensive" methods employed in the Piper case, or to be inaugurated in the million-dollar institute, will a knowledge of Spiritualism be attained.

"Traveler": Q. I have all my life been able to visit places in my sleep, and when I have suddenly awakened seen spirit friends standing by me. I have thus in spirit visited the sick and relieved them, and visited seances, and clairvoyants afterwards have told me that they saw me there. The question is, why can we not develop so we would be as decarnate spirits?

A. Because in this life the spirit is bound in the limitation of its physical body. It may at times become partially free, and give intimations of its capabilities as an independent being, but the restraint is always present.

Harmony, the Law of Life.

To bring harmony into our lives, we should recognize only the good in our fellow-man. That which the world calls evil is in reality undeveloped good, masquerading in false attire. In every soul there lies implanted a germ of godliness. It is for us to bring out and develop this hidden good. Through experiences of bitter sorrow and disappointment we learn to withhold our judgment from the seeming failures in those we love. To bring one's self in true rhythmic harmony with the Over-Soul of All Being, is the great lesson of our earth career. In so doing we learn to control our thoughts, for a truly harmonious soul recognizes the potency of thought, in all its power for good. The self-poised individual sends forth daily, only thoughts of love, help and encouragement. Recognize no enemies, and if a fellow-man harm you in any way, send loving thoughts of pity to the one so benumbed to the right. Harmony shall reign upon earth when all men become as brothers.

These souls of harmony as we now know,
Shed on earth's path a radiant glow;
To all they extend a helping hand,
And aid their minds to understand
That God is Good, and Life is dear,
If we but pass a word of cheer
To the weary ones along Life's way,
And show them the dawn of a brighter day.

When all souls have come into the harmonious state, then wars, crimes and evil of all kinds will vanish from the earth.

Harmony is the law of life,
And we are here to show
That as we give of our meagre store,
Thus only shall we grow.

ALICE L. HOLBROOK.

Rockland, Mass.

LITTLE SUNBEAM.

Whence and whither, dancing by,
Little Sunbeam?
Tarry a moment! Can you? Try!
Let us be comrades—you and I—
Bring me a message out of the sky
Little sunbeam!

What is your secret? Whisper it, pray—
Little Sunbeam!
Are you ever smiling and merry and gay?
When folks are frowning, and hopes grow gray,
Never do you steal sadly away,
Little Sunbeam?

Tears are so many and smiles so few,
Little Sunbeam,
Here is a work for us both to do;
Bringing to mortals of heaven's own blue,
Making the dreary earth blossom anew,
Little Sunbeam!

Chase all the shadows out of my brain,
Little Sunbeam!
Sorrow and solitude, worry and pain,
Deeds that are selfish, dreams that are vain,
Make me a Child of the Morning again,
Little Sunbeam!

—Earnest Neal Lyon in Collier's.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

Spirit Return

It is Manifested in Many Ways and Under Peculiar Conditions, as in the following where Earth-Bound Spirits are Taught to Realize Their Present Condition.

This night's seance, January 10, 1907, was most remarkable for its significance in the opening up of wider fields for spirits in the work of redemption. Of the two who manifested their presence, there was one who gave his name as Paul McArthur, who had passed on some five years ago; he proved an exception among our unknown visitors because he had already progressed out of the earth conditions, and knew that he had to work out his own salvation, and that it was unreasonable to expect of Jesus to bear all the sin of all the world.

The other gave his name as Jones; and claimed to be with Dwight L. Moody, assisting Dr. Torrey at the Moody Tabernacle in saving souls. He had, to all appearances, died about 22 years ago, yet still very zealous in saving sinners, he and Mr. Moody and many hundreds of other spirits working vigorously to exert their pernicious influence in creating hells in the minds of men, thus filling insane asylums with religious fanatics.

Mr. Jones, when entering the circle, seemed in his glory, singing and swinging his arms in rhythm and time to the song then in progress, urging everybody to sing and pray; and this he did so long and so persistently that for sometime he baffled all efforts to stop his senseless jumblings.

McArthur, who it seems had come to assist the benighted Jones, sought in vain to reason with the latter, and to make him understand that he was entirely wrong in his views regarding Jesus, hell and the devil, that he himself had been through the mill, and therefore knew what he was talking about.

"The man," he said, "is to be pitied, for when he begins to realize his mistake he will have a hard road to travel," and saying this he departed with the promise to call again. At last the cloud which had shrouded the mind of Mr. Jones slowly vanished, and his reason gradually returned, and he began to realize the enormity of his folly, and the misery he had helped to create for others; he felt greatly shocked at the results amid great lamentations.

He was now asked to call in his mind for Mr. Moody to come forth; this he did, but rather reluctantly, because he did not want to disturb the man while at service in church.

But the great evangelist really came and soon expressed his wish for all present to sing and then to pray; but here our instructor, in a few but terse words gave him to understand that he, Mr. Moody, had been summoned here, and must now listen to the fact that he was no longer in possession of his physical body, but that he had been an earth-bound spirit now for many years and a menace to society; and turning again to Jones he asked him whether he knew anyone who had died? "Yes," he said, "my parents," and when told to call on them, that they may show themselves, he exclaimed, "Oh! there is Clara, my sister. She died when but a little girl," and— he continued excitedly, "see! see! the great mass of cripples—crippled spirits in all kinds of deformities."

He was told here that they all were spiritually crippled through the false teachings of an orthodox theology.

"Am I to blame for all of this?" he asked anxiously. "Then help me! What shall I do? What shall I do?"

On being advised he now prayed that God might give him light and strength to overcome and to right his past life and to forgive his errors, and as by a magic flash, the beauties and splendors of the heaven-world opened up before the amazed eyes of the enraptured man.

"Oh! look! look!" he shouted in ecstasy at the beautiful scenery. See! see the bright sunshine over the lovely landscape! and what of this? A dog? Are there animals in heaven? Why this is my own dog, my faithful Jack, who died many years ago, and I loved that dog, it was such a sensible, noble creature, and had saved my life once."

When asked what kind of a dog it was, he said, "Why can't you see it, standing right before me? It is a big yellow St. Bernard, with a lovely head and large, beautiful eyes, and that dog went to heaven before me, and is almost the first one to meet me."

Here Jones was asked as to what had become of Mr. Moody.

He is still standing here with all the other spirits, and greatly astonished at all the new revelations and questioned, "Will I go back with Mr. Moody and all those spirits to tell Dr. Torrey and his congregation about our experience here and thus undo some of the wrong we have done?"

"No," came the reply. "You must all go with your spirit friends and receive further instructions to fit you for that work."

Mr. Jones then related that the bible was but little understood by him and others; and that in their zeal to save souls they never studied it but skipped everything which was not clear to their understanding, and that they just picked out such parts which seemed best suited to excite and stir the people, and that they would call them wicked sinners, and threaten them with with hell-fire and damnation forever if they would not believe and come to Jesus, and, said he, "We were often so crowded in our revival meetings, that we were lifted right off our feet and forced up, suspended in the air (referring to the spirits who were ever present).

"I remember," he continued, "that at one of those meetings, when excitement run high, a lady had to be taken to a big institute (asylum) to which I had followed her, and as we kept on singing and praying, some of the men there struck the woman several blows on the head so she fell to the floor, and then I became unconscious and cannot remember any more about that, but after awhile I found myself back again in Moody's church, and have been there ever since.

"But now I must go with my sister to the home of my parents. I wonder," he said, "why they did not come themselves?"

"They are too advanced, but they will meet you half way," came the answer.

And now, thanking all for the instructions and sight he had received, he departed with his sister, a wiser spirit, fully restored to reason, and realizing his duty towards those cripples, the victims of unreasonable and ignorant religious rogues and fanatics.

From the conversation with Jones it appears that, forever urged on by Dr. Torrey, it has become a custom with his pretended redeemed ones to proselyte among the sinners in his audiences, and as two members of the circle were among the latter (out of mere curiosity), they were easily spotted out, and the spirit, Mr. Jones, had been delegated to convert them; but on coming into their magnetism he was drawn to our circle instead with the result as stated above.

The very fact that the spirit of the renowned Moody, with hundreds of other spirits were drawn on, and forced to listen to reason, and learn the truth of their earth-bound condition, and to witness the same wonderful revelation which Mr. Jones had experienced, was no mere incident, but rather a carefully laid plan by our invisible helpers; of a two-fold scheme to break up the pernicious part of an influence as exercised over the people by ignorant spirits and mortals, which but cripples the victim's spiritual growth, and to herald forth in greater numbers the glad tidings that redemption and salvation can only come through the knowledge and obedience to the truth as revealed through the light of understanding.

G. A. WOLTER.

Chicago, Illinois.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

Animals have Their Rights, as Well as do Humans.

To the Editor:—A Catholic priest once said "Give me your children until they are fourteen years old and you can have them afterwards."

By this he meant that if he could be permitted to instill into the children's minds Catholicism for the first fourteen years of their lives, he had no fears of your changing them afterwords. He wished to impress upon his hearers that the power of early education was so great that but very few are ever able to break away from its influence. And in this he was right. And this power of early education holds good in whatever direction it is received.

Bring your children up to love, respect, and protect every conscious living creature, their life, their liberty, and their right to enjoy that life, and you will never be called upon to defend them in a murder trial. To be kind to animals precludes the killing and eating of them. Murder is the direct result of meat-eating, and animal slaughter, and as long as forty thousand of inoffensive animals are daily slaughtered and their dead bodies eaten by the people of this country, we may expect murder to be rampant in the land, men and women will be shot down on the slightest pretext, and cleared by a meat-eating jury, if they have money. These are the natural and inevitable results of a gross violation of law of nature.

And I believe that any person who can be hired for ordinary wages to daily take the lives of hundreds of innocent and unoffending animals, is only restrained from taking the life of his enemies by the fear of the law, rather than tender passion or the respect they have for human life. And I believe that meat-eating is an essential diet for the autocrat of a slaughter-house. I do not wish to be understood to insinuate that all who eat meat would murder or that they would even kill an unoffending animal, for thousands who daily eat meat have never seen an animal killed, and do not realize that their act is encouraging the slaughter of thousands of animals whose lives ought to be protected by man. Nevertheless, whether they believe it or not, the killing as well as the eating of animals hardens the heart and dulls the compassion of all who indulge in it. The dog that is fed on an exclusive meat diet has to be chained in order to protect the public.

I believe that anyone who can besmear himself in the innocent blood of animals, without any compunctions, must of necessity be a meat-eater, for I know of no other diet which would give to the ordinary person the heart to unfeelingly perpetrate such cruelty. A meat-eating dog has to be chained, and a meat-eating public has to be restrained. I feel that all my animals have as much right to live as I have.

Some, to excuse themselves for killing them, claim they have no soul and therefore do not live after their physical bodies are eaten; but I look upon this as a very poor excuse, for if this life only is all they have, the more reason why we as human beings should allow them to enjoy this little span of life. But this life is not the end of the animal. If the animals did not exist after death, then I should not expect to. For if only those traits, or faculties of the human mind which are above the animal exist in the great hereafter, then there will not be enough left of man worth preserving, and not enough of a man so that he would be able to recognize himself. And many a man would have to go with the brute.

Animals think and reason, and will continue to live after the dissolution of their physical bodies, just as surely as man will. And man will have to meet those he has wantonly killed, in that world where justice will have to be done to all living creatures.

I was pleased to read the article by Jacob Fuller in 801, claiming for animals the power to reason. Mr. Fuller is right in this, and if space would permit I could give some experiences that would positively prove it. However, I was sorry to learn that Mr. Fuller persists in taking the life of that little vegetarian, the English sparrow, the witty crow, as well as the innocent rabbit. True the rabbit gnaws fruit trees and has girdled 20 or 30 for me this winter which I neglected to wrap with paper as soon as I ought to have done; however, I feel that they are entitled to some of the bark if I take all the fruit. The same power put us both here and intended we should both live and have something to eat. And I shall do nothing intentionally to defeat the intentions of that overruling power.

JAMES L. DOW.

Manhattan, Kansas.

"The Kingship of Self Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, the revelation of reserve power, etc. Price, 30 cents.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. Price, 25 cents.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00

THE COMBINATION.

Three Personalities Attaching Themselves to One Person—A Case of Spirit Return, or "Dissociate Personalities"—The Views of Emil T. Lundstrom.

To the Editor:—The reluctance of a certain class of scientific psychic investigators in accepting the fact of spirit return—or to be more "scientific," the fact that disembodied human beings can and do communicate with those still in the flesh has always been a source of great wonder to me. Numerous hypotheses—that of "dissociate personalities" being one of the latest—all more or less complex and far-fetched, have been invoked with more or less success to account for a fact which to the spiritual thinker, whose sound judgment has not as yet been theorized out of existence is so simple and self-evident.

Whether this reluctance is a case of moral cowardice, intellectual vanity, learned prejudice or merely excessive scientific caution, no one knows better than these learned gentlemen themselves.

However, no intelligent Spiritualist can be blind to the fact that an enormous mass of mediumistic phenomena may as easily be explained by some of these hypotheses as well as by their own; and that many observed facts are merely results of suggestion, originating either in the minds of the medium or the sitter. Be that as it may, the fact nevertheless remains, as Prof. Myers points out, that there exists a residue of psychic phenomena that can not be accounted for on any other than the spiritualistic hypothesis. The now universally known case of Miss Beauchamp, for instance. Dr. Prince of Boston, who brought this case to the attention of the world, designates the four "dissociate personalities" that manifest through Mis B's body, as BI, this being her normal self; BII, BIII and BIV., respectively, each one of these personalities differing radically from the other. Especially is the difference between BI and BIII—or "Sally," as this interesting "dissociate" (!) entity persists in calling herself—most pronounced.

The original Mrs. B. seems to be, according to the testimony of Dr. Prince, a quiet, demure, well-behaved and sweet-tempered young woman; whereas, on the other hand, Sally, herself, is a vivacious, high-spirited and mischievous sort of tom-boy girl, who delights in playing all sorts of cruel pranks on the unoffending BI, whom she (BIII) contemptuously designates as the "Saint," in distinction from BIV, whom she calls the "Idiot."

Broadly speaking, it seems that BI is morally superior to BIII, but that on the other hand, the latter is by far the shrewder and more enterprising of the two entities.

Now, the interesting part of it all is, that in the absence of all spiritistic suggestions in the life and environment of Miss B., and in spite of all scientific suggestions—whether oral or mental that she (BIII) is a dissociate personality; she (BIII) most emphatically, decidedly and repeatedly asserts that she is a distinct, complete, and entirely different person than Miss BI; and this position she stoutly maintains.

The inconsiderate "Sally" evidently is not aware of the fact that the integrity of a profound and ingenious theory is threatened—and perhaps she does not care. "Sally," she declares herself to be; "Sally" she is; and "Sally" she remains—the unscientific mind.

According to her own testimony her memory antedates that of BI, since she distinctly remembers when the original Miss B, learned to walk, an incident which, of course, BI does not remember at all. BIII claims that she never sleeps—a claim made by many spirits through mediums—and remembers all that she does herself, and also all that BI does and thinks. On the contrary, BI knows nothing of what occurs when BIII is in control, and is but dimly or indirectly aware of the existence of BIII.

To the intelligent and unbiased investigator of spiritual phenomena, a case like that of Miss Beauchamp can mean but one thing; for, if we are to give the chief witness in the case, namely, Sally herself, the least possible credit for truthfulness and intelligence, the whole thing spells SPIRIT RETURN in large letters, and in still larger letters it spells OBSESSION.

I say this at the risk of offending a class of well-meaning, but superficial observers who assume, wholly without foundation, that at the moment of death the ignorant soul becomes omniscient, and that the sinner is transformed into a saint in the twinkling of an eye.

The case of Miss Beauchamp is one of the most perfect cases of OBSESSION THAT HAS EVER BEEN BROUGHT TO THE LIGHT; but, as long as scientists are striving to fit facts to theories, instead of theories to facts, they will rake their brains fore and aft in vain to solve the riddle. It never seems to occur to these worthy gentlemen that occasionally the testimony of the subject itself may possibly contain a grain of truth.

The scholarly Dr. Wickland of this city, whose remarkable experience and investigations along these lines have attracted considerable attention of late, both by the public and the press, told the writer that, in his opinion, the entity known as "Sally" in all probability was the spirit of a very young and ignorant child—too young, perhaps, to remember its own original earth life—and who, after passing out of its physical body, was attracted and unconsciously attached to the personality of Miss B, and that this would no doubt hold true of the entities BII and BIII also, and I feel that this is an opinion which few sane and observant Spiritualists will be inclined to dispute. For, after all, when the various hypotheses have been brought to bear on the case, that of Dr. Wickland seems to be the most rational—at least to the unperverted, commonsense of the lay mind.

EMIL T. LUNDSTROM.

ONE DAY OF DAYS.

It seemed as if the world was new,
The sky entrancing, perfect blue;
Among the yet as leafless trees,
There played a soft caressing breeze:
From out the orchard shadows dim,
I caught the chanting of a hymn;
A Phebe answered back again
In notes that sounded like "Amen."

One day of days! O, Fair March day!
When half forgot life's darkened way;
Forgot the bitterness, the tears,
The dreary waste of passing years;
The night whose blackness gave no star,
The love that seemed so near, so far,
Forgotten in a bird's low song
That thrilled the sunny hills among,
In sprouting grass, the earth's warm breath,
In life evolved from seeming death.
Take courage, borne on hope's glad wing
Your heart will sometime find its spring.

ALICE M. WARREN.

Proctorsville, Vermont.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

BOOKS FOR ALL SPIRITUALISTS TO PERUSE.

Vaccination a Curse. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Treating on a subject of vital importance to every one. Price, $1.25.

Vedanta Philosophy. By Swami Vivekananda. Price $1.50.

Volney's Ruins and the Law of Nature. This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

Voltaire's Romances. A new edition, profusely illustrated. A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing. 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50; postage 15 cents.

Wayside Jottings. Composed of Essays, Sketches, Poems and Songs, gathered from the highways, by-ways and hedges of life, from the inspirational pen of Mattie E. Hull. Price 75 cents.

What All the World's A-Seeking. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

Who Are These Spiritualists, and What Is Spiritualism? By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 35 cents.

Why I Am a Vegetarian. By H. J. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

Woman. A lecture delivered to ladies only, by Mrs. Dr. Hulburt, on the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, marriage and divorce. Price 10 cents.

Warfare of Science With Theology. Information not procurable in the libraries of the world in a half century, showing the opposition of the church to science. Two vols., 900 pages. Price $5.

Works of E. D. Babbitt, LL. D. M. D. "Human Culture and Cure." Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. Price, board cover, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure." Part Second. Marriage, Sexual Development and Upbuilding. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure." Parts Third and Fourth. In one volume. Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price, $1.

"Human Culture and Cure." Part Fifth. The Bodily Organs, Their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.

"Principles of Light and Color." One of the greatest books of the age. Price, $5; by mail, 32 cents extra.

"Religion." Most thoughtful, spiritual and excellent. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Postage 10 cents.

"Social Upbuilding," including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Womanly Beauty of Form and Feature. By Albert Turner. Price, $1.

Woman's Bible. Parts I. and II. The Pentateuch. A galaxy of scholarly comments by many of our brightest minds regarding much of the Old Testament, and the slight given the women. Price 50 cts. each.

Woman, Church and State. A historical account of the status of woman throughout the Christian ages, with reminiscences of the Matriarchate. By Matilda Joslyn Gage. Price, cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

Woman. Four Centuries of Progress. Showing her gradual rise from slavery and bondage of ancient times. By Susan H. Wixon. A lecture of great value. Price 10 cents.

World Making. A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

Zanoni. By Bulwer Lytton. Price 50 cents.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic. By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200. Price 25 cents.

A Few Words About the Devil. By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

After Her Death. The Story of a Summer. Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

Age of Reason. Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Ancient India, Its Language and Religions. Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

Ancient Pagan and Modern Christian Symbolism. By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A New Catechism. By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times. Price, cloth, $1.

Angell Prize Contest Recitations. To advance Humane Education in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price 25 cents.

Antiquity Unveiled. Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realms. An intensely interesting work, carrying one deeply into the mysteries of the past. By J. M. Roberts. Price $1.50.

A. P. A. Manual. A complete exposition of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association, with a vivid description of Romanism as it is to-day. Price 15 cents.

Apocryphal New Testament, being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, His Apostles, and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Translated from the original tongues, and now collected into one volume. Price, $1.50.

Apollonius of Tyana. Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

Around the Year With Ella Wheeler Wilcox. By Ella Ruddy. Price $1.

Aryan Sun-Myths. The Origin of Religions. A valuable compilation of historical facts relating to the ancient conception of the necessity for saviors. By Sarah E. Titcomb. Price, cloth, $1.

A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life. By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

A Sex Revolution. By Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "The Occult Forces of Sex," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price 25 cents.

As It Is to Be. By Cora Lynn Daniels. This is a most spiritual book and gives a beautiful account of the process of dying. Price, $1.

Asphodel Blooms and Other Offerings. A book of short poems by Emma Rood Tuttle. Neatly bound in blue cloth with silver letters. Price $1.

Astral Worship. With a chart in the front cover with signs of the Zodiac. By J. H. Hill, M. D. Price $1.

Atlantis, the Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly, is a book of rare thought, proving the existence of a continent by the name of Atlantis having existed years ago. Price $2.

Auras and Colors. An Esoteric System of Teaching Concerning Halos, Aureolas and the Nimbus. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cts.

Behind the Veil. Written by a spirit in a most interesting manner, and describing his life in the spirit world. Price 75 cents.

Bible Marvel Workers, and the wondrous power which helped or made them perform mighty works and utter inspired words. Personal characteristics of prophets and apostles. By Allen Putnam. Price, 75c

Can Telepathy Explain. By Minot J. Savage. Price $1.

Celestial Dynamics. A normal course of study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature. Just the book for mental healers or students in the science. 107 pages. Price $1.

Character Building, Thought Power. A dainty little book and helpful. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 35 cents.

Christs of the Past and Present. By Rev. Moses Hull. A valuable book. Price, paper, 25 cents.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahriziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00. Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

Confined With Wire Netting.

Mr. Thomas Potts, a Materializing Medium of England, Uses His mediumistic powers without Compensation, and in every Seance is securely enclosed in wire netting. The results are eminently satisfactory. Would it not be an excellent test for camp-meeting officials to adopt, in view of the many exposures lately occurring? The test could be applied to trumpet mediums as well.

MATERIALIZATION.

At a Private Circle in England, Extraordinary Manifestations Occur While the Medium Is Confined With Wire Netting—What Materializing Medium in This Country Will Volunteer to Be so Confined?

In "Light" of March 3, 1906, we printed a report, written by Mr. Robert Watson, of a "successful private circle" in the North of England, at which materialization phenomena were obtained under good test conditions. A few days ago we received another report from Mr. Watson, recording an interesting presentation made by a materialized form. Mr. Watson says:

"When I went to the seance room one night recently, I knew nothing about the presentation which was to be made, nor did any of the other sitters, but it afterwards transpired that as the medium wished to make me a present as a token of respect, the chairman and the medium's guide arranged for the spirit friends to make the presentation. The seance was going on just as usual when a materialized form came out of the cabinet, took from the mantelpiece a small packet and withdrew into the cabinet. The chairman then asked me to stand up and step into the centre of the circle. I complied with his request and a beautiful form came out of the cabinet, right in front of me, and placed the packet in my hand. Then, while I was still holding the hand, the spirit friend dematerialized until there was nothing left but the hand placed in mine, which felt as firm as any real hand could do. In a second or two it was gone, and I was left alone. I was unable to say anything, I was too much taken by surprise; all I could do was to sit down and think."

The Newcastle Evening Chronicle, of Monday, February 18, contained a long account, written by a special correspondent, of his visit to the circle of which Mr. Watson writes. As this special correspondent gives a clear and, as far as we can judge, an unbiased description of the conditions and of the phenomena which he witnessed, we reproduce the greater part of it. He says:

"Nowhere has the study of the occult taken a firmer hold upon the people than in the mining districts of Northumberland, where the men have always had a turn for serious reflection. One of the best circles is that at Newsham, where successful meetings are held every Sunday. The medium is Mr. Thomas Potts, who works in the pit as a hewer, and the sitters are all working men from the district round about—all thoughtful, intelligent men, and the sentiments of the members of the circle, as well as of the medium, are above suspicion. Their conversation shows that they have thought deeply, and that their conviction has come not only from what they have seen with their own eyes, but from what they have read and inwardly digested. They are evidently deeply imbued with religious fervor, and they tell you that they are nearer God than ever they have been in their lives before, and that their hearts are filled with truer happiness. There is no doubt at all that Spiritualism has done them good. It should be said, also, that nobody in the society has anything to gain by deception. All the money that is received is a penny per member per week to pay the expenses that are absolutely necessary, but, beyond that, nothing is paid to anybody.

"Having been hospitably entertained by one of the members, I was conducted to the room where the sittings take place. Here, in one corner, a portion was screened off by a drab curtain, and behind the curtain was a fence of wire netting, reaching from wall to wall, and from floor to ceiling, in such a way that the medium, once he had been locked within, had apparently no chance of getting out again. The wire netting was fastened by staples to a wooden frame, which was, in turn, nailed to the floor; and in the middle of the front was a door fastened by means of a padlock. Between the wire netting and the curtain there was a space of fifteen inches; and here, it was said, the spirit forms, taking material from the medium and from the sitters, were built up. I examined the cabinet carefully without and within and was quite satisfied that anybody locked in must stay there until released, and could not by any conceivable means reach the curtain before him.

"Towards seven o'clock, the company gathered and filed upstairs to the seance-room, where a dim religious light was given from a small lamp, behind a red shade, upon the wall furthest away from the cabinet. The sitters were arranged upon chairs in horseshoe form before the cabinet, and the medium entered the cage. The key of the cabinet was handed to me, and I turned it in the padlock, and saw that the medium was securely penned, and unable, to all appearance, to play tricks with the sitters. The curtains were then permitted to fall into their place.

"The medium's guide, 'Zowie,' had indicated his approval of the conditions, and the circle had only to wait in confidence for a manifestation. Sure enough, after a time spent in singing, the curtain was drawn aside at one corner, and a tall white figure appeared, within an inch or two of the sitter at the termination of the horseshoe. No sound had been heard from the cabinet; and there was an uncanny silence about the whole business.

"The figure was, of course, irritatingly indefinite in the dim light. It was a figure, draped in white—a figure that moved, that had a head, and arms, and a body; but this was all that one could say about it. The features were quite indistinguishable. It retired, and a moment or two later a diminutive figure, apparently that of a little girl—identified as 'Wisdom'—came out at the other corner. This, I was subsequently told, was a frequent visitor, and often sat upon the knee of the leader, and even kissed him upon the cheek. Seven other figures appeared—one said to be that of a Chinaman, several of those of occult figures, and one said to be the embodied spirit of the late Alderman T. P. Barkas, of Newcastle. This form pointed dramatically to the gentleman by whom I was accompanied, and who knew Alderman Barkas very well; but neither he nor myself had the slightest notion of identifying the visitor. Except for the figure of "Wisdom," all the forms, so far as one was able to judge, were identical in height, and breadth, and depth. They did not advance beyond the curtain, but merely drew the folds aside, exposing a draped form, and raising an arm or shaking the head with palsied meaninglessness.

"After the nine forms had appeared, some hymns were sung without effect, and it was evident that the power was gone. * * I was invited to advance to the cabinet, and found the medium in his chair, tight and comfortable, and wide awake. He struck a match to let me see where to put the key in the padlock. Then he came out and sat upon a chair, and communication was held with 'Zowie,' by means of mysterious knocks which strike the medium upon the forehead, quite sharply. The method is to spell out the alphabet, and to stop at the letter which elicits a knock, and so to construct sentences. In this way we got the names of the ghostly visitors, including Alderman Barkas.

"It was an interesting evening; there I leave it. I could see no possible means for the medium to leave the cabinet, and yet I saw what were unquestionably shapes, with hands and arms and heads and bodies, before the curtain. What they were or how they came to be there, I will not undertake to say."

Mr. Watson tells us that the cabinet was made by a local joiner, Mr. George Elliott, and the wire netting, which has a one-inch mesh, is fastened on the outside to the framework, every joint of which is nailed together and clinched over. The framework is placed across one corner of an upstairs room, in the house of the medium, and is nailed to the floor, to the wall on both sides, and to the ceiling at the top. Visitors are permitted to take their own padlocks, if they so desire, and to examine the cabinet thoroughly. The light is sufficiently strong for everything in the room to be plainly seen, and it is hoped that ere long the forms will appear in a full light. Finally, Mr. Watson says: "We make no charge to anyone. We want to prove the truth, and if we are instruments in God's hands and prove that spirits can and do return, we shall be amply rewarded for our trouble."—Light, London, England.

AS ONE MAN SEES IT.

Is Spiritualism a Religion?

This is the much asked question. I Certainly congratulate Mrs. Clara Watson on her article in number 879 of The Progressive Thinker. Like all her articles, it is very spicy and very good.

And now I will give my answer to the above question:

I cannot accept Spiritualism as a religion, and how any Spiritualist can define Spiritualism as a religion is more than I can understand. To me Spiritualism is a philosophy. Religion means to be bound. Now then, can we or shall we go back to churchianity and accept a set of principles as set forth by the officers of the N. S. A., and call it religion? I for one go down on Mrs. Clara Watson's list as opposed to any religion, or anything that would turn my steps backward.

I left the church with all its creeds and dogmas and also religion, to be free mentally and spiritually, and under Spiritualism pure and simple I am free to think and reason and philosophize; but if we ape after Christianity and establish churches with articles or principles of belief and call it religion, then how long will it be until we are back in the same old rut that the orthodox church is in to-day?

How often has it been proven that what is to-day a truth may be proven an error to-morrow. Then why should we as Spiritualists bind ourselves down to certain beliefs and religions? I say with Mrs. Clara Watson, let us have halls of instruction, halls of philosophy, etc., and thus let us learn more and more, not new truths, but the grand old truths that have ever existed, but have been covered up under ignorance and false teaching.

Orthodox ministers are book-trained teachers, telling their hearers what Calvin taught and what Wesley believed, and so on. But as Spiritualists or as lecturers in the various spiritual camps we ought not to so much defend on our book knowledge as we should on the soul development. Whenever the soul speaks, one need not think what he shall say, but the words will come faster than they can be delivered by the speaker. So I say, it matters not so much whether we know what Huxley used to say or what Spencer knew, etc., if we have the soul development. Huxley, Spencer or Britten, or anyone else can use us as an instrument and give to humanity all their past and present knowledge which is far better than for one to stuff the mind with book-knowledge and perhaps be governed by their own self-conceit. Let us be Spiritualists, pure and simple, and philosophize for ourselves a higher wisdom and knowledge, and continue to feed the hungry soul within more and more from Nature's unlimited storehouse.

DR. R. T. HENDRICKS.

Greensboro, N. C.

JUST WHERE THOU ART.

Just where thou art lift up thy voice,
And sing the song that stirs thy heart;
Reach forth thy strong and eager hand
To lift, to save, just where thou art.
Just where thou standest light thy lamp,
'Tis dark to others as to thee;
Their ways are hedged by unseen thorns,
Their burdens fret, as thine fret thee.
Out yonder, in the broad full glare
Of many lamps thine own might pale,
And thy sweet song, amid the roar
Of many voices, slowly fail;
While these, thy kindred, wandered on
Uncheered, unlighted to the end,
Near to thy hand thy mission lies,
Wherever sad hearts need a friend.

ISABEL DARLING.

CREATION.

A New Theory of Planetary Formation.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" Thus "the heavens and the earth were finished and all the hosts of them." Thus saith that great book of books that has survived the centuries, the radical teachings of which has caused more bloodshed and ill will, more heart burnings and cruelty, more dissension, jealousy and hatred, than all the other books of the world combined; and it is held sacred by a large percentage of the people of the world, though this "sacredness" is fast disappearing even in the very core of ecclesiastical circles. Science and reason are the principal, yea, only causes of this great wave of warfare against blind credulity.

The fact that the heavens and the earth were in existence long before man sprang into being made it necessary for the early theologians to give them a mystic origin and denominate the earth the center of the universe.

All things else in the heavens were "created" as an afterthought, the finishing touches as it were, to make the earth more beautiful and more fitting as "God's footstool." And all down through the centuries "divine" teachers have been giving the world a dioramic coating to this noble story of the "creation." It is not in my province to criticise these ebullient ecclesiasts, for the greater portion of them have been perfectly sincere in their beliefs. How could they be otherwise? Science had not the power in the earlier days to prove the fallacy of the theological theory; in fact theology was as the much-talked-of man from Missouri—she had to be shown. And now that she is being shown she is making as rapid strides as science.

Man has always been asking for proof, even in the dark ages as well as to-day, but in the absence of that proof he has been compelled to accept theory, and the earlier theories were born of superstition, which is but the child of ignorance. So pray be charitable toward our forebears.

But now that the veil has been drawn and science is able to "try out" all theories, sifting therefrom their truth and their fallacies, thus saving the world the error of accepting a paralogism for any length of time, let us reason together.

The hardest problem the human mind has to contend with in connection with creation is time and space. Outside of the realm of mankind these two conditions have no place in the great plan of the universe, and with man they are only dealt with relatively. How can anything be measured which has neither beginning nor end.

Close your eyes and imagine yourself floating out through space to the most distant star that has been discovered by our most powerful telescope. What would you there find? You would be in a maze of starry heavens just as grand and beautiful as the one we are gazing upon from this point in the constellations; now repeat this trip again and again in the same direction and the panorama will ever be the same in grandeur. In this way you may get a slight idea as to the extent of space and also of what a small figure this little ball of clay formerly designated "God's Footstool" really cuts in it all.

Prof. Larkin has just announced to you that the new name of the earth is "cosmical corpuscle" comparatively speaking, and that a trillion miles is but an astronomer's yardstick in measuring the distances brought within his view by the telescope. The extent of time is really harder for us to grasp than is the extent of space.

Theology tells us the earth was created 6000 years ago. Science says she does not know, but gives us proof of at least a million years that the globe has been infested with animal life. The one gives us superstitious theory; the other fossil proof. To which shall we hearken? The answer is obvious. As a schoolboy I was taught of the creation of the earth as its being a ball of molten matter thrown off by the sun by the rapidity of its rotations in the cooling process, as were also all other planets of our solar system, the moons in turn being crumblings from the planets in their cooling process; and so it was with the universe full of suns and their attending planets. But nothing was said about whence came the molten matter of the various suns or why they should be hot to begin with, or being hot, why there should be any occasion for any cooling process to take place. Does it not stand to reason that the conditions that made them hot in the first place would keep them hot forever, or that the cooling conditions of ether were as potent before the assembling of the bodies or sun masses as it was after their formation? inleeb,zs' fbfiid(nT-f- shrdlu etaoin ccq

Pardon me, but astronomers used to peer into the starry maze, look wise and then with pencil in hand tell you and me just how long it would be before the sun would burn itself up, and the planets dependent upon it for heat would then become solid masses of ice.

Prof. Larkin, I congratulate you on water on these old theories.

This has been a "theory" cursed world, so therefore I apologize in advance for making this knife thrust into Nature's much wounded sides in a vain attempt to bring forth the blood of truth, and I ask you to weigh it well on the balance with reason before casting it into oblivion's junk heap.

Let us first be agreed that all things—corpuscles, atoms, molecules— have an affinity for each other that tends toward concentration or centralization of kind. We have but to look around us in everyday life to observe the truth of this centralizing force evident in every condition in nature. Man attracts man until settlements, villages and cities are the result; and in these cities sin attracts sin and virtue its kind until each caste has its district. Wealth attracts wealth, and poverty breeds destitution. The greatest battle of the present age is against this inevitable attraction of wealth for wealth. Jesus Christ is given credit for warning humanity of this law in nature. Listen to his language in Matt. 25:29: "For unto everyone that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

We are beginning to fully realize the awfulness of the truth of this assertion. It was not a threat nor a curse from an angry God, but a plain statement of nature's law.

Now let us forget time for the space of a few million years and imagine ourselves in that period before the formation of any of the planets, suns or moons. We find ourselves floating through etheric space filled with a nebulous dust. To more clearly illustrate this, let us in imagination place in the center of each of the globes of the universe sufficient nitro-glycerine to blow them to atoms and then discharge it all at once. This dust has no place to fall for there is nothing up nor down, north nor south, east nor west, to the universal space. Then what is the result? It is now that electricity, which is the potential force of the universe, acts her part in the manifestation of the law of concentration of matter. The whole universe is a vortex of dust, every particle of which is polarized by this electric force. Yes, let us say that the universe is a vast sea of electrons, but I am not willing at this time to concede to them "directly," for if such were the case the creation would have been practically spontaneous. But directivity is a theory that is open for free thought, and I am open to conviction upon a practical theoretical demonstration of the matter.

Positive and negatively charged atoms of this vast field of dust began slowly attracting and repelling each other until soon tiny marbles were floating hither and yon, gathering strata after strata of their peculiar atoms from the sea of nebulae. It was not long, comparatively speaking, until these marbles had gained such proportions that their affinity for each other began manifesting itself and thus began the formation, rather the assembling of the solar systems. Each system being a perfectly adjusted, polarized magnet in itself, the attracting and repelling power of whose positive sun center extends just to the outer circle of its system.

Planets hold their relative positions in their respective systems; solar systems hold their relative positions in the constellations; constellation revolves around constellation—all is motion, all is harmonious, all works with a seemingly unity of purpose——the clarification of nebulous ether.

Various theories have been advanced and taught relative to the strata of the earth's formation; I am advancing a new one. Are you in a position to prove beyond a doubt anything to the contrary? When I speak of the earth I speak of all of the planets of the universe, for all are subject unto the one law. In their endless travels through space each is growing gradually larger and larger by the accumulation of this etheric dust. What is a meteoric shower other than the earth coming in close proximity to a floating mass of "dust marbles" that have not gained proportions to form independent planets or systems? My text book taught me that a meteorite is a mass of matter thrown off of some other planet by the centrifugal force of its rotation. Did anyone ever hear of a mountain peak flying off from the earth? That centrifugal force is peculiar to the earth as well as other planets.

The laws of creation are working to-day with as much power and force and to the same purpose as they did aeons ago, when the core of our earth was as but a grain of sand floating through space, jostled hither and yon by the attraction and repulsion of its fellows in the vast vortex of nebulae.

O. V. LaBOYTEAUX.

Reading, Michigan.

THE SPIRIT OF SERVICE.

They Also Serve Who Only Stand and Wait.

Out upon the spiritual sea there is room for every sail, and on the gentle air of Love there is space for every wing.

There are many workers in the beautiful vineyard of Truth. Love-souls who are seeking to bring more gentleness, sympathy and compassion into daily human life, sowing golden truths and loving deeds, cheering on the heart-sick, enthusing the laggard, making strong centers that radiate Light and Truth in waves all along the lines. To some the opportunity for work has not yet come—at least not outwardly—and to those whose portion it is to stand and wait, these lines may bring comfort, to know that while seemingly idle, unable to accomplish great deeds even though their hearts are filled with longing to work for humanity, they have have not yet found a place.

To these the way in which they stand and wait is their great test of devotion. Like the obscure brooks, and rills on the distant hillside—small and insignificant as they appear, their water sweet with the odor of mosses and wild flowers—at last reach the ocean, making again a part of the vast whole from whence they came. A single impulse of good is infinite. Wave wakes wave with ever multiplying motion, and thus the tide sweeps on, gathering force with each rebound. Nothing is lost. The very first ripple that woke in the dark alone, on the remotest shores of time shall never be divested of itself. Though changing oceans may for the time absorb and swallow it up, yet true to the instinct of all being, it pushes ever onward, toward the Free, The True, The Perfect.

So, in the lives of those who stand patiently waiting the call for some great work, may be gathered the aroma of sweet, loving acts, and thus are now a part of the great movement, for by their loving desire to help the current is sent along possibly striking those whose environments and fitness permit the carrying out of the impulse and the real act is done.

The only desire shows the possibility of accomplishment. For aught you know, you may be one of the active workers on the so-called invisible plane of existence. This to many is an unknown country and yet while the physical senses are wrapt in slumber they are dwellers of that realm known as the Astral Plane. Some have attained to sufficient soul unfoldment to be able to function there consciously, and they who do so understand the importance and value of astral work.

Countless spirits are thronging all the avenues of borderland, seeking to bring light into darkness, and to uplift humanity. And so we have the beautiful spirit of service exemplified both here and yonder. Know that all is well, for though sometimes the lower flight of the great staircase may be wreathed in mist, we know that it leads up to happier regions and purer air, where the light is always shining. If our hearts are loyal and our thoughts pure and helpful, it does not matter where our place in the ranks may be, for the growth from within will still go on, fitting us the better for future work.

Make them a radiant center in your hearts, that the Light may help all those about you to find peace and Truth! Then may come to your ears the sweet words of encouragement, "They also serve who only stand and wait." MRS. M. E. PARK.

San Francisco, Cal.

"The Attainment of Womanly Beauty of Form and Features. The Cultivation of Personal Beauty, Based on Hygiene and Health Culture. By twenty physicians and specialists. Edited by Albert Turner. Of special interest and value. Price $1.

"LOVE YE ONE ANOTHER."

A Practical Application of This Law Is Pointed Out.

As the sad tidings were wafted through the various channels of information that our beloved brother and co-worker Moses Hull, had so suddenly been called away, the news came like a thunderbolt in a clear sky—not only to friends at Los Angeles, who were anticipating the coming at an early date of the Hull Pilgrims, but to Spiritualists all over the world, who were intimately or indirectly, through his various publications, acquainted with him. Few there be who have so unselfishly devoted their lives to the welfare of their fellowman, as have Brother and Sister Hull, and our loss seems almost irreparable. His gigantic mind, his spirit of toleration, his heart that ever responded to the suffering and down-trodden of the children of earth, those eyes of interest, this response of soul, can no longer be felt in the physical sense by those who have listened to his logical and sound reasoning and felt that deep spirit of earnestness which was ever made manifest by this our arisen brother.

Every heart beats in deepest sympathy, and prayerful thoughts have gone toward the one so sadly bereft. Hundreds of friends have written words of consolation which have afforded her strength in this trying hour.

Our Moses has gone beyond the needs of our material help; but our Mattie is still with us. Responsibilities now rest doubly on her shoulders. Whilst her spirit will ever show its willingness to meet these material obligations, yet we know the bodily requirements must in time fail to respond.

These faithful workers have labored long in defense of truth, placed their lives as it were, on a sacrificial altar, without murmur or complaint. Whilst many of us sat in the quietness of a home shelter, and enjoyed its comforts, these same brave soldiers trod many a weary pathway that others coming after them might better share this field of labor. Hence, as Spiritualists, we owe it to Sister Mattie Hull, that each individually aid her by a just contribution, be it great or small. She ought to rest from her labors, not as an object of charity, but as one crowned, and rewarded for faithful service to humanity. Sister Hull has books, many, which as we know, hold gems of purest and best thoughts of both these able writers. Let us all avail ourselves at this time to purchase not only of these publications, but add thereto our mite. No better monument could be erected that would so meet with our arisen brother's approbation, than for him to know that Mattie, his loved one, has been released by this consideration of the Spiritualists at large, from all further anxiety as to her material needs for the remainder of her earthly pilgrimage.

To this suggestion by the writer, Sister Mattie replied in her modest way: "You are quite right; obligations are to be met in the way of large bills, etc. We have thousands of sale books, but these cannot be turned at once into money," etc. So, dear friends, let us show our sympathy beyond the expression of words, for these, whilst comforting to the soul, fail to meet material needs.

Sister Hull anticipates remaining in California until later in the Spring. She will visit Los Angeles during March, and may be the guest of the writer. Address would be 1931 Hobart boul. All contributions will be forwarded to her, if elsewhere in the city. Brother Francis would also gladly forward any contributions sent in his care.

If Spiritualism stands for anything, it stands for mutual and brotherly consideration of one another.

May we all be moved by this spirit at this time, thereby fulfilling the divinest law, "Love ye one another."

MRS. M. EMILIE KRATZ.

1931 Hobart boul., Los Angeles, Cal.

A Prominent Medium of Seattle Passed to Spirit Life.

The mortal remains of Mrs. Mary L. Spaulding were incinerated at the crematory in the Mount Pleasant cemetery on Sunday, the 10th inst. The funeral address was delivered by Miss Rice, a local medium, who made touching and appropriate reference to the sterling qualities and kindly ministrations of the departed. The musical selections were particularly fine and impressive.

The absence of the sombre trappings of woe were suggestive.

As the crematorium is of recent construction a number of friends remained to witness the incineration. Everything was conducted with commendable precision and judicious arrangement.

Mrs. Spaulding was the only public medium in Seattle eighteen years ago. With faithful assistants and undaunted persistency she advocated advanced ideas. No daring flight of inspiration was beyond her perception. Having been initiated and instructed by such a teacher as Mrs. Richmond, she was well qualified by mental susceptibility to embrace the best the spirit world could bestow. For many years she has been an invalid, and has felt more than others the sufferings possible in this world of contrast. As a philanthropist she was ever in sympathy reformatory work, and was a favorite with all.

The Spiritual convictions of both Mr. and Mrs. Spaulding were ever an oasis in the desert of material life's experiences. To converse with them on spiritual themes was an inspiration in itself. Their happy anticipations of the future shed a radiance round their pathway, and forcibly exemplified the divine consolations of our beautiful philosophy.

Mr. Spaulding has the profound sympathy of all who know him. He is a Spiritualist indeed, unassuming, retiring, but possessing that within which "passeth show," and whose daily life is a spiritual benediction.

C. G. OYSTON.

[Advertisement.]

NOW IS YOUR TIME—

PRICE REDUCED.

In order to place that valuable book, "MYSTERIES OF THE SEANCE," (written by a life-long Spiritualist) in the hands of as many Spiritualists and investigators as possible this winter, I have decided to CUT THE PRICE IN TWO, and will, until the supply on hand is exhausted, mail it to any address for 12 cents per copy—less than half the former price. This book gives all the methods employed by fake mediums in producing bogus manifestations in all the different phases, and instructs the reader how to detect and expose the fraud. A silver dime and red stamp brings you the book, prepaid, by return mail. Get it and avoid being fooled. Address, ED LUNT, 119 Cedar street, Roxbury, Mass.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies; a Review of Rev. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated attacks upon Spiritualism." By Moses Hull. Price 25 cents.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About seven words constitute one line.]

Another friend of The Progressive Thinker has gone higher. Mrs. Susan K. Griswold of Oregon township, Ohio, a pioneer Spiritualist, passed to spirit life, March 5, at the age of nearly 82 years. She was the only member of the family who believed in our philosophy, but was strong in it and was respected by all. The writer conducted the services.

ELIZABETH SCHAUSS.

The funeral of Laura Perry, the 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Perry, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the chapel of the Pittsburg Undertaking Company, exercises being conducted by Mrs. Sarah C. Scovell, of Galena. The funeral was attended by many of the friends of the bereaved parents, and many beautiful floral decorations were sent. Among those noticeable were those presented by the father's fellow employes of the Kansas City Southern shops. Interment was made in Mount Olive cemetery.—Headlight, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Passed to spirit life, from his home in Springdale, Iowa, Mr. Elza Maxson, aged 67 years. The deceased was one of the oldest settlers of the state; in fact he was one of the first children to be born in Iowa. At one time he was a member of John Brown's Harper's Ferry Company. Fortunate circumstances, however, prevented his accompanying Brown during the Ferry episode. He has been for many years an ardent and outspoken advocate of liberal thought, and has been known for his loyal adherence to everything he believed to be the right. Though often holding views contrary to those of his neighbors, his loyalty to the things he believed to be true, and his sterling honesty commanded the respect of all, as was evidenced by the large assemblage which gathered to do him honor. A Spiritualist, he knew of the life beyond death, and met the change without fear. A wife, two sons, three daughters, and four brothers and a sister, as well as numerous friends are left to mourn his departure. Services in the Friends' church, conducted by the writer.

WILL J. ERWOOD.

Peru, Ind.

Mr. Benjamin Champlin passed to spirit life March 7, 1907. He had just recently passed the 87th milestone of his life. He was a Spiritualist, and is surely enjoying a grand reunion with all of his family and friends on the other side. He remarked to me a few days before he passed out, "I had rather suffer wrong than do wrong."

CORRESPONDENT.

Willis Waife passed to spirit life, Dec. 31, from his home in Whatley, Mass., at the age of 56. He was a Spiritualist for many years. He will be missed not only by his loved ones, but also by his many friends. He had served as selectman for a number of terms, and was loved by all. Funeral services were conducted by the writer January 2. The floral tributes were beautiful.

WELLMAN C. WHITNEY.

Herbert L. Lord passed to spirit life January 19, at his home in South Deerfield, Mass., at the age of 45. He was a life-long Spiritualist, a man respected by all who knew him. Funeral services were held by the writer at the home, January 22. May the angel world comfort the wife and daughter in their hour of sorrow.

W. C. W.

William H. Kelsey passed to spirit life at Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 29, at the age of 72. He was a staunch Spiritualist for many years. Funeral services were held at Springfield, Mass., by the writer, February 4; burial in the Springfield cemetery. W. C. W.

Mr. Ober passed to spirit life, in his home at Saxon River, Vt., at the age of 78 years. He was an ardent Spiritualist for many years. May the angel world be a source of comfort to his widow, who is nearing the portals, only waiting to be called. The writer conducted the services, February 18.

W. C. W.

Passed to spirit life, from Greenwich Village, Mass., Gertrude, wife of Bert Brooks, aged 38 years. Her long illness was borne with the smiling patience which had characterized her life, and glorified that of her devoted companion, for whose sake she bravely strove to live. Sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends filled the home the day of the memorial service. Flowers, music and words of comfort voiced by the writer, did their mission of cheer.

JULIETTE YEAW.

Leominster, Mass.

Passed to spirit life, from East Princeton, Mass., Sophia, widow of the late Elisha Stuart, aged 87 years. A Spiritualist for many years, her life was serene and peaceful; her passing on was equally beautiful. The service was conducted by the writer, assisted by the Congregational minister. A profusion of choice flowers, and sweet music emphasized the "Triumph of Life. JULIETTE YEAW.

Leominster, Mass.

Passed to spirit life lately, at the home of his son in Factoryville, Pa., Dr. James K. Bailey, of Scranton, Pa. aged 81 years.

Dr. Bailey has been a resident of Scranton since 1884. He was born at Cooperstown, N. Y., March 8, 1826. For many years he was prominent through out the United States as a public speaker and lecturer on Spiritualistic subjects. He was a man of marked personality and charm of manner and until old age began to lessen his vigor and vitality lecturing tours kept him active. Many old Spiritualists will remember him with kindly feelings. He is survived by a widow, Julia C., and one son, Wilson Bailey.

"NO BEGINNING."

An Excellent Work for Thinkers.

This book, "No Beginning," is by William H. Maple. The Arena says of it: "The argument is unanswerable. The book will at once appeal to the reason of every reader, and leave him more amazed than ever at the prevalence of the theory of Creation." The Two has always been a fateful num- Free Thought Ideal says: "We found it full of glittering thoughts for thinkers, and the very death warrant of Christian superstition shines upon its pages." Price $1 cloth.

ADOLPH LANGNER,

Aluminum Trumpets for Spiritual Manifestations, 1149 N. Hamlin ave., Chicago.

MRS. E. M. HITCHCOCK will answer 5 questions for 25c. Send own handwriting and lock of hair. Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash.

"CLAIRVOYANT READINGS!"

Send full name and date of birth. Six questions answered on business the present or future. $1. Address, Mary Frances Woodford, 745 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Mass.

WAINAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Wainah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

"Neltzel" The Astrological Seer, gives truthful predictions. Send 25 cents (silver) and date of birth, for a trial reading with prospects of coming year. Full reading with Horoscope, $1 to $2. Address F. F. NEITZEL, Box 988, Spokane, Wash.

MRS. MAY A. PRICE.

Clairvoyant Readings by mail, regarding material and spiritual conditions. Diseases diagnosed. Mental—Spiritual treatment given. A specialty of nervous and mental troubles. Obsession cured. Laws and safe conditions of mediumship taught. Send lock of hair, date of birth, and $1.00. Ask questions. 1718 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

CUT THIS OUT This offer will not appear again. To those wish to Take Up MENTAL SCIENCE, we offer them one volume of "THINK ARIGHT," (which comes in four volumes of one dollar each), for 15 cents to help pay postage.

Gringhuis' Itemized Ledger Co.,

No. 129 Canal St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Social Spiritism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Are You a Psychic?

A psychic is one who is sensitive to supernormal vibrations. Everyone is a psychic and can demonstrate a certain phase or degree of power. My "System of Philosophy Concerning Divinity," when applied develops you psychically. Proof of the pudding is in the eating. Apply my system and prove it. Send for circulars, terms, etc., enclosing a stamped addressed envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Road, Brookline, Mass.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS,

2228 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts. FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as per my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop ave., Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth St.

San Jose, Cal

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,

25 Warren St. Stoneham, Mass.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 185 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth 50c.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism

A Treatise on

HUMAN CULTURE.

By Leroy Berrier Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

The Wonders of Life.

By ERNEST HAECKEL. Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

CONCENTRATION.

A Valuable Work.

Concentration, Meditation and Inspiration. How to develop these desirable gifts according to the most approved methods of ancient and modern teachers, together with a set of six symbols comprising six months' study. By Laura G. Fixen.

A course of practical experimental lessons, of especial value and assistance to those who desire to be benefited by the development of powers of concentration of thought, clear meditation and superior inspiration.

Sent complete for 50 cents.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

Man and the Spirit World as Disclosed in the Bible." By Rev. Arthur Chambers, Associate of King's College, London. An excellent book for Christian people who would investigate and learn the facts of Bible teachings as well as modern spirit phenomena. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 30, 1907 NO. 905

Materialization.

The Spirit Boy and His Antics in a Circle, Illustrating His Remarkable Powers.

Even among those accepting the tenets of Spiritism, materialization is doubted by many. This is because mediums as a rule do not submit to those tests which the fair-minded deem proper. The manifestations must be in semi-darkness and the materialized not touched—not tested by clear vision and feeling. The reasons given are:

"Light impairs the gathering of strength sufficient to take on form, and touch destroys the accreted molecules, and the entity of the spirit's visibility is dissipated."

This excuse may suffice for the credulous and unthinking; but to the serious, sincere and capable, it smacks too much of sophistry.

Even the capable and sincere who vouch for the fact of materialization having been demonstrated under their scrutiny, the explanation is offered by the doubter that the subject was self-hypnotized; that he imagined seeing and hearing the things suggested by the medium.

This explanation at best, is but a vague plausibility to those who have not witnessed the particular phenomenon detailed; but to the careful investigator, who has safe-guarded against delusions, and who has seen and heard the various evidences of spirit manifestations, self-delusion or hypnotic suggestion cannot be acceded to as the solution of the enigma.

Were mediums above suspicion—the general run of mediums willing to submit to reasonable tests—then these doubts as to materialization would vanish, and the question be solved, either as a fact, or a fiction, and a fraud.

If there has been one honest materialization, then there can be others that will stand the closest scrutiny.

That there have been honest materializations, my experience justifies me in believing, notwithstanding the assertion, entirely gratuitous, that I was hypnotized, or by auto-suggestion, however that may be, self-deluded.

The experiences related in my article published in The Progressive Thinker, March 2, warrants my acceptance of materialization as a fact, but another incident witnessed by me, supplements and substantiates this belief to such a degree that my faith is so merged into knowledge that it cannot be displaced as a verity by the incredulity of those lacking my particular observations.

At a gathering held by the medium where the materialization detailed in my former article took place, I witnessed one quite as positive and assurance.

An elderly man, whose life had been a seafaring one, was a regular attendant, primarily to receive visits from his little grandson. This old man was of rugged constitution, hale, vigorous and mentally alert. His merriments and his strong voice gave evidence that senility had not placed its stamp upon bodily vigor or mentality.

The usual routine had been gone through with, and several manifestations of materialization taken place, when was seen another of the nebulous formations at the parting of the curtains, gradually unfolding and enlarging, until a form of a little boy developed, apparently about seven years of age. The old Captain recognized his little grandchild, and called out, "Is that you, Tommy?"

This body—characterize it anyway you may—answered, "Yes, Grandpa," and started on a run the distance of fully ten feet, and when reaching his grandfather, he jumped into his lap and outstretched arms, the old man patting and hugging the lad, and kissing him with all the ardor we see displayed towards the actual physical being.

No one present doubted that this grandchild of the old captain was veritably present in bodily substantiality, and the old man's voice, tenderness and joy, evidenced his absolute faith in the actual presence, visible and palpable, of his grandchild.

Were the captain and the others of the audience hypnotized by the medium, or self-deluded by auto-suggestion, and none of them conscious of the change in themselves?

It is hardly thinkable. The little fellow, his voice heard by everyone in the circle, asked, "How is Mamma?" and the captain answering, "She is well." "Give my love to Mamma, and tell her I'm happy," said the spirit boy.

The captain asked Tommy if he had learned to ride his bicycle yet? (The inference from this inquiry being, that in some former materialization he had told his grandpa that he was trying to ride a bicycle.) The boy said, "I'll show you," leaping from the lap of the old gentleman, and instantly he was seen circling around with such velocity that the many concentric circles appeared as one broad ribbon of hazy light, the speed gradually slowing down, and then the eye beheld him standing in the center of the circle, where he slowly diminished and vanished from sight.

On another occasion I have seen several materialized spirit-bodies at one time in the center of the circle, though the light was so dim they were of vapory indistinctness, each singing, some in alto, others in soprano, again others in tenor and base, evidencing their individuality in form and voice, and dematerializing in the presence of all.

If there were any trick or delusion here where the room had been examined most carefully, and absence of all paraphernalia noted, then this medium possessed a skill or an art that would have won her fame and fortune on a larger stage, for as far as it was possible for a careful examination of the room and furniture to disclose, it was simply out of the question for this woman to have made provision for the secretion of so many persons as assistants in her performances.

If I was deluded or deceived in any way; if there were any human agencies or tricks in these manifestations, then my attributes fail to impress me with any sense of self-delusion, swaying suggestions or questions of doubt.

These were the most perfect performances I ever witnessed; they were the most marvelous expositions of legerdemain, of they were the veritable materialization of departed spirits.

Until I have as visible, palpable and assuring evidences given me that I was a victim of some hallucination, I must yield my belief to that assurance my sincere investigation urges that I beheld veritable materialization of the spirit of the departed human

If, therefore, matelialization is a fact, there should be means, methods, capabilities, to prove the matter beyond cavil, and if there are any sincere, honorable mediums holding the belief, then they should submit their manifestation to the careful scrutiny of the intelligent and earnest seeker for truth in order that Spiritism may be kept on the broad base of actuality, so that the testimony of many may be the answer to the critics who claim that Spiritism is but the thing that charlatans conjure with.

J. B. N. BERRY.

Washington, D. C.

RACE SUICIDE.

The Question Viewed From the Socialist Standpoint.

In reading my Progressive Thinker No. 904, I see an article by Brother E. J. Barnett, of our own little city, on the question of Race Suicide. It appears to me the brother does not go on to the subject deep enough. I would like to ask what will be the outcome if the brother's idea is carried to its logical conclusion. In a few generations the earth will be greatly depopulated and in time the human race become extinct, at least under our present economic system. The progress of the human family means the making for life. A social system which does not make for life cannot long survive.

I will agree with the Brother in one thing, under our present system (the competitive system) the man who has to work for a living has a hard time to get along, let alone doing anything like justice towards the educating of a moderately large family—in other words, he cannot do it.

I claim there is nothing in existence either good, bad or indifferent, but there is a cause for it; and these things that are detrimental to our welfare we should search for, find out the cause, and remove it. Now, as long as we hold to our present system, it seems to me we will have the same results, that we (the working men) will keep on furnishing the world with tramps, etc., for they are the natural productions of our system.

This question of Race Suicide is in reality an economic question, and as long as the present system of strife is kept up we are bound to have the results. Therefore, I say, remove the cause.

This, like lots of other questions, the people should dig and delve into and find the cause and remove it; and don't be trying to remedy the matter by going after the results, for as long as the cause remains, we will surely have what it produces. This is nature and you cannot change it.

Now, as long as the man who works for a livelihood does not know enough to get at the bottom of this thing, he will have to grin and bear it. If the man who has to earn his bread by the sweat of his face only knew all these questions could be settled by him, he has the power if he will only think a little for himself, and stop letting others think for him.

When the means of producing wealth are owned by the people in common, and production is for use instead of for profit, it will be possible for all, even ten or twenty times the number of people now in existence, to make a good living easily, and there will be no incentive to wholesale economic murder, as is the case to-day.

The kind of blessings the people of this country or any other country want, can be most emphatically set down as no war, no poor-houses, no jails, no charity institutions. Or, in other words, peace, plenty, honor and love, with a large, happy, self-respecting citizenship to enjoy the same.

The poor woman and her seven children have just the same right to life and its outcome as Emperor William or president Roosevelt, and we need both quality and quantity.

R BAYLES.

Harvey, Illinois.

NATURE—GOD.

The flowers that bloom in springtime
When the frosts have gone away;
The leaves that shade our pathway
In the warm and sunny day;
The stream, whose silvery waters
Smoothly glide to ocean's bed
Symbolize to us daily
That God's love is never dead.

We hear the roar of the cataract,
And the songs of happy birds;
We hear the dash of ocean waves
As they on gray rocks surge;
We hear the roll of thunder
And see the lightning's play,
We hear in these the voice of Him
Whom we must all obey.

The balmy breeze of evening
That gently fans the brow;
The moonlight's silvery rays
Stealing through the sweetest boughs,
The beauty and the grandeur
Of nature all sublime,
Speaks to us in language
Of Father, God Divine.

The human soul can never die,
For of God we are a part:
He gives us life, love, intuition,
Faith, hope, to fill the heart.
All Nature that's around us
Is in harmony with the soul,
Every particle has its motive,
All united form the Whole.

L. J. BLISS.

Rock Creek, Ohio.

The practice of self-restraint and renunciation is not happiness, though it may be something much better.—T. H. Huxley.

Reason must be our last guide and judge in everything.—John Locke.

A fool in revolt is infinitely wiser than the philosopher forging a learned apology for his chains.—Rossitter.

Justice is the constant desire and effort to render every man his due.—Justinian.

The world is continually growing better to all who are honestly trying to make it better.—Everett McNeil.

The Secular Press.

Aiding The Progressive Thinker in Spreading the Grand Truths of Spiritualism, Demonstrating the Important Fact that the Departing Soul Can Be Seen.

That the departure of the "soul" from the human body [as set forth in the Chicago Inter-Ocean] may be attended by other manifestations than the loss of weight is the declaration of two well-known Chicago physicians.

The experiments which have been conducted by five prominent Massachusetts physicians, in which it is claimed that when this soul takes its departure it diminishes the weight of the body by a certain measurable amount, and that this amount can be weighed in actual pounds or fractions of pounds, has caused a sensation among the medical fraternity. The appearance of the complete report of the results of the findings of the New England practitioners is awaited with the greatest interest.

The members of the medical profession are not inclined to indulge in speculations or flights of fancy respecting the phenomena which they are constantly called upon to witness in their ministrations to the sick and the dying. Nevertheless it frequently happens that they do come in contact with a condition which it is impossible to explain by the ordinary methods by which cases are diagnosed.

South Side Practitioner Relates Weird Experience.

"From two experiences which I have had in fifteen years' experience as a medical practitioner I am inclined to believe the report that the Massachusetts physicians have demonstrated that the 'soul,' or whatever it is that leaves the body at the moment of death, has weight," said Dr. Rose M. Reading of 6444 Lexington avenue. "The first of the incidents which I will relate occurred some ten years ago, and I said nothing about it publicly at the time for fear I might be looked upon as flighty or erratic, but when, three or four years later, I had the same experience, and it was witnessed by my husband, Dr. Arthur H. Reading, and neither of us could explain it, I am led to believe that there is something that departs from the body at the time of death which not only possesses weight, but at times is visible.

"I had spent a busy evening in my office on the night in question, and at about 10 o'clock I was called to a house to attend a sick child. The baby was only about one month old, and its mother was young, poor, and inexperienced. The circumstances are so firmly impressed upon my mind that it seems only yesterday that it occurred. I was not in the least tired on that night, my nerves were in excellent condition, consequently I believe there was nothing wrong with me mentally, so that I would not be a compentent witness to what followed.

Held Baby on Her Lap While Its Life Ebbed Away.

"The moment I saw the baby I recognized that it was dying. The mother asked me what was the matter, and I told her that it was evident that the child could not live and that nothing could be done. The little thing was lying on a pillow, and I took it up and held it on my lap directly in front of me and beneath the gas light so that I could watch it closely and do something for it if possible. But there was nothing to be done. I recall watching its breathing grow fainter and fainter, and I felt to myself that perhaps it was just as well that the child should pass out of the world peacefully and before it had to go through the suffering that so many of that class must necessarily experience. It may sound cold-blooded, but that was the only emotion I felt.

"I could tell within a few minutes when the end was near, and just at the moment when I know the little life was ebbing out there seemed to be a slight haze rise from the body, and it passed upward diagonally toward the ceiling. At the instant it rose the little limbs of the child relaxed, and it straightened out naturally and peacefully. I related the incident to my husband shortly afterward, but he paid little attention to it at the time.

"The second incident of the kind was so similar that it has impressed itself indelibly upon my memory. I had been attending an aged blacksmith who lived on the South Side. He was well known in the neighborhood, quite well to do, and he was slowly dying of old age. He was about 68 years old, as I remember. On the night in question I called at the house with my husband, and I could see at once that the end was near. The members of his family were all grouped about his bed, the priest was there to administer the last rites to the dying, and the life of the old man was slowly ebbing out. To me there was nothing particularly pathetic in the scene. The old man had lived out his measure of usefulness on this earth, his family and children were well provided for, and he was passing away in the natural course of events.

"I know that my husband and myself stood in the doorway of the room gazing down at the old man. The room was absolutely silent but for the half whispered prayers of the priest. As the gaze of both myself and my husband was concentrated on the features of the old blacksmith, once more there appeared a slight haze, which in a second seemed to assume the form of the dying man, and then it passed upward and diagonally almost like a puff of cigar smoke. I remember I clutched my husband by the wrist, but he had noticed it also. As the haze lifted from the body the limbs also relaxed, the lines in the face seemed to be obliterated, and he died as peacefully and calmly as had the little child.

Both Physicians Agree on Appearance of Phenomena.

"As we walked toward our home I told my husband that the phenomena was exactly the same as that I had witnessed some years before and he was compelled to admit that it had occurred. We have discussed that circumstance among ourselves at numerous intervals ever since and neither of us has ever been able to account for it on any other theory than that at the moment of death something leaves the body which we cannot account for. I am not prepared to say that it is the soul, and neither would I say that it is not. Now, I firmly believe that whatever it was in those two instances, it was something tangible and possessed weight. Therefore, I believe that the experiments of the physicians in Massachusetts should be taken seriously.

"Since that time I have witnessed a number of death bed scenes, but have never witnessed any similar phenomena. I have watched for it, but have never seen anything resembling it. I account for it in those two instances by the fact that I was not watching for it and my mind was open to seize and note anything unusual. I am not in the least a believer in Spiritualism, psychic phenomena, or the supernatural, yet when I come across circumstances so unusual as those which I have related I have to admit that there are a great many conditions existing in this world of ours connected with ourselves which all the investigations of science cannot explain.

Publicity of Eastern Test Has Aroused Intense Interest.

"Had it not been for the publicity given the work of these Massachusetts physicians I should have said nothing of these two incidents, but I think they are worthy of note taken in connection with their findings. Whether other physicians have had similar experiences or not I do not know. I do not think the medical profession as a rule would care to discuss a subject concerning which it can offer no adequate explanation. I am contemplating sending a detailed report of these two occurrences to the Society for Psychical Research."

Dr. A. H. Reading, who witnessed the death of the old blacksmith, said that the circumstances were exactly as she had described them.

"I do not know when I have been similarly impressed," said Dr. Reading. "I have been unable to account for the phenomena we witnessed, but I am not prepared yet to admit that the soul has weight, impressive as are the experiments of the Massachusetts physicians. I do not believe that the difference in weight before and after death can be accounted for solely by the expulsion of air from the lungs or the contraction of the lung cells. I am waiting with great interest the appearance of the complete reports upon the subject."

Believes Weight of Soul to Be Almost Infinitesimal.

Dr. Carl A. Wickland of 616 North Wells street, who has been an extensive student of abnormal psychology or medical psycho-pathology, which has led him to recognize obsession by spirits, says that if the soul has weight, which seems altogether improbable, its weight would be inconceivable from our gross, material plane.

"But, accepting the double body, that is a physical and a spiritual body hypothesis," said Dr. Wickland, "we are certainly obliged to concede weight, however slight, also for the spiritual body. Though the soul or intelligence is, at least to my way of thinking, formless and in essence unlimited and knows no boundaries, yet for the purpose of expression intelligence or soul must of necessity do so through form of some substance. Such substance would imply weight.

"That the soul occupies or manifests through a spiritual body 'an etheric double,' an exact counterpart of the physical body after the change called death, I believe the student can have but little doubt. The Bible record (I. Cor. xv:44-5) says 'if there is a natural body there is also a spiritual body.'

"On the other hand, there are many cases on record where an individual has lost a limb, say an arm or leg, by accident or otherwise, necessitating amputation, who afterward would complain of pain in the amputated member, or, rather, where it used to be. Many such cases have come to my observation. Only some months ago a man who had had his leg amputated, when I applied the electric current to the nerves governing the leg, complained that it cramped his toes in the missing foot. Such facts, which can be recounted without number, imply an invisible counterpart. If Dr. McDougall's experience in weighing the departing spirit or soul is correct, it should be equally possible to ascertain the weight of a spirit when it is controlling a mortal's body. This proposition of weight opens up a new and interesting field of psychic research, which I certainly shall take advantage of.

Says Power of Mind May Affect Weight.

"The power of mind in affecting weight, no doubt, will have to be reckoned with, especially if we are to accept the alleged experience of the Eastern physicians. That the soul that weighs is bound to earth, as Professor Charles E. Mayo says, is by no means a fiction, but largely a truth, and which is usually due to the mind's earthiness. In making my comments upon the work of these Eastern experimenters I am reasoning as a physician and not as a Spiritualist."

The experiments in the East have been conducted at a sanitarium in Massachusetts for the last six years, and the results have been carefully compiled. Dr. Duncan Macdougall of Haverhill gave the following description of some of the experiments which were regarded as the most conclusive:

"Four other physicians under my direction made the first test upon a patient dying with tuberculosis. This man was one of the ordinary type of the usual American temperament, neither particularly high strung nor of marked phlegmatic disposition. We placed him a few hours preceding death, upon a scale platform, which I had constructed, and which was accurately balanced.

"Four hours later, with five doctors in attendance, he died.

"The instant life ceased the opposite scale pan fell with a suddenness that was astonishing—as if something had been suddenly lifted from the body.

"Immediately all the usual deductions were made for physical loss of weight, and it was discovered that there was still a full ounce of weight unaccounted for.

"My fellow physicians were mystified and only half convinced. I myself had grave doubts that our calculations were correct. Otherwise, how was it possible to account for this strange loss. There was no known scientific manner of doing so.

"As a result of this doubt, I submitted another subject afflicted with the same disease and nearing death to the same experiment. He was a man of much the same temperament as the preceding patient and of about the same physical type.

"The same result happened at the passing of his life. The instant the heart ceased to beat there was the sudden and almost uncanny diminishment in weight.

"As experimenters, each physician in attendance made figures of his own concerning this loss, and, at a consultation, these figures were compared. The unaccountable loss continued to be shown.

Question Then Arose as to Meaning of Weight.

"The question then arose as to what the loss meant. It was a loss of substance, which could be obtained in known figures, which was also such a singularly appreciable loss as to place it beyond all doubt that it might be due to any error in calculation.

"The two separate differences obtained correspond, each being of about an ounce.

"But this was less remarkable than what took place in the third case. The subject was that of a man of larger physical build, with a pronounced sluggish temperament.

"When life ceased, as the body lay in bed upon the scales, for a full minute there appeared to be no change in weight. The physicians waiting in the room looked into each other's faces silently, shaking their heads in the conviction that our test had failed.

"Then suddenly the same thing happened that had occurred in the other cases. There was a sudden diminishment in weight, which was found to be the same as that of the preceding experiments.

"I believe that in this case, that of a phlegmatic man, slow of thought and action, that the soul remained suspended in the body after death, during the minute that elapsed before it came to the consciousness of its freedom. There is no other way of accounting for it, and it is what might be expected to happen in a man of the subject's temperament.

"Three other cases were tried, including that of a woman, and in each it was established that a weight of from one-half to a full ounce departed from the body at the moment of expiration. In nearly every experiment each physician made his own figures, and then a comparison of results followed.

All Tests Met With Same Peculiar Results.

"Every test was made to disprove as well as to prove the peculiar results, but always with the same definite and marked change.

"Thus it appears that the soul must be some space-occupying body, either of gravitated or some other form of matter which has weight.

"If this strange loss is not due to the weight of the departing soul it remains for some one to offer a better solution of the mystery.

"I think that any one present at those tests and witnessing the startling change in the body's weight when life fled, would be convinced that this is the only solution."

Dr. Macdougall declares his belief to be that this soul substance is so fine that it could not be confined by any known material that man possesses. He thinks that it might much resemble the X-ray, which can be made to pass through the most dense substance.

He does not believe that if the body was confined in a steel case the instant before death there would be a possibility of keeping the soul shut in.

Experimenter Says Soul Substance Can Never Be Confined.

Preparations are being made at the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus to test the theory that the human soul can be weighed, propounded by the Massachusetts physicians.

Scientists and doctors have practically prevailed upon the penitentiary officials to put the theory to a test. They purpose to use Dr. Oliver Haugh of Dayton, who murdered his father, mother and brother, for the test. He will be electrocuted next month and his body will be weighed just before execution and immediately after. The proposed subject of the experiment has offered no objection.

FREDERIC NORTH SHOREY.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

An Easter Offering to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

As many as the flocks of white-winged doves
That circle o'er the Eastern Isles and Sea,
Are all the thoughts and prayers for thee
From hearts of countless women; each one moves
Closer to thee by one common accord:—
The tie of womanhood; the mandate of the Lord.

Such time, as tender pity for thy years
Of sorrow pierced their hearts with pain
And indignation, that the minion of the law
(Striving by torture to forestall a flaw)
Can use a craven's weapon,—naught to gain—
Commiseration for thy bitter tears
And admiration for thy strength of love,
And his great love, these must our gift approve.

Can we thus lay our offering on thy heart?
Bringing the Balm and sweetest Rosemary,
And Violets and Pansies, and all sweet flowers that be?
That may their incense and their strength impart?
White Roses, (thornless) Lilies of the Valley sweet,
And Easter Lilies, growing 'round thy feet?

I had a dream of thee on yester-night:
Methought it was the precious night before
The Easter Morn:—as yet the purple door
Of Day was closed; only the light
Of the star-lighted spaces gleamed above
With unaccustomed splendor:—there did move

Belted Orion; the mild-eyed Pleiades
Had passed the far horizon's verge—away;
The wondrous planet presaging the day
Was there, the early Dawn to please—
Sweet Hesper-Phospher, waiting, shone,—
Love's Star, in all that wondrous scene alone.

Close to the symbol—Sepulcher—e'en thou and he
Were kneeling;—(Sepulcher of all things that die:
All worst things, past things, things that 'neath the sky
Are never, never, nevermore to be).
Hands clasped, shaded faces love-rapt, still Waiting the Resurrection to fulfill.

The mother of thy love was there with eyes
Turned heavenward, and her tender hands
Rested on you twain, while soft bands
Of light circled o'er her and you blessing-wise,
And something from the freighted stillness stirred,
One only note from a still dreaming bird.

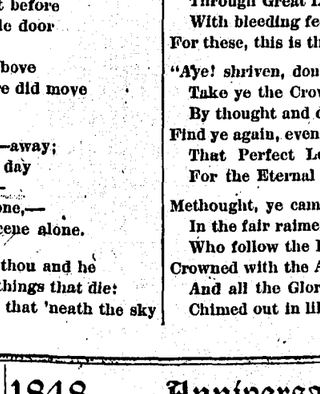
Above there bent the blest Madonna—fair—
Attended by her maidens twelve, who wove
New shining raiment, such as souls approve,
And as they wove, they chanted, low and rare,
A symphony of love and tenderness,
And this they wove into their shining dress.

Then close, so near with you as to touch hands,
Came the One Presence, Humanly Divine,
In whose deep eyes only Heaven's Love doth shine,
In whose sweet voice are only Love's commands.
He spake: "I am he once thought dead, arisen,
This is the Resurrection; Souls from prison,

"All who through deep suffering have been born,
Through Great Love and Supremest Sacrifice,
With bleeding feet and tear-wet, aching eyes,
For these, this is the Resurrection Morn.

"Aye! shriven, doubly purified and blest;
Take ye the Crown at last of faithful love;
By thought and deed and word Love's grace approve
Find ye again, even by Holy quest,
That Perfect Love casteth out every fear,
For the Eternal One is ever near."

Methought, ye came forth as bride and groom, arrayed
In the fair raiment woven by their hands
Who follow the Blest Mother's blest commands,
Crowned with the Aureole His hands had made;—
And all the Glories that in Easter meet
Chimed out in lilies growing 'round your feet.



CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

1848. Anniversary Poem. 1907.

To the Three Little Girls at Hydesville, and the Cause They Instituted in the Year 1848.

In Eighteen-Hundred and Forty-Eight—
The evening was quiet, but not very late—
Up out of the darkness and ignorance came
A truth of the future that kindled a flame.

Rap! Rap! Rap! Rap! came a sound on the wall
That caused superstition to crumble and fall;
It knew how to count; it knew how to spell;
It knew the true meaning of heaven and hell.

LEAH FOX UNDERHILL.

It wasn't so much for the children to do,
But it started the people to thinking anew;
And old-time religion beginning to fall,
Lifted her mantle and loosened her thrall.

The odor of brimstone that once filled the air
Was changed to a fragrance far sweeter, more rare;
The great gulf of darkness between the two spheres
Just melted to nothing and ended our fears.

The bell that once sounded the signal of doom,
And filled human spirits with heaviest gloom,
Sends music to soul-land announcing a birth,
A beauteous transition; ascending from earth.

The graves that once covered our kindred from view,
Have opened and loved ones are peeping back through,
And hearts bowed in sorrow around the cold bier
Are cheered with the knowledge the dead are still near.

The pictures from pulpits are brighter by far—
With angels awaiting and gates wide ajar;
All heaven is beaming with gladness and cheer,
And few now of Satan have any great fear.

That great lake of brimstone, the demons of hell,
Have gone from religion; just leaving the smell;
All infant damnation—the curse of mankind—
Has passed to an ending away from the mind.

Dependence on Saviors is laid on the shelf
And each living spirit depends on itself.
The God of one being is God over all,
And nothing can ever from that God-head fall.

KATIE FOX JENCKEN.

In fact, since those children have opened the door,
And given earth access to that other shore,
A great evolution has swept o'er this sphere
That has anchored forever the two worlds anear.

No time and no power can stay its great move;
Its light of the spirit the future must prove,
And all human beings some day will uphold
The Cause that these babies once helped to unfold.

Well, this is the story and truth, very brief,
How three little girlies gave spirit relief
To a race groping blindly along a dark way,
And gave to man's reason the light of new day.

It gave to religion its own solid base;
It gave unto science a lift to its place;
It gave to all living creatures a right
To existence eternal—to spirit new light.

DR. T. WILKINS.

MARGARETTA FOX KANE.

I belong to the great church that holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.—Ingersoll.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

Honest error is to be pitied, not ridiculed.—Chesterfield.

THE REAL REASON

Why More People Do Not Go to Church.

The following appeared in the Tacoma Daily Times a few days ago:

"Practically all preachers in Tacoma favor the union of the denominations into one great church of the Protestant faith, but they still keep apart and Dr. E. T. Ford of the First Congregational church said very vigorously this morning at the Ministerial Alliance meeting that the thing which is keeping them apart is the church bureaucracy.

"The people are for it and if we could change the bureaucracy and get the ministers to stand for it we would have it. But I have prayed for it, and worked for it and talked for it and I am getting impatient for it," he said.

"The question came up on a paper read by Rev. John Reid favoring church union. He said the poor now are keeping aloof from the church. They have no confidence in it. Not more than 40 per cent of the people in this country, he said, are in the church and many of these are far away from a true religious life.

"He thought conditions deplorable. Bishops and elders, he declared, are running hot foot over the same territory chasing each other around to build up a church establishment rather than to build up Christian character. This was due to the competition of the denominations, he said.

"Nearly a dozen ministers discussed the subject and all but one or two were for immediate church union."

The city of Tacoma has ninety churches. None of them are well attended, it is said. What is true in this respect in this city, is doubtless true of the orthodox churches in general throughout the United States. Several years ago, the attendance of men at orthodox services, dropped down to a low per cent. Now, women are beginning to think. Many of them are flocking to the liberal churches, or the various New Thought society meetings, and the clergy are growing very nervous over the situation. Frequent are the discussions, "What is the cause of the increasing non-attendance at divine service?" All sorts of reasons are assigned by the panic-stricken preachers. Occasionally, one states the true cause of the trouble. The Rev. Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard University, says: "Outside of what is called religion, there is no place where absolute truth is fixed. There is an irresistible trend toward the belief that truth cannot be fixed. In the religion of philosophy and metaphysics there is an incessant flux; in chemistry, zoology, botany, no one for a moment believes that the end has been reached. Why should the theologian say he has reached the fixed point in his research?"

The speaker likened the theme of science to the mariner feeling his way carefully and slowly into a harbor overhung with fog.

"That is precisely what the men of science are doing," said President Eliot. "They know how slowly, painfully, patiently they must make their way. The theologian takes a different attitude. He sees in the fog of mystery a thing to be believed. The scientific man is going to rule. Before long it will be only his way that will command the respect of thinking people."

President Eliot diagnoses the case correctly. The people have outgrown the old paganistic dogmas of the "fall," a virgin-born god, his cruel death to appease the wrath of his savage father, an endless hell for those who could not accept "the great plan of salvation" through the blood of a slain god, or who had never heard of the "plan." I repeat that intelligent thinking people no longer believe these pagan doctrines, and the clergy have not yet found out what is the trouble. The old theology which taught that bad men can load all their sins on Jesus, and by one great leap land in heavenly bliss, and that there is no merit in living a moral life outside of the church if unbaptized; that man's morality is "filth and rags in the sight of God," no longer goes with intelligent people. The fact is, old orthodoxy is dead as a door nail. It only needs a decent burial. There will be no mourners at the interment except the old fogy preachers, and a straggling few men and women who are too aged to change old faiths for new ones. President Eliot says: "The scientific man is going to rule." He is not only going to rule but to a very great degree is ruling now.

I am sorry for the preachers. They generally are sincere and mean well. They were taught to look backwards for all wisdom and to oppose all progress. They were told that every new idea was prompted by the devil. They were made to think that a collection of old manuscripts, written in an ignorant age of the world, was every word inspired and infallible. They have refused to read but one side of the history of bibles and religions. They haven't kept up with the times. They scoffed at the teaching of science and ridiculed the law of evolution and persisted in declaring that all they had to do was to preach "Christ and him crucified." The laity has marched by them, hence the empty pews, the few students in the theological colleges, the small salaries and they grudgingly paid.

Various plans are being brought forward and advocated to counteract this religious indifference. Some preachers say, "a literal and endless hell of fire and brimstone for the unbelievers should be preached energetically"; others propose putting into the church basements, billiard tables, and ten-pin alleys, and other amusements, and still others, such as the Tacoma pastors, propose a church trust, and the erection of one big building in which the Protestants may pool their interests and unite their congregations. In my opinion, the latter suggestion is the better one. Unite your flocks, brethren, and then carefully consider the statement of President Eliot. Open up your church-houses for the delivery of lectures on science. This is the only way in which you can "command the respect of thinking people." Old orthodoxy has too much paganism in it to win the respect of reading, thinking people of this enlightened day. Higher criticism and science have destroyed the belief of the people in the Bible's flat earth, a cruel, wrathful, changeable god, the blood atonement, an endless hell, an all-powerful, ubiquitous devil, the resurrection of physical bodies and other cardinal orthodox doctrines. Wipe them all off the slate and begin anew.

R. A. DAGUE.

Tacoma, Wash.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

Bewildered Spirits.

Lessons Drawn From the San Francisco Disaster.

"TO UNDERTAKE TO DEVELOP PHYSICAL MEDIUMSHIP WITH ONLY THE LOW DESIRE TO SELL IT AS A MEANS OF LIVELIHOOD IS AS DANGEROUS AS PLAYING WITH FIRE, AND HAS BEEN THE OPEN DOOR FOR THE FREE ENTRY OF ALL THE BLACK SHEEP THAT HAVE BROUGHT SO MUCH SHAME AND DISGRACE UPON THE GRANDEST TEACHINGS (WHICH IT IS QUITE POSSIBLE TO EXEMPLIFY AS TRUTHS IF WE CAN KEEP THEM PURE) THAT HAVE EVER BEEN BROUGHT TO THE ATTENTION OF THE CHILDREN OF THIS DARK PLANET."

The communication of Miss "Z," in The Progressive Thinker regarding her clairvoyant vision, presents itself to me as being very real. As I passed up Market and Mission streets, and out by the City Hall while the ruins were still smoking, the question forced itself upon me as I viewed the terrible sight. What is the condition of the unfortunates so hurriedly forced out of the mortal form and thereby separated from the perishable material wealth they held so dear; most of them perhaps utterly ignorant and in darkness as to the spiritual and the real. How could it possibly be otherwise than as she describes it?

The children of earth as they permit themselves to become familiar with the grand teachings of the spiritual philosophy, will learn that material wealth is of secondary importance, and that there will be plenty and to spare as soon as we shall be willing to put a just mode of distribution into practice.

When we become satisfied that there are higher aims, and an imperishable state of existence, for which to gain a clean reputation and a home, and that by no other means than our own proper efforts will it ever be possible to accomplish it, then, indeed, will the sordid desire to "hog" up the earth, begin to smoulder, and when the storehouses of nature's bounties shall be equally distributed, then will all have an abundance to supply every reasonable need. How soon will that be? We are as yet most of us on the animal plane. We are but the highest type of animal, and that is the reason we can be meaner and as merciless as the ferocious beasts of the jungle simply because the animal side of man as yet predominates; but there is another side, the spiritual, the real, and when we begin to cultivate the higher, spiritual, as yet so sadly neglected, and when that shall gain the ascendency, these will no longer be tolerated. "Man's inhumanity to man," and the present system, or lack of system rather, will be superseded by conditions which will give us a little foretaste of that heavenly state, here and now, that we are all hoping to obtain somewhere, sometime.

But, let it ever be remembered, that the resultant conditions are, and ever will be, according to our own creating.

Oh! how much longer is it going to take for us to rise to the dignity of tolerating nothing less than equal justice for all?

As the San Francisco disaster has again been brought to my mind in an unexpected way, that is what I expected to relate to our great school of progressive Thinkers, but the above serious reflections got in first, and are they not worthy of serious reflection?

As my narative is interesting, I think it best to commence at the beginning. I was called on, New Year's day, by a friend who requested me to attend their circle the following Friday. "We have received a slate-written message by a spirit friend of yours, requesting your presence."

"Thanks; with the greatest of pleasure do I accept your kind invitation."

Besides the medium, his wife and mother, there were five others, making eight in all. When seated, the sensitive stepped into the center of the circle with a pair of slates in his hands, which we saw thoroughly cleaned right there. He then brought a new writing tablet for our inspection, after which he tore off a sheet at a time and let them fall into the lap of one of the sitters (but said sitter never touched the papers), till eight sheets had been torn off. He then quietly placed them on the slate, placed the other slate on top and bound them together by stout rubber bands.

Standing in the center of the circle and slowly turning around, he quickly stepped up to me and held out the slates, which I grabbed by the nearest corners as he held his. I immediately felt a force inside and do not think it could have been over two minutes before he said, "All right." Stepping back he separated the slates and let the papers fall to the floor. On picking them up we found seven of them fully covered with writing on one side, but the eighth was as clean as when put in. There had been a message written on one of the slates, however, thus giving a communication to each one present.

My paper is written in green, and signed by the same name as the slate message requesting my presence, namely, Carlyle Petersilea, a grand spirit and a valued friend indeed, who, together with hosts of other noble souls, will never rest until all the children of earth become fully satisfied, as some of us now are, that there are no dead.

The message for the lady sitting next to me seemed to have been written in black crayon, and while mine is written straight across the paper, hers is written diagonally, and so, all were differently written and in different colors, and let it not be forgotten that the room was flooded with light all the time, and deception of any kind was simply impossible under the conditions. There was no motive for fraud anyway, as no collection was taken.

This leads up to the reminder of the San Francisco affair which came as part second. We occupied quite a large parlor on the second floor, and at the open end of the horseshoe circle of sitters stood a black cloth cabinet four or five feet square, sit from floor to top on our side as the only means of entry. This cabinet stood several feet from any wall with no attempt at all to shield any side of it from view, and the inside contained nothing but a common chair.

The lights were now extinguished, and the medium took a seat within the cabinet, and in a very short time the front was lit up by a figure in snow-white drapery. Next we heard a whisper emanating from the form, whispering the given name of the deceased wife of one of the sitters, thanking him most earnestly for his great kindness during her last illness, and at all all other times; after which the white drapery seemed to dissolve, leaving the cabinet the usual shade.

Seances of a similar nature were repeated to others present, after which the reflection of what seemed to be a large man, of quite dark appearance reflected on the cabinet and in a hoarse whisper said: "I was a San Francisco millionaire."

"Yes; whom do you come to?"

"To Mr. Peterson."

That was one of the bewildered spirits in darkness, and had no doubt been brought for enlightenment; it is by no means my first experience in that line. As the time was all too short, the figure dissolved with a heavy sigh.

Here no doubt there are those who would say: Let him seek information of those in his life. Which might seem very reasonable indeed, but, and but, most of us are not able to discern any thing above our own plane of existence, and in his case, he can see but darkly, and only those of his own grade; thus we can easily realize how much knowledge and guidance those in his condition can impart to each other.

There was another lesson of value given at this circle. The medium was controlled to speak something like this:

"Some of you have spoken of what you have here seen as materialization. That is a great mistake, and I caution you not to repeat it. Materialization of flesh, blood and bones pertains to the mortal form only. We have here been attempting to show etherealized forms, which is quite possible to the this circle as now organized for a reasonable length of time we should be sonable legth of time we should be able to prove this fact to you all beyond a shadow of doubt."

So you see, we have here the making of a good medium, and yet I have never been there since, for the following reasons. This young man has assumed obligations by taking a wife, and as our first duty clearly demands the taking care of ourselves, and as he has no means to fall back on, his duty becomes plain. Even should people of means step in and undertake to supply the material needs, it would take him out of his line of proper effort, which in my opinion would deprive him of the only school capable of leading to his real progressive unfoldment.

To undertake to develop physical mediumship with only the low desire to sell it as a means of livelihood is as dangerous as playing with fire, and has been the open door for the free entry of all the black sheep that have brought so much shame and disgrace upon the grandest teachings (which it is quite possible to exemplify as truths if we can keep them pure) that have ever been brought to the attention of the children of this dark planet.

Second. I am opposed to dark circles, and though we were informed that when the forces became a little stronger light would be gradually admitted, still I prefer to omit all such phenomena as require darkness for their expression, rather than to help in any way to perpetuate conditions which make it so easy for THE UNSCRUPULOUS TO SNEAK IN AND WORK THEIR RUIN. Let each and all ever be zealous in co-operating with The Progressive Thinker in guarding the purity of our grand philosophy, and phenomena, which ever beckon us onward and upward to be good and to do good to each other, and which also teaches us to know the priceless inheritance transmitted to us when the breath of eternal life was blown into our nostrils, no matter what the trials of the crude beginning may be.

We still hear much regarding the dangers of psychism, obsession, etc., and surely, there is ever great danger in permitting the blind to lead the blind.

I was invited not long ago to attend what I supposed to be a spiritual gathering. There was a medium present claiming a high order of controls (but who were conspicuous by their absence), who had a rather sensitive son along, a young man who also did his best to submit himself to be controlled (I came near saying obsessed), and it proved a partial success, for, for, after a lot of jerking and stuttering the influence succeeded in muttering that he had been a bushman on the burning plains of India. If that person, un-dressed in his native garb, had approached in his mortal form, how much control would they have permitted him to acquire over their sensitive son? And yet there were mediums present who said it was great.

Ye Gods! Is there any wonder that there are dangerous obsessions?

I have a good friend in this city who told me that he began some years ago to sit for development.

"Yes; what did you seek for?"

"Oh, I sat for anything, and got it, and for some time in spite of myself, I would pick up things and put them in my pocket, and I had a long and severe struggle to regain mastery over self, which I had so thoroughly surrendered."

This is a true case, and must have been obsession or hypnotic control over the weaker embodied spirit by the stronger disembodied thief.

If we could but see the hordes of dark spirits hovering around the barrooms, urging their embodied cronies who have surrendered themselves as slaves thereto, to drink, and drink, the manufacture of that greatest curse to the human race would speedily and forever be stopped. I hope we will have enough spiritual people to show their weight some day in some such grand effort.

The above belongs to the old; what is the new Spiritualism of which we are beginning to hear? It sounds good to me, and interprets itself about as follows: From darkness and deception, to light and knowledge. Ah, what a promising change. It means the abandonment of darkness, soiled wigs and paraphernalia; no more loving angel visitors to be supplied with white slippers, beautiful hats and other material garments (they are going to manage to drape themselves after this). All that belongs to the old, and must give place to the new truths that ever come trooping along and knocking for admission; and the new, ah, yes, that means a little less phenomena hunting, and a greater effort of self-culture to awaken and develop the latent attributes within each soul.

To illustrate, suppose I could sit down at a piano and be controlled by the greatest masters that ever lived to give beautiful expression to the grandest music ever written, and could keep that up, say, for fifty years—who would really be benefitted?

After the withdrawal of the master hand, would I not sit there like a bump on a log, and as ignorant as said bump? In place of which, had I set to work to learn to perform, if only one of those pieces, such unfoldment of growth and knowledge would have been mine to keep. Such is the difference between the old and the new. To diligently seek for knowledge is the only road leading to wisdom. You cannot buy it in so-called "developing circles, and if at all sensitive, keep away from all promiscuous circles unless you have gained good control over self.

Oh, let us have a new, clean Spiritualism; indeed, it is time! The kindergarten stage should now have been passed, and let us take ourselves in hand diligently to unfold our higher selves and thus bring unto fruition that spiritual power which shall be able to lead to such conditions on earth as we hope some day to find within the heavens.

LEWIS PETERSON.

Seattle, Wash.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

WHAT IS HELL?

It Is the Condition of One Who Is Suffering the Pangs of Remorse.

What is hell? General Sherman said, "War is hell." The pangs of hunger, the dread of starvation, the chilling blasts of winter, the burning rays of the summer's sun, the pains of toothache or any other aches that rack the nerves of man, may well be called hell. To suffer the burning fever of sickness, to endure the solitude of a prison cell, to suffer from the ingratitude of "friend remembered not," to have our noblest efforts for the good of our fellow man unappreciated, to live in uncongenial surroundings, to have an ambition which we can not gratify, "to suffer the pangs of despised love, the insolence of office and the spurns which patient merit of the unworthy takes," these are all hell.

But I take it that the subject for discussion this morning has reference to a future state. The commonly accepted opinion of hell, as promulgated by the Christian fathers, and which the orthodox church has long held, is that hell is a burning lake full of fire and brimstone, where their worm dieth not and their fire is not quenched. How any one can conceive that a God whom the Bible says is love, can be so heartlessly, so diabolically cruel, is beyond our ken. John Calvin even went further than that and condemned a certain number to salvation and a certain number, without any fault of their own to everlasting damnation, teaching that a just God had so predestinated. And to-day the Presbyterian General Assembly at Winona Lake is deliberating whether to hold to this damnable and damning belief or to substitute for the Westminster Confession the milder tenets of the Reformed faith. Supposing that this is done, will that release the poor wretches, who have, according to the tenets of the Christian fathers, been roasting for centuries, or is a special dispensation necessary?

I read some years ago a work by John Tyndall entitled "Other Worlds Than Ours," but found in it no reference at all to a heaven or a hell. Tyche Brahe, Copernicus and Kepler in their investigations and explorations of the starry firmament, with the aid of the most powerful microscopes, have found no world that bears any resemblance to either heaven with its golden throne and glittering streets or to hell with its fiery furnaces and burning lakes. Neither Sir Isaac Newton, Darwin, Huxley nor Spencer, nor other great philosophers of modern times, give us in their writings any description of a world like a literal, burning hell. Therefore hell can not be a place, and reason, the greatest oracle of man, convinces us that it must be a state or condition.

I take it that hell is the condition of mind of a man or woman who is suffering the pangs of remorse, or the reproaches of an accusing conscience. The minds of men are subject to constant change. What is law to-day may not be law to-morrow. With creeds it is the same. The world which believed with the fanatics a century ago that the soul in hell is like asbestos in fire which burneth and is not consumed now refuses to believe it longer. Religions are getting more liberal every day, especially since we have learned that thoughts are things and that harsh and cruel words cut like two-edged swords. Men's minds may change, but the laws of Nature are fixed, immutable, unchangeable. The currents of the streams of to-day move along just as placidly as they did a century ago; botanists tell us that trees grow by the same process that they did in the forest primeval; oaks still spring from acorns as figs do not from thistles. There is no law so certain as the law of cause and effect the karma of the Theosophists, "as ye sow so shall ye reap."

We can not escape the consequences of our own acts. We make our own heaven or our own hell. For just as surely as the sun appears to set at night and appears to rise again in the morning; just as surely as plants spring from seed, grow and decay, just so certainly do we, for every foolish word, give account in the day of judgment of our own soul; just so certainly do we suffer in kind for every wrong done our neighbor, whether blindly or designedly; just so certainly will our sin find us out.

The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind all the time. Nature moves slowly. Grains of wheat that were found in the pyramids of Egypt, were planted, sprouted and grew into plants after having lain dormant for centuries. Let us not deceive ourselves. There is a hell, that is, if we make one for ourselves and somewhere along the line of the soul's march to progress through this life or some other through which we must wander, and in the eternal scheme of everlasting and even and exact justice of the universe, we must suffer for our sins. But in all nature there is no warrant for the burning hell of John Calvin, of John Wesley and of John Knox. Buddha, Zoroaster, Plato, Socrates, Confucius and other sages of the past did not believe it; Tolstoi and other great masters of to-day do not believe it, and why should we?

Toledo, Ohio. L. P. SMITH.

An Important Message.

It Is Given by Buddhism to Christianity.

Religions are movements in the development of mankind which possess an individuality of their own. A religion grows and expands,—it sometimes decays and withers. There is a time in almost every religion in which it assimilates the truth wherever it finds it. At any rate it adopts those truths that are congenial to its own doctrines. When a religion has grown strong it frequently becomes intolerant and narrow. Kindred truths instead of being assimilated are persecuted and rejected because the truth itself is no longer insisted on, but the formula in which it has been cast. This is the time of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism. The development of religions at present is not quite closed. Even the dominant faith of Europe and America is continually growing, changing, expanding, or perhaps also becoming narrower in certain quarters, and on meeting other religions it specifies or modifies its own tenets. The question of the survival of a religion is mainly based on its capability of growth, and this will be the test when Christianity meets with ethical religions of a different history such as Mazdaism and Buddhism. We do not hesitate to say that Buddhism is the most important rival of Christianity, for not only has it a hold on the greatest Asiatic nations, China and Japan, as well as Siam, Cochin China, and Korea, but has also (and this is perhaps of still greater significance) made inroads into Western countries. There are a goodly number of Buddhists now in Germany, France and the United States, and it is not without importance that it is mainly thinkers who are attracted by it.

One reason why Christianity loses ground in certain spheres, especially among intellectual and earnest people possessed of deep religious sentiment, is the spirit of dogmatism which still dominates almost all the Christian churches and prevents Christianity from growing and expanding and from assimilating the truth that can be found in other quarters, especially in science and in the faith of a religion like Buddhism, based upon enlightenment.

The question whether Christianity will be able to resist these inroads depends entirely upon its ability to expand and grow. If Buddhism can accept all that is good and true in Christianity it will not only maintain itself in the long run, but outgrow Christianity in significance and power. But if the reverse takes place, if the leaders of Christian churches learn from Buddhism, they will have the advantage of introducing a new era in the history of Christianity, which will be an era in which religion and science would no longer be in conflict.

As an instance of how Buddhism develops and how it is represented in an ancient Buddhist country by one of the leading clergymen of its faith, we call attention to a collection of sermons [Sermons of Buddhist Abbot. By the Rt. Rev. Soyen Shaku, Chicago:—The Open Court Publishing Co., 1906.] preached by the Lord Abbot of Engakuji, Kamakura, Japan. We have here not a dogmatist and believer in certain formulas, but a philosopher and thinker whose reverential attitude makes him religious, and allows the religious sentiment to pervade his entire intellect, and yet he is Lord Abbot of a sect which is one of the oldest and most orthodox of Eastern Asia, the Zen sect, whose institutions are not unlike those of the Roman Catholic Church.

How true our comments are and how great the need is for Christianity to learn through Buddhism appears from an article in the Biblical World (August, 1906), written by Professor E. Washburn Hopkins, of Yale University, who can certainly not be suspected of making propaganda for Buddhism, for even in his article he speaks of it as an alien faith. If he, as a man of science, possesses a bias, it will certainly be in favor of the religion of his own country, but the more valuable is the warning he expresses in his "Message of Buddhism to Christianity" from which the following quotations speak for themselves.

He says:

"Buddhism has much to learn from Christianity, but what Christianity may learn from Buddhism is that there are many whose emotions cannot be touched till the foundation of their formal religion is laid upon a sharply criticized belief. To win these, an ever-increasing number, Christianity must provide them a place. There will always be enough people to whom the scientific foundation of faith is not essential, or at least less essential than that side of religion which appeals to feeing and rests upon faith. For these there is abundant provision in Christianity; and there should also be similar provision for those who would like to proclaim themselves Christians, but are debarred from the church by its lack of full sympathy for liberal thought. Buddhism has never persecuted the adherents of another faith, and it has allowed free room for sectarian interpretation of its own creed. How radical is this attitude may be shown, not only by the philosophic attitude of Buddha himself, but by the edicts of the great emperor who in the third century before our era was converted to Buddhism and became the zealous upholder of the new faith.

"In Buddha's thought there is no incompatibility between the ethical ideal and the devotion to mental training which is prominent in early Buddhism, but is not regarded as a requisite in Christianity. Christianity seldom emphasizes, even when it permits, the utmost intellectual freedom, while Buddhism establishes the faith intellectually from the beginning. This insistence on enlightenment, the building of faith upon intellectual satisfaction, conveys a message to Christianity that cannot wisely be ignored. We may not be content with Buddha's philosophy—there is no reason why we should be; but we need the spirit which co-ordinates philosophy and religion, which admits no separation between science and faith. There are Christians who never correlate their science and religion, who keep their wisdom in one pocket and their faith in another; not to speak of those who look with suspicion on any attempt to regulate faith by science.

"There are no Buddhists of this sort, not because they have no philosophy or science, but because it is fundamental to their religion that it shall rest upon a correct view of life in general. The overflow of traditional error is the first element in the religious life, as well as the first element in philosophical wisdom. Everything else, prior to this, only prepares one for the way of salvation. This is the corner-stone of Buddhism, intellectual conviction, as emotion has been said to be the corner-stone of Christianity. It is this which to-day is the attraction drawing intellectual converts away from Christianity to Buddhism. Nothing else of importance is urged by them. What appeals to those who in America and Europe have gone over to this alien faith is the trait of liberality and enlightenment. That the contrast is drawn between Buddhism at its best and Christianity at its worst must be admitted in the case of many of the converts, but the vital fact remains that there is no other religion in which there has been from the beginning so great intellectual freedom. It is this freedom which thinking men are demanding to-day in Christianity."

The lesson which Professor Hophins urges is that Christianity should encourage liberal thought, and he insists that this message is one of encouragement to those who believe in intellectual fearlessness, or to reprove those who would suppress critical examination of knowledge.

We repeat a sentiment which we have urged again and again and which we hope will be heeded by the leaders of the Christian faith.

Any faith that is irreconcilable with science is doomed. He who rejects science blights the life of religion. For the spirit of genuine religion is the same as the spirit of genuine science. Science is a divine revelation. Contempt for science and a deliberate suppression of reason is an intellectual sin; it is the sin against the spirit which cannot be forgiven, but must, if persisted in, ultimately lead to eternal perdition.

Professor Hopkins grants that Buddha "bids men be full of sympathy for all living things. 'As a mother guards her son," it is said, 'with kindness without measure, impartial, without enmity, prevailing throughout the world,' so should the Buddhist guard all living beings." Nevertheless Professor Hopkins claims that "Nothing is farther from the Buddhist ideal than love with its Christian connotation." The practice of universal kindness is merely a religious exercise "to free one's mind of the fifth 'fetter,' ill-will. One sees that the words are correctly rendered, but the significance is deeper that the literal signification. The ideal is different. It is not devotion to the world that the Buddhist aims at; he is to free the mind of ill-will by trying to love the world, then by pitying it, then by calmly considering it with equanimity. To hate is wrong, but to love is also wrong."

That Professor Hopkins is not devoted to Buddhism appears from his conclusion, where he says: "It started as a religion without soul, without the ideal of self-sacrifice, and without God. At its best it was a society for ethical culture. As such it soon perished. What took its place in India and farther East was a religion which exalted self-sacrifice and decried self-seeking, even in the nobler form, as it did materialism; a religion which virtually reinstated a belief in soul, and made of Buddha himself a divine being, upon whose love and pity man can depend, to whose heaven hereafter man may go. There is revealed one clear fact, namely, that a living church must hold fast to the spiritual, to the very element which primitive Buddhism denied."—The Editor, in The Open Court.

WILL READ FUTURE IN SOULS, NO STARS.

Flammarion Says the Spirit Is an Entity Distinct From Body and Survives It—There Is Psychic World—Predicts Investigation will Lead to Knowledge of After Life and Immortality.

Paris, March 17.—Camille Flammarion, the famous astronomer and physicist, apropos the assertion of an American physician that he had succeeded in physically demonstrating the existence of a soul in the human body and ascertaining its weight in several experiments, has written an article for a French magazine expressing his belief in the possibility of demonstrating the actual physical existence of the soul.

By Camille Flammarion.

It is my conviction, borne out by many personal experiences as well as by those of many others whose veracity and reliability are above suspicion, that the soul of man exists as an entity, independent of his body, and that it survives the destruction of his physical being. It is certain that one soul can influence another soul at a distance, and without the aid of the senses. There is not the slightest doubt that the soul can act at a distance.

Mental suggestion seems equally certain. Psychic communication between persons who are living is also proved by a large number of cases, observed and carefully investigated. There are psychic currents, as well as aerial, electric and magnetic currents.

We may see without eyes and hear without ears, not by unnatural excitement of our sense of vision or of hearing, but by some interior sense, psychic and mental.

The soul by its interior vision may also know in advance what is to happen in the future. The future exists, potentially determined by causes which bring to pass successive events.

Positive observation proves the existence of a psychic world, as real as the world known to our physical senses.

Light, heat and sound do not really exist. What we call "light" is a sensation produced upon our optic nerve by vibrations that are themselves very obscure. Sound and heat are also vibrations of different frequencies.

Does electricity exist, or is it another mode of movement? Science must discover this in the future.

The soul may be in like case, but there are many incidents known to me which do not look like physiologic operations of one brain acting upon another, but must be considered—because there is no other explanation—as psychic actions of spirit upon spirit.

These phenomena prove, I think, that the soul exists, and that it is endowed with faculties at present unknown. That is the logical basis of commencing a study which, in the end, may lead us to a knowledge of the after life and immortality.—Chicago Examiner.

"Longfey's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us" and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Harmonics of Evolution. The Philosophy of Individual life. Based Upon Natural Science, as Taught by Modern Masters of the Law." By Florence Huntley. A work of deep thought, carrying the principles of evolution into new fields. Price, cloth, $2.

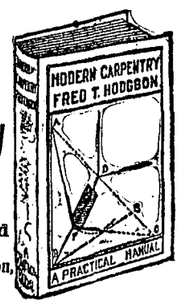
It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Practical, Mechanical SERIES

The Carpenter's and Builder's Standard Library.

By Fred T. Hodgson, Architect.



This series of new works on Modern Carpentery and Joinery are to-day the approved and most helpful set of practical builders' "educators," published, consisting of the Steel Square in two volumes. Modern Carpentry and Joinery, and Common Sense Handrailings. Price per set of 4 vols., cloth, $4.00: or $1.00 each; half leather, $6.00.

Modern Carpentry and Joinery

A Practical Manual.

Just Published

By Fred T. Hodgson, M. O., A. A.

The well-known Technical writer. It is one of the best works ever turned out by him. Copiously illustrated with diagrams and figures, making the most intricate problems simple, definite and easily understood. Price, $1.00.

FARM ENGINES and HOW TO RUN THE.

The Young Engineer's Guide

This book treats upon how to run a farm engine. The young engineer's guide. Fully illustrated. A complete instructor. This is the greatest of all works for the farmer. Price, cloth, $1.00.

By James H. Stevenson, and Other Expert Engineers.

The New Air-Brake Book

Invaluable to Trainmen, Engineers, Firemen, Conductors, Electric Motormen and Mechanics. The Latest and Best 1904 Edition.

Modern Air Brake Practice, Its Use and Abuse.

With Questions and Answers for Locomotive Engineers and Electric Motormen. By FRANK H. DUKESMITH. Price, cloth, $1.50

DYNAMO TENDING, For ENGINEERS

Or, Electricity for Steam Engineers.

By HENRY C. HORSTMANN and VICTOR H. TOUSLEY, Authors of "Modern Writing Diagrams and Descriptions for Electrical Workers." Cloth 100 Illustrations. Price, $1.50.

The Handy Vest-Pocket ELECTRICAL DICTIONARY.

NEW EDITION.

A book every Engineer and Electrician should have in his pocket. A Complete Electrical Reference Library in itself. Cloth, red edges, Indexed, 25 cents; full leather, gold edges, indexed, 50 cents.

A. SCHOPENHAUER ESSAYS.

Translated by T. B. Saunders. Cloth, 75 cents. "Schopenhauer is one of the few philosophers who can be generally understood without a commentary. All his theories claim to be drawn direct from facts, to be suggested by observation, and to interpret the world as it is; and whatever view he takes, he is constant in his appeal to the experience of common life. This characteristic endows his style with a freshness and vigor which would be difficult to match in the philosophic writing of any country, and impossible in that of Germany."—Translator.

THE GOSPEL OF NATURE

Is a most excellent work by Dr. M. L. Sherman, assisted by Prof. W. F. Lyon. Heretofore it has been sold for $2, but the price now has been reduced to $1. It is a book that will interest and instruct. It contains 250 pages, and is full of suggestive thoughts. Dr. Sherman was a medium of rare qualities, and his work is a reflection from the celestial spheres.

Molecular Hypothesis of Nature!

The Relation of Its Principles to Continued Existence and to the Philosophy of Spiritualism. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Paper, 25 cents.

PROTISTA.

The Kingdom of the Unseen, as Explored by Hudson Tuttle.

(Continued from No. 904.)

Helpful Micro-Organisms.

The words bacteria, bacilli and germs awaken ideas of disease and results detrimental to our well being, but such views of the unseen beings which swarm beneath the seen, is in the main erroneous. The greater portion of these are beneficial, and the most wonderful transformations and helpful changes are wrought by them. It is doubtful if the higher forms of life could exist were it not for these, for they furnish an inexhaustible food supply to beings on the edge of the visible, which supply still larger forms and thus in an ascending series fashion the plasmic material into more and more differentiated organisms. It is through these cellular beings that matter takes the form of protoplasm, and enters the cycle of organic evolution.

But leaving these speculations which touch the most mysterious subjects to which the human mind can give attention, we come to the ordinary affairs of life, to find how great a debt we owe to these microbes. Without them the baker would vainly await the rising of his dough, the brewer the foaming of his beer, the wine-maker the maturity of his wine. When the baker mixes his dough, he carefully stirs into it a portion of yeast. What is yeast? It is a mass of yeast plants, or Torulæ, one of the simplest of the Protophytes. When this plant is placed in a substance having saccharine matter and nitrogenous combinations, and the temperature is brought up to near blood heat, it rapidly multiplies.

If the farmer does not sow the seed on the field, he knows there will be no grain; and in like manner if the dough is not sown with the seeds of the yeast, it will remain hard and sodden.

The term plant is misleading, as the Torula is unlike anything which we recognize as a plant. It is too small to be seen by the unassisted eye, and is no more than a globular cell of protoplasm. Its growth is rapid, multiplying by a curious process of budding or gemmation. If we suppose a tree covered with buds pushing out continuously, bud starting from bud and either remaining attached or breaking apart, we have an illustration of this process. Several cells remain attached in lines or branches as long as growth continues, but when it ceases they break apart, each becoming distinct. There is another process of multiplication, for it appears that with all these beings there is a cycle of change, and after many generations of bud formation there must be something like renewal of sexual impulse. The mother cell enlarges to twice or thrice the normal size, and its substance breaks up into three or more cells, which grow until they burst the common envelop and become free. Then the process of gemmation or budding is resumed. What effect has the growth of the yeast plant on the substance which surrounds it? It appropriates the nitrogenous matter and resolves the saccharine substances into alcohol and carbon dioxide. It is the gas which permeates the dough and expanding by the heat of the oven gives it its porous character.

The Torula which give rise to the vinous fermentation are much smaller and retain vitality after long desiccation. In this state it is blown everywhere by the winds, and finds lodgment on fruits and leaves. When the juice is expressed no other yeast is required. The germs of any of the ordinary moulds will set up the vinous fermentation, and the plants thus cultured are difficult to distinguish from the genuine Torula. Although observers have given a great variety of names to the ferment plants, as they appear in different solutions and produce different effects, it is highly probable that the conditions under which they are produced have much to do with their change of form, and that the yeast plant is the parent of them all.

The growth of the plants has a limit, although the food may not be exhausted. When the production of alcohol has reached a certain proportion, the growth is arrested, after which the liquor remains unchanged. If the temperature is high and the process rapid, a species called Mucor aceti is developed with the other, and acetic acid is formed from the alcohol, and the process thus started ends by converting all the spirits to acid. In other words the Mucor conquers the Torula. The change may not stop here, but a putrefactive form may displace the Mucor and by disorganizing the acid, yield a dead liquor.

Pasteur maintained that the acetic fermentation is produced by Bacterium aceti, as the bacterium lactis causes the lactic fermentation in milk. The yellow color of milk and butter is given by the Bacterium xanthinum, and another species makes it blue. The decomposition of butter and formation of butyric acid is the work of another species.

In the fermentation of cheese and ripening of cream many kinds of Bacteria are always present, and the flavor and quality entirely depend on the species predominating. It has been proposed that the kind giving the best results be cultivated and sown in the curd, that by their greatest number they might give character to the cheese. But so many other conditions enter in that this plan is almost impracticable. The germs of putrefaction are always present, and a slightly favorable temperature gives them predominance. In some varieties of cheese the putrefactive germs are encouraged. In curing cheese there is always danger of these putrefactive germs too largely increasing and possibility of their developing ptomaines, the most deadly poisons.

The production of a distinctive food is exemplified by sauer kraut, an ideal substance in which to cultivate germs. If the temperature is kept down and the air excluded, fermentation goes on slowly, and when the small proportion of sugar is changed, ceases. A great number of species have taken part in the change which has converted the cabbage into a mass of living forms far more nutritious and digestible than the cabbage which nourished them. But if the air is freely admitted and the temperature high, other species entirely different take the place of the ferment germs and putrefaction follows, ending in complete disorganization.

This is nature's process of renovation, for the material produced by the last putrefactive changes is prepared to nourish vegetable life and ascend in the accumulation of energy by complexity, to yield it again in the descending order.

The water from sewers and from the foul surface of the land, flows down the streams in turbulent currents. But it contains within itself the means of its own purification. Every drop has mingled with the impurities countless germs which feed thereon and on each other. Thrown up to the action of the air and sunlight, it soon becomes pure and clear as a drop of dew.

In the study of this effect I filled a large jar with water from a stagnant marsh. On examination, I found it swarming with infusoria. I set it in a south window where it could catch the full sunlight, and day by day observed a portion of it with the microscope. It was wonderful how the forms at first most numerous, disappeared and new ones came. At the end of three weeks it required patience to find any being and at the end of a month there were none. The water had become perfectly clear with a deep deposit of sediment. The last particle of organic matter had been absorbed by the organisms and these had preyed upon each other until the few remaining perished for want of food. The water was free from organic matter, and pure except from the slight quantity of the usual minerals held in solution.

It is thus that a stream polluted by the sewage of a great city flows only a few miles before its water becomes purified. When it is agitated by falls and rapids, the mingling air assists in the destruction of harmful organic matter. It is a most wonderful provision in nature, by which the solvent fluid which is essential to every form of life, should be maintained in purity.

If agriculture is the foundation of national life, the foundation of agriculture is laid by these invisible beings; without them the soil would be a barren waste. Vegetable mould and the preparedness of the material is their work. By actual tests the farmer knew the value of composting, but he could give no reason therefor. Now it is found that these organisms feed on and work the refuse over until it becomes in a perfect assimilable condition for food to plants. The soil is nature's compost, filled with these beings which furnish food for minute, soil-feeding worms, which in turn feed yet larger. Thus nitrogenous salts are supplied, without which crops cannot grow.

It was supposed that leguminous plants were an exception to the rule that all plants required nitrogen, for apparently they secreted this element in some form in the soil, and thus enriched it with animal matter, or its equivalent. The anomaly is explained by the discovery that the nitrogenous salts are not produced by the plants, but by a specific microbe which feeds on the roots, and by the nitrogenous salts it secretes, returns to the plant more than it receives. Hence the more of these organisms on the roots of clover, the more luxuriant its growth. If the soil is free from these microbes, clover will have a dwarfish growth, and wonderful effects are said to follow sowing a small quantity of soil from old clover fields, filled as it is with germs, on the young clover plants. This is a wonderful instance of the mutual relation between animal and plant life, where the very existence of one depends on the other.

The eminent microscopist, Dr. Klein, states emphatically, and he is supported by competent observers, that in the healthful, normal condition of the blood and tissues, no micro-organisms are present. But it will not be denied that when there is deterioration of the blood or depression of the vital force, as in disease, there are present numerous species which feed on the waste in the blood and secretions, performing the work of scavengers and being beneficial in restoration to health.

The white corpuscles of the blood are marvelously like the lowest microscopic beings, and if met with elsewhere would be classed with them. One of their functions is to destroy or absorb disease germs and all others which may enter the circulation. It has been conjectured that when these corpuscles are normal, the germs of the most virulent contagion would be thus disposed of and the system remain unaffected, being thus immune.

The immunity which is the result of the full vigor of the white corpuscles, and their numbers, has been explained by the theory that their triumph over disease germs was because of virus engendered in the blood. It is not the white corpuscles, but the anti-toxins in the blood that first weaken the disease germs, and thus make their destruction easy. In pursuance of this theory there has been a wide experimentation on animals, in the culture of these toxins and anti-toxins, when a man has had "his blood so stimulated to produce so great a number of these anti-toxins that future microbes could be resisted with success," he was immune. This may be produced by the disease, or the virus may be cultivated by injection into the veins of animals, and the serum of their blood employed for injection into human veins. By this means the blood becomes too poisonous for disease germs to live in it, or they are so weakened they are overpowered by the white corpuscles.

This new theory of cure, may be effective as mercury and bleeding was by a past generation, yet it is an open question if it is advisable to ward off disease by filling the blood with the most virulent poison known, for these toxins, one and all are products of blood putrefaction, and like yeast always tend to setting up putrefactive change.

Perhaps the soil has been prepared for the coming of the disease, by depressing climatic conditions, as was the case at the advent of la grippe, or by uncleanliness and bad diet common in the poorer precincts of cities.

It is advanced that we are composites of an infinite number of cellular organisms, each having a function to perform. While this may be a speculative fancy, it is true that the body is made up of cells which so far as they act independently, are to every intent and purpose micro-organisms.

There is of late a great deal of talk about sterilizing food, drink and air, and it is maintained that if this could be perfectly done, there would be no danger from disease. If it could be done, life would be cut short, for it is singularly dependent on many species of these germs. There would be more danger from the destruction of these to health and life itself, than from the germs of disease.

This unseen world is like the seen, in having a great variety of forms, some antagonistic, others favorable to the life of higher animals and plants. As there are peaceful herbivora, sheep, horses, cattle, deer, antelopes, elephants, etc., and tigers, lions, birds of prey, vipers, scorpions, and parasites, so in this unseen realm. The dangerous species are few in comparison to the harmless or beneficial.

There are many species that live exclusively on vegetation, and others are as exclusively carnivorous, and others still that feed indiscriminately. The visible world is repeated in the world invisible, and in the drop no larger than a pin's point, tragedies of life and death enacted; the strong devour the weak, the treachery of cunning is the master, for the smallest fragment broken from the point of a needle would be half way in size between an elephant and one of these micro-organisms, and yet the latter manifest mind!

It is thus seen that all these invisible beings are not not foes, but a great majority are friends performing for us work of renovation and change to which that of the larger beings is trivial in comparison.

To them the soil owes the greater measure of its fertility; the water its purity and the conditions of health are preserved by the energy with which these scavengers clear up and modify the waste products without and within our bodies.

But of vastly greater import than this labor of specific forms, is the work of the nameless organisms which stand between the unorganized material and the organic forms. The nameless, scarcely to be seen with the microscope, organisms that stand at the gateway of life, as the beginning of the almost interminable series of living forms which ascend from them to man.

It has ever been a problem unsolved, how the chain of living beings started—the first link in the chain which connects the organic with the inorganic. Nothing but a direct creation, a miraculous interposition of a creator was thought capable of spanning the gulf. There was on one side "dead matter," inert, unsusceptible, unthinking; on the other living beings, thoughtful, conscious, independent. The contrast was so great as to be hopeless of explanation.

Not until recently was it found that physical matter assumed a plasmic form. That form was termed protoplasm. It was not organized, but was capable of organization—was ready formed material for organized beings. Out of it came micro-organisms. These were little more than fragments, having an individuality. They increased by absorption and multiplied by separating into other fragments. Protoplasm appeared to be nothing more than coherent jelly, and the organisms, pieces broken from it. After a time they became enveloped in a pellicle—a cell or bag filled with jelly. When the solution in which these moved, furnished abundant nourishment, they enlarged rapidly, were constricted through the middle and broken into two distinct individuals; this process going on so rapidly that a single being in a day multiplied to millions. Yet there was no differentiative organs. There was no mouth, stomach, organs of propulsion. The sack when it touched an object acceptable as food flowed around and enveloped it. The digestion and absorption at once proceeded. The larger fed on the smaller, and the smallest drew from the protoplasmic fountain. All this to the eye unaided by highest powers available of the microscope is invisible.

The size increased, and the mollusk, that has left the imprint of its shell in the earliest fossil-bearing rocks, found ample food supply in the currents of water drawn through its open shell. Fishes incapable of feeding on the micro-organisms, were supplied by their concentration in the mollusk.

The scheme of living beings entailed the constant resolution of the small into the larger. The micro-organisms furnished the primal food for all. As living beings became larger and larger, with more complex organization, the food supply was constant. All the waste products were seized and worked over by these organisms. The elements were purified, and the food supply increased.

And what is true of this beginning, is true to-day. Every living form when taking food, takes that which has for its primal origin the micro-organisms. These furnish now, as they did then, the material source. Whatever waste of energy there may be, in vital functions, is represented by the elements falling back again to their own, and is refurnished at this source.

Thus it will be seen that the garnishing of the world, its preparation for the uses of man; the evolution of life, and living forms; the forests, the plains, the cultivated fields, the grains, fruits and flowers; the beauties and adaptabilities of organic beings; fishes in the sea, birds in the air, the swift and graceful mammal; and last the highest form of man, in his spiritual estate, reaches back in origin to the invisible micro-organism.

And yet more, by the constant influx of material and energy flowing into the great life current, life is sustained, and evolution constantly reaches higher planes.

(To be continued.)

FIELD OF BATTLE.

(Truth Against Error.)

"The day cometh that shall burn as an oven."—(Malachi, 4:1.)

Ye mighty, come to battle! mount the steel siege-guns,
Man with love and hate—woman, with love and tears,
Tho' truth's in the balance, each coward runs,
So he shall witness war in future years.

Since the world began man has fought and hated.
While he killed his love, by his mortal strife;
With iron will, has warred insatiated,
First to conquer, then, after—Truth and Life.

Thus his love and hate in turn has swayed
Th' throne of man's citadel 'neath the skies;
'Til fair Science, like the evening star, arrayed
In greatest glory, charms our longing eyes.

In composite splendor now roll in the days
Of a nobler, grander time, and humane laws;
Man digs for knowledge; applies all tests—the beaten ways,
"The Father's trod," he careful scans for flaws.

WILSON DUNCAN.

Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius," is the title of a 62 page pamphlet, which contains many of the moral aphorisms and terseological teachings of the sapient Chinese philosopher, who lived 551 years before the Christian Era, and whose wise precepts have left a lasting impression upon all subsequent nations. By Marcenus R. K. Wright. Price 25cts.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

THE WANDERINGS OF THE HULL PILGRIM.

Alone, Yet Not Alone, Mattie E. Hull Bravely Continues Her Work.

It is two months since the writer of "The Wanderings of the Hull Pilgrims" crossed "the Divide," and commenced his journeyings in the invisible realm. I remember well the hour he closed the article, it was concluded just three days after we reached San Jose. I was indisposed that day and was lying upon the bed in our room; as was his custom, he read the report of "The Wanderings" to me. The last sentence he had written impressed me deeply, and for some reason cast a shadow over my spirit, and I would say in passing, that shadow has not yet been lifted. Possibly some of the readers of The Progressive Thinker remember those words: "We commence our work to-morrow; we hope for the best, but are prepared for the worst." I said, "Why do you express yourself in that way?" He answered lightly, "We should be prepared for anything."

It may not be known to the readers of this article, that I sustained serious injuries last September, from a fall, and was rendered almost helpless for some time. For several days before Mr. Hull wrote the article to which I have referred, I had suffered from the injuries much more than I had for some time before we left home. I was also attacked with bronchitis while in Billings, and had not recovered. He had at times expressed himself with much anxiety over my condition, and as he had been unusually well to all appearances, for many weeks, I thought he was unnecessarily troubled about me. This was fully proven in many letters that came to my hands in answer to those he had written two *and three weeks previous to his leav*ing the body. Several letters contained words like these: "I am sorry Mrs. Hull's condition does not improve, but take courage Brother Hull, the California climate and the warm weather will bring her out all right."

"We hope for the best, but are prepared for the worst." We know the other wanderer has met the "best" that could possibly come to him. No more wearisome journeyings, no more weary waitings, no more perplexing cares, no more heart-aching disappointments; yes, the "best" must have come to him, as to all, when they enter that world of greater opportunities, where "we know as we are known."

The two pilgrims commenced their work for the Spiritual Union in San Jose, Sunday, January 8. We attended the conference in the morning, and Mr. Hull delivered a discourse in the evening. Had he known that discourse was to have been his last, it could not have been more fitting. He seemed at his best; the subject was, "The Adaptation of Spiritualism to Meet the Wants of Humanity." After presenting several reasons why Spiritualism meets the wants of mankind, he said: "It is natural for every one who has parted with friends by so-called death, to want to know what death does with those who are called away." Then stepping forward, as though to make his words more impressive, and placing his hand upon his pulse, he said impressively, "What death has done for James Hull, my father, it will do for me, his son. Every beat tells the number less." Then he gave reasons why others, as well as himself, wanted Spiritualism true, when hearts were bowed down with sorrow.

The following Wednesday, the speaker who uttered the words quoted in the previous sentence, was stricken, and three days later, he left us as a mortal. He went just as he had desired to go, without suffering, and as he had said within a week, "When I go, I hope to fall in my harness at the post of duty."

Yes, the "best" has come to the older and the stronger pilgrim; what of the one who is left to complete her wanderings, in one sense alone? Can she admit the "best" has come to her? Possibly in one way, and that is, to accept the words of another, "It is best, or it would not be," but she is human and the vacancy that meets her on every hand, the voice that was so suddenly hushed, the threads that were so suddenly snapped—well, it has made a loss physically that nothing fills.

Mr. Hull says: "Let this event be as an object lesson to the outside world. You and I have given the greater part of our lives, and devoted our best energies to the philosophy that proves 'there is no death.' Be strong to exemply the philosophy, you will be sustained."

In connection with the above, I would say that many requests have been made by mail for a synopsis of the address given through my lips on the occasion of Mr. Hull's funeral, but it was not reported, and I have no more of an idea of the substance of it than as though I had not been there; it was one of the best evidences of an outside sustaining power that I have ever known.

The work in San Jose was continued during the month of February as Mr. Hull and I had planned. Considering the continuous rains, the condition of the streets, and the illness of many of the Spiritualists, the meetings were well attended and a great degree of interest was awakened.

The work in connection with our cause in San Jose depends upon a few earnest men and women. Much credit has been, and is due them at present, for the existence of "The Spiritual Union" and "The Mutual Helpers," (the woman's auxiliary), and although many discouraging things have confronted them during the past few years, they work on with seemingly untiring efforts.

There are worthy local workers in San Jose. The older Spiritualists must remember Mrs. Nettie Pease Fox as one of the best among our platform speakers and writers of excellent books. Her home has been for several years in San Jose with her sister, Miss Minnie Pease, who is a fine impressible medium and clairvoyant. Mrs. Fox has served the society at different periods. I am glad to report that she is one who does not fossilize; she is a progressive spiritual woman and should be kept busy while she has strength to do the work.

I became personally acquainted with Mrs. Tillie Gunderson and Mrs. Shaw, local mediums, who are doing a good work in the way of private readings and seances. They are endorsed by the Spiritual Union and each contributes their services on the platform when occasion requires.

I concluded my work in San Jose, the last Sunday of February. The friends desired on the morning of that day, to hold a fiting memorial service for Mr. Hull. It was an occasion to be long remembered by those who were present. I understand Mrs. Fox has written a communication to The Progressive Thinker, relative to the meeting, and I will not ask for space to say more in regard to it, except to express my soulful thanks to the officers of the Spiritual Union, and the many friends who contributed time, strength and talent to make the occasion a fitting one to my arisen companion.

On the evening of my last lecture, I was greeted by a very large and intelligent audience. After the meeting was dismissed, many with whom I had never spoken before, said to me, "Your attitude during the ordeals through which you have been obliged to pass every Sunday during the past two months, in coming to this hall and declaring your message, has done more to interest me in Spiritualism, and to make me know there is a reality in it, than anything that has come to me before." So, I felt and I still feel, even amid my sorrow, I have done a work, such as I never did before.

On the evening of the 3rd inst. I lectured in Oakland, in the beautiful hall where Mrs. M. J. Cowell has held meetings for four years. The invitation was extended by this good sister. Mrs. Dr. Barker was included in the invitation to share the hospitalities of the Cowell home during my stay there. We enjoyed the visit socially; and I had never met Mrs. Cowell before, and was pleased to find not only an earnest, faithful worker, but a sister worker in spirit and in truth. She is generous, loving, kind, and succeeds in making congenial conditions for others who are working along different lines. Her companion is in full sympathy with her work and united with Mrs. Cowell in the expression of royal hospitality in the home.

In company with Mrs. Cowell I visited an earnest group of Spiritualists in Alameda, Sunday morning. The meetings in which these friends participate are held regularly in a room fitted up for the purpose on the ground floor of a dwelling occupied by Spiritualists. The regular speaker is Mr. B. Sliter. I delivered a brief address and left my hearty good will with them.

Monday, in company with Mrs. Cowell and Mrs. Barker, I visited San Francisco and rode over portions of the desolated district. The work that has been done since the ravages of the *earthquake and the fire seems marvel*ous, and yet, to an on-looker at the present time, it seems that it will require a period of time, covering one generation to rebuild San Francisco. One needs must see the ruins and the desolation to realize what the destruction has been.

I left San Jose the 7th inst. It was indeed a sad leave-taking on the part of the inmates of the Ringlep home and myself. That home will always be a sweet and a sacred place to me; it was there the two pilgrims—the two Ms spent their last hours as earthly companions together; it was there the dear, untiring Moses yielded his mortal life; there the final message was given from him as a spiritual being, to me a mortal; aye, and it was there that the most positive assurances of the presence of my loved ones who have gone before, came to me. Of the dear friends in the home who ministered to me, night and day, when the waves of sorrow seemed to nearly engulf me, I can only say there are those who may become "like unto the angels" while in the flesh.

When I reached the station, on the day of my departure from San Jose, I found "The Mutual Helpers" had adjourned their meeting, and were waiting to give me their good-bye. Their warm hand-clasps, their tender words, their expressed hope for my full recovery of strength and courage, were more helpful to me at that time, than I can express here.

Los Angeles was reached many hours behind time the following day. The continuous rains have flooded the mountains, and the railroad tracks have been weakened in consequence, and portions of the road that had undergone recent repairs, were necessarily approached and gone over slowly; it was a lonesome, and somewhat tiresome journey. Our niece, Mrs. Ada Bach, Brother B. W. Hull's daughter, was in waiting and soon the wandering pilgrim was resting in the home that "our beloved Moses" always enjoyed so much. Within twenty-four hours after I reached Los Angeles, several of our dear old friends called upon me, and assured me that all in their power would be done to make my work in this city a success. Already their promise has been proven to me.

Last Sunday, the 10th, I held a meeting in Howell Hall. I was greeted by a large audience, among whom were many old-time friends. Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Smith (friends with whom we made our home when in San Diego last winter), assisted me in the meeting. Mr. Smith presided because I had requested he should do so, and Mrs. Smith accompanied the congregational singing with the piano.

Sunday night, I lectured in Mammouth Hall, under the auspices of "The Truth Seekers' Society." At that hall I met a fine audience. I am to continue meetings Sunday afternoons in Howell Hall, the remainder of this month. Sunday night I am to address an audience in Howell Hall under the management of the society over which Mrs. Vlasek has had charge for a number of years. Next week numerous anniversary meetings are to be held; of course, they will be reported later. I am under promise to deliver an address on the evening of the 26th inst., under the auspices of the California State Organization; other meetings are to follow under the direction of the local organizations.

I desire in this communication to thank the several hundred friends who have written me letters of condolence during the past two months. Many of the precious communications are filed away unanswered, simply because I had not the strength to write personal responses. The acknowledgment should have been made in the papers a long time since, as some of the letters were written in January, but business letters, correspondence with relatives and those with whom we had been for many years associated intimately, together with the work I have tried to partially keep up in connection with my dear class in the Morris Pratt School, and my public services have been all I could stand.

Friends, wherever you are, remember I love you, and in spirit you are not neglected. While sometimes I feel like a leaf, drifting on a great ocean, while there are hours when I feel as though I could scarcely endure the ordeals I have to meet, bereft of the strong, magnetic presence of the one who so long journeyed with me, still I am wonderfully sustained in my work, and am determined to work on, until like the other pilgrim, I fall in the harness, loyal to the cause I love. My address for the present is 1410 Kellam avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

MATTIE E. HULL.

WHICH IS IT?

Original Sin or Original Ignorance?

An embassador who represents the power and dignity of his sovereign, and induces proselytes to people his master's country, should at least be able to give a fair account of its location and climate, flora and fauna, its arts and science, commerce and industry, its social and political economy, its individual possibilities and how a stranger may go there without getting lost.

But what information, if any, can one expect of a minister who merely assumes to represent a master and preaches the gospel of a kingdom which he knows absolutely nothing about, and stubbornly refuses to investigate the accounts from that kingdom which are constantly sent from there to post the inquirer concerning the same.

The enlightened minister has learned that communion with saints is no hollow mockery, and that the kingdom of heaven extends from the heart and mind within, to the remotest spheres of bliss without, that it exists in space as well as in condition, and that it is peopled with the spirits of just men made perfect, who have washed, and are washing their robes until they become whiter than snow, not in the literal blood of the lamb, but in what it symbolizes—a life of purity, purified through retribution.

He also knows that there dwell the spirits of the prophets who minister unto the prophets, amid all the ministering spirits who minister to those who seek salvation.

He knows that they are the spirits of our loved ones who have lived among us in their mortal bodies, and have gone before us to prepare a place for us, and as their love and sympathy is ever increasing for us, they gladly impart their acquired knowledge to us.

He also knows that the spirit searches even the deep things of God for the benefit of benighted children of earth who seek for knowledge in sincerity.

But the stupid minister, who is unwilling to search for and recognize the truth of spirit revelations, will remain such as long as gullible dupes are satisfied to feed him.

In spite of his confession of faith in the communion of saints, he will deny or denounce such as the works of the devil, and his sheepish sheep will glory in the wisdom of their shepherd.

Such a man is either blind to the absurdity of his position in society, or else is a contemptible impostor who merely plies his nefarious vocation for selfish ends; but in either case, he had spent his time and talents in acquiring a sophistic education, as was handed down through posterity from prehistoric rogues and numskulls, hence can but victimize and dunctify his over-credulous followers, and thus the dawning light of reason is shut out from them, may be, for generations yet to come.

If they could, as they surely will some day, see the frightful condition which they have created in the world of spirits on the lower planes, they would stand aghast at the repulsive sight of ugliness and deformities amid an indescribable pandemonium of hilarity, crime, misery and despair, for which our priests and preachers are responsible, because of the misconception of their assumed duty and the misrepresentation of their Lord and his kingdom. They have filled the minds of their victims with false information and sent them through the valley of death without chart or compass, and now finding themselves stranded on the bare rocks of belief and that the atoning sacrifice of some other fellow is only a delusion, many of them become rank skeptics and sink into utter abandonment. They can make no progress in their onward journey until some friend from higher spheres is able to reach and instruct them after, may be, years of needless suffering.

Innate ignorance when cultivated by sophism is ever a curse to humanity, and while a right education may lay a good foundation for our storehouse of knowledge, it is often finished only by hard knocks and bitter experiences.

And now since another doctrine, of original sin, is finding its way to the scrap pile, it might behoove us to look at it once more and see if it may not stand for original ignorance, which nobody would deny, especially when referring to the other fellow.

Chicago, Ill. G. A. WOLTER.

Journeys to the Planet Mars

Or, Our Mission to Ento (Mars)

A Narrative by Sara Weiss, Illustrated With Thirteen Original Drawings by the Authoress.

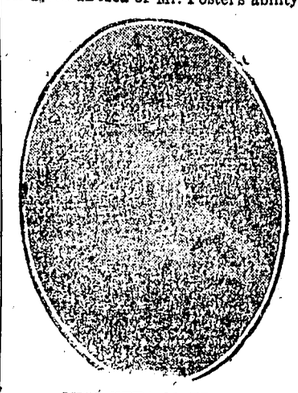
This strangely attractive narrative does not assume to be either scientific, philosophic, or as advancing any special religious creed. It is a plain statement of facts based upon the experience of a woman whose highest aim is to acquire a knowledge of truth, to earnestly strive to live it, and to offer to others a stepping-stone which may aid them, in their progress towards the light

From the standpoint of Spiritualists this is a most interesting book, as Mrs. Weiss actually took these journeys in spirit and has given them in all sincerity, to the world. The book is uplifting and full of beautiful thoughts. 548 pages. Price $1.50.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration' If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

[Advertisement.]



STRANGE PREDICTIONS

Planetary Professor Foretells Events and Quickly Reads the Lives of People, Though Thousands of Miles Away.

Sends Letters to the Rich and Poor Alike in Which He Advises Them About Business, Marriage, Speculation, Love Affairs, Wealth, Etc.

Offers Free Readings to All Who Write and Send Date of Birth.

In his office in New York City, surrounded by charts and dials of strange design, Prof. Albert H. Postel studies daily over the lives of men and women who have written him for advice on affairs of business, love, speculation, travel, marriage, health and the important events of life. The following letter gives an idea of Mr. Postel's ability:

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

Prof. Postel:

Dear Sir—You are certainly the most wonderful astrologer living. Every one of your predictions came true. I consider that you not only saved me from an awful death, but prevented the loss of hundreds of dollars. I trust that many people will profit by your advice. Sincerely,

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

The accuracy of recent predictions made by this eminent Astrologer has caused many of his friends to believe that he possesses a supernatural power, but he modestly asserts that his predictions are due alone to a scientific understanding of natural laws. The many thankful letters Prof. Postel has received from people who have benefited by his advice furnish ample proof that he is sincere in his work and has a kindly feeling toward humanity.

Readers of this paper can obtain a reading free of charge by addressing a letter to Prof. Postel, Dept. 439, No. 126 West 34th street, New York. Simply say you wish a reading of your life, stating your birth date, sex and whether married or single. If you wish to do so you may inclose 10 cents (silver or stamps) to pay postage and clerical work; however, the reading will be promptly sent, whether you inclose the 10 cents or not.

The Proofs of Life After Death

A Twentieth Century Symposium.

An assembly and collation of letters and expressions from eminent scientists and thinkers of the world, giving the strongest and best reasons known to the world to-day, as substantial evidence of the continued existence of the soul after death. Arranged under the several heads of Science, Psychical Research, Philosophy, Spiritualism. With a special contribution on Immortality from New Standpoints.

Compiled and edited by Robert J. Thompson, Late Special Envoy of the United States to the President of the French Republic.

A work of especial value, giving the views of a large number of eminent persons. Finely printed and bound. Price $2. For sale at this office.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.

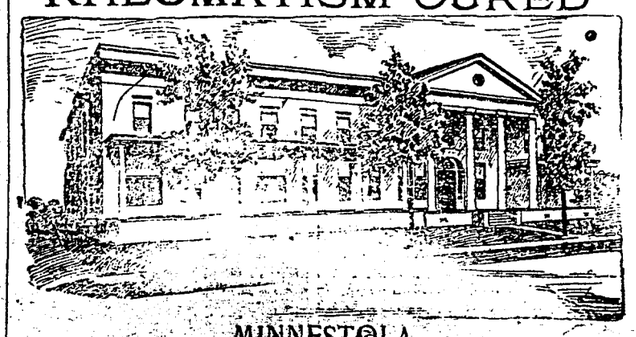
The Philosophy of Individual Life, Based Upon Natural Science

As taught by modern masters of law. By Florence Huntley. An exceedingly interesting and distinctly valuable contribution to the literature of evolution, unfolding its laws from the deeper and clearer spiritual aspect, and indicating the defects of the Darwinian theory. Spiritualists and Materialists alike can gain much from its perusal. Price, finely bound in cloth, $2.

Science and a Future Life

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.



Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope.

This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts stated, and the keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Price 25 cents.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.

Lectures by the Swami Vivekananda, on Raja Yoga; or Conquering the Internal Nature, and other subjects; also, Patanjali's Yoga Aphorisms, with commentaries and a copious glossary of Sanskrit terms. Revised and enlarged. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50. Raja Yoga is an ancient system of Indian Philosophy, and one of the four chief methods that the Vedanta Philosophy offers to obtain freedom and perfection. Swami Vivekananda became a familiar figure in several American cities during the three years following the Parliament of Religions at Chicago; he was cordially received in America, where the breadth and depth of his teachings were soon recognized. His teachings are universal in their application. The book is cheap at $1.50. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESOTA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 50cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE:

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

A Commendable Project.

It is announced from Washington, that the multi-millionaire, John D. Rockefeller, has determined to expend fifty millions of dollars, for the purpose of lifting the Chinese in their own country, to the plane of American civilization. It is stated to be the oil king's intention to endow numerous institutions of learning in the principal cities of the empire, for the purpose of educating the mandarins in all the knowledge pertaining to our higher civilization, excluding all learning in any manner connected with religious organizations.

Mr. Rockefeller claims the task of missionaries has heretofore been directed to the conversion of the lower classes in China to Christianity; that, practically, nothing permanent was accomplished; that by reversing the habit, commencing at the top, and slowly descending, he hopes to gain everything.

If Mr. R. will carry out to the letter the announced program; leave religious questions alone, and allow the people when educated to adopt a religious belief adapted to their condition, such as nature teaches, the fame of John D. Rockefeller as a genuine philanthropist will live forever. His great donations in aid of the Chicago University, which is certainly one of the most liberal institutions of learning in America, bids us hope there is a glorious future awaiting the Chinese empire, the oldest government on the globe.

We Don't Believe It.

"And the Lord's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying," etc.—Numbers 32:10.

An orthodox devil could not dishonor the Lord more grossly than does the "inspired word" when it represents the creator of boundless world getting angry and swearing. The most profane man in Christendom can justify his vulgarity by quoting, if not a "thus saith the Lord," then by quoting a "thus doeth the Lord." In the following verse the Lord tells of having "swared unto Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob." Jesus must have had his Father's vulgar habit in mind when he commanded his disciples to "swear not at all," virtually telling them not to follow his Father's profane example. Then we have "holy writ" declaring: "Anger rests in the bosom of fools." Such language is not complimentary to God. We beg all our Christian brothers, of all religious denominations, to join in convening a general council, to eliminate all these God dishonoring passages from the bible, and don't forget to thank a Spiritualist journalist for calling attention to these horrible things in your book.

An angry God, forsooth, swearing at his people! It is worse than whistling for flies.

Hide on the Fence.

What under heaven did Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, mean, when he wrote:

"If anybody wants to fight, and wants biblical authority for fighting, go to the Old Testament, and you can get all the authority you want; and if you not only want to fight, but to kill the wives and children of the enemy, go to the Old Testament. You will find there almost anything you look for."

And this the estimate an anointed priest places on the "inspired word of God!" A thoughtless Spiritualist could not express himself more severely. Is the learned Doctor falsely reported? If not, is there another heresy trial about to burst on the world? Aside, we would inquire in a confidential tone:

"Doctor, how dare you relate such facts in a Christian pulpit, or write so truthfully for the public press? They'll have your hide on the fence, sure."

The Soul a Demonstrated Physical Fact.

The spirit of man, that immortal entity that survives the tomb and the wreck of time, has been treated by the great mass of modern writers as immaterial, devoid of corporeal substance. Christians and believers generally in biblical lore, until the advent of Modern Spiritualism, were almost unanimous in the belief of the resurrection of the body, with all its earthly incumbrances, at a final judgment, when time was to be no longer.

Spiritualists, on the contrary, discarding a material resurrection, have looked upon the mortal remains at death, as the worn out and decaying habiliments of the soul, from which the latter has taken its departure—a new birth, when the body is no longer animated by the departed spirit.

Several years ago we took occasion in these columns, to express our opinion, and to support that conviction by many facts, that the soul, still bearing semblance of its earth life, was yet material, but so greatly refined as to be invisible to normal vision. We quoted Thomas Paine, who, in his Age of Reason, said:

"The consciousness of existence is not dependent on the same form, or the same matter, is demonstrated to our senses in the works of creation, so far as our senses are capable of receiving that demonstration. A very numerous part of the animal creation preaches to us far better than Paul, the belief of a hereafter. Their little life resembles an earth and heaven—a present and a future state."

Then Mr. Paine illustrated with facts drawn from winged insects, which we need not repeat.

Milton seems to have entertained a similar opinion as to refined matter; for he put into the mouth of Raphael, in addressing Adam:

"Time may come, perhaps, when Your bodies may at last all turn to spirit."

We were greatly entertained and instructed, in reading that learned and scientific article from the gifted pen of Prof. Larkin, in The Progressive Thinker of March 9, 1907, in which he negatived the idea of a continued life. He ransacked earth and heaven in a fruitless search for the soul. It evaded inquiry at every point. And yet, with more hopeful vision than his, when he described the "astounding deductions of very recent physical science," in relation to "corpuscles," and showed "so far no difference can be detected between them and electricity;" that they are so minute "a row of them side by side one inch long would contain 12,500,000,000,000, we felt he only lacked the sixth sense, clairvoyance, to find the highly sublimated substance of which souls are made, and which leave the body, still instinct with life and memory with the expiring breath.

And have we not in the following, "the weighing of a soul," which is now making the rounds of the public press, the coveted knowledge, which must, if fully confirmed, remove every lingering vestige of doubt from the minds of scientists, that a continued and an immortal life is a demonstrated fact? If the body is rendered lighter at the instant of death, it matters not how trifling the avoirdupois, it is positive proof that something has gone out at that instant beside the breath. But to the quotation:

"According to a remarkable scientific article published in Boston, five Massachusetts doctors, after six years of experimenting, say they have proved the existence of a soul in the human body. They have determined also that the departure of the soul from the body is attended by manifestations evident to mortal senses—in other words, that at the instant after death the body is lighter by a measurable amount.

"Every known test has been made that might disprove the facts. Instead of doing this, each experiment has added to the confirmation of results which were obtained when the first experiment was made. The difference between the weight of the live human body and the body a moment after death, or when the soul has quitted it, was found to be from one-half ounce to one ounce, and to this they say there can be no other possible solution except that it is the weight of the human soul. In every case, they say, the loss was shown after all known scientific deductions had been taken into consideration."

Orthodox to the Last.

The good John Alexander Dowie was orthodox to the hub, to the last. "Let it be so recorded." Only six weeks before his demise he prepared a sermon he designed to be read at his funeral, which came to light after his death, but it was not used. The last paragraph is given the public in words following:

"I shall return, and with a ruthless hand shall exterminate the vipers and dogs of hell that now hold high places in the City of Zion. They dreamed, and in the grossness of their dreams thought they had prevailed over the first apostle. And now, priests and elders of Zion, I shall return to strike ye down. I shall return in another form, brighter and more beautiful, and ten thousand times more terrible to cut ye off in the midst of your sins, and to win back Zion for the truth and for them that held to the word and did no evil."

That Dowie was thoroughly orthodox is evidenced by the language, "vipers," "dogs of hell," "I shall return to strike you down," etc. Poor man, his priestly ambition was to rule, and subordinate all the world to his own narrow creedal opinion. But it is a mournful fact in his threats of extermination he only followed the example of the Master.

Not a Desirable Title.

The educated Christian clergy are dropping the title of "Rev." It is an old Catholic title, not self-assumed, but applied by others. It has been so frequently dishonored, as shown by the publication, "Crimes of Preachers," that the thoughtful do not covet it.

Dr. Caird Makes an Appeal.

He Is Working to Advance Spiritualism to a Higher Plane.

IS THERE A SPIRITUALIST IN CHICAGO THAT WOULD NOT LIKE TO SEE THIS CITY THE CENTER OF ORGANIZED WORK, AS IT IS ALREADY THE CENTER OF PSYCHIC THOUGHT? CHICAGO IS THE COMMERCIAL AND BUSINESS CENTER OF THE COUNTRY; THE CENTER OF PROGRESS ON ALL LINES.

THE VERY AIR IS FULL OF LIFE, INSPIRATION AND PUSH. THE ATMOSPHERE IS FILLED WITH ENERGY AND VITALITY; WE BREATHE IT; IT EXCITES US; WE FEEL INSTINCTIVELY THE DESIRE TO DO SOMETHING, TO ACCOMPLISH GREAT THINGS, TO JOIN THE RANKS OF WORKERS, TO HELP PUSH.

Chicago is a city of conventions, of great political, social and religious gatherings, of great and noble institutions devoted to art, science, commerce, charity and religion.

Chicago, with its wonderful resources, with its millions of inhabitants, ought to have the greatest Spiritual society in the world. It ought to have a summer camp; it ought to have some place, easy of access, where we can go every Sunday during the summer months, and listen to the teachings of Spiritualism through the lips of its inspired workers, and receive messages from our spirit friends, out in God's own air and sunshine, and where we can spend weeks, if we choose, and, living near to the heart of nature, gather spiritual strength and wisdom to fit us for our work during the winter. Chicago can have one of the grandest camp grounds in the country before the summer of 1908, if the Spiritualists will only unite and say they will have it.

In no city in the world has been made such wonderful strides in all directions as in this city during the last forty years. Shall Spiritualists be the only laggards? Why should it not be the stronghold of spiritual work? Hosts of spirits on the other side of life are working as never before, to bring about this result; they are trying to create a spiritual force that shall be felt all over the country.

There never was a time when the need of organized effort was so apparent as at the present time. Attempts at the passage of laws inimical to the interests of Spiritualism are being made all over the country. We must prepare to fight them; mass our forces and show them that we understand our rights and are prepared to protect them, and let us see that the matter of guarding them is placed in the hands of those competent to attend to it, not left to the undirected efforts of individuals.

There are thousands of Spiritualists in Chicago, men and women of intelligence, refinement, and of means, enough to make one of the strongest Spiritual associations the world has ever known, if they can be organized aright.

Chicago is the home of The Progressive Thinker, the greatest Spiritual paper ever published, and the First Society of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists is determined to make their society the very best in the country, and it will be, if you will come in and help us. Will you join us and do your part in the work of gathering the Spiritualists of Chicago into one grand harmonious working body, one that shall be able to bring the finest talent in the world to our city to establish a camp in some nearby place, and eventually help organize other societies and so extend the work to other cities and states?

Come in now; there never was a more auspicious time than the present.

At this joyful anniversary season, let us do something besides rejoice and be glad. Not long since, the interest of the whole civilized world was excited in regard to a mine explosion in California and the efforts made by the miners to rescue those buried by the explosion, or cave-in. When those noble-hearted men were working unceasingly night and day, to reach down through the tons of rock and debris that formed a prison and perhaps a grave for their fellow-workmen, what a thrill went over the whole country when the news was flashed over the wires that a faint tapping had been heard from that dreadful tomb in which their brothers were buried. But did their efforts cease when they had ascertained the glad fact that Miner Hicks was living, or later, when communication was established and they learned his condition? Oh, no, many days of constant, uncensing labor was still to be performed, as there is in the field of spiritual work to-day.

Many of us have been so rejoiced at the sound of the raps that fifty-nine years ago proclaimed the glad tidings that those of our loved ones gone from mortal sight, still lived, that we are content to sit with folded hands, still listening for more raps, forgetting that the thick walls of materialism, of ignorance, of superstition and of false beliefs and doctrines that for thousands of years have stood between the human race and the glorious freedom of Spiritual Truth, are not yet demolished. The need of laborers today is greater than ever before.

We would that we might be inspired to write some word that shall sink into your hearts; that we might impress upon your consciousness the importance of the great work that can be accomplished in this city if we will only unite our forces and work together in harmony.

When we speak of writing the history of Spiritualism, the mind instantly flies back to pioneer days and the work of early laborers, but we forget the fact that we are making history today, just as much as they were. The history of our efforts will be recorded. Shall it it be said of us that we fall behind in the march of progress? That we of Chicago did not keep up with Spiritualists in other parts of the country?

In organizing the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists we have made a beginning, small, to be sure, but we are strong in confidence, courage and enthusiasm. Every undertaking, no matter how gigantic or far reaching, is usually in the hands and from the brains of a few at its inception, but it requires the many to carry forward to a successful completion. Co-operation is the only watchword by which a grand success can be accomplished. We have perfect confidence in the future of our organization. There is not a pessimist among us. If you are inclined to look upon the dark side of everything, come in and join us, and your confidence and faith in the future of Spiritualism will begin to develop immediately. If you think the life is gone out of the spiritual work, come to Hygeia Hall some pleasant Sunday and spend the day, and you will change your mind before it is time to go home.

We are trying to organize the Spiritualists of Chicago into a working body that shall accomplish something worthy of the cause; we are trying to develop and foster a spirit of fraternity and co-operation, which we feel is the greatest need at the present time. No matter if we do not agree upon every little point of belief. The minor points of our belief may appeal to different minds in different ways; what matters it? We are all brothers and sisters; we all believe in spirit communication and guardianship; we can all unite in helping each other and doing good to our fellow-men. Let us not bicker over beliefs and opinions but take hold of the work before us and work for a purpose, with confidence in our ultimate success. No one can do good work for a cause in which he has no faith. Believe you are right, that you are engaged in the best cause in the world and you are bound to succeed. Be enthusiastic and try to enthuse your fellow-workers.

We extend to every reader of this article an invitation to join our society. We want you. Even if you are so situated that you can not do much towards the work of the society, become one of us. There is strength in numbers. If you do not feel to join, we shall be glad to receive contributions to assist in carrying on the work. As Chicago offers the grandest opportunities and boasts of the grandest development the world has ever witnessed, so we would have it lead in this, the grandest of all works, that of spiritualizing the world.

ALEX CAIRD, M. D.
598 W. Monroe street, Chicago.

They Failed.

The Methodists of Kansas are greatly disgruntled because the state Legislature, at its recent session, refused to throw additional protection over their holy day, which they falsely call the Sabbath. The "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," referred to our Saturday, and had no connection whatever with Constantine's day made sacred to the sun, and known to us as Sunday. The sun was worshiped as God by the Roman people in the time of Constantine, and he set aside a day to be observed for its worship. It was stolen by the Christians. A false account of the origin of the day was set up, just as has been done by every other sacred and festal day in Roman mythology.

The Kansas legislature acted wisely in not enacting any repressive law to further prohibit the people from enjoying the little freedom the church has so far found it impossible to take from them.

An Oath With the Bark On.

Col. Ingersoll declared the pledge of fidelity to a creed on the part of the clergy, is in effect an oath: "So help me God, I will never mentally advance." He should have added in the language of a secret order of fifty years ago: "And this I do under the penalty of being hated by men, despised by angels, abhorred by devils, and damned by God."

When any one of the prouder passions are hurt, it is much better philosophy to let a man slip into a good temper than to attack him in a bad one.—Thomas Paine, in Crisis.

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.—Froude.

Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of to-day.—Goethe.

Truisms.

The wrongs to be righted are in this world; the suffering to be relieved is here; the help to be given is on earth; the burdens to be borne are during our present life; the sacrifice to be made is now; all that man needs is what his earthly existence demands, and every assertion about future pain is made to rob the world and enrich the church.—L. K. W., in Truth Seeker.

THE DEAR OLD MOUNTAIN ROAD.

On the hottest day in summer,
Tired and lazy with the heat
Of the golden sun, now roaming
O'er its often traveled beat;
What will ease the mind more quickly,
Or remove a greater load,
Than to stroll along at leisure
Down the dear old mountain road?

Following the dusky wheel tracks,
Just beyond the pasture lane;
Stepping out to pick a berry,
Then back to the road again;
Near the rock on which we children
Often saw a sleepy toad;
And around the bend, the schoolhouse,
Down the dear old mountain road.

All the trees, the elms and maples,
Birch and willows, poplars, too,
Seem like friends, all but forgotten
As they each one come to view;
But when far from all these treasures
Of my boyhood's fond abode,
There is none that seems so precious,
As the dear old mountain road.

EDNA JOHNSON WARREN.
Rutland, Vt.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

Genius always gives its best first; prudence at last.—Lavater.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

Solitude and concentration will reveal a world of thought, the likeness of which man had never dreamed.—Abolt.

When we have but the will to do it, that very moment will justice be done; that very instant the tyrants of the earth shall bite the dust!—Peter Kropotkin.

THEODORE J. MAYER.

The President of the N. S. A. Gives a Glowing Sketch of the Life of this Remarkable Man---Truly a Philanthropist in Every Fiber of His Body and Soul.

A telegram from headquarters, Washington, D. C., lies open before me. It brings sad tidings, which, even if not wholly unexpected, are yet hard to bear. It tells me that the generous-hearted, whole-souled treasurer of the N. S. A., Theodore J. Mayer, has taken leave of earth to return to the home in the Sphere of the Soul, whence he came, when he elected to make this planet of ours a visit of two and sixty years in order that he might add to the sum total of Soul-wisdom by the experiences he gained here. He has left us when the shadows of earth-life were only beginning to fall lightly toward the west—left us when apparently our need of his services was greatest, when our Cause most required his valiant defense and support. The void made by his exit is indeed great and our people everywhere will now see for themselves what this noble life was to them and to the religion in which he so reverently believed. Words from the truly inspired pen of Lizzie Doten regarding Henry L. Kingman of Springfield, Mass., in 1860, come to my mind as I think of Mr. Mayer's return home;

"He left us when his manly heart
With earnest hope was beating high;
Too soon it seemed for us to part,
Too soon, alas! for him to die!"

We know that Theodore J. Mayer is not dead; we realize that he has only made an exchange of dwelling places, and gone back to the home he left in the long ago. Reflecting upon this change, we can readily see what it means to him. He has gone home to the loved ones of his heart who left him in the far-away past, the gentle wife of his bosom and the tender babes, the pledges of their love, who preceded him more than a quarter of a century in their exchange of homes. Going home to enjoy their companionship, to take up life's activities anew, and carry on to a successful finish the work for Spiritualism which he began so well and so enthusiastically carried forward while in the mortal.

He loved his religion and stood ready on all occasions to render it faithful service. He never did things half way, nor did he believe in hiding his truth from the gaze of men. It was too precious to be concealed, too reverent to be scoffed at, too inspiring to be cast aside for the seeming things in life.

Theodore J. Mayer was a self-made man, and in many respect a most remarkable character. He was a native of Switzerland, and was twenty years of age when he took up his residence in America. Single-handed he set bravely forth to carve out his fortune in a strange land. He was not afraid of hard labor, and he did not spare himself in the discharge of any duty that came to his hand. He made his work a part of himself, and by putting his very soul into his efforts, he was soon able to produce results. In all of his business dealings he was a man of his word, hence won and retained the confidence of his fellow-men. His word was his bond, and his standing soon became a synonym for integrity throughout the nation. He was a man who "did things," and did them for a purpose. Idleness he hated with all of the ardor of his impetuous nature. He believed in hard work as an essential part of true religion. He exacted nothing of others that he did not demand in full of himself. He began life in a humble position with the well-known firm of W. M. Galt & Co., of Washington, D. C. Promotion came as he earned and deserved it, hence he rose steadily in position and influence until he stood at the head of the great house with whose interests he was identified all his life. He held this place for nearly twenty years prior to his transition.

Prosperity came to him, and the goddess Fortune smiled encouragingly upon his efforts. His success was always won by honest effort, and ever inspired him with the desire to do good with that which was entrusted to his stewardship. He was prominent in Masonic circles, likwise in many fraternal orders, as well as corporations of great influence. He was a director in a score or more of active business associations, including several banks, hospitals and eleemosynary institutions. He kept a watchful eye over every enterprise with which he became identified, and many of the successes gained were due to his sagacity and foresight. He met with some disasters and sustained not a few reverses. He made everyone of them a stepping stone to a greater and truer success. He seemed endowed with an intuitive faculty whose impresses seldom, perhaps never failed him in any great emergency. By following its lead he quickly overcame his seeming misfortunes, and went forward, inspired by it, to the victory that he felt sure was ahead for him.

When his position in the business and financial worlds was secure, he exerted himself with the same unflagging zeal as before, to make good use of that which was his. He was an ardent friend of education, likewise a most generous patron of the arts. He spent large sums for the advancement of science, and sought to interest others in the noble work of diffusing knowledge among men. He founded at least one hospital, endowed it liberally, and opened his purse freely to the calls of institutions of like nature. In him, the sick and afflicted, the deserving poor and needy ever found a friend. Young men and women of talent, possessed of a willingness to work, were often the recipients of his bounty. He loved to give in cases of need with no clue to his own identity. This was a frequent, almost invariable practice with him. Many a speaker and medium, sick, unfortunate and disheartened, has received a twenty or a fifty dollar bill from his largess, without knowing until long afterwards, if ever, whence it came. This is ever the method of the true philanthropist who never allows the one hand to know what the other hand is doing.

Theodore J. Mayer became an intensely loyal citizen of the land of his adoption. He loved America and the principles underlying American institutions. He wove himself without reserve into the warp and woof of our country's being. As a resident of the District of Columbia, he had no vote, yet he was one of Columbia's most faithful sons in all phases of our national life. Through his early years his sympathies were with the Democratic party, and remained there until the hard times of 1894 caused him to align himself with the Republicans. At one time, I am told, he was offered the treasurership of the United States, but declined the office because of his numerous business interests. His home life was quiet, yet inspiring. He was an omnivorous reader, and his rooms contained choice volumes bearing upon his favorite themes. He kept pace with the progressive thought of the age and was frequently far in advance of it, as he also was of his compeers. His wife passed away at an early age, three children having preceded her into spirit life. One son alone remained to keep him company. Mr. Mayer never married a second time. The memory of the wife of his youth, and the mother of his children was sacred to him, and he cherished it most fondly. Her exchange of worlds did not take her out of his thought or life. He sensed her presence every passing day, and lived accordingly.

He became a convert to Spiritualism between twenty and twenty-five years ago. His was not a partial conversion; it took in his entire being, body, spirit, soul, pocket book, and all mental activities. He at once saw the need of systematic organization on the part of the Spiritualists of America, and devoted himself assiduously to the task of bringing our widely scattered forces together. He took time to investigate most carefully almost every phase of mediumship, and was equally painstaking in his study of psychic phenomena. His analytical mind made it possible for him to weigh evidence, after he had once taken the necessary initial steps in the direction of sifting the wheat from the chaff.

It was my privilege to meet Mr. Mayer some fifteen years ago, since which time our associations have been quite intimate. His work for Spiritualism is largely interwoven with the history of the N. S. A., whose treasurer he has been for twelve years out of the fourteen it has been in existence. He was one of the prime movers in the work of organizing our National body, and has always been its heaviest financial supporter. His benefactions did not stop with the N. S. A. He helped to establish our Pension Fund, contributed generously to the Morris Pratt Institute, and gave liberally to the support of not a few local societies, the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C., being, of course his first love.

His munificent gift to the N. S. A. of the headquarters building and the lot on which it stands, is or should be fresh in the mind of every Spiritualist in America. He has contributed large sums for the support of the various activities of the N. S. A. ever since it became a body corporate. I believe I am making a conservative estimate when I place Mr. Mayer's donations to Spiritualism in general, to mediumship, to the N. S. A. and to local societies at $100,000 in the last twenty years. This testifies emphatically to his love for and belief in his religion. Had other Spiritualists done as much as he has, in proportion to their means, Spiritualism as a movement would stand in far different relationship to the thought-life of the world than it does to-day. Mr. Mayer's benefactions should be perpetual inspirations to his brethren to emulate his example. If our people fail to carry his good work forward, they will be recreant to their duty, and be most ungrateful to the generous man who has set the pace for us all, and led the way. His monument will not be of marble, nor yet of granite,—it will be rather the good he has done through his willing service to his fellow-men.

Mr. Mayer had his faults, but he ever sought to overcome them, and stood ready to correct his every mistake as soon as the error was made known to him. Other men, out of prejudice, might remain wedded to their mistakes. Not so with him. The frank admission of a fault was to him part payment of the debt. This rule he applied to himself, as well as to others. He has been known to apologize to a negro, when shown that he had been hasty in his judgment of him. It takes courage of a high order to do this, even with white men. In confessing a fault, good grammarians tell us that we should speak the personal pronoun "I" first, then refer to our associates afterward. I have reason to know that rule was observed by Mr. Mayer. We did not always agree in our views, yet when the motives were laid bare, we had the same purpose in view and worked together with a will in perfect harmony. There was no difference as to the principles involved; we did not always study them from the same angle of vision, but he was too broad to cherish any resentment over a mere difference in opinion. I always found him sincere, straight-forward, honest to the core, and earnestly desirous of being just in all he said and did. His great worth, his noble nature, became more and more apparent to me as the years slipped past us. He was more to me than my friend; he was my brother, my comrade-in-arms, my helper in all of the affairs of life. Emerson says: "A friend is a person with whom one can be sincere," and every one who really knew Mr. Mayer always found him to be sincere, therefore a friend in the best sense of the word.

He has gone back to his Soul-home at the early age of sixty-two years. No doubt over-work had much to do with undermining his splendid constitution. It would almost seem as if he should have had another score of earth years, yet it was not to be, and he has gone to that life in spirit which he enjoyed so much in anticipation. His now the realization, after his busy, well-spent life. A giant oak has fallen among us, leaving a great gap in the forest of being, an aching void to our tear-dimmed vision, and there is no one who can fill his place. We have his deeds to inspire us, his words of kindness to cheer and comfort us, his noble, unselfish life as a daily example for us. He is not dead—this great-hearted, whole-souled philanthropist, but lives on in our very midst to inspire us to continue the work to which he so willingly devoted his life.

"Not dead! Oh, no, but lifted
Above all earthly strife.
Now first he knows the meaning
And feels the power of life."

Let us, therefore, weep no more for our dear one gone, but transmute our tears into deeds of love for his sake, knowing that all is well with him, and that all things are ordered wisely for the best. Let us help him to pass on to nobler heights, to win greater and more glorious victories for the cause of truth in the land of light and love where he now dwells. Let us further remember that this earth of ours is the better because of his having lived in it, and that the soul realm is richer because he has entered there. Theodore J. Mayer, my friend, my brother, I greet thee in spirit! Peace, eternal peace, be with thee! All hail, and a brief farewell until we meet again in the "Morning Land!"

In loving remembrance,
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

Prof. Lockwood's Lectures.

Six instructive lectures upon physiology, anatomy and the functional nervous system, by Prof. W. M. Lockwood, formerly of Chicago, now of Buffalo, N. Y., will be given at the Spiritual Temple, corner of Jersey street and Prospect avenue, commencing Friday evening, March 15, and continuing every Friday evening throughout the term.

Lecture 1.—An inquiry into the conscious relation of the soul to the human organism.

Lecture 2.—The osseous or bony structure of the human body. Its wonderful character as a framework to support a life principle.

Lecture 3.—The development of blood from foods, and its circulation through the veinous and arterial system.

Lecture 4.—The nervous system and how many errors of living, and man's mental and moral environment affect it.

Lecture 5.—The human brain with its two thousand million cells and fibres of sensation, the receiving station of all conscious sensation.

Lecture 6.—The development of the human embryo and its relation to hereditary influences and harmonious environment.

Lectures illustrated with two magnificent manikin charts.

It is claimed for Prof. Lockwood by the secular press and the public who has heard him that he has no peer on the American rostrum as an instructor and demonstrator of the principles and truths relating to Natural Philosophy.

Full course tickets $1. Single admission, 25 cents.

Some impose upon the world that they believe that which they do not; others more in number, make themselves believe that they believe, not being able to penetrate into what it is to believe.—Montaigne.

The will of man is by his reason swayed.—Shakspeare.

Who plays for more than he can lose with pleasure stakes his heart.—Herbert.

Heart keeping is the secret of happy housekeeping.—Anon.

Sacred are the lips from which has issued only truth. Over all wealth, above all station, above the noble—the robed and crowned—rises the sincere man. Happy is the man who neither paints nor patches, veils nor veneers! Blessed is he who wears no mask!—Ingersoll.

There would be more happiness in the world if we would rejoice more with others instead of feigning sympathy with their sorrows.—Max Bewer.

Spirit Return.

As Manifested at the Home of Mrs. Alice D. Green, at Hamilton, Ill.

The Secular Press is doing a grand work for Spiritualism. It reaches a class who never see a Spiritualist paper, and who often become deeply interested in our Cause. The phenomena occurring at the home of Mrs. Green will excite great interest among skeptics and investigators, and they will be led to make further inquiries in reference to Spirit Return, which is now agitating the entire world.

Hamilton, Ill., March 16.—Two and a half miles southeast of this city, [as set forth in the Chicago Record-Herald] at the farm home of Mrs. Alice D. Green, there has been in progress for several months a series of the most puzzling psychic manifestations.

During the last few weeks the experiences of the persons in whom the extraordinary powers are claimed to have been developed have been growing more frequent and perplexing. So far the facts have been kept strictly within the Green family circle except in a few instances where they have been related in correspondence with persons engaged in psychic research.

Mrs. Green, the dominant factor in the weird happenings, is 56 years old and inherited the 140-acre farm on which she has lived since she was 3 years old. Her high standing in the community in which she has lived practically all her life is unquestioned. Her financial position is such as to absolve her from any charge of making claims along psychic lines from mercenary motives. In the ordinary affairs of life her veracity goes undisputed.

The other prominent figure in the remarkable psychic or "spiritualistic" manifestations that occur daily at the Green home is George Upp, a painter of considerable fame, who for many years has had his studio in the big, rambling Green farmhouse. Mr. Upp's position in the world of art, his general reputation and his financial independence compel belief in his integrity. Few psychic phenomena are given to the world on the word of as honest and disinterested witnesses as Mrs. Green and Mr. Upp. Further than this, the phenomena seen at the Green farm are attested by Mrs. Green's husband and her cousin, the only other members of the household.

The Green home stands a quarter of a mile back from the main road and is approached through an avenue of maple trees. The attention of the visitor is roused at the very entrance to this avenue by the white swinging gates, which are decorated with wooden panels, on which are painted the faces of children. The grounds around the house has been laid out in elaborate designs and show more attention than the ordinary farm dooryard gets. The house is large and nondescript.

Solitary Grave in Dooryard.

In one corner of the dooryard, not far than fifty feet from the big, round window of the living room, is a solitary grave. Here was buried a year and a half ago Harry Green, the only child. He had married a sister of George Upp, and was about 35 years old when he died.

"Harry always said that all he wanted of the old farm was that much space to be buried in," explained Mrs. Green, "and besides I could not bear to have him taken away from me."

The burial of Harry Green in the dooryard of his mother's home created some comment among the neighbors, but the Greens are quiet folks who live largely to themselves, and this vagary was set down to a bit of sentiment in which the bereaved parents might indulge if they chose. The farm is rented and the Greens have little of the care of the average farmer.

Mrs. Green is slightly above medium height, straight and uncommonly active. Her eyes are dark and keen. Her complexion swarthy and her black hair is streaked with gray. She has worked hard at such work as farmers' wives and daughters do since she was a little girl. She has great native ability and little education. Her chin and jaw are strong to the point of masculinity and her manner is positive but contained. She is the dominant personality of the household.

"Notice of Dr. Isaac Funk's new book, 'The Psychic Riddle,' attracted my attention," said Mrs. Green, "but none of the phenomena he relates is more strange than the manifestations that have occurred right here daily for months. By way of introduction I wish to say that no one was more skeptical in these matters than were the members of this household up to a year ago. We were not even interested in the occult any more than everyone is interested in the strange things they hear. Even now we are investigators.

"After the death of my son I grieved, it seemed to me, more than mothers ordinarily grieve over the death of an only child. It seemed at times as though I simply could not live with my sorrow. And yet I knew I would live, as countless others had done under similar circumstances.

Spirits Rock the Table.

"One evening Mr. Upp, after a day of hard work at his painting, laid his head on his arm as he sat at a table and dropped into a half-slumber. Suddenly the table began to rock violently. The rocking aroused him and astonished me. We had not been looking for nor talking of any such demonstration. I had heard of such things and had scoffed at them. I knew Mr. Upp was telling the truth when he said he was as mystified as I was. The air seemed charged with electricity. We did not know what all this meant then and made no effort at that time to secure other manifestations.

"This occurred when my grief was uppermost in my mind and when I could think of little else. After the phenomenon of the rocking table I wondered if there really was such a thing as psychic communication, and made up my mind to try. The next evening I placed paper and pencil on the table and had Mr. Upp sit near it. Suddenly he began to feel excruciating pains in his arms, as though he had hold of an electric battery.

"Then the pencil began to move. Naturally I asked mentally for a message from Harry, and in an instant the pencil, without human control in any way, began to form letters on the paper. The experience to Mr. Upp was most painful. His right arm was drawn and the muscles became tense. There was the same feeling in his left leg. The sensation resembled what might have been felt had a strong electric current been broken between his hand and the pencil.

"The first message was written in a feeble, uncertain way, but it could be read distinctly. It said: 'Do not get blue any more.' Up to this point I had had but one indication that there was a psychic power at my disposal, and that was the rocking of the table. We were both dumbfounded at this mysterious writing. We had heard of such things and had scoffed at them. I was anxious to pursue the investigation, but the physical pain to Mr. Upp was so great that he begged to be excused from further tests. Since that time we have been receiving messages nightly. Portraits in pencil and landscapes in pastel constantly are being fosmed without the touch of human hand."

This explanation had been made while I talked with Mrs. Green in the living-room of her house. She produced a large number of messages written in pencil in proof of her assertions.

"I want you to meet Mr. Upp," she said, "but must warn you that he is sensitive about the subject, and that if you show a disposition to scoff he probably will refuse to discuss his experiences at all, as it was only at my earnest solicitation that he consented to tell what he has experienced."

Studio as Spook Chamber.

The artist was found at work in his big, second-story studio. He is a distinguished looking, silver-haired man, whose manner was affable. Beyond the inevitable litter and disorder of an artist's studio there was nothing "spooky" about the apartment. By way of his favorite subject, art, the conversation was brought around to the alleged "spiritualistic" manifestations in which he had been playing so important a part.

"I assure you," he said, "that the things that have been occurring in this house are as strange to me as to you. Further than this I am fully aware that the public will only 'fake' when it hears of these things. I cannot blame it. Still, the facts remain.

"Since the night the table rocked so mysteriously I have been bringing to bear on these phenomena all the power of disinterested thought at my command. I am investigating as honestly as anyone could. Many of the phenomena might be explainable on the theory that they were the physical acts of a man in a subjective state of mind. For instance, take this sketch," and the artist took from a shelf one of two small pastel sketches. It was a landscape, roughly done, but showing talent.

"That picture was formed without human touch," said Mr. Upp, "to the best of my belief, and yet the investigator would say, very likely, that I made the sketch while in a subjective mind state. I admit that this may have been the case. I am willing to make oath that if I touched that sketch I did not know it. Still, as long as the sketch was formed, while I was in this room, I know it will be difficult to convince the average person that I did not make it."

Signed by Noted Painter.

This sketch was signed "Daubigny," the name of a famous painter of landscapes long dead. Another landscape sketch which—according to Mrs. Green and Mr Upp—was formed by spirit hands, bore the signature of Claude Lorrain, another celebrated painter of a long-ago period. Near these sketches, on the same shelf, stood a larger picture in pastel, a portrait of Harry, the deceased son of Mrs. Green. This portrait has been in process of "spirit" formation several days, said Mr. Upp, and was rapidly nearing completion. Like the two landscapes, it had admittedly been formed while Mr. Upp had every facility for doing the work. For the fact that he did not make these three sketches there is no evidence except the word of the artist.

"Are there any material evidences of the visit of the spirit artists to your studio while no one was in the room?" Mr. Upp was asked.

"Just one," he said. "See these marks?" and he showed three bright zigzag crayon marks on the margin of one of the sketches. "Not trusting my own judgment in these manifestations, I decided a few days ago to see if I could secure some evidence of psychic force that would preclude the possibility of human agency. As I went down to dinner one day I had this matter in mind.

"I asked Mrs. Green to watch the experiment with me. We asked mentally for some sign which would be conclusive, some mark on the margin of the picture being suggested. We left the studio together, locked the door, went to dinner, lingered the customary time and then returned to the studio together. I insisted on this. There was no opportunity for Mrs. Green to have entered the room first and made the mark we saw.

He Was Greatly Astonished.

"I admit that I was startled in an uncomfortable way when I saw the red crayon mark that you see on the margin of the sketch. Mr. Green and Mr. Johnson, Mrs. Green's cousin, were the only other persons around the place and they were at dinner with us. I can see no possible way in which I might have been deceived as to this particular mark; and the theories on which the forming of these sketches may be explained fail when they are applied to this mark. Since this happened I don't know what to think."

According to Mrs. Green and Mr. Upp the first few messages that were received were written in view of both of them without the touch of human hand. In one of these "spirit" communications, however, it was suggested that if Mr. Upp, as the medium for the transmission of these messages, would hold the pencil in his hand, much of the pain incident to the performance would be done away with and the people in "spirit land" who were at the other end of the wireless spirit line could transmit the information with much greater facility. For several weeks this method has been followed. These messages are available any time.

"Of course the skeptical public would scarcely be expected to believe that the answers written by Mr. Upp to questions asked of distinguished persons by me are really spirit messages," admitted Mrs. Green, "because it would be so easy for fraud to be committed if Mr. Upp was so disposed. But on what theory are to be explained the messages that come in the night when, on the solemn word of every member of this household, no human being that any of us know anything about possibly could produce them?"

Messages From the Unseen.

Bringing out a drawer full of the communications to which she referred, Mrs. Green made this remarkable statment:

"All of these messages were sent in the night. Most of them came in answer to questions which I wrote and left on the table when I retired. I am quite sure that I am sane and I never wrote one of them. Mr. Upp sleeps in his studio upstairs and he declares he did not write them. Mr. Green and Mr. Johnson not only say they had nothing to do with them, but there is every reason to believe they had not, even without their assurance. No one else could possibly gain access to the room after the family retires without our knowing it. I have no object in misrepresenting these phenomena. If these messages came only occasionally there might be more reason for believing that there was trickery on the part of some one, but they have been coming nightly for months."

The three particular "spirits" that seem to be interested in the Green household are known as "Pompetta," "Bessie" and "Beppo." The first is alleged to have introduced herself to the household as the artists' model who posed for Hans Makart, the Austrian artist who painted the five nude female figures called "The Five Senses," which were exhibited in Chicago during the world's fair.

In the painting Pompetta has her back turned to the public, which was something of a mystery at the time the picture was shown in Chicago. Since she began to visit the Green household, however, Pompetta has confided to Mrs. Green that Makart was compelled to paint her that way because she was so much more beautiful than the court ladies who posed for the other "four senses" that they became envious and forced Makart to hide her face in the painting.

"Bessie's" family name is Story, and she is a "spirit" acquaintance of Harry Green. "Beppo" is the "spirit" nickname for the Duke de Alvarez, a Spanish grandee who was helped into the "spirit" world by a bull that gored him to death. Each of these three supplies messages in an entirely different hand writing from the other two, and in all the communications received these distinctive chirographies have been observed strictly.

Felled by Strange Power.

It was just after dinner at the Green residence that the first physical demonstration of the strange psychic power that seems to pervade the household was seen. Mr. Upp was pacing leisurely and naturally through the living room and parlor, talking politics. Mrs. Green was sitting in the living room. In the middle of a question and as suddenly as though felled by a blow with an ax, the artist plunged headlong to the floor, his head narrowly missing the base of the stove. Perspiration in big drops oozed from his face. His eyes closed and his hands clutched nervously.

"He does that frequently," explained Mrs. Green placidly, placing a cushion under his head. "All that is necessary to make him fall like that is for me to summon Beppo, the spirit guide. Now we will see if we can find some one with whom to converse in the spirit world."

"Is there no danger of Mr. Upp dashing his head against something and killing himself in these tumbles?" Mrs. Green was asked.

"Not the slightest," she said. "Beppo has assured me that he never would allow him to fall in a public place where it would be embarrassing, nor in such a way as to hurt himself."

In order that the "spirit" to be summoned might occupy the body and use the tongue of the artist, his "spirit" was requested by Mrs. Green to repair to the home of "Viola," a relative of Mrs. Green, who lives in Hamilton. Then "Beppo" was called and sent in search of "John Adams," the "spirit" of the great-grandfather of a neighbor.

According to Mrs. Green, Mr. Adams died about eighty years ago at the age of 92, and occupies a place in the "seventh sphere" of "spirit land." When "John Adams" began to talk through Mr. Upp his manner of speech was a startling imitation of a toothless and feeble man of extreme age.

"John" answered questions concerning the "spirit" world as readily for the reporter as he did for Mrs. Green, but at the end of fifteen minutes excused himself on the ground that he had so much to do that he could give up no more time. He said, among other things, that Voltaire was the wisest man he had met in the "seventh sphere," and that he was looked up to as such by the other citizens of that vaguely located place.

After "John" had excused himself and departed the "spirit" of Mr. Upp was called back from Hamilton by Mrs. Green. The artist awoke as one awakes from a hypnotic trance. He declared that he had not the slightest knowledge of what was going on after he fell, but he had a dim recollection of what he had seen in Hamilton.

Christ Tells of Crucifixion.

One of the most interesting communications that have been received through the physical body of Mr. Upp according to Mrs. Green, was a conversation with a wise "spirit," who had just had a long talk with the spirit of Jesus Christ. It seems, according to this communicative "spirit," that Christ's own version of His alleged death and resurrection is substantially as follows:

"The facts of the crucifixion as given in the Bible are true up to the point where it alleges I died. The truth was I became unconscious and was buried in this condition. On the third day I regained consciousness and, while the soldiers slept, I rolled the stone away from the door of the sepulcher. I tried to convince Mary Magdalene and the other Mary that I had not died a physical death, and showed the flesh-and-blood wounds in my side and hands, but they would not believe me. I knew that I would be crucified if I remained in Palestine, so I departed to a faraway island, where, under an assumed identity, I lived many years. The fact that I was taken by the people of Palestine as God made it impossible for me to accomplish the good I desired as a man."

This and other messages are related by Mrs. Green in no spirit of irreverence, but apparently with the utmost faith in their authenticity. After this message was repeated to them Mrs. Green asked for a "spirit" likeness of Christ, and the next morning the pencil sketch reproduced on this page was found on the table under circumstances by which no human hand, according to Mrs. Green, could have drawn it.

This alleged pencil sketch of Christ is but one of the many drawings that are claimed to have been secured in the same way. The sketches of weird musical instruments used in the spirit world here reproduced are claimed to have been formed in the same way. After "Pompetta" became one of the daily "spirit" visitors to the Green household Mrs. Green was seized with a curiosity to see what she looked like and made the request in writing when she retired. The next morning there was a small pencil sketch picturing a girl. Similar crude sketches of other persons referred to in the messages also have been found, it is claimed.

Hear of "Great Spirit."

In many of the alleged communications there is reference to the "Great Spirit," and on one occasion the question was asked: "What is the Great Spirit?" The answer, in the handwriting of the artists' model, "Pompetta," was:

"'Tis the wisdom and condenced thought and experiences of all the length between the two eternities. When we want to know, the occult power is given us to know by. That is called the Great Spirit."

Mrs. Green was asked if it were possible for her to bring about one of the "spirit" messages, in which the pencil does the writing with human guidance, while a disinterested spectator was in the room.

"I doubt if it could be done," she said. "Once when I was in communication with my son a third person who was not in sympathy, or, rather, in close touch with conditions, intruded, and the communication stopped immediately. Later I asked Harry why he should have stopped speaking to me when a third person appeared and he said the intrusion of this third person diffused the spiritistic current of communication.

"He explained it on much the same theory as wireless telegraphy is explained—that if the electric vibrations are once projected in the right direction under the right conditions the message reaches its destination without hindrance, but let the conditions be bad and there is a break in the communication.

"I know that such an explanation is taken by the scoffers as an evidence that these experiments are frauds, because they cannot be performed at any time under any conditions; but if conditions have to be just right in material things like wireless telegraphy, why should not the same allowance be made in means of communication much more delicate and subtle than even wireless telegraphy?"

After the alleged manifestations had been in progress in the Green home for several weeks, Mrs. Green wrote to D. C. McDougall of Rockford, Ill., a well-known investigator along psychic lines, and other reputable investigators, describing the manifestations that had appeared. Among the men communicated with was Dr. T. E. Casterlane, president of the Nebraska Society for Psychical Research. Dr. Casterlane replied, relating even more remarkable manifestations that had come under his personal observation. The phenomena occurring at the Green home have thus just begun to attract attention from the scientific investigators along psychic lines.

Takes Away the Sting of Death.

"I welcome scientific investigation," said Mrs. Green, "because I know that proper investigation can only verify all that I have said. I have but one object, however, in giving these things to the world at all, for they seem to be among those things that are best not advertised. The object that impels me to make them public is the hope that they will bring to others the joy they have brought to me. Thousands of mothers grieve as I did over the death of their only child, and it may be possible for some of them to establish the same delightful communication with them in the other world that I have.

"It takes away the sting of death to be able to talk daily with our loved ones who have left their physical bodies.

"The comfort it affords cannot be told. If others, bowed down with grief as I was, find such relief from their sorrow as I have by these manifestations, I shall be amply paid for the scoffings that I know are certain to follow the making public of the things that have been happening in my house."

It requires only a visit to the Green home to be convinced that, no matter how much of fraud or self-delusion there may be in most of the manifestations claimed to have occurred, there is no fraud or delusion in the psychic power of Mrs. Green over George Upp. The nature of this power may be as Mrs. Green claims—the control of the artist by the spirit "Beppo"—and it may be something else; but this power is a reality that is too apparent to question.

It may be, as suggested as a possibility by Mr. Upp himself, that some of the strange happenings are the result of subconsciousness on the part of Mr. Upp while he is in a subjective mind state, and if this is true the dominating factor in the situation is this remarkable farmer's wife. This may account for some of the bad spelling in the "spirit" messages, such as "condenced" in the definition of the Great Spirit."

Whatever the theory, the alleged facts stand on the word of as good or better witnesses than most so-called Spiritualistic phenomena given to the world.

MARION G. SCHEITLIN.

THE VOICE.

"Beloved! Beloved! 'Tis I."

Methought the voice of the departed
Spirits came out of the gloom,
To me, when sad and faint-hearted,
I rested myself near a tomb.
Like the voice of a sea-shell sighing,
Like notes of a silver flute;
Like a far-off echo dying
It sounded—but I was mute;
Mute with fear and trembling,
And my blood ran cold as ice.
Then all my courage assembling,
I ventured to raise my eyes
To see the one that addressed me
So softly from out the gloom,
But all I could see was a pine-tree
That grew by the side of the tomb.

"'Tis the wind in the pine-top singing,
Or a trick of my overwrought brain,
Or some far-off church-bell ringing"
So I thought—then I heard it again!
This time the Voice was stronger—
Stronger and yet the same—
I could be mistaken no longer,
For it spoke quite distinctly my name:
So tenderly was it spoken,
And the voice so sweet and near,
That the spell of my terror was broken,
And no longer I felt any fear.

"'Tis not the church-bell's ringing;
Nor is it the sea-shell's sigh;
Nor winds in the pine-top singing;
Beloved! Beloved! 'tis I."

EMIL F. LUNDSTROM.
Chicago, Illinois.

IMPORTANT QUESTION

Will God Give Us Another Chance?

When we contemplate the deficiencies in human nature, the failures in many of the most noble lives, the defeats where victory should have been achieved, we pathetically ask: "Will God give us another chance?" Will it be worth while to Him? or will He leave us with the flower dust, the ashes of dead song-birds, the leaf-mold, which once living, beautified the trees above our heads, but in Autumn floated down to earth for disintegration, that it might be ready to feed new life expressed in fresh organizations of to-morrow?

We might have done so much better! or we could do so much better if we could have another chance! So we all think—so we all hope—not quite losing faith in ourselves, no matter what blunders we have made.

While we are garmented in our bodies we may take chance after chance to improve our past work. But when, either from disease or age, we feel our time for going out of this life approaches, we ask with all the earnestness of a last earthly hope, "Will God give us another chance?"

In "Ships which Pass in the Night," there is a touching conversation between Mr. Reffold, a dying consumptive who had sought Petershof, that Mecca of invalids, hoping for benefit which he did not receive, and Bernardine, a clever young woman, broken down with over-work, who was there recuperating. The voice was gentle and her manner quiet. She was a comfort to the hopeless invalid.

Indifference to the needs of those around us, whether human or dumb creature, is paralysis of the soul. Bernardine was not afflicted with the disease of indifference. She was sympathetic, brave and true.

Mr. Reffold called her Little Brick. To her it was sad to see him passing away, so lonely, so uncomplainingly.

"I'm a chap who wants very little" he said one day. "Those who want little get nothing." And he turned his face to the wall.

The sound of sledge bells, of the pleasure-seekers at sad Petershof, went jingling by. His gay wife was in one of the loads Then Bernardine knew he thought how little his own sensed his fading out of life. But that was all he said.

At last he said, after the long silence, in a weak, low voice, "Little Brick, I have something on my hind. You won't laugh, I know; you're not the sort. I know you're clever and thoughtful, and all that; you could tell me more than all the parsons put together. I know you're clever; my wife says so. She says only a very clever woman would wear such boots and hats."

Bernardine smiled.

"Well," she said kindly, "tell me."

"You must have thought a good deal, I suppose," he continued, "about life and death, and that sort of thing.

"I've never thought at all—does it matter, Little Brick? It's too late now. I can't begin to think, but speak to me. Tell me what you think. Do you believe we get another chance?—and are glad to behave less like curs and brutes? Or is it all ended in that lonely little church-yard here? I've never troubled about these things, but now I know I'm so near to the sad little place it makes me wonder. As for the bible, I never cared to read it much; I was never much of a reader, though I did get through two or three fire-work novels and sporting stories. Does it matter, Little Brick."

"How do I know?," she said gently. "How does anyone know? People say they know, but it is all a mystery. Everything we say can be but a gloss. People have gone mad over their guessing; so have they broken their hearts. But still the mystery remains and we cannot solve it."

"If you don't know anything, Little Brick, tell me what you think. Don't be too learned—remember I'm only a brainless fellow."

"If I were you," she said, "I should not worry. Just make up your mind to do better when you get another chance. One can't do better than that.

"That is what I shall think of; that God will give each of us another chance, and that each one of us shall take it, and do better, I and you, and everyone.

"So there is no need to fret over failure when one hopes one may be allowed to redeem that failure later on. Besides which, life is very hard. Why we ourselves recognize that. If there be a God, some intelligence greater than human intelligence, He will understand better than ourselves that life is very hard and difficult, and He will be astonished, not because we are not better, but because we are not worse. At least, that would be my notion of a God. I would not worry. Just make up your mind to do better if you get the chance and be content with that."

"Is that what you think, Little Brick? That is good enough for me! and it does not matter about prayers, and the bible, and all that sort of thing?"

"I don't think it matters. I never thought such things mattered. What does matter is to judge gently and not come down like a sledge hammer on other people's failings. Who are we, any of us, that we should be hard on others?

"A little kindness does away with a great deal of bitterness."

He turned wearily on his side.

"I think I could sleep, Little Brick. I want to dream about your sermon; and I'm not to worry, am I?"

"No," she said, as she glided out of the room—"you are not to worry."

And he slept into the to-morrow to try another chance.

Hope! beautiful rose-wreathed Hope! Holding up before our dying eyes the golden dream of another chance in the sweet Beyond. We all need it. We all want to try again. We hope to do better. Shall we? Yes, if we remember our mistakes there, and the pain of them; we shall do better when our souls, disentangled, take the other chance in the country which mortals have never yet traveled.

Has your life been all you planned it? Have your high hopes been fulfilled? Have you courage to say that, after the cup of mortal life is drained, and empty, sparkling elixir from immortal fountains, sweetened with infinite possibilities, and satisfying progress?

I say it not for myself, but for all I love.

Each soul speaks back to my soul:

"Aye! aye! we would gladly try!
We would balm the pain of our blunders
With achievements pure and high!
We shall know the rocks we broke on
In earth's shadow-locked advance,
And the blinding mists will have lifted
When we measure our other chance.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

"How to Train Children and Parents." Mrs. Elizabeth Towne takes the position that in many cases it is the parents that need the training more than the children, and advises parents to look to themselves. Twenty-five cents could not be better spent than in buying this little book. Anyone that has the care of children should read it. Price 25 cents.

TRENCHANT CRITICISM.

The Errors and Delusions of Theism.

The crudest as well as wisest nations have had their deities, different in character and attributes. From the many gods in the fields of myth, each one comes in with the claim of supremacy, and the devotee believes the one he or she approves is the only true god.

No mortal or spirit ever discovered a god; men create their own gods—ideal beings as different as human minds are—and there is nothing too absurd for them to affirm of gods.

People who are prudent and reasonable in the ordinary affairs of life insanely cling to their imaginary gods; and the avermemts of the learned are no better than the repetitions of the ignorant.

The more false and absurd a religious dogma is, the more firmly do its adherents believe it, defend it and cling to it. The talking of gods to men of antiquity is a matter of faith in fables, which we cannot accept in faith. If any god speaks to us in the thoughts expressed by god-believers, it says some crooked, contradictory things, impossible to understand.

The Christian's god is an enlargement of the rude savage's ideas; and the god question, in the mystery of its insolvability, has sharpened the sword of antagonism; and what argument has failed to maintain has been contested on the fields of battle. They have fought and killed each other, leaving the question still unsettled and open for discussion.

But aside from wars and battles, millions of people have been destroyed for unbelief in gods, as the pages of history show.

Some wise Theists of this age arrogantly condemn and scorn the deities and devotees of Mythology; but "they are all in the same boat"—all believers in ideal gods. The Egyptians worshiped the dog-headed god Annubis. What is the difference between a three-headed god and a dog-headed god? Any one-headed god is less ridiculous than the three-headed monster of popular theology—god of wrath, blood, war. This is the most abominable of all gods, according to history. He outrivals and surpasses all of them in villainy, crime, corruption, cruelty, perfidy, infamy.

According to theology, Jehovah did a bad job making men in his own image and likeness, totally depraved, so he offered a remedy for that by the bloody sacrifice of his son, and scared millions of ignorant, superstitious dupes into belief and submission by threat of damnation in hell for unbelief.

Fear is a great oppressor of the human race. Moral cowardice deprives a person of the liberty and ability to uphold and advocate what is right, and also dissuades him from attacking what is wrong.

A god is anything that god-believers make of it.

They declare "God is creator and cause of all things that exist"; yet at other times they say "Satan, the Devil, is the cause and creator of all evil." We know that mortals cause and create many things; and their faith in a god has been the cause of the worst acts and crimes men ever caused and committed, because they are like the god they worship.

If "God is all things," as Theists assert, we will say he is a fraud, a liar, a devil, a wicked old tyrant. These are parts of "all things." How much do they learn by getting all things into one thing? Their religious dogmas make of their god an embodiment of cruelty, tyranny, oppression too horrible to contemplate. There never lived on earth a man or woman as bad, vile, cruel as the Christian's god is shown to be. Nevertheless, human beings worship and profess to love, reverence and fear this horrible god.

To study Theism is to begin with myths and end in error; it is stultifying to the reasoning powers. Its deluded dupes are fond of using the expression, "Our Father God"; but no one can prove his or her relationship to a god; it does not exist.

When a religious leader can get people praying to a god, they become easy victims of shams and delusions. It is the height of folly to pray to an unknown god; there is none to hear and answer; no facts to prove it; it is an impossibility.

Some Spiritualists assert positively, "There is a God in Spiritualism"; also affirm "Christianity and Spiritualism are synonymous and identical." And they call themselves "Christian Spiritualists." The god they approve is Jehovah, which is shown in their use of bible phrases and quotations. They have tried in vain to fuse their religious faith with the knowledge of Spiritualism, which confronts the fundamental doctrines of Christianity with denial and proves them false.

Spiritualists do not and cannot agree on any statement of faith and principles that contain expressions about a god. That is all right, because it is an imposition, a barnacle on Spiritualism, which has no use for a god; no need of Christian salvation and damnation. There is no common standard of what we believe; and any creedal statement, however brief, is a just cause of antagonism. What we know is of more importance than what we believe."

The "Christian Spiritualists" have complete freedom to hold and preach their doctrines; but these are not component parts of Spiritualism. This is a matter of fact and logic, and this is the point of issue.

It is folly for men to talk of "placing the religion of Spiritualism upon the basis of Scientific Theism." Science treats of known facts; and anything classed as infinite or unknown or incomprehensible or undefinable or supernatural has no place in science. "Scientific Theism" is a contradiction of words. There is no knowledge, no facts, no proof of a god; and nothing is explained or learned by ascribing things to a god or "the gods."

Theism is faith in a god, to be believed, not to be demonstrated and known. It ignores all sciences and attributes all causes and effects to a god or "the gods."

Science and Theism have always been in conflict, with many grand victories scored for science, and theology has abandoned the contest. Religion hates and fears science, because it does not sustain the god theory.

A. H. NICHOLAS.
Summerland, Cal.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price 10 cents.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF "ACTINA"

In the Treatment of Afflictions of the Eye

Every person with impaired eyesight or suffering from weak or diseased eyes should write for our latest free booklet, entitled "Positive Evidence."

The records of phenomenal cures by the "Actina" treatment, as described therein by grateful patients themselves—names and addresses given—will satisfy the most skeptical that "Actina" is not only a remarkable, simple and harmless invention, but restores eyesight even after specialists have pronounced cases incurable.

Following are a few of the successes produced by "Actina," but more fully described in our free booklet.

A Chicago gentleman, after suffering 12 months with inflammation of the iris, used "Actina" a few weeks. He says he can now see as well and as far as anybody.

An Iowa lady writes that after being under treatment of specialists for 15 years, "Actina" completely restored her eyesight and she no longer uses glasses.

Astigmatism and granulated lids impaired the eyesight of a Hartford (Conn.) lady. Specialists failed to cure. As a last resort, against advice of friends, she tried "Actina." She writes:—"For many months I have written almost daily without glasses. No more pain in my eyes and drooping eyelid is restored."

"Actina" removed a cataract from the eye of an Oklahoma lady; relieved the closure of a tear duct for a well known Chicago lady, and in scores of instances people have been able to discard eyeglasses through the faithful use of "Actina." To get an idea of the enthusiasm of our patients the entire letters as printed in our book should be read.

"Actina is made on common sense principles. Its simplicity, effectiveness and lasting qualities will appeal to any one that will investigate. Let us send you one on two weeks' trial. Use it as often as you please and if you are not benefited, or for any other reason are dissatisfied, send it back and no charge will be made. Write today. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342 W., 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

905

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

Discovery of a Lost Trail

BY CHARLES B. NEWCOMB,

Author of "All's Right with the World." Cloth 276 pages. Mr. Newcomb made a distinct success with "All's Right with the World," which continues in the front rank of the Metaphysical books that are now so popular. The great number who have been cheered and strengthened by him will welcome another book by the wise teacher whose words of help are doing so much to make the world better by making men and women better able to understand and enjoy it.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail"

is a simple study of that strange and beautiful thing called life, but grand in its scholarly simplicity. It will be in demand by many who have not previously read metaphysical writings. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

"THE LIFE BOOKS".

BY RALPH WALDO TRINE.

What All the World's A-Seeking, or The Vital Law of True Life, True Greatness, Power and Happiness. Contents—The Principle; The Application; The Unfoldment; The Awakening; The Incoming; Character Building Thought Power. Price, $1.25.

In Tune with the Infinite. Contents—Prelude; The Supreme Fact of the Universe; The Supreme Fact of Human Life; Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; The Secret, Power and Effects of Love; Wisdom and Interior Illumination; The Realization of Perfect Peace; Coming Into Fullness of Power; Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; How Men Have become Prophets, Seers, Sages and Saviors; The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; Entering Now Into the Realization of the Highest Riches. Price $1.25.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. "The moment we fully and vitally realize who and what we are, we then begin to build our own world even as God builds His."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Every Living Creature. "The tender and humane passion in the human heart is too precious a quality to allow it to be hardened or effaced by practices such as we often indulge in."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Character Building Thought Power. "A thought, good or evil, an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, sooner or later, you will find objectified in your life."—From title-page. Price 35 cents.

"AS IT IS TO BE."

A Very Suggestive Work Which Beams With Spiritual Truths.

This is a beautiful book, by Cora Lynn Daniels, and it scintillates with grand spiritual thought. An idea of this work can be obtained by reading the titles of a few of the chapters therein:

The process of Dying; Light and Spirit; The Law of Attraction; Senses of the Spirit; What Is unconscious Will; Fear; Astrology; The God-Soul of Man; The Drama; A Day in Heaven. Price $1.00.

The Majesty of Calmness. The Kingship of Self-Control.

Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the

New Thought.

They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price 30 cents each.

ASTRAL WORSHIP By J. H. Hill, M.D. A valuable contribution to the current discussion of religious problems. The author by illustrations and a planisphere (a representation of the celestial sphere upon a plane with adjustable circles), traces most of the myths which lie at the base of Christianity to their origin in sun and star worship. The astronomical facts given possess great value, the illustrations rare and curious. The book is bound in only one style—heavy boards. Price $1.

THE SOUL: ITS NATURE, RELATIONS AND EXPRESSIONS IN HUMAN EMBODIMENTS. Third edition now on sale. Price $1.00. This is one of the best books given by the guides of Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond. They are really lessons, published primarily, as a book of reference for those who have been members of the classes receiving them. This volume is a careful compilation from reports of lessons, containing the bases of the teachings.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

At Port Huron, Mich., the Occult Club No. 1 meets every Sunday afternoon and evening in their hall, 929 Military street. Dr. R. McL. Angus lectures and gives spirit messages.

W. E. Howard writes approvingly from Jackson, Mich., of the lecture and tests given there by Mrs. Stein of Detroit. She held the closest attention of the audience.

G. H. Brooks writes from 114 President street, Wheaton, Ill.: "The State Society will celebrate the 59th anniversary on Saturday, March 30, by a grand party in Severance Hall, 421 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis., and two services, on Sunday, March 31, by a session Sunday afternoon and evening in the same place. Good talent will be present. The services will conclude by an ordination service. It is to be hoped there will be a large attendance from the outside."

Mrs. Amanda Coffman writes from Grand Rapids, Mich.: "To secretaries of camp association:—I will not accept any more camp engagements for the season of 1907, nor month engagements, for societies this spring. I will answer calls for funerals. Address 57 Benson street, Grand Rapids, Mich."

At Bay, City, Mich., the Occult Club No. 102 meets every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Odd Fellows' Temple, Washington avenue. Mrs. Tuper will lecture and give spirit messages.

Mrs. T. O. Atkinson writes from Louisville, Ky.: "The church of the Soul meets regularly every Saturday night at Odd Fellows' Temple, Sixth and Walnut streets, where large congregations assemble to listen to the impressive truths uttered by the pastor, Mrs. Grunwald. The success of this society seems assured. New and earnest seekers after truth are joining us in our efforts to lift humanity to a higher plane of action for universal brotherhood."

There will be a grand lecture and ball given by the First German Spiritualist Society, for the benefit of Jestram's Old Peoples Home and Temple, to be held afternoon and evening, April 6, 1907, at Spalding Hall, corner North and Spalding avenues.

Andrew Merkel writes: "The Spiritualistic Church Students of Nature, 461 W. North avenue, corner Milwaukee avenue and Robey street, had a large attendance Sunday evening, March 17. The pastor, Mrs. M. Schumacher, gave one of her instructive lectures on 'Doctors and Physicians Before and After Christ Time.' She gave flower readings and all were recognized, and many showed great appreciation by going to the pastor after the service, and expressing thanks for the soul food they had received."

R. F. Churchill writes from Greenfeld, Mass.: "Sunday evening, March 10, we had for our speaker, Dr. Richmond L. Bishop of Lynn. This was his first appearance in Greenfield. He gave a very fine lecture on 'Building a Spiritual Life.' His psychic work was of the best, although one of our young workers. Societies will make no mistake in procuring his services. He made many friends here and will have a return engagement."

Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale, president of the Texas State Spiritualist Association, writes from Galveston, Texas: "I enjoy being with these good people in Galveston. The society is making preparations for an elaborate celebration of the anniversary, Friday and Saturday the Ladies' Auxiliary gives a bazaar. Friday evening at 8 o'clock, an entertainment will be given. Sunday, memorial and anniversary service. There will also be an ordination service. At our last convention, by vote, Mr. Chambers of this city was given an ordination certificate. The public ordination service will take place at some time during the anniversary celebration. I always have good audiences in Galveston."

Prof. Lockwood lately lectured in Buffalo, N. Y., on the following highly important subjects: "The Sorcery and Necromancy of Modern Religious Revivals," and "Legerdemain Spiritualism and legendary Salvation." The whole world ought to have heard his lectures.

Mrs. Dan M. Davidson, editor of The Occult, Detroit, Mich., has open dates during the months of April and May. Any societies in need of a speaker within 150 miles of Detroit, can secure her services at a reasonable price. Address her at Lock Box 522, Detroit, Mich.

The Bulletin of Anderson, Ind., says: "Dr. J. A. Marvin, formerly of Chicago, but at present located in this city, delivered a most worthy discourse on the religion of Spiritualism, at the Madison avenue Temple last evening. The subject was well rendered, and the theme satisfactorily demonstrated, proving, beyond a doubt, that Spiritualism is the only religion founded upon truth and demonstrable facts, which it also teaches, and that not by a mere hope in the possibility of a future existence shall we enter into the Kingdom of heaven.' Dr. Marvin is one who is well worthy of the appreciation of all who will go to hear him, and should be heard to be appreciated, and those who fail will miss a rare treat in the way of honest talk and demonstration of the truth."

Correspondent writes from San Diego, Cal.: "At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sippell, on Friday evening, March 8, a farewell reception was tendered Harry J. Moore. Upwards of fifty invited guests were present, and a very enjoyable time spent in recitations, music, and last but not least a speech by Bro. Moore, who has many friends in our beautiful city. The lyceum the following Sunday devoted part of its session to an expression of appreciation of his services in the capacity of instructor while here. His lectures have left a lasting impression upon a great many people, and the fruits of his efforts as a teacher will last for many years to come. We send with him our best wishes and as he goes on his way lecturing, may he always be found defending Truth."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Lyman C. Howe will lecture at Lily Dale, March 31, at the anniversary meeting to be held there.

Mrs. Annie J. Quinn writes from Dallas, Texas: "On the evening of Thursday, March 14, the marriage of Mrs. Josephine Marshall to Mr. Guy C. Hazeltine was solemnized at the home of Professor and Mrs. Geo. W. Quinn, 218 North Hill avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Isa Wilson Kayner, pastor of the Truth Seekers Spiritualist Society of this city. 'Oh, Promise Me' was sung by Miss Miriam C. Campbell, and Mr. John Seavere. The bride and groom stood under the marriage bell formed of arbor vita and white flowers, which hung from a canopy of lace and ferns in the bay window. The parlor scheme was of white and green; the dining room, of the sunflower, yellow and white, and the reception hall was a combination of the three colors. All rooms were profusely decorated with ferns, lilies and narcissus. The bride dress was of white silk, en train, and the two bridesmaids wore white costumes. The groom and groomsmen were looking their best. The bridal couple received many beautiful presents of china, silver and linen. The Truth Seekers Spiritualist Society presented them with a silver water set. Refreshments were served, after which a musical program was rendered, a heavy 'Shower of Rice' and the chorus, Home, Sweet Home."

Ferd C. Suhrer writes: "On Sunday, March 17, both afternoon and evening services of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists were attended by attentive congregations of generous proportions. As usual the afternoon was devoted to the phenomena with the exception of a very brief address by Vice-president A. W. Bloom. The work of our platform mediums in reaching so many through the sealed letters deserves honorable mention. The rush to get seats in the different circles at 4 is amusing to the philosopher, but the mediums are doing a wonderful work in opening the eyes of the skeptic and strengthening the sight of those partly convinced, and the majority of the sitters would prefer remaining in the circle to going down to the bountiful supper in our lower hall. Our song service and concert was up to the standard, the selection on the violin by Prof. Jos. Singer deserving and receiving marked attention. Geo. B. Warne, M. D., occupied our rostrum in the evening and announced his subject as "A Message from the Living to the Living,' and in the hour he occupied we heard more practical truths and helpful suggestions regarding our spiritual development than was ever assembled in that time by any speaker in public in Chicago. Nothing distracted the attention of the congregation as they bent forward to catch every word. Commencing with April, we will devote the first Sunday of each month, afternoon and evening, to the phenomena and will be known as 'Mediums' Day.' Our spacious hall will be crowded on the 31st to witness our celebration of the 59th anniversary, and we advise you to come early. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond and Dr. Warne will address us on this occasion."

M. Parmenter writes from Lawton, Okla.: "Rev. Alice Baker, our state missionary is to be with us and work for our society the remainder of this month, and a part of April. She will also work in other towns while here making this her headquarters."

Wm. Hassmann, president, writes: "The members of the North Star Spiritual Union are to give a concert at their hall 1546 Milwaukee avenue, Easter Sunday evening, March 31, consisting of music, recitations and singing. Children and grown people are to take part. All are cordially invited to spend a pleasant evening with the above society. On account of our medium's (Sister Mueller) severe sickness, Brother and Sister Winters are conducting the Sunday evening services. Praise is due to them for reaching out a helping hand to a sick and afflicted sister. Other mediums are invited to our Sunday evening services to do likewise."

Correspondent sends the following: "A call to Spiritualists for a testimonial recognition of a worthy worker, Dr. J. H. Randall. A birthday and social at Star Lodge Hall, Saturday, April 6, 1907. A big program, twenty mediums, ten speakers, ten singers, five elocutionists and several surprises. All working together for the great occasion. Nobody has refused. Let us show how Spiritualists can turn out for a noble cause. The North Side, South Side and West Side are working as one. A harmonious gathering. A big feast of reason and flow of soul! Tickets, 25 cents. Purchase tickets in advance, as capacity of hall is limited. Tickets may be secured of A. G. Cleveland, 4308 Langley avenue, South Side; Mrs. Wm. Hilbert, 204 Burling street, North Side; Dr. C. A. Burgess, 34 Pearce street, West Side."

The eighth of the series of the fall and winter dances given under the auspices of the Golden Rule Pleasure Club, will be held Saturday evening, March 30, 1907, at O'Donnell's College Hall, 43 South Paulina street, between Washington Boulevard and Park avenue. On this evening there will be an entertainment from 8:30 to 9:30, followed by dancing. The Yankee News Boys Quartette will take part. Tickets 25 cents.

Irene Russell writes from Benton Harbor, Mich.: "We have a small but faithful society formed here called The Truth Seekers, of which I have the pleasure of being pastor. Our meetings are awakening the interest of the public. We are holding them at present in my double parlors. On last Sunday evening there were twenty present. On Friday, the 22nd, Mrs. C. J. McMahon and I are going to Bainbridge which is 11 miles from the Harbor, to lecture in the schoolhouse. We shall speak on 'The White Slaves of To-day.' We were at Bainbridge on 22nd of Feb., and although there is but one known Spiritualist there, we had a large crowd. I believe it the duty of every true Spiritualist to be up and doing. Surely now, if never before, is there a work to do. We also have a club for ladies only, called 'Friends in Council.' Our object is to unite women closer and awaken a feeling of true sisterhood. We pledge ourselves to put down all gossip, either in or out of the council hall, and to ever have the open hand of true friendship extended to all women."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

ATTENTION, LYCEUMS.—Please send in second quarterly report before April 15. All lyceums not reported are most earnestly requested to do so. Yours for the young people, Anna L. Gillespie, National Sup't. Children's Lyceums, 180 Calhoon street, Battle Creek, Mich.

Correspondent writes: "The Junior League of German-American Spiritualists will celebrate the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, afternoon and evening, on Easter Sunday, March 31, at Hack's Hall, 519 Larrabee street, Chicago, with an eloquent spiritual, oratorical and musical program, assisted by the renowned European opera singer, Mrs. Von Merkl. Performances by the lyceum children will be also an interesting feature. Dancing, recitations and a selected musical program in the evening. Come and see what the Juniors can do. Admission 25 cents.

Announcement.—Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond desires to say to friends wishing her presence for transition services, not to try to reach her by telephone. A telegram or special delivery letter is more satisfactory, as she has no telephone. She will always respond if possible to go, other engagements permitting.

Samuel A. Huntington, Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritual Society: "The Rev. F. A. Wiggin gave the fourth in his series of lectures and ballot-readings in our hall on Thursday evening, March 14. Mr. Wiggin gave a very able address on 'Prophecy,' to a well-filled hall of interested listeners, who received much profit from the clear-cut and intelligent explanations of the subject. After the lecture Mr. Wiggin gave many fine messages, reading from ballots. He will finish this series on Thursday evening, March 21, and will give our society another series during the month of April, serving every Thursday evening. We had an interesting circle on Sunday, at 3 p. m., and in the evening, Dr. C. L. Willis of Boston, substituted Prof. Graham, who was unavoidably absent. Dr. Willis spoke on 51st Psalm, giving a fine address, after which he devoted over an hour to ballot reading, and in both lecture and ballot reading he did excellent work. Mrs. Nellie E. Abbott, of So. Lawrence, Mass., will occupy our platform on Sunday evening, March 24, and Annie R. Chapman of Brighton, Mass., on the 31st. We hold our anniversary of Modern Spiritualism on the 28th, afternoon and evening, and the regular monthly supper, adjourned to that date."

C. Fannie Allyn is having excellent audiences at Hamilton, Ontario. She always interests her audiences.

Grant H. Burr writes from Mochis, Mexico: "Jos. P. Scolly and myself have been readers and subscribers to your most valuable paper for many years. It has been a source of great comfort to our families—the grandest, the noblest, paper ever published. Our families are devoted Spiritualists, and have been for more than twenty years."

D. G. Hill writes: "On Sunday, March 17, the Golden Rule Spiritualist Society held its usual services. In the afternoon a short talk by the pastor, Mrs. Nora E. Hill, followed by message work by Mrs. Golden and Mrs. Nora E. Hill. In the evening the speakers were our well-known workers, Dr. C. A. Burgess, and our dear sister, Mrs. Alice Sexsmith. The talks of both were very much appreciated, judging from the hearty applause that was given them. The message work was by Mrs. Alice Sexsmith and Mrs. Nellie Morse. The work was of high-class order and easily recognized by those who received the cheering words. Sunday, March 31, will be given as commemorative of the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism. The speaker for the evening will be Hon. Charles Hughes. After the lectur a christening service will be given by the guides of Mrs. Nora E. Hill. O'Donnell College Hall, So. Paulina street, between Washington and Park avenue. Remember the open door. All welcome."

Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie writes from 180 Calhoun street, Battle Creek, Mich.: "Everything is going well with us here. Our membership is growing, audiences also, and we feel greatly encouraged. I have been kept busy; was called to Rochester, Ind., to attend funeral of Mr. Rieter, and met those staunch Spiritualist friends, Mrs. Bitters and Mrs. Miller, at whose home the wanderer was lovingly cared for during her brief stay in their city. On returning home I found another funeral call to Augusta, Mich., to attend the services of Mrs. Piper. It was indeed a shock to read of the death of our good friend, Mr. Mayer. I can hardly realize that he, too, has joined the 'great majority.' When we look at our list of so-called dead from week to week, the urgent need of building up our cause through the young people, seems more and more urgent. Every week sees our ranks thinned by the reaper, and if we are not to fail in carrying out the great truths of Spiritualism, we must do more to interest our children and bring them in the line of workers. I am glad to report that 29 lyceums are alive, but many are having a hard struggle. No short lesson-leaf for the wee ones, for the reason that not enough interest has been shown in ordering to warrant the publication of the quarterly. My appeal of weeks ago for some manifestation of choice regarding this, has been but little heeded or answered, so the quarterly for the present will rest. We need, too, song books with music, but I have faith to believe this will all come. In the meantime the outlook is brighter. I will publish a list of lyceums again soon."

A. F. Lee writes from Meadville, Pa.: "Mrs. Cooley was with us fifteen days, and delivered six lectures, followed by spirit messages, all of which were recognized. Her lectures are uplifting and instructive. Merely to mention the fact of her coming will fill the hall to the doors, so well is she thought of here. Many are waiting with high expectations for her return next June. She will be with us all the month. On March 12 and 13 we had Mr. Frank T. Ripley with us, and notwithstanding there was rain both evenings he had good audiences. His lectures and messages were good. This was his first engagement here and we hope to again have him with us."

Sunday, March 31, the Hyde Park Occult Society will hold afternoon and evening meetings; Mrs. Squires in afternoon, and Dr. Tisdale in the evening. Supper will be served on this occasion. Hall 319 Fifty-fifth street.

Mary B. Hill writes: "The Band of Harmony holds the annual DOLLAR meeting, April 4, in Room 512, Masonic Temple. Don't let this opportunity pass, as you will not only be instructed, but will have lots of fun listening to the method pursued to earn a dollar, and hear the experience given in earning it. Don't forget to bring your supper."

Mrs. Wagner of Marble Rock, Iowa, writes encouragingly of the good work done there by Lena Clark, of Nashia, Iowa. She held parlor meetings there.

Mrs. E. J. Demorest, the lecturer and test medium of Pittsburg, Pa., is visiting with her daughter, Mrs. K. M. Riley of 955 Perry street, Chicago, for a few weeks.

Mrs. Carrie L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass.: "The Ladies' Aid Society met as usual with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Allbe, in the chair. A very interesting meeting was held, the following taking part: Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Hattie Mason, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Morgan. Everything is in preparation for the celebration of the anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, which this society will observe next Friday, March 29. A splendid array of talent has been engaged, and it is hoped every one will come 'home' upon that day. This, the week of March 25, will be 'Old Home' week to the Spiritualists of Massachusetts. Be sure and attend some of the meetings."

Oscar A. Edgerly's engagements as made for the immediate future are as follows. During March he is filling an engagement with the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C. During April and May he will serve the First Spiritual Church of Baltimore, Md. First two Sundays of June he will speak for the First Society of Worcester, Mass. Last two Sundays of June he will fill an engagement at Unity Camp, Lynn, Mass. On Sunday, July 14, he is engaged at Lake Brady Camp, Ohio. From July 20 to Aug. 19 he will act as chairman at Grand Ledge, Mich. From August 22 to August 25 inclusive, he will fill an engagement at Lily Dale, N. Y. September is still open for engagement. During October, November and December he will serve the First Spiritual Temple Association of Columbus, Ohio. For January, 1908, he is engaged with the Ladies' Temple Fund Society of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Edgerly will be pleased to hear from societies desiring to engage a trance speaker and message medium for September, 1907, and for March and April, 1908. His home address is No. 42 Smith street, Lynn, Mass.

LO! I AM THE CHANGELESS.

A Comprehensive View of Prof. Larkin's Corpuscle.

To the Editor:—Referring to the query put in my article in No. 904 of The Progressive Thinker, "Have the Scientists Found God?" permit me to add that assuming the postulate of Prof. Larkin to be true that "No thing or Entity in the Universe Exists but Corpuscles; that corpuscles always have existed and always will exist; then indeed has the field of human thought and investigation been wonderfully illuminated and clarified. We have no longer to look for a First Cause for the universe; the human intellect is thus at last emancipated from this nightmare; this illusion which has haunted the human understanding in all the ages of the past. Had this postulate been regarded as true in the days of Kant, his great effort to show that it is not possible by the Ontological argument either to prove or disprove the existence of a God, would never have been made. Such an inquiry in the face of the postulate by Prof. Larkin is superfluous. That which alone has always existed can have no cause. By Prof Larkin's postulate in regard to corpuscles we are brought face to face with that which always has existed and always will exist. We are no longer therefore at liberty to discuss the proposition how the corpuscle came, or why it came, or what is its destiny. Its presence is a bar to all inquiry as to causes; its continued presence is a like bar to all inquiry as to its future; we are at the end of all speculation at these points; the Eternity of what we call matter is scientifically established. The most vital question remaining is that of the relation of the human Ego to the corpuscle. On this subject the most apt authority with which I am familiar is also from California. I refer to a poem by A. J. Waterhouse of that state; it is surely one of the most powerful contributions to English literature made in many years, and is entitled:

"Lo, I am the Changeless.

"Lo, I am the Changeless, the Deathless.
Lo, I am the Passionless, Still.
In my presence archangels are breathless,
And the universe throbs at my will.
I wait, and the ages flit by me.
I wait, and their story is told.
All of life and of death hovers nigh me,
And I am the New and the Old.

In the dust of their definite places
My atoms, my men, they plod on;
And they lift to the heavens their faces,
Their faces all troubled and wan;
And they dream, and they term their dream, living;
They dream, and their dream is, to die;
They dream they are gaining or giving—
And over them changeless, am I.

They dream of the glitter of treasure—
I shatter the dream at my will.
They dance to the rhythm of pleasure—
I nod, and the dancers are still.
They dream of the glory of power,
My atomies born for a day.
Ay, the visions press fast for an hour—
I nod, and the dreamers obey.

Lo, I am the Changeless, the Deathless.
All other shall blossom and fade.
I speak, and the ages are breathless,
And the drama of living is played.
And whether the sleepers shall waken,
Or whether they dream as they lie,
Unheeding, uncaring, unshaken,
None other may answer save I."

Hoping that some of the eloquent pens which find their utterance through the columns of The Progressive Thinker will in the near future enlarge upon this subject. H. B.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, the revelation of reserve power, etc. Price, 30 cents.

Reception to Mrs. H. D. Morgan.

A beautiful reception was given to Mrs. H. D. Morgan, the faithful and efficient secretary of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C., on Saturday evening, March 16, by Dr. and Mrs. Moore, at their handsome and spacious residence in that city. While the recipient of the honors had been invited to meet some of the good friends on that occasion she had no idea of the extent of this affair, and was wholly unprepared for the almost regal entertainment and encomiums that she was to receive. A large number of the prominent Spiritualists of the city gathered to pay respect to their generous host and hostess, and to attest to the high estem in which Mrs. Morgan is held by them all. She is a lady highly beloved and admired by all who know her, and the quiet, loyal work she performs for the society makes her to rank with the first of the laborers for our Cause in that District.

The function in question was an elegant affair and consisted of musical and literary exercises, including singing by C. P. Longley, vocal selections by the young daughter of the home, and speeches by Mr. F. A. Wood, Mr. Steinberg, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Longley and others, all of whom attested to the beauty of Mrs. Morgan's life and the love in which she is universally held. The presentation of a handsome gold bracelet to Mrs. Morgan during the evening was a very happy incident in the programme, and the lady's quiet but soulful response to the gift and the eloquent speeches, added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

On this occasion bits of green and specimens of the shamrock ornamenting the corsages and lapels of the guests; also decorating the napery served with the dainty and bountiful collation provided by the hostess, gave mirthful tribute to the prevalent idea of St. Patrick. Mrs. Francis Manchester was a moving spirit in the success of this affair, and deserves especial mention, while Dr. and Mrs. Moore received the heartfelt thanks of all participants for their generous entertainment. COR.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About seven words constitute one line.]

Passed to the higher life, Frank Pickle, aged 24 years. A young man of sterling worth, loved and respected by all who knew him. His mother preceded him to the angel world. The quantity of flowers brought by his young friends were proof of their love. The writer officiated and Mrs. Merrill sang most beautifully and sweetly. The band that he was a member of accompanied the procession to the cemetery. MRS. AMANDA COFFMAN.

Passed to spirit life on March 10, Mrs. Caroline Kilgore of Council Bluffs, Iowa, aged 58 years. She was a devout Spiritualist for over twenty-four years. Funeral services by the writer. C. O. KEMPSTER, SR.

Passed to spirit life, March 10, Clara Willet Gooddale, at the age of 45. She left a husband, one daughter and one grand-daughter. Funeral services conducted by Mrs. B. G. Hoig, Morenci, Mich.

Passed to spirit life, Mrs. Mary A. Johnson, wife of Joseph Johnson, of Martinton, Ill., at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Smith of Chebanse, March 16, at the age of 83. She and her husband have been ardent Spiritualists for many years, and their knowledge of a future life enabled her to meet with fortitude and patience her long and severe physical suffering. Mrs. Mary B. Hill conducted the transition service.

Passed to higher life, March 13, Jacob M. Reiter, from his home in Rochester, Ind., aged 74 years and 9 months. Mr. Reiter had been a loyal Spiritualist for ten years, a gentleman who, by his sterling qualities, had won the esteem and affection of all who know him. He will be greatly missed in the home life, and the family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends. Services were conducted by Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie.

Mrs. Catharine Piper, age 71, passed to the higher life, Mar 16, from her home in Augusta, Mich. Mrs. Piper was a member of Battle Creek Spiritualist Society, and greatly loved by all. Three sons and a daughter are left to renew the loving memory of a devoted wife and mother. Services conducted by Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie.

Passed to spirit life at the home of O. L. Carpenter, Fort Wayne, Ind., Mary M. Gibbons, March 6, age 72. Spiritualistic services conducted by Henry Brindle.

Passed to spirit life at the home of Dr. Carey, Ft. Wayne, Ind., Mrs. Naomi L. Bruhn, daughter of Mrs. and Dr. Carey, age 19 years. Spiritualistic services conducted by Henry Brindle.

The Medical Brief on Pioneers of Progress.

That great Medical monthly, the Medical Brief, for March, has a review of Dr. Bland's book, Pioneers of Progress, from which we quote briefly: "Dr. Bland's work is essentially American, and reflects the various social relations growing out of the true spirit of Democracy. Its pages are full of life, action, conversation and character. Nowhere, we are persuaded, can there be found truer word pictures of men. We are treated to so much of the high, strong and intense of the characteristics of the men of today, that such a work as this is really refreshing. The author is himself a pioneer of progress in more ways than one." For sale at this office, Price $1.

OHIO SPIRITUALISTS, ATTENTION.

The Ohio Spiritualists Association will hold its tenth annual convention at Carnegie Hall, Sandusky, Ohio, May 24, 25 and 26, 1907. A cordial invitation is extended to all Spiritualist societies of the state to come and co-operate with us for the furtherance of our glorious cause. All societies not now affiliating with the O. S. A. can, by applying to the undersigned for a charter, become eligible, and take part in deliberating and transacting the general business of the association. We make this appeal as we need your assistance for the future progress of Spiritualism in our state. In unity lies success and strength. The program will be published later. For further information, address

C. A. SOLLINGER,
Secretary O. S. A.
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

"Materialization." By Mme. Hd-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is ust from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Can Telepathy Explain?

Results of Psychical Research.

By Minot J. Savage.

Dr. Savage, in this book of 243 pages, discusses problems that have vexed intelligent minds probably to a greater extent than any others, saving those of the religious life. He states a great number of well-authenticated instances of spiritist revelation or communication. His discussion is frank and fearless, and merits the widest reading, for he deals with facts and experiences. Price, cloth, $1.00.

A MASTERLY WORK.

Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth

By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.

A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth, $1.00.

The Nemesis of Chautauqua Lake { This fascinating Book is the well-known Author and Scholar,

HON. A. B. RICHMOND,

Should be in the hands of every Spiritualist in the land. It is based on a historical fact, but through the narrative is woven a psychic line of thought in the style so natural to the great criminal lawyer that one can feel the author's very presence during its perusal. It is certainly interesting. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic

By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. Price, paper, 25 cents.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides, other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

TWO IN ONE

A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books combined at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED

is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

"THE DREAM CHILD,"

A Fascinating Romance of Two Worlds. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents. Books like "The Dream Child" spur humanity on to make more and more demands of this nature, and will open up new heights and depths of spiritual knowledge.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Will I believe, take its place beside Bulwer's "Zanoni" and the "Seraphita" of Balzac.—Daily Capital, Topeka, Kansas. Although simple and unvarnished with any inflammable descriptions, enthralls the mind to the exclusion of other thoughts, until reluctantly the reader closes the last page.—Minneapolis Sunday Times.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

The Influence of the Zodiac Upon Human Life,

With Character Readings of Persons Born Upon the Cusp.

The principles found in this volume are both a science and a religion, for a better and a far happier humanity. It points to the planets as an index to the human character and liability to diseases; also gives the gems and colors suited to temperaments evolved under certain planets. But the author, ELEANOR KIRK, lays special stress upon the fundamental principle that "All maladies known to man can be entirely dominated, forever cast out, by those who realize that mind is the master and body the servant." Price, cloth, $1.00.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

A. C. Priest: Q. Will you inform me what are the names of the basic elements in nature as understood to date?

A. It is difficult to give the number of elements, for they are constantly being added to by the researches of chemists, the existence of others rests on the experiments of a single observer, and others may yet be proven to be compounds. Many will no doubt be thus resolved and new ones brought to light and on the whole the number now known be increased.

The much-exploitered radium will without doubt prove to be a compound, the energy it manifests being the resultant of chemical change. The snap theory by which certain "scientists" gained a brief newspaper notoriety, has not been sustained, and the supposed properties of that substance are not in contradiction with those of the other elements, and hence the fabric of received physical science has not been overthrown as these radiomaniacs predicted. Some of these named elements are found only in the rarest minerals, and others have never been directly observed, their existence being conjectured from the lines they impart to the solar spectrum. This analysis by light is most delicate and somewhat difficult to understand, but is even more accurate than that by the processes of chemistry. Briefly, every element has a distinct and characteristic spectrum of its own. By spectrum is meant a rainbow produced in a darkened room by artificial means. In this spectrum are dark lines as well as colored, which write the elements' names with absolute certainty. There are lines for which there are no known elements, and hence it is inferred that these exist—perhaps, however, in a state which will make it difficult or impossible to observe them directly.

The elements are divided into two classes, the metallic and non-metallic. The non-metallic are hydrogen, chlorine, bromine, iodine, fluorine, oxygen, selenium tellurium, nitrogen, phosphorus, boron, bismuth, arsenic, sulphur, silicon, and carbon.

The metallic are aluminum, antimony, barium, beryllium, cadmium, caesium, calcium, cerium, chronium, cobalt, columbium, copper, decipium, dedymium, erbium, gallium, germanium, glucium, gold, indium, iridium, iron, lanthranium, lead, lithium, magnesium, manganese, mercury, molybdenum, nickel, niobium, osmium, palladium, platinum, potassium, rhodium, rubidium, ruthenium, samarium, scandium, strontium, sodium, tantalum, terbium, thallium, thorium, tin, titanium, tungsten, uranium, vanadium, ytterbium, yttrium, zinc and zirconium. To this list must be added argon, helium and radium, leaving phillipium, norwegium and many others, the existence of which have not been proven, or their characteristics determined.

H. W. Ganson, Orcas: Q. What was the name of the judge before whom John Brown was tried and sentenced at Harper's Ferry?

A. Judge Parker. As this correspondent says says, "Not one person in thousands remembers the name of this judge. Every liberty-loving man, woman and child knows and reveres the name of John Brown."

Truly his soul went marching on, leading the millions of soldiers through war's gates of hell to victory.

Emery Perrin: Q. Is there not in Protestant churches, averred faith cures similar to the so-called miracles wonked at Catholic shrines, such as the famous Lourdes grotto in France, and if so, where are records of cures to be found?

A. If Protestants repudiate the Catholic claims for Divine healing, they strike at one of the pillars of the Christian faith. From the beginning the strongest evidence of Christ's claim to godship, a claim that was always placed in the forefront, was his ability to heal the sick and raise the dead. He endowed his disciples with this power, and promised it to all believers. They should lay hands on the sick, and the miracle of restoration should follow.

This is a claim made in common for all the messiahs and religious leaders since time began. It has been the badge of their divine mission. Dowie caught his dupes by this means, and Christian Science is founded on healing by faith. The latter is the full blooming of this belief, the culmination of Bible teachings.

The Catholics have been true to this belief, and by conformity to psychic laws and conditions have been eminently successful. There may be no virtue in the bones of saints, or supposed fragments of the true cross, but there is a measureless power in the suggestion they give the devotee. The piece of wood may be a broken fragment from the other side of the world, but if it is believed to be genuine the effect is the same, and the prayer, repeated at the shrine of Lourdes has the same force and significance as the silent treatment of Christian Science, or prayers of gospel ministers.

The healing shrines, like healing springs, are successful remedially because of the attitude of those who seek their benefit. And it must not be forgotten that this attitude permits the interposition of the other side—the spirit world. There are as devoted Catholics there as here, and how can their great religion be advanced more surely than by the working of miracles? The shrines thus become centers of spiritual force—vortices of incomprehensible power, the conditions on this side being the only limitation.

At the reformation, in their abhorrence of the forms and customs of the Mother Church, the reformers cast aside this most valuable means of propagation of the faith and evidence of genuineness. The priest was no nearer God than the layman, and his claim to work miracles a pretence. Yet constantly the old belief came to the surface. Religion could not exist without it, and new sects constantly arose putting forth the claim that the apostolic power had been given them renewed, and proved that they held nearest the truth.

The Dunkards, a quite numerous sect, perhaps furnish the best example of the full acceptance of the Bible text. They rely entirely on faith and prayer, and ignore doctors, and all the knowledge of health and disease that has been acquired by the centuries since the priest was all in all.

Every pulpit in Protestant christendom, preaches the doctrine that prayer is all powerful, and the gospel minister attends the bedside of the sick and the dying, offering prayers for healing and joyful resurrection. If this is not Protestant belief, why this sham and pretonse?

It may be a fact that there is no Protestant shrine, the reason therefore being that every Protestant minister is claimed to have as much influence with God, through Christ, as the Pope, archbishops and the whole Roman church rolled into one. There is in theocratic Protestantism no higher court than the conference of preachers, and in fact every layman can make his claim by prayer direct to Christ, without any other mediator.

There never has been a denial of the healing power, and it could not be made without repudiating the Bible itself. Not many ministers would enjoy being subject to this test of the genuineness of their "call," of "laying hands on the sick," but now and then there are those who possess the magnetic or hypnotic gift, and are able to prove their "title clear," as genuine healers. They have a more intelligent, cultured and less superstitious class to deal with, and hence their success is less brilliant, though there have been recorded remarkable instances of cure by prayer, or faith.

Thoughts.

Each individual bears spiritual and intellectual fruit according to his, or her capability to bud and blossom, which latter condition renders quality, and quantity.

This fruit sent broadcast to the world, via literature, or verbally, gives the receiver nourishment, strength, development, happiness, and knowledge; or starvation, weakness, degradation, misery, and ignorance according to its quality.

Therefore, let the literary tree be annually pruned, that in each springtime of life its unfoldment be the more perfect, the fruit gathering the more profitable, and the consuming thereof be the ideal of purity, truth, and universal good.

If there is justice in the laws of God, or Nature, and a consciousness of soul and spirit in the great beyond, will not the day of reckoning accounts, and straightening the crooked deeds of man to man surely come? In this case, would it not be better to stand on the side of the oppressed, than that of the oppressor; the cheated, than the cheater; the deceived, than the deceiver?

Not all tears flow from the fountain of sorrow and grief; some issue from the source of gratitude and joy, each expressive of deep emotion, is an unwritten, unspoken elegy, and lyric of the soul.

Symbolic teaching in connection with the educational development of children should be practically considered. How many marvelous truths, pure and beautiful thoughts could be planted, rooted, and developed in the minds of the populace, if the children were given symbolic object lessons, being taken from nature and the process of development leading up to the object.

Gilded domes and towers are not possessory of their lofty and brilliant aspect by chance; but, by the result of architectural resource, and the principle of construction, co-operative with the mental and physical energy of the builder. So it is with the spiritual, mental and physical attainments of humanity. Those who would rise mentally, physically and spiritually to an ascendancy among men, must qualify themselves with the light of truth and knowledge such as is gained through the experiences of life, and the contemplation of its principles.

RETZA.

THE BIBLE CRUMBLING.

Continued from fourth column.

divine being ever given to any people.

"This criticism, however, has reached close to its natural limits. There is little further for anyone to go. Its greatest damage has been in the suggestion of doubt on all sides. This higher criticism never will destroy the bible. It will prove destructive of men.

"Some of our denominational bodies, actuated by the influences of higher criticism, seem to be losing all their old-time vigor and enthusiasm. They are not aggressive enough against forms of unbelief and have adopted a 'peace at any price' policy, priding themselves upon the large liberty they allow, forgetting that truth never is tolerant of error and that a good cause gains nothing by compromise. If there is anything for which men should contend to-day it is the living and eternal truth of God."

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

The Bible Crumbling

Conservative Churchmen Alarmed by the Unprecedented Number of Attacks on Orthodox Views of the Bible.

"The present [as set forth in the Chicago Tribune] is the darkest and most disastrous in the history of the Evangelical religions."

So says the Rev. Dr. William Henry Burns of the Wicker Park church of Chicago, of the effect of the assault upon orthodoxy in the Christian church.

Never before in the history of Christianity has the "higher critic," clothed with the authority to speak for the church, done such damage by his demands for more liberal interpretation of those things upon which the foundations of the churches have been laid.

Yet so strenuous have been these attacks, David D. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, declares the effect of higher criticism has been slight upon the advancement of the faith.

"Our year book shows within ten years a gain of almost 500,000 souls in the Methodist church, of this country," said Dr. Thompson. "Yet the world had conceded the ruin of Methodism from the attacks."

To Dr. Thompson's point of view, however, the Rev. Dr. Burns applies the possibilities which might have been Methodism had it not been for these attacks.

"Methodism has gained—yes," he admits; "but when one considers the growth of population of the United States in ten years, what are 500,000 conversions to the Methodist church to what the number might have been under the old orthodoxy?"

Policies Changed Within Two Years.

Two years ago in an awakening of Presbyterianism in Chicago it was voiced and accepted as vital to the foundation of the church that, "without the miracles we have nothing," and, further, "unless the young person is convinced and brought to Christ before he is 15 years old we never get him!"

But within the last year no other tenet in the beliefs of the Christian church has been so studiously attacked and denied from within the church as is the literal acceptance of the miraculous birth of Christ and the further belief that he rose in the flesh from the dead.

In letters, sermons, books, men clothed with the authority of the cloth have passed from the criticism of the Old Testament of a few years ago to the challenging of the infallibility of either bible. The Episcopal church, perhaps, has led all other denominations, but in every other of the Evangelical religions there have been deflections from the bible or from the creeds until Christianity throughout the country is shaken and disturbed as never before in its history.

The Rev. Dr. Burns, of the Methodist church in Chicago, stands for orthodoxy in its old sense. For thirty years he has been a figure in Illinois Methodism, and was one of the first of the protestants against the disposition to apply the higher criticism to the Old Testament.

"When I spoke first against this attitude toward the bible six years ago I was told, 'O, but this is confined to the Old Testament, merely; it concerns that book more as a Jewish history than anything else!'

"But do you intend to stop with the Old Testament?" was the persistent query of Dr. Burns. "You are attacking the bible; and if it is countenanced and accepted it will be only a little while before the New Testament, too, will be assailed.

Church on Defensive Against Its Own.

That predicted time is now, in the opinion of Dr. Burns—now is the Evangelical church more on the defensive against her own than Dr. Burns believes could have been thought possible by those first higher critics and the indulgent church which listened to them.

"At the same time I believe that the higher criticism has about reached the end of the rope," said Dr. Burns: "It has attacked about all there is to be attacked in the bible. It has about exhausted its argument. Never was the Christian church in America more in need of an evangelistic awakening than now, and when that awakening comes I look for a reaction in the direction of the old orthodoxy."

Dr. Burns has been in protest always against any criticism of the bible as the direct word of God, coming through his divinely inspired human agents, and through the personality of Christ as the Deity. He sees to-day in the purpose of the higher critics the fixed plan and purpose to substitute for salvation of the individual in the lifting up of mankind a wider and more wholesale effort in the uplifting of whole communities.

Says Bible Is Lowered in Esteem.

As to the effect of the higher criticism on the church, Dr. Burns says:

"Through the influence of a false science and a 'higher criticism' the bible has been lowered in the estimation of countless thousands and lifted to the top of the book-shelf or even into the garrets of oblivion. The Christian church has never known in all its history a more successful revival extinguisher than is this fire damp of higher criticism. This new theology is not merely an old orthodoxy from a new point of view; it is a system in itself radically different in fundamentals, permanence, and spirit. If it is not modern paganism it certainly is not Christianity.

"Probably there never was a time when men were better informed respecting the life of our Lord or a time when the teaching of his word was less satisfactory. The vagueness which characterizes the thought of the day relating to him is deplorable. The higher critic admits his divinity, but says he was born of human parentage, died, was buried, and lies buried still as crumbling dust. But the higher critic is denying the Deity of Christ. There is a difference in 'deity,' and mere 'divinity,' The Christian Scientist admits the 'divinity' of Christ!

"Nowadays we hear the term 'the old orthodoxy' as if there were such a thing possible as a new orthodoxy! The Christian church was founded upon the bible as the inspired word of God. It was either inspired or it was not inspired. If the church to-day is to stand with the bible as its basework it must stand for orthodoxy as that orthodoxy was preached before the higher critics insisted upon adding to and taking away from it."

Leading Points of Attack by Churchmen

Within the last year only one notable move against the literal interpretation of the old bible has been made. This was when the report of a Roman Catholic commission was made upon the finding that Moses personally did not write the Pentateuch. All the other noteworthy criticisms were directed against the New Testament. In the list of New Testament criticisms of the year the points of attack by churchmen may be listed as:

Denial of the miraculous birth of Christ.

Assertion that he was the son of the carpenter, Joseph.

Disbelief in the resurrection as meaning that he returned to physical life after death.

Statement that the bible is not to be taken as 'God's word.'

Assertion that the bible for the most part is a collection of myths and folklore.

Assertion that the infallibility of the scriptures no longer can be conceded in an enlightened age.

Assertion that the bible has lost its authority as in the day of Jonathan Edwards.

Disbelief in the doctrine of "original sin."

Attack on Westminster confession of faith.

In substance most of these attacks have been against a too liberal acceptance of the New Testament, both as a literal word of God and in point of the story of the miracles—as meaning to convey to men in this enlightened age anything more than a figurative meaning.

Finds Many Errors in Bible.

Prof. George Burnham Foster of the University of Chicago has made one of the most sweeping utterances of the year regarding the history of the Christian religion and the authenticity of the bible. He says to the point in his book from the University Press:

"The watchword, 'Christianity is a religion' is superficially true but fundamentally false. It means that the Christianity is a religion of historical facts. It is not a religion of facts but of values, and values are timeless.

Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, while denying that the bible is to be taken literally as the word of God, still has affected to say that its purpose is not to be impugned by any such degree of criticism.

"We must learn from the scriptures how to read the scriptures. Some of us use it as the heathen uses his fetich or his amulet."

Dr. Lyman Abbott, whose orthodox clergymen declare borders closely upon all the "isms" within a certain given period constituting his doctrinal rotations, declares that "The bible to-day lacks authority that it claimed in the time of Jonathan Edwards." Of the subject of a personal God he has made a striking statement against such a possible conception.

"How do I know there is a God? How do you know you had a mother? You haven't seen her. Her eyes and brow you have seen, but it is love, patience, and tenderness that make a mother. These things you do not see—you feel them. We cannot define God. When we offer you a definition of God we are offering you an idol and you do well to reject that idol."

The Rev. Dr. Samuel T. Carter, for thirty years in the Presbyterian church addressed a letter to the Presbyterian general assembly in Des Moines, Ia., last May, attacking the Westminster confession of faith:

'Many years ago when I was ordained to the ministry of the gospel I declared in the most solemn manner that I believed the Westminste confession of faith to be the truth of God. I now in an equally solemn manner declare that I do not believe it to be the truth of God; that I utterly reject it as a setting forth of the character of the heavenly father!"

The defection of Dr. Algernon Sydney Crapsey of St. Anthony's Episcopal church at Rochester, N. Y., and his dismissal from the church are recent incidents. Dr. Crapsey regarded the prediction of a miraculous birth of Christ, "as one of the greatest misfortunes that ever has befallen mankind."

Report on Authorship of Pentateuch.

Dr. Crapsey, in the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Burns, is not more than an incident. It is more from the orthodox point of view that within the year an international commission, appointed at the request of Pope Pius X., should have made the report it did upon the authorship of the Pentateuch:

'With due regard being paid to the judgment of the church," reads this report in part, "it may be admitted in the long course of the ages some modifications have been introduced into the Pentateuch, such as additions after the death of Moses, either inserted by an inspired author or attached to the text in glosses or interpretations; words and forms translated from a foreign language to a more recent language; and finally the faulty reading may be ascribed to errors of amanuenses concerning which it is lawful to investigate and judge according to the law of criticism."

In effect the report of this commission is that no one need believe that Moses with his own hand wrote the Pentateuch; that while inspired to the work himself the task fell to others under his direction.

As the author of the work, "The Higher Critic's Bible" of a few years ago, the Rev. Dr. Burns speaks with the authority of his church, to the extent that the late Bishop McCabe of New York wrote the introduction to Dr. Burns' work.

Plea for Literal Acceptation.

"To-day," said Dr. Burns, "no man can tell where subtle influences of these attacks from within the church are to end. They have been of unmeasured harm, for the reason that they have not allowed the inquiring soul even to institute his inquiry. What is this bible they talk about?' is a not uncommon dismissal of the whole subject by men and women who never have so much as attempted to read a chapter in it.

"The trouble to-day is that the bible no longer is taken as history. It is being denied as the word of God, instead of being taken as the message of the Creator to man, containing an unfailing record of fact, truth, and all that is necessary for man to know. It is the only standard for the Christian church—the only supernatural record of the

(Continued in second Column.)

COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER.

Why Spiritualism Advances so Slowly.

To the Editor:—I see occasionally accounts of persons who have received absolute tests of spirit return and communion.

Every newly discovered truth comes into the world an alien, and has to fight its way inch by inch, until it becomes naturalized. Its enemy is early teaching. Let no one feel confident that he could escape any delusion, however preposterous and absurd, if it had been taught at his mother's knee, reiterated by his father, enforced in lessons by his teacher and repeated and accepted by the community in which he lived. Those who do escape are exceptions to the rule.

Everything that one knows or seeks to know, everything one obtains or seeks to do, everything one avoids or seeks to avoid, is an effort to satisfy some desire, to gratify some feeling or avoid some evil. He employs the best means at his command, and pursues those interests which he thinks will best promote his well-being, present and future, and he avoids as best he can, the evils which he fears will bring him pain or misery.

No one can successfully deny this proposition; no one can escape the action of this fundamental law of human conduct. Socrates said: "To know the good and not pursue it is akin to madness. The vital question is, What is good? When that is answered correctly the problem is solved.

Every mental operation is a sensation in consciousness. Sensation is the impelling force, and consciousness is the awareness of it. Sensation—the desire to live, to enjoy, to be happy—gives rise to a concern for our well-being, well-being is well-feeling, and well-feeling is enjoyment, happiness.

The newly discovered truth—Spiritualism—is alien—an antagonistic conception, as a rule, and of course, it is repelled. It is against the individual's feelings; he does not want it. The feeling of the devout Catholic is that the Virgin Mary is the mother of the second person on the Godhead, and the denial of it arouses an antagonistic feeling in him. The feeling he so devoutly cherishes excludes every other not in accordance with it. The feeling aroused by the conception of spirit return and communion is not in accordance with the generality of mankind, and is repelled.

Men do not reason. I have seen gray-headed Spiritualists who boast of their spiritual knowledge, eagerly seeking tests. They have seen absolute proof perhaps, a thousand times, but there is a persistent feeling of doubt, and all the tests they could have would not remove it. They do not know what the matter is with them; but a little calm and deliberate reasoning would dispel the doubt. It is their early teaching that blinds their conceptions, and they stand in their own light.

One absolute demonstration of spirit manifestation is sufficient for all time when clearly comprehended and fully appreciated, and its significance understood, if men would only reason. One demonstration of Euclid's 47th theorem proves the fact that the square of the hypotenuse of a triangle is equal to the sum of the squares of the other two sides. The law of forces producing phenomena, is universal and eternal, but this fact is not fully considered.

A single instance in my own case is respectfully presented in illustration. What we experience has two kinds of proof. One is what we feel—subjective, the other is objective—what we observe; and rightly considered, the subjective has double weight. In June, 1848, my brother nearest to me passed to the other life. His disease was inflammation of the brain. For nearly three weeks he raved in delirium, when he passed through the appearance of dying. He ceased breathing and the body became relaxed. My oldest brother, who sat at the head of the bed arose and raised him to a sitting position, shook him, and called him loudly by his name. He seemed to revive, and said: "Why did you call me back? I was just going and you called me back? O, what beautiful things I see. What music I hear, and people dressed in elegant raiment. Why did you not let me go?"

I was sitting at the foot of the bed, and saw and heard all this. He said: "They tell me at three in the morning (this was about nine in the evening), I am to go with them."

During those hours he dwelt in vivid descriptions of what he saw and at three in the morning he passed serenely into the world of spirits.

I must go back several years. In the State University of Michigan, in the class in algebra, there was a problem in quadratic equations, involving four unknown quantities, which the class was unable to solve. It lingered along for several weeks, the teacher would not explain it. "Work it out and then you will understand it. At last one of the class reached the solution, and then the entire class could solve it. During the winters this brother and myself would teach school.

In 1851, my little cousin, a child about six years old, became a rapping medium. She did not know a letter of the alphabet, but many communications were received in the way of repeating the alphabet, and raps at the letter wanted; and of course I got many communications from this brother. While teaching we would offer this difficult problem to others, but no one was able to solve it. We had solved it many times. This little child-medium soon became a writing medium, and wrote with surprising rapidity. One day I went into my uncle's house, and the little girl was sitting by the fire. As I came in she went to the table, took up the slate and wrote in a large round hand the word, "Edmund," my brother's name.

"Now," said I, "I know you are present, but I cannot realize your presence. Can't you give me some test that will prove it?"

He wrote in rapid hand an event in our early childhood—we with our older brother were standing on a log in a pond. I stood near him while he was chopping on it, when he drew his little axe back and struck me on my forehead, and knocked me into the water, and when I came to the surface, he pulled me out. The younger brother saw all this and wrote it out on the slate, giving the name of the pond in Ohio, on my father's farm.

After reading this I said, "O, do you remember the problem?" and was going to state it, but before I said a word of it, it was written just as we had solved it many times. The four equations and the method of solution was gone through as we had performed it, with great rapidity. Then he wrote, "Now don't you know that it is I," underscoring the word "know."

This all came so unexpectedly that I could not speak. I felt a thrill, and the tears rolled down my cheeks.

Now I realized his presence, and from that day to this I have never doubted the glorious fact of spirit-return and communion.

E. J. SCHELLHOUS.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.00.

The Warfare of Science With Theology.

A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom. By ANDREW D. WHITE, LL. D., late President and Professor of History at Cornell University. In Two Volumes. 8vo. Cloth, Five Dollars. For Sale at This Office.

In these two large volumes are combined information that the reader could not find in the libraries of the world in fifty years. It shows the constant and determined opposition of Theology to the advancement that has been made in every branch of Science. To the Student it is indispensible. Every Free Thought Speaker should have it. It should circulate in every community. It goes into minute details, citing in all cases the authority, showing the persistency of Theology in seeking now and advanced ideas in Science.

"THE WARFARE OF SCIENCE WITH THEOLOGY" is undoubtedly the most complete, careful, conscientious, able and bravely impartial history of the subject ever written. The exactness and reliability of its facts and citations are unquestioned. Its vast scholarly research is amazing. It contains just the information the student and thinker needs, and so indexed and tabulated that it is handy as a dictionary when one wishes to refer to some special point or topic.

These two large volumes, containing about 900 pages, will be sent to any address on receipt of the price, $5.00.

Ingersoll's Lectures.

44 Addresses and Answers to His Critics.

A portly volume containing reports of the noted Colonel's lectures, addresses, and answers to critics. It is spicy reading, and will give pleasure to thousands of Spiritualists and Freethinkers, who will find entertainment and instruction combined in his incomparable presentation of the truth as it appeared to him. The book contains an immense amount of matter, and is sold at a mere nominal price.

Price, postpaid, only $1.00.

LIFE BEYOND DEATH

Being a Review of

The World's Beliefs on the Subject, a Consideration of Present Conditions of Thought and Feeling,

Leading to the Question as to Whether It Can Be Demonstrated as a Fact.—To Which Is Added an Appendix Containing Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

BY MINOT J. SAVAGE, D. D.

8vo. Cloth, 342 Pages.

After a review of the beliefs held in the past concerning life beyond death, Dr. Savage takes up the present conditions of belief and considers the agnostic reaction from the extreme "other-worldliness" which it replaced, which was in turn followed by the Spiritualistic reaction against agnosticism. He points out the doubts concerning the doctrine of immortality held by the churches and the weakness of the traditional creeds and the loosening of their hold upon the people. He then considers the probabilities of a future life, probabilities which, as he admits, fall short of demonstration. The volume includes a consideration of the work of the Society for Psychical Research and also an appendix giving some of the author's own personal experiences in this line. Dr. Savage holds, as a provisional hypothesis, that continued existence is demonstrated, and that there have been at least some well authenticated communications from persons in the other life. The chief contents of the volume are as follows:

Primitive Ideas—Ethnic Beliefs—The Old Testament and Immortality—Paul's Doctrine of Death and the Other Life—Jesus and Immortality—The Other World and the Middle Ages—Protestant Belief Concerning Death and the Life Beyond—The Agnostic Reaction—The Spiritualistic Reaction—The World's Condition and Needs as to Belief in Immortality—Probabilities Which Fall Short of Demonstration—The Society for Psychical Research and the Immortal Life—Possible Conditions of Another Life—Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

OUR BIBLE:

WHO WROTE IT? WHEN? WHERE? HOW?

Is It Infallible?

A Voice from the Higher Criticism.

A Few Thoughts on Other Bibles.

BY MOSES HULL.

Excellent as an exposition of the Higher Criticism and an analysis of the Bible from that standpoint. Of special value and interest to Spiritualists. For sale at this office. Price $1.00.

Right Generation The Key to the Kingdom of Heaven

BY DR. M. E. CONGER.

This valuable little book treats of the relation of life between men and women and strongly emphasizes the fact that for the betterment of humanity children must be well born. This book is printed in large type on good paper, with leatherette cover. Price, 40 cents.

Universal Spiritualism.

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People

BY W. J. COLVILLE.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahrizimas." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the st, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, [illegible]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

A. C. Priest: Q. Will you inform me what are the names of the basic elements in nature as understood to date?

A. It is difficult to give the number of elements, for they are constantly being added to by the researches of chemists, the existence of others rests on the experiments of a single observer, and others may yet be proven to be compounds. Many will no doubt be thus resolved and new ones brought to light and on the whole the number now known be increased.

The much-exploitered radium will without doubt prove to be a compound, the energy it manifests being the resultant of chemical change. The snap theory by which certain "scientists" gained a brief newspaper notoriety, has not been sustained, and the supposed properties of that substance are not in contradiction with those of the other elements, and hence the fabric of received physical science has not been overthrown as these radiomaniacs predicted. Some of these named elements are found only in the rarest minerals, and others have never been directly observed, their existence being conjectured from the lines they impart to the solar spectrum. This analysis by light is most delicate and somewhat difficult to understand, but is even more accurate than that by the processes of chemistry. Briefly, every element has a distinct and characteristic spectrum of its own. By spectrum is meant a rainbow produced in a darkened room by artificial means. In this spectrum are dark lines as well as colored, which write the elements' names with absolute certainty. There are lines for which there are no known parallelments, and hence it is inferred that these exist—perhaps, however, in a state which will make it difficult or impossible to observe them directly.

The elements are divided into two classes, the metallic and non-metallic. The non-metallic are hydrogen, chlorine, bromine, iodine, fluorine, oxygen, selenium, tellurium, nitrogen, phosphorus, boron, bismuth, arsenic, sulphur, silicon, and carbon.

The metallic are aluminum, antimony, barium, beryllium, cadmium, caesium, calcium, cerium, chromium, cobalt, columbium, copper, decipium, dedymium, erbium, gallium, germanium, glucium, gold, indium, iridium, iron, lanthranium, lead, lithium, magnesium, manganese, mercury, molybdenum, nickel, niobium, osmium, palladium, platinum, potassium, rhodium, rubidium, rutherium, samarium, scandium, strontium, sodium, tantalum, terbium, thallium, thorium, tin, titanium, tungsten, uranium, vanadium, ytterbium, yttrium, zinc and zirconium. To this list must be added argon, helium and radium, leaving phillipium, norwegium and many others, the existence of which have not been proven, or their characteristics determined.

H. W. Ganson, Orcas: Q. What was the name of the judge before whom John Brown was tried and sentenced at Harper's Ferry?

A. Judge Parker. As this correspondent says says, "Not one person in thousands remembers the name of this judge. Every liberty-loving man, woman and child knows and reveres the name of John Brown."

Truly his soul went marching on, leading the millions of soldiers through war's gates of hell to victory.

Emery Perrin: Q. Is there not in Protestant churches, averred faith cures similar to the so-called miracles worked at Catholic shrines, such as the famous Lourdes grotto in France, and if so, where are records of cures to be found?

A. If Protestants repudiate the Catholic claims for Divine healing, they strike at one of the pillars of the Christian faith. From the beginning the strongest evidence of Christ's claim to godship, a claim that was always placed in the forefront, was his ability to heal the sick and raise the dead. He endowed his disciples with this power, and promised it to all believers. They should lay hands on the sick, and the miracle of restoration should follow.

This is a claim made in common for all the messiahs and religious leaders since time began. It has been the badge of their divine mission. Dowie caught his dupes by this means, and Christian Science is founded on healing by faith. The latter is the full blooming of this belief, the culmination of Bible teachings.

The Catholics have been true to this belief, and by conformity to psychic laws and conditions have been eminently successful. There may be no virtue in the bones of saints, or supposed fragments of the true cross, but there is a measureless power in the suggestion they give the devotee. The piece of wood may be a broken fragment from the other side of the world, but if it is believed to be genuine the effect is the same, and the prayer repeated at the shrine of Lourdes has the same force and significance as the silent treatment of Christian Science, or prayers of gospel ministers.

The healing shrines, like healing springs, are successful remedially because of the attitude of those who seek their benefit. And it must not be forgotten that this attitude permits the interposition of the other side—the spirit world. There are as devoted Catholics there as here, and how can their great religion be advanced more surely than by the working of miracles? The shrines thus become centers of spiritual force—vortices of incomprehensible power, the conditions on this side being the only limitation.

At the reformation, in their abhorrence of the forms and customs of the Mother Church, the reformers cast aside this most valuable means of propagation of the faith and evidence of genuineness. The priest was no nearer God than the layman, and his claim to work miracles a pretence. Yet constantly the old belief came to the surface. Religion could not exist without it, and new sects constantly arose putting forth the claim that the apostolic power had been given them renewed, and proved that they held nearest the truth.

The Dunkards, a quite numerous sect, perhaps furnish the best example of the full acceptance of the Bible text. They rely entirely on faith and prayer, and ignore doctors, and all the knowledge of health and disease that has been acquired by the centuries since the priest was all in all.

Every pulpit in Protestant christendom, preaches the doctrine that prayer is all powerful, and the gospel minister attends the bedside of the sick and the dying, offering prayers for healing and joyful resurrection. If this is not Protestant belief, why this sham and pretense?

It may be a fact that there is no Protestant shrine, the reason therefore being that every Protestant minister is claimed to have as much influence with God, through Christ, as the Pope, archbishops and the whole Roman church rolled into one. There is in theocratic Protestantism no higher court than the conference of preachers, and in fact every layman can make his claim by prayer direct to Christ, without any other mediator.

There never has been a denial of the healing power, and it could not be made without repudiating the Bible itself. Not many ministers would enjoy being subject to this test of the genuineness of their "call," of "laying hands on the sick," but now and then there are those who possess the magnetic or hypnotic gift, and are able to prove their "title clear," as genuine healers. They have a more intelligent, cultured and less superstitious class to deal with, and hence their success is less brilliant, though there have been recorded remarkable instances of cure by prayer, or faith.

Thoughts.

Each individual bears spiritual and intellectual fruit according to his, or her capability to bud and blossom, which latter condition renders quality, and quantity.

This fruit sent broadcast to the world, via literature, or verbally, gives the receiver nourishment, strength, development, happiness, and knowledge; or starvation, weakness, degradation, misery, and ignorance according to its quality.

Therefore, let the literary tree be annually pruned, that in each springtime of life its unfoldment be the more perfect, the fruit gathering the more profitable, and the consuming thereof be the ideal of purity, truth, and universal good.

If there is justice in the laws of God, or Nature, and a consciousness of soul and spirit in the great beyond, will not the day of reckoning accounts, and straightening the crooked deeds of man to man surely come? In this case, would it not be better to stand on the side of the oppressed, than that of the oppressor; the cheated, than the cheater; the deceived, than the deceiver?

Not all tears flow from the fountain of sorrow and grief; some issue from the source of gratitude and joy, each expressive of deep emotion, is an unwritten, unspoken elegy, and lyric of the soul.

Symbolic teaching in connection with the educational development of children should be practically considered. How many marvelous truths, pure and beautiful thoughts could be planted, rooted, and developed in the minds of the populace, if the children were given symbolic object lessons, being taken from nature and the process of development leading up to the object.

Gilded domes and towers are not possessory of their lofty and brilliant aspect by chance; but, by the result of architectural resource, and the principle of construction, co-operative with the mental and physical energy of the builder. So it is with the spiritual, mental and physical attainments of humanity. Those who would rise mentally, physically and spiritually to an ascendancy among men, must qualify themselves with the light of truth and knowledge such as is gained through the experiences of life, and the contemplation of its principles.

RETZA.

THE BIBLE CRUMBLING.

Continued from fourth column.

divine being ever given to any people.

"This criticism, however, has reached close to its natural limits. There is little further for anyone to go. Its greatest damage has been in the suggestion of doubt on all sides. This higher criticism never will destroy the bible. It will prove destructive of men.

'Some of our denominational bodies, actuated by the influences of higher criticism, seem to be losing all their old-time vigor and enthusiasm. They are not aggressive enough against forms of unbelief and have adopted a 'peace at any price' policy, priding themselves upon the large liberty they allow, forgetting that truth never is tolerant of error and that a good cause gains nothing by compromise. If there is anything for which men should contend to-day it is the living and eternal truth of God."

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

The Bible Crumbling

Conservative Churchmen Alarmed by the Unprecedented Number of Attacks on Orthodox Views of the Bible.

"The present [as set forth in the Chicago Tribune] is the darkest and most disastrous in the history of the Evangelical religions."

So says the Rev. Dr. William Henry Burns of the Wicker Park church of Chicago, of the effect of the assault upon orthodoxy in the Christian church.

Never before in the history of Christianity has the "higher critic," clothed with the authority to speak for the church, done such damage by his demands for more liberal interpretation of those things upon which the foundations of the churches have been laid.

Yet so strenuous have been these attacks, David D. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, declares the effect of higher criticism has been slight upon the advancement of the faith.

"Our year book shows within ten years a gain of almost 500,000 souls in the Methodist church, of this country," said Dr. Thompson. "Yet the world had conceded the ruin of Methodism from the attacks."

To Dr. Thompson's point of view, however, the Rev. Dr. Burns applies the possibilities which might have been Methodism had it not been for these attacks.

"Methodism has gained—yes," he admits; "but when one considers the growth of population of the United States in ten years, what are 500,000 conversions to the Methodist church to what the number might have been under the old orthodoxy?"

Policies Changed Within Two Years.

Two years ago in an awakening of Presbyterianism in Chicago it was voiced and accepted as vital to the foundation of the church that, "without the miracles we have nothing," and, further, "unless the young person is convinced and brought to Christ before he is 15 years old we never get him."

But within the last year no other tenet in the beliefs of the Christian church has been so studiously attacked and denied from within the church as is the literal acceptance of the miraculous birth of Christ and the further belief that he rose in the flesh from the dead.

In letters, sermons, books, men clothed with the authority of the cloth have passed from the criticism of the Old Testament of a few years ago to the challenging of the infallibility of either bible. The Episcopal church, perhaps, has led all other denominations, but in every other of the Evangelical religions there have been deflections from the bible or from the creeds until Christianity throughout the country is shaken and disturbed as never before in its history.

The Rev. Dr. Burns, of the Methodist church in Chicago, stands for orthodoxy in its old sense. For thirty years he has been a figure in Illinois Methodism, and was one of the first of the protestants against the disposition to apply the higher criticism to the Old Testament.

"When I spoke first against this attitude toward the bible six years ago I was told, 'O, but this is confined to the Old Testament, merely; it concerns that book more as a Jewish history than anything else!'

"But do you intend to stop with the Old Testament?" was the persistent query of Dr. Burns. "You are attacking the bible; and if it is countenanced and accepted it will be only a little while before the New Testament, too, will be assailed.

Church on Defensive Against Its Own.

That predicted time is now, in the opinion of Dr. Burns—now is the Evangelical church more on the defensive against her own than Dr. Burns believes could have been thought possible by those first higher critics and the indulgent church which listened to them.

"At the same time I believe that the higher criticism has about reached the end of the rope," said Dr. Burns. "It has attacked about all there is to be attacked in the bible. It has about exhausted its argument. Never was the Christian church in America more in need of an evangelistic awakening than now, and when that awakening comes I look for a reaction in the direction of the old orthodoxy."

Dr. Burns has been in protest always against any criticism of the bible as the direct word of God, coming through his divinely inspired human agents, and through the personality of Christ as the Deity. He sees to-day in the purpose of the higher critics the fixed plan and purpose to substitute for salvation of the individual in the lifting up of mankind a wider and more wholesale effort in the uplifting of whole communities.

Says Bible Is Lowered in Esteem.

As to the effect of the higher criticism on the church, Dr. Burns says:

"Through the influence of a false science and a 'higher criticism' the bible has been lowered in the estimation of countless thousands and lifted to the top of the book-shelf or even into the garrets of oblivion. The Christian church has never known in all its history a more successful revival extinguisher than is this fire damp of higher criticism. This new theology is not merely an old orthodoxy from a new point of view; it is a system in itself radically different in fundamentals, permanence, and spirit. If it is not modern paganism it certainly is not Christianity.

"Probably there never was a time when men were better informed respecting the life of our Lord or a time when the teaching of his word was less satisfactory. The vagueness which characterizes the thought of the day relating to him is deplorable. The higher critic admits his divinity, but says he was born of human parentage, died, was buried, and lies buried still as crumbling dust. But the higher critic is denying the Deity of Christ. There is a difference in 'deity,' and mere 'divinity,' The Christian Scientist admits the 'divinity' of Christ!

"Nowadays we hear the term 'the old orthodoxy' as if there were such a thing possible as a new orthodoxy! The Christian church was founded upon the bible as 'the inspired word of God. It was either inspired or it was not inspired. If the church to-day is to stand with the bible as its basework it must stand for orthodoxy as that orthodoxy was preached before the higher critics insisted upon adding to and taking away from it."

Leading Points of Attack by Churchmen

Within the last year only one notable move against the literal interpretation of the old bible has been made. This was when the report of a Roman Catholic commission was made upon the finding that Moses personally did not write the Pentateuch. All the other noteworthy criticisms were directed against the New Testament. In the list of New Testament criticisms of the year the points of attack by churchmen may be listed as:

Denial of the miraculous birth of Christ.

Assertion that he was the son of the carpenter, Joseph.

Disbelief in the resurrection as meaning that he returned to physical life after death.

Statement that the bible is not to be taken as 'God's word.'

Assertion that the bible for the most part is a collection of myths and folklore.

Assertion that the infallibility of the scriptures no longer can be conceded in an enlightened age.

Assertion that the bible has lost its authority as in the day of Jonathan Edwards.

Disbelief in the doctrine of "original sin."

Attack on Westminster confession of faith.

In subsance most of these attacks have been against a too liberal acceptance of the New Testament, both as a literal word of God and—in point of the story of the miracles—as meaning to convey to men in this enlightened age anything more than a figurative meaning.

Finds Many Errors in Bible.

Prof. George Burnham Foster of the University of Chicago has made one of the most sweeping utterances of the year regarding the history of the Christian religion and the authenticity of the bible. He says to the point in his book from the University Press:

"The watchword, 'Christianity is a religion' is superficially true but fundamentally false. It means that the Christianity is a religion of historical facts. It is not a religion of facts but of values, and values are timeless.

Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, while denying that the bible is to be taken literally as the word of God, still has affected to say that its purpose is not to be impugned by any such degree of criticism.

"We must learn from the scriptures how to read the scriptures. Some of us use it as the heathen uses his fetich or his amulet."

Dr. Lyman Abbott, whom orthodox clergymen declare borders closely upon all the "isms" within a certain given period constituting his doctrinal rotations, declares that "The bible to-day lacks authority that it claimed in the time of Jonathan Edwards." Of the subject of a personal God he has made a striking statement against such a possible conception.

"How do I know there is a God? How do you know you had a mother? You haven't seen her. Her eyes and brow you have seen, but it is love, patience, and tenderness that make a mother. These things you do not see—you feel them. We cannot define God. When we offer you a definition of God we are offering you an idol and you do well to reject that idol."

The Rev. Dr. Samuel T. Carter, for thirty years in the Presbyterian church addressed a letter to the Presbyterian general assembly in Des Moines, Ia., last May, attacking the Westminster confession of faith:

'Many years ago when I was ordained to the ministry of the gospel I declared in the most solemn manner that I believed the Westminste confession of faith to be the truth of God. I now in an equally solemn manner declare that I do not believe it to be the truth of God; that I utterly reject it as a setting forth of the character of the heavenly father!"

The defection of Dr. Algernon Sydney Crapsey of St. Anthony's Episcopal church at Rochester, N. Y., and his dismissal from the church are recent incidents. Dr. Crapsey regarded the prediction of a miraculous birth of Christ, "as one of the greatest misfortunes that ever has befallen mankind."

Report on Authorship of Pentateuch.

Dr. Crapsey, in the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Burns, is not more than an incident. It is more from the orthodox point of view that within the year an international commission, appointed at the request of Pope Pius X, should have made the report it did upon the authorship of the Pentateuch:

'With due regard being paid to the judgment of the church," reads this report in part, "it may be admitted in the long course of the ages some modifications have been introduced into the Pentateuch, such as additions after the death of Moses, either inserted by an inspired author or attached to the text in glosses or interpretations; words and forms translated from a foreign language to a more recent language; and finally the faulty reading may be ascribed to errors of amanuenses concerning which it is lawful to investigate and judge according to the law of criticism."

In effect the report of this commission is that no one need believe that Moses with his own hand wrote the Pentateuch; that while inspired to the work himself the task fell to others under his direction.

As the author of the work, "The Higher Critic's Bible" of a few years ago, the Rev. Dr. Burns speaks with the authority of his church, to the extent that the late Bishop McCabe of New York wrote the introduction to Dr. Burns' work.

Plea for Literal Acceptation.

"To-day," said Dr. Burns, "no man can tell where subtle influences of these attacks from within the church are to end. They have been of unmeasured harm, for the reason that they have not allowed the inquiring soul even to institute his inquiry. What is this bible they talk about?' is a not uncommon dismissal of the whole subject by men and women who never have so much as attempted to read a chapter in it.

"The trouble to-day is that the bible no longer is taken as history. It is being denied as the word of God, instead of being taken as the message of the Creator to man, containing an unfailing record of fact, truth, and all that is necessary for man to know. It is the only standard for the Christian church—the only supernatural record of the

(Continued in second Column.)

COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER.

Why Spiritualism Advances so Slowly.

To the Editor:—I see occasionally accounts of persons who have received absolute tests of spirit return and communion.

Every newly discovered truth comes into the world an alien, and has to fight its way inch by inch, until it becomes naturalized. Its enemy is early teaching. Let no one feel confident that he could escape any delusion, however preposterous and absurd, if it had been taught at his mother's knee, reiterated by his father, enforced in lessons by his teacher and repeated and accepted by the community in which he lived. Those who do escape are exceptions to the rule.

Everything that one knows or seeks to know, everything one obtains or seeks to do, everything one avoids or seeks to avoid, is an effort to satisfy some desire, to gratify some feeling or avoid some evil. He employs the best means at his command, and pursues those interests which he thinks will best promote his well-being, present and future, and he avoids as best he can, the evils which he fears will bring him pain or misery.

No one can successfully deny this proposition; no one can escape the action of this fundamental law of human conduct. Socrates said: "To know the good and not pursue it is akin to madness. The vital question is, What is good? When that is answered correctly the problem is solved.

Every mental operation is a sensation in consciousness. Sensation is the impelling force, and consciousness is the awareness of it. Sensation—the desire to live, to enjoy, to be happy—gives rise to a concern for our well-being, well-being is well-feeling, and well-feeling is enjoyment, happiness.

The newly discovered truth—Spiritualism—is alien—an antagonistic conception, as a rule, and of course, it is repelled. It is against the individual's feelings; he does not want it. The feeling of the devout Catholic is that the Virgin Mary is the mother of the second person on the Godhead, and the denial of it arouses an antagonistic feeling in him. The feeling he so devoutly cherishes excludes every other not in accordance with it. The feeling aroused by the conception of spirit return and communion is not in accordance with the generality of mankind, and is repelled.

Men do not reason. I have seen gray-headed Spiritualists who boast of their spiritual knowledge, eagerly seeking tests. They have seen absolute proof perhaps, a thousand times, but there is a persistent feeling of doubt, and all the tests they could have would not remove it. They do not know what the matter is with them; but a little calm and deliberate reasoning would dispel the doubt. It is their early teaching that blinds their conceptions, and they stand in their own light.

One absolute demonstration of spirit manifestation is sufficient for all time when clearly comprehended and fully appreciated, and its significance understood, if men would only reason. One demonstration of Euclid's 47th theorem proves the fact that the square of the hypotenuse of a triangle is equal to the sum of the squares of the other two sides. The law of forces producing phenomena, is universal and eternal, but this fact is not fully considered.

A single instance in my own case is respectfully presented in illustration. What we experience has two kinds of proof. One is what we feel—subjective, the other is objective—what we observe; and rightly considered, the subjective has double weight. In June, 1848, my brother nearest to me passed to the other life. His disease was inflammation of the brain. For nearly three weeks he raved in delirium, when he passed through the appearance of dying. He ceased breathing and the body became relaxed. My oldest brother, who sat at the head of the bed arose and raised him to a sitting position, shook him, and called him loudly by his name. He seemed to revive, and said: "Why did you call me back? I was just going and you called me back? O, what beautiful things I see. What music I hear, and people dressed in elegant raiment. Why did you not let me go?"

I was sitting at the foot of the bed, and saw and heard all this. He said: "They tell me at three in the morning (this was about nine in the evening), I am to go with them."

During those hours he dwelt in vivid descriptions of what he saw and at three in the morning he passed serenely into the world of spirits.

I must go back several years. In the State University of Michigan, in the class in algebra, there was a problem in quadratic equations, involving four unknown quantities, which the class was unable to solve. It lingered along for several weeks, the teacher would not explain it. "Work it out and then you will understand it. At last one of the class reached the solution, and then the entire class could solve it. During the winters this brother and myself would teach school.

In 1851, my little cousin, a child about six years old, became a rapping medium. She did not know a letter of the alphabet, but many communications were received in the way of repeating the alphabet, and raps at the letter wanted; and of course I got many communications from this brother. While teaching we would offer this difficult problem to others, but no one was able to solve it. We had solved it many times. This little child-medium soon became a writing medium, and wrote with surprising rapidity. One day I went into my uncle's house, and the little girl was sitting by the fire. As I came in she went to the table, took up the slate and wrote in a large round hand the word, "Edmund," my brother's name.

"Now," said I, "I know you are present, but I cannot realize your presence. Can't you give me some test that will prove it?"

He wrote in rapid hand an event in our early childhood—we with our older brother were standing on a log in a pond. I stood near him while he was chopping on it, when he drew his little axe back and struck me on my forehead, and knocked me into the water, and when I came to the surface, he pulled me out. The younger brother saw all this and wrote it out on the slate, giving the name of the pond in Ohio, on my father's farm.

After reading this I said, "O, do you remember the problem?" and was going to state it, but before I said a word of it, it was written just as we had solved it many times. The four equations and the method of solution was gone through as we had performed it, with great rapidity. Then he wrote, "Now don't you know that it is I," underscoring the word "know."

This all came so unexpectedly that I could not speak. I felt a thrill, and the tears rolled down my cheeks.

Now I realized his presence, and from that day to this I have never doubted the glorious fact of spirit return and communion.

E. J. SCHELLHOUS.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

The Warfare of Science With Theology.

A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom. By ANDREW D. WHITE, LL. D., late President and Professor of History at Cornell University. In Two Volumes. 8vo. Cloth, Five Dollars. For Sale at This Office.

In these two large volumes are combined information that the reader could not find in the libraries of the world in fifty years. It shows the constant and determined opposition of Theology to the advancement that has been made in every branch of Science. To the Student it is indispensible. Every Free Thought Speaker should have it. It should circulate in every community. It goes into minute details, citing in all cases the authority, showing the persistency of Theology in dealing now and advanced ideas in Science.

"THE WARFARE OF SCIENCE WITH THEOLOGY" is undoubtedly the most complete, careful, conscientious, able and bravely impartial history of the subject ever written. The exactness and reliability of its facts and citations are unquestioned. Its vast scholarly research is amazing. It contains just the information the student and thinker needs, and so indexed and tabulated that it is handy as a dictionary when one wishes to refer to some special point or topic.

These two large volumes, containing about 900 pages, will be sent to any address on receipt of the price, $5.00.

Ingersoll's Lectures.

44 Addresses and Answers to His Critics.

A portly volume containing reports of the noted Colonel's lectures, addresses, and answers to critics. It is spicy reading, and will give pleasure to thousands of Spiritualists and Freethinkers, who will find entertainment and instruction combined in his incomparable presentation of the truth as it appeared to him. The book contains an immense amount of matter, and is sold at a mere nominal price.

Price, postpaid, only $1.00.

LIFE BEYOND DEATH

Being a Review of

The World's Beliefs on the Subject, a Consideration of Present Conditions of Thought and Feeling,

Leading to the Question as to Whether It Can Be Demonstrated as a Fact.—To Which Is Added an Appendix Containing Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

BY MINOT J. SAVAGE, D. D.

8vo. Cloth, 342 Pages.

After a review of the beliefs held in the past concerning life beyond death, Dr. Savage takes up the present conditions of belief and considers the agnostic reaction from the extreme "other-worldliness" which it replaced, which was in turn followed by the Spiritualistic reaction against agnosticism. He points out the doubts concerning the doctrine of immortality held by the churches and the weakness of the traditional creeds and the loosening of their hold upon the people. He then considers the probabilities of a future life, probabilities which, as he admits, fall short of demonstration. The volume includes a consideration of the work of the Society for Psychical Research and also an appendix giving some of the author's own personal experiences in this line. Dr. Savage holds, as a provisional hypothesis, that continued existence is demonstrated, and that there have been at least some well authenticated communications from persons in the other life. The chief contents of the volume are as follows:

Primitive Ideas—Ethnic Beliefs—The Old Testament and Immortality—Paul's Doctrine of Death and the Other Life—Jesus and Immortality—The Other World and the Middle Ages—Protestant Belief Concerning Death and the Life Beyond—The Agnostic Reaction—The Spiritualistic Reaction—The World's Condition and Needs as to Belief in Immortality—Probabilities Which Fall Short of Demonstration—The Society for Psychical Research and the Immortal Life—Possible Conditions of Another Life—Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

OUR BIBLE:

WHO WROTE IT? WHEN? WHERE? HOW?

Is It Infallible?

A Voice from the Higher Criticism.

A Few Thoughts on Other Bibles.

BY MOSES HULL.

Excellent as an exposition of the Higher Criticism and an analysis of the Bible from that standpoint. Of special value and interest to Spiritualists. For sale at this office. Price $1.00.

Right Generation The Key to the Kingdom of Heaven

BY DR. M. E. CONGER.

This valuable little book treats of the relation of life between men and women and strongly emphasizes the fact that for the betterment of humanity children must be well born. This book is printed in large type on good paper, with leatherette cover. Price, 40 cents.

Universal Spiritualism.

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People

BY W. J. COLVILLE.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahriziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, [illegible] 50 cents. Postage, 10 cents.

MISSOURI STATE CONVENTION.

Notes by President McArthur, and Report of Committee on Resolutions.

The State Progressive Spiritualists' Association of Missouri closed on Thursday evening, Feb. 28, the most successful convention ever held by the State Association. The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Thos. Grimshaw, whose practical remarks on the necessity of proper organization were well received and heartily applauded. He was followed by your writer with a paper entitled "The Need of Mental and Spiritual Growth in Our Movement," and at the close of which a motion was made that it be spread upon the minutes of the association, which was carried.

Sister Barlow was then introduced to the convention and made one of her characteristic talks, sparkling with truth and wit. She was then and there adopted by the Missourians that she "had shown" as their own, and I would advise our Ohio brethren to look out; we of Missouri have taking ways, and we "lay a heap of store" by your Lizzie, so forewarned is forearmed.

The afternoon session was devoted to business. The reading and adopting seriatim the report of the president consumed the greater part of the afternoon. Those sections which you wisely omitted publishing, Brother Francis, were hotly opposed by a small minority who did not feel that the strenuous methods of yours truly on fraud should be endorsed. A large majority, however, thought otherwise, and the report was adopted.

The secretary and treasurer, Bro. Gates and Sister Hary, made brief reports on the financial condition of the association, which were adopted.

The committee on resolutions, Geo. H. Johnston, W. C. Jessup and Charles Brown, made their report, which was unanimously adopted.

Several amendments of the constitution and by-laws were presented by Brother Thomas Grimshaw, which were adopted, one of the most important being the reduction of the executive board from 16 to 9. The suggestion made also by Brother Grimshaw that we line up with our sister State Association of Illinois and start a fund for the purchase of a scholarship in the Morris Pratt Institute as a monument to our arisen brother, Moses Hull, was endorsed, and $31 raised as a beginning.

The evening sessions for the public were packed to overflowing, seats being placed in the aisles and back of the church and still many were obliged to stand.

The musical program arranged by our good Sister E. F. Wallace, was especially good, and Professor Green, Miss Laura Hanenstein, Mrs. L. S. Taylor, Miss Myrtle Taylor, Miss Bertha Price, Miss Hazel Medina and Miss Gertrude Belle Farrow deserve the hearty thanks which the state board has delegated me to tender them for their able assistance in making our convention a success.

As for Miss Elizabeth Harlow, well, she was at her best; you who know her know what that means, and both evenings held her audiences spellbound as she drove the practical truths of our beautiful philosophy home. I was amused as well as pleased at the comment of a reporter on the Republic, who was taking notes. At the close of Miss Harlow's lecture on the second evening he turned to my better half and said: "Say, you people have got me going; if I hear much more like this I will become a Spiritualist in spite of myself. She is a wonder"; and she was.

Our message bearers, Mrs. Glen C. Stephens of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. Klara T. Hary, Mrs. E. B. Price and Mrs. Laura M. Jones of St. Louis, were all at their best, and their able work did much to create an awakening in favor of Spiritualists and Spiritualism. The societies report (since the convention) larger audiences and a revival of interest.

The Thursday afternoon public session was conducted by the First Colored Spiritualists of St. Louis. Bro. J. B. Bates made a ringing address and was ordained by your writer as a minister of the Gospel of Spiritualism. The Armstead Quartette sang beautiful melodies as only our colored brethren can. Sisters Nelson Armstead and Mary North gave out the glad tidings that the so-called dead live, in a manner that reflected credit on their race and the cause. Mrs. G. A. Baldock, speaker for the Golden Rule colored society of Kansas City, made a hit with her audience from the start. She delivered an enthusiastic address on the beauties of Spiritualism, with the vim and vigor of an old-time Methodist exhorter. Her audience refused to let her stop and called for more. I venture to assert that the good sister is a power among her people at Kansas City, and that none of them want to sleep while she is holding forth, which is more than some more pretentious speakers can say. A mass meeting has been planned for the near future for Kansas City, where we expect to have a stirring up for Spiritualism. We hope also to be able to arrange one for Springfield and other points in the state and would like to have the different societies throughout Missouri write us and express their sentiments concerning this. We want to make this a banner year for the Cause here in Missouri and can only do this by and through your co-operation. Are you with us?

The new board at their first executive session passed unanimously a motion made by Dr. O. D. Whittier to endeavor to start a state association library where the members of the different societies affiliated with the state association might obtain books on the philosophy of our religion and become informed. The cause of so much credulity in our ranks is lack of knowledge. Let us start a brain vibration (as Brother Francis says) by getting posted. As a good foundation, we desire to subscribe for a set of Andrew Jackson Davis's works. A number of books have also been promised us by local Spiritualists, and any donations of books for this purpose by anyone will be gratefully received. Address

PAUL McARTHUR,
President S. P. S. A. of Mo., 2733 N. Spring Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Whereas, The State Progressive Spiritualists' Association of Missouri in convention assembled, has moved to formulate and adopt resolutions on the passing over of our arisen loved ones during the year, and especially upon the demise of that revered leader and teacher of our philosophy, Moses Hull, whose scholastic lore and rare gifts of logic and analysis enabled him to understand and translate the bible from its original text, his biblical knowledge making him one of the foremost authorities on the bible, of the United States if not the world. As a fearless advocate of human rights in the social, political and spiritual realms he had no superior if an equal. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we delegates in annual convention assembled, extend our heartfelt ssympathy to his dear companion, Mattie E. Hull; that a copy of these resolution be sent her, also that a copy be placed on file in the records of the State Association. Be it also

Resolved, That our sincere sympathies be extended to the friends and relatives of our arisen sisters, Jennie Hagan Brown, Mrs. M. Goettler, Miss Laura Goettler, Bertha Moorhouse, also Mrs. Giroux, who by and through the sowing of seeds of progress in the minds of her lyceum children, has erected a monument of love in their hearts.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the signs of progress for our cause. These signs point not so much to numerical strength as to an uplifting and cleaning out of those things that have tended to tear down our cause.

Resolved, That we endorse the work of our state board in its efforts to build up the cause, and we especially commend our state president, Paul McArthur, for his work for righteousness and clean Spiritualism.

Resolved, That we extend greeting to all mediums before the public who are affiliated with the National and state associations and who are laboring to uphold our cause. We pledge the efforts of this organization to sustain and help upbuild societies chartered by our board. Be it further Resolved, To extend our gratitude to Prof. Green and those who by their musical talents assisted us so ably in making our public sessions a success.

Resolved, Also to especially thank our good Sister Price and her able assistants of the Spiritual Research Society who administered to our physical wants. Respectfully submitted,

GEO. H. JOHNSTON,
W. C. JESSUP,
CHAS. BROWN.

SPIRITUAL UNFOLDMENT.

A Spirit Message of Advice on Mediumship and the Duty of Martals.

Until the year 1848, Spiritualism had not advanced sufficiently to establish any record, but since the eventful time at Hydesville, N. Y., Modern Spiritualism has grown until it extends into every country. It has proven that the spirit can return, and communicate intelligently after passing through the change called death; also that the progression of the soul is necessary. That is the true foundation on which all the creeds that have sprung up are based.

Now let us look farther and see what is the duty of every mortal. In the first place, there is no one that can escape this condition of laying aside the mortal body. Then if we return to earthly conditions after passing through this change and communicate with mortals, it proves that all classes come back and mingle with each other. Then our first duty is to make proper conditions to get the truth, to try to attract those that have some knowledge of the conditions on the other side.

It is a school, and we should place ourselves under teachers that are capable of teaching us; and as we pass from grade to grade, we will have different teachers, ones that are capable of instructing us.

The soul has to advance, and to cling to one teacher would mean to stop in the lower grades. While we can always have our teachers as friends, we should realize that they have their work, and mortals can cling to spirits so closely that it retards their advancement. From the time you place yourselves in the invisibles' hands, you should advance step by step.

There may be obstacles over which you have no control, but gradually they will all be removed, and you wil be able to look back and see the ruling of the higher influences.

Mortals can uplift the spirit that is beneath them. Never work down the scale, but always up. You can always detect what scale the spirit is working on, just the same as you can a mortal, and when you stoop down, and help a brother up the step that is so hard for him to take, you can realize better what is being done for you. You will not all take the same training. Some will be trained for teachers, some for healers, etc., but whatever your work may be, consider you were chosen for that work; no one else can do that work as well.

In your advancement, try to follow out as closely as possible the rules laid down in the public school.

Professors have given their life to establishing the best laws to govern the mode of study and instruction. They have decided that study at home with class-work under proper tutors will advance the pupil much faster than study under disturbed conditions. What would you think of a student that depended wholly upon class work for his advancement, and then would sit in all grades, one day in the A class, next day in the ancient language class; and yet that is just what the greater number of mediums or would-be mediums are doing to-day, and wonder why they are not progressing, and blame the cause. Some even go so far as to say it is all a fraud.

Friends, you have to be graded in any line of work you take up. Search your own soul and find your grade; then study alone at home. One evening in the week form a class of students that are in the same grade as yourself, secure a teacher that is capable of teaching you, and when you have advanced out of the grade, you are capable of entering another. But don't sit with this one and that one; if you do, you will find the same confusion that you would to enter a college and not know your place, but everyday try a different class.

Remember you cannot succeed in anything until you go at it with a firmness of will to get the best that you are capable of receiving higher. You have to first furnish a foundation, then under proper conditions we can erect a mansion. But we have to be let alone, our material used only by competent workmen, and only under the supervision of one architect and master workman, or we would only produce chaos, and have used up our material to no purpose.

So consider these things. If you place yourselves in the hands of the invisibles, test them, see that they are competent to do what they profess they can. If you are not making the strides you ought, look to yourself, see if you have done your part; if you have, then demand an explanation, using the same consideration you would in changing your college or business. Then you will call around you noble, reliable teachers. You would not spend your life working with a frivolous student that had no stability of character; neither do we on this shore. We are looking for someone to work through that we know will stay by us, that our time will not be spent in vain. We have great work to do through earth conditions and earth material, but we have to sort the material and use care and judgment. Therefore, if you want the best, furnish us the material, and we will build a mansion that you will not be ashamed to own; and in being used for such work, you will ennoble your own soul until you will have an individuality to be proud of. But do not waver and lose what little individuality you have, and come over here without any home or purpose in life.

As you furnish material for others to build, so will you be furnished when your time comes to build.

So stand firm, look well to yourself and see where you belong. When you find your grade, employ a teacher, and stay in that grade until you are promoted by that teacher to the next. Then you will always know where you stand, and have something to show for your labor. Through—

DORA A. UNDERWOOD, D. O.
Baker City, Oregon.

Southern Cassadaga Camp.

An interesting event of the camp which has been omitted, has been the presentation of a large flag to the Southern Cassadaga Camp Association, by Mrs. Cooper, of Camden, N. J., with short informal ceremonies, singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," the Lyceum salute to the flag, and three cheers for the donor.

On Saturday morning occurred the yearly meeting of the stock-holders, for reading the reports of the past year, and election of a new board of trustees for the coming year, which resulted in the following officers being chosen: President, G. N. Hilligoss; vice-president, E. W. Bond; secretary and treasurer, H. S. Twing. Trustees, Mrs. M. MacGarvey, Z. Babcock, A. A. Butler, Joseph Slater; so that the officers of last year are continued in office, proving the fact of the past good management, and the faith of the stockholders that it will continue in the future.

The election of officers for Ladies' Auxiliary was held on Friday with the following result: President, Mrs. C. E. S. Twing; vice-presidents, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Whittaker; secretary, Mrs. M. E. Clark; treasurer, Mrs. MacGarvey.

Sunday, last day of the camp season of 1907, was bright and beautiful.

The morning lecture was by J. Clegg Wright, from the subject given him, "Is it not a fact that the world is more indebted for its spiritual enlightenment, to the deductions of thinking people, rather than to the deductions of so-called scientists?" The subject elicited the usual forcible and eloquent handling that is usual with this speaker.

The afternoon lecture was by Mrs. Morrill, her subject being "The Relation of Spiritualism to Science, Philosophy and Religion,"—and it was the very best that the guide of this medium has yet given. The auditorium was crowded, a larger number of strangers being present than at any time previous.

The evening service was a symposium; a few words of parting from each of the speakers, J. Clegg Wright, Mrs. Twing, Mrs. Morrill and Mrs. Pettengill, expressive of their appreciation of the kind thoughts which have been extended to them; and the applause of the audience testified to the fact that their public work has been of benefit and pleasure to the people at large. And so has closed the season of 1907, and let us each carry in our hearts the thought of the closing song: "God be with you till we meet again."

LEE MORSE.

"Talmagean Insanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies; a Review of Rev. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated attacks upon Spiritualism." By Moses Hull. Price, 10 cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

Spirits and Investments.

It is beginning to be a recognized fact that Spirits are not safe advisers in making investments. Hundreds have lost all, or become financially crippled for life by making investments in mines or some other money-making schemes, through the advice of Spirits. So prevalent have these misfortunes become, that words of warning seem to be essential, and they come from the President of the N. S. A.

To the Editor:—Under separate cover, I am mailing you a copy of the Seattle Evening Star, the leading evening daily of this city. The marked article speaks for itself. It is one more witness testifying truthfully against the fearful practice of commercialism in mediumship. It is not known how many thousands of dollars have been lost in this one mining scheme, by the Spiritualists of America. When the sum is placed at fifty thousand dollars, it is a most conservative estimate, far too low according to those who are well informed. The writer of the article, Mr. Charles H. Singleton, is a newspaper man of standing on the Pacific coast, while his great ability as a writer is signally proven by the subject matter of his startling array of facts.

There are at least two mining companies on this coast under the management of Spiritualists whose work is marked out for them by excarnate spirits, through "mediums especially selected for these holy offices. The one named by the Star is one of them. Both are capitalized to the extent of three or more millions of dollars. Into both of them, the hardworking Spiritualist laity have poured their little all without a misgiving, at the command of the spirits. Some of them have gone so far as to mortgage their homes, even to sell them outright, in order to obtain money with which to purchase mining stock. I met one man in Kentucky who had hired $1,800 to invest in a mine located by spirits, whose stock was sure to yield him twenty per cent premium within a year. He is paying ten per cent interest on an iron-clad mortgage on his little home instead, and the lines in his face, as well as the evidences of toil and mental agony that are apparent in his every move, are evidences of what he has suffered through his experience with his "mediumistically (?) located mine!" The same story comes from all sections of the nation.

Mr. Singleton could have told of a widow in poor health, who was induced to part with her little home in Chicago, and invest the proceeds in the mine of which he writes. At least, she took an equivalent in stock at the price then placed upon it. She is known and loved by thousands throughout the land, and her case is especially sad by reason of the fact that her ability to earn her living has been materially affected by illness and misfortune. If the mine of which Mr. Singleton writes has absorbed fifty thousand dollars of the good money of the Spiritualists of America, then the other mine has absorbed five times that amount, for it has been much longer before the public, and its promoters have been much more active. A mine in New Mexico, located by the spirits some twenty years ago, absorbed more than a half of a million of Spiritualistic capital before the honest-souled investors discovered that they were being duped. These cases are object lessons that should be remembered by every Spiritualist in the land. Where one mine of value is really located by spirits, there are a thousand failures, entailing losses untold upon the hoodwinked people. Every attempt to get something for nothing sooner or later meets with deserved defeat.

The severest condemnation has been visited upon me because of my opposition to any and all such bald commercialism in mediumship. The foregoing evidences testify loudly in favor of the position I have taken in regard to all of these matters. The robbery of widows, orphans, old soldiers, farmers, mechanics, and other toilers of the land in the name of the angels is the most contemptible piece of thievery ever known on earth. Perhaps the cupidity of some of these people did deserve a stinging rebuke, but those who were made to feel that their investment was the roadway from poverty to affluence, and thereby robbed of their little all, are deserving of something more than censure. They are entitled to sympathy, and to the protection of their brethren in all quarters of the world. It is in the name and for the sake of such as these that I protest so often and so vehemently against this sordid commercial spirit—this use of Spiritualism to rob unsuspecting mortals. The angels in the "Morning Land" are engaged in better business than that of devising schemes to rob or defraud the toilers of earth. I send you, Mr. Editor, the testimony of Mr. Singleton that the Spiritualists may know how the outside world is regarding this exploitation of the innocent in the name of their sainted dead, out of their little all. One thing is clear—it proves that the president of the N. S. A. has not overstated matters relating to Commercialism and its fearfully demoralizing effect upon mediumship.

Yours for spiritual Spiritualism,
HARRISON D. BARRETT.
Seattle, Wash.

(Advertisement.)

IN A VISION.

In a vision I have gotten the location of a tract of mineral land in Missouri, but have no money to buy it with. Who will furnish the money and let me buy hhOo'lh,Bassesarm ww . m d m m it for them. My getting, and owing for, without interest, a divided interest in the land. I had never visited the town where the mineral land is up to the time of getting its name in a vision, but I afterwards purposely visited it and found the location of the land as I had seen it in my vision. I am honest, and will not cheat any person of anything, and any honest and capable medium would say the same if given any writing of mine for a test of knowing about my honesty and truthfulness. Would not buying this land be better than investing in ninety per cent of mining stock of to-day? as you would own the land, and develop it if you wished. Address C. M., P. O. Box 573, St. Louis, Missouri.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
Box 580, Seattle, Wash.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism, A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science and Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price, 25 cents.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

"Death, Its Meaning and Results." By J. K. Wilson, of the Pennsylvania Bar. An absorbingly interesting volume, of decided value. A narrative of wonderful psychical events in the author's experience. Cloth, 560 pages, illustrated, $1.25.

"The Attainment of Womanly Beauty of Form and Features. The Cultivation of Personal Beauty, Based on Hygiene and Health Culture. By twenty physicians and specialists. Edited by Albert Turner." Of special interest

"An Infamous Dynamite Roman Catholic Conspiracy Detected and Exposed." "Romanism Exposed." Two pamphlets by Rev. J. G. White, author of "Startling Facts." Price, 10 cents each, or two for 15 cents.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine," contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 330 pages. Price $1.

Thoughts and Reflections.

They Arose on Reading Hudson Tuttle's Book, "Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas."

I have been more indebted to Hudson Tuttle and Andrew Jackson Davis for my education in the philosophy of Spiritualism, than in all the other writers of that cult, though all have been very beneficial. Only a few of the earlier lecturers on Spiritualism were unacquainted with the writings of these two profound and original thinkers. I yet believe that our speakers would be better equipped for the work of educating the public by a generous and careful study of all their works.

Next after these I should recommend a thorough knowledge of Herbert Spencer's First Principles and works on Psychology, after which they would have no inclination to the doctrine of reincarnation, or any other jumped-at conclusions. It is true that some of our trance speakers believe themselves beyond the necessity of studying books to fit themselves as teachers, but even then, it sometimes happens that their "guides" are as ignorant as themselves, in which case they appear quite stupid as teachers, and drive the more erudite farther away from them.

This last work of Hudson Tuttle, "The Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas," is the equal of any book ever written by the Ohio philosopher. Not only is it calculated to make a person think, but it is a complete reply to much of the atheism of our day. His logic demonstrates that life and God are one, and we know that there is not existing an atom wherein life is not. "A rock or a tree," he says, "are as sacred as God, being a part of him, or portions of his work."

And yet, notwithstanding my intense interest in this work, and my endorsement of it in a general way, it is as much for the purpose of dissenting from and criticising some portions of it as anything else that I am writing this. A person may endorse a work and yet not accept all its conclusions. I am, and always have been a pupil at Hudson Tuttle's school. I sit at his feet because I wish to learn, for I know he yet has much and always will have much to teach me. Yet occasionally, and often he puts forth expressions with which I am not in accord. There are many in this book, and I feel at liberty to take advantage of a note he sent to me: "I hope I may stir you up to write; if you feel called upon to object, do not spare." But I cannot write as I would if I had more time and The Progressive Thinker had more space, and also, if the reader had more patience to read. I feel no diffidence in criticising or objecting, for I know Hudson Tuttle will have just as much respect for me, whatever view I may take, as if I were in perfect accord with his views.

In the development of his subject, he states that "It is out of the ignorance and absolute terror of fear of the unknown that all systems of religion sprang into being. Brahmanism, Buddhism, Fire Worship, Judaism, Christianity and Moslemism started in diverging streams from this one source and run parallel courses."

Possibly; I am uncertain whether fear is the foundation of religious worship. Evidently Brahmanism had its rise in a much older religion, as the doctrine of metempsychosis or the transmigration of souls to and from lower animal life was the basis of their systems of belief. Hence, all rewards and punishments were connected with a life on this earth. Nor did Gautama (Buddha) contemplate another world outside or beyond this, except as a condition of Nirvana. Indeed, Buddhism as taught by Buddha himself, was mostly a materialistic religion, and so of Mosaism, which seems to ignore, entirely, a future existence.

A fair epitome is given of the God idea of the Hindoos, Egyptians, Chaldeans, Persians, Jews, Moslems, Christians, Greeks and Romans. The development and evolution of Christianity is very profitably discussed. This early history should be studied till well fixed in the minds of all our readers, especially by all our lecturers. When we shall learn that the God idea concerning Jesus was an afterthought brought in to reconcile with some of the ideas of Paganism we shall be able to give to Jesus that credit which belongs, not to a god, but to man. The extravagant claims put forth in behalf of Jesus a few centuries after his time has damaged him, in the eyes of the best thinkers in the world.

Waite's History of early Christianity makes it very clear that the first two chapters of Matthew and Luke were lugged in and added to these gospels many years after they had been written, and that they really belong to two apocryphal books—"The Protovangelon," and "The Gospel of the Infancy," books evidently written to support the Trinitarians in their discussions with the Arians.

But here comes another expression with which I am compelled to take issue. Brother Tuttle says:

"The God idea of the Bible would not be complete were the devil omitted." That personage fills a most important position by solving the problem of the existence of evil. The scheme would be imperfect without him. The belief of his existence is passing away, but his name cannot be blotted from the pages of scripture. It remains as a remnant of the influence of Persia and Assyria on the Hebrew mind."

I grant that much of the Hebrew theology was borrowed from the Chaldeans and Persians, as the cherubim from the Chaldeans, the archangels Gabriel and Michael from the Persians, but it seems to me that the god of evil was left out. I remember some thirty or thirty-five years ago, I saw so much evil in the character of Jehovah, that the thought came to me that out of fear of his evil and malicious nature the Hebrews had selected the most despicable character as the object of their worship. I determined to lecture on the subject, contrasting two characters, and for once; "give the devil his due." But when I came to hunt up his character in the Old Testament, he wasn't there. I found the word Satan occurring about three times, but in the original I found the word thus translated in every other instance, tranlated "adversary," and that it would have borne this translation in these instances. The first place it occurs is in I. Chron. 21:1. "And Satan stood up against Israel and provoked David to number Israel." Now, a superficial reading of that text would seem to indicate that Satan was a real devil planning mischief against the Israelites. But I find this affair referred to again in II. Sam. 24:1, and it reads, "And again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go number Israel and Judah." These texts make the Lord and Satan identical, because the Lord had become an adversary to David, and he punished him by killing off a lot of innocent men and women! The word occurs again in Job 1:7-12, and here refers to an adversary. In Psalms 108, is the only other place where it is found in the Old Testament, and it certainly will bear that interpretation there. In the New Testament it occurs a good number of times and is entitled to the same translation. From the fact that the Greeks and early Christians were in the habit of speaking of every object and even principle as if it were a person. Whatever occupies the mind, whatever conduces to the happiness or misery of mankind, every adverse circumstance would be laid upon the shoulders of a fictitious personage.

When Jesus says, "I saw Satan fall as lightning, (Light—Greek) from heaven, he merely expresses what is here meant. He saw evil or adversity fall upon the world, or individuals, as light or the rays of the sun fall upon the earth. There is also an astrological explanation which I have not room here to consider.

The devils of whom numbers were cast out of unfortunately obsessed people, by Jesus, were the diamonia of the Greeks. This was a term given to the spirits of the dead generally by the Greek people, and in captivity the Jews found it in use. But their dead were not diamonia (demons or devils), because they were a "sanctified people, peculiar and holy;" it wouldn't do to refer to them undistinguished from the spirits of the Gentile or common dead. Hence they referred to the spirits of their dead as pneumati hagion, consecrated spirits, or spirits of the consecrated people. In our Bible the translators imbued with the Trinitarian idea, supposed it referred to the third part of the Trinity, and translated it "holy ghost." Those devils cast out by Jesus, never, in any case, referred to an adversary of Almighty God.

The devil idea, as an adversary of God, while at the same time co-operating with him in his grand plan of punishment, was chiefly derived from Persia, and though undoubtedly it was accepted by the orthodox Jews, it doesn't seem to have found much favor in the Gospels, if in the New Testament at all.

The chapter on "The God Idea of the Jews" is of immense importance to all who would know what the bible really is, how it grew, by whom it was made. But I cannot agree with the author in his first statement in this chapter, that "Its origin and value is similar to all the so-called sacred books." The Hindoo, Chaldean, Persian and Mohammedan sacred books were written apparently, solely with reference to the conduct of a religious life. Not so, the Bible. It appears to have been merely a state library of books, mostly historical and political. It is true, Leviticus and Deuteronomy appear to be ritualistic, and some of the Psalms appear devotional; but not more so than many poems by modern profane writers. The sacredness was to be expected, when we realize, that for at least seventy years, they were captives in a foreign country where they had been accustomed to contrast the books they met with there to those they had left in their national library. How prone we are when in a foreign country for only a few months to contrast their national flag with ours, their institutions with ours, and how in our minds do our institutions brighten and enlarge before us. The prophets themselves were merely political agitators, as the abolitionists, barn-burners, greenbackers, prohibitionists, labor reformers and populists of our country were in their day and as the socialists are in this day.

In reading this chapter one learns so many things concerning the dates and origin of the books of the bible, the different translations, and different times of the several translations, when, where and by whom, the imperfections of the translations, and the doubts on the minds of the translators concerning the meanings of certain words and pharses, that he can but wish that God, if he authorized the book, had taken some other means of expressing himself to humanity. One's veneration for the book is considerably weakened by learning all the facts brought out by Brother Tuttle.

All this leads up to the God idea and its development. "The individual," says the author, "first sets up a god which becomes a god of the family; and the family enlarges into a tribe, a nation, the family penates becomes a tribunal, or national deity, and from thence ascends to the position of the God of the Universe." In many cases this may be true, but in my opinion, and I think I have data to sustain it, usually, the gods have been heroes, priests or kings, who after death had been translated to the heavens, often the sun, or some planet, or one of the constellations; and the successor built himself up generally by his professed loyalty to him, and that he became more venerable as the generations succeed each other. We know that Osiris, Zeus, or Jupiter, and some of the Chaldean gods established themselves thus in the affections of their several nationalities. In tribal times these gods may have come up in the way Brother Tuttle indicates, but even then this god was often the spirit of an ancestor, who became a penate of the family from which the tribe sprang. We absolutely know that Jehovah established himself first as the penate of a series of families, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. (See Gen. 18:1-8; 26:24; 32:24-30 and compare Ex: 3:6). Even this national god copied some of his institutions from the Egyptians and Chaldeans, as for illustration, the new first quarter full, and third quarter of the moon which were marked off as Sabbaths by the Chaldeans and celebrated as days of rest by them, also their sanctuary, and their cherubim are taken from the same nation, while the rite of circumcision was practiced in Egypt from whence they came and from most of the Asiatic nations.

One is tempted here to quote several pages of this book, yet I have barely opened it and I must hasten on. This chapter is followed by chapters on "The God Idea Among the Arabians," "The God Idea Among the Greeks and Romans," "The God Idea of the Alexandrian School and Early Christianity," "The God Idea of the Later Philosophers," "The God Idea of the Bible," "The God Idea of the Border Religions—Chinese, Druids, Scandinavians and Aztecs," etc.

No one can follow the book through all these chapters and not have a broader idea of the religious nature of man and its various modes of expression, and also of God. I must here quote what he has to say of God, or that Infinite principle of life and intelligence:

"Atheists, there are to imperfect definitions,—none to the full understanding at last reached by knowledge in the prescience of its highest attainments. The Universe, or, to use the more comprehensive term of the great Humboldt, the Cosmos, is alive. It is more than a physical creation, it is a living organism. It is more, it is an embodiment of Intelligent Being. It is more than Cosmic Matter, it is Cosmic Matter vitalized by Cosmic Mind."

DANIEL W. HULL, M. H.
Olympia, Wash.

ADOLPH LANGNER,
Aluminum Trumpets for Spiritual Manifestations, 1149 N. Hamlin ave., Chicago.

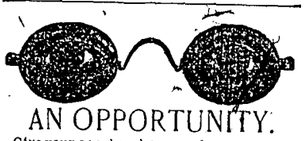
MRS. E. M. HITCHCOCK will answer 8 questions for 25c. Send own hand-writing and lock of hair. Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash

WALNAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Walnah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

"Neitzel," The Astrological Seer, gives truthful predictions. Send 25 cents (silver) and date of birth, for a trial reading with prospects of coming year. Full reading with Horoscope, $1 to $2. Address F. F. NEITZEL, Box 988, Spokane, Wash.

MRS. MAY A. PRICE.
Clairvoyant Readings by mail, regarding material and spiritual conditions. Diseases diagnosed. Mental—Spiritual treatment given. A specialty of nervous and mental troubles. Obsession cured. Laws and safe conditions of mediumship taught. Send lock of hair, date of birth, and $1.00. Ask questions. 1718 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Are You a Psychic?
A psychic is one who is sensitive to supernormal vibrations. Everyone is a psychic and can demonstrate a certain phase or degree of power. My "System of Philosophy Concerning Divinity," when applied develops you psychically. Proof of the pudding is in the eating. Apply my system and prove it. Send for circulars, terms, etc., enclosing a stamped addressed envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Road, Brookline, Mass.



FRED P. EVANS,
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.
Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address.
FRED P. EVANS.
2926 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . .
. . . . of Your Spirit Friends,
can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.
FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

TRUMPETS.
Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal! Insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark essence, T P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.
JAS. NEWTON, 423 Dorr St., Toledo, O

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.
From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Be Sure to Read This.
Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to
FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.
Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.
FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Vermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago. Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER
Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.
Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth st.
San Jose, Cal

THE AGE OF REASON.
By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 180 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth 50c.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism
A Treatise on
HUMAN CULTURE.
By Leroy Berrier, Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.
BY DR. T. A. BLAND,
With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.
"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.
"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.
Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

"MISS INCOGNITO"
That's All!
You will be surprised and delighted to know the rest.
If you want to know who she is, and what she does, and the good things in store for you just write us a postal card.
We furnish a Positive Guarantee as to results.
Address
THE P. P. COMPANY,
Box 804, Rome, Ga.

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.
By Sarah E. Titcomb, with an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race." Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 6, 1907 NO. 906

A DESIRABLE CHANGE.

"Transition Services" Recently Conducted by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond.

First, let me recommend to the use of Spiritualists at large and speakers in particular the above term, as used by Mrs. Richmond, instead of "Funeral Service," or "Obituary Notice". It seems more in keeping with the spirit of Spiritualism.

Mrs. Richmond has been more than busy recently in responding to calls in and out of the city, and state, to officiate at such services, of veteran Spiritualists, mostly women.

The passing on in Chicago of Mrs. Mary Dye was, as Mrs. Lucinda B. Chandler justly remarked, more than "a passing event". Mrs. Dye had been prominent in reform work for nearly a half century, notably woman's political equality and temperance. Yet every good work received her recognition and aid. She was a thorough Spiritualist, and for many, many years whenever in Chicago had attended, and greatly appreciated the services of Mrs. Richmond in her church and in private. Mrs. Dye was the daughter-in-law of the late Prof. Dye, so long known in the musical circles of Chicago. She was the mother-in-law of Prof. Dixon, Chicago's brilliant and talented educator in oratory and many lines of culture. Prof. Dixon was ever happy and proud of Mrs. Dye. And now that the earthly scenes for her have closed, we know she will take up the lines of activity in the larger realm beyond. The services by Mrs. Richmond's Guides were at the chapel in Graceland Cemetery, Sunday, February 24.

Another service in Chicago was March 15, at her late home, 56 Park Ave., that of Miss Tirza S. Tanner, a frail little lady, whose body seemed ever inadequate to express her mental and spiritual strength. For many years she attended Mrs. Richmond's meetings when they were held on the west side, and frequently came to the Band of Harmony. Miss. Tanner was known to all the older West-Side Spiritualists. She had a choice and warmly appreciative circle of friends, many of whom knew of, and enjoyed her mediumistic gifts and powers. Her life was a rare example of patience and fortitude.

In the passing of Mrs. Harriet A. Leeds, of Michigan City, Ind., more than a quarter of a century of the history of Spiritualism in that place is brought to mind. Mrs. Richmond was called upon about twenty-five years ago to dedicate the beautiful hall on the upper floor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Leeds, which Mr. Leeds opened for the use of the Spiritualists and for other lectures and services. Mr. Leeds wished to have regular services, but Michigan City was not on the route of most of the regular speakers. When he passed on, in 1896, Mrs. Richmond was called to officiate. Mrs. Leeds continued as far as possible her work and interest in Spiritualism, and was particularly active in the cause of temperance. Her kindness and generosity will ever be remembered by many to whom she ministered in providing from her abundant means for their comfort. One instance: An old lady for whom she had cared (who was also a Spiritualist) for some years, and when this old lady passed on Mrs. Leeds bore the entire expense of the service. She sent for Mrs. Richmond and had everything done as if she had been a near relative.

No protracted illness preceded Mrs. Leeds' going. The Sunday previous she heard Mrs. Richmond's sermon. Then, as she had contemplated doing for some time, she went to Presbyterian Hospital—choosing the alternative of an operation or several years of painful invalidism. As the result of the operation she passed on. Her Daughter (Carrie), a beautiful girl of rare musical gifts, and of qualities greatly beloved, and a son, O. W. Leeds, survive her. Her hosts of friends in Michigan City, were painfully surprised when the casket was brought home containing her mortal form. Mrs. Richmond conducted the services in the family residence at Michigan City, February 25.

On Monday, March 18, Mrs. Richmond went to Westville, Ind., where she had been summoned to hold the transition service of Mrs. Adeline Odell, aged 74, who passed on at the residence of her son in Hobart, Ind. The cortege met Mrs. Richmond's train at Aetna, and by train they and she proceeded to Westville, where friends, neighbors and family, many of them from miles around, had come to pay their tribute to Mrs. Odell. Mrs. Richmond had met her many times, and it was from a service for Mrs. Turner of Morgan Park, which Mrs. Odell attended, that she went home and said to her son: "I want Mrs. Richmond when I pass on", and so her wish was fulfilled. She was a consistent and true Spiritualist, and a woman unusually beloved. The son and his wife and daughter miss her mortal presence from their home, but they know she is still near them. Two brothers and their households also miss the loving, genial presence. But the precious seed of her Spiritualism has been sown and will yield results.

Tuesday, March 19, Mrs. Richmond was again called to Michigan City to officiate at the services for Mrs. Maria Ostrander, aged 84, who had been a resident in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eddy, for a quarter of a century, or ever since the passing of her husband. A true Spiritualist, a loving mother, a devoted grandmother. Such a life wields an influence not to be forgotten, and though missed in the home where she was idolized, how rich in joy and love the glad circle of spirit friends who welcome her to the other home.

One notable feature of all these ministrations is, that they reach three and sometimes four generations, who are present, many of whom listen for the first time to the comfort and joy found in this Truth as thus presented.

W. R.

Great Men for Good Cause.

Woman suffrage was defeated in the Chicago Charter Convention the other day. The vote stood 27 to 27, the Chairman voting with the opposition. The women cannot suppress the pride they feel in the character of some of their 27, and no wonder, for the names of Louis F. Post, Graham Taylor and Raymond Robbins stand for good things and big things, and the fame of them is by no means confined to the Windy City by the Lake.

When any one of the prouder passions are hurt, it is much better philosophy to let a man slip into a good temper than to attack him in a bad one.—Thomas Paine, in Crisis.

DIVORCE.

A Sublime Factor of Natural Evolution—Its Meaning in an Etymological, Physical, and Legal Sense. By W. M. Lockwood.

The discussion of the moral right and wrong of conjugal separation of husband and wife after legal marriage, has an unusual prominence in the journalistic literature of the day, no less than in the pulpit and rostrum rhetoricals of popular society. Nearly all of the writers and speakers we have come in mental contact with, seem more inclined to discuss what they term the "moral bearings" of the question and its ethical legality, than to look carefully and concisely for causes which make divorce desirable. A deeper investigation of the meaning and application of the word, in the various senses in which it is used, we believe, will fully sustain the position of common sense and reason.

The word Divorce in its etymological sense, means, a separation, a division, disunion.

In a physical and physiological sense it means a throwing off, a rejection, a separation of physical factors, depolarization.

It its legal sense in England and Scotland, it means, the disruption, by the act of law, of the conjugal tie, made by a competent court on due cause shown.

In the United States it means, the annulling of the marriage compact, and legal separation of husband and wife by a legally formed judiciary.

The inconsistency of many of our modern writers and polemists is seen in their efforts to prove that all legal marriages—by which is understood marriages in accord with legislative enactment and ecclesiastical formula—are, or should be moral, never seeming to comprehend that nature alone can unite, and nature alone can divorce. No legislative enactments, or syndicate of ecclesiastics can inaugurate a statute or write a canon that will make the principles of physical and physiolgical attraction and repulsion moral, or immoral. All efforts to do this in the past have proved abortive, and they smatter of supine mental weakness and incompetency, and of popish infallibility.

Most canons of the church, and some enactments of legislatures, are in direct opposition to the immutable principles of nature, and they have a degrading tendency upon individuals and civilizations. In no department of sociology are these facts more prominent and pronounced, than in the issues involved in marriage and divorce. To such an extent has this error gained credence, that the popular mind has become psychologized with the concept that marriage, any marriage, all marriages, begin and end by judicial or ecclesiastical legislation and a ceremonial formula.

Think of the farce of it. Think of the misery involved in it. Think of the wrong and crime against the contracting parties who are made to believe that whomever God joins by a religious ceremonial, no man or court of men may sunder. And this claim that God unites by a ceremony, is why the Catholics, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and other creedal denominations, are so strenuously opposing divorce.

The rapidly increasing applications for divorce in our courts, are a ridiculous commentary upon the infallibility of God's ceremonial marriages, and it is sickening evidence of the fallibility and mental weakness of the entire clerical hierarchy. The spectacle of 23,000 divorces granted in the United States during the year 1905, and a portion of 1906, does not strengthen public opinion upon the integrity of God's marriages by a priestly ceremony, and the throes of dissension and criticism from the thinking public and the thinking pen have reached the pulpit, and to-day we are regaled with the effort being made all along ecclesiastical lines of show that divorce may be granted on Bible lines of adultery.

This foolish and shortsighted appeal to the Bible as authority upon the moral phase of divorce is indicative of the intellectual grasp that this religious hierarchy has on the issues involved. In no printed volume in any language can there be found such lax and promiscuous sex relations as are cited in the Bible. As a history covering a great epoch of time, and including many nations, speaking different tongues with divergent social laws, its pages include sex servitude, concubinage, mistresses without marriage, morganatic relations, wars of extermination for the possession of virgins, and phallic (sex) worship; all of which was moral in the eyes of the nations or clans who practiced and advocated these systems. These practices at the time of their enactment, were not regarded as adulteries, and divorcement upon these grounds were of rare occurrence. But a new light dawns upon this age and generation, regarding the integrity of monogamic marriage.

The truth is gaining credence that real marriage has its basis in psychological and physiological selection—that mental and physical co-ordination are of greater importance to the contracting parties than Bible doctrines and religious ceremonies. With this truth there comes another; that man or woman can only love with the intellect—that love is not a function of, and is not expressed by the molecular excitability of physiological glands, but is an expression of psychic intellectual blending; and such love when sequenced by physiological magnetic selection, is the basis of a true monogamic marriage. That the Bible anywhere, either in the Old Testament or the new, gives us a hint of co-ordinate intellectual love as a true fundamental thesis of conjugal harmony, or of a selective physiological polarity as a necessity in the strictly moral view of human reproduction, cannot be found.

That from the time of Moses, the patriarchs and prophets were more inclined to counsel murder, stealth and savage warfare against those who were not Jehoyah's chosen people, in order to possess themselves of their neighbor's wives, is a marked feature of the Old Testament history, and the caprice of the God they worshiped. Nowhere in the New Testament can it be shown that the writers and actors held any but the most common view regarding conjugal associations.

That the clergy of the United States, or any portion of them, should continue to parade the dogmas of Bible doctrine as the premise of moral conjugality and fidelity, is a mental phenomenon that will stagger the credulity of the future historian. No superstition of paganism, however gross, has caused more individual suffering, or greater disaster to the factors of a civilization.

So long as men seek in the Bible, or in the canons of any creedal faiths, for some evidence or fact regarding sociological or domestic harmony that can only be found in the storehouse of nature's co-related physical and psychic forces, just so long will faith strengthened by religious zeal take the place of demonstrated truth, and the ghoulish platitudes of an unprovable and unprofitable theology will bind man's intellect to the sophisms of religions based on miracle and sorcery.

In order to bring before the readers of The Progressive Thinker the real sphere of divorce in its relation to cosmic processes, we will point out briefly the sublime office it fills in all formula of integration and disintegration known to the physicist. In the growth of plant life we note that through the action of light and the sun, certain elements and compounds containing oxygen are attracted to and projected upon the plant. Now if all of these elements and compounds were retained in the capillary structure of the plant, it would not only cease to grow, but would die. But at night the sun and light with their electro-magnetic force are withdrawn—cosmically divorced—and the plant now in the chemical laboratory of the earth's magnetism, divorces its oxygen and all elements and compounds not selective to its development, retaining its carbon with some ammonial and hydrogen compound; and these chemical reactions develop in the plant a visible increase of size, a natural materialization in the seance laboratory of night by changing the spectrum of the invisible modes of elemental motion into visibility in a manner somewhat analogous to the development of a photographer's plate.

Now these reactions of divorcement continue so long as the plant or tree grows; but when the capillaries of the roots can no longer attract and select the elements of soil so necessary for its life, when the tissues of stem and branch and leaf can no longer accrete the elements projected upon them by the action of light and heat, or when the plant or tree cannot divorce non-selective elements and compounds, it becomes diseased and dies.

In the process of human respiration we note the inhalation of large volumes of oxygen into the lungs. Chemical reaction sets up at once, and the exhaled breath comes from the lungs laden with carbonic gas, which has been divorced by the reaction. Without this reaction human life would be in jeopardy—indeed foetal life could not develop, for the reason that there could be no formation of the embryo, since carbonic gas and other subtle poisonous elements in foetal circulation would quickly intercept the equation between vital and chemical action in the embryonic life.

Physiologists inform us that in the time of thirty-two heart beats, the blood of the vascular system makes a complete circuit through arteries, veins and capillaries; carrying with it thousands of molecules of vital energy with electrical rapidity to the support of glands of assimilation, strengthening the body of fiber and tissue with renewed energy, and polarizing the nerve cells with electro-resistance. In its return circuit, it gathers up other thousands of molecules of spent matter which have been divorced by vital reaction, and which, being no longer selective to the formative processes of the soul, which is the real builder, it consigns to the waste-basket of the excretory organs.

Now this process of accretion and divorcement of non-assimilative factors, comprises the great equation of health and existence, not only in man, but in all forms and types of life plasmatic and bio-plasmatic; for its bases are found in the principles of polar attraction and repulsion, a function qualifying all types of matter, and correlating all forms of energy.

To affirm that these principles of selective magnetic attraction do not qualify the intellect, and have nothing to do with domestic harmony, is to ignore the data of mental attractions, and to disregard the most sublime sequences of mental physiology. That man's mental states are swayed by the physical condition of his body and nervous system, and influenced into diseased expression by the environments of domestic and social discord, can be proven by the statistics of insanity and mental aberration found in hospitals and asylums in all countries.

Coupled with this truth of mental repulsion originating in diverse mental magnetisms, is another of delicate character qualifying parenthood. Nowhere in the entire organism of man, has nature clothed with such subtle delicacy and power any function as are found in the germinative glands. From their combined relation are developed the units of the human race. No citadel of art known to scientific investigation and cosmic process, contains such psychic distinction as the matrix from which springs into existence a human being. Around it, and in it, nature has woven her most delicate fibre, and actuated it by miraculous glands of secretion, which contain not only the life forces of parentage, but much of their mental characteristics of noble aspiration, no less than their depravity and nervous weakness. In no department of physiological science are the principles of magnetic selection more noticeable.

Electro-magnetic selection so operative in all growths and developments in nature, attains its highest mission and sphere in the laboratory from which is born a human soul in human form. We note the presence or absence of the factors of magnetic selection in floral cereal, and plant life, and the lower forms of sentient existences. Imperfect vegetation, imperfect flowers and dwarfed and stunted fruitage, can be traced to non-congenial soil, an improper supply of warmth and rain, and other factors of their development. In animal life, it is noted in non-selective or careless mateship, and unprotected gestation and subsequent care.

To assume that the human is exempt from the factors of mental and physiological selection in conjugal associations, is to set aside the fundamental truths underlying the formative progressions of nature, and to ignore that man is subject to the same general principles of evolution that qualify and control other existences. That these magnetic factors of physiological selection in marital associations have been, and are ignored, is shown by the rapid increase of physical weakness threatening the complete ruin and decay of the race, and by the clamorous effort of the leading churchmen to continue the scourge by making divorce from these evils, both legally and morally impossible.

It is a well attested fact in pathological physiology, that conjugal repulsion breeds more ruin and disaster to civilization, than epidemics. While the latter may sweep away its thousands in certain localities, the former is slowly, silently but surely laying its slimy and diseased hand upon a very large per cent of modern life. It should be known that electro-magnetic repulsion, or the reaction of chemical forces upon vital processes, is the prevailing cause of disease; and the repulsion obtaining in the finely organized centers of procreation in non-selective unions, heads a list of causalities fatal to health, happiness and domestic harmony, that will fill a chapter of horrors, when these physiological facts are known to the general public.

This repulsion is causing the premature decline in vitality to thousands of men, while at the same time it is undermining the maternal capacity and vitality of woman, thereby jeopardizing motherhood and the power of normal parturition. It is the parent of the lowest depravity, insanity and dementia. It generates in men all known forms of venereal disease, and in woman various forms of scrofula, cystic and ovarian tumors, impoverished motherhood, and cancerous states and tendencies. It begets crime, bloodshed, liars and religious hypocrisy, and though the general illiteracy of ecclesiastical teachers and their teaching upon physiological data, it threatens the destruction of modern civilizations.

A careful study of the physiological and psychological function of the various organs of the human and their relation to the brain and mental action, will show that the cerebral structure involving two thousand million cells and fibers connecting every gland and process of the body indicates that man with his enlarged mental capacity, should in no physiological sense be placed in the same category of mateship as that qualifying the lower forms of animal life. Yet owing to the prevailing superstition that an Almighty God sanctifies and purifies and blesses all marriage associations by a religious ceremonial formulated by churchmen and accepted by the state, civilization continues this vile dogma because of its supposed popularity, virtually allowing its sons and daughters to wed on a common animal plane.

It is a well attested truth in sociological science, that by far the larger proportion of marriages have their initiative in physical magnetic attraction; without any knowledge of its selective utility. Hence that disease, perverted function and discord are generated in a large number of instances, will cease to be a wonder when the facts of selective physical magnetism as a factor of domestic harmony are more widely known, and when the popular mind senses that a religious ceremony does not constitute, sanctify, purify or bless, any real conjugal union. It will eventually be seen that all religious ceremonies should be expunged and eliminated from marriage contracts under state control and legislative authority.

Let the church make amends if it can, for those it has already damned. It should be prohibited if necessary by legislative enactments, from meddling with those social matters that form a part of state and national control. The Bible with the licentious character of the centuries that introduced it, can not be used as a text book of chastity. The record of its patriarchs, prophets and preachers, the lustful proclivities of its kings, governors, rulers and tribal conquerors, together with the account of Lot and his daughters, Ruth and Boaz, Samson and his mistresses, Hosea and Gomer, are no longer regarded as a curriculum of virtue; while the genesis of the New Testament introduces in strong coloring a god of phallic character. That the scholarly and thinking clergyman nauseates at presenting these records as comprising the real origin and destiny of man, or its miracles and the caprice of a Jehovistic age as representing a system of concise morals worthy of our time, is little wonder, since every department of Natural Philosophy and cosmic science demonstrates the absolute impossibility of such data to account for any claimed fact.

God cannot unite antipodes. If he could, there would be no need of positive and negative poles in matter. This truth being in evidence, we affirm that He cannot unite in harmony diverse physical magnetisms or mental tendencies and aspirations in conjugal association.

We furthermore affirm that all true monogamic love has its origin and basis in the intellect, hence is subject to principles of intellectual selection. This truth will rule, when mankind can be shown that it is by the virtue of this superior soul perception, that he is capacitated for a higher conjugal life than the brute; and when this intellectual love between contracting parties can be sequenced by a selective physiological blending in these magnetic relations upon which moral parenthood depends, we will have the foundation for a true, faithful and enduring monogamic marriage, when divorce and infidelity to marriage relations, will be unknown.

W. M. LOCKWOOD.

Buffalo, N. Y.

A DELIGHTFUL TRANSITION.

The Mother of Mrs. Elizabeth Schauss, State Missionary for Ohio, Passed Serenely to Spirit Life—She Could See and describe Spirits During Her Sickness.

To the Editor:—Promotion to the higher life has just come to my dear mother. Calm and peaceful she passed on in the full knowledge of immortal life and spirit communion, which it had been my great comfort to impart to her during the long weeks of her illness, and so the one who had always seemed to me to be the personification of divine love and gentle devotion, has passed from physical sight. There was a time when I thought that I would never be able to give her up, and without the knowledge and comfort of Spiritualism it would certainly have been very hard, but during the last five weeks of her illness her own clairvoyant vision was cleared, and there was scarcely a day passed during this time that she did not tell me of one or more of her own people on the spirit side of life, whom she both saw and heard at her bedside. She also mentioned the names of people over there who I am positive she never knew before, but who were known to me, thus not only strengthening me but likewise arousing the thought and curiosity of others who heard her, so that the crowning glory of her 79 years of long and useful life was to serve even in death, for my father who (although he no longer opposes me in my work) yet feels that his churchical teachings are nearer right that the philosophy of Spiritualism, heard what mother said, and often asked for explanations which were gladly given, and which he in turn recounted to others, and so I feel that good has been done, and I know that my mother rejoices that she has been able to make a few people think before leaving earth conditions. ELIZABETH SCHAUSS.

Toledo, Ohio.

Philadelphia Women Elected.

At the recent election in Philadelphia twenty women were elected on ward school boards. Many women serve on school boards throughout the State, and they are elected by men's votes, for women have not even the school vote in Pennsylvania.

The idle man is the devil's cushion. —Bishop Hall.

THE GREAT WORK.

There Is No Development Without Unhindered Will Power.

The discussion of "The Great Work" for the past few weeks in the pages of The Progressive Thinker has been full of deep interest. The review by Mr. Howe seems to have been very fair, though I feel that he has misunderstood the author in some things. It seems to me that in his article in the issue of March 16 he has entirely failed to grasp the idea conveyed in the "Great Work" as to the difference in the condition of a Master and an immoral person in the hour of transition. He seems to think that the ability to see and hear things spiritual is the compensation that the "Living of a Life" brings to the individual, and that death bestows that blessing on the sinner as well as the saint. If the Master's development carried him no farther in spiritual wisdom than the earth-bound spirit at its liberation at death, then indeed, would the years of labor entailed in the "Living of a Life" seem to be lost. Beginning with the twelfth line from the bottom of page 452, the author says on this subject "But what of the Master?" What does the transition called death mean to him?

"In direct ratio to his added knowledge of natural law and of his power over nature's finer forces the incident of physical death assumes a less ominous aspect.

"For in the completion of the last section of the technical work he has accomplished the greatest task known to man in the physical body and has earned for himself the Master Degree. That which from the beginning he accepted as his working hypothesis he has now demonstrated by the Personal Experience. That is to say, he has learned:

1. "That it is within his power voluntarily to withdraw from the physical body, travel in the Spiritual Realms and there test the height and the condition to which he is able to ascend at any given time by force of his own Will and developed powers—and return again to the physical body without invoking physical death.

2. "He has learned that there are many distinct "Spheres" or "Planes" of life upon this particular planet of which the physical is the first.

3. "He has learned therefore, that in passing from this life into the spiritual he is but entering into other and larger fields of evolutionary opportunities and possibilities.

4. "He learns that the First Spiritual Sphere is but the beginning of the Higher Life.

5. "He learns that it is possible for one yet in the physical body to prepare himself for immediate entry into spiritual conditions and realms that are far above and beyond the First Spiritual Sphere."

Does this condition appear to Mr. Howe to be identical with that of a vicious earth-bound spirit at physical death?

This entire chapter "The Passing of a Master" in beauty and eloquence is but the fitting climax to the most wonderful work it has ever been my privilege to read.

The quiet force with which the Law of Compensation and Personal Responsibility are brought out is not to be overcome by a fair or honest means, and this is where Spiritualists everywhere can join hands with the author.

But here is a fact that seems strange to me. Spiritualists all admit that this earth life is a period of schooling—of development for the dweller in the flesh. If it is not that, what is it? By the exercise of a little reason we can all see that there is no self-development without unhindered will-power. Spiritualists also admit that to be a good subjective psychic the Will must be in abeyance. In fact, the excellence of mediumship is measured in exact ratio to the absence of Will of the medium, for whenever the Will of the medium is asserted there is more or less confusion in the manifestation of the controlling power. The more a medium is kept under subjective control, the more easily is the medium kept under subjection.

Is it not plain that such time as the medium is kept under control it is being robbed of its just development—self-development? And is it not apparent to all observers that a medium who has been a subjective psychic from childhood, if its mentality can be examined free from control, that said mentally is the essentially Child-like and undeveloped? What logical inference can be drawn from this but that this spirit at transition is helpless to the extent it has been kept from independent developmena? And just that far this earth life has been in vain.

There is something in the philosophy promulgated in this work that strikes the critical reader with wonder—a thing brought out in the chapter, "The Mark of the Master."

1. "The Masters of the Great School never, under any conditions or circumstances whatsoever, accept a material reward or set a material price upon the personal instructions they impart to their tried, tested, and accepted students.

2. "They never charge nor receive a material consideration of any kind whatsoever, for healing the sick, comforting the sorrowing, lifting up the fallen, or for any other personal ministration.

3. "They do not devote themselves to the accumulation of material wealth nor material things beyond such as may be necessary for their health and reasonable comfort and for carrying forward the definite lines of the Great Work for which they are personally responsible."

If the author is not sincere, what can be his motive where there is no chance for graft?

MRS. KATIE L. HAYES.

Sigourney, Iowa.

Horse Sense.

A late press dispatch tells us that Washington has a horse that can ring a door-bell and did ring it recently to call a physician when his master needed a doctor badly. The owner of the horse is J. R. Wordeman, of Washington City. He was driving this horse in a light buggy. He was thrown from it and his head struck on a fence. It happened near the residence of Dr. H. W. Woodard's office. The horse stood for a moment by the prostrate driver and as if possessed of human instincts, marched up to the physician's residence and rubbed his nose against the electric push button until the doctor came to the door. This seems almost like the operation of a spirit intelligence.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT.

"Love is the Fulfilling of the Law."

"And he said, avenge me of mine adversary."

"And again it has been said an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you that ye love one another."

Whoever gained anything by hatred or by the desire for revenge. We all know that love conquers in every instance. The power of love is limitless; a lovable and harmonious state of mind attracts to its possessor friends, while the opposite condition repels.

Whoever carries revenge in his heart becomes, after a time, so thoroughly impregnated, with the thought that it shows forth in every feature. The expression of the features becomes set in that direction so plainly that the most casual acquaintance takes note of it and turns away, and the consequence is that such have few friends, for they repel instead of attracting them.

We show forth from within. A cheerful, loving disposition can count many friends. We all love cherful and hopeful people, and we can make for ourselves a heaven or a hell by our thoughts and our conduct one towards another. We are all minds in different degrees of intelligence, and as we think and believe we so demonstrate ourselves to the world. If we think loving thoughts we are filled with more love and attract to us the good, the true and the beautiful in life. If we think evil of others, cultivate suspicion, fear, envy, jealousy and hatred we shall become a walking monument to every ill, and those on the same plane in spirit, will become our companions, for like attracts like. Can we afford to do this?

Every student of mentality knows this, and he also knows that harmony of thought produces and preserves harboring revenge or hatred we injure anced condition of the nerves, the blood and in fact the whole body, and sickness is the result of such inharmony.

Thought is potent, and silent thought is most powerful for good or ill. In horboring revenge or hatred we injure ourselves more than the object hated, and we make for ourselves the punishment we deserve, for law of compensation is rigid and unchangeable. It is easy to be seen then, that heaven or hell is what we make it. It is not a location, but a condition made by ourselves for our own habitation of thought. Knowing this, who would choose a hell when a heaven is as easily obtained?

Through ignorance we err in this direction as well as in every other. We possess all power for drawing to us those whose companionship and association we most desire. Our own attitude towards ourselves must determine whether it shall be those on the higher plane of thought, from whom we may continue to learn, or those whose principles will drag us down. If we cultivate love and harmony, we attract the good, unconsciously, perhaps to ourselves, but just as certainly and without any apparent effort of our own?

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." Love is the magnet that draws all things and holds all things to itself. Its power is boundless; we cannot have too much of it, for by its strength we are held, and by that law we are made happy or miserable. Love is all powerful. Let us then cultivate it and strive to have more of it, for our own peace of mind, if for no other reason, for Love's ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peaceful and full of joy.

AUGUSTA FRANCES TRIPP.

Onset, Mass.

TRUMPET SEANCE AT CANTON, O.

Messages Received From Distinguished Personages.

To the Editor:—Not long since Mr. D. A. Herrick of 35 West Tallmadge ave., Akron, Ohio, came to Canton and held a grand trumpet seance, in fact one of the best the writer has ever attended. While many of the spirit friends and relations made use of the trumpet as a medium of communication, a number spoke independently—without the use of the trumpet—and often two, and several times three could be heard conversing on different subjects with their friends of earth, a feat no trumpet medium, dishonest or otherwise, could possibly accomplish himself. This seance was held in the home of Mr. John Beiter, 618 East Fourth St., fourteen ladies and gentlemen composing the circle. Among the many spirit friends that came and made their presence known, were two who were well known and honored in Canton while living in the flesh, viz.: Judge J. W. Underhill and our martyred president and former fellow-townsman William McKinley. Judge Underhill was a Spiritualist for many years and a man who was not afraid to say to the public, "I am a Spiritualist' and with his Christian friends had many arguments in behalf of the grandest truth that has ever been given to the world—the fact of spirit return and communication with their loved ones of earth.

Mr. McKinley's message or talk was indeed interesting, in which he spoke of his invalid wife in his usual kindly and sympathetic manner, so characteristic of him while living in the flesh—and greatly regretted that circumstance and conditions prevented him from meeting with her under the same conditions that he met with and spoke to us. Mr. McKinley also said, "I am still deeply interested in your country and the Nation's good, but fear, unless some great change is brought about before the next presidential election, that the wrong man, through a mighty power, will be elected to fill the next presidential chair." During this message from Mr. McKinley a wave of solemnity, indeed unusual, swept over each and every one within the room, notwithstanding Spirit McKinley did not give his name until after he had finished his message. Mr. McKinley also spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Roosevelt and the great interest he has taken in the welfare of the whole country and the people at large. E. R. KIDD.

Canton, Ohio.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

An Important Lesson.

It Is for Spiritualists to Consider, and in Which Are Some Unpleasant Truths.

It is only by agitation that progress can be made, and just in proportion that unpleasant truths are modified or removed entirely, just in that degree progress will be made. Mr. Barrett, President of the N. S. A., reviews the present situation, and the views he presents will be carefully read and considered.

In a recent article, Sister Clara Watson reviews somewhat in detail certain statements of mine, and others, that have previously appeared in the columns of The Progressive Thinker. Having in view the idea that others may also have misunderstood what I said, I respectfully request an opportunity to explain in detail what I meant, also to present certain other important items of fact for the Spiritualists of the nation to consider at their leisure. When they have carefully considered the following paragraphs, I hope they will promptly prepare a remedy for existing ills, and be ready to assist in the good work of making Spiritualism what it should be—the foremost movement of the age.

Sister Watson calls attention to a paragraph in my last annual report, whose appearance there she deprecates, and whose conclusions she declines to accept. I was dealing with the commercial element in mediumship, and said boldly that if "the religion of Spiritualism meant the exploitation of mines, and mining, the finding of lost husbands, the securing of tips on horse races and the stock markets, let us say so and give self-respecting men and women a chance to get out of our movement." Spiritualists, brethren, I can honestly say that I do not regret writing those words. They are pregnant with truth to-day—a truth so vital to Spiritualism that it cannot be ignored. I was arguing for a definition of our terms, and took the method complained of by Sister Watson in order that I might impress the importance of the issue upon the minds of our delegates with a sufficient degree of emphasis as to inspire them to act.

Legal authorities for several years past have been seeking to determine the difference between mediumship, in its purity and glory, and fortune-telling, with all of its attendant ills. When mediums declare their specialties to be the finding of oil wells, locating mines, determining the chastity of wives or husbands, the courts have a right to ask the Spiritualists of the land if such things constitute their religion, their philosophy, their Spiritualism! Moreover, they are asking it almost every week, with increasing emphasis.

A few years ago a Western jurist asked me a series of questions pertaining to Spiritualism. When I handed him the Declaration of Principles of the N. S. A. to be used in evidence in the case, it was accepted and used in behalf of our cause.

Why?

Because it was the declaration of our supreme body, our law-making authority, and set forth the consensus of opinion of the majority of the Spiritualists of America. It was the voice of a national organization, and, until it is amended or appealed, it will stand in law as Spiritualism's pronunciamento of its truths to the world.

I once went before a city council to ask that body to exempt clairvoyants, clairaudients, mediums and prophets from the penalties of the license ordinance. "Please define those terms," said one member. I gave my personal definition, but, when it was found that our National body had not spoken with regard to these matters, that my opinion was only a personal one, my words had very little weight.

The president of that body said to me in the course of a most instructive talk, "Secure a proper definition of your terms. We have no prejudice against Spiritualists, nor their mediums and ministers, but we want to know who they are, what they stand for and what they represent. Make your definitions, and we will fit the law to them. We decline to define your terms for you, and then fit the law to our definitions. If there is a difference between mediumship and fortune-telling, we want to know it, so that we can act intelligently."

What do the Spiritualists hold with regard to life in the spirit world? In one state at least, I am told that the possible fate of quite a large property rests upon what Spiritualists hold in regard to children growing up in spirit life. In the suit against the will, it was held that a man's belief in the growth of his child in spirit life might constitute an insane delusion. When an expert witness was questioned regarding the matter, he could only give his personal opinion, for the Spiritualists as a body have never declared that they believe that children do grow to maturity in the unseen world. What is the matter with the Spiritualists? Why have they never made this important declaration? In my messages for 1905 and 1906, I urged this issue and its concomitants upon my brethren in America. Some of them replied with sarcasm and reproach. Others began to tremble lest a "creed" be adopted. Others still vehemently protested that it did not matter, that each man should believe just what he pleased.

In 1906 the convention went so far as to direct the appointment of a committee, to report in 1907 a definition of terms that will meet our special needs. Hon. Charles R. Schirm is the chairman of that committee, while George W. Kates, W. A. Willing, Elizabeth Harlow and Georgia Gladys Cooley are his associates. I have confidence in that committee. I believe its members will do something, and I feel that the definitions presented by Chairman Schirm will cover the majority of the points to which I am now referring.

Sister Watson next proceeds to defend commercialism in mediumship. Again I say that if the pretense of assaying ores, locating mines, giving points by which honor, integrity and virtue in men and women can be overcome, constitute spiritual mediumship (and the religion of Spiritualism) it is time for self-respecting men and women to leave the movement forever! The law holds such claims to be criminal in intent and purpose. Sister Watson holds that no differentiation can be made with justice or propriety with respect to what mediumship offers to the world. She is one of the truest of women—the embodiment of honor, womanly virtue and purity of life. What would she do with that woman, who, in a certain city, gave "readings" to keepers of houses of ill fame to help them "locate" innocent girls who could be led into lives of shame? Is such mediumship as sacred in my good friend's eyes as that which gives comfort to some sorrowing mother, or saves a wayward boy or girl from destruction?

That medium (?) who induced one of her patrons to place $1,800 in her hands to invest in certain stocks that were "sure" to rise to fabulous sums in value, pretending to be influenced by some spirit guide in giving the message, who absconded with the money, and, when overtaken by the irate and justly worried man, coolly and cruelly taunted him with being a fool for believing what she said, declaring that she had no money belonging to him, goading him to desperation, finally driving him to suicide; that woman, that medium (?), is as much to Spiritualism as the one whose whole life is a round of good deeds and as pure as the driven snow from heaven, if commercialism in mediumship, as defended by Sister Watson be more than the religious element in which she does not believe.

The medium (?) who drove her victim to suicide went to prison for fifteen months, got quite a number of weeks off for good behavior, came forth a "martyr(?)" who had been "cruelly persecuted" by the law "because of her faith in Spiritualism," was taken up by many honest-hearted Spiritualists who did not know the real facts in the case, and to-day wears expensive diamonds, dresses in the richest of velvets, wears a most innocent look upon her face, and continues her "commercialism in the name of mediumship," by deliberately fleecing those whom she can get into her power! A medium whose messages breathe benedictions of peace, of love, of sweet good will, that inspire men and women to cleaner thinking, nobler living, higher aspirations, must be classed with the one who drives men to suicide, and whose pretensions are a never-ending round of base and demoralizing acts, if Sister Watson's views be correct.

That medium (?) through whose organism a heart-broken girl was made to believe that she received visits from her lover in spirit life, who was persuaded to believe that he could, would and did "materialize" for her in every respect a physical being, who was persuaded to marry the "spirit," who fell into the power of the medium's confederate, who became the mother of his child, who lost home, friends, and standing through this terrible experience—all in the name of Spiritualism, and because of the beauty and glory of flesh, blood and bones materialization, is as true and worthy a representative of Spiritualism as is the one who stands for pure spirituality, aspiration for higher things, through her messages of religious devotion, spiritual and divine illumination of soul. I do not believe that Sister Watson wants the two classed together, yet what are we to understand from her defense of commercialism?

That medium, ordained by seven societies, whose members were blinded to the demand for honesty, decency and sobriety because of his marvels, who went into a saloon, called for a glass of whisky, then walked to the other end of the bar and ordered his guide "Jim" to bring that liquor to his lips, (and "Jim" did it, repeating the operation until his medium was blind drunk), is just as good as Margaret Fuller, George Peabody, E. H. Chapin, H. W. Beecher, Robert Dale Owen, or any other noble-hearted, devoted, prayerful soul ever was. I told this story (and it is vouched for by a dozen witnesses who were not Spiritualists) at one of the great camps of the land a few years ago. One of the most influential of our speakers, now a member of another denomination, defended the phenomenon on the ground that it was equal in value to the most highly inspired utterance that ever fell from the lips of mortal, because of its "wonderful(?)" demonstration of spirit power! Does Sister Watson agree with this man's views? I will admit that the phenomenon did prove spirit power in a remarkable way, but are the phenomena of Spiritualism worthy of no better place for presentation than at the bar of a whisky saloon? Is this sort of mediumship satisfactory to our whole-souled, clean-lived sister whose name is a synonym for temperance and sobriety?

I knew Abraham James. He was a good man and a genuine medium. He did succeed in locating artesian wells, oil wells, mines, and treasures of different kinds. He gained two or three generous fortunes through his commercial use of his mediumship, and lost them all! In the closing days of his life, he was a ward of the N. S. A. I myself presented his name as one who deserved a pension from our Medium's Relief Fund, and am glad he got it. He needed it, and need is excuse enough, for he was a genuine medium. He located some valuable properties for two prominent Spiritualists. They became millionaires; gave ten thousand dollars each towards a Universalist church in their city and twenty thousand dollars each toward a Catholic church. Did they give like sums for a Spiritualist Temple? Did they endow the struggling local society? By no means! They did not give a dollar to Spiritualism, but gave thousands to churches (to show how "broad" their Spiritualism had made them) whose members were bitter enemies of the very "power," "science," "materialization"—which is it, that that made them rich? Long before they took leave of earth, they lost their fortunes and passed away dependent upon others. Great is commercialism in mediumship, and most wonderful indeed are the results thereof!

The luring of young girls to social damnation, the deliberate robbery of men and women in the names of their beloved dead, the driving of crazed victims of deception to suicide, the ruin of at least one young girl, at a sordid show, called full form materialization of flesh, blood and bones, the drinking of liquor over a bar by means of a spirit phenomenon, the obtaining of large fortunes, used by their holders to aid the enemies of Spiritualism—these, plus the tips on horse races, baseball games, the finding of hidden treasure, the determining of the moral integrity of wives and husbands, the finding of affinities, the selling of charms, the removing of "spells"—these are some of the things I mean, Sister Watson, in my references to commercialism in mediumship, and what I so severely scored in my message when I said, "If these things constitute the religion of Spiritualism, let us say so and let self-respecting men and women go where they will not be subjected to such influences!

If these conditions have any place in the propagandism of Spiritualism, then Spiritualism deserves to die a most ignominious death! Just because we are asked to define our terms, to say what constitutes mediumship, and who are true mediums, we are told of the marvels and glories of sordid, immoral commercialism, and chided for urging the emphasizing of spirituality, reverence, devotion, aspiration, because they savor of religion. Right living protests against all immoral practices! Right doing demands that they shall not prevail! Integrity demands that the line of demarkation be drawn between commercialism and Spiritualism, between the base counterfeit and the genuine coin, between materialism with its sensuality, and the pure spirituality that uplifts and ennobles those who possess it.

Supposing a medium (?) does give a man a "tip" on the stock market or some race, through which he meets with great financial gain. By so doing are not the medium, his guide, the sitter, all parties to an immoral act? Are not they taking an undue advantage of others who have no means of acquiring the same knowledge? Is it not the getting of something for nothing through that advantage? Is it not a case in which one man robs the many by the information unjustly, yea, immorally acquired? It is indeed the exploitation of unsuspecting men and women by means of a combination of rascals in spirit with one in the mortal, through a third person whose sole purpose is his anxiety to get one or five dollars for his sitting. If a man obtains information surreptitiously regarding any business deal by which he robs his fellowmen, he is considered a criminal. Is it any different when a man gets such information from a spirit? Sister Watson, fortune-telling and its concomitants cannot be mediumship, not any part of mediumship, if there be any truth whatever in Spiritualism. Dealing in futures may be all right for Wall street, Lombard street, and the Bourse, but for one I object to its being made a part of the teachings of Spiritualism.

Some mediums claim, no doubt with absolute truth, that ninety-five per cent of their patrons desire business readings only, or such shades of business readings as may be classed under the general title of commercialism. To the writer, it seems as if the duty of the medium were perfectly clear in all such cases. When the patron seeks business readings only, pass him on to the fortune teller and other licensed thieves that infest every city and large town in the land. A true medium should give spiritual work in all of her readings. If an incidental suggestion be given by the communicating spirit with regard to some enterprise that will redound to the spiritual good of the sitter, there could be no harm accrue to any one from it. But when a medium voluntarily makes her work commercial in character, and declares that commercialism is more "spiritual" than genuine spirit messages or communings, then every such medium should be labeled "Doubtful" and the public warned against her. If ninety-five per cent of a medium's readings be "business" in character, then at least ninety-four per cent of them are open to suspicion.

"But how will the spiritual seer or seeress make a living? There are not enough people who care for spiritual work only to afford a living income to those who stick to the higher phases of mediumship." Such words as these are often uttered by those who object to giving up commercialism. For one, I do not believe these words are true. When it is known that a medium refuses absolutely to pollute spiritual truths with the filth of sensual and material conditions, she will draw around her the high-minded, truth-seeking men and women of the world who will generously sustain her in her noble work. Those who do not keep their hands thus unsullied do not deserve support! Should there be any doubt as to support for the true spiritual seer or seeress, let him or her become a member of some local society, then take out papers as an associate minister of Spiritualism, and be paid a regular salary as such. The society then becomes sponsor for said medium, takes all of the money paid for sittings, but gives the genuine psychic a regular salary, for her work. This would remove all fear of want, of lack of shelter and proper raiment from the medium's mind, and cuts out the main incentive to fraud and deception, for commercialism always ultimates in one or both. Whenever such salaried psychic is proved guilty of resorting to commercialism, or, fraud, or both, her appointment as associate minister should be revoked, and the public warned against her. Such a course of action as this would prove effectual in ridding mediumship of the many incubi that now are attached to it. It also means that the N. S. A. must have a generous endowment ere it can be carried into effect. Place the medium above the danger line of want, and fraud will soon disappear, while the baneful influence of sordid commercialism will bear it active company.

"Endowment for the N. S. A.! Why should that be necessary?" Because of the lamentable fact that at the present time nearly all of our local societies are financially weak, hence not able to pay living salaries to both speakers and mediums. The honest psychics must have a means of livelihood until the change of method is effected, and the locals willing to do for the mediums what they should have done many years ago, take care of them. As soon as the truth-seeking, earnest-souled mortals are assured that they will receive spiritual wares only from these guaranteed psychics, they will give them all they can do, and the local will receive almost enough, in full, to pay the psychics' salaries. Reverent-souled men and women hesitate to-day about going to mediums lest they be told something about a divorce that is coming or the doings of a recreant executor, or administrator, or some runaway wife or husband. People of culture and refinement have no desire to be insulted in this manner whether in public or in private. With a full understanding of what a harking back to commercialism would mean—a loss of position, papers of endorsement and a possible notification of the police that he or she has become a fortune-teller, there would be few who would fall from grace in that manner. Again I say that when the possibility of wanting food, shelter, and raiment for one's self and family is removed, there will be few lapses into fraud and commercialism on the part of mediums.

The proposed change means a proper and constant support of the local societies on the part of the members thereof. To-day, the great majority of Spiritualists either want non-Spiritualists to support their movement for them, or feel that their duty is done when they pay a fee of ten cents at the door. This policy has proved a disastrous failure in all sections of the nation, and is one of the causes of the disrepute in which Spiritualism is held in many cities. Let every society stand for something, declare what its purposes are, provide a membership book, then require each one who joins it to pledge a certain sum per month to support the work, take pains to have each and every pledge redeemed, and success is assured. Of course the door fee would have to be abolished and the present slip-shod systems of book-keeping (or non-book-keeping) abandoned. It will put the test upon the individual to say by his deeds what Spiritualism is really worth to him, and how much he actually needs it in his life. The claim that Spiritualists as a class are poor in purse IS A BAREFACED LIE! Taken as a class and compared with a corresponding number of church-members or non-church-members, they will average man for man at the very same rating in worldly wealth, with the probability that the advantage would be quite a bit in their favor. The cry of poverty is raised to get rid of actual duty. They have cash in plenty for tobacco, theatres, gold-headed canes, costly hats, furs, Worth costumes from Paris, but no money for local societies, or the Spiritualist papers. They need re-conversion to a spiritual Spiritualism, and when the baneful influence of commercialism has been eradicated, our erring friends, like "de lil' brack sheep," can and will return to the fold. The endowment of the N. S. A. in generous proportion seems to me to be the paramount need of the hour.

I now come to the statement that scholarly young men and women are kept off our platform because of the present tendency on the part of certain leaders to emphasize unduly the religious side of Spiritualism. This statement has been echoed in glee by the irreligious writers and speakers whenever they had an opportunity to obtain a hearing before the public, in the press or upon the platform. One writer whose erudition is so Solemnesque as to be absolutely blinding to his own eyes and conspicuuous by its entire absence to men and women of scholarly attainments, goes so far as to insult the better Spiritualists than himself by calling them, if they believe in Spiritualism as a religion, idiots, imbeciles, and wanting in common sense. This man is afflicted by a disease that was almost eradicated by the nineteenth century and will be entirely stamped out before the twentieth is gone. This terrible disease is known as "Conceit of Ignorance." It harms its possessor more than any one else, yet is offensive to cultured minds and progressive souls from its close resemblance in mental odors to those flung into the material atmosphere by the angry pole-cat. "Let him who is ignorant be ignorant still." He needs his experience, and, when he has had it, will apologize to the good people whom he tried so hard to insult.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

(To be continued.)

A Reply to Mr. Dague.

If we study the formation of each twig and branch, if we center ourselves upon the method of expression—omitting the broader view—we will find ourselves on an equal with the little girl who "could not see the woods because the trees were in the way." To understand the Law of Being, one must penetrate to life or Causation. He must not only reach this goal intellectually, but he must become spiritually conscious of this realm. Then comes the attunement of the finite with the Infinite—and the realization of the Oneness of Life. Climb the heights of spiritual knowledge, and then the fog land will disappear. But right here, allow me to say to Mr. Dague, please do not call me an authority—on any subject. I am authority to no one but myself, and no one is authority to me. I claim entire independence in this matter, and my experience and studies of some thirty years, lead me to accept reincarnation as a fact.

Now it is not wise to deny a thing because it has not come within one's own observation, or experience. Truly, one cannot say what is not—he will not attempt to, if he is wise. He can only tell what is, or what seems to be the truth to him. And all we have to truly judge by is our own personal experience. Am I not right in this?

And yet how remarkable it is, that occasionally we meet with a person who denies you the right to personal experience of any kind that conflicts with his ideas of what that experience should be!

Another point in Mr. Dague's article in The Progressive Thinker of March 9, I cannot let pass. He says: "A few weeks ago you kindly printed my communication, 'An Important Question' in which I mentioned some objections to the theory of Reincarnation." Since that time, he says, several parties have written him personal letters, amongst them myself. Our good Brother Dague is troubled with a lapse of memory, as I have only written him once on that subject, and then only in reply to a personal letter to me, dated Sept. 21, 1906, asking my theory on certain points. I did not give him my theory, but sent him a Banner of Light, with marked articles. I gladly share all the crumbs of knowledge I have been able to gather in this great school of life, but I never insist that one shall eat from my table. Simply molding a man's mind, coloring a man's opinion, ah—that is no good. Real growth comes from within, an unfoldment of the Divine Principle, and each one must unfold for himself.

JESSIE S. PETTIT FLINT.

Corvallis, Oregon.

THE WORLD'S GREAT SEER.

Andrew Jackson Davis and His Works Appreciated.

To the Editor:—I wish my name to go upon your list as a subscriber for a complete edition of Andrew Jackson Davis' works. I am very glad you are to issue them. I have long wished some one would do this. I regard Mr. Davis as one of the World's great seers. I had nearly every volume he has written, but in the many changes and through those who borrowed and forget to return, I have now less than half, and rejoice at this opportunity to fill my library.

My conception of Mr. Davis' place in the evolution of Truth is expressed in my little book entitled "New Thought Primer," in these words: "All New Thought ideas, save those that make man conscious that he IS spirit here and now, were born before the Hydesville raps. They have been repeated by Spiritualism during all the years of its existence. In 1845, three years before these raps, in the person and in the "Revelations" of Andrew Jackson Davis was Modern Spiritualism really born. And to him we may honestly date the birth of New Thought, though present "founders" of systems of "Healing" and teaching, and many teachers of various phases of New Thought, are not aware of the source from which their ideas sprang.

Davis was at that time a lad of 15. While in mesmeric trances he gave those lectures which were later published under the title of "Nature and Her Divine Revelations." This book was followed by 29 others, which make a library no student of the "Progress of Ideas" can afford to ignore. In them can be traced the heredity of every New Thought proposition. Davis called his system "The Harmonial Philosophy!" The difference between this and New Thought lies principally in the emphasis which is now placed upon the individual soul and its independence of all external control, its unity with the One, and its power to build its body into health, and keep its environment to its desire through right thinking.

But Davis, in teaching the Divinity of Man and Nature, virtually taught all this. Later teachers have brought into clearer light the truth he proclaimed. Methods of application are many: Truth is one. Davis started Philosophical Spiritualism, and this is so near New Thought, that I am not able to "draw the line between the two where God has not!"

Mr. Davis, in a letter to me recognized the truth of the position in which I placed him.

In 1900, The Banner of Light published this sonnet to Mr. Davis, which also expresses my admiration of him and the place he holds in the Thought of the present century:

"To Andrew Jackson Davis:—
Great in an age of greatness, thou! and wise
Amid a century when millions tower
Like Alp and Pyramid, in mental power
O'er ages past. Simple, child-like thy guise,
O modest Seer with "Magic Staff"! Now flies
On wings of gold, world-wide thy angel-song
Telling to waiting earth it is the dawn
Of Spirit—Freedom's promised natal hour.
"Thy swaddling-clothes were His in manger laid!
The cradle rocked beneath the Boodh-tree bough!
Brahm, Zeus, Yahweh, their debt to mankind paid
By placing Plato's wreath upon thy brow!
Thy name we gild on History's brightest page,
With his we love so well—our Concord Sage."

With this appreciation, you can understand why I am glad you are to reprint his books. Truly your friend,

HENRY HARRISON BROWN.

Glenwood, Cal.

SPIRITUAL VERSUS MATERIAL THEORIES

Mind Is Not the Motion of Electric Corpuscles.

In The Progressive Thinker of March 9, in an essay by that brilliant and interesting writer, E. L. Larkin, are some assumptions in relation to mind that in the interest of true science, it seems to the writer should not be passed unchallenged. He says: "Mind * * * in all being, I assert and repeat, is an oscillation of electric corpuscles." That is to say that mind is motion, the motion of something he calls electric corpuscles, whose life consists in their oscillating motions.

There is not one particle of evidence to sustain the notion that feeling and sentience are motions of anything, oscillatory or otherwise. Motion is mere change of position with reference to other positions in space, and cannot be shown to have any qualities that we ascribe to feeling and sentience, excepting extension and position in space.

The cause of mind and sentience must be something else than the oscillating motions of electrical corpuscles. When any impression is made upon our sentience which we feel, what is felt, is something entirely different from any mere motion. If we are struck by an object, what we feel is the Force of the blow, and "Force," instead of being one and the same as motion, is its exact opposite, as shown by the fact that its essence consists of resistance to motion. There could be no such thing as a single force, for all force is the resistance and tension of opposite tendencies.

Of course there is a most intimate connection and relation between motion and force, but their opposition is the very ground and reason of their connection and relation. But the popular and prevailing scientific notion that all force is the momentum of motion, and therefore that all motion is continuous and persistent, is the grand fallacy that underlies and vitiates all materialistic theories of the universe. This fallacy rests on the evidence of our external senses, which give us an exact inversion of the truth. It appears to them as though the cause of our impressions was these motions, whereas, instead, the feeling, the consciousness of our impressions, is force, of which the motion is the expression.

That force and motion are not one and the same is shown by the fact that two opposite and equal forces would so counteract each other that they would not move, although their tendencies would remain persistent. They could only move by being thrown out of balance, which explains how motion originates as the expression of unbalanced forces seeking equilibrium with their correlative opposites.

It is certain that nothing can be explained by the motions of electrical corpuscles, which, but for their motions would be so much inert, dead matter. If you endow these corpuscles with elasticity, so that they have the power to react with a force equal to that which acts upon them, it is surrendering the materialistic theory and conceding all that this paper claims, by making motion the result of a force that is not motion. In the spiritual theory there is no refuse dead matter, but only alternate correlative opposite forces, which, by their mutual stress constitute the will-power that makes all motion and life.

FRANKLIN SMITH.

Weymouth Heights, Mass.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

MINNESOTA'S NEEDS.

An Old Spiritualist Worker Voices His Views, Based on Long Experience.

To the Editor:—Thousands of thanks for your liberal gift with The Progressive Thinker, "The Unknown Life of Jesus. In this book I found what I have been looking for, for over fifty years. I am very much pleased with it.

In The Progressive Thinker of February 16 I read a letter from a Spiritualist friend, Rolla Stubbs of Long Lake, Minn. It says: "I would be pleased to hear from others on the question of having a camp-meeting some time during the summer months in the state of Minnesota."

There is nothing I missed so much as our camp-meetings we used to have in the Twin Cities of Minnesota years ago, and I am sure we could have camp-meetings now also if they were, as Rolla Stubbs says, carried on in a business-like way. But, how can we get money enough to run this camp-meeting? All the money the state association possibly can with hard struggle get into the treasury, I guess is needed for missionary work, and I think, if the money is used for that purpose, we will reach more people, and will do more good with our money to send out missionaries in the State, than to have a camp-meeting. A camp-meeting will benefit very few people in the state, and very few of the members of the societies out in the country can afford to camp, and other people than Spiritualists will never think of it.

About eight or nine of our chartered societies in this state were, if I remember, not represented at our state convention in Minneapolis, September last. Why were they not? Couldn't they afford it? Or are these societies dead? They may not be dead, all of them, yet. But they are in a condition they need help, and the only way to help this credulous people is to send some good, honest missionaries to help them along. Teach them not only Spiritualism, but teach them also how to attend to their business as a society; teach them how to keep together and make the society progress, and don't let a few go and hide themselves in a dark corner and let the others stay outside, as not wanted; teach them to not be jealous nor selfish, but love each other and work in harmony and peace. Teach them to keep out of their societies dishonest people, because they tear down, instead of building up the truth of Spiritualism; teach them the main object for a Spiritualist society is Love! Love and do good to your fellow-man.

Excuse me for giving these few hints, it is no advice; I only tell what I think is needed to build up a society. I have been a leader for a Spiritualist society for years, and I know how hard it is to pull the string and keep the members together.

Just one word more to our honored missionaries and friends.

On your missionary trip out in the country, don't forget to take along with you a few lyceum books and instruct one or two of the members of each of the half-dead societies to teach their children, and help them to organize a lyceum. To have a lyceum to work for will always keep the members of a society awake and busy, and it is more important to teach the children about the truth of nature than to teach an old person. An old person knows how to investigate Spiritualism, but a child doesn't. A child is not afraid to show his colors, but an old person is foolish enough many times to hide himself or his belief, for his friends so long as he is not very well posted and able to fight for himself, but it is different with children. If a child is convinced of Spiritualism and is a scholar in a lyceum, this child will surely in a short time bring in to the lyceum another child, a friend, and before you know it you will have your lyceum doubled. I have experience of that. As an organizer, conductor and lyceum teacher, I will mention Mrs. Dora Skog of Minneapolis as a lady with great ability for this grand work. She loves children, and children love her. She will make a good, first-class lyceum missionary.

In November last Mrs. S. M. Lowell, from Anoka, Minnesota, a well known lecturer in Spiritualism in Minneapolis, was over here and gave a funeral sermon in the schoolhouse at Pokegama Lake, and the schoolhouse was packed full of listeners from the neighborhood. Most of this good people used to hate Spiritualism on account of lies told here of dishonest mediums from this place, but this sermon of Mrs. Lowell's just astonished this people. Educated, honorable people and good church-members told me it was the best funeral sermon they ever heard in their lives, and a lady, a good church-member and Sunday-school teacher, said: "I have better feeling for the Spiritualists to-day than I had before since I heard the lady, Mrs. Lowell."

This sounds good for the Spiritualists. It is lovely to be praised, but how different it sounds when a Spiritualist tells a lie; then the people turn right around and hate us. Beware of dishonest Spiritualists. The good missionaries break the field and sow the good seed, but if you don't attend to the field, cultivate it, and weed it, the weeds will overgrow the new tender plants and kill them.

Now, dear friend Rolla Stubbs, you must not think that I am against having a camp-meeting in the Twin Cities. No, I am not, but I know it is hard to collect money for that purpose. The missionary work has to be pushed to the front.

A. GOTHSON.

Pine City, Minn.

CURE YOUR RHEUMATISM At Our Expense ABSOLUTELY FREE

We will send to any Sufferer from Rheumatism or Gout "Dalton's Gout and Rheumatic Compound." WITHOUT ANY CHARGE. If used according to directions relief will be had in 5 Days. Our Booklet is free. A Postal Card will bring our Story and Remedy. Why suffer? When you can be relieved entirely free. Are you among the unfortunates who undergo the awful torture of Rheumatism. That grinding pain. That hopeless feeling. Those wretched, miserable days and nights. Don't stand this torture any longer. Write to-day. Will you? Address

THE DALTON CHEMICAL CO., Dept B CINCINNATI, OHIO.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE WIDOW'S MITE, AND OTHER PSYCHIC PHENOMENA. BY ISAAC K. FUNK.

A remarkable book, of intense interest to all, whether Spiritualists or Materialists, investigators or believers. The author has embodied in this book an account of his wonderful personal experience, and has culled from other sources the experiences of others, including scientists of world-wide repute, making a volume of great value. 538 octavo pages. Price, cloth. $2.

MAHOMET, THE ILLUSTRIOUS. By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics. No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. Price, 25 cents.

THE TALMUD Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends. Also brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polang. 350 pp. Price, cloth, $1

MOLLIE FANCHER, The Brooklyn Enigma. An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth. $1.50.

THE RELIGION OF CHEERFULNESS By Sara A. Hubbard. This little booklet sets forth interestingly a religion which all may admire and experience with benefit to body and spirit. Very nice for a holiday present. Daintily printed and bound, in a case. Price 50 cents.

SIX HISTORIC AMERICANS. A Book That Every American Freethinker Will Delight to Own. By John E. Remsburg.

The work consists of two parts, "The Fathers of Our Republic," and "The Saviors of Our Republic." In regard to Paine's religious views, Mr. Remsburg establishes the negative of the following (1) Was Paine an Atheist? (2) Was he a Christian? (3) Did he recant? Page after page of the most radical freethought sentiments are culled from the correspondence and other writings of Franklin and Jefferson, which show that these men were as pronounced in the rejection of Christianity as Paine and Ingersoll. That Washington was not a Christian nor a believer in Christianity. In support of Lincoln's infidelity, he has collected the testimony of more than one hundred witnesses.

The book is handsomely bound in cloth, giving fine portraits of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant; also portrait of the author.

This book contains 365 pages, printed on heavy paper, well bound in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING. Hints and helps in memorizing figures, lists of words, prose and poetic literature, new language, etc. By B. F. Austin, author of several other works. Price, 50 cents.

A. P. A. MANUAL A complete expose of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association. A book for all patriotic American citizens. Price, 15 cents, or two for 25 cents.

—THE— Christs of the Past and Present. By MOSES HULL. A comparison of the Christ-work or Mediumship of Biblical Messiahs and the conditions they required, with similar manifestations in Modern Spiritualism. This is a good work to study for arguments with which to meet the very common orthodox question, "Why do you always require conditions for your spiritual manifestations?" Cloth bound, 85 cents; paper 25 cents. For sale at this office.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE. PART I.--The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gestefeld, and Francis E Barr.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE.--PART II. Judges, Kings, Prophets and Apostles. Comments on the Old and New Testaments, from Joshua to Revelation. The comments are keen, bright, spicy, full of wit, the work of radical thinkers who are not ignorant of the higher criticism. There is not a dull page in either of these books, but each is a galaxy of the bright minds of the day and throw a new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. Price of each, paper, 50 cents.

The Wonders of Life. By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

MEDIUMSHIP and its DEVELOPMENT, and how to Mesmerize to Assist Development. By W. H. Bach. Paper 25 cents.

PROTISTA.

The Kingdom of the Unseen, as Explored by Hudson Tuttle.

(Continued from No. 905.)

Protista—The World-Builders.

Lime, iron and coal are the most important factors of civilization. Without them the great achievements of the present in the arts and invention would be impossible. Their aggregation in beds is one of the most fortunate of accidents, or from another standpoint, providential provisions. They are among the most abundant of the elements. Yet there was a time in earth's history when they did not exist as distinct, but were mingled in the heterogeneous mass of the crust. Their separation could not have been effected by chemical means, or crystallization. It is to be seen that it was through the activity of living beings that the layers of limestone, marble and chalk were spread out; beds of iron laid away, and the coal fields formed. The beings that performed this Atlas labor we call world-builders. Were they giants with unparalleled energy? Were their size proportioned to their mighty task? In the answer lies the most astonishing revelations of science.

In the Pacific seas there are countless islands which are no more than coral reefs growing from the tops of lofty mountains, or around the borders of sunken volcanoes. From Japan to Australia, the wide sea is dotted with these coraline formations. These reefs are pure limestone secreted from the water by these beings. If the crust of the earth be examined, every age will be found to have its strata of limestone down to the Silurian, and the growth of reefs in our own time is not comparable with the results of former days.

Bog iron ore, in places favorable, is yet in process of formation, and by it the agencies employed may be learned, yet we cannot comprehend the vastness of time's duration for the accumulation of mountainous deposits. At one period of the earth's history, the conditions for coal formation were especially favorable, although it occurs outside the limits of that era, and at the present time peat bogs in a small way may be regarded as initial coal beds. At the beginning of the coal age the carbon now solidified in coal and the tissues of plants clothing the surface of the earth, was diffused in the atmosphere. Before air-breathing animals could exist this had to be extracted. Humidity and heat favored the growth of vegetation, especially of those forms we propose to describe. The part they have played in the fabrication of the world has not been recognized, and the story is as weird and surprising as the tales of the Arabian Nights.

Of all the forces employed in changing the face of the earth by rock formation, probably none exceed that of micro-organisms. What were these beings that piled up mountain masses and spread out thick strata of rock over thousands of miles? Infinitesimal monads, mere specks of jelly, invisible, or just discernible by the unassisted eye. It is a rule in geology that the changes in the past were brought about by the same forces that operate in the present, the supposition being that all forces are continuous and without break. From the first limestone deposited in the earliest formations, to the present, the chief agents have been the Foramaniferae and corals. The name of the first is derived from the perforations in their shells which are of wonderful form and diversity. Their bodies are composed of gelatinous sarcode which fills the shell and extends through the perforations in long thread-like filaments, interlacing and forming a net around the animal. When a monad approaches sufficiently near, these filaments are thrown around it. They also act as roots of plants, not only absorbing carbonate of lime but organic matter held in solution or suspension, thus making it available for the sustenance of higher animals. That they absorb organic matter is no more difficult to understand than the absorption and secretion of calcium carbonate, silex and iron by the different species of these monads. All the metal calcium in form of its salts, was held in solution in the primal ocean. It has all been absorbed into living organisms and secreted as calcium carbonate with the slight exception of small deposits of phosphate, also the product of living organisms.

Figure 11.

1—Coccoliths; 2—Foramanifera; 3—Coral branch; 4—An individual polyp of the colony.

It is lavishly distributed in all geological formations, from the Trenton and Laurentian to the present. Vast as are these deposits, there is not a grain of their substance that has not been secreted from the water by the action of animal life, and that mostly by beings imperceptible to the unassisted eye. Not only once has it been secreted but over and over countless times. Made into the tinted shell, the opalescent pearl, the tooth and fang, or bony skeleton by turns, and the wreck and ruin of all fell on the ocean floor, accumulating as the centuries and thousands of centuries went by. For nature is in no haste and a thousand years is as a second on her timepiece. Other beings contributed shell and bone but the ooze brought up by the dredge from the depths of the North Atlantic, gave a percentage of ninety-five to the Foramaniferae. Over this vast area a deposit is being made identical with the chalk.

Figure 11 shows the forms of the shells of two of the many species of Foramanifera. Other forms are shown in Figure 12, which represents a section of chalk, the diameter of less than a pin's head. These engravings give some idea of the form, but nothing of the exquisite perfection of finish, the carving and markings of these minute shells. They are voluted, embellished, in colors, or iridescent with the lustre of pearls, for seemingly no reason but the esthetic delight for beauty, expended on forms too small ever to be seen by the human vision.

The Coral as a World-Builder.

The coral is a world-builder and though of no higher organization, its size makes it more conspicuous. The voyager in Pacific seas observes far across the stretch of waves, a line of breakers and on approach is delighted by the view of a ring-like island rising from the sea like a fairy creation. The shore is sand as white as snow contrasting with the deep blue of the surrounding water. From the intensely green and luxuriant masses of verdure arise magnificent cocoa palms and within the charmed circle is a lagoon of perfectly still water. There are countless such islands, as the Lacadives, Moldives, the Low Archipelago, the Caroline and Society groups. The first two extend in a double row for nearly a thousand miles.

Figure 12.

Section of chalk, highly magnified, showing the architects of the "White Cliffs" of England.

As the coral cannot grow below twenty fathoms, it is only on reefs not exceeding that depth that they become attached. As most of the coral reefs have their foundations below that depth it has been held that since they started the vast area of the Pacific has been slowly sinking. These coral islands are mountain peaks, the visible remains of a submerged continent. When did this submergence take place? Not so very long ago as time is counted in the growth of worlds. The coral reefs have a marked beginning and if the rate of their growth could be determined, the time since they began formation would be calculated to a close approximation. These circular islands or Atolls, are produced by the coral attaching to the rims of craters of extinct volcanoes. In some cases a rocky peak rises from the lagoon. Such are not formed on craters but in the beginning the peak stood as far above the water as the foundation of the coral reef or within a few fathoms of this height. Near the water line a growth of coral started and grew upward as the mountain subsided. This would produce a zone between the mountain and the reef filled with water which would increase in width as the depression continued.

There is an endless variety of species which so shade into each other that classification is perplexing. The red coral of the Mediterranean is the most valuable. The Madrepore is the reef former assisted species named from their imitative forms, brain, mushroom, star, etc. The Madrepore once attached to the rocks grows upward, extending its branches in every direction and unites into a solid rock as the base is formed. Over the surface of this stony skeleton is a jelly-like substance held in common by all the polyps which appear as buds over its surface. The stony framework is not "built up" by the polyps any more than the mollusk builds its shell; it is secreted.

The protuberances on the surface of the gelatinous substance are the polyps, and when they unfold their tentacles they look like exquisite blossoms (see Fig 11, Nos. 3 and 4). In the center of these petals is the mouth opening directly into the digestive sac which is hollowed out of the protoplasmic substance. Their growth is by budding something like a tree. The bud may go on extending into a branch or if thrown off it becomes a free individual, floats away, and attaching itself begins a new colony.

Looking down from the still surface of the waters of the lagoon, these coral groves present a scene of weird and exquisite beauty. Algae of marvelous delicacy of structure, waving fronds of the sea-fan, sea anemones like lovely flowers colored as art cannot imitate, the rainbow-tinted fishes sporting or feeding among the branches, present a picture more like a dream than reality. Life in fantastic forms everywhere! The water teeming with living beings and the debris building the rock-barrier of the reef. On the outer side grow the hardier kinds while the more delicate are protected in the quiet waters of the lagoon. It is one of the most astonishing features of these beings that their soft and plastic substance can withstand the ceaseless impact of the waves.

Should at some subsequent age these mountains be uplifted, the strange phenomenon will be presented of their caps being formed of coraline rock.

The coral is only a larger growth of the amoeba and hence its mention with the invisible monad. Great as has been their accomplishments, these are not comparable to the performance of their invisible congeners. Surveys mode of the floor of the Atlantic show that over immense areas there is being deposited a stratum almost identical with chalk. It is formed almost entirely of the shells of microscopic Foramaniferae.

Among the most abundant species in this ooze is the Globigerina, the shell of which is made up of several convoluted chambers. Scattered through the mass are what have been named Coccoliths, the life-history of which is little known (see Figure 11, No. 1). Whether algae, or allied to the Foramanifera with which they are found, has not been determined. Their shells are like two watch glasses joined together by a column, one glass being smaller than the other and the whole covered with gelatinous sarcode. They are found in colonies embedded in a jelly which is held in common and is a bond of union. They are among the smallest objects that can well be studied by the magnifier. They are from 1-2700th to 1-11000th of an inch in length. This means that a cup containing a cubic inch will hold one trillion, three hundred billions of these shells.

Sir Wyvill Thomson supposed that all these forms lived at or near the surface of the ocean and that there was a continual "rain" of their shells after their death to the sea floor. It has however, been discovered that the Foramaniferae live and flourish at a depth of two thousand fathoms. However this may be all these beings that live at the surface or in the depth of the sea, fall to the bottom and add to the deposit. How much is added in a single year? Probably not an appreciable thickness. A conservative estimate would be an inch in a century. One hundred feet would represent one hundred and twenty thousand years. Allowing for even more rapid augmentation, the thickness of some strata of limestone, or chalk, would require a million years.

The cliff limestone represents clearly defined coral reefs, and the shells of the mollusks then inhabiting the seas are well preserved, for the accumulation has suffered slight change except by the cementing process which has consolidated it into rock. In certain localities the reef, or sedimentary deposit has been subjected to great heat and pressure of superincumbent deposits, and in a semi-fluid state allowed to slowly crystallize. This heat at times has been so intense that the organic impurities have been burned out, producing the beautiful snowy marble, or when other minerals were present, exquisite clouded and veined effects. In this form every trace of the origin of the rock is destroyed, yet the steps in the transformation are observable, from the unchanged rock to the finished marble.

The ores of iron were all first secreted by forms of these micro-organisms. The process is seen at present in the formation of bog ore, which is composed of the shells the material of which is iron instead of lime.

In shallow ponds or lakes these beings flourish, and at the end of a brief life fall to the bottom where there is an accumulation of the bog ore. When this bog ore is subjected to heat and pressure by the uptilting of strata, or lava overflows, it is changed to the hard glistening substance as found in the Superior mines. But under whatever form it exists, every atom of the ore was secreted from the water in which it was held in solution, and without these micro-organisms it would be at the present time universally diffused and hence of no use in the service of man.

There is no other substance that will take the place of iron. It seems to have been endowed with qualities by an all-comprehensive wisdom, for the express requirements of man, and without it civilization would be impossible. It has furnished the means of defense by which the advancing peoples have defended themselves against the attacks of savages, thereby preventing a repetition of the destruction of the progressive element by surrounding barbarians, so oft repeated in ancient days. It has furnished the material for the embodiment of inventive skill, and made possible, the railroad, telegraph, the new ships of commerce and defense. And all this is due to the labor of micro-organisms, scarcely visible to the unassisted eye.

Without coal, iron could not be reduced from its combinations. Coal is an equally important factor of civilization. Its vast deposits, perhaps, are directly referable to luxuriant growths of forests, yet the bog in which these forests grew contributed more to the accumulating sedimentary strata by means of the micro-plant-organisms which flourished in the stagnant waters, than all the towering ferns, Lycopodia, Equisetae, and other species which have left their record on the formation. The micro-plants have left no trace of their presence, although by their infinite numbers, the great task of extracting the carbon of the air from oxygen, and depositing it in the oozy peat, afterwards by pressure of imposed strata and heat transformed into coal, is referable mainly to these invisible workers.

The vastness and utility of the work here described of the micro-organisms, may be better comprehended, when the primal state of the earth is considered. The rent crust, over which spread the steaming ocean, was homogeneous rock in which all the elements not gaseous were blended. This rock-crust had first to be disintegrated and dissolved in water before the elements and their combinations could be separated. This separation and deposition was in great measure the work of purely chemical forces. There however remained many elements, as iron, lime (calcium), carbon and a few others, which only could be aggregated by vital forces. The first two are held in solution in the sea, carbon as carbonic oxide, in the atmosphere. The low plant organisms, assisted by the micro-organisms, gathered the carbonic oxide, and tearing the carbon from the oxygen, built up their tissues and the accumulation of these in low-lying bog and marsh, through vast periods of time, under heat and pressure, became beds of coal. The freed oxygen returned to the atmosphere, purified and prepared it for the sustenance of air-breathing animals. Nothing can be more assured than the dependence of the coal formation on this source, and without these lower forms of life, there would have been no deposits of that substance of practical value.

It is equally certain that without the micro-world builders, iron and lime would be diffused through the rocks, or in solution and thus unavailable.

The same process is seen in the extraction of iodine from the sea, by means of sea-weed. The amount of this element in solution in sea-water is so small that it is quite indeterminable, yet the kelp gathers that infinitesimal quantity, stores it, and is, as it were a mine from which it is obtained. Had there in some past age been a vast accumulation of this kelp and submergence beneath silt, there might have been formed beds of iodine-bearing rock. Such changes might happen to a Sargossa sea, yet in the calends of the ages this never has come to pass, and the decaying seaweed has returned to the waters the elements it had taken.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

AT THE DOOR.

I thought myself indeed secure,
So fast the door, so firm the lock;
But, lo! he toddling comes to lure
My parent ear with timorous knock.

My heart were stone could it withstand
The sweetness of my baby's plea—
That timorous baby knocking and
"Please let me in—it's only me."

I threw aside the unfinished book,
Regardless of its tempting charms,
And, opening wide the door, I took
My laughing darling in my arms.

Who knows but in Eternity,
I, like a truant child shall wait
The glories of a life to be,
Beyond the Heavenly Father's gate?

And will that Heavenly Father heed
The truant's supplicating cry,
As at the outer door I plead,
"'Tis I, O Father! only I"?

—Eugene Field.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

THE GOOD THAT MEN DO, LIVES AFTER THEM.

(Continued from page 5.)

knew nothing of these, but the writer of these lines knew of much of them.

Spiritualism was not mentioned in his will, and for this reason. He did his work for our cause without reference to his testamentary rilling. It will be remembered that several years ago Brother Mayer gave in fee simple the handsome brick building in Washington to the N. S. A., that had served and has since, as its headquarters. This building was estimated as worth at least ten thousand dollars. At the time of the gift, the donor stipulated that the Spiritualists at large should contribute by personal donations from pennies to dollars a sum that would equal his gift, and thus enrich the N. S. A. treasury to the amount of ten thousand dollars in cash which would enable the organization to carry on its good work for our Cause. After much persuasion and many appeals the sum was raised, every penny of which went to the N. S. A., though for some curious reason many people thought it went to Mr. Mayer for his building. Such a conclusion was worse than absurd, but it is even held to-day by some obtuse persons who cannot believe that the generous man did not receive something for this N. S. A. Home. But all he received was the heart-felt gratitude of thousands who bless his name and revere his memory. A year after he deeded the Headquarters to the N. S. A., the same great heart offered to give the National body the next spacious brick building, number 602, Pa. Ave., S. E., if the Spiritualists at large, by dollar subscriptions or otherwise, would raise another large sum of money for the treasury, and thus make the National Association largely independent in its revenues and leave its missionary and charitable works uncrippled for lack of funds. But our people did not take kindly to this offer; he was misrepresented by some and misunderstood by others. He had the deed to this proposed annex executed, and went to the next convention in 1903 with said deed in his pocket intending to present it to the Association, but the indifference to his hopes and desires manifested by many of the delegates chilled him. During the time before convention we had been appealing for contributions in order to show him that the country desired to place the National body on a more self-supporting basis; we only received fifteen dollars toward the project. The convention displayed no enthusiasm on the subject, and he retained the deed, sick at heart at the apathy of the Spiritualists at large, towards what he believed to be the grandest institution of the age.

But Spiritualism and the N. S. A. do not suffer in the passing of this GOOD MAN.

That deed was destroyed, but rallying from his disappointment and with his ever generous soul aflame in behalf of spiritual progress, he about a year later confided his intentions concerning the National Association, to its secretary, with a sacred charge for her to attend to the final work after he had left the body. These intentions were soon carried into effect and materialized in the execution of a deed conveying without restrictions to the N. S. A. the following named property in the city of Washington, D. C., adjoining the present headquarters of the National Association, viz: Dwellings and lands of number 300 and 302 Sixth St., S. E. and number 602, the former proposed annex, Pa. ave., S. E. This property takes in an entire corner on Capitol hill, a beautiful locality and most desirable section of the city. The Sixth street houses are frame dwellings and tenanted by first class families. The Pa. avenue house is a large brick building containing thirteen rooms and is also rented by desirable tenants. The value of this property including the N. S. A. headquarters building is estimated at somewhere about forty thousand dollars.

Mr. Mayer did not at once present the N. S. A. with this deed. He left it in the care of his lawyer, and confided the fact to myself, charging secrecy until his demise, and then for me to at once secure the deed and have it recorded in the District office. This was a sacred charge. In his last illness we talked of it, and he reiterated his request. At 6:15 a. m., March 13, word was brought to me of the decease of our friend; at 8 o'clock I was in the home of his lawyer making an appointment to be at his office in the forenoon; at 11 I had the deed in the hands of the recorder and had secured his receipt therefor; in the Evening Star of that date announcement was made of the transfer of said property from Theodore J. Mayer to the National Spiritualists' Association.

Already have I been asked what Mr. Mayer did for Spiritualism. Did he leave anything? To those faithful souls who asked because of generous interests in him and in our Cause I am glad to give this testimony and information; to those curious inquirers who might have given something to aid humanity but who have held on to their pence in spite of his call and the appeals of our pension fund, who make me heartsick by their holding back and selfishness, who hurt him by their indifference to his large aims and generous plans, I am proud to say, HE DID NOBLY. HIS WORKS WILL LIVE AFTER HIM.

So much there is to say of this noble life, so little that can be said in an issue of a weekly paper, I had broached the subject to him of sometime, when free from society and official duties, arranging and compiling details of his life that they might be preserved in the annals of Spiritualistic literature, for the great part of his spiritual blessing and of the blessing he gave the world in every form came from his introduction to Spiritualism; it had been a silent thought with us that this biographical work might be done, but alas, he has departed and only these simple tributes to his work and largeness of heart and soul remains as my memorial to his life.

In his will, he devised the sum of seventy-nine thousand dollars to public benefactions; this to be distributed in stated sums, from $2,000 to $10,000, as follows: To the Aid Society for the blind; Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital; for benefit of poor patients in wards; to "The Gruetli Verin," a Swiss association; to the Swiss Benevolent Association; Children's hospital; National Homeopathic Hospital; Washington City Orphan Asylum; German Orphan Asylum; Washington Hospital for Foundlings; to Garfield Memorial Hospital for poor patients in wards; Home for Incurables; to Emergency Hospital for poor patients; all of Washington, D. C., and to the Rupert Home for aged people in Anacostia, close to Washington.

After leaving bequests and remembrances to numerous relatives and to one of his friends, the will disposed of the remainder of the estate to the only son of the testator, Mr. Theodore Albert Mayer, who is himself a Spiritualist and a member of the First Association of Spiritualists in Washington. What more can be said of his interest in spiritual progress and humanitarian affairs? Much might be written, how he labored for the poor, made contracts with the public institutions to supply flour at a low rate and yet give a good article that the inmates might have good bread to eat; how he kept down the price of bread when the bakers threatened to raise it because the authorities demanded full measurement for every loaf; all and more might be told and the half would not be revealed. We must simply pause and say, let his life tell for itself. The glorious floral offerings at his funeral told of the love of his fellows, that of the N. S. A., an exquisite arrangement of American Beauty roses, lilies of the valley and violets; and a beautiful tribute of magnificent carnations, from the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington reposed on the casket and breathed our love to him in spirit. One splendid tribute bore the inscription: "Peer of Noble Men;" we were told that it was from a Swiss Association.

Only three score years of life; yet in that sixty years what a world of good he accomplished. On April 1st, 1906, he spent some pleasant hours in our home at N. S. A. Headquarters, dining with us here and with Mr. and Mrs. Fugitt, a quiet family party; from the spirit-side we gave a birthday poem which was published for him by The Progressive Thinker of April 15. In the light of his ascension it may be fitting to repeat the same here:

A BIRTHDAY GREETING.

Given From the Spirit Side of Life by Mrs. M. T. Longley, in Honor of That Grand Worker in the Cause of Spiritualism, Theodore J. Mayer, on the Occasion of His Sixtieth Birthday Anniversary.

We come to-day with hearts aflame,
Dear friend, with love for you.
We bring you joy in friendship's name
From hearts so warm and true.
We come to greet you here this hour with word and song of praise,
And wish for you an added power
To strengthen all your days.

We know this anniversary day
Is one of great import;
We know that here across the way
You hold an earthly fort;
For much of labor angels do
Through your good might and will,
They love you with affection true,
Their zeal doth you infill.

For three score years on earth, your life
Has been a tower of good,
With blessedness and beauty rife,
And when you're understood
The world shall praise you more and more
For works that you have done.
Your name shall ring from shore to shore,
From rise to set of sun.

Your triumphs are of Soul, dear friend,
They shall not pass away.
And now from heaven the angels bend
To bless you here this day;
They bring you benedictions sweet,
Congratulations bright;
They lay before your passing feet
Rare flowers of delight.

Sweet blossoms fair of radiant bloom
To brighten life this day—
The air is rich with choice perfume
Along your mortal way;
And angel voices here and now,
In soulful, solemn tone,
Repeat in harmony this vow,
That though you walk alone,

Your path with wondrous light shall glow,
And you with added strength
Shall onward march o'er pain and woe,
While victory at length
Shall plume your banner with its power,
And crown your life with light,
So, in this anniversary hour
We recognize your might.

Oh! you have nobly done your part
To conquer human ill—
Yea, by the Spirit's magic art
The Soul's diviner skill;
For error hath been smitten sore,
And Doubt hath sped away,
And earth is brighter evermore
That you are here to-day.

And, oh, we wish a glad new year,
This anniversary day;
With songs of harmony and cheer
We smile upon your way,
For from the courts of yonder heaven,
Where hides no taint of sin,
This promise beautiful is given,
Life's victories you shall win.

MARY T. LONGLEY.

Washington, D. C.

A Curious Combination.

A few days ago the Good Templars of Massachusetts petitioned the Legislature of that State to grant women the right to vote on the question of license. A hearing was held before the Committee on Elections, and according to the press dispatches, Charles R. Saunders, of Boston, counsel for the Massachusetts Association opposed to the further extension of suffrage to women, appeared in opposition, as did also Edward F. Hollis, representing the Massachusetts Wine and Spirit Dealers' Association. The opposition of the latter association is logical, but what the woman suffragist would like to know is this: Are the organized "Antis" working with the organized liquor dealers in a systematic effort to prevent any fraction of suffrage being extended to women?

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies; a Review of Rev. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated attacks upon Spiritualism." By Moses Hull. Price, 10 cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, phyiological and psychic science Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price, 25 cents.

AGAINST WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

A Country's Moral Improvement Must Begin in the Homes.

While unpacking my trunks at the present sunny home in foreign lands, I came across various numbers of my dear old friend, The Progressive Thinker, that I had been obliged to pack away unread. This accounts for the delay in commenting on Mrs. Corbin's views about the question of Woman Suffrage. These views struck me as almost identical with my own, presented a couple of years ago to some daily paper, but returned to me as "unavailable for publication."

The suffrage question was at the time growing in popularity. I did not present said essay to The Progressive Thinker; for I knew that the majority of Spiritualists was on the side of Susan B. Anthony.

But let me confess right here, that I am far from opposing her in principle. On the contrary, the present writer has always been a champion of equal rights between man and man, and between man and woman as well. However, principles are not alone to be consulted, when society attempts measures of far-reaching importance. The social, mental, and moral situation of a country command our first consideration, while at the same time justice should be our guiding star in seeking the best and safest road towards human progress and happiness.

All honor and gratitude for the fearless champions of Woman Suffrage! They fought for the principle of equality; did not labor in vain; though the Susan B. Anthony, and her devoted staff did not labor in vain; though the direction of their goal may be altered in the course of time.

Lifted upon heights where the real conditions of the human family lie open at her feet in every direction, the noble Susan will have at this present time greatly modified her former views. Her keen intellect will now realize the fact that considering woman's mental and moral development of to-day in general, only a small minority could be expected to cast a better vote than men do at the present time; and that the majority, including the lowest types, the ignorant, the superficial, the frivolous, etc., would not only make the already complicated proceedings more complicated still, but would, from a moral standpoint, make matters worse than they are. We may differ about "home being the only legitimate domain of women;" but surely Mrs. Corbin is right, maintaining that women can do more good in taking care of their homes and children than by voting; and her words "good citizens and voters" squarely hit the mark. Who, indeed, if not the parents, are in first line answerable for all bad citizens and bad voters?

What about the mothers and wives of all these men?

Why did they not rear them to become better men and citizens? The woman who is incapable of doing her highest duty at home, will be less capable of doing it in public.

Capacity must precede ambition. A country's moral improvement must begin in the homes. By the time woman grasps the full importance of her highest vocation she will cease to ask for the ballot; understanding that she has anyhow the first and best chance of influencing public affairs, by instilling sound moral principles into the souls of those within her care.

At the same time our enlightened citizens will have found better modes of exercising the right of voting and will have done away with those demoralizing political races that are only a farce and a libel on true liberty. Intelligent America will soon find out that quality is of more value than quantity and that a limited number of honest, well-informed voters will be a better guarantee for the future happiness of their country than the indifferent thousands now pressing around the polls.

H. STRAUB.

Letter From Seattle, Wash.

To the Editor:—It has been some time since I sent any word of greeting to you and the readers of The Progressive Thinker, but I have not been idle for all that. I have had an occasional call to work for the societies at Puyallup, Snohomish and Monroe and have found the people earnest and sincere and extremely anxious for the truth. In these places as in many others the frauds and fakes have sown the seed of suspicion and ridicule, and the earnest, honest workers have much to combat.

How I rejoice in the stand you have taken in this matter, and I am sure you will have the support and hearty co-operation of every honest, self-respecting Spiritualist in the land.

The work in the First Society of Seattle is progressing, and the society is in a most excellent financial condition. We are enjoying the lectures Mr. Barrett is delivering, and consider ourselves very fortunate indeed to be able to have him with us. How any one who has ever known Harrison D. Barrett can accuse him of being aught but a friend to the mediums and a staunch advocate for TRUE Spiritualism, is beyond my ken.

He is not going to stand and keep silent when the cause he loves is being desecrated and held up to ridicule, and surely no one would hold him in their esteem if he did. The stand he has taken for the purifying of the cause is not only a noble one, but one that has and does require more than ordinary courage and all self-respecting workers should rally round him and give him their undivided support. His stay with us will soon be over, and we shall miss him.

The last Sunday in February and the first Sunday in March, we enjoyed a visit from Rev. Dr. Fritch of Denver, Col.

On the 31st, Easter Sunday, too, by the way, the First Society will celebrate the anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, and we are anticipating a glorious time. The Ladies' Aid will serve one of their famous dinners from 5 to 7:30.

EVELYN L. POMEROY.

BOOKS BY—

LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25, in this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful." Leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."

CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE, or Death as an Event in Life. cloth, $1.00 A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume.

CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the Wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends Discovered, not made; A Psychological Problem; The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Seeming Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in sorrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth, $1.25. Lillian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decated cloth, $2.00.

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, With Portrait. Decorated cloth, $1.00.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price, 15 cents.

The Religion of Spiritualism,

Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By the Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price, $1.00. A valuable book for the money.

Curtivation of Personal Magnetism

A treatise on Human Culture. By Leroy Bertier, anthropologist and author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price $1.00.

Practical Methods to Insure Success.

A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price 10 cents.

Force and Matter By Ludwig Buechner. A celebrated book. A profound work upon a profound subject. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism,

A Menace to American Civilization. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. A trenchant and masterly treatise. Price, 25 cents.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man; Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How It Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary: "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office.

Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

CONCENTRATION.

A Valuable Work.

Concentration, Meditation and Inspiration. How to develop these desirable gifts according to the most approved methods of ancient and modern teachers, together with a set of six symbols comprising six months' study. By Laura G. Fixen.

A course of practical experimental lessons, of especial value and assistance to those who desire to be benefited by the development of powers of concentration of thought, clear meditation and superior inspiration.

Sent complete for 50 cents.

A Study of

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

By Lilian Whiting.

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music-Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.

LOVES OF THE POETS. The Prefigured Friend; Vita Nouva; "One Day, My Siren."

IN THAT NEW WORLD. Plea and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.

ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.

LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.

For Sale at this office.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS

A real visit with friends on the other side of life, and a familiar talk. By Spirit Samuel Bowles; Carrie E. S. Twing, Medium. Price 30c.

VOLNEY'S RUINS

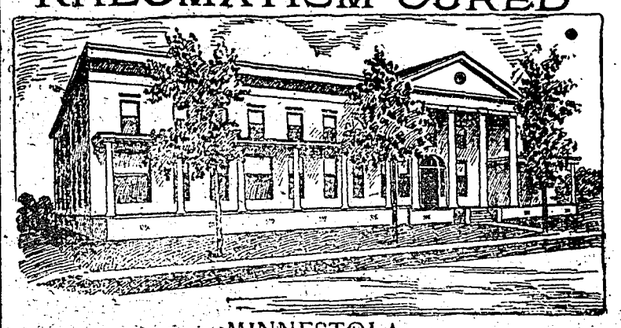
—AND—

THE LAW OF NATURE,

TO WHICH IS ADDED

Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical Notice by Count Daru, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor;

Also, a Map of the Astrological Heavens of the Ancients.



Printed on heavy paper, from new plates, in large, clear type, with portrait and illustrations. One vol., post 8vo, 248 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind, and clearly points out the sources of human ignorance and misery. The author is supposed to meet in the ruins of Palmyra an apparition or phantom, which explains the true principles of society, and the causes of both the prosperity and the ruin of ancient states. A general assembly of the nations is at length convened, a legislative body formed, the source and origin of religion, of government, and of laws discussed, and the Law of Nature—founded on justice and equity—is finally proclaimed to an expectant world.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

They Must Reconstruct Their Creed.

A late publication is on the book market with over 5,000 quotations, from more than 3,000 authors, poets, philosophers, editors, artists, clergymen, college professors, statesmen and others, antagonizing the dominant religion, and the false teaching of the priesthood. These only represent the writers; but back of those who have placed themselves on record as disproving the creeds which have been transmitted to us from our remote barbarian ancestors, there are countless millions who keep silent under the impression they would be ruined in business, or in social relations by a public change of faith.

Everything shows the churches are completely honey-combed with free thought, and give assurance that the nightmare of purgatorial fires, of salvation by faith, of a heaven and hell of happiness and woe, contingent on priestly pleasure, must give way to advanced civilization and nobler thoughts.

Churchmen are clutching at Spiritualism to save them from annihilation; but they must discard their creeds, and build on a firmer foundation before the spirit world will recognize them as worthy their regard.

Heaven hasten the day when policy on the one hand, and fear on the other, will not shape opinions of the immortal life.

Doubling Up.

The union of the Congregationalists, the Methodist Protestants, and the United Brethren, is reported as practically accomplished. Action was had at a general council of the three denominations in session in Chicago March 20. The matter had been referred to a committee, which reported favorably on the proposition, and the report was adopted.

All Protestant sects should unite in one body; then they should revise the Bible the Catholic priests made for them; then eliminate its hell, its devil, its war spirit, its obscenity, vulgarity and indelicate allusions, with its false science, and any other objectionable features in the nature of fiction; relegate their barbarous creeds to the ages which formulated them; substitute knowledge for belief, and education in place of faith, then join the Spiritualists in a zealous effort to convert to the truth the reconstructed Roman pagans, posing as Catholics, the parent of Protestantism.

This done there would be little need of prisons, gallows, and electrocuting chairs.

An Instructive Text.

Some pesky infidel intimates the passage in Isaiah 7:20, conveys the idea the Lord was the proprietor of a barber shop. We quote the inspired word:

"In the same day [the day he whistled, otherwise hissed, for the fly, mentioned in verse 18,] shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired."

Now there is no hint at a barber shop, as the unholy critic intimates. It simply tells us "the Lord will shave with a hired razor." It evidently referred to a period before barbers were accustomed to shave themselves; and the prophet wanted the world to understand the Lord was too poor to own a razor, so he used a hired one when his beard needed to be shaved. It is hoped he has now overcome the necessity of hiring a razor, as they have become cheaper, better, and more common in these modern times. Besides, his "cattle on a thousand hills" are convertible into pocket money at will.

The text serves a valuable purpose in conveying to the modern mind the character of the Lord the so-called Jews worshiped. He was only a large and well-developed man, in form, passions and habit, like other men.

The Birth of a Spirit.

The writer listened with great interest a few months ago to a discourse by Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, during which she related her own experience in watching the birth of a spirit as it escaped from its mortal tenement. The before inanimate body, tenantless, assumed that condition known to us as death, while the disenthralled spirit was met by friends who conducted it to its new home awaiting it in spirit life.

We have read many accounts of similar events, all agreeing that the spirit escaping mortality is attached to the body by a sort of umbilical cord; that until that cord is ruptured earth-life remains.

A. J. Davis, in one volume of his "Great Harmonia," describes his own observation, while on p. 166n., of Judge Edmonds' and Dr. Dexter's "Spiritualism" is given an extract from Dr. Dexter's Journal, under date of Nov. 24, 1851, where he gives his own view of a death scene, and a birth into the higher life. He says:

"My wife's brother-in-law, residing in Brooklyn, has been ill for some four or five weeks, and gradually falling away, so it was evident he could not live long. On Sunday, the 17th instant, I spent most of the day with him. In the course of the day he revived enough to converse with me about his approaching departure. I took occasion to explain to him, as I had learned from these communications, what death is, and what the other state of existence is, on which he is about to enter. He was able to understand me. * * *

"I remained with him the whole of the following Saturday night, and returned to my lodgings early Sunday morning. I lay down on my sofa in the course of the forenoon, and there received very vivid impressions of the manner of his death.

"He had breathed his last, and I saw what I took to be his spirit body issue from his mortal body in the shape of a cloudy frame, while directly over it, and in the room where it lay, it assumed the human form; but it seemed to have no intelligence. Suddenly it lighted up, was alive and intelligent. I was impressed it was caused by the soul leaving his fleshly body and entering its spiritual body. He looked around as if in doubt where he was, but immediately seemed to recollect his present condition, and to know he was in the spirit world. Then he turned his looks to his family and friends who were around his corpse, and bestowed on them a look of great affection. Soon he was wafted away on a flood of light far in the distance, until he faded from view."

We have condensed this narrative, being careful to preserve the idea.

Questioned in a seance at which Gov. Tallmadge and Judge Edmonds were present, the medium, Dr. Dexter, said: "The new body was composed of new material, refined and sublimated, but still entirely material."

And these, doubtless the infinitesimal corpuscles so well described by Prof. Larkin, and with the diminutive weight the Boston doctors detected with their scales, described in an article in our last week's issue.

Verily, the long search for a material soul seems rewarded at last.

We Have the Figures Now.

The poet told us: "Fools rush in where angels dare not tread." The Progressive Thinker never applies the reproachful term, fool, to any one, remembering an orthodox divinity said: "Whosoever shall say, 'thou fool' is in danger of hell-fire." A good prophet, with holy instincts, said: "Anger resteth in the bosom of fools," so we are careful not to imitate even "the Lord" in this respect; for the inspired word says: "He is angry with the wicked every day."

But we do question the wisdom of our late critic who challenged proof that eighteen millions of persons had been virtually sacrificed on the altar of the Christian church in its propagation.

We are in receipt of figures, compiled with great care by a learned antiquarian and chronologist, with time and place, whose footings reveal the astounding number of 260,065,912 of human lives wrecked in establishing Christianity.

In looking over the tables of our correspondent, we find he makes no mention of the lives wasted by the Teutonic Knights, nor of the Sacred Sword Bearers, who almost desolated many of the provinces of Central Europe in their zeal to make successful the banner of the cross. Neither does he refer to the bloody Thirty Years' War, which Schiller says, "devastated whole countries, destroyed harvests, and reduced towns and villages to ashes, and opened graves for multitudes of combatants. For half a century," he continues, "it smothered the glimmering sparks of civilization in Germany, and threw back the improving manners of the country into their pristine barbarity and wilderness. All this was effected by religion."

And further, our good correspondent neglected to note the numerous tribal wars and loss of life in darkest Africa, incited by the Slave Trade, which his "Holiness, the Pope," granted a permit to prosecute against the heathen. Then there was the terrible loss of life during the Middle Passage. And we shudder as we think of our own protracted war of the rebellion, with its terrible loss of life and treasure, all in consequence of an attempt to prolong the infernal institution which the Pope, as the head and official organ of Christianity, was the instrument in founding.

During the 1572 years of discord and violence since the Nicean Council, in A. D. 325, instead of the modest eighteen millions of lives sacrificed by Christianity in propagating its faith, as mentioned by Dr. Oswald, to which our critic took exception, it is probable, if the record was complete, it would embrace five hundred millions —one-third the entire population of the earth at this time, and all because as its reputed founder declared, "I came not to bring peace, but a sword."

A Cannibal Feast.

The Eucharist, also known as the Lord's Supper, seems to have been a sort of a cannibalist feast. "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life." So said Jesus, as reported John 6:54. Bread and wine is substituted for that flesh and blood by Christians, because the real flesh and blood ceased to supply the needs, so by prayer and miraculous interference a substitute is gained, and now it is a sort of fictitious cannibalism.

But note, good Christian reader: This feast had a precedent in the Essene communities located on the Jordan and Dead Sea of Judea, two hundred years before the alleged birth of Jesus. Is the proof demanded? Open the Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, by that great scholar, Wm. Smith, D. C. L., LL. D., article "Agapae," and read:

"It [Lord's Supper] had a precedent in the Essene communities of Judea."

What in the world was this Jewish sect eating the body and blood of Jesus for, long before "Our Lord" was born? Who can tell? We can't, unless they were thus honoring their own founder, Buddha. Dr. Smith cites numerous ancient authorities in support of his statement. He ventures the assertion that the "holy kiss" and the "kiss of love" "never passed beyond the bounds of temperance." In this he differs very widely with the statements of other scholars.

Clerical Bombast.

Were it any other person than Rev. Billy Sunday, the distinguished evangelist, and ex-baseball player, who used the following language, if correctly reported, it would be one of those cases where "familiarity breeds contempt."

It seems Carl Eastwood, editor of the Heron Lake News, Minn., heard Rev. Billy preach one of his peculiar Sunday discourses, and took occasion to refer to the evangelist's style in his paper, of course, not approvingly. Billy is reported to have thus addressed the "throne of grace," probably to even accounts:

"And, oh say, Jesus, save that man down at Heron Lake that wrote that dirty black lie about me! You'll have a big job on your hands to do it, Lord—I'll tell you that before you begin—but go ahead. Better take along a pair of rubber gloves and a bottle of disinfectant, but if you can save him, Lord, I'd like to have you do it."

A very vulgar mortal, cheek by jowl with Infinite Wisdom, must beget admiration on the part of churchmen, else they would not contribute so generously to his support. But how is it possible for a refined mind to listen to such low and debasing vulgarity?

Mails Miscarried.

A package of Progressive Thinkers two weeks ago, directed to a neighboring town, miscarried in the mails from some cause unknown at this office; but notwithstanding our vexation at such a mishap, it was a real pleasure to learn of the sad disappointment subscribers expressed because of it. "A long week, each mail closely watched, hoping it would come to hand," writes one; another, "I was perfectly lost, all the week." Another, he preserved a file, and must have the missing paper so as to make the volume complete. Well, we will do the best we can to remedy the loss, and we sincerely hope such an accident will not again occur.

The Poetic Fairyland of Science.

The Poetic Fairyland of Science is a name that may well be applied to Hudson Tuttle's contributions under the heading of "Protista," which have been appearing in The Progressive Thinker for some weeks past. The wonderful nature and works of minute beings, so small that they are invisible to eyes unaided by the magnifying powers of the microscope, read like a tale of the "Arabian Nights." And, together with its basis in solid science, it brings forth a far-reaching lesson of pure spiritual import, which will be evinced as the reader goes on, charmed and enlightened by the delightful story.

THE MEN WHO LOSE.

Here's to the men who lose!
What tho' their work be e'er so nobly planned
And watched with zealous care,
No glorious halo crowns their efforts grand;
Contempt is failure's share.

Here's to the men who lose!
If triumph's easy smile our struggles greet,
Courage is easy then;
The king is he who after fierce defeat,
Can up and fight again.

Here's to the men who lose!
The ready plaudits of a fawning world
Ring sweet in victor's ears;
The vanquished banners never are unfurled,—
For them there sound no cheers.

Here's to the men who lose!
The touchstone of true worth is not success;
There is a higher test!
Though fate may darkly frown onward to press
And bravely do one's best.

Here's to the men who lose!
It is the vanquished praises that I sing
And this is the toast I choose:
"A hard-fought failure is a noble thing,
Here's to the men who lose!"

—George H Broadhurst.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Man alone is and shall be our god. —Feuerbach.

PRESIDENT BARRETT.

The Lesson He Imparts on the Second Page.

We call particular attention of our readers to the article by President Barrett, on page 2, illustrating the notorious swindles that have been carried on most cruelly under the name of honest mediumship. Many of the pregnant facts set forth so conspicuously by Mr. Barrett, have been prominently exploited in the secular press, REACHING MILLIONS OF READERS outside of the ranks of Spiritualism, as well as many who are firm adherents to our Cause. If we did not publish these facts, unpalatable as they may be, we should consider ourself as guilty of a breach of trust to our readers, and as unworthy of their confidence and respect.

It is most delightful to some to look at the bright side of life exclusively, surveying the beauty and grandeur of creation, reveling in dreams of love, purity and enchanting scenes—ignoring completely the dark side of life, its sins, its rottenness, its cesspools of vice, debauchery and crime.

Ah! it may be delightful to some to effectually close their eyes to the dark conditions that confront them on all sides, and in all planes of society, and become a "goody-goody," completely blinded to the deplorable dens of corruption that exist in our very midst, exerting their deleterious influence and poisoning the very vitals of society.

Spiritualism HAS ITS ANGELIC, BRIGHT SIDE, easily discerned, and the same is presented to the world by the hundreds of honest mediums in our ranks, but when mediumship is used for mercenary or vile purposes as so prominently pointed out by Mr. Barrett, the whole world of Spiritualists should know it, and a method be pointed out to prevent a recurrence of the same. Vice, crime or corruption of any kind can not be displaced by better conditions unless it be PRESENTED TO PUBLIC VIEW in a manner that will attract attention. To hide questionable practices under the cloak, "YOU WILL INJURE OUR CAUSE BY EXPOSING THEM TO PUBLIC VIEW," is equivalent to receiving and secreting stolen goods.

The whole world of Spiritualists WILL STAND AGHAST at the impressive revealments of President Barrett, but he has not told the worst. A fraudulent medium in Oakland, Cal., who had perpetrated crimes of great magnitude, planned to COMMIT MURDER, but his subservient tools could not go that far, and his exposure soon followed, and he decamped with $35,000—his ill-gotten gains. Such villainy remains a part of Spiritualism just so long as it is endorsed by apparently respectable Spiritualists, and remains unexposed. When its true character is known, then its influence is destroyed.

FIND DIS DE BAR FLYING ROLLER

Scotland Yard Record Identifies "Mother Elinor" as the Missing Woman.

Detroit, Mich., March 28.—That "Mother Elinor," sometimes known as Mrs. Elinor L. Mason, queen of the House of Israel, the flying roller colony located here and at Windsor, Ont., is none other than the notorious Edith Loleta Jackson, alias Ann Odelia Dis de Bar, was made known by a record just received here from Scotland Yard, where Dis de Bar was for aiding the man then supposed to be her husband in committing a serious offense.

Has Police Record.

The woman is shown to have a police record reaching over ten continents and embracing many parts of the United States. A photograph accompanied the prison record, which was positively identified in a sworn statement by F. E. Swinden, a member of the colony.

As Ann Odelia Dis de Bar the woman served six months in New York City on a swindling charge. In Genoa she was imprisoned under the alias Vera P. Ava on a larceny charge. As Edith L. Jackson she served time in New Orleans and was expelled from the city for swindling.

Whereabouts Unknown.

Since she left England there have been three complaints made, upon which she has not been tried. Two of these are on serious charges, the other being for defrauding the "New Eve," at Kent, England, out of $2,000. She left Windsor mysteriously about two weeks ago. Her whereabouts are unknown.—Chicago Examiner, March 29, 1907.

This notorious woman was once a prominent medium in New York, where she posed as a spirit artist. She afterwards came to Chicago to exercise her mediumship.

Wants Mediums to Pay $100.

Mr. Hale of Los Angeles, Cal., sends the following from a late Los Angeles paper:

"In the Sixth ward some of Councilman Younkin's constituents think they have been buncoed and they have induced their representative to start a fight of aldermanic dignity upon the perpetrators of the outrage.

"As a consequence trouble is in store for the astrologers, palmists, clairvoyants, fortune tellers, mediums and the like who have lived and prospered in the last in Los Angeles and only loosened up to the extent of $15 per month each for city licenses.

"It is now proposed to raise the monthly fee to $100. A motion by Younkin to instruct the city attorney to prepare the necessary ordinance has been adopted.

"If the ordinance is adopted there will be brought into the city treasury each month $3,600 from persons of the above-named occupations, instead of $540. The mediums et al. paying monthly licenses at present to the city number 36. Some of them will undoubtedly be able to pay the increased license without serious difficulty. Others, it is believed, will be put out of business."

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.—Froude.

Spirits Guide the Courtship.

A Remarkable Narrative Illustrating Spirit Power and Influence.

William A. Harkness of Beaver Falls, and Miss Nellie Ingebrand of Duluth, Minn., were married a fortnight ago [as set forth in the Chicago Tribune] in Los Angeles, Cal., and now are spending their honeymoon in southern California, mainly in the country around El Monte.

The marriage is the result of one of the most astounding romances that ever were told. That fate dictated their actions and thoughts, and that they were destined to meet and wed, they firmly believe—and those who have heard the strange, almost unbelievable story of their courtship simply go away thinking and wondering. No one yet has been able to advance any logical explanation of it, and only one or two who believe in Spiritualism and thought transference and destiny that rules the lives of all persons have attempted to explain.

There is not much to be told about their romance. Its simplicity and lack of sequential events form the strangest part of the whole affair. Neither the bride nor the groom can add anything to the story or explain why certain things came to pass—nor, at present do they care. It is sufficient for them that they have met and married.

Visited California for His Health.

The romance began years ago. It happened that in 1901 Harkness, who is connected with a steeple plant in Pittsburg and who makes his home inBeaver Falls, went to California because he suffered terribly from asthma at times. The smoke and dampness of the Pittsburg climate aggravated his trouble, and, although he was at that time only 22 years of age, his physician ordered him to spend six months in southern California, promising that one winter out of Pittsburg would effect a cure.

He went to California in October and stopped in Los Angeles. The dust and dirt of the city and its peculiar atmosphere conditions only served to aggravate his trouble and he went to Santa Monica, on the seashore, where the trouble soon was worse. A physician there promptly told him to get away from the city and the beach and go into the foothills. He followed the advice and purchased a little tract of land and a pretty bungalow, near Pomona, but back toward the hills from the beautiful San Gabriel River valley, hired a Chinese boy to cook for him, bought a horse and a light buckboard, and settled down to enjoy winter. His asthma disappeared. The winter was a dry one, much to the disgust of the ranchers, who had suffered a practical drought for years and were heavily in debt.

It happened that the long drought, the failure of many successive vegetable and grain crops, had wrecked many farmers and orange growers. Harkness thought he saw a chance to make money. He began picking up cheap pieces of incumbered land. He bought a big vineyard over by San Whittier, and some odd parcels of land, besides quite a ranch near Azusa, or between that and Glendora.

No Thought of Love or Marriage.

He rode or drove through the shaded avenues, under a clear sky, during the entire winter and reveled in the sunshine and the warmth. Nothing was further from his thoughts than love or marriage, and he had never an idea of meeting his fate.

On the afternoon of January 14 of that winter, as he recalls it now, Harkness had an engagement to call at a ranch above Arcadia. He harnessed old "Doc," his horse, and drove from Whittier down to the Monte, and then cross through "Lucky" Baldwin's Santa Anita ranch toward the foot of Mount Wilson, where lay the ranch he intended to visit. He recalls that he stopped at Baldwin's hotel and then took the section road due north from this country road. This section road passes through the little hamlet of Arcadia, running due north and south for miles, between twin rows of giant rubber trees that end only as the road rears itself into the foothills.

After crossing the Southern Pacific railway tracks, a few yards out of Arcadia, Harkness let the lines fall loose upon his horse's back and jogged along slowly, enjoying the beauty of the scenery and the afternoon. Directly ahead of him, a few miles away, Mount Wilson, one of the great peaks of the Sierra Madre mountains, reared its bald head, and he could see the yellow of the double trails staining the color of the mountain.

Girl Sitting on Bank of Stream.

Harkness says that he had stopped his horse to a walk as he approached the place where the road crosses a brawling, boisterous little stream. Suddenly his eye was drawn from the mountain ahead, and, looking toward the roadside, he saw a girl.

She was sitting on the stump of a rubber tree on the bank of a little stream, and she was tossing pebbles into the babbling water to watch them be swept away.

She was brown haired, brown eyed, rosy cheeked, and pretty. She wore a dark brown skirt, with jacket to match, and a soft felt hat was pinned upon her waving mass of brown hair, shading the sun-browned cheeks from the glare of the sun.

Harkness looked at the girl. She paused in her occupation of tossing pebbles into the mountain stream, brushed a stray lock of hair back from her cheek, and looked at him. Then his buggy jarred down into the bed of the stream, the water boiled and surged around the spokes, the horse splashed through, started to trot, and they went on up the shady avenue of eucalyptus toward the foothills.

That was all there was to it. They had not spoken, they had not changed expression; in fact, all they had done was to meet accidentally. Neither of them thought enough of the meeting to inquire who the other was. They simply saw each other. Harkness confesses that he wondered at the time who she was and what she was doing there. That was all. He thought of her several times during the winter, especially when he drove in that direction, and wondered idly if he would see her, but he never did. He remained in that part of the country until spring and then, after a short run around the state to points of interest, he went back to Pittsburg to make his fortune.

His landed holdings in California were not large enough to require his personal attention, and an agent at Alhambra attended to the leasing of them.

Vision Appears Two Years Afterward.

It was two years after that chance meeting on the section road above Arcadia that Harkness began to think of the girl he had seen there. He does not know how it happened, but one day he found himself sitting at his desk, gazing at her in a mental picture of the scene. He could see the brawling little brook, the flashing pebbles as they rolled downward, the purplish blackness of the grasswood covered mountains, the deep green and the vivid gold of the orange groves, the dust white of the roadway, the scarlet berries of a pepper tree by the roadside, the green of cacti, the sun-kissed cheeks of the girl—even the stray locks of brown hair that she brushed back from her cheek as she looked up at him.

After that he began seeing her almost every day. In a few months he was cursing himself because he had not stopped and spoken to her. He thought the idea and the vision of that perfect afternoon would pass. After a year he saw it only when he was tired and worn and weary. Sometimes a month would pass and he would imagine that he had lost the vision; then, on some cold, drizzly day, it would come back.

It took him over three years to realize that he was in love with the vision. He,—being a hard-headed, practical man of the world, laughed and scoffed at the idea, but somehow no other girl ever interested him. His friends wondered that he never had any love affairs or paid attention to any girl. His fortune by that time was large enough to make him extremely eligible as a husband, but he seldom went out in society, and never sought the companionship or friendship of women. He was regarded as an old bachelor while still a young man, and among his fellows he was looked upon rather as a woman hater.

He never confided with anyone that he had fallen in love with a girl whom he had not seen but once, whose name or identity he did not know, and to whom he never even had bowed. That would have invited comment. He even denied it himself. Yet, while it made him angry, he could not dispel the idea that he was in love with her—although he says he did not then know what love was.

A year ago he says he felt an impulse to go to California that almost was irresistible. Once, he says, he hurried home, packed hastily, and got ready to go, and then got angry and kicked his suitcase all around the room, calling himself a dream-ridden fool.

But although he got along well during the summer, the desire came upon him again in November of this winter and he determined to go to California. Twice he made all arrangements and then told himself he was a fool and postponed the trip.

Examined by a Mental Specialist.

By that time, however, he found himself trying to draw pictures of the girl and whispering to himself that she was his "dream sweetheart," so he knew that he was in bad condition. Just before Christmas he decided to go to California, and instead went to a mental specialist and went through certain mental tests to see if his sanity was wavering. The physician told him he was all right and didn't even appear overworked.

On the afternoon of January 8 Harkness says he was seized with an irrisistible impulse to go to California, intending to reach Arcadia on January14—the anniversary—and, before night, still calling himself a Quixotic fool, he was speeding westward. He stopped in Los Angeles, met some friends and spent a week there, then went to his El Monte ranch to spend a fortnight with the tenant, who had erected a handsome bungalow among the orange trees and was arranging to buy the place from Harkness. He had purposely stayed away from the scene of his meeting with Fate on the anniversary of that morning. After arriving in California, too, he discovered that his "dream sweetheart" was rather misty and the visions he had in Pittsburg were lacking. Days passed on which he never even thought of his strange mission in California.

Impulse Took Him to California.

On the morning of February 6, however, while eating a dish of strawberries at breakfast with his host, he suddenly felt a violent re-awakening of the vision. He quietly asked the man if he could have a horse and rig to take a drive that afternoon. Mr. Tudor, the rancher, regretfully remarked that the only available horse was Doc. It so happened that, shortly before noon, Harkness, driving Doc and riding in the same buckboard in which he had ridden when he met Fate by the roadside, left El Monte and started across the Santa Anita ranch. He drove straight up the section through Arcadia, jarred across the railway and electric railway tracks, crossed the county road, and trotted into the avenue of rubber trees. The sun was shining, ahead of him towered the purple-black slopes of Mount Wilson, scarred with the yellow trails, the golden glow of the oranges shone through the green trees, the pungent scent of burning rubber leaves filled the air; below him, miles away, the snow clad peak of Old Baldy rose and ahead he could hear the babble of the bawling brook.

Girl Waiting by the Stream.

The picture was the same as that of six years before and he told himself that his memory picture had been true. Half consciously he pulled Doc to a walk, still gazing toward the mountain, moved onward to where the road crosses the bawling brook.

Suddenly he withdrew his gaze from the mountain and, glancing toward the roadside, saw the "dream sweetheart" sitting on the stump of the eucalyptus and tossing pebbles into the water.

For a moment—he says an hour—he sat gazing at her in mute astonishment and she looked up from her occupation, pushed back a stray lock of brown hair, and half smiled, as she held a pebble ready to toss into the water.

Then he stepped out of the buckboard, raised his hat, and extended his hand.

The girl half rose, looked a bit frightened, gasped quickly as if she had seen a ghost, and then said, wildly:

"I was waiting for you."

Man and Wife Within a Fortnight.

They sat there together a long time, and told each other about it. When they parted it was to meet the next day and within a fortnight they were man and wife.

The girl was Miss Nellie Ingebrand and she was visiting her aunt, Mrs. Tom Bemis, on the ranch above Arcadia. Her experience had been practically the same as that of Harkness. She had returned home and then begun to dream of him and fallen in love with the dream-man. The only difference was that in November, 1905, she felt impelled to go to California to meet him, and went and was disappointed. When he heard that, Harkness cursed himself for rejecting his own wild impulse to visit California at that same time.

Why she had gone to throw pebbles in the brook that afternoon she does not know. Some "instinct" she calls it, impelled her, and she went.

That is all the story, and that is why they declare that destiny ruled them and fate decreed that they should wed.

THE CAUSE IN THE EAST.

An Interesting Letter From Mrs. A. A. Averill, of Lynn, Mass.

To the Editor:—It is certainly encouraging to note in your valuable paper the numerous reports of enthusiastic and successful meetings held throughout the West. It must be "high tide" with our cause, in your part of the country. There is no reason why we should not experience seasons of depression and other seasons when "business is good," in our work, as well as in the fields of commerce and labor. But there is no good reason why one should think everything is going to pieces because business is a little dull. Many of our workers are feeling discouraged because there seems to be a lack of interest with us, just at the present time, but they overlook several facts that combine to make it appear so.

One of the greatest hindrances to the growth of the public work, or rather, to the success of the hall meetings, is the prevalence of private circles. There is a regular epidemic of circles about here at the present time. The advice so frequently given by the writers in The Progressive Thinker, to return to the old-time family circles, is certainly bearing fruit in the East. Nearly every medium that possesses any power whatever in the line of message-giving, holds weekly or semi-weekly circles, and there are innumerable circles held without any developed medium, just a few friends.

We frequently meet some old Spiritualist, who, in answer to the question where they have been of late, that they have not attended the meetings in the hall, will answer, "We are having a little circle at our house Sunday night, just a few of us," but with a few gathered here and there, it necessarily decreases the number attending services in the halls. And again, there are many more meetings than formerly; a large number of mediums hire halls and run meetings for themselves, while others, not mediums, run them to make a living; and though this is somewhat discouraging to organized workers, who can say that the work of spreading the truth is not progressing as fast as ever?

We certainly can present a stronger front to the world by combining our efforts and pulling together, and it seems sure that we shall never receive the recognition accorded to other progressive movements, until we are more thoroughly organized than at present, but sometimes, "wonders are performed in mysterious ways."

Encouraging reports come from many of the societies. We believe the anniversary is being as fully celebrated as at any time. This gives us a good opportunity to get together and take an account of stock; figure up and see what has been accomplished in the past year. Report says that there is a good degree of interest at the church of Rev. Mr. Wiggin of Boston. A friend who recently attended, tells us there were seven hundred people in the evening audience, and that grand and convincing work was done with both lectures and messages.

Oscar A. Edgerly served at the Spiritual Temple during the month of January and attracted a large number of intelligent and intellectual truth seekers, and we hear that Mrs. Kate M. Ham is doing her usual good work at the same place during March. Mr. Ayers, the owner of this, the most magnificent building ever dedicated to the cause of Spiritualism, has been likened to a spiritual light-house, attending strictly to the business of sending out spiritual light in the way that appears best to him. No matter how many storms may beat or hard the winds and tempests may rage, the light shines steadily forth from the Spiritual Temple. This beautiful structure has never been used for any but spiritual purposes, and its owner declares, that as long as the solid stone in which its name is cut shall endure, it shall be devoted to the work of the spirit world. All honor to a man true to his convictions.

The oldest spiritual society in New England, the Boston Ladies' Aid, has been busy through the winter in dispensing charity to the deserving poor. Nearly all Ladies' Aid societies are auxiliary to some other society and are working for that particular branch of the work, but this organization is a purely charitable society, carried on for the meritorious purpose of caring for needy Spiritualists, which is surely one that should appeal to the hearts of us all.

The Lynn Spiritualists Association is meeting with good success and having fair audiences. They presented quite an elaborate program, consisting of lectures, messages, and literary and musical exercises on March 31, and are preparing a fine list of speakers for the summer season at Unity camp, among which are Miss Harlow, Mrs. Ham, Mrs. Pettengill, Mr. Edgerly and many other speakers of note.

A good bit of work is being done by the Psychic Research Society of Salem, Mass. They have branched out to the sister city of Beverly, where there was no meeting, held, hired a hall and have held Friday evening services all winter. They have had Mrs. Abbie Atwood, one of Lynn's growing mediums, and from a beginning of twenty the first night, have increased until, at present, the hall is nearly filled each night. This plan of work is helpful to them financially, as it brings in money to help carry on the Sunday work, and is also arousing an interest in a town where there is no society. We think this method of spreading the gospel might be carried on successfully by many other societies, helping themselves and the cause as well.

We are glad to hear that the work of the Fraternal Order is extending and hope to see it adopted by some of our eastern societies.

The passing away of so many of our best workers seems to be a great loss to us, but they have only joined the vast army on the other side, and perhaps now they are emancipated from the thralldom of the physical and its limitations, they can strike more effective blows for the cause than ever before. Let us be as ready to do our part as they will be to do theirs.

MRS. A. A. AVERILL.

Lynn, Mass.

FUNERAL SERVICES

Over the Mortal Remains of Theodore J. Mayer, Treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association, at his residence, 214 B Street Southeast, Washington, D. C., Wednesday, March 13, 1907, at 11 a. m., conducted by Mrs. Mary T. Longley, under the auspices of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C.

[Reported Especially for The Progressive Thinker, by Walter P. Williams.]

The readers of The Progressive Thinker have already learned through its columns of the passing of the great soul of that good man and true Spiritualist, Theodore J. Mayer, of Washington, D. C. The funeral obsequies were conducted at his home, Friday, March 13, under the auspices of the First Spiritualist Association of his city, in accordance to the written request which he had formerly filed with the officers of that organization. Mrs. M. T. Longley officiated and the service was simple and such as he could most desire. Mr. Mayer was very fond of listening to "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," when rendered by its author, his friend, Prof. Longley, and it was intended for Mr. Longley to sing that selection during the service, but as the venerable composer was suffering with a serious attack of influenza at the time, he was unable to do so, and only the touching service of the secretary of the National Association was made.

The Washington Daily Star had its reporter at the service, who made copious and beautiful extracts from the address, weaving them into a generous synopsis of the whole. The following is an extract from the Star:

"The obsequies were attended by a large concourse of the friends of Mr. Mayer, embracing all classes of citizens, from the most lowly toiler to wealthy men of affairs. Massed about the casket were many beautiful floral remembrances bearing appropriate inscriptions. For an hour or more before the commencement of the simple ceremonies men, women and children filed past the bier and took a final look at their late benefactor and friend.

"The pall bearers were all clerks in the employ of the W. M. Galt Company, as follows: Messrs. Buckingham, Hurley, Stearn, Mohler, Busey and Betts.

"At the conclusion of the impressive obsequies the remains were taken to the establishment of J. William Lee and cremated.

"Floral pieces were sent by Mrs. W. M. Galt, Mr. Ralph Galt, William M. Galt & Co., National Spiritualists' Association (of which the deceased was treasurer), board of directors of the Central National Bank, First Association of Spiritualists, directors of the Union Trust Company, board of managers of the Casualty Hospital, Hope Lodge No. 20, Swiss Benevolent Society (of which he was president for fifteen years), the lady managers of the Casualty Hospital, Washington Grutli Verein, Mr. L. Vogel, the minister from Switzerland; Mr. William F. Gude, Mr. Henry Steinberg and family, Corby Bros., Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Speiser, Mrs. M. J. Stevens, board of directors of the Congress Hall Hotel Company, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Krafft, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Beall, Mr. Henry Virts and Mrs. P. C. Schaefer.

"All the associations of which deceased was a member were represented at the obsequies."

At the close of the address Mrs. Longley said:

"Dear friends, I am requested to announce that there will be no public service during the cremation of the body; only the relatives will be present at the crematory and you are asked to take leave of the remains at this hour. If you feel as I do, you will prefer to make your farewell here, while the beloved form is surrounded by this wealth of glorious and fragrant flowers, sweet symbols of Life, Love, Purity and Peace, fitting types of Immortality and Reunion beyond, where sad partings can never come."

ADDRESS BY MRS. LONGLEY.

Let us lift up our hearts to that divine source of all blessing, the Infinite Goodness, our father God.

Oh, Truth eternal, Love divine,
We worship at thy holy shrine.
No man-made creeds we bring to thee—
Thou soul of all immensity.

For thou art grand, and broad and great
And hold'st each soul in heavenly fate.
Thou art the soul of universe
Thy matchless wonders stars rehearse.

O giver of all perfect good,
We recognize infinitude,
And in this solemn sacred hour
We recognize thy matchless power.

The heavens in harmony above
Resound with matchless tones of love;
And O, we lift our souls to thee,
Thou author of eternity.

To thee we bring our breaking hearts
Knowing thy love still strength imparts,
That peace unto each soul is given
To guide it on to yonder heaven.

We know that thou art love and light,
Thou art the ruler day and night,
Of life below, and life above,
Thou source of wisdom, truth and love.

O thou divine spirit, our father and our mother God, eternal goodness reigning everywhere throughout this universe of space, we draw near unto thee this moment to consecrate anew to thy service, to the service of thy dear humanity, this arisen soul who has traveled onward through the realms of thy beatitudes and of thy beneficence. We know that all must be well with him. Like a conqueror he went to the eternal life; like a ruler he lived on earth doing his appointed tasks, working out the life within him according to the highest dictates of conscience, of duty and of fraternal brotherhood. Thus must it be well with him. He is in thy eternal keeping. We do not need to mourn for him. Only the tear-drops fall, and the eyes grow dim when human souls on earth realize what it is to miss from their presence and association the physical form, the audible word, the kindly smile and the helpful counsel of one who has been near and dear.

And so, tears will fall and eyes grow dim; hearts will bleed and break because of mortal separation, but when the consciousness of eternal life and the conception of fadeless, loving, supreme truth and everlasting beneficence from God, come into the soul, we know and understand that all is well.

We ask, O thou Divine Spirit, the loving blessing of angel ministration to rest upon every heart that is saddened, to uplift and comfort every mourning life, that the light and the consciousness of spiritual truth shall abide with them, that all may feel within the inner self the nearness of spiritual counsel, of heavenly ministration, of kindly loving care that cometh from the unseen, from those influences and those beings that are not of the flesh though they walk with us in the heavenly places.

We ask, O thou blessed minister of peace and holy comfort, that there shall go forth the balm of healing to every wounded heart. May the dear son be comforted in the thought that his father is by his side with awakened strength and judgment, with higher possibilities and sweeter perceptions than he could know on earth, to give that guidance of the inner life that shall be a tower of strength and a comfort of peace in many mortal ways.

May all who have been affiliated with this dear brother by ties of relationship or fraternity be blessed and strengthened.

May the service of this hour be a sacred memory in their hearts. May they realize that death is only deliverance for the spirit from the bondage of clay, from suffering, from disease and an awakening for the immortal being in worlds of life beyond.

We know it is well with him, that blessings rest upon him now and ever shall, and so unto Thee, O our father God, we offer our praise for death, for deliverance; we offer our thanksgiving for the sacred associations of life to thee, we offer our honor and homage forevermore. Amen.

Dear friends, we are gathered here for a sacred service, not only to the memory and life of our dear friend and brother, but also in a spiritual sense to the consecration of his life to higher aims, nobler purposes and grander achievements than mortal tongue can tell. Through the varying vicissitudes of this earthly existence our beloved friend and companion met with many experiences, some of them very sad and trying and painful, some of them grievous to bear. He knew what it was to suffer bereavement, to have the dear companion of his heart and life taken from his bodily presence, out of the physical atmosphere into another world of being. He knew what it was to part with little lives that had only breathed here in a mortal sense, yet had they remained here on earth would have grown up as sweetest blossoms in his pathway. He knew what it was to part with friends on every hand. He knew what it was to meet with the discipline of life in the material arena of being, what it was to cope with difficulties and obstacles, to overcome them in large measure in his efforts to make a success of his career as a business man.

As a man of association with friends and neighbors and comrades in this mortal life he had his joys and his seasons of peace and of comfort; consolations came to him that were of blessedness; he realized both the sunshine and the shadow of mortal experience and existence and under these conditions he rounded out in mentality, in spiritual thought and aspiration, in the desire and effort and achievement of blessing his fellow-men. No greater eulogy could be given to a life when it closes on earth, dear friends, than to say he lived and labored for his fellowmen, and we can say this with absolute truth of our dear friend and brother who has departed from the clay to take upon himself the habiliments of a spiritual existence and a higher and better life of sweeter and nobler environments and grander opportunities.

I think you all know what his successes have been in life connected with material interests and physical affairs. You know how he met poverty and misfortune with brave heart and a courage which bore him through the vicissitudes unto a more glorious pathway of success; but he met failures and disciplines and loss with as brave and cheerful a spirit as he encountered success and the prosperity of material life. All of this helped to develop the inner nature, the mental life, the spiritual qualities which were directed in such ways as he felt would bring blessing to himself as an immortal as well as to his brother man on earth through the benevolent works that he might accomplish for humanity. We do not need, dear friends, to give an extended eulogy over the life of one such as this. His works will live after him, the memory of his deeds, even his personal doings from day to day, will be an abiding sense in the hearts of his friends.

He was a citizen of this city and district, well known and honored. He was an active man of affairs in this portion of country, who spoke with no uncertain sound concerning his convictions of right and wrong, whether they were for municipal matters and interests of the people or for the good of individuals or in any sense in the blessing of humanity. He was ever plain and outspoken and we knew just where to find him. Sometimes he may have seemed crude and somewhat harsh in his dealings with his fellow-men because of that strong, positive personality of his which meant so much, which could not brook the idea of failure, which would not find defeat, and so he pushed onward, but we know that his failings were those of the head rather than the heart. We know that as he thought he could see clearly, it sometimes seemed to him that others should do the same, and that he desired so much to bring them to the same consideration of affairs that he felt would be for the general good. None are perfect, all have their frailties and faults in this mortal life, and it is best, otherwise there would be no perfection beyond, nothing to strive for, nothing to hope for if we found the extent of all possibility and achievement and perfection here on this earthly plane.

But we are taught that there is progress beyond the grave; that we only begin school life here that shall advance and open new opportunities to our souls as immortal beings after we pass from this mortal clay, this being but the outward covering, the vehicle of expression for the indwelling mentality, the soul of man, when gaining experience and beginning unfoldment on this material side. Therefore, friends, whatever of human weakness our brother and friend may have had sinks into insignificance beside the clear, beautiful outpouring of his benevolent, loving nature for humanity.

He felt the needs and the wrongs of mankind and wished to lessen them, he felt the suffering and loss of human beings who were dwarfed and cramped by poverty and sickness and these conditions that weigh down, and he endeavored to relieve them; he knew the needs of education for the young people of this land and he knew that whatever of college life he secured in his early days in the home of his birth was of immense value to him during his life, and so he desired to see education promoted and such benevolent interests here advanced, and he did his part and did it well.

Friends, we cannot linger over these things that we would like to say. We must in duty tell you that he was a Spiritualist, a pronounced, uncompromising Spiritualist, who not only believed but knew that there is immortality for the human soul, such immortality as means consciousness, vital, active; the survival of memory over death, the retaining of the affections, the knowledge and the power of mental expression and achievement—all these things which make up a human being he knew survive death and the grave and live as intelligent entities in the eternal world. He knew this. It was his conviction. It was his privilege to gain it through investigation and experience. It was no idle thought, no mere belief, no creed, but an unanswerable conviction of truth to his soul, and therefore he was a Spiritualist. He believed in immortality, knew its truth, realized the consciousness of spirit communion with this mortal life knowing that he could commune lovingly and intelligently with the dear companion who passed from the earth form so many years ago, but who remained close to his heart not only as a memory but as a loving presence of radiant beauty through all these years of his lonely life. He knew the little ones could return, had grown and expanded in that other world and were his treasures there. He knew this and as a result of this knowledge devoted a portion of his time and means to the advancement of Spiritualism.

It was my privilege to be associated with him for many years—nearly a decade—in this work of Spiritualism, not only in official labors but in close friendships. Many hours have we passed in pleasing, helpful things pertaining to spiritual thought and uplifting. We knew him in our home well; he was a brother and a friend closely connected with us by the ties of association which nothing of earth can express and which held us together in such beautiful communion that we feel he is one with us now, not lost nor gone, not dead nor asleep, but with us, arisen in spirit, a presence of joy and comfort, of truth and honor, of helpfulness and ministration, and he will be so to the end, not only to us in our personal home but to you all, friends, a helper and adviser, if you but open the way to his coming, to give you peace and strength.

As treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association for many years our friend and brother stood almost at the head of this great movement in the United States. He was known to hundreds of thousands of individuals through our great conventions because of his name and works and influence going out through the spiritual press in all parts of this country, by the chartered societies of our national body, state and local organizations in all parts of the United States, and when the news went forth through our spiritual press that he was lying prostrate, sick unto death, we were besieged with words and messages and communications from all over the country telling us that in the meeting places where hundreds of people assemble, in their Sunday convocations and services his name was mentioned in loving reverence and prayers went forth for his recovery, because all felt that while he would find a beautiful home on high and plenty of opportunity for service and doing good to humanity yet he was needed here. But the angels knew—the Infinite knew—God understands—and I believe from the depths of my soul that he knew in the secret recesses of his heart, dear friends, that his time had come, that his work was to close through this mortal frame that had worn out in the service of humanity as well as in his efforts to make his way in the world.

Many a time he said to me: "Mrs. Longley, I am working too hard; I know that I am. I have lost money and I must make more. I don't want it for myself; I can live plainly. I could if I wished live in what some would call a palace, but I have no desire; I have my little home and my lonely surroundings. I must make money. I want to help the world. I must bless mankind. I want to do a good work for the hospitals here in the District of Columbia. I want to promote education. I have many plans in mind. I want to bless our spiritual cause. If I had all I lost I could do that. I must make it up, and I will do my best to leave something good for humanity when I have gone," and he did. This is his record. This is his eulogy. We need not expand upon it, his works show for themselves. Let his influence be a blessed one, his example a noble one to our lives. Perhaps we may not be able to do all that he could do, we have not the means nor the opportunity to bless mankind in such largeness as he has done, but we can do something to make the world better and sweeter and brighter that we have lived, and in doing this we shall please our friend best and most. It is all that he would ask, and it is the greatest tribute we can give to say that he was one who loved his fellow-man.

I am persuaded he would give to you his message today, could he make those silent lips speak, with no uncertain sound to your hearing, and would say:

"I am alive. I live; there is no such thing as death to crowd the human soul. I have pulled through and have gained the victory. There is no mystery now for me in death, there was very little of it before I passed away. I knew what I should meet, and the glory of reunion, the sweetness of uplifting in spirit, the beauty and the grandeur of immortality are mine."

"He who died at Azim sends
This to comfort all his friends":
Gentle friends, I am not here
On this lowly funeral bier.
Truth is mine and Life divine,
Let its mandates ever shine
In your hearts, O friends of earth,
Till you pass immortal birth.
Life is free and life is grand,
Work, then, for the heavenly land
Which perchance is just in view,
Waiting, friends, for you, for you.
Let your thoughts be full of love,
Such as heavenly thoughts above.
Let your lives be pure and sweet
Till the angels you shall meet.
He who died now comes and gives
This assurance that he lives.
Life is mine forevermore
Pulsing on the golden shore.
Love and Life are lord and king,
This my spirit offering.
Life eternal, ever free,
Calls for aye, to you and me.

Dear friends, no more may be said. Words fail. Let the hearts feel that all is well.

All hail, thou arisen spirit. Press on in your good works. Give to humanity the comfort, the peace and the harmony of thought that you know will only bless and uplift. We would not call you back to this world of mortal strife, but speed you on in the sweetness of holy friendship, feeling that sometime and somewhere we shall be reunited in a fairer clime.

Farewell, dear mortal form. We have known and loved you. We have realized the sweetness of spirit animating and pulsating through this frame and we have come close to the spiritual with it all. To dust and ashes shall you be consigned, but all is well. Nature in her beneficence will take up the residue that is left from the consuming fire and reconvert it into new forms of beauty on her glowing breast of earth. All is well. Farewell, dear form.

But spirit arisen, all hail! We salute thee, we love thee, we ask for your help, your ministration and your personal care.

Mrs. Longley writes: "So many in Washington have asked where copies of the poetic lines in the address over the remains of our beloved treasurer can be obtained, I desire to say: Only in The Progressive Thinker; these lines came impromptu at the moment of inspiration, and all but the opening quotation, 'He who died at Azim sends this to comfort all his friends,' were original with the hour and the occasion."

The Good That Men Do Lives After Them.

There is so much that can be said of the good that Theodore J. Mayer did for humanity during the years of his mortal life; so much of the good that he left as an endowment to the sum of human blessing, that words fail and similes grow weak as we try to describe his benefactions and to compare his thoughts and deeds with the common notions of the world. His three score years were filled with positive intent and power to make success of life, and he did succeed, not only as a business man in the accruement of a fortune by the indomitable will and the clear, calculating judgment of his mind and physical labor, but also in the noble paths of Spiritual conquest and achievement. He was a success, and the world is richer that he lived. He came to this country a poor boy, but with native Swiss stock of intellectual and moral equipment, a good college education and determination to make a mark in the world of business enterprise. Entering as a clerk in his uncle's store, it was not long before his ability led him to rise from a comparatively humble position to other fields of effort and success. By his wise judgment, the use of his splendid brain and native manual strength, he won. He was never idle, when others slept he passed hours in work of the body as well as devising ways and means for the enlarging of his business and the output of its accruements, and by wise investments and judicious expenditures he added to his store. True, he met with losses, there were some failures, every venture could not be a success—that is not the way of the world—but every loss only gave impetus to his swift brain to make new effort to regain his ground and to win in the markets of the world.

To those who knew him best, his decease was not unexpected; our wonder was that he lived so long, for disease had fastened upon his frame some years before the end. For more than three years his health has been precarious, many times during that period he suffered excruciating pain in nerves and limbs. A man of magnificent physique, he could not walk three squares without sitting down on curb or step more than once by the way, for rest and surcease from pain. For months before his fatal illness, he complained to us of nausea, could partake of but very little food, and for some time, while still about his daily affairs, he lived solely on two quarts of milk a day.

At the last N. S. A. Convention in Chicago he was a great sufferer, never without pain, striving to keep up to the work and exigencies of the Association by stimulating aids to a fagged and weary brain and body, he, a main-stay of power for the good of the N. S. A., watchful of its treasury, looking against extravagant measures and rulings, misunderstood by those who only viewed him casually, accused of being self-opinionated and autocratic when he was working night and day for the best good of the whole, felt his physical strength steadily waning, yet would not yield one minute to nature from the wearisome activities of the convention floor.

On his homeward way, Saturday, October 20, he became very ill, for over two hours in the night he had to stand in the aisle of the Pullman car, unable to lie in his berth or to sit, because of the terrible pain and nausea that had seized his body. But he conquered sufficiently to resume his work immediately on his arrival in Washington, though many of us pleaded with him to give up, take a long rest and to go abroad to his native land for recuperation. He said the time had not come for rest, he had more to accomplish, and so he held on till exhausted nature could do no more. He wanted to live, to earn more money to use for humanity—he said he had sufficient for his own needs and for his son, but he must make more for the use of humanitarian projects and interests—but at the last, while the mortal illness was creeping fast upon him, he settled completely all that he desired to do and have done, should he not recover health. He made a splendid fight for health, but it was too late, yet he went manfully, like a warrior who has fought the good fight, he won his victories and gained his spiritual crown.

Theodore Mayer was essentially a strong character His personality had two sides; in business, positive, at times stern, even commanding, dominant, yet approachable; in social life, genial, full of humor—often boyish—lovable; a good companion and friend. He was a lover of the beautiful, the esthetic side of his nature was developed, and scenery, the works of Nature, flowers, music, statuary, paintings, art in general, dainty appointments, all appealed to him and made him glad; this was evinced in the garden of his home that he loved, the care of his pet canary to which he talked daily, the lovely works of art and beauty in his dwelling, his own immaculate appearance in private or public life.

His kindness to the lowly was proverbial in this city, though he expected and exacted faithful service from his employes, they all loved and esteemed him, and their tearful eyes during his illness and after his demise, gave eloquent tribute to his worth and place in their estimation. Even to his animals he showed gentle traits, carrying lumps of sugar in his pockets with which to regale his horse at intervals during the day. I am relating this to show the world what an all-around sort of man this was, and to give glimpses into the heart of the man.

In this connection we think of one of the sweetest, and last acts of this good man. The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Fugitt, formerly Miss Agnes Wink, had his first natal anniversary on the 28th of last January. For some weeks prior to that event, Mr. Mayer talked of wishing to be magnetically connected with the little fellow, not only while here, but after he, Mr. Mayer, should pass from earth. Said he: "I mean to give him something on his first birthday that he can always have and wear and that will be a link between us both." He finally decided on a gold chain of fine metal and rare workmanship; had it made so as to be worn as a neck chain in babyhood, and as a watch-chain later in life—a beautiful gift. This chain the donor wore on his own person for a number of days, and on the 26th of January, when suffering from the first stages of his mortal illness, went from his home to that of the Fugitts and personally presented the sacred gift to the little babe. On that occasion he said: "I am going home to stay until I am well. I feel that I may not be able to come out by Monday, the 28th, and I wanted to give this chain to the little boy with my own hands. I shall be a spiritual helper to him all his days and I want him to wear this for me."

The good man never left his home after that day except once, when very ill he had himself taken in a closed carriage to his bank to attend to the last matter of his estate. Once during his illness the baby boy was taken to see him and the great man blessed him. Always he inquired of us concerning the child and on the last occasion of my visits to the sick room, he blessed the little one and promised to be a spiritual helper to him.

We are satisfied that in soul-sense, he knew that he would not get well. On the 20th of February, about 5 a. m., the writer of these lines fell into a semi-trance and seemed to be transported to a beautiful country and to find herself among a company of friends, most of whom she recognized as spirit people; among the friends was Mr. Mayer; they turned to cross a bit of flat country and came to a beautiful town built upon the side of a hill in an Alpine section. It was an exquisite sight. The sweet homes upon the hillside glowed with beauty. The light upon them was of ineffable glory. The green of the hills and the blue of the skies and of the placid lake at the foot of the hill were more brilliant than tongue can describe. In my vision, I said to the friends: "Did you ever see such a beautiful sight? I have been here before. In a moment you will see a large and handsome sign giving the name of this town. What do you think of it?" In a moment we all came into view of a massive and shining inscription bearing the name of the place which was, "Just Over There". I did not relate this to Brother Mayer when next I saw him, as we had N. S. A. matters to discuss, but during a very sweet, friendly and spiritual interview on February 23, I told him of it and that the entire scene was of apparently a Swiss, spiritual harmonious spot, emblematic, perhaps, but significant and beautiful. With tear-dimmed eyes and trembling lips he said: "May we all meet there."

In that hour we talked freely of the spirit-world, of the work of the spirit, of humanitarian affairs, of the possibility of his immediate going to that higher world, and I said to him, "We want you to get well, and still be our counselor and guide on earth; but if you must go, come to us from above, help and bless us, we want your counsels and aid." Too full for speech, he bowed assent with tears on his face and tremblingly whispered, "I will, God bless you."

The memory of that hour will ever be a most sacred one to me. So also will be that of the last few moments I passed with him on Tuesday, March 5, one week before the end. He was very weak, but smiled at me during my call and talked beautifully, asking for the little boy, and charging us to take good care of him. His last words to me were, "Give my love to everybody;" and "God Bless You"—precious words that will never fail. He sank rapidly after that, and I did not see him again till I laid my little offering of lilies of the valley, pure and fragrant, upon his coffined form. And now, I DO GIVE HIS LOVE TO EVERYBODY, and may it be a precious legacy to help them on their way.

Distribution of Property.

Previous to the making of his last will, Mr. Mayer gave away large sums for charitable purposes; in former reports it has been stated that he had given to the Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital of Washington, about Thirty Thousand dollars, and in his will left ten thousand more to that worthy institution for the treatment in illness of the needy poor. He had also given about one hundred and eighty thousand dollars to the George Washington University for educational purposes, with the stipulation that a memorial hall to his departed wife, to be called the Susanna Mayer Memorial hall, should be erected; this college, of course, did not figure in his will; it was only a few weeks before his last illness that he told me he had gotten all his works into shape and that the last, the hospital Dispensary and the University being attended to, he felt that a good part of his work was completed. Hundreds of private philanthropies for the poor and suffering were shown by this man, here and in other places; no appeal was made to him in vain—the public

(Continued on page 3.)

Eyesight Restored.

Eyeglasses May Be Abandoned.

A Wonderful Discovery That Corrects Afflictions of the Eye Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for the relief of most forms of disease, as a new method—the Actina treatment—has been discovered which eliminates the necessity of former torturous methods. There is no risk or necessity of experimenting, as many people report having been cured of failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye after being pronounced incurable, through this grand discovery.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, special agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Having used Actina for several years, I cheerfully recommend it for the cure of eye, ear and throat affections. It cured my mother, of cataracts."

Susan Cardwell, Lincoln, Kan., writes: "I am 78 years old. I was so blind I could only know persons by their voices. After using Actina I can now thread a needle without glasses."

Mrs. T. F. Moyle, Waterford, Wis., writes:—"About two years ago I was taken with iritis in both eyes and nearly went blind and it was thought an operation would be necessary. I sent for an Actina last April and it has taken all the inflamation out and my eyes are now well.

Hundreds of other testimonials will be sent on application. "Actina" is purely a home treatment and self-administered by the patient, and is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept 342B, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive absolutely free a valuable book, Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

906

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising:

Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75

AFTER HER DEATH.

The Story of a Summer. By Lillian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

In Tune with the Infinite

By Ralph Waldo Trine.

Within yourself lies the cause of whatever enters into your life. To come into the full realization of your own awakened interior powers, is to be able to condition your life in exact accord with what you would have it.—From Title-Page.

CONTENTS—I. Preludo; II. The Supreme Fact of the Universe; III. The Supreme Fact of Human Life; IV. Fulness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; V. The Secret, Power and Effect of Love; VI. Wisdom and Interior Illumination; VII. The Realization of Perfect Peace; VIII. Coming into fulness of power; IX. Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; X. How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages, and Saviors; XI. The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; XII. Entering Now into the Realization of the Highest Riches. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Father Tom and the Pope,

Or a Night at the Vatican. Written probably by Sir Samuel Ferguson. From Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine. This is a humorous account of a roicksome visit to the Pope of Rome by Father Tom, an Irish priest, armed with a superabundance of Irish wit, two imperial quart bottles of Irish "poteen," and an Irish recipe for "conwounding" the same. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Paine's Theological Works.

Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

Apocryphal New Testament,

Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, his apostles and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Price, cloth, $1.50.

FROM INDIA TO THE PLANET MARS.

A MOST REMARKABLE WORK.

Fascinating, Interesting and Instructive.

By Th. Flournoy, Professor of Psychology in the University of Geneva.

"This is an account of the experiments with the 'Geneva Medium,' Helene Smith. In her trances she lives the dual existence of an Indian princess and of an inhabitant of the planet Mars. Professor Flournoy and his fellow scientists have for more than five years experimented with these astounding physical phenomena."

This is a work of thrilling interest. It has excited great attention in this country and in Europe. Price, $1.50.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By the Editor of the National, with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorcet, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

The Universe By L. M. Rose.

This booklet contains 71 pages of explanation regarding force; the beginning of creation; what matter is; what life is; immortality; psychic science; the soul of things, and ends with a poem entitled "Song of Psyche," by Emma Nickerson-Warne. Price 25 cents.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK.

Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL.

Series one, two and three. By Lilian Whiting. Three choice volumes, each complete in itself, in which spirituality is related to everyday life in such a way as to make the world beautiful. Price, $1.00 each.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Will Mrs. Virginia Bryan send her postoffice address to this office, and oblige?

Mrs. Susie R. Thompson, the medium, is now located at 348 Oakley Boulevard.

Virginie Barrett writes from Toronto, Ontario: "The Spiritualist meetings are doing a good work. I have labored here since January and my meetings have received the attention of the thinking class. I have had a full house every time."

A. Merkle writes: "The Spiritualistic Society Students of Nature, 461 W. North avenue, corner Robey street, had a very large audience Sunday evening. Mrs. M. Schumacher's lecture on Palm Sunday and Its Origin, From a Historical Standpoint, was well received. Messages were given by Sister Ricket, and anxiously and thankfully received. Our services are conducted by our pastor. Lectures are given on interesting scientific and historical subjects."

Mrs. E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters held their semi-weekly meeting in Atlas Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, Wednesday, March 20, at 2:30. They gave readings, and at 6 p. m. served a supper, and at 8 p. m. held a circle, and the following mediums took part. Mrs. Dr. Caird, Mrs. H. Lichtig, Mrs. Alice Sexsmith and Mrs. Squires. Beginning on Wednesday, April 3, the Fraternal Daughters will hold a test circle the first and third Wednesdays at 8 p. m., to take the place of their semi-weekly entertainments. Mrs. Dr. Caird will have charge of this work, assisted by others."

Geo. Drummet writes: "The Dana (Ill.) Spiritualist Association wishes to let the readers of The Progressive Thinker know that it has been served by Mr. Max Hoffmann of Chicago, in the way of lectures, followed by tests. His work was remarkable. He did our community more good than words could express. Our meetings were more than a success, and we have the highest praise for Max and can recommend him to any society."

Harry J. Moore united in marriage James A. Nulton and Miss Ethel Bartlett, of San Diego, Cal., on Friday evening, March 8. Upwards of forty friends tendered him a farewell reception and the San Diego Spiritualists' Temple Lyceum voted to devote part of its Sunday morning, March 10th, session toward the same, which was done. Brother Moore writes that several have joined the society. He lectured in Ashland, Oregon, the Sundays of March 17, 24 and 31; also conducted class work during the week. His services are engaged in Portland, Oregon, for the Sundays of April. Address him there.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker writes: "The First Spiritual Union of San Jose has been very highly entertained by Rev. John W. Ring, the noted speaker from Crystola, Colo., at Hale's Hall, on two successive Sundays. March 17, a very interesting service was given at 2 p. m., a spiritual christening of four little girls, Rev. Ring officiating. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive. Sweet music was a feature of the occasion. A cordial reception was given Mr. Ring at the home of Mrs. Cora D. Ringlep, on Wednesday. An impromptu program and refreshments were the order of the evening. Tuesday evening our good Brother Ring gave an unique entertainment in behalf of the F. S. U. Jean Ingelow's 'Song of the Seven' was illustrated. Dr. H. S. Bock furnished the stereopticon views and the moving pictures, which were appreciated by all. Miss Linda Zink furnished music for the occasion. The anniversary of Modern Spiritualism will be observed by regular services; Mrs. Nettie P. Fox will be the speaker of the evening. Our annual election of officers will take place April 7. Mrs. M. E. G. Howe, state organizer, of Los Angeles, is engaged for the above date."

Bessie Bellman, a prominent worker in Spiritualism writes from Winfield, Kansas: "Winfield is now my home, where I am employed by the First Society of Spiritualists the first and third Sundays of each month. The second Sunday I serve in Blackwell, Okla., where an earnest, unselfish society is trying to make Spiritualism better known. The fourth Sunday of each month takes me to Cedarvale, Kansas, where a most harmonious and encouraging condition exists. Ground and money are pledged, and very soon Spiritualism will have a beautiful temple in this beautiful and prosperous community. The work grows and thrives, pushing up as resistlessly as the new vegetation. There is great demand for good work everywhere."

Ferd C. Suhrer writes: "It is with much pleasure we note the growing interest manifest each Sunday by the public in their attendance of the services of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists and the high regard and appreciation of the services of our workers and mediums. There seems to be no abatement in the enthusiasm, and we feel grateful indeed in having such efficient co-workers to enable the public to find in our society that quality so often woefully lacking in other religious and educational orders of a similar nature. On Sunday, March 24, our mediums again read sealed letters for a large number satisfactorily, the recipients of messages plainly showing their delight and admiration. The circles at 4 o'clock (for which there is no charge) are as popular as ever and are winning many friends and converts. Our supper at 5 o'clock is becoming known all over Chicago for its quality and ridiculously low price of 15 cents. We expect some more new additions to our already popular song service, and our concert will also be augmented by the help of well-known entertainers, both vocal and instrumental. Geo. B. Warne, M. D., was our speaker for the evening, and a more attentive audience never listened to a speaker. They realized the wealth of his remarks and were eager to catch them all, and those who came fearing a long, tiresome lecture of the kind they had heard many times before, were agreeably surprised, and when the end finally came they wanted more, more—they were not weary; the hour not late. Don't forget April 7, the first Sunday in the month, for that will be medium's day, and messages and tests will occupy the time both afternoon and evening. Tell your friends and let's all get together in one great jollification. Don't forget the place, Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street, top floor."

Mrs. Geo. Williams writes from Cleveland, Ohio: "Rev. Frank Ripley closes his engagement at the First Spiritualist Temple on Sunday, March 31. Mr. Ripley's work has been exceptionally fine, and has resulted in much good. Large audiences have been the rule. His messages have been exceedingly gratifying and pleasing. Mrs. J. Bloomfield gave a supper, English style, for the benefit of the Temple fund on Saturday evening, March 23. Over 80 people enjoyed the really excellent cuisine furnished by this energetic and zealous member of the Temple. Special services will be held Sunday, March 31. Rev. Geo. W. Kates and wife will commence a two months' engagement on Sunday, April 7. These spirited and talented workers will be welcomed with open arms, as their work is always appreciated, and productive of great good. New features relative to the Temple's future progress will be announced from time to time. A bazaar in the very near future is one of the good times a coming."

Wm. Hassmann writes: "Last Sunday evening, March 24, the services of the North Star Spiritual Union at its hall, 1546 Milwaukee avenue, were well patronized, the audience consisting of honest and earnest truth seekers. Sister T. Mueller, the society's medium, who has been sick for the past five weeks, but now is on a fair way of recovery, will not be able to attend to her duties for at least a couple of more weeks. Brother and Sister Winters who so nobly volunteered to take her place, were assisted by three other mediums, Sister Musika, Sister Golden and Sister Hogard, who were willing to give a helping hand to a suffering sister. Praise be to them, for they do not only advocate the golden rule, but act accordingly themselves. The concert for Easter Sunday promises to be a success, as many have volunteered to take part in the exercises. A hearty invitation is extended to all."

E. R. Kidd writes from Canton, O., in regard to the venerable Mr. Mathews: "This week the writer was in New Philadelphia, Ohio, on business, and while there called on Brother Charles H. Mathews, veteran worker for the cause of truth, and regret to say that I found him in a critical condition physically. Brother Mathews has been confined to his home since the 14th day of January, 1907. The malady with which he has been stricken is a combination of rheumatism and dropsy, and he fears it will be some time before he will be out again. At his age, he being in his 88th year, I fear it will go pretty hard with him. This I know will be sad news to the editor of The Progressive Thinker, also to hundreds of its readers who know him personally or by reputation. Let us, one and all, send to him our best thoughts and heartfelt wishes that he may rapidly recover and soon be upon his feet again."

W. J. Ward writes from Clinton, Iowa: "The 59th anniversary of the advent of Modern Spiritualism was befittingly observed by the Spiritualists of Clinton, Iowa., by a very beautiful display of fragrant flowers and a special musicale. Our loyal workers were amply repaid by a fine attendance. Mrs. Alice C. Barry, in an eloquent address, said in effect, that Spiritualism had done more real good, been more of a blessing, in a half-century than the church has been in nineteen centuries. Truly and well said. And we purpose to be forever loyal to our charge and do what we can to make Spiritualism the universal blessing it should be."

Dr. Jose Montoya writes from Wichita, Kansas: "The work here is progressing in good shape. There is some talk of a camp to be held here during the summer. Mrs. Shaw, of Springfield, Mo., has been with us and has rendered us good service. Mrs. Martindale, a resident speaker, addressed the First Society Sunday night, March 17. She was attentively listened to while she spoke for an hour on the Philosophy of Spiritualism. The Circle of Light meets every Thursday night at the studios, 407 E. Douglas avenue, and is well attended. A larger hall is to be secured to meet the demands of an ever-increasing membership. Many are the converts that have come to our banner in the last few months."

R. G. Lee writes from Headrick, Okla.: "In giving notice of our camp debate to take place at Headrick, Okla., we failed to mention date of commencing, which is 10 a. m., Aug. 20, 1907, and continuing six days. All interested write to me."

Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley writes from Portland, Oregon: "My dear mother, Mrs. Mary Taylor of Portland, Oregon, passed away Saturday morning, March 16. The call at last was very sudden. After my arrival she revived perceptibly, and the doctors pronounced her out of danger. My guides disagreed with them. I was with her to the last, and while I know she is better off, it was a terrible trial to pass through. My mother was a kindly woman, consequently made many friends who proved their true worth in her last illness and death. Though the home is large, it was too small for the attendance at the funeral. Her dear, sweet face was the face of a young woman, fallen into a sweet repose. She looked so much at rest. She has come to us several times and always with her same sweet way, and oh, so perfectly satisfied. A beautiful transition. Oh, beautiful Life! Beautiful Death! I shall start Tuesday, the 26th for St. Louis, to fill my engagement with the Temple society at the Anniversary exercises, Sunday. Mr. Grimshaw is enthusiastic over the prospect of a large meeting. From there I go home to Chicago, for a needed rest before beginning my Summer's work."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

ATTENTION, LYCEUMS. — Please send in second quarterly report before April 15. All lyceums not reported are most earnestly requested to do so. Yours for the young people, Anna L. Gillespie, National Sup't. Children's Lyceums, 180 Calhoon street, Battle Creek, Mich.

Wilson Fish, M. D., writes: "On Sunday evening, March 17, the Earnest Workers Spiritual Society had the pleasure of listening to Dr. A. B. Spinney of Belding, Mich., in one of his characteristic addresses at its hall, 333 Michigan avenue. The Doctor held his audience in rapt attention for mort than an hour and the reciting of his own experience in the long and rugged road from old orthodoxy to the comforting knowledge of the spiritual philosophy, made his address of especial interest to new investigators. The message-bearers of the evening were Mrs. Line and Mrs. Fish, who, in many pointed spirit messages gave the large audience convincing evidence of the presence of loved ones whom we call dead, but who live and are ever ready to minister to mortals."

Rev. Alice Baker writes from Lawton, Okla., where she is filling an engagement as state missionary: "Upon my arrival here, I found the Church of Spiritual Light I organized in November doing a splendid work, having secured a nice hall, leasing it for one year. A number of Longley's beautiful song books, have been purchased, and every member seems devoted to the cause. Last Sunday I lectured to good and appreciative audiences. Next Sunday we will have an anniversary service, and in the evening a naming and consecration flower service for a number of the little buds of promise. I will be with these good people a number of Sundays, going out to nearby towns through the week. On my way to Oklahoma I gave one lecture at Fruitland, Texas, and was royally entertained by Bro. G. Hengalter and family. Oklahoma people desiring my services as missionary any time this season, will kindly write me at once to my home address, 449 Live Oak street, Dallas, Texas."

At a meeting of the Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists, held to celebrate the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, at Berkeley Hall, Tuesday, March 26, 1907, Francis B. Woodbury, formerly secretary of the National Spiritualists' Association, presented these resolutions: Whereas, The Angel of Life has taken to the spirit world our beloved friend and co-worker, Theodore J. Mayer, treasurer of the N. S. A., therefore be it resolved, That the Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists in convention assembled, learn with sincere regret of his transition; that we greet his emancipated spirit with our earnest thank offerings for the great work he accomplished for the cause he so dearly loved, and for his liberality to our organizations, and the worthy poor. Resolved, That we deplore his loss as an executive business man of rare ability, who was ever ready to give his counsel and advice to aid organization in all its departments for the advancement of the cause which was sacred to him, that of Modern Spiritualism as a religion. Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the board of management of the National Association, and the Spiritualist press for publication. These resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Francis B. Woodbury writes from Greenfield, Mass.: "Exercises held Sunday, March 24, afternoon and evening. Talent, President of the society, R. F. Churchill, John E. Darling and Francis Bailey Woodbury; test medium, Annie E. Thomas, Brooklyn, N. Y. Between afternoon and evening sessions lunch was served at Union Hall to all who wished, free of expense; no admission charged; the collections and subscriptions for the day, $85. This society has expended $400 this season on its Sunday night meetings, entirely by collections and subscriptions, and is free from debt."

Harrison D. Barrett has concluded his engagement at Seattle, Wash., and is now in Washington, D. C. Address him there at No. 600 Pennsylvania Avenue S. E.

Dr. J. M. Peebles writes to us from Colombo, India. He is busily engaged there lecturing.

Mrs. Henrietta L. Lichtig goes to Sturgis, Mich., April 9. Parties desiring her services for lectures and messages, parlor meetings or circles, in that vicinity, can address her at 4746 Calumet avenue, Chicago, or Sturgis, Mich.

Samuel Huntington writes from Malden, Mass.: "Mr. Wiggin finished his first series of lectures and ballot readings for our society on Thursday evening, March 21. He chose for the theme, "Mediumship and Spirit Control." He gave a very able address, one which contained much food for thought. The time seems ripe for a new awakening among Spiritualists, and Mr. Wiggin seems well fitted as one of those to do that work. After his lecture he gave many fine messages, reading from ballots. He will give his second course of lectures for our society commencing April 4, and continuing Thursday evening through the month. Sunday services, March 24, was interesting as usual. At the afternoon circle, several took part. At the evening meeting Mrs. Nellie E. E. Abbott of So. Lawrence, Mass., was the speaker and message bearer. She prefaced her work by reading a fine poem entitled "Prayer," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Mrs. Abbott chose for her theme the 12th chapter of Corinthians, giving a fine address. She then occupied over an hour giving many proofs of the continuity of life. Mrs. Annie R. Chapman of Brighton, Mass., will be the speaker on the 31st inst., and Prof. R. A. Macurda of Lynn, Mass., on April 7."

Mrs. A. Birdsall writes from Jackson, Mich.: "The President of the State Spiritualist Association, Mrs. Abbie Sheets, of Grand Ledge, Mich., lectured and gave messages for the First Progressive Spiritualist Society the past two Sundays. She won the hearts of all who heard her, with her lovable, intellectual and sweet spiritual ways. While here she attended the Sunflower Club, which deserves mentioning. Our members all do excellent work for the society in giving their report financially, and are deserving of the heartiest praise. I wish every Spiritualist could have the pleasure of listening to our worthy State President, Mrs. Sheets, for she is an honor to every meeting in which she lectures."

Geo. A. Hetfold writes from Jacksonville, Fla.: "While at Gainesville, Fla., I had the pleasure of hearing Laura G. Fixen lecture at the Chautauqua held there. Her lecture was grand. Subject, 'The Seen and Unseen.' It did me good to see one of our lecturers on the Chautauqua platform. It shows the people are becoming more liberal. I heard many pronounce Mrs. Fixen's lecture one of the finest that had been given there. She is one who does not antagonize the church people, but wins them by her pleasant way, and sets them to thinking, that there is something deeper and grander than just the narrow creedal views held by so many orthodox members. There is a chance for some good work to be done in the South, and I would be glad to see more of Mrs. Fixen's class of lecturers there."

We are glad to know that G. H. Brooks has so regained his health that he is able to resume his labors again in the lecture field.

Mrs. Mattie E. Hull can be addressed at 1410 Kellam avenue, Los Angeles, Cal., until further notice. She intends to return East in May, and is ready to make engagements for camp-meetings or local societies.

A HAPPY SOCIAL FUNCTION.

A Pleasant Reunion and Reception at Los Angeles, Cal.

To the Editor:—I desire to tell the readers of our cause, something of a social function that graced the People's Spiritual Society in Burbank Hall in Los Angeles, March 23. On that evening we gave a reception to the workers of our platform and invited guests. The distinguished guests were Mrs. Mattie Hull, Mr. John W. Ring, Mr. J. C. Craig. The workers present were Mrs. J. J. Whitney, world-renowned test medium; Mr. Arthur Prentice, our talented chairman; Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Sullivan of the "Children's Home"; our beloved Dr. Briggs, who works with a will in every cause that she finds to do; Miss Freda Gerttzea and many others whose excellent powers as mediums are well known, as well as inspirational speakers.

Those who assisted in receiving the one hundred guests were Mrs. Rose L. Bushnell-DonnElly, Mrs. Nellie F. Sullivan, Mrs. Nellie Temple Taylor, Mrs. L. M. Cummings, Mrs. J. C. Craig, Mrs. Rose E. Weston, Mrs. Nettie Howell, our Nettie, the kind, hospitable friend to all the poor in spirit and weak in heart. She opened her two large parlors adjoining the hall, decorated them with lilies and vines, on a slightly raised platform were placed two crimson chairs clothed in exquisite flowers of our clime, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hull. The motto was, "Our Moses not dead, not divided from the beloved one." God bless our Nettie!

The program was carried out in full, music, dancing, speeches and recitations. A poem from the pen of Rose L. Bushnell-DonnElly, entitled "Dedicated to Our Absent Brother, Rev. Moses Hull," was read in a beautiful and soulful manner by Mrs. Nellie Temple Taylor. Vocal Solo by Miss Inez Freeback. Duet, Misses Edith and Marguerite Donn-Elly. Mrs. Brooks, inspirational solo. Duet, Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan. Vocal solo, "Star of My Soul," Mrs. Rose L. Bushnell-DonnElly. If James G. Clark, the author of this divine song, was present in spirit.

The collation was refreshing and dainty, every plate charmingly decorated. While serving, instrumental selections by Prof. Otto Horner, were given in a masterly manner.

Soulful harmony, friendship, love, reunions, and angel visitants joined in praise. After the repast was over we all rose and joined in one verse, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." During the singing Mr. Hull stood by his dear little Mattie, glorified with undying love, and was recognized by several clairvoyants during the entire evening. The most beautiful and divine reunion will be theirs when she is called to cross the rose-bordered divide that spans the other shore.

"Oh, don't be sorrowful, darling!
Oh, don't be sorrowful, pray.
The gate that leads out of life, sweet wife,
Leads to me, and eternal day."

Rose L. Bushnell-DonnElly.
Los Angeles, Cal.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About seven words constitute one line.]

Mr. H. H. Houmsom, of Monroe, Wash., passed to the higher life. He had spent seventy-one years on this plane, and for forty years had been a devout Spiritualist. He served his country in her hour of trial, and the G. A. R. of Snohomish conducted the services at the grave in that city. The writer conducted the services at the home. Mr. Houmsom was a native of Michigan.

EVELYN L. POMEROY.

Passed to spirit life, Mrs. Knopp, of Dover, Ohio, March 17. The funeral was held at her home on the 20th, and was largely attended by her wide circle of friends. She had reared a family of five children, had 22 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren, all of whom were in attendance. She was a Spiritualist in the highest meaning of that word. By her often repeated request Hudson Tuttle was called to conduct the services. ***

Mrs. Gertrude Jones of Grand Rapids, Mich., passed to the higher life March 20. For some years she has been almost blind. She was a patient sufferer. Her aunt, Mrs. Belle Fuller, gave her the tenderest care. She had only a few relatives, but a host of friends who rejoice that she is released from suffering, and with clear vision she is able to see her loved ones that preceded her to the angel world. The flowers were beautiful. Mrs. Merrill sang and the writer officiated.

MRS. AMANDA COFFMAN.

Orville Gesler, born Feb. 27, 1838, passed to spirit life, Mar. 20, 1907. He leaves a son, an adopted daughter, three grandchildren and a wife, Mrs. Ellen Shannon Gesler, to mourn his loss. He was for many years a firm believer in Spiritualism, and lived up to his highest conceptions of right. He has been a resident of Breedsville, Mich., since his boyhood.

EVA TRUESDELL.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price

THE SUNFLOWER CLUB.

Its Second Anniversary Supper, Entertainment and Ball.

That splendid Ladies' Auxiliary to the Illinois State Spiritualists Association, the Sunflower Club, has indeed proven itself a worthy spouse of the State association, as well as a helpmate and companion.

Their recent anniversary supper, entertainment and dance on Monday evening, March 25, was a grand affair and a success in every way.

The President, Mrs. J. R. Francis, presided with a modest dignity that was an inspiration of itself to the occasion.

Mrs. Laura Fixen's beaming face and talk warmed the affair with an enthusiastic ray of sunlight, as did the presence and talk of Dr. Geo. B. Warne.

Dr. Caird was a prominent figure in the "chair in the East" of the hall, and the lucky man in the hand painted China drawing; but we must not continue to mention names here, of sunlight and cheer, or there will be no room for these notes.

Mrs. Wilson, too, needs some attention in these notes for her activity in presiding over the palatable viands of the feast. She always looks after the financial part with a pleasing interest and business alacrity.

The program was carried out as follows:

Piano solo, beautifully rendered, by Miss Nellie Clark.

Remarks by Dr. Geo. B. Warne, president of the Illinois State Spiritualists Association.

A beautiful vocal solo, by Master Edward Miller, a very appreciable song splendidly rendered.

Recitation by Mae Dalloz, which elicited much enthusiasm. She is certainly an elocutionary wonder, a bud well unfolded in her childhood.

Poem, "The Sunflower Club," by the writer hereof, and which follows this report.

Solo by Mrs. Sexsmith; a sweet song sweetly sung.

Remarks by Laura G. Fixen, cheering and interesting, as are all her talks.

Piano solo, nicely executed, by Miss Ichabeck.

The Dance was a pleasant affair, as their dances always are, but the attendance was large, the interest enlivening, and the feeling beautiful and spiritual. In this connection the committee on entertainment deserve special mention for their activity and painstaking in introducing people, and assisting in finding partners for the dance.

TO THE SUNFLOWER CLUB.

Poem Read by the Author at the Second Anniversary of the Organization, Monday, March 25, 1907.

As you swing around the circle of the Cause of Truth and Right,
You will kindly please remember there are women in the fight;
And don't shudder, cringe or falter, at the mention of the fact,
That there is a Club of women that in harmony can act.

You may think the Club a wonder, but when all is said and done,
There is just a little feeling that the ladies have begun
To outdo the sterner fellows in pursuit of higher aims,
And more lofty aspirations than the average brother claims.

Who can see the smiling faces of these mothers of the move,
And not be more than willing all their methods to approve.
The great cause for which they labor must advance with rapid stride
When these mothers and these fathers go on working side by side.

We have need to pull together with determination true;
We have need to be united in the work we have to do;
There is little time for gossip with so many mouths to feed,
There is little time for scrapping when a brother is in need.

We can't join them, they won't let us,
but they seem to like our looks,
And our social side is needed, and our willing pocket-books.
They are just our great big sisters, and expect a sister's due,
But remember, kindly, brother, they've our common Cause in view.

Let us join them in their feasting and their overflowing souls;
Let us empty all their dishes and their steaming coffee bowls;
Let us dance with them in pleasure and our pocket-books unfold,
For their Club is but an infant—it is only two years old.

Let us all be gay and festive in our arder to do good;
Let us make our battle lively and our motives understood.
Let us join hands with our sisters and our brothers o'er the land;
And for Truth and Justice ever and forever closely stand.

DR. T. WILKINS.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of

FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary.
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us" and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Materialization." By Mmo. Isa-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is ust from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.00.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.
2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.
3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.
4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.
6—The Next World interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.
7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.
8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.
9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.
10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.
11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.
12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.
13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Can Telepathy Explain?

Results of Psychical Research.

By Minot J. Savage.

Dr. Savage, in this book of 243 pages, discusses problems that have vexed intelligent minds probably to a greater extent than any others, saving those of the religious life. He states a great number of well-authenticated instances of spiritist revelation or communication. His discussion is frank and fearless, and merits the widest reading, for he deals with facts and experiences. Price, cloth, $1.00.

A MASTERLY WORK.

Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth

By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.

A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth, $1.00.

ORIGIN OF LIFE

and How the Spirit Body Grows. By M. Faraday. Price, 10c. For sale at this office

A Conspiracy Against the Republic

By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. Price, paper, 25 cents.

WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. A Lecture delivered at the Freethinker's International Congress, Chicago, Ill., October, 1893. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, 10c.

WOMAN: A Lecture Delivered to Ladies Only. By Mrs. Dr. Hulburt. On the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. The divine law of true betrothal marriage, etc. Price, 10c.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

TWO IN ONE

A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books combined at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED

is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

"THE DREAM CHILD,"

A Fascinating Romance of Two Worlds. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents. Books like "The Dream Child" spur humanity on to make more and more demands of this nature, and will open up new heights and depths of spiritual knowledge.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Will, I believe, take its place beside Bulwer's "Zanoni" and the "Seraphita" of Balzac.—Daily Capital, Topeka, Kansas. Although simple and unvarnished with any inflammable descriptions, enthralls the mind to the exclusion of other thoughts, until reluctantly the reader closes the last page.—Minneapolis Sunday Times.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

The Influence of the Zodiac Upon Human Life,

With Character Readings of Persons Born Upon the Cusp.

The principles found in this volume are both a science and a religion, for a better and a far happier humanity. It points to the planets as an index to the human character and liability to diseases; also gives the gems and colors suited to temperaments evolved under certain planets. But the author, ELEANOR KIRK, lays special stress upon the fundamental principle that "All maladies known to man can be entirely dominated, forever cast out, by those who realize that mind is the master and body the servant." Price, cloth, $1.00.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 0 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

I. W. Pope: Q. Who was the Seeress of Prevorst?

A. Frederica Hauffe, who was called the Scherin von Prevorst, was born in the little village of Prevorst, in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1801. The village is a mountainous region, and secluded from the world. Her father was forester and game-keeper. She grew up strong, healthy and buoyant, yet from childhood was dominated by a faculty of presentiment and prescience of coming events.

This developed into a consciousness of the presence of spirits, much to the annoyance of her family. At 19 years she married a worthy man, whose home was in a valley, and the magnetic conditions of the locality, to which she was exceedingly susceptible, brought on physical prostration. As this increased, her psychic impressibility became more and more dominant, until she remained almost constantly in a cataleptic state, seeing and talking with spiritual beings. Her state resembled that of Mollie Fancher, except that she fully acknowledged the presence and influence of spiritual beings, was in constant communication with them and giving messages.

Dr. Austin Kerner, chief physician at Weinsberg, carefully observed the case with delicate regard to the subject and full understanding of cause. He wrote a full record, which is a most valuable volume in the library of Spiritualism. What is most remarkable is that this seeress, or medium, living almost a half century before the advent of Modern Spiritualism, should in her voluminous messages, anticipate its teachings, and in scarcely a single instance give voice to a thought not consonant with its philosophy The record if made to-day, would simply be that of one of the most remarkable cases of mediumship. The tests she gave of clairvoyance are clear, unequivocal and in such variety and number as to be unimpeachable.

The book was translated by that student of the spiritual, Mrs. Crowe, and published in 1858 by Partridge and Brittan, then controlling the "Spiritual Telegraph." It is to be regretted that the book has been for a long time out of print.

"Health Seeker": Q. I find a receipt published in nearly all the newspapers that come to me for compounding a remedy said to be of great value in curing many ills which afflict humanity. It is composed of dandelion, sarsaparilla and kargon. What is kargon?

A. The "receipt" which is inserted in all the newspapers as editorial matter, is an advertisement of the patent medicine kargon. It is one of the most cunningly devised schemes, to set the people to "doctoring themselves," and buying a patent medicine without knowing it, that was ever concocted.

Kargon is unknown to pharmacy, and the dictionary. The interested reader sees the receipt, at once says it's a good thing to thus get editorial recommend, and takes it to a druggist to fill. The druggist has never heard of kargon, but is destined to hear more of it for patients flock in. He sends to the jobber for a supply, and receives it in ounce vials. It can be obtained from no other source in the world but of its makers, and at their price, many times its value. In fact this price makes the prescription cost nearly or quite one dollar.

How well the scheme succeeds is shown by the applications made to pharmacists. One located in a country town with population of 500, said that in two weeks he had filled over one hundred of these receipts, and the number was rapidly increasing.

What is kargon? That, like the blend of all patent medicines, is a secret, but to the taste buchu and juniper berries are suspiciously present with concealing ingredients. To show how precious it is, it is put up in ounce vials and not in quart bottles, and this requires a half-ounce of dandelion and three of sarsaparilla. This may be a good combination for some diseases, but there is nothing new in it, nothing any physician could not concoct. For the kidneys, there is nothing especially helpful in dandelion or sarsaparilla. The kargon must supply such remedies if supplied at all. If composed of the drugs suggested it would be a whip to jaded organs, and give temporary relief.

S. M. P.: Q. Who was Doctor Quimby, and is it true Mrs. Eddy plagiarized Christian Science from him?

A. According to a writer in McClure's, and by the way, that magazine appears to have gone over to the new religion and become its historian, he was a mesmeric doctor in Portland, Maine. The title was assumed, for he had not studied medicine. From mesmeric healing he after a time became a practitioner of mental healing, which is the same thing under another name. He was regarded by the educated public as an "amiable humbug, or fanatic, but hundreds of his patients looked upon him as a worker of miracles."

Mrs. Eddy, then forty years old and a confirmed invalid from spinal trouble, hearing of his wonderful cures, determined to reach him. She succeeded and claims to have been cured. She became his enthusiastic pupil, and as he was an excessive talker, she gained a full knowledge of his theories, which were exactly those she afterwards put forth.

Did she steal his manuscripts and incorporate them in her book? As Mark Twain facetiously says, No one knows or can know, for the manuscripts have been destroyed. There are, however, shreds and fragments of Quimby's writings remaining, and his peculiar ideas of health and disease are known, and these clearly prove that all the essentials that Christian Science stands for were first stated by him.

What a pity there had not been magazines, reporters and eager publishers in the days of the advent of the Christian religion. There were none, and only a few priests could read. The starters of a new religion had it all their own way, and no one began to look into their statements or question the facts until nearly 200 years thereafter. Had the lime-light of publicity been turned on, and a bevy of reporters followed Christ in his meanderings, reporting the feeding of the multitude for the Jerusalem Herald, and the sermon on the mount for the Syrian Times, how different would be the religious dogmas of the present. In other words had the "Higher Criticism" been turned on then, there would be nothing for it to do at present.

The said lime-light of publicity has been streaming on Christian Science. Especially has a flood of articles poured out since the senility of Mrs. Eddy, has caused her son to apply for a receiver to her vast estate, and an accounting of those she has entrusted with her pecuniary affairs. Her failure and imbecility give the lie direct to all her doctrines of disease. The "Mortal Mind," which is supposed to conjure disease by its fancy, vindicates the reality of these fancies. Mrs. Eddy is old, infirm, senile, and soon to depart, like all other aged persons, and all the assertions she can make that there is no disease, or pain, and the assertions of all her votaries united, cannot change the facts.

Will Christian Science survive, and flourish as it has done, becoming a new religion? Mark Twain in his new book on this subject appears to think it is destined to take its place beside the other great world faiths. We fail to see it in this light. With the utter refutation of her teachings furnished by the triumphs of nature over her doctrine; the complete victory of the "mortal mind" there will come a questioning of her votaries of the soundness of her doctrines. The tidal wave has reached its highest, and with her death will recede. The monumental church at Boston will remain like the Mormon temple at Kirkland, in attestation of foundationless beliefs.

According to H. K. Carroll, LL. D., who is compiler of religious statistics for the Christian Advocate, there were in 1906, in the United States, 1326 Christian Scientist ministers or "readers," 863 churches, and 80,197 members. The gain for the year had been 104 ministers, 52 churches, 9,083 members.

Number of Spiritualists.—In looking for these statistics we come across another item of peculiar significance. Spiritualism was classified among the other Christian denominations! It is said to have 748 churches and 295,000 members, and to have added during the year 8 churches, and 29,500 members. The source of this information is not given, and we are left to conjecture how an orthodox minister could have arrived at these numbers. If only those who have subscribed to some form of organization be taken, the statement may be approximately correct, but for every one who thus subscribes there are a hundred equally devoted to Spiritualism who do not. Yet this showing compares favorably with the Unitarians who have only 464 churches and 71,000 members, and have made no gain during the year, and the Universalists with 56,-831 members and a gain of 2,190 for the year.

WILLING WORKERS.

Delphos, Kansas, Spiritualists' Ladies Aid Society.

Not many miles from the geographical center of the United States, in the fertile valley of the Solomon river, lies the little town of Delphos, Kansas. This little village has been the Spiritual center for hundreds of people in the past 30 years.

A small society of Spiritualists have maintained and conducted a camp-meeting, every year for the part 28 years. Hundreds and thousands of people have attended these meetings and learned for the first time the blessed truth of the immortality of the soul.

The Spiritualists Ladies' Aid Society are the willing workers helping on the good cause in every way possible. They helped pay for the beautiful grove where the camp is held, and now they want to help build an auditorium. Nearly every year they spend much of their time making articles for a bazaar which they hold during camp meeting in August. This year they are preparing to have a larger bazaar than ever, hoping in this way to realize a neat little sum to turn into the building fund for the new auditorium. There will be a handkerchief counter, a postal card counter, all kinds of wearing apparel and fancy work. There are only a handful of women to do all this, and we thought possibly, dear reader, if you knew a little something of what we are trying to do, you would be glad and willing to help out by sending something for the bazaar. Any little article that will sell readily, or if nothing else, just put a handkerchief in an envelope and send it.

Anything you may send will be thankfully received. Address all articles to the president,

MRS. M. C. DUDLEY.

Delphos, Kan.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

"The Psychic Riddle."

A Work of Special Importance, by Dr. I. K. Funk, D. D., LL.D.—Review by Hudson Tuttle.

This last book of the distinguished author has a more certain sound than "The Widow's Mite." Dr. Funk does not claim to be a Spiritualist, but is on the road, and when he receives the deficient evidence will squarely confess to the belief. Believer or not, he must be regarded as one of the most valuable exponents and missionaries of that cause. He is in similar position to the movement that the early church fathers were to Christianity. His writings are like their apologies. His zeal, honesty and courage are alike admirable.

Now most Spiritualists do not believe that their belief needs an apology for being. They think if an apology be made, it should come from the religious creeds, giving reason why they should longer remain in the light of day and not be cast on the rubbish heap of outgrown things. But to many, especially those who are timidly escaping from the thralldom of dogmatic religion, his words must be like a balm of Gilead. He shows that they can get a good way out into Spiritualism and not lose hold of God, and their belief in Christ. He proves that it is not a sin to believe in spirit communion. With such an authority to support him, the ordinary layman is encouraged to go on in his investigation. The devil is eliminated from the subject!

Dr. Funk has no doubt of the independent origin of the manifestations. His doubt is as to their identification as the work of departed human beings. The investigations detailed in this book are mainly for such identification. There is a chapter on communications received from Dr. Hodgson, and a record of the seances held with Mrs. French for "independent voices;" a chapter of attested facts, a summary, and a chapter of "left overs," brief notes, and suggestive thoughts, which the author compares to a handful of unset gems. The comparison is felicitous, for they are brilliant and present unexpected and glittering facets. The reader will be glad that they were left unset in the context.

The "research" with Mrs. French, is one of the most interesting and valuable. This lady belongs to the early type of mediums; such as came with the first great wave of spirit power. She possessed the rarest phase of mediumship, the "independent voice," and scorned to make charges for her seances. It was always with her a matter of accommodation of her friends. She was educated and refined and belonged to the Pierpont family, one of the oldest and most influential in the state of New York. She has been a medium almost her whole long life-time, and never was there a suggestion of deception or fraud on her part. Her private character removed all doubts on that score. It was by recommendation of influential men in Rochester that Dr. Funk became interested and invited Mrs. French to come to New York and allow him to investigate. There is this peculiarity about this "scientific investigation": The most despicable criminal at the bar is considered by the law as innocent until proved guilty. Every medium, on the contrary, is prejudged guilty until proven innocent. Dr. Funk proceeded to treat his guest as though she had come for the purpose to deceive him, by ventriloquism, megaphone or some unknown contrivance. As she came without asking pay, and the exactions of the manifestations so exhausted her vitality that there was often danger of her not rallying; at one time he says: "It seemed for a while that we might have a corpse on our hands and our medium go to the beyond;" there does not appear any motive for her practicing deception, and that she bore patiently the exactions and the imputations they implied, show that she is the possessor of an angelic disposition.

Well all the tests Dr. Funk could devise only strengthened the spirit theory. He had selected the seance room, chosen the members of the circle he wanted present, sat with the medium's hands held by others or himself, and yet leaves the whole matter under a cloud of doubt! The theory of ventriloquism appears to have had a strong hold with him, although he repeatedly declares it would have been impossible for her to have given the voices. He had a test which would be crucial. He would take a measured quantity of water into the seance room, put into it a few drops of coloring fluid, of a kind no one else knew of, and Mrs. French should take this in her mouth, and hold it there until after the spirits had spoken, then she should return it to the glass, and if of the same amount and colored by the same coloring matter, he would be certain the sounds were not made by her. This was not carried out while she was in New York, but at a visit of Dr. Funk to her home in Rochester it was to the letter, with perfect success. Was Dr. Funk satisfied? Oh, no. He says: "This test was perfect with only a single drawback which did not seem to occur to me, I am sorry to say, until after I left the house." (He remembered that no one held the medium's hands.) "A very sly, tricky person might have had an empty bottle or glass concealed about her person, and as soon as the light was extinguished emptied the liquid into this glass and then after the speaking, and before the light was relit, put the liquid back in her mouth." He remarks: "This concealed glass theory is an exceedingly unlikely one under all of the conditions. But it must be regarded as a possible one and should be guarded against in future tests." Mrs. French has given her mediumship to her friends for a long series of years, and submitted patiently to any and all tests proposed. She has convinced great numbers of the truth of spirit communion, but their evidence goes for nothing, until such times as she holds colored water in her mouth and has her hands held fast at the same time. Even then Dr. Funk would only be convinced that there was an independent force, not at all that it was a departed spirit!

And here we come to the whole gist of Dr. Funk's contention. As he has been called a Spiritualist, it is well that his position be clearly defined so that Spiritualists may know exactly where he stands, and will not place him in the front as their leader, nor delude themselves with the belief that he identifies himself with the cause.

"But aside from these (frauds, etc.) there are, in my judgment, whole classes of phenomena which point clearly to intelligent forces which exist outside of what we know as human bodies. These foreign forces manifest intelligence indisputably so. This intelligence is the chief element in the psychic problem to be solved. Whence and what is this intelligence?"

"If the reader will bear with me, I will once more endeavor to make clear my attitude. My definition of a Spiritualist is one who holds as true these two propositions:

(1) That intelligences who are foreign to us, that is, who reside beyond our five senses, can and do communicate through the physical sense organs with those—or some of those—who are living in the flesh.

(2) That these intelligences can and do identify themselves as those who once lived in the flesh.

"I have no hesitancy in accepting the first of these propositions. As to the second, I have seen no sufficient reason to believe it true. To its acceptance as scientifically proven there remains some very formidable difficulties."

In support, he gives his experience with various spirits, especially with one claiming to be Theodore Parker. He came through various mediums, but had no recollection of having conversed through any one before. He has never had the experiences with the first medium discredited by the spirit through a second.

Then there is lack of harmony in the communications. One spirit says he has been to Mars and found it inhabited, and another that it is a lifeless waste. Some say there are animals and flowers in the spirit world, others that there are none. A spirit told Dr. Funk that a friend was dead, another that he was in the flesh.

Dr. Peebles came to him with an explanation which serves the purpose of the devil to orthodoxy, only the Doctor has legions of devils at his command, and orthodoxy only one who is sadly overworked and underpaid. Dr. Funk remarks if the Peebles devil theory be true, "communion is a much more serious matter than it is usually thought to be; which is also quite likely."

Yes it is and ought to be a "serious matter" this communion with the dead!

Prof. Hyslop is introduced as being fortunate in making what he regards as an identification. Although Dr. Funk did not receive communications from Dr. Hodgson through Mrs. Piper, he expresses full reliance on Prof. Hyslop, who did, and, to the ordinary mind these appear to fully meet the requirements of identification. His own test with Mrs. Piper, the facts testified to by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Lombroso, and others, strengthen the proposition.

Every Spiritualist could contribute from personal experience facts confirming the identification of the communicating intelligence.

The objection of Dr. Funk has come under the consideration of every Spiritualist since the advent of the manifestations, and to those not cognizant of the fundamental principles of spirit existence are of serious moment.

When we take in consideration the difficulties in the way of perfect communication on this side, and the perhaps greater on the spirit side; that that there is as great diversity of thought there as here; and unknown limitations, the force of the objection is lost. It must be borne in mind that if in all the countless communications that have been received a single one proves identification, the verdict is decided.

Truly, it scarcely affects the conclusions of the readers whether Dr. Funk accepts the identification or not. They will be drifted unconsciously past his mooring. If the facts are as he states, and he believes, and there can be no doubt but they are, there can be no sharp line drawn between the two propositions, and the evidences that prove one prove the other.

If Beecher's return with the memory of the "Widow's Mite," was not a convincing test of his identity, we think Dr. Funk will never find evidence that will convince him. That it has not the effect on him it has on the reader, breaks its force as an argument. We believe it true because many parallel facts have come into our own experience.

The Psychic Riddle has been made more mysterious by Doctor Funk's conclusion, for his facts, and investigation, have no coherence or direction if the identity of the force be denied.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM.

It Has Been Beneficent as Well as Corrupt.

To the Editor:—This year I became a subscriber to The Progressive Thinker, and it is the most interesting publication of any that I see. Not only is it an exponent of spirit return, but of philosophy and reason—sometimes poor reasoning, that promptly receives its quietus by better, if the matter chances to be of much interest.

Apropos to the above are two articles on page four of the March 16 number, entitled "A Letter and a Reply." Mr. O'Donnell attacks certain statements and expressions in "Secrets of the East," viz., "Christianity has retarded progress," "idiotic dogmas of the church," "the Christian church sacrificed eighteen millions of the noblest and bravest of our fellowmen," etc.

The Editor, I take it, replies with rather crushing logic, but in the interest of absolute fairness and accuracy I want to raise one point in favor of Christianity. He says: "The truth is, the Christian system, whatever it is in theory, has been corrupt in practice from its very inception." He gives many logical proofs of this sweeping assertion, and just as it stands no man can deny its accuracy. But without contradicting that assertion, we can still assert that the Christian system, whatever it is in theory, has been beneficent in practice from its very inception. It has been both corrupt and beneficent, according to each individual instance. The balance may be on the one side or the other. That is not our contention. But the Christian system as exemplified in the lives of thousands and millions of instances has wrought for morality and better living. In such lives we may find the narrowest bigotry (on religious theory) together with real so-called Christian kindness and goodness. Many lives are moulded on the wholesome and beautiful morality of the best part of the bible, with the cutthroat verses and immoral parts omitted. There is no doubt of this in the mind of any fair thinker and clear-eyed observer.

Personally, however, I think, or am inclined to think with the Editor, that the Christian system in practice has retarded the real enlightenment of the race for some time past. It has not helped, but hindered logical thought and clear reasoning. It has not aided, but retarded the growth of our knowledge of our inner and more secret powers and psychic forces. It has been hostile to science and natural philosophy and truth in many forms.

Whatever mission the better portion of the Christian system could have in mankind's development is now mainly history. But—the literature of the bible has much of instruction and interest to the student of spirit return. It has in spots a beautiful and ennobling morality. In general, occult students cannot afford to pass it by because it is the book of the orthodox, who read it with blinded eyes and preach it with meaningless reiteration. The sonorous, monotonous, linguistic agility of Episcopal and other rectors has to me no more meaning that would a prayer wheel of India or China rapidly rotated by a paid obsequarian, if I may put out a new word. I mean a paid mourner.

The psalms are many of them full of a supreme beauty of thought and language. Even old Solomon, with his long list of wives and concubines can write sentiments worthy of Marcus Aurelius, or poetry better than Dante's.

All this biblical literature is part of the Christian system, and I for one believe in eclecticism. Take truth, beauty, and loving kindness wherever you can find them. There is much of all these in the bible, and it is at least wise to see the good as well as the bad.

In writing a reply to such an attack as Mr. O'Donnell's one would naturally try to open the gentleman's eyes by calling attention exclusively to the bad points of his reasoning and information. This merely suggested to me that the Christian system has some practical and good points with the bad—a common condition within this material realm of illusion. E. T. ROBBINS.

Columbus, Ohio.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

PRESENT CONDITIONS A HERITAGE.

Man's Thought and Action the Source of Improvement.

We read upon good authority that the birth roll of American-born children is decreasing. Can we wonder? When we look about us and consider the age in which we are living, or realize the gauntlet which the child must run in order to get through unscathed, is it any wonder the parents are nearly paralyzed with fear?

If the child is born into this world unwelcomed, what an unfortunate condition to be thrust upon the stage of action. What chance has such a being to make a success of life? Home and domestic surroundings can never be what they should be. The child must go from this home to the public school. What a character to be taught or governed. What can be expected of the teacher who perhaps may have had the same unfortunate environments as the child. Is it possible for a teacher wronged in the prenatal age, born into a home which knows nothing of pure unselfish love and guidance to fit for good citizenship, men of manhood, and women of womanhood. They will simply be machine educated, educated to skin each other in a competitive world of business.

If he should enter the political field, could we expect it possible for a machine politician to skate upon a machine-made platform and not get a serious fall? He is certain of a fall when he puts on his skates and glides out upon the smooth thin ice soon to take a plunge into the things which oppress in private life.

If he should look to the church, of faith or worship for strength to fight life's battles with, what is the result? Has the teacher, the instructor, of that church had that pure spiritual fitting and guidance which all teachers and leaders should have in order to lead none astray?

Is a person fitted for a teacher who has been told or taught that good morals are not essential to true salvation. The duties of good citizenship should be taught in every public school in this land. The students of the common school and the Sunday-school should rise to their feet and be asked the question, how can man best serve his own or God's best interests? and answer by saying man can best serve his own or God's best interests by promoting the common good to every child of earth.

There is constant conflict between right and wrong, the true and the false, in every sphere of life. Mankind were created for a grand and noble purpose and object in life, which consists in overcoming wrong, perpetuating and promoting the common good to all mankind.

The remedy for the public and the individual good of all is easily found. The trouble is, and has been, we look too far and too hard.

It is supposed by many to come from some far-off, uncommon source, unreachable, unapproachable to mankind unless through or by a miracle; while the fact is certain, that it is found in the conscience of the people. But with many this is too easy, too common, too cheap a method. This method would do away with millions and millions paid in salaries to the clergy, who are supposed to be the only ones who possess the ways and means to this great end, and thereby this perfectly free, common-sense, simple privilege is withheld from us, or it is doled out to us through graft.

The command of the Savior which says each must work out his own salvation is ignored and unheeded. An expert evangelist, a Gypsy Smith, or a Rev. Sunday must be employed at a good salary to unfold the mysteries of salvation.

The thousands of Sunday-school scholars of this land must each bear in their pockets their pennies or their price of salvation to be taken at collection. The Dowieites, the Christian Scientists, have each given great fortunes to their founders or leaders for them to squander in costly robes, extravagant living, and for the mystery of healing and salvation, which is but the free gift of God or nature. Instead, man makes it a commodity, and sells it at a price. When public officials are punished for selling or buying rights and privileges, they are called grafters and criminals.

What we need and what is coming is a revival of the conscience and morals in the minds and souls of the people. Faith and worship produce stagnation in the minds and souls of men, a seeming settled destiny which can never exist so long as man is a progressive, ever-changing being.

In the place of faith and worship, we should substitute knowledge and character, something of force and action instead of stagnation, which will produce in the human mind and soul an uplifting, unfolding, ennobling and inspiring tendency and action. Then the duties and labor of man will be far more simple and pleasant, and the results much greater and happier for all mankind in the ending and beginning of each year.

Oregon, Wis. F. G. WHITE.

VALUABLE LIBRARY ...OF... SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic. By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200. Price 25 cents.

A Few Words About the Devil. By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

After Her Death. The Story of a Summer. Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

Age of Reason. Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Ancient India, Its Language and Religions. Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

Ancient Pagan and Modern Christian Symbolism. By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A New Catechism. By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times. Price, cloth, $1.

Angell Prize Contest Recitations. To advance Humane Education in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price 25 cents.

Antiquity Unveiled. Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realms. An intensely interesting work, carrying one deeply into the mysteries of the past. By J. M. Roberts. Price $1.50.

A. P. A. Manual. A complete exposition of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association, with a vivid description of Romanism as it is to-day. Price 15 cents.

Apocryphal New Testament, being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, His Apostles, and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Translated from the original tongues, and now collected into one volume. Price, $1.50.

Apollonius of Tyana. Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

Around the Year With Ella Wheeler Wilcox. By Ella Ruddy. Price $1.

Aryan Sun-Myths. The Origin of Religions. A valuable compilation of historical facts relating to the ancient conception of the necessity for saviors. By Sarah E. Titcomb. Price, cloth, $1.

A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life. By Dr. Thomsón J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

A Sex Revolution. By Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "The Occult Forces of Sex," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price 25 cents.

As It Is to Be. By Cora Lynn Daniels. This is a most spiritual book and gives a beautiful account of the process of dying. Price, $1.

Asphodel Blooms and Other Offerings. A book of short poems by Emma Rood Tuttle. Neatly bound in blue cloth with silver letters. Price $1.

Astral Worship. With a chart in the front cover with signs of the Zodiac. By J. H. Hill, M. D. Price $1.

Atlantis, the Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly, is a book of rare thought, proving the existence of a continent by the name of Atlantis having existed years ago. Price $2.

Auras and Colors. An Esoteric System of Teaching Concerning Halos, Aureolas and the Nimbus. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cts.

Baby Craft, or Just What to Do for the Baby. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price 25 cents.

Behind the Veil. Written by a spirit in a most interesting manner, and describing his life in the spirit world. Price 75 cents.

Bible Marvel Workers, and the wondrous power which helped or made them perform mighty works and utter inspired words. Personal characteristics of prophets and apostles. By Allen Putnam. Price, 75c

Can Telepathy Explain. By Minot J. Savage. Price $1.

Celestial Dynamics. A normal course of study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature. Just the book for mental healers or students in the science. 107 pages. Price $1.

Character Building, Thought Power. A dainty little book and helpful. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, 35 cents.

Christs of the Past and Present. By Rev. Moses Hull. A valuable book. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Clairvoyance. A book of 109 neatly-printed pages, pertaining to a system of philosophy of clairvoyance, its law, nature and unfoldment. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, cloth, $1.50.

Concentration. A series of six symbol cards and a valuable pamphlet on concentration, meditation and inspiration, with instructions how to conquer yourself and develop your innermost faculties. By Laura G. Fixen. Price 50 cents.

Common Sense. A book of the Revolution, and yet adapted to the present day. A book to inspire the reader to love his free America. By Thomas Paine. Paper, 15 cents.

Confucious. The moral aphorisms and terseological teachings of the sapient Chinese philosopher. To which is added a correct likeness of the great philosopher and a sketch of his life. By Marcenus R. K. Wright. Price 25 cents.

Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood, the well-known lecturer. Those who have had the privilege of hearing Prof. Lockwood lecture will understand and appreciate the character of this work. Price $1.

Contrasts in Spirit Life, and the Recent Experiences of Samuel Bowles. Given through the mediumship of Carrie E. S. Twing. Price, 50 cents.

Cosmian Hymn Book. A collection of original and selected hymns for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home. Compiled by L. K. Washburn. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Crimes of Preachers. This book is just what its title indicates—a thorough exposure of the inner life of those elect of earth. A very interesting book. Price 35 cents.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism. By LeRoy Berrier. Price, 50c.

Cured. Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry. By William E. Towne. Price, 25 cents.

Data of Ethics. By Herbert Spencer. Price 50 cents.

Development of Spiritual Gifts. How to Receive Healing from the Unseen Helpers. By Carrie Fuller Weatherford. Price, paper 50 cts.

Dialogue on Religion, between Rev. John Jutz and Dr. T. A. Bland, Price, 15 cents.

Dictionary of Dreams. One Thousand Dreams and Their Interpretations. By Dr. Robert Greer. Price, 25 cents.

Discovery of a Lost Trail. By Chas. B. Newcomb. A book that will help you see the beauty and joy of life. Price, $1.50.

Echoes from the World of Song. A collection of new and beautiful songs, with music and chorus, in book form. By C. P. Longley. Price, $1; postage 15 cents.

Edith Bramley's Vision. A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic church are seeking to prevent the progress of liberalism. Price 15 cents.

Eternity of the Earth. By Daniel K. Tenney. Price 75 cents.

Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism, or a concordance of the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price $1.

Enigmas of Psychical Research. By Jas. H. Hyslop, author of Science and a Future Life. Price $1.60.

Evolution of the Devil. The most learned, accurate, scientific and philosophical analysis of His Satanic Majesty ever published. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York City. Price 25 cents.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the st, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 15 cents.

"The Great Work."

Lyman C. Howe Comments on Mr. Butler's "Review of the Reviewer."

Mr. Butler characterizes my summing up of The Great Work as "wholly gratuitous assumption"; and claims to have "read enough of the literature of that school to be able to confidently assert no such teachings and conclusions regarding the destiny of the human race as imply the final destruction of all but the fated few are to be found therein."

I am glad if Mr. Butler can so manipulate the author's language as to turn the darkness into light. I will let the author inform our readers in his own words. On page 272 of this third volume I find this: "It is here at this first great 'Mile-Post' that each and every one of us must stand and make our first determining election." "From this point forward two divergent pathways lead. If we proceed beyond this point, we must travel one or the other of these, for we cannot travel both." "One of these pathways leads to the North toward the land of spiritual darkness and death." * * * "From the remotest period in the march of human progress of which we have any authentic data to the present time, the mighty ceaseless and ever-increasing column of humanity has been marching onward along the evolutionary pathway of life to this first great Mile-Post, and parting of ways."

"Here, at this point of divergence, the column has forever divided, the many going north into darkness and bondage, and only the few going south into the land of liberty and light!" "And still the ceaseless tide of humanity marches onward, and still the many go north and the few go south." "Students of psychology throughout the past, as well as those of the present, have endeavored to solve the significant problem of why it is that the multitude deliberately turn at this point to the North and without apparent hesitation walk down the broad pathway of servitude into the Land of Darkness and Desolation, and why it is that only the few choose the way which leads to Liberty and Light."

If it be claimed that this does not mean Destruction, I would ask what else can it mean? The picture is even worse than destruction that annihilates the individual.

But, for further evidence that it does mean absolute extinction, let us turn to the second volume often referred to and quoted from in The Great Work. Treating of the Destructive principle he states it thus: "By and through this voluntary and intentional violation of the constructive sustaining and renewing and living principle of individual continuity he may, of his own choice ride upon the strong current of Nature's Destructive Forces backward and downward into the realm of spiritual darkness to disintegration, dissolution, individual extinction, and a final resolution back into Nature's elements to a point beyond the limits of all our present knowledge. And this is the way of death."—G. P. C., page 300.

The Line of Despair.

"At the lower level of this second or middle psychological state of man runs another line, a fixed and immutable line of Nature. From its portentous and appalling significance the Masters of Natural Science have aptly named it "The Line of Despair." "Below the level of this line of psychic condition lies the realm of spiritual darkness, and spiritual death." "Those who in their downward flight cross this line leave hope behind. This is the bourne whence neither man nor woman ever returns." "This line of despair marks the level at which the Destructive Principle of Nature in individual life becomes triumphant. It marks that point in the devolution of mankind where all the elements of individual being, spiritual, mental, and moral, set towards darkness and death."—G. P. C., p. 333.

It seems to me that these quotations abundantly justify my expression to which Mr. Butler so vigorously objects. I am willing to trust the good sense of our readers to decide. The author distinctly avers that the many choose the pathway that leads to darkness and desolation, and only the few take the pathway to the land of liberty and light; and those that take the downward way (ruled by the Destructive Principle) go down to death and "total individual extinction."

I have devoted so much space to these quotations that I cannot in this letter do justice to some other points in Mr. Butler's criticisms. He tells us that the author teaches that "the human will is supreme and that it is by virtue of this will that man is man." I have no quarrel with the human will. It is an important factor in carrying out the destiny of individual life. But if it is by virtue of his will that man is man, what shall we say of the will of a donkey? It is often quite as determined, and apparently as independent, and free, as the will of man; and quite as likely to be successful in expressing his choice in a business way.

If the human will executes the demands of choice, is the choice free? To determine this question let us try a test case. The author of The Great Work is presumed to be a Master. He has earned his Mastership by years of discipline and persistent effort. It is presumably a priceless blessing. If he were to voluntarily reverse his conduct and join the destructive forces, he would by his own showing go down to darkness, desolation and death. Now, if his choice and will are free, he should be able to do just that, and we might expect it at any time.

Can he choose to reverse his course and go down to darkness and death?

Can he will to do it? It will not do to say he can if he wants to. That is begging the question. He cannot want to do it. The only way that he can prove that he can is by doing it. All voluntary, conscious action of intelligent men and women must be in response to choice. Much is said about man's power to choose. I go further. He is compelled to choose. In this life we must act, or refuse to act. In either case we cannot withhold choice; and when we choose the supreme motive always decides the character of the choice. There can be no exception to this law.

Mr. Butler tells us that "Spiritual evolution implies freedom of choice." I do not see any such implication. To my mind that is, to quote his own words, a "wholly gratuitous assumption." On the contrary it implies compulsion of choice. If the choice were free and independent it might decide not to evolve, or permit anything to evolve, by using the will to execute its decrees. The will is simply an agent —never free—by means of which desires that create motives, and dictate choice, execute their wishes.

Mr. Butler, after presenting his views of free will and choice, says: "These facts are certainly not new or unknown, and it sounds strange to hear a thinking man in this day and age compare such reasoning to the creeds of savages, or the dark ages of Christianity." Mr. Butler seems to get things mixed. It was not his notions of choice or free will that was under consideration. It was the doctrine of the two pathways, one leading to darkness, desolation and spiritual slavery, and the other to liberty and light; and that the vast majority, for causes which they had no part in creating, were impelled—practically compelled to take the downward path to destruction; while the few apparently by chance, take the other pathway, against all the appearances of prosperity and happiness. Why this is so the author confesses he does not know. Making the choice depend upon the free will of the traveler, does not improve the picture, even if it were true. It is the old story of salvation for the few and damnation for all the rest. To shift the responsibility from God, or Nature, to man, does not relieve the darkness and desolation, or soften the pain of despair. This doctrine is directly opposed to the teachings of Nature, which everywhere shows progression; and also to the generally accepted philosophy of Spiritualism, which, in harmony with Nature, holds to the law of universal progression in this world and all others. The will of no puny individual can thwart the eternal order of Nature.

I intended to notice some points in the kindly criticism of Thomas M. Stewart; but cannot crowd it in at this writing. I have already extended this to double the length intended.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

The Great Work.

Wm. Omer Butler Makes Final Reply to the Criticisms of Lyman C. Howe.

To the Editor:—It will certainly give me pleasure to accommodate Mr. Howe by giving him my authority for the statement I made regarding the composition of light—"sunlight, electric light, lamp light," etc.

The statement from my former article to which he objects reads as follows: "As is well known, ordinary light is not simple in its composition, but is the result of a mixture of colers." If Mr. Howe will turn to Dr. A. P. Gage's well known text book, "Elements of Physics," he will find that in the above sentence I have quoted this authority almost verbatim. In paragraph 249 in this book, under the subject, "Analysis of Sunlight," page 240, we find the author uses these words: "From this experiment we learn that white light is not simple in its composition, but the result of a mixture of colors." This statement Mr. Howe flatly denies in these words: "Instead of light being 'the result of a mixture of colors', all color is the result of light." Further on Mr. Howe says: "I know nothing of light composed according to nature's formula. As I understand it there is no composition requiring a formula." Bua, on the contrary, this authority says: "The composition of white light has been ascertained by the process of analysis; it can be verified by synthesis; i. e., the colors after dispersion may be reunited, and the result of the reunion is white light."

For the settlement of this conflict I shall have to refer Mr. Howe to the author of the above-named work, to whom, together with hundreds of other physicists, the fact that white light is composed of the seven prismatic colors is certainly "well known." Until it is shown that these authorities are mistaken, I must continue to believe that the above fact does most decidedly "disturb" Mr. Howe's criticisms, and that the analogy between Light and Truth does hold good to the last detail.

Of course, if it were true that light is not composite, then my argument and conclusion as to this analogy would not hold good. But it is not only true but well known, being commonly taught in our schools and colleges, and it seems incredible to me that the idea should strike Mr. Howe as novel or doubtful, since he claims Physical Science as the source of his information. Take for instance, the text-book from which I have just quoted, which is used in hundreds of schools and colleges in this country, can it be doubted that one of its fundamental teachings is "well known?"

I therefore, deliberately repeat my former statement, that between various degrees of intensity of white light, (sunlight, electric light, candle light, etc) there is no neutralizing or destructive tendence, but that this tendence only obtains between the component parts of white light. All of which illustrates the statement that normal truth is not self-destructive in any degree, but that partial truths may and often do conflict and destroy each other. The analogy, therefore, between Light and Truth, is not only beautiful and profoundly important, since it shows how necessary it is that the soul who would grow should be free from all prejudice and dogmatism and open to the benign influence of the omnipresent Spirit of Truth.

Referring to my statement that the books of the Harmonic Series do not teach the "final destruction of all but the fated few" Mr. Howe takes exception, and in proof of his position quotes at some length from two of the books. Here again the intelligent reader will have to decide whether any such doctrine is deducible from the passages quoted. Kindly but firmly I insist that Mr. Howe is mistaken, that no such conclusion can justly be drawn from the language. I have called this a "gratuitous assumption" because it is assumed that the author of "The Great Work" teaches that all chance of leaving the way of destruction ends with physical death—that one traveling the pathway, which if continued in leads to destruction, will necessarily continue to travel it unto the end.

Our debate on this point would have been quickly settled in Mr. Howe's favor if, instead of these lengthy quotations, he had pointed out just one sentence in which the author says or implies that once the road is traveled, it is never forsaken for the right way. In all these quotations there is not even a suggestion that the way of self-destruction cannot be left, nor that this may not take place centuries after physical death. Their plain intent is to point out the consequent self-destruction of all who refuse to leave the way of destruction. It is indeed taught that there is a Line of Despair, but is anything said as to how many reach that line or how long a time is required to reach it?

While I have no personal knowledge of the opinions of the author on this subject, yet I have no doubt that, in common with Spiritualists, Theosophists, and other liberal thinkers, he entertains a large hope for the race as a whole, and in the nature of the case this hope presupposes what is known as "future probation." But whatever his unexpressed opinion on this subject may be, I am very sure that there is nothing in his writing which I have read which in any way suggests the final destruction of all but a few of the race.

Regarding the great question of the freedom of the will, it is probable that we shall continue to differ. Mr. Howe does not see that it is free, and until he does it is certainly his duty to deny that such freedom exists. Yet I am surprised that a Spiritualist should take such a position. I am aware that there are a few materialistic philosophers yet on earth who can see in the Universe only a "Riddle," and to such fatalists man is naturally only an automaton without free will or choice, but I am surprised to learn that Mr. Howe is a believer in such philosophy.

One would naturally expect that a Spiritualist would have much more in common with the great Swedish Seer, Swedenborg, whose profound philosophy is coming to be more and more recognized by modern scholars. The fact that Swedenborg's revelations of the Spirit World have been so abundantly confirmed by spirit communication since his day should commend to our reason that broad philosophy which was the result of his long experience and consequent illumination.

But what does Swedenborg teach on this subject? He shows, and that with inexorable logic, that the essential life of man is his love (what he desires) or will; that no spiritual evolution is possible except as this love or will is preserved entirely free; that consequently the Power above us provides that the spiritual associations of every man are such that he is kept in a constant state of "equilibrium" as regards freedom of desire; that to destroy this freedom would be to destroy the man, since this love or will (which is one and the same) constitutes his very life. This truth there are many on earth to-day who claim they see (and therefore believe, for we should believe nothing that we do not see, that does not appeal to our reason) in the same sense one "sees" the demonstration of a problem in Geometry. It is no longer unknown but acknowledged by practically all our great modern philosophers, as for instance James, Lodge and Fiske.

Mr. Howe says: "The will is simply an agent—never free—by means of which desires that create motives and dictate choice execute their wishes." According to this, man, though at no time possessing freedom of will, does possess the faculty of desiring and choosing. This is a very fine distinction, for while he denies the sovereignty of the will, he admits that of desire. For the purpose of this argument it is one and the same thing whether we call it will or desire, since all that I maintain is that man has this power of determination, by whatever name it may be called.

For illustration, let us suppose a man who is traveling a pathway which finally divides and goes in opposite directions. At the parting of the ways the man stands as the sole arbiter of his destiny. His desires may at first lead him to think favorably of both ways. Still, the ways differ and lead to different destinations. He finally follows the way which is most in accord with his desires, all of which illustrates the truth of Swedenborg's statement that a man's very life is his love or desire and this is inseparable from the will, for that which we desire we love, and that which we love we invariably will and do. If I do not keep the moral law, it is because my love for it is lacking.

True, it is the constant effort of the Omnipresent Spirit to "draw out" (educate) or evolve in us a higher love or life, and this it does by letting in the light of truth, yet we have the power at any time to shut out or reject this light and thus check the process of evolution. Accordingly, if the soul has the power to desire (as Mr. Howe admits above) it follows that it has the power to will, for our love, our desire and our will are inseparable.

In conclusion I would say that as no apparent benefit is to be derived from extending this discussion (as for my part it would be but to repeat what I have already written), my part of it will close with this present article. I am quite willing that Mr. Howe should have the last word. I trust I have succeeded in at least one of my aims which was, that while maintaining a stout defense of that which I consider truth and justice, I should show all due regard and consideration for those who differ from me in opinion. I have written from the standpoint of one who is an outsider and identified with neither party of this controversy, but who nevertheless entertains the broadest sympathy for both parties and for all lovers of truth.

While I have not the distinction of belonging either to the Spiritualist's body or to the Great School, yet this much I do claim for myself, that I have arrived at that point in the evolutionary process where a man comes to love truth for its own sake, regardless of the source of its discovery. Consequently I find it no longer possible to sympathize with the sectarian spirit which says:

We have the truth; you can teach us nothing." The opinions of my party are worth no more to me than those of any other party, for I find it my duty to summon each and all before that highest tribunal—the Human Reason, and to value each one according to its intrinsic worth.

With this disposition of mind I have read extensively in the writings of Swedenborg, as also in the literature of Spiritualism, much of which latter I consider most valuable and beautiful. But I have also read "The Great Work," and the same freedom from bias which enabled me to discover the great truths in Spiritualism, enabled me to see the profound philosophy brought to light in this book; a philosophy which does not destroy but rather fulfills the truths of Spiritualism.

Viewing the subject from this impartial standpoint, I must confess that to me it seems almost incredible that a broad-minded lover of truth, which all Spiritualists are supposed to be, should fail to discover more of the lasting worth of this truly "great work" than is revealed in Mr. Howe's review to point out blemishes? Even did the alleged defects exist, would that lessen the reviewer's moral obligation to give due prominence to the many points of excellence of the book?

But aside from this obligation, that which most amazes me is this question: How is it that the reviewer's love for the recognition of all-conquering Truth did not cause him to joyfully proclaim the priceless treasures of this book (than which many competent judges claim a greater was never written), rather that give occasion to a benighted ecclesiastic to call attention to the oversight? Possibly the reviewer will come back at me with the old adage; de gustibus non est disputandum, and it is probably true that we should not question or object to one's tastes, yet we may doubtless wonder at them.

WM. OMER BUTLER.

CATHOLIC INDULGENCE.

A Catholic Priest Tells What It Does Not Mean.

The statement that "Catholic doctrines never change" is a mistake, according to a Lenten sermon by Rev. Bishop Conaty, on the subject Indulgence, at the Cathedral in Los Angeles, and reported in the Los Angeles Herald. He explains it all away.

He says, "Indulgence is not license to commit sin—does not mean remission of punishments——it is not a permission to commit sin, or pardon of sin—no power can grant such a permission—no sin is remitted except through confession—after guilt has been removed by pardon there remains punishments unexpiated."

Moreover, Rev. Conaty declares "the church teaches that indulgences are not for sale, and such sale is crime."

Well, indulgences have been for sale and have been sold and brought millions of dollars into the church treasury, which stands responsible for the crime. The money for building the church of St. Peter at Rome by Pope Leo X, was raised by the sale of his indulgences. He said it was "a profitable fraud." The price was very high and those who had plenty of money could buy them.

This matter of indulgence was the cause of antagonism between Martin Luther and the Catholic church, and it was the cause of Protestantism. Conaty now uses the same arguments employed by Luther and his church in their warfare against Catholicism.

In the time of Luther the indulgence was absolution from all past sins, excesses and penalties, with the liberty and license granted to anyone to commit any excesses, sins or crimes, with a pardon in advance and a passport into heaven.

If this doctrine has never before been repudiated, it is now, by Conaty, and when a Roman Bishop declares a thing in a Lenten sermon, it comes from very high authority, and that settles it conclusively. This is an encouraging sign of progression.

A. H NICHOLAS.

Summerland, Cal.

$2,000 REWARD.

Cecil A. Brittan taken from the toll gate, Umatilla county, Oregon, July 15, 1906. $2,000 reward if he is returned alive, or $50 for his body. DESCRIPTION: Complexion very fair. Rosy Cheeks. Small nose and mouth. Light brown hair. Round face and head. Small scar on left side of lower lip. Small feet and hands. Very bright. Talks very plain. Height about 3 feet 6 inches. Five years of age. Information wanted by R. L. Brittan, 117 East Main street, Walla Walla, Washington.

To the Editor:—Please impart the above information to some of your best mediums. They may be able to find our child, and if so they can get the reward. This message comes from the heart-broken parents.

MR. AND MRS. R. L. BRITTAN.

RHEUMATISM

CURED

Through the Feet

Anyone Can Try Without Cost This Great External Remedy Which Is Curing Thousands.

Send Your Name To-day and Get.

A $1 PAIR FREE TO TRY.

We want every reader of this paper who suffers with Rheumatism to send us his or her name. We will send by return mail a pair of the celebrated Magic Foot Drafts, the new Michigan external remedy which has brought more comfort into this country than all the internal medicines we know of. If they give relief, send us One Dollar; if not, don't send us a cent. We take your word. You decide.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn as shown in the picture, relieving pain in every part of the body through the feet. Our Free Book is fully illustrated (in colors) so that anyone who reads it can understand the relation of the foot pores and nerves to nature's plan for ridding the system of pain-causing impurities. Don't delay, but send to-day for our Free Book, and the Free Trial Drafts. They are curing cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, after doctors and baths and medicines had failed. It costs nothing to find out whether they will cure you. Will you try them? Address Magic Foot Draft Co., X014 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Write to-day.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

(Advertisement.)

IN A VISION.

In a vision I have gotten the location of a tract of mineral land in Missouri, but have no money to buy it with. Who will furnish the money and let me buy it for them. My getting, and owing for, without interest, a divided interest in the land. I had never visited the town where the mineral land is up to the time of getting its name in a vision, but I afterwards purposely visited it and found the location of the land as I had seen it in my vision. I am honest, and will not cheat any person of anything, and any honest and capable medium would say the same if given any writing of mine for a test of knowing about my honesty and truthfulness. Would not buying this land be better than investing in ninety per cent of mining stock of to-day? as you would own the land, and develop it if you wished. Address C. M., P. O. Box 573, St. Louis, Missouri.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

MRS. E. M. HITCHCOCK will answer questions for 25c. Send own handwriting and lock of hair. Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash

WALNAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Walnah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

FRED P. EVANS,
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,
FRED P. EVANS.
2238 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Welcome, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

TRUMPETS:

Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal; insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark seance, T P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.
JAS. NEWTON, 426 Dorr St., Toledo, O

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to
FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. B. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd., Brookline, Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $7.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Vermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago. Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth st.
San Jose, Cal.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 185 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth 50c.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism

A Treatise on

HUMAN CULTURE.

By Leroy Berrier Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas. Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.

By Sarah E. Titcomb. With an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Faces." Price, cloth, $1.00.

SPIRITUAL SONQSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry, Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

BARRELS OF AIR BURNED AS FUEL

New, Remarkable Stove—Ohioan's Great Invention—Consumes 395 Barrels of Air to One Gallon of common Kerosene oil making oil-gas—the New Fuel that looks and burns like gas!

Wood, coal and oil all cost money. ONLY FREE FUEL IS AIR! Unlimited supply—no trust in control. Air belongs to rich and poor alike. We can't burn air alone but see here! Our wonderful stove burns air and gas—very little gas—principally air. Takes its fuel almost entirely from the atmosphere.

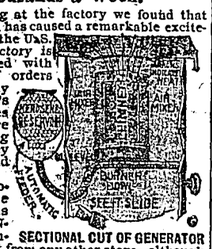
A miniature gas works—penny fuel for every family—save ⅓ to ½ on cost—save dirt and drudgery—no more coal or wood to carry—ashes unknown—absolute safety.

SEE HOW SIMPLE! TURN A KNOB—TOUCH A MATCH—FIRE IS ON. TURN AGAIN—FIRE IS OFF! THAT'S ALL.

Astonishing but true—time-tested—proven facts—circulars give startling details—overwhelming evidence.

NO SUCH STOVE SOLD IN STORES—UNLIKE ANYTHING YOU'VE SEEN OR HEARD OF.

A genius of Cincinnati has invented a new, scientific oil-gas generator that is proving a blessing to women folks, enabling them to cook with gas—relieving them of drudgery. Makes cooking and housework a delight and at the same time often saves ½ to ¾ in cost of fuel.



How often have many of our lady readers remarked that they would give anything to get rid of the drudgery of using the dirty coal and wood stoves—also the smoky oil wick stoves and their gasoline stoves which are so dangerous and liable to cause explosions or fire at any time.

Well, that day has arrived and a fine substitute has been discovered and every family can now have gas fuel for cooking, baking and heating and not have their kitchens a hot, fiery furnace in summer, and be carrying coal and ashes—ruining their looks and health.

Thousands a Week.

Upon calling at the factory we found that this invention has caused a remarkable excitement all over the U.S. —that the factory is already rushed with thousands of orders and evidently the Company's representatives and agents are making big profits as they offer splendid inducements.

As will be noticed from the engraving, the OIL-GAS GENERATOR is entirely different from any other stove—although its construction is very simple—may be easily and safely operated and is built on the latest scientific principles, having no valves, which is a marked improvement, as all valves are liable to leak, carbonize, clog up or overflow.

SECTIONAL CUT OF GENERATOR

By simply moving a knob the oil is automatically fed to a small, steel burner bowl or retort where it is instantly changed into gas, which is drawn upwards between two red hot perforated steel chimneys, thoroughly mixed with air and consumed, giving a bright blue flame—hottest gas fire, similar in color and heating power to natural gas.

This invention has been fully protected in the U. S. Patent Office and is known as the HARRISON VALVELESS, WICKLESS, AUTOMATIC OIL-GAS GENERATOR—the only one yet discovered that consumes the carbon and by-products of the oil.

The extremely small amount of Kerosene Oil that is needed to produce so large a volume of gas make it one of the most economical fuels on earth and the reason for the great success of this Generator is based on the well known fact of the enormous expansiveness of oil-gas when mixed with oxygen or common air.

Oil-gas is growing so cheap that 15c to 20c a week should furnish fuel gas for cooking for a small family.

Kerosene oil from which oil-gas is made may be purchased in every grocery—is cheap and a gallon of it will furnish a hot, blue flame gas fire in the burner for about 18 hours and as a stove is only used 3 or 4 hours a day in most families for cooking, the expense of operating would be but little.

In addition to its cheapness is added the comfort, cleanliness—absence of soot, coal, dirt, ashes, etc.

What pleasure to just turn on the oil—light the gas—a hot fire ready to cook. When through, turn it off. Just think; a little kerosene oil—no match—light—a beautiful blue gas flame—hottest fire—always ready—quick meals—a gas stove in your home.

It generates the gas only as needed—Is not complicated, but simple—easily operated and another feature is its PERFECT SAFETY.

NOT DANGEROUS LIKE GASOLINE.

And liable to explode and cause fire at any moment. This stove is so safe that you could drop a match in the oil tank and it would go out.

This Oil-Gas Stove does any kind of cooking that a coal or gas range will do—invaluable for the kitchen, laundry—summer cottage—washing—ironing—canning, etc. Splendid for canning fruit—with a portable oven placed over the burner splendid baking can be done.

Another Important Feature

Is the invention of a small Radiator Attachment which if placed over the burner makes a desirable heating stove during the fall and winter so that the old cook stove may be done away with entirely.

While at the factory in Cincinnati the writer was shown thousands of letters from customers who were using this wonderful oil-gas stove, showing that it is not an experiment but a positive success and giving splendid satisfaction and as a few extracts may be interesting to our readers we produce them:

L. S. Norris, of Vt., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Generators are wonderful savers of fuel—at least 50% to 75% over wood and coal."

Mr. H. Howe, of N. Y., writes: "I find the Harrison is the first and only perfect oil-gas stove I have ever seen—so simple anyone can safely use it. It is what I have wanted for years. Certainly, a blessing to human kind."

Mr. E. D. Arnold, of Nebr., writes: "That he saved $4.25 a month for fuel by using the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove. That his gas range cost him $5.50 per month and the Harrison only $1.25 per month."

J. A. Shafer, of Pa., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Stove makes an intense heat from a small quantity of oil—entirely free from smoke or smell—great improvement over any other oil stove. Has a perfect arrangement for combustion—can scarcely be distinguished from a natural gas fire."

Mr. H. B. Thompson, of Ohio, writes: "I congratulate you on such a grand invention to aid the poor in this time of high fuel. The mechanism is so simple—easily operated—no danger. The color of the gas flame is beautiful dark blue, and so hot seems almost double as powerful as gasoline."

Mrs. J. L. Hamilton, writes: "Am delighted—Oil-Gas Stoves so much nicer and cheaper than others—no wood, coal, ashes, smoke, no pipe, no wick, cannot explode."

Hon. Ira Eble, J. P., of Wis., writes: "Well pleased with the Harrison—far ahead of gasoline. No smoke or dirt—no trouble. Is perfectly safe—no danger of explosion like gasoline."

Chas. L. Bendicke, of N. Y., Writes: "It is a pleasure to be the owner of your wonderful Oil-Gas Stove—no coal yard, plumbing—ashes or dust. One match lights the stove and in 10 minutes breakfast is ready. No danger from an explosion—no smoke—no dirt—simply turn it off and expense ceases. For cheapness it has no equal."

ALL SIZES.

HOW TO GET ONE

All our lady readers who want to enjoy the pleasures of a gas stove—the cheapest, cleanest and safest fuel—save ½ to ¾ on fuel bills and do their cooking, baking, ironing and canning fruit at small expense should have one of these remarkable stoves.

Space prevents a more detailed description, but these oil-gas stoves will bear out the most exacting demand for durability and satisfactory properties.

If you will write to the only makers, The World Mfg. Co., 6502 World Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, and ask for their illustrated pamphlet describing this invention and also letters from hundreds of delighted users you will receive much valuable information.

The price of these Stoves is remarkably low, only $3.25 up. And it is indeed, difficult to imagine where that amount of money could be invested in anything else that would bring such saving in fuel bills, so much good health and satisfaction to our wives.

DON'T FAIL TO WRITE TODAY

For full information regarding this splendid invention.

The World Mfg. Co., is composed of prominent business men of Cincinnati, are perfectly responsible and reliable, capital $100,000.00 and will do just as they agree. The stoves are just as represented and fully warranted.

Don't fail to write for Catalogue.

$40.00 Weekly and Expenses.

The firm offers splendid inducements to agents and an energetic man or woman having spare time can get a good position, paying big wages by writing them at once and mentioning this paper.

A wonderful wave of excitement has swept over the country, for where shown these Oil-Gas Stoves have caused great excitement. Oil-Gas fuel is so economical and delightful that the sales of these Stoves last month were enormous and the factory is rushed with thousands of orders.

Many of our readers have spare time, or are out of employment and others are not making a great deal of money, and we advise them to write to the firm and secure an agency for this invention. Exhibit this stove before 8 or 10 people and you excite their curiosity and should be able to sell 5 or 8 and make $10.00 to $15.00 a day. Why should people live in penury or suffer hardships for the want of plenty of money when an opportunity of this sort is open?

Agents are doing fine—Making big money.

WONDERFUL QUICK SELLER.

Geo. Robertson, of Maine, writes: "Am delighted with Oil-Gas, so are my friends—took 12 orders in 8 days."

A. B. Slimp, of Texas, writes: "I want the agency—In a day and a half took over a dozen orders."

Edward Wilson, of Mo., writes: "The Harrison very satisfactory—Sold 5 stoves first day I had mine."

J. H. Haiman, of Tenn., writes: "Already have 70 orders."

This is certainly a good chance for our readers to make money this summer.

Hundreds of other prominent people highly endorse and recommend oil-gas fuel and there certainly seems to be no doubt that it is a wonderful improvement over other stoves.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 13, 1907 NO. 907

A Backslider.

He Is a Veritable Curiosity, and Should Have a Hearing.

Dr. C. W. Hidden, an exceptionally bright man intellectually, and once a devout Spiritualist, left the ranks of Spiritualists and became a Lay Evangelist of the Congregational Church. He lately delivered a lecture in Boston, Mass., taking for his subject, "The True Religion." We publish the same, so that our readers can realize how a "Backslider" can talk.

Dr. C. W. Hidden of Newburyport, for many years identified with Spiritualism, now a lay-evangelist of the Congregational denomination, gave an address before the Page class in the Dudley Street Baptist church, Boston, on Sunday, subject, "The True Religion: Is It Spiritualism?" He said:

Spiritualism may be best defined as a religio-philosophical movement, resting upon the central claim of proven immortality.

That the dead live and can return to influence the living, is not a new but an old belief. Spiritualists admit this, but add that spirit existence and spirit return are Bible truths, overlooked or ignored by the church; that Spiritualism came to the world to set the church right on these important questions.

Converts are won from the church to "revel in a freedom never experienced before. The people are free, there is no one to order about; all seem happy, free and contented. Yet this very freedom, with its absence of authority and lack of wise direction, constitutes Spiritualism's gravest danger. It allows truth and falsity to nestle side by side; knavery and deceit to stalk abroad unchallenged; the impure to mingle with the pure, forming a combination that spells mischief to a new comer, unless forever on the alert against temptations that beset on every hand."

"The greatest mistake a minister can make—preaching a sermon against Spiritualism without a full knowledge of the subject."

Spiritualists are not insane. They may be found in every calling, every profession. In the business world, in art, science, literature, they rank with their fellows. The courts have held that a belief in Spiritualism does not, necessarily, imply insanity, and everywhere Spiritualists are held to be the equal in every respect of other men.

If by the statement that Spiritualism is a nest of free lovers, it is meant that Spiritualists as a whole practice immorality, it is not true. The prominent representatives of Spiritualism stand squarely for the sanctity of the marriage relation; cherish child life as a gift of God; regard the home as the bulwark of the nation's safety. There is a class whose lives may be open to criticism, but they are not regarded as Spiritualists by the Spiritualists themselves. They are called the barnacles clinging to the under side of the Spiritualistic ship.

The argument that if spirits are able to return they would come to their own; instead of through strangers, is thus explained: You know nothing of psychic law or the requirements for the transmission of messages between the two worlds; your friends were equally ignorant when they went away. How can you reasonably expect, then, to get into communication with them? The medium being familiar with the laws governing both sides of life, and trained in inter-communication, is the only person fitted to serve for the transmission of messages between the seen and the unseen.

Spiritualists say that Spiritualism is not condemned by the scriptures; that the old and new testaments describe two types of the media, one true and the other false. Throughout the bible the false are condemned, but in no instance are we warned against the true. Spiritualists contemn one and support the other, and fail to see wherein they are inconsistent with or untrue to the teachings of the scriptures. They say that a lack of knowledge of the two-sided nature of the question has led to confusion in the interpretation of the scriptures on the part of the churches.

With reference to ancient happenings it may be said that Spiritualists, as a rule, do not deny that the bible miracles may be true. They think that the prophets of old, by living close to nature and to nature's God, attained unto such a knowledge and mastery of natural law that they were able to accomplish the seemingly impossible by purely natural means. The modern psychic by complying with natural conditions, is able to make use of the art employed by ancients, and this is the secret behind the Spiritualistic marvels. Spiritualistic phenomena, they hold, duplicates bible phenomena, and by proving the latter to be true, they say they have re-vitalized the bible, and won for it an ever increasing respect among critical thinkers both in and out of the church.

While Spiritualism holds much that bears no special relation to spirit, there yet remains a substantial phenomena that transcends normal experiences as at present understood. This of itself does not constitute a religion, or furnish a substantial basis for one. On the contratry it indicates the wisdom of rescuing the genuine phenomena from those who make it serve commercial ends, and giving it into the hands of men skilled in psychic lore, that we may know just what it is and just what it stands for.

Darkness is the bane of Spiritualism. It is the open doorway through which knavery has crept. The dark circle for pay represents in large measure cold-blooded, unblushing, open-faced deception; while professional full-form materialization is the most contemptible fraud ever perpetrated at the expense of a sorrowing heart.

Spiritualism with all its faults is not to be lightly turned aside. It is hardly fair to treat this movement with its tremendous following as wholly unworthy of respect. Spiritualism contains truth as well as error. While not the true religion at all from the Christian standpoint, yet it has one great, redeeming quality: It sounds the death knell of atheism and puts materialism to rout, and is, therefore, worthy of thoughtful consideration at the hands of the exponents of revealed religion.

Spiritualism is undergoing a process of sifting and separation. Its followers are dividing into two classes, best described as Spiritualism's Upper and Under Worlds.

Spiritualism's Under World is composed of the professional tricksters and their followers, i. e., the phenomena inebriates, the curious and the careless, who find delight and satiety among the wizards that peep, and that mutter in manner like unto the sorceress in the long ago.

In Spiritualism's Upper World they exalt the philosophy, and in phenomena give the mental or higher preference over the physical or lower grades. Their leaders are trained in manners, morals and books. Their lives are clean and wholesome. They believe in all that makes manhood great and womanhood noble. They recognize a supreme ruler of the universe; regard the bible as the world's greatest spiritual text book; point to Jesus, not as peculiarly divine, but as the peerless exemplar of the ages. The bible is on the altar at public services; the meetings open with an invocation and close with the benediction.

The one-time desire to build up a Spiritualist church is not regarded as a wise step to take by the bright minds in Spiritualism. They say that Spiritualism has accomplished its mission in toning down harsh theology, making creeds elastic, reawakening in the churches a recognition of the spirit, and that there is now no good reason for another church organization.

The division of Spiritualists into classes, and the growing disinclination to form a new church, is producing an unlooked-for, yet natural result, viz.: Disintegration has begun, and close observers predict that modern Spiritualism will soon go to pieces.

What will become of the millions of followers when the break comes? The first thought is that they will go to the liberal churches. This is a mistake. Few converts to Spiritualism are recruited from the liberal churches; and, speaking in a broad sense, the bodies have little sympathy for each other.

The majority of the converts come from the evangelical church body. With all its claimed faults the evangelical church to-day is a vastly more spiritual organization than the so-called liberal church; and, speaking broadly again, it fits the spiritual needs of Spiritualists better. It is our opinion that, if we meet them fairly and treat them kindly, we shall be able to win over the bulk of the followers of Spiritualism's Upper World to the evangelical churches of this land. A little unbending here; the exercise of charity, of a prayerful and forgiving spirit, and the church will be quickened and strengthened.

God's holy cause will glow triumphant, there will follow a spiritual awakening that will thrill the world with the power of Him who glorified Calvary.

A SPECTER'S FREAK.

Haunted a Bridegroom and Disturbed His Midnight Sleep.

Cardiff, Wales, March 22.—The freaks of a so-called spectre are alarming a hamlet some forty miles from Cardiff. The ghost has been paying unwelcome attentions to a well known inhabitant of the hamlet who was recently married.

The trouble commenced by his finding himself lying on his bedroom floor beside his bed one morning. Naturally, he put this down to nightmare. The morning after, however, on awakening, he found himself at the other end of the room, and he then became somewhat uneasy. His wife on both occasions had slept peacefully.

The third night, however, both kept awake, and their vigil was rewarded by a sight of their mysterious visitor, who appeared shortly after the traditional hour of midnight. A trustworthy correspondent ascertained from the victim that the spirit took the form of his own mother, who is still alive and well. He says that his mother opposed his marriage with the lady of his choice very strongly, and he thinks that the nocturnal visits are acts of revenge.

In order to drive forth the unwelcome intruder, the victim persuaded several of his male friends to remain in his house one night, but although the ghost appeared as usual to the young man, his wife and his mother-in-law, the other watchers were quite unable to discern the strange presence.

The young man's mother-in-law declares that on one occasion she approached the spectre, who said, quite distinctly, "Well, what do you want?" She also says that she temporarily lost the power of the right side of her body at the meeting.

The victim declares that the spirit has several times accompanied him part of the way to the village, where he is engaged as a collier. His comrades are greatly perturbed by the frequent appearances of the spectre and believe firmly in the victim's veracity. The vicar of the parish and several others have visited the house and tried in vain to elucidate the mystery.—Ottawa Citizen, Canada.

An Ancient Tablet Discovered

Remarkable Spirit Manifestations at Wichita, Kansas.

At a seance of the Circle of Light, held Feb. 7, 1907, at the studios, 407 East Douglas avenue, Wichita, Kans.; there being thirty-one present, after the light had been turned off, the room suddenly became most brilliantly illuminated with a pale blue phosphorescent light resembling in color and radiance a pale blue sapphire seen on a sunshiny day. Within the center of this brightness a figure began to materialize, faintly at first, but gradually becoming more and more distinct, until the form of an old man, attired in an Oriental costume was plainly visible standing in front of a curtain of some rich fabric, profusely decorated with Eastern designs and ornamentation, worked in silver and gold upon a background of royal purple. In his left hand he held a torch, while with his right he pointed toward the curtain, then motioned us to follow.

Pushing the curtain aside he led the way into what appeared to be an underground passage that was rather long and narrow, through which we passed in silence. In the distance appeared a flame emerging from a sheet of water that shot upward in a spiral form and whirling rapidly became sub-divided into numberless tongues of fire as it swept downward for another ascension. This vortex of death seemed to lie immediately in our path, but as we approached nearer, led by our venerable guide, we noticed that at this point the passage turned slightly to the right, allowing us to pass around the flames.

In going by this subterranean electric fountain of fire the air became so hot that it was with great difficulty that we could breathe.

Having passed this, the way rapidly broadened and we soon found ourselves at the entrance of an ancient temple. Here, reposing upon an urn, lay a tablet that the guide pointed to, at the same time addressing all in these words: "Behold the way of life, learn and live!"

Upon closer inspection the tablet was noticed to be written in what appeared to be an unknown language. The guide, upon being asked if he could be with us and bring the tablet with him if we held a special seance for the purpose of copying it, replied in the affirmative. After we had made these arrangements he said he must be going, and forthwith departed.

Among the mediums who were able to follow the guide and behold the scenes above described were Mr. T. I. Adams, Mrs. E. C. Baxter, Mrs.. E. T. Campbell, Mr. R. F. Moore and Dr. Jose Montoya.

According to a previously made date, Capt. R. S. Bell, president First Spiritualist Society of Wichita, Kans., Mrs. Jerry Simpson, Mrs. Jennie McNeil, Mr. T. I. Adams and Dr. Montoya met at the parlors of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Baxter on the following Monday night, Feb. 11, to hold a seance and if possible get a transcription of the tablet.

After sitting for nearly an hour our guide appeared with the tablet which he placed on the center table, at which time Dr. Montoya, then entranced, copied it in less than five minutes. The writing was in good Sanskrit and Dr. Montoya being an Oriental scholar, well versed in that language, has translated it as follows:

Within this land we live—
Not light by sunlight bright,
But by a power we all possess,
We all have found the light.

The soul of man hath in itself
The power to light the earth;
Within Illumination's cup
Are jewels of rare worth.

The past hath naught concealed from view;
Things present may be seen,
While future things appear as real
As though they once had been.

Descending through a royal line
Of Gurus from the East,
The sacred stone of magic touch
Oft yields a heavenly feast.

But all as yet cannot assuage
The thirstings of Desire,
For some there be who know not how
The Ego to inspire.

The way, though simple, oft is lost
By those who searching are,
And that which unto them is near,
Too often seemeth far.

Within yourself, Oh! Son of Man,
A universe there be
Of jewels radiant and rare,
When you have power to see.

This power comes not from mortal man
Thy Soul to liberate,
But from the spirit of the past
Controls and governs Fate.

To those who have the power to see,
All things doth now appear,
And like a wind that bloweth by,
They nothing have to fear.

Seek ye a guide of heavenly birth,
Attention to him give,
And through the power of prophecy
Thy soul shall learn to live.

Consult a man of God, and learn
The things to do, and then
Let Silence seal thy lips for aye—
Be not like other men.

The Spirit deals with thee alone,
As does the Mother Earth
Bring forth the lilies of the field,
That God hath given birth.

Upon this tablet is engraved
A message from above,
Beginning with the sacred words,
"Let each the other love."

For harmony alone can dwell
Within a brotherhood
Where discord, anger, fear and strife
Have banished been for good.

Ye who read or hear these never-dying words, rejoice! and be glad; for know ye are the children of Light and loved by Iswari! (The Father or the Absolute.) The pure-hearted ones who hear these truths and follow them shall enter the Kingdom of Endless and Perfect Bliss, and shall ever after desire no evil thing.

Know ye the Absolute abides within his Holy Temple.

Creation's nethermost parts are replete with the Creator.

Out of Himself created He everything that was, is or will be.

The Creating Universal Intelligence knows not annihilation, and can never be destroyed.

Time is but an objective portion of Eternity, so designated by man that he may not lose himself and be absorbed in the Universal.

Ye who would know Iswari are ever filled with Desire threefold. Ye would know of the past time much, of the present time some, and of the future time more.

Those seeking understanding will then attention give and from Intelligence Supreme shall learn in time to live.

The text in brief reads thus: Nama Paramatmane Hari! OM! Amityetad Aksharam idan, OM! Sarvvan tasyopavyakhyanan bhut. Which being interpreted means: Glory in the highest! OM! That which cannot be measured. That which is Immortal, Unchangeable. OM! This is the One that in the beginning was, is now and ever shall be, and is Master over the three modes of life and what is beyond them, OM is that all in all!

In Silence shalt thou hear and understand the voice of Iswari and He shall cause Infinite Intelligence to enter and abide with thee.

He will reveal to thee the secrets of thy existence as rapidly as you can receive them and not be absorbed by the Universal.

The one eternal, place of peace,
The landing-port which we Shall enter all when at the last
We've crossed life's troubled sea,

Is only veiled from mortal sight
To some who wander here
Beset by doubts and discontent,
And soul-destroying fear.

When self at last has sunk to rest,
Forever out of sight,
And we in love dwell constantly—
At length will dawn the light.

The light that lighteth every life
In this glad world to-day,
Comes from within and shows to all
The bright and shining way.

The ones translated all have passed,
A happy, joyous band,
From the conditioned here and now
To realms of spirit land,

Where perfect freedom of the soul,
With other souls grown pure,
Shall be the heritage of all
Who calmly shall endure.

The dear ones on the other side
Oft mingle with us here,
While we in solitude sometimes
Are prone to shed a tear.

They bring sweet messages of love,
And peace and wisdom grand,
To help to comfort, cheer and bless
And make us understand,

The ways of life, while yet we press
The shores of time on earth,
While we so anxiously await
The great immortal birth.

This is the way that all may learn
Of angels' converse sweet,
That living here on earth awhile,
Death and the grave we cheat.

In quietness, let thy repose
In peaceful honor rest,
And meditate upon the things
That grant thy soul's request.

By strong desire are all things born,
Eternal is the cause,
That through the potent will of man
Works one with nature's laws,

And brings him to his destiny
While he a-struggling stands
And oft communes with spirit friends—
Granting their wise demands.

Darkness at last will change to light,
You then shall know the way
By which the seers of the past
Foreknew the present day.

Let all the earth keep silence and learn the secrets of wisdom.

He who is unwise gives way to the desires of the senses, five, with intemperance, and is either consumed by the fires thereof or learn wisdom.

The body is the vehicle of the soul and must be treated as the abode of divinity that the Holy Spirit be not grieved and depart therefrom.

The soul will illuminate the body and cause it to shine with azure light, and make glad the heart of him who will learn these truths and do them; and bliss shall abide with him continually forever. But with him that hears and follows not the teachings of wisdom herein made plain, sickness, sorrow, poverty and death shall find companionship all the days of his life.

Perform thy ablutions daily, for thereby cleanse you the tabernacle wherein dwelleth the Holy Spirit, Iswari.

Of such things as seemeth good to thy taste eat moderately, but not too often or too much.

As the spiritual supplants the animal in thy nature, the desire for flesh as food will pass away and a greater unfoldment will come into thy life.

Of water, drink much, as thy body is composed of more liquids than solids.

Breathe deeply of the pure airs of sunshine, for therein is health. As ether is less intangible in air than in water or food and holds in superabundance the life principle (Prana) that makes possible the existence of all objects, both animate and inanimate, it must not be withheld from thee lest thou die.

The soul it is that possesses (Thee) thy senses, mind, will, body and spirit, and will unfold thy nature in perfect peace, joy and happiness if thou art filled with wisdom and impede it not.

Let thy soul will desire within thee, and sanctify and crucify not the cravings of thy heart, and thou shalt reach thy destination in peace, and happiness and prosperity shall be thine all the days of thy life.

Ask of Iswari that His graces and attributes be made visible in thy existence, and labor diligently to discover and manifest them, for thereby shalt thou strengthen thyself in Him who was, is and will be, and thy desires shall in wisdom, righteousness and love unite thy life with the universal in a conscious at-one-ment.

Let thy conversation be with the wise ones of earth whom you can see and cannot see [Reference is here made to all those prophets, seers and sages who are now upon earth or who have ever lived in the flesh.] Mingle with the wise ones of earth and hearken unto their teachings, and forget not to ofttimes commune with those spirits invisible who have entered into the All-knowledge, having passed from Death unto life through the resurrection.

They will give evidence of life everlasting, instruct thee in the wisdom of love, heal thy infirmities and diseases, both of body and mind (spirit) and guide thy footsteps to the heights of attainment in all things through the words of prophets, seers and the mediumship of the divine arisen ones who as yet have not put off the habiliments of mortality.

Thrice blessed are they who behold this tablet, for greater sights shall their eyes behold, augmented shall be their powers of clairvoyance, healing and prophecy and long will they be remembered in the land of the living if they turn not away from these teachings.

Upon him who translates the teachings engraved upon this tablet shall fall the mantle of the Guru who graved them there, unto him shall great power be given whereby he shall be endowed with the wisdom of the ages to rightly interpret them and to exercise the gifts of prophecy, clairvoyance and healing unto all mankind.

And upon as many as were able to behold this tablet and the glory that surrounds it, shall be conferred the power to travel to the remotest parts of space, visible and invisible, to visit the different suns and their systems, the stars and the planets, and to view them in the white light of Soul Intelligence which places them in conscious relationship with Divine Intelligence and gives to them knowledge of the unseen when harmonic conditions can be obtained.

The changeless Law of Life as herein stated, being the result of the accumulated wisdom gained from the experience of all ages, is engraved upon this tablet that the unborn generations of the future might not be left without a true knowledge of all life, here and hereafter.

(Signed) The Wise Ones of the Ancient of Days.

DR. JOSE MONTOYA.

The glory of science is that it is freeing the soul, breaking the mental manacles, getting the brain out of bondage, giving courage to thought—filling the world with mercy, justice and joy.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

A good Christian should never go to law; rather should he give up his coat and his pants, and everything that he hath. Churchmen never go to law; they are the most docile and easy creatures in the world on matters of business.—Voltaire.

RACE SUICIDE.

A Lady Presents Another View of the Matter.

The Progressive Thinker of March 2 is at hand and I notice an article on "race suicide," by E. J. Barnett of Harvey, Ill., in which he disagrees with President Roosevelt on the above-named subject.

It seems to me that he does not treat the subject fairly. A few years ago the argument that the children of poor parents must grow up in ignorance was a weighty one, but now, when the state educates the child, to where he can earn his own livelihood, it is, I think, a weak argument. The boy or girl now who wishes to learn has the opportunity; and not only the opportunity, but in many, if not all the states, an education is compulsory. In this state—Vermont—the child must be sent to school until he is sixteen, and nearly all children would have a very fair rudimentary education by that time. There are, of course, exceptions to this rule, but will you not find the exception quite as often in the case of the small families of the wealthy, as in the large families of the poor?

True, it is a hard struggle for the parents of large families to bring them all along when there is nothing but their bare hands to do it with, but it is not the poor alone that our president is calling upon in his warning against race suicide. Why do not those who have an abundance of this world's goods awake to the fact that they are neglecting a duty laid upon them by God, a duty that no creature in all God's great universe seeks to evade, except man. Would E. J. Barnett have every family contain only two children? Every family of Americans, I mean, the people to whom President Roosevelt appeals. How many generations would it be before the pauper element of foreign countries would be ruling this fair land through the ballot?

I agree that quality is of more importance than quantity, but why not have both? Why is E. J. Barnett, for instance, training only one child up to good citizenship? We would presume that he, himself, has a fair amount of education. Why leave it to the uneducated and degraded to fill the ranks of future citizenship?

Another thing. He says or at least implies, that the mother of seven children does not love her children as he does his one. My husband's mother sits beside me as I write, and she says, "You can tell them that every one of my nine children was loved as much as the first one was."

I am reminded of a friend of mine who had no children of her own, and so adopted a little girl of two years of age. After she had had her a few months, she told me she was sure that she loved her as much as if she were her very own. She was sincere in this, but you see she had never tried, and so did not know how much a mother could love her own child. And so I think that perhaps if E. J. Barnett had seven children he would find that parental love is very elastic.

It seems to me that we have no right to refuse this duty laid upon us by Nature, of replenishing the earth. As long as there is a low, vicious class to produce after their kind, it behooves the better class of people to produce enough to offset this influence. I do not believe in weak, sickly people bringing children into world simply to be a burden to themselves and their friends; but men and women who are possessed of strong, vigorous bodies and clear, healthy minds, are not doing their duty if they are rearing only one, or at the most, two children to take their places and assist in the government of the nation.

HATTIE N. WINTER.

Burlington, Vt.

Ingersoll the Eloquent "Pagan" and Partisan.

During more than two decades Robert G. Ingersoll, of whom Henry Ward Beecher said that he was "the most brilliant speaker of the English tongue of all men upon this globe," was the most familiar and picturesque figure upon the American platform. No other speaker could draw such crowds as he. The capacity of the largest halls in our great cities was insufficient to accommodate the people who were anxious, at a dollar a head, to hear the eloquent "pagan." Caustic, as well as eloquent, in his criticism of religious beliefs, and of the clerical profession, his views and even his personal characteristics became legitimate subjects for discussion by the clergy. But his criticisms were largely criticisms not so much of current beliefs as of dogmas, formulated in the old creeds, but practically outgrown by the people, who had long been ready for that revision of the articles of faith which is now going on. When the clergy said, "We do not believe these things now," Ingersoll triumphantly quoted from the written creeds and thereby put into an awkward position his antagonists who were not permitted to repudiate specifically with their tongues what they utterly disbelieved in their hearts. The announcement lately that a minister would reply to the "infidelity of Col. Ingersoll, which seemed like a sound from the past, suggests some remarks as to the views and methods of the distinguished heretic.

Ingersoll was by temperament, a partisan. His mind was not judicial. With him one side was all right, and the other side was all wrong. He was a great rhetorician, word-painter, prose-poet and orator, rather than a great thinker. He was too often loose in his statements, and with him amusing illustrations, hyperbole and byplays of fancy and sentiment, were frequently more conspicuous than real argument. While it can not be claimed that he made any thought contributions to religious discussion, he certainly enlivened it with a wit and eloquence that were all his own. He had a wonderful sense of the ludicrous and of the grotesque, and the character of certain dogmas sacred to many only excited his merriment and called forth his ridicule. His views were sometimes only surface views, but he presented them in a way that was original, which held the attention of the crowd. He touched the feelings of his hearers, for he was himself full of emotion, and excited sympathy or aroused indignation and contempt, where others had appealed to the intellect, and had tried to impress the understanding.

Ingersoll's mind was more intuitive than formally logical, and he did not care to be tied down to exact statements, or to close reasoning. He was discursive, and could not easily be confined strictly to a given line of thought. His "infidelity" was that of the eighteenth century. He early read Voltaire, Helvetius and Paine, and from them he took such arguments and objections as impressed him most, and presented them in his own unique way, such as was never used before, thus stamping them with his own individuality.

The conception of evolution, unfortunately, did not enter into the formation of his views. Early in the seventies he argued with the writer of this article (who knew him well for a third of a century) against Darwin's conclusions. Later he accepted them in a general way, but his acceptance of evolution was too late, and it was too little assimilated by him to infuse his mind with the reconciliative spirit or to make him see the importance of constructive over merely critical and negative thought. To the end of his life this man of marvelous genius in certain ways, argued against religious beliefs as if they had been manufactured by priests. He could not see that they were evolutions, outgrowths of the human mind, products of men's thoughts through long ages, that as such they were necessary in their time and, however erroneous, had served a purpose in human development. He could not understand and did not appreciate thinkers like Herbert Spencer. Their philosophical thought was too abstract and complex for him to grasp. Kant and John Stuart Mill were above him, in the province of abstract thinking, and attempts to read them only resulted in contempt for their "metaphysics." Ingersoll's lectures, however, were not for this reason any less admired by most of his hearers, for his audiences were for the most part made up of persons attracted by the popular qualities of the orator.

If Ingersoll's mind had been more reverent, more constructive, and more thoroughly modern, he would have commanded the attention of a higher class, intellectually, but he would have been less attractive to the crowds whom he convulsed with laughter by his anecdotes and stories, and melted to tears by his pathos and touching descriptions of sorrow and suffering. His dogmatism, which was equal to that of any preacher, added to his popularity, for the people like to have their favorite speakers, as well as their family doctors, always speak with confidence and certainty, of things doubtful, as well as of things known.

After all the criticism of Ingersoll that may be made, it must be admitted that he voiced many truths which needed to be spoken, and in a most forceful and effective manner. In Ingersoll's writings are numerous prose-poems not surpassed in English literature, many of them being replete with the finest thoughts and marked by unsurpassed beauty of expression.

Ingersoll did good work in vindicating the right of free discussion. He helped to make people more forbearing and more tolerant. He contributed to the work of intellectual liberty and intellectual hospitality.

He set an example of intellectual honesty and of moral courage. He uttered his views in his own way, when, by listening to the advice of well meaning friends not to do so, he could easily have been governor of Illinois. Later, Garfield was dissuaded from appointing him minister to Berlin by those who were opposed to his religious attitude. If the time needed men with the courage of their convictions, then Ingersoll did useful work in giving to the world a splendid example of loyalty to one's own self, where, bowing at the shrine of expediency, is the common rule.

In politics, as well as in religion, Ingersoll was one-sided, and his speeches against the Democratic party were usually those of an undiscriminating partisan. Yet, the republicans were glad to avail themselves of this kind of political advocacy. Indeed, it has been common in most popular contests. Ingersoll was a product of the generations that preceded him, as well as of his environment. He was exceptional not in his spirit and methods, but in the genius and eloquence which made him illustrious and which, in his case, fixed attention upon intellectual defects which are the rule.

Personally, Ingersoll was a man of most attractive qualities, a devoted husband and father, a loyal friend, a patriotic citizen, a genial companion, a generous, large-hearted man. He was, in his way, the greatest genius that this country has produced, but his limitations were as marked as were his exceptional gifts.

Col. Clark Carr, in his "Illini," speaks of Ingersoll as "the greatest of American orators," and adds: "No man can estimate the power and influence of Ingersoll in arousing the American people to a sense of their solemn responsibility when the war came upon them, or in awakening them to a sense of justice, and the proper appreciation of the rights of men. One must have heard him before a great audience, in the open air, as we, in Illinois, often did, to appreciate his great power. Every emotion of his soul, every pulsation of his heart, was for his country, and liberty. And no other man has ever been able in so high a degree to inspire others with the sentiments that animated him. No just history of Illinois can be written without placing high upon the scroll of fame the name of Robert G. Ingersoll."

B. F. UNDERWOOD.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Beautiful Anniversary Services, Conducted by Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie.

The beautiful anniversary services as conducted by Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie, for the First Spiritualist Church of Battle Creek, Mich., deserve more than a passing notice, as they exceeded by far any previous services held in our city.

The decorating committee under the supervision of its president, Mrs. Emma Hoyt, made the hall a sight to gladden the eye—the color scheme of green and white, form of a banking of palms, smilax, ferns and white spirea, with magnificent cut flowers, roses, carnations and Easter lilies was a beautiful setting for the services of the day.

Beginning Saturday night an informal reception was held, consisting of short speeches and music, and a general good time, renewing acquaintances with old friends who had arrived to spend the following day with us, among whom were Mr. J. Shaw Gillespie of Pittsburg, Mrs. Amanda Coffman of Grand Rapids, and many friends from the surrounding towns.

Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, under the instruction of Mrs. Gillespie, and it seemed almost incredible that with only three previous sessions, such perfect order could be wrought, the little ones fairly outdid themselves, to do credit to their teacher.

At 11 o'clock, address of welcome by Mrs. Gillespie, and response by our visitor, Mrs. Coffman. Solos by Mr. Gillespie and Mrs. Emma Hoyt, and messages by Mr. Georgen of Jackson. This was followed by a picnic dinner, at which over 100 were served. At 2 o'clock sharp, meeting called to order by Mrs. Hoyt. Opened by congregational singing; invocation by Mrs. Coffman; solo, "Charity," by Mr. Gillespie. Address of the afternoon by Dr. P. T. Johnson, followed by short speeches and messages by Mrs. McDonald of Detroit; J. Georgen, Mrs. S. J. Dutton, Mrs. Flora Foulghum. Short speeches by the Vice-president, Mr. H. J. Wells, Mr. Parks and Mrs. Dr. Horton. At 5 o'clock, tea was served to members and visitors.

At 7:30 memorial conducted by Mrs. Gillespie. This was a beautiful service. The names of the arisen ones were read by Mrs. Hoyt, the president; first, Moses Hull, Jennie H. Brown, Mrs. Sarah Byrnes, Mr. Theodore Mayer, as field workers. Then the members who had passed away during the last year, five in number. As each name was read a short eulogy was pronounced by Mrs. Gillespie. Then a beautiful solo by Mr. Gillespie, who was obliged to respond to an encore. Mrs. Amanda Coffman was again presented to the audience, and for forty minutes gave messages in a splendid manner, delighting the enthusiastic audience. This was followed by a bass solo by Mr. Vickery, which was heartily encored. We must not fail to express our gratitude to Mrs. Mark Blakeslee, our solo accompanist, who assisted our regular pianist, Mrs. Mary Storer, throughout the day. Too much credit can not be given to our dining-room committee, under the supervision of Mrs. Southerton, Mrs. Hockstraw, Mrs. Platt, Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Snow, assisted by many willing workers.

The anniversary of 1907, in Battle Creek will go into the history of the society here as a day long to be remembered, and our little president, Mrs. Hoyt, who so successfully presided over the four big meetings, may well be congratulated on so successfully closing her year's term of office, reflecting credit on herself and the society she represented.

SUBSCRIBER.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

Nothing destroys authority so much, as the unequal and untimely interchange of power, pressed too far and relaxed too much.—Bacon.

One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the midst of poverty, but not a whole Isaac Iselin.

An Important Lesson.

It Is for Spiritualists to Consider, and in Which are Some Unpleasant Truths.

It is only by agitation that progress can be made, and just in proportion that unpleasant truths are modified or removed entirely, just in that degree progress will be made. Mr. Barrett, President of the N. S. A., reviews the present situation, and the views he presents will be carefully read and considered.

(Continued from No. 906.)

For several weeks, I have been a gleaner of facts and figures in Spiritualistic history. Since 1865, I find that more than one hundred and fifty of our best speakers and mediums have forsaken Spiritualism either for the ministry in various churches, or for careers in the business world. I find to my surprise that the majority of those who went into business became members of, or attendants upon, some Christian church. More than twenty of our speakers became Universalist ministers, and among these twenty we find the names of some of our most highly inspired and signally gifted men. Such names as Adin Ballou, Charles A. Hayden, Cephas B. Lynn, R. P. Ambler, and H. O. Houghton stand for something. They were prime favorites in olden days, yet they and other equally gifted left us for the church. Fifteen or more of our speakers became Unitarian ministers. Among these, we find Joel Tiffany, William Brunton, P. P. Carpenter, and others of equal mental power. Six of our speakers and mediums—three of each—became Roman Catholics. Six have become Methodist ministers. Four entered the Congregational pulpit. Two went into the Baptist. Two of our best and worthiest mediums became Episcopalians. Two became Quaker preachers. One, F. W. Evans, became a Shaker elder. Two are now Advent ministers. Six of our great lights are now leaders in Theosophy. Two are eloquent advocates of "New Thought." One, our beloved and renowned Miss Lizzie Doten, is now a follower of Metaphysics. How many have become Materialists? Only two! Two out of more than one hundred and fifty of our workers have become Materialists, while eight out of ten of the others have gone into the church, or are regular church-goers! Do not these figures show that, by reason of a lack of religious teaching, of reverence for the truth, of regard for the sacred impulses of the soul, our workers have been driven from us, rather than by the influence of such things upon us?

W. F. Jamieson and Mrs. Elizabeth M. F. Denton have become Materialists. They have followed the light of their souls' convictions, and I have no condemnation for them. I do not know why they changed their views, but I can guess. It was because they doubted the genuineness of the phenomena they witnessed, and were led to conclude that they were all of earthly origin, hence there was no future life—no life at all. No doubt many gifted speakers and mediums forsook Spiritualism because of the failure of Spiritualists to pay them living salaries. One of our great men—a man whom the people heard gladly, and refused to support decently—received only about six hundred dollars per year while on our platform, but was paid three thousand, six hundred when he went into the church. Another with a large family to care for, could not make living expenses as a Spiritualist, yet drew three thousand dollars per year as a Unitarian clergyman.

Some of our speakers and mediums have become physicians, lawyers, merchants, real estate dealers, etc. In so doing, they, or eight-tenths of them, found it better for them to join some church or to become supporters of it. An ex-medium and his wife became members of a Unitarian church in a certain city. He was elected one of the trustees of the organization, and when my friends applied for that building upon a liberal rental for my use on a week night, for a lecture on Spiritualism, this man was the leader of the party who refused permission on the ground of the "contaminating influence of Spiritualism," in consequence of which the church would be "desecrated," were it to be rented to the Spiritualists! Need I say that this now prosperous merchant was once a "materializing medium?"

One of the great lights in mediumship, "once upon a time" bore the name of Rosamond Dale Owen. She was a highly cultured, spiritually refined, noble-souled woman. She left us, and went into the church. Why? Because of religion and its influence upon Spiritualism? Nay! She declared that there was a great truth in Spiritualism, but cried out in agony for that which Spiritualists denied her—the reverence for truth—"the divine Urge onward, upward, toward God and the Angels," denied her by the scoffers at the realities of being, and driven into the church to find that which the angels came to establish, if Spiritualists had but met them halfway. We lost her, and scores of others like her, because our people flouted religion, and sneered at morality in season and out of season. When Geo. W. Childs left us and returned to the church, he said in substance: "Spiritualism contains a great truth, but its followers have placed it upon too low a level. It costs too much to follow it. The lack of religion is most painful."

These are but two out of hundreds of cases of like nature. Is it religion or the lack of religion that is driving high-minded, clean-souled men and women from our ranks? Judging the present by the past, and having these absolutely verifiable facts and figures before me, I can but conclude that it is the absence of the true religious spirit that has wrought our ruin.

Let it be remembered that by religion I do not mean long, doleful, puritanic faces; long, loud, and meaningless prayers; nor yet the blind, awesome worship of an anthropomorphic God, by means of self-abasement and hypocritical pretenses. I mean just what James, the Apostle meant—GOOD WORKS, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF A PURE MORAL CHARACTER." In this I involve devotion to duty, cheerful, generous giving, a sincere defense of principle, "Theism!" Had these influences prevailed among us, we should have the young men and women of the nation coming to us instead of turning from us. Our people have not manifested a consistent devotion to Spiritualism through timely support of its principles, nor yet by reverent treatment of its truths. Young people will not flock around our standard when they see such scholarly speakers as George A. Fuller asked to give two lectures per Sunday for five dollars, with an extra dollar and fifty cents allowed him for railroad expenses. Especially is this true when almost any church will give a young man who has anything in him at all from six hundred to six thousand dollars per year.

Hon. L. V. Moulton, than whom we never had an abler, more truly scientific and religious instructor, was once asked to visit a certain point a hundred miles from his home, "to do up a preacher" who had gone out of his way to attack Spiritualism. The Spiritualists who asked him to come to them were in affluent circumstances, and able to pay for his work. His time at home was worth ten dollars per day, hence he wrote the committee that he would come for the eight days asked for at the rate of ten dollars per day, railroad expenses and entertainment while engaged in the debate. It was too cheap for such an able man even at his own figures. The committee wrote him promptly that two dollars and fifty cents per day constituted big wages for any man, and he could come at their figure or stay at home, just as he chose. Like the self-respecting man he is, he very properly stayed at home.

I am not mercenary, neither am I making the monetary idea the main desideratum in inviting young people to become our speakers. I do argue that they have to live and are worthy of at least a decent compensation, from the fact that they have given up all other positions to work for us. The days of martyrdom have passed away, I hope, forever. It may have been necessary in the olden times for men to perish at the stake, upon the rack or gibbet. I do not believe it to be so to-day. What can we say to a young man who has spent all the way from five hundred to two thousand dollars to obtain a liberal education, who knows Spiritualism to be true and is inclined to take our platform? There are not a dozen speakers in our ranks to-day who are paid twenty-five dollars per Sunday. I know of but two who receive more than that sum. Can we ask talented men to take up our work for five dollars per Sunday—at the best fifteen or twenty—out of which they must board and clothe themselves, meet incidental expenses, and go somewhere else at the end of the month? Do we not owe them something more than a pittance to offset their sacrifices of home comforts in taking up our itinerant work? I know of one man, an ex-Union soldier, who walked from town to town in Maine and New Hampshire, carrying his shoes and stockings in his hands, and accepting for his scholarly addresses what his hearers saw fit to put into the collection box. Is it any wonder that he grew old before his time, became a confirmed rheumatic, and is now a constant sufferer by reason of his exposure? Let it be remembered that he often had to sleep in barns and go for days without food while on these journeys. He had religion! How about those who starved and froze the body of this missionary? What did they have—"good, moral character," of course!

Another speaker whom I have met has had "experiences" also. One meal per day, often days at a time with no food at all, save cold water and crackers, walking occasionally fourteen miles to fill an engagement, no money to pay his board, fed by the charity of friends whose resources were but meager at their best, sometimes in the night forced to go to the house of a friend to ask for food, yet he held on and to-day is in poor health, earning but a small salary and no home of his own! Is it any wonder that we have few or no young people on our platforms? Our three youngest male speakers are Harry J. Moore and Will J. Erwood, who are three and thirty years of age, and John W. Ring, whose thirtieth birthday was celebrated last September. We have one young woman of promise as a speaker, Mrs. Josephine A. Bruer of Kansas, who is under thirty years of age. Truly our young folks are few, but these four are of exceptional ability. Among the other young workers may be named Miss Elizabeth Harlow and Mrs. May S. Pepper. There are but few of us who are under forty-five years of age. Do we not need young blood? How shall we obtain it? By continuing to drive the young people into the churches in search of uplifting influences of religion and by refusing to pay them living salaries when they do step upon our rostrum?

Oh, I know it will be said that these workers of ours must expect to make sacrifices when they go upon our rostrums as spiritual teachers! In the name of heaven, do they not do so when they give up home, its comforts, its library, for the life of a nomad? Have we any right to ask them to go hungry, or cold, or shelterless, in addition to their other privations? Our good sister, Mrs. Watson, has a comfortable home, and is a most superior housekeeper. She discharges every duty that devolves upon her with conscientious fidelity, and is singularly devoted to what she feels to be right. Knowing her as I believe I do, I feel that she would rebel most strenuously were she forced to walk to her lecture engagements or obliged to subsist on scanty and improper food. She would not do it, and not to blame for her refusal either. Those who do it are now labeled "fools" for their pains, by their fellow Spiritualists, who toss their heads, and say "Good enough for the poor fools. They should have known better."

When May S. Pepper was asked once at Etna, Maine, before a week-day audience of 2,000 or more people, why it is that Spiritualism had not a greater effect upon the world, her clear voice rang out over that living sea of faces, "Spiritualists have wandered too far away from God, and have not been sufficiently devoted to the sacred principles of their religion." Her reply was warmly applauded by that multitude, and it is to be hoped that all of that company were helped by her words. It is apparent quite that when such a large body of people as the Spiritualists allow their workers to go ill fed by reason of poor pay, that they have wandered far from something—so far that it will be strange if it does not take a few incarnations and reincarnations to become as large as the eye of a cambric needle in order that God may see them at all!

Our good friend, Miss Harlow, speaks of our lecturers who "talk over their hearers' heads." Yes, some few do this very thing. Some speakers take special delight in using words, worth all the way from sixteen to twenty-five dollars apiece, then wonder why the people did not "warm up" under their splendid flow of inspiration! Too top-heavy! "Increase the capacity of audience?" Nay, let us place wise speakers who are qualified to teach the people upon our boards, and let the people think for themselves. No man can teach that which he does not know, hence no large number of big words, however volubly they may be uttered, will ever be mistaken for wisdom by people of sense. It is never the province of a speaker to tell the people what to think, nor yet how to think, but to lead them to think. When they once begin to think, great results are sure to follow. A desire for something more than sensationalism, more than phenomenalism must be aroused before any man's thinking capacity can be perceptibly increased. Capacity can neither be bought nor given away.

One of the newly rich oil men of Pennsylvania sent his daughter to a most expensive and exclusive school. In a few weeks a telegram bade him come to take her home. He was angry. "What's the matter?" he shouted. "Tuition's paid, ain't it?"

"Yes, all bills are paid," said the president, "but she has no capacity."

"Capacity," snarled the father,—"I'll buy her one. She stays here." The moral will deduce itself.

We all loved Mrs. Amelia H. Colby, known in the last years of her earth life as Mrs. Colby-Luther. We all delighted to do her honor, no one more so than myself. Miss Harlow cannot say a word in praise of Mrs. Luther that does not find an echo in my soul. Why did we love Mrs. Luther? Because of her intense honesty of soul, and devotion to principle. Her iconoclasm appealed to the risibilities of some of her hearers, yet it angered many more. It builded nothing, and the destructive worker should always have something better than that which he destroys for those whom he deprives of old-time beliefs. Mrs. Luther did a work that was needed in the era in which she lived. The same iconoclasm does not attract people to-day. The humanitarian principles advocated by Mrs. Luther are eternal in their character, hence they belong to every age.

Why is Miss Harlow one of the most popular of our workers to-day? Because she is beyond iconoclasm, is progressive, is humanitarian in her thoughts, and devotes no time to the abuse of other people and their ideals. The world is asking for builders, and Miss Harlow is replying to its call as the true reformer ever does, by works, commensurate with the spoken word. Co-operation is the watchword of the hour and Miss Harlow is proclaiming it in words that burn, from hill-top and in valley—the religion of human brotherhood! That is just the principle for which Spiritualism stands. Mrs. Luther recognized it, and fearlessly proclaimed the gospel of unity of thought and effort. Individualism to her became but another name for selfishness, and Miss Harlow's ringing call to union of effort makes it apparent that in her mind likewise individualism has long outlived its usefulness.

It must not be understood that I want young men and women to take their places on our rostrum to-day simply for the sake of the large salaries they can command. It is not that I want an endowment for our beloved cause simply for the sake of paying salaries to our workers. Mrs. Luther commanded compensation for her labor, stipulated in advance what the terms were to be, and was paid accordingly. Yet in return, she was ever a generous giver to the religion of her soul. It was not money that moved her to take the platform, it was rather this—that, having worked hard upon that platform she was entitled to just compensation for her labor. No one can say her nay. The platform worker must have a genuine love for his labor deeply implanted in his soul that makes him forget money, otherwise his efforts will result in failure. Efforts of any sort for the sole purpose of making money are unworthy of every true reformer and spiritual laborer.

My contention is this: That the spiritual laborer, having given us his life to the service of his religion, is at least entitled to food, shelter, and clothing in return therefor. I contend that our workers should not now be compelled to walk to their appointments, to go without food and without comfortable places to sleep; if there are those who believe otherwise, my cambric needle illustration will fit them to an exact nicety. If those who read these words have never gone to bed hungry, if they have never sat up all night in railroad stations, if they have never worn threadbare clothing in zero weather, just let them try all of these great "blessings" and then they will see why I am pleading for an endowment of decent proportions for the N. S. A. I happen to know some speakers who have had to do just those very things, hence I ask the Spiritualists of America to take steps to render such privations unnecessary and impossible henceforth.

From 1851 to 1869 or 1870, our speakers were well paid. I have examined society records showing that such speakers as Denton, Finney, Emerson, Brittan, Miss Doten and others of like standing were paid from fifty to seventy-five dollars per Sunday seven or eight months at a time for their services. When Miss Lizzie Keiser in 1861 introduced platform messages, a new element was attracted to Spiritualistic gatherings. They went for amusement and not for instruction. In the early days, the phenomenon of an unlettered boy or girl, without a moment's preparation, giving an address upon a subject that a Harvard professor or other student would have to study for months to produce, was quite enough for the student. The curious mind was not attracted to it, for curiosity and education seldom go together. Sensation alone satisfies the fraud. Thousands flocked to listen to the inspired eloquence of our workers in those days, but when the other element was introduced there was a decided change, and the audiences grew fewer in numbers at our regular meetings. To-day, the meetings at which messages are to be given are well attended, and only those. Why? Because that which was given by our speakers in the early days is now taught in the churches. Because reverent, inspiring men and women desire instruction and spiritual illumination, not amusement at religious meetings. Who paid the large salaries referred to? The Spiritualists themselves. In Boston in those days of note, Isaac B. Rich, Phineas Gay, Alvah Adams, Luther Colby, et al., gave on an average of five hundred dollars per year each to sustain the society work, when the eminent talent above named were employed. In Philadelphia John W. Forney, George W. Childs, Wm. D. Kelley, et al., gave in the same proportion. It was the same everywhere, and the givers were Spiritualists.

When the character of the meetings changed, the methods by which funds were raised were also changed. It was found that the curiosity seekers would avoid putting anything other than buttons into the collection boxes, hence the expedient of charging a fee at the door was hit upon. It was an attempt to make non-Spiritualists support Spiritualism, and because it sufficed to meet expenses and sometimes more, it caused great rejoicing, for it removed all responsibility from the shoulders of the individual Spiritualists, who were, of course, ready and willing to get something for nothing, and perfectly delighted when they were successful in doing so.

Some societies in the fifties and early sixties succeeded in building halls or "temples." When the individualists, the exploiters of signs and wonders got control of these bodies, they proceeded to mortgage or else sell outright, these temples, and used the money in paying the running expenses of the organizations. They did not put in one dollar, neither did they ask other Spiritualists to do so. When the money was gone, they promptly disbanded the societies. In some cases, where a small debt only had been incurred, these presentors of the marvelous, sold the society's property, paid off the debt, distributed the balance of the money among the members in "good standing" and then killed the society. One case at least is on record where three men got all of the proceeds of the sale, even though the "members" had been inveigled into voting for the disposal of the property. Surely the three had plenty of the "Gumption" of which Col. Van Horn speaks—the kind, perhaps, he did not mean, yet it is the kind the grafter always exhibits.

We should profit by these mistakes. These selfish individualistic leaders should be retired from office in every local society, where they yet remain. They will retire when Spiritualists once more determine to support their own movement. Said an officer of a society in a leading city in my hearing: "Our board never re-engages a speaker who fails to draw crowd enough to meet expenses through the fee at the door."

"Don't you have a roll of members, who are assessed a regular fee each month?" I asked.

"Not much," he replied. "Why I should leave the society if I had to contribute anything in that manner. I want my Spiritualism free or not at all."

This man is a type of those to whom I have been referring throughout all of my writings, as individualists, sensationalists, and worshippers of the marvelous. These people do not, will not support Spiritualism. They think they are doing so when they waste good money at bogus seances, or in defending charlatans and tricksters in court. In 1888 I knew a man to purchase $2,500 worth of marvels at a certain camp, after which he had to send to his bank for money with which to get home. He told me personally that he did not believe there was another man in America who was paying out so much for Spiritualism as he was. He had paid $250 for a picture of Confucius, a like sum for an oil painting of "Yermah, from the Lost Atlantis," and proportional sums for portraits of personages either equally historic(?) as the latter, or as famous as the former. If these phenomena were real, he had merely bought and paid for $2,500 worth of spiritual wares, but had not given one dollar to Spiritualism. The mediums(?) who got his money, years afterward went to the penitentiary for a series of well proven crimes.

After all it should be remembered that the phenomena and philosophy of Spiritualism should go together. For one, however, I do not believe that word "together" means necessarily at the same service. It does mean that they should be given by the same society under whose auspices special services should be held for the presentation of these phases of Spiritualism. I do not feel that it is wise to present both at the same meeting, for the one will detract, does detract from the influence of the other, in spite of every effort that can be made to prevent it. If a society holds but two services per week, and those on Sunday, let one of them be devoted to the phenomena and the other to philosophy. A week evening service for phenomena could also be arranged. Another method could be followed with propriety and that is this: Make the message service such as was engaged in by the early Christians. From this service, exclude every person not a member of the society, and even members when they are actuated solely by curiosity, or commercial interests. Let only those who are in search of spiritual truth be admitted to these communings, held always behind closed doors in a room sacredly dedicated to spiritual things, from which the deleterious influences of liquor, tobacco, drugs, profanity, and sensuality are rigorously barred. The result will be an inflowing of spiritual strength, of soul upliftment that will give each person power to withstand all temptations of the material world, and enable him to do his every duty until he can receive another baptism of the spirit.

Yours for truth,

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force. Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 10 cents.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

By the Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists.

The Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists celebrated the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism. Berkeley hall was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting and with many flowers. The morning session was opened at 11 o'clock by the secretary, as the president, owing to illness in family, was unable to be present. After a few remarks by the secretary, the meeting was opened in form with an invocation from Mrs. Loring. The secretary, then, owing to her many duties, turned the meeting over to the treasurer, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, who acted in the capacity of chairman the rest of the morning.

Among those taking part were Mr. Francis B. Woodbury of Greenfield, Mass. He told of the organizing of the M. S. A., and how proud he was that it had grown to be such a potent factor. He said: "If we had had a strong organization in the beginning, 59 years ago, we would not be where we are to-day; but the turning point is coming to Spiritualism, and if we would have dignified people in our audience, we must put dignified speakers and mediums upon our platform. We have learned that the fraud element has got to go."

Mrs. Hattie C. Mason then sang a choice song. Mr. Simmons of Haverhill spoke briefly and said his heart responded to the words spoken by Mr. Woodbury, and he believed that we Spiritualists were coming into line. "You all know what it means to be a Spiritualist, and I honor those grand old leaders who opened the way for us, and made it possible for us to receive the loved message."

Mrs. Hattie C. Mason said, "We must seek to follow the line the past workers have made for us, but we must also seek to conscientiously make a path for ourselves. I am being taught by the angels; I am glad I have found the light, and I am doing all I can to keep the light burning." She then gave messages.

Mr. R. A. Macurda said, "In the past 59 years Spiritualism has made quite an advancement; it has overthrown dogmas and creeds, and eliminated an orthodox hell, and we must now try to eliminate some of our own errors." He spoke at length in regard to church homes and pastorates, thinking that this was the best method for Spiritualism to advance.

Mrs. Alice S. Waterhouse, one of our pioneer workers, was the next speaker. She said, "It is not necessary to be on the hill-top to receive the message, nor in a palatial church; it can come in the valley, and into the humblest of halls, and was always just as sweet; there is no word in the English language so sweet to me as that of medium; it has brought sunshine and glory into thousands of homes. Mediumship is the highest crown of glory that can come to anyone."

Mrs. Maude Litch gave messages, and Mr. R. F. Churchill closed the meeting with benediction.

The afternoon meeting opened with singing by Mrs. Haidee Hall, Vice-president, Mr. Hatch, presiding. He spoke feelingly of the absence of our president, Dr. Fuller, and the cause of his detention at home, and desired all to send out the healing thought to Mrs. Fuller, who was ill.

Mr. Francis B. Woodbury spoke at length of the measures we have to contend with at the State House, and urged organization to do more effectual work there.

Mr. R. F. Churchill, president of the Society at Greenfield, Mass., spoke of the work in that section of the state. He said that he believed Spiritualism was a religion; he believed he had much to learn from the Bible, and he was pleased to say a word for the good book. He told of raising $100 at his Sunday evening meeting, March 24, and thought that told the story that people were interested.

Mrs. Annie Chapman spoke of the anniversary time and what it means to Spiritualists. She closed with messages.

Miss Edna May Slate sang two fine selections which were well received.

Mrs. Alice M. Whall spoke briefly and gave messages.

Rev. F. A. Wiggin spoke at length. He said: "For 59 years the Spiritualists have been going from hall to hall, and it was time we had our churches in every city." He spoke of systemizing the work; he felt the more dignified the service, the better the audiences would be. He spoke in a deprecating manner of the phenomena and felt we should rather seek for the higher, the philosophy. "Let us come together and work together so as to make history that will amount to something."

Mrs. Carrie S. Thomas of Brooklyn, spoke of the anniversary time, and all it should mean to Spiritualists. She closed with messages.

Mrs. B. W. Belcher, president of the Industrial Union, gave many messages which were all recognized.

A telegram was read from Miss Susie Clark, of greetings to the state association at its anniversary sessions.

Resolutions were adopted upon the death of Mr. Theodore J. Mayer, treasurer of the N. S. A. Mrs. Haidee Hall closed the meeting with singing.

The evening meeting opened with singing by Mrs. Hall, after which Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, treasurer of the M. S. A., spoke at length. She said: "This is the day we celebrate, the day we come together in harmony and love, not to censure, or to bring our weaknesses before the world, but to think and speak of our blessings. To me this is the most beautiful time of the year, when we can celebrate the knowledge that our loved ones still live and can come to us. Spiritualism has revealed to us the possibilities of our own being, and has opened up the avenues of instruction." She spoke of the absence of the president and knew he was with us in spirit.

Miss Edna May Slate then gave a vocal selection. Mrs. Maude Litch, director M. S. A., then spoke briefly and gave many messages.

Mrs. Kate R. Stiles gave a short address that was filled with words for thought. She said, "Let us as Spiritualists see to it that we do not live always in the vestibule of Spiritualism; let us reach for the inner meaning, and learn that which is within Spiritualism is based upon the rock of strength, and I wish we were able to grasp its full strength; it is the science and philosophy of life."

Mr. Harry Ames of Lynn, rendered a very fine vocal selection, which was well received.

Mrs. Nellie Abbott of Lawrence spoke of the Easter time, and of the beautiful thoughts permeating the atmosphere at this time of the year; she gave messages which were clear and correct. Mrs. Emma Smith of Lawrence spoke briefly of the pleasure it was to be a Spiritualist, and of the beauties of anniversary time. She gave messages which were all recognized.

Mr. Osgood Stiles gave messages as rapidly as the famous late Joe Stiles, and many of the older Spiritualists could not but feel that he was inspired by him; they were rapid, full names, and all recognized.

Mrs. Thomas of Brooklyn, recited a sweet poem, spoke of the beauties of Spiritualism, and gave messages that were recognized.

Mr. Bishop of Lynn, gave messages without remarks, as the hour was getting late. He was well received and the communications were recognized.

Mr. R. F. Churchill waived his time for Mr. Macurda of Lynn, who gave several messages which were recognized.

The vice-president thanked all who had so kindly assisted in making the occasion a success, speakers, mediums, musicians and ushers.

During the meeting a letter was read from Mr. Blinn regretting his inability to be present on account of the illness of his mother, Mrs. Barnes, but stating that Mrs. Barnes was very much improved both mentally and physically. The many friends of Mrs. A. E. Barnes will be glad of this news.

Thanks are extended to Mr. Hayward, Mr. Prentiss, Mrs. M. M. Nichols and others for floral contributions. Mrs. Loring closed the meeting with benediction.

CARRIE L. HATCH,
Secretary.

AN EXPLANATION

As Presented by President H. D. Barrett.

Permit me to state in explanation of the paragraph in my article, replying to Bro. R. F. Little, in which I refer to the charge of a double salary—one hundred and fifty dollars per month from the N. S. A., and the stipend paid me by the society in Seattle—that I did not refer to Bro. Little, even remotely in anything I said. Brother Little never made the charge, and would not say or do one thing to wound my feelings, for I believe he is my friend, and I know that I am his. I had reference to those Spiritualists who take delight in misrepresenting their brethren at every possible opportunity, and when no opportunity arises, proceed to manufacture out of whole cloth, the most brazen falsehoods against better men and women than themselves. These parties had made themselves officious in charging "double pay" against me, and I dealt with them accordingly. As Brother Little does not train in their company, nor sympathize with their views, my words could not and must not be applied to him.

Brother Little is a Spiritualist in the best sense of the term. He believes in organization, in progressive work along all lines of effort and is ever seeking to dignify and glorify the religion in which he so earnestly believes. He is a loyal friend to the N. S. A., hence is anxious to advance its interests in every possible way. He believes that the N. S. A. ought to be to Spiritualism what other national organizations are to the movements they represent—towers of strength in every respect. He believes that our national officers should be located where they can do the most good for our cause as a whole, and at the same time add strength and dignity to the association itself. He is the last man among our workers to complain of over-pay for his brethren, for he believes that honest work deserves honest pay. He does not believe that any one of our N. S. A. workers is overpaid, but rather, believes the contrary to be true.

Brother Little wants an endowment fund of decent proportions raised for the N. S. A. at the earliest opportunity, so that body can do the work for which it was organized, and pay living salaries to those who do the work. He does not believe in putting the work of eight people upon two of the officers of the N. S. A., whose joint compensation is less than half what other National Societies pay their secretary or his assistant. Knowing the foregoing to be Brother Little's views, I hasten to correct the impression that I referred to him in my mention of a double salary. Brother Little is as far above such petty meanness as the heavens are above the earth. He is a Spiritualist first, last and all of the time—never a chronic grumbler nor fault-finder.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

THE BATTLE ROYAL.

We often mistake in the conflict of life,
The sweep of the battle, the cause of the strife.
We often o'erlook, in our battle with Sin,
A crafty old enemy lodging within.

We battle for aye, with environment strong,
The magnified strength of a swift passing throng;
And this cunning old enemy laughs in his glee,
While hearts melt in sobs like a moan from the sea.

The thought of the world is, "The Foeman Without;"
And we move on his ranks with saber and shout.
We beat down this foeman, he reels in disgrace;
When, lo! a still greater appears in his place.

Thus Past, Present, Future, in unison blend;
We conquer at times, but go down in the end;
We yield to despair in this battle with Fate;
And the love that should cheer oft changes to hate.

What meaneth the mystery under the sun?
Why so many battles—so few of them won?
The problem is simple: We only have been Fighting the "Shade" of this fellow within.

If we wish to be happy, successful and strong;
To help banish Error, and overcome wrong;
It is wiser by far that the battle begin
With the Foxy Old Neighbor who lodges within.

Better center our thought on the good of the Race;
Strew flowers on its pathway of beauty and grace;
And heed not the call to the struggle for self;
We rise in the scale when forgetful of self.

Seattle, Wash. "No Name."

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"The Light or Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $3 per volume.

RHEUMATISM
CURED
Without Medicine.

A Dollar's Worth of the Great Michigan External Cure for Rheumatism Will Be Sent to Every Sufferer Who Writes for It at Once to TRY FREE

Send No Money—Only Your Name.

We know that Magic Foot Drafts are curing Rheumatism in almost every form and stage—curing old chronic cases of 30 and 40 years' standing after doctors' prescriptions, mineral baths and medicines had failed. No matter what you have tried, or how long you have suffered, our faith is strong that this new external remedy will cure you sound and well of Rheumatism. You are welcome to try the remedy at our expense—we want to send you the proof. You don't have to take our word for anything. Simply ask for it—Try it—Prove for yourself how it can cure you. We will send to you by mail prepaid a $1.00 pair of Magic Foot Drafts free to try in your own home and trust you to send us one dollar when you get relief—not a cent do you pay us unless you are relieved. This remedy is curing thousands and we are pretty sure it will cure you. Surely you must try it while we offer to send you the cure merely for the asking. Send your name and full address to-day to Magic Foot Draft Company, X015 Oliver Building, Jackson, Michigan.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

UNCOOKED FOODS,

And How to Live on Them—With Recipes for Wholesome Preparation.

Proper combinations and menus with the reason uncooked food is best for the promotion of health, strength and Vitality. By Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated.

No one can afford to be without this book. Any one who tries some of the special recipes will discover that proper preparation increases the palatability of food. Learn how and what to cook in order to build and retain the highest degree of normal health by following the recipes of this cook book.

It will simplify methods of living—help to settle the servant question and the financial problems as well as point the way for many to perfect health. Price $1.

MEATLESS DISHES.

When I think of someone killing
Things to eat it sets me chilling,
And I see the corpses lying round me everywhere,
And I hear the lambkins bleating,
While their mothers near are eating,
Just as unconcerned as though the butcher wasn't there.

I can see the calves a-sucking,
And the little ducklings ducking,
And the pigs all squealing round their mother in the pen;
I can hear young roosters crowing,
And young ganders' warning blowing,
And I feel I want to eat such beings ne'er again.

And I look in people's faces
Where 'tis easy to find traces
Of the savage kind of being that they evoluted from:
I can hear the lion roaring;
I can see the eagle soaring,
And can hear the muffled beating of the savage tom-tom.

In my very dreams I hear them,
And I seem to greatly fear them,
As I live within the realm of soul of savage beast,
And I see the calf-eyes staring,
And the pig and lamb-eyes glaring,
When I have their flesh before me in the dream-land feast.

With this vision full before me
There's a feeling that comes o'er me,
When I wake from troubled slumber and I know my mind,
That the wholly meatless dishes
Will best satisfy my wishes,
And I just about consider them the only healthful kind.

DR. T. WILKINS.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE
CHURCH OF ROME.
A Remarkable Book.

This is a remarkable work by FATHER CHINIQUY. It exposes even to the minutest details the corruption that exists in the Church of Rome. It is a work of 622 pages, and should be read as a matter of history by every Spiritualist.

Price, Cloth, $2.25.

JIM, or The Touch of An Angel Mother.

BY CARRIE E. S. TWING.

Her dedicatory lines are sufficient to show the spirit of the book as well as the author, it reads, "Because my own children are all under the tender care of the angels, and my heart is hungry for the love of the young, I most lovingly dedicate this book to the children of the world." This book is full of soul elevating and interesting thought. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

Apollonius of Tyana Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

WOMAN: A Lecture Delivered to Ladies Only. By Mrs. Dr. Hulburt. On the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. The divine law of true harmonial marriage, etc. Price, 10c.

Death of Col. Olcott.

This distinguished Theosophist received warning that he would soon pass to Spirit life, the message coming from Madame Blavatsky. The Colonel was a humanitarian in the broadest sense, and the great work he accomplished will live after him, ever an honor to his name. Many of his teachings were in perfect harmony with Spiritualism, and the world has been made better by his wonderful influence in this country and India.

New York, March 23.—The death of Colonel Henry Steele Olcott at Adjar, Madras, India, was not unexpected [as set forth in the Chicago Inter-Ocean]. He was ill when he was in this city in October last, and showed signs of failing physical powers.

He suffered a severe injury by falling down the main gangway on the steamer on his return voyage, and on his arrival at Genoa was taken to a hospital, where he was compelled to remain for more than a month. By slow stages he reached India and later his home at Adjar, Madras, where for many years the Theosophical society headquarters has been established.

Friends in this country knew of his serious relapse in Ceylon and learned with surprise that he had continued on his journey and was once more at headquarters. He never rallied after his arrival there, though he dictated letters and transacted business through others.

His last letter, written for him, to his niece, Miss Mitchell, was received by her only a fortnight ago, and in it was no other mention of his condition than a reference to his troublesome heart. His death was due to heart failure.

Colonel Olcott was in his seventy-sixth year, having been born at Orange, N. J., on August 2, 1832. His parents were Henry Wycoff Olcott and Emily Steele Olcott. He was a graduate of the College of the City of New York and was a newspaper writer and later a lawyer. He was married in 1860 to Miss Mary E. Morgan and was the father of several sons, all of whom are residents of this city.

A Secret Service Man.

During the war he served in the secret service and left it to begin legal practice in this city, which he continued up to the time of his departure for India with Mme. Blavatsky and others in December, 1878.

It was while Mme. Blavatsky was living in Irving place, in New York, in the summer of 1875 that the suggestion of Colonel Olcott to form a society was accepted, and the first meeting was held in August. In the Autumn of the year the following officers were elected: President, Henry S. Olcott, vice-presidents, S. Pancost, M. D., and George Henry Felt; corresponding secretary, H. P. Blavatsky; recording secretary, John Storer Cobb, LL. D.; treasurer, Henry J. Newton; librarian, Charles Sothern; councilors, the Rev. J. H. Wiggin, Emma Hardinge Britten, R. B. Westbrook, D. D., LL. D.; C. E. Simmons, M. D.; Herbert D. Monachesi; counsel to the society, William Q. Judge.

Colonel Olcott drafted the constitution and by-laws and the society was launched. Mme. Blavatsky's book, "Isis Unveiled," was finished and published that year by J. W. Bouton.

It attracted some attention, but the event which made the Theosophical society known throughout the civilized world was the notoriety attending the public celebration of the funeral rites of one of its members, Baron de Palm, a Bavarian by birth, whose body was cremated in December, 1875.

Colonel Olcott had before the founding of the Theosophical society been interested in Spiritualism and had written his book, "People From the Other World," before meeting Mme. Blavatsky. It was while at the house of the Eddy Brothers in Vermont that he was introduced to Mme. Blavatsky, who had but recently arrived in New York. Judge John H. Edmonds was one of her earliest friends in this city, and he considered her to be a medium of great power.

Knew Mme. Blavatsky.

Colonel Olcott at the beginning of his acquaintance with Mme. Blavatsky considered her a medium, and it was not until some months later that he revised his judgment and accepted her declarations that her psychic powers had no relation whatever with mediumship and were due entirely to her own soul power. She instructed him in the Eastern teachings of Karma and interested him in the Mahatmas, her teachers, to whom she attributed her powers as a trained psychic.

They went to India to devote their lives to the work they had outlined in the Theosophical society constitution and they continued at this work to the end of their lives. They were the founders of the society and Colonel Olcott was its first and only president.

One of the first events that followed the establishing of the Theosophical society headquarters at Bombay, India, was a wordy war with the Rev. Josephus Cook, who was at that time in India on a missionary tour. It was the beginning of the many rows that marked the history of the society.

The Theosophist, the organ of the society, was founded in the fall of 1879, and for several years thereafter much of the time of both Colonel Olcott and Mme. Blavatsky was devoted to its interests. In England a society had been started and there were smaller societies in France and Germany.

The year 1884 saw the two founders of the society in Europe again and accompanied by several Hindoo scholars, who had become members of the society. It was during this year, while they were in London, that such men as Gladstone, Professors Crookes and Wallace, Lord Rayleigh, and Professor Sedgwick became interested in the society and visited the founders of it.

In this year it was also that the Society for Psychical Research, founded in 1883, appointed a committee to go to Adjar to investigate the charges of the Coulombs made against Mme. Blavatsky. The late Professor Hodgson rendered a report to the effect that Mme. Blavatsky had been implicated in the production of fraudulent phenomena by the assistance of Mme. Coulomb and her husband, and stories were sent broadcast that the so-called Mahatma or "Great Soul" who had directed the work of the Theosophical society was a myth.

Replies to Charges.

To all the attacks made upon his colleague Colonel Olcott had a ready retort. He never ceased during all the years that he lived to describe her as a great teacher and a benefactor of mankind.

Mme. Blavatsky died in 1893 in London, having spent the last nine years of her life in Europe. Colonel Olcott continued to live at Adjar and to direct the operations of the society from that place.

Colonel Olcott's best-known works are "People From the Other World," "Theosophy, Religion and the Occult Science," "The Buddhist Catechism," which has been translated into many different languages, and "The Olcott Family."

For more than thirty years he lived in India and worked to benefit the condition of the people there and in Ceylon. He was greatly beloved by the Hindoos, and the schools and colleges he founded have sent out thousands of well-trained boys and girls who to-day are mourning his death. He was devotedly attached to India, and his oft-repeated remark when in this country on his tour in September and October of last year was that he wanted to get back there before he died.

The stormy career of the Theosophical society in this country, where, after the disaffection of William Q. Judge, the president of the American section, and his death, its control passed for a time into the hands of Mrs. Tingley, was a source of great trial to Colonel Olcott. Mrs. Tingley went on a crusade around the world, visiting India in 1896 and representing herself as the direct representative of Mme. Blavatsky, and head of the Theosophical society.

Colonel Olcott visited this country several times after that year, reorganizing the American section and lecturing before conventions. He was here last year for the purpose of trying to unite factions in the society which had grown out of the trouble that led to the retirement of Mr. Leadbeater from the society.

Mr. Leadbeater and Mrs. Annie Besant had become the best known teachers and lecturers in the society, and Mr. Leadbeater had been a unifying force in this country as well as in England up to the time when he figured in the courts in London.

Colonel Olcott's time in this country was spent in Boston, Chicago, and New York. He was distressed in body when he arrived here, though his cheerful buoyant nature enabled him to overcome his sufferings, and he lectured several times just before sailing for Italy. But it was clearly evident to those who had known him previously that he was failing and news of his death was expected at any time.

Colonel Olcott and Mme. Blavatsky made a compact many years ago that a certain word should be the sign of communication to the survivor from the departed. Regarding this compact Colonel Olcott spoke to several persons while in New York. He said no one had ever repeated the word to him and therefore he did not believe he had ever received a genuine message from her.

Mme. Blavatsky's Last Word.

He was told by a caller, to whom he repeated this statement, that Mme. Blavatsky's word was "Come," and that it was given him now because he would soon join her in the other life. Colonel Olcott would not admit nor deny that he had received the correct word, but he spent the greater part of the night before sailing in writing a long letter to the person who had warned him that he was soon to die, and in this letter he spoke of the many trials he had endured because of the karma of the society. He expressed the belief that it would live on and grow in usefulness and concluded by saying that if he died he would quickly reincarnate in some princely family in Europe and be ready to take part in the great events that are to occur within the next fifty years in Europe.

He did not, however, believe he was to die for two years to come, as, according to a phophecy made to him in India by a traveling fakir, he was to live until 1909 and die while traveling. But for the great strain put upon his shoulders in recent years he might have made good his prophecy, for he had a strong constitution and was a vigorous man up to a year or two ago.

For many years he worked as a healer, and was represented to have performed many cures through his magnetic strength. He never pretended to be anything of a medium or psychic, and had no spiritual gifts to distinguish him above his fellowmen. His marked characteristics were his firm faith in the "Masters" and his unchanged belief in their personal guidance of the Theosophical society.

His death leaves the organization without a head, but it is thought that A. P. Sinnett, the president of the London society, will succeed him. Mr. Sinnett is the most distinguished of all the members of the society, and did more after Mme. Blavatsky went to India than anyone else to help her. His book, "The Occult World," describing phenomena performed by her, made a great stir at the time it appeared. Another book of his, "Esoteric Buddhism," has been a great help to the movement.

There are less than 15,000 members in the society now and it is broken into several factions. The head of the accredited section in this country is Alexander Fullerton, general secretary of the American branch.

Colonel Olcott has left a monument to himself in the great library he established at Adjar and housed in a beautiful building. He had industriously gathered documents and books relating to the Theosophical movement which will enable some industrious chronicler to write a correct narrative of the rise and progress of the movement.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

Explorations In the Field of Psyche.

Madame D'Esperance, a most remarkable medium, lately delivered a lecture in London, England, which was reported in Light. She narrates some most remarkable incidents, bordering on the miraculous, and carrying one back in thought to ancient days, when like manifestations were regarded as witchcraft. Read carefully what the Madame says in the following:

My curiosity having been aroused by what I had heard regarding them, I interviewed the Bruckers once more. At first they were rather reluctant to tell me anything, but, gaining courage, they perfectly inundated me with stories of curious happenings.

The balls of wool with which the wife knitted had a habit of playing together and entangling themselves as though a cat were amusing herself with them. The coffee-pot and the pans had an uncomfortable trick of getting lost and depositing themselves in out-of-the-way places—at the bottom of the well for preference. Money in money-boxes got itself out of the locked boxes and strewed itself about, on shelves or cupboards, giving its owner no end of trouble in searching for and gathering it together again; sometimes the contents of the four money-boxes would disappear and be found all together in the most unlikely places. The girl's schoolbooks disappeared, and she was unable in consequence to prepare her lessons; she was severely reprimanded, then punished, and was at last afraid to go to school. It was hard on the girl, who was studious, and intended to work well in order to become a teacher herself. At the end of a week or ten days, while making her way through the wood in company with a school-fellow towards the school, and weeping miserably at the reproaches she knew would be heaped upon her unhappy head, an empty knapsack fell from somewhere above them, followed by a shower of school-books, which the girl recognized as her own lost ones.

Another time, when the whole family were together, either in the fields or at the church, the treasure chest, which is an important feature in the homes of the Bavarian peasant, was opened, and the contents taken out and strewn about the cottage.

Frau Brucker said:

"Picture to yourself my beautiful silken shawl, that had been my mother's and my grandmother's, that I wore when I married, and my girl would wear after me—there it was spread over the bed like a counterpane; my beautiful silver chains and brooches were rolled up in dirty towels; my embroidered aprons and striped skirts wore lying on the floor. My beautiful linen skirts were twisted up, and pushed under the furniture, and my fur hat (a greatly valued possession) was stuck on the top of a fake handle in a corner."

These stories amused me greatly, which seemed incomprehensible to Frau Brucker, who shed tears during the recital, and continued:

"But worse came than that, something which has disgraced us forever. A crucifix and shrine were to be carried to the top of one of the mountain peaks and consecrated. Everyone who could walk was naturally expected to join the pilgrimage to take part in the ceremony. My husband and Martin (the son) went as soon as it was light enough (about three o'clock in the morning) to assist in carrying the crucifix, which was in parts, and had to be put together on the summit. Many of the men had to go, for it is a great climb, and the things were heavy. The procession, with the priest and choir boys, with candles, together with all the folks in the village, started from the church at six o'clock. My girl and I, of course, joined them. We had turned the cows and goats out in the meadow and locked all the doors and windows before going to church. The procession set off and had to pass close to our house on its way; and think! as we passed, chanting the litany, there was the awfulest noise of laughter, shouts, and of clogs, as though a dozen men were dancing the Schuplatti inside. Oh, it was terrible! The people all turned and looked at us, even the priest turned and frowned. I felt that I would like to hide myself. I could hardly walk for trembling, and my poor Madel was as bad, we could not pray for weeping. All the people shrank from us so that we had to walk by ourselves. When we reached the top I told my husband and Martin, and we came down together. When we reached our house we could not get in; the keys turned in the locks, but the doors would not open. After trying every way, Martin got a ladder and climbed up to a little window over the stable. It was fastened, but he broke it and got in, and under the roof till he could open a trap-door which was under the hay in the hay-loft, and had not been opened for years that I remember. He got into the house that way and saw that the doors and window-shutters had been barred on the inside, which explained why they would not open. Since then our lives have been wretched. The priest came, read prayers, and sprinkled holy water over everything, but it did no good. The people do not like to come near us nor speak with us, and it is all very miserable."

Such was the substance of the story told me by Frau Brucker. There were a good many more details, each member of the family adding fresh items of information as the story proceeded. I think they were anxious to learn whether I considered them disqualified for service on this account, and seemed greatly relieved to find that I had made no objection. In fact, though I did not tell them so, I was rather glad. I had an idea that the fact of being friendly disposed towards these unseen powers might possibly convert them into useful helpers instead of mischief-makers. My experiences in the seance room seemed to warrant the assumption.

The Brucker family removed themselves and their cattle up the mountain and began their work. All went well, everybody was pleased, and my summer sojourn in the mountains came to an end and we returned home. Not very long afterwards, a month or six weeks, perhaps, I had a communication from my acquaintances in which they complained greatly, and finished off with the request to be "delivered from the Bruckers before they were ruined."

I was obliged to undertake the long journey again, and on making inquiries heard long and bitter complaints of the mischief that was done wherever any of the Brucker family were employed. The cows had been in the habit of galloping homewards at milking time, leaping fences and ditches, sometimes falling over eachother as if half maddened or furiously driven, the one who had been herding the animals being left far behind, unable to keep pace with them.

If any of the Brucker's drove, the harness, whether new or old, broke in unexpected places or the horses or mules lost their shoes, hours being wasted by the frequent journeys to and from the smithy. The smith was blamed for careless work, which he resented by refusing to shoe their animals. If the woman or her daughter were employed in washing by the river the articles were torn from their hands and lost in the current. If they worked in the scullery the plates and dishes broke in their hands or fell on the floor. The brooms and and brushes disappeared, so that the rooms could not be made tidy. There was no end to the troubles, and seemingly no help or alternative but that of sending the people away, which I regret to say had to be done.

Afterwards the priest was asked to come and sprinkle the different building with holy water, and hold a short service in each. This was in August last, and as I have heard of nothing mysterious taking place since, I hope the poor Bruckers have not left any of their tormenters behind them, or if they remain, that they have been brought to see the error of their ways.

It is only natural for most persons, on hearing such a story as this, to conclude at once that the doings must be attributed to some mischief-loving individual or individuals, as has been frequently found to be the case on investigation of similar instances. Such, indeed, was the conclusion to which I privately came on first hearing of these nonsensical pranks, and it was only when I saw the anxiety and distress of each member of the family that I was obliged to attribute the manifestations to an occult cause. In the first place, if the mischief was attributable to the persons themselves, then each member was alike guilty, which was scarcely probable when one considered the damaging results to themselves. Again, the disturbance in their home, on the occasion of the pilgrimage, was at a time when every member of the family had left home to join the procession. It brought so much obloquy upon them (the priest was scandalized, the neighbors shunned them as though they had some infectious disease) that they whose boast it was that they had never served any man but the King were glad to take service in the humble capacity of farm servants anywhere, and at any sacrifice, so that they might again be looked upon as decent Christian folk, and in the hope that in new surroundings they might perhaps, get rid of the extraordinary trouble that had fallen upon them.

So far as I was able to ascertain, no real hurt or damage to person or property resulted from these strange doings, except the punishment inflicted on the girl for the loss of her books, and the fact of a cow having to be killed, which, in consequence of her unaccountable behavior, was said to have been bewitched. However, a post-mortem examination showed that the animal had ailed nothing physically, so that a valuable animal was needlessly sacrificed.

On one occasion, in a house visited by Frau Brucker, the goats were discovered to have been thrown down and bound by straw ropes, so skillfully made and tied that the animals had been unable to extricate themselves and had, to some extent, been injured in their struggles. After this, and one or two other unpleasant experiences, it is not to be wondered at that the neighbors objected to visits from any of the Bruckers.

Beyond this the manifestations did no particular or lasting harm, and were such as might have been produced by any mischievous practical joker, and it occurred to me that, as the couple had lost several children, it was possible that if any of the family were mediumistic the manifestations might be attributed to these children.

I endeavored to make them understand a Spiritualist's theory as to the source of such doings, and suggested the possibility to them, but the good folks resented the idea that their spirit children could be the culprits. "It was true," they admitted, "that some of them had been veritable imps, before they were removed to Paradise, but they were now safe with the angels, so there could be no question of their committing any act that would cause any person's unhappiness.

In my own mind I did not feel quite so sure. I have had some experience of young people and their amusements, but, of course, I could not contradict the mother; but it amused me when I heard a little later that she had arranged for masses to be read in church for the repose of the souls of her children. Perhaps without believing in my theory, she thought it would do no harm to be on the safe side and bribe the spirit children into good behavior.

So far I have not heard the result, but it seems to be certain that the manifestations were not the work of any member of the family still in the flesh; they were too great sufferers because of them to have persisted in a course which was injuring, if not absolutely ruining themselves.

It must not be supposed that these disturbing influences are always of a mischievous character. I have heard of and known many helpful ones.

Some of you may remember the case of Jan Froding, of which I spoke when I last had the pleasure of addressing you some two years ago. In the beginning of our acquaintanceship Jan Froding was unquestionably a "disturber." We went even farther than that and denounced him as an "unmitigated nuisance," but, on communication being established between us, he became exceedingly valuable as a helper and adviser in all emergencies. His interest in the estates—which had previously belonged to him—was very keen, his foresight, or what seemed to us his foresight, was never at fault. His understanding of his countrymen, their character, and their prejudices, and his advice how to win them over to new methods, was to us invaluable. In schemes for improvements, if they met with Jan Froding's approval, all obstacles and hindrances were quickly overcome or removed, but if he did not approve, it was always very hard work, and frequently a failure.

Jan Froding did not exhibit much spirituality of character; certainly he was not in accordance with our conception of either saint or angel. If we sometimes questioned the soundness of his advice, or ventured to disagree with his somewhat drastic measures, his language was inclined to be what is termed in polite society, "unparliamentary." He was in fact, distinctly human, with all a proprietor's interest in property. He plainly resented the death which had placed a barrier between him and the occupation that had absorbed all his thoughts and energies during his life on earth. He had worked, saved, speculated and become rich, in order to buy land, and when he succeeded he devoted every energy, every thought, to the development and improvement of his possessions. They were in fact, as he told us himself, "his God." He was good to his people, because it paid; secular education he agreed to so far as it enabled his work-people to do their work with understanding. Religious education he considered a waste of time, but useful in many respects. He did not believe in hell himself, but thought a wholesome fear of it was a restriction and also a spur to good behavior and honest dealing on the part of his subordinates. He said more than once, when we proposed teaching the people something of Spiritualism, "If you take away the fear of hell you will have no hold on them."

In his earth life Jan Froding had been no worse than many men in his position; perhaps he did more good than many would have done, though he frankly told us that if he did good to anyone it was not from any particular intention on his part. He was honest, because it paid better and was less trouble. He never cheated, he said, but if a man was willing to sell something for a hundred kroner, which he knew to be worth a thousand, well, that was the man's stupidity, and it would have been equally as stupid on his part had he not taken advantage of it. He told us frankly that he was good and helpful to us because he got a good measure of satisfaction by our following or heeding his advice. He was, as I have said, distinctly human, neither a demon at play nor an elemental, as he might have been considered from his earlier abortive attempts to manifest himself.

I could relate several incidents where these unrecognized spirits have proved very helpful, though we have not always been brought into communication with them.

One Sunday I was asked to take a telegram to the telegraph office. The other members of the family were going out, but in another direction. I was the last one to go out, and after closing the door discovered that I had neglected to take a key to get in again, but considered it of no consequence as the others would have returned before I came back. I had walked about a mile and sat down on a seat in the park, when I wes struck with dismay by the recollection that I had left the telegram lying on the dining-room table. I was distressed, for I knew the message was important, and angry at my carelessness. I had not read the telegram, so could not re-write it, and I knew that the telegraph office would soon close for the day.

I tried to think of some way of getting into the house, or of trying to find some one of the household who had a key, but I had to give it up; I did not know where they were to be found. While worrying over the difficulty something fell on my hat. I thought it was a leaf from the branches overhead. It fluttered to the ground. It was an open sheet of paper which I recognized instantly as the telegram I had left lying on the table half an hour before. Of how it came, or who brought it, I have to this day no knowledge, but I accepted the fact, and was sincerely thankful.

Just one more instance where a friend and I received valuable assistance. We were returning home after a railway journey. It was late in the evening when we arrived at the last railway station, and a dreadful storm of wind was raging, as it seems to me the wind can rage only in that particular neighborhood.

We had ten miles to drive and the road for the most part is much exposed. The horses were nervous, and required all the coachman's attention, for they could scarcely make any headway because of being driven sideways by the force of the wind. It was dark, but we could hear the snapping of branches and the downward rush of trees as they were uprooted by the storm. Now and then we got a little shelter, where the road was cut through the rising ground, but we felt that we were in considerable danger, particularly when, coming to the crest of a hill, a sudden violent gust of wind lifted the carriage from the ground, and it was only balancing itself on the two wheels on the leeward side.

My friend and I who had been sitting silent from the start, gripping each other's hands, simultaneously exclaimed, "Dear Walter, come and help us." ('Walter' is a spirit friend with whom we are both acquainted.) I do not know how long the carriage had run on the two side wheels, it seemed to us to have been ages, but instantly after our appeal we felt a lurch against the wind and the carriage settled itself into its proper position. The remainder of the journey was over the most exposed part. We had no more shelter, the wind, if it was possible, increased in violence, but through it all we had a distinct and unmistakable feeling that the carriage was being upheld on the leeside, and it ran evenly on its four wheels, till we reached home.

On reaching home we spoke to the coachman—who was as thankful as we were to have escaped accident—and he asked us if we had noticed how, in the critical moments the carriage righted itself as if upheld, adding that it was 'a God's miracle which he did not understand."

Telling a friend of this dangerous journey and the incident mentioned, she was scandalized that we had called on a spirit for help. "We ought to have called on God," she said. My friend replied that she had called on the spirit just as she would have called for help from any passer-by, had she seen one, and she knew that 'Walter," though a spirit, was a man, and a strong one, and besides, has not the Apostle Paul said in his Epistle to the Hebrews: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to do service for the sake of them that shall inherit salvation?" Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to these things that were heard, lest haply we drift away from them." (Heb. 1. 14, ii. 1.) In spite of this reminder, I think our correspondent still considers us not far removed from heathenism.

These experiences are not uncommon; anyone traveling that particular path on the field of Psyche will find them, and find also that there is practically no end to them.

As I said before, there are numberless paths, and another, equally if not more interesting, is entered through the door of the seance room. Of the discoveries made on that path you who have traveled it, all know as well as I. We have learned very much since the door was opened to us, but not a tithe of what there is still to learn. At the first we prided ourselves on our knowledge and felt ourselves considerably wiser than our neighbors. It was only after traversing some distance of the road that we began to doubt our wisdom, and, finally, it has been forced upon us that we know very little, so little that we are constantly making mistakes and having to retrace our steps and start out afresh. The things we trusted in most have failed us, and we have blamed our mediums, the other sitters, the conditions—anybody or anything except our individual selves, who are, of course, all that investigators or explorers ought to be!

In spite of this, however, there are a few little facts we should do well to keep in mind. We must not forget that our mediums are human beings, that they must be fed, clothed, and housed. I saw a letter in the "Light," a couple of weeks ago, from a person asking if it was right that a medium should be paid for his work. He answered the question himself by saying "No." I would recommend that person to try the experiment on himself and let the readers of the "Light" know the result of working without wages.

Everyone wants to get as much as possible for his money. Hence the crime of "sweating" so much in evidence in England. And I, who have been a medium and know the strain to which mediums are subjected while exercising their powers, earnestly entreat everyone concerned not to apply the system to my brother and sister mediums, for it can only result in disaster all around. All honest work should be honestly paid for, and the workers should not be overworked.

Another important point which I fancy few people realize is the great temptations they are constantly placing before mediums—subtle temptations which affect the best part of their characters—their sympathies. Mediums would be more or less than human if they did not feel acutely the cries for help and comfort constantly addressed to them. I know it all, and know that there is no pain worse than having to look on at suffering, feeling ourselves powerless to relieve it. To this mediums are constantly exposed, and, as I said before, mediums are but human. At the same time I would remind mediums that time is a great healer, and not to be over-anxious if powerless to administer the desired consolation.

A man wrote several agonized letters to me, imploring my aid to save his reason, or his life, by obtaining a message from his lost wife. I was powerless, and my inability to obtain any communication for him made me really unhappy. I wrote and told him so, adding that if at any time it lay in my power to help him I would do so. A year later an opportunity came, and I sent for him. After keeping a circle waiting two hours he came, and on my asking if he was feeling a little happier, he seemed at a loss to know what I meant. I reminded him of his letters. "Oh! yes," he said, "I remember, but that was a year ago. I wrote to several mediums about that time, but I am not so interested in these things now." It afterwards transpired that he had re-married some time before, so that if one wife was unable to console him by communications, he took another, and seemed quite happy, and no longer asked for messages from his lost angel.

There are too many mourners of this type, and they are a danger to which mediums and spirit controls alike are exposed. Even if the medium is perfectly honest in intention, it may be that some spirit working through him is tempted by his great desire to help and comfort the tortured souls, to deceive by personating the spirit of the loved and lost one. I believe until a better understanding between mediums and investigators is established, and until both mediums and investigators have learned somewhat of the psychic nature of man, the problem will remain unsolved. It is a study that is open to every man and woman, for it concerns everyone alike, and the sooner the ranks of the students are multiplied, the sooner we shall arrive at a satisfactory answer to the question. (It is quite certain that the investigator will become a Spiritualist, but that is a detail.)

The promiscuous phenomena I have spoken of are not always in evidence. Their occurrence is erratic and uncertain, but the road through mediumship in the seance room is always open. Many learned and clever men have been tempted, perhaps forced into this road, and have testified to the discoveries they have made upon it. Their testimony is very valuable; their scientifically trained minds, analytical and critical, have been slow to accept phenomena which ordinary, every-day common sense told them were out of range of possibility. Still, they have accepted them, and have made the fact public.

It has often puzzled me, and perhaps others as well, to explain why we Spiritualists should meet with so much opposition from persons who are quite as anxious as we are that the fact of another life after this should be established.

Everyone wants to live on. No one is exactly anxious to be assured that there is an end to his individuality when the earth closes over his body. Yet, from the opposition we receive, and the tests which are applied to our proofs of continued existence, one might imagine we were trying to force them to accept something undesired and distasteful.

As I say, it is a mystery. Perhaps it is a desire for absolute certainty that makes us refuse to accept facts till we find them flawless. So we go on searching for flaws, and having found one, we cast aside the precious fact as worthless, forgetting that the greater number, and the largest of the diamonds that have been brought to light have not been without flaws, but we must remember that they were diamonds after all.

[Advertisement.]

STRANGE PREDICTIONS

Planetary Professor Foretells Events and Quickly Reads the Lives of People, Though Thousands of Miles Away.

Sends Letters to the Rich and Poor Alike in Which He Advises Them About Business, Marriage, Speculation, Love Affairs, Wealth, Etc.

Offers Free Readings to All Who Write and Send Date of Birth.

In his office in New York City, surrounded by charts and dials of strange design, Prof. Albert H. Postel studies daily over the lives of men and women who have written him for advice on affairs of business, love, speculation, travel, marriage, health and the important events of life. The following letter gives an idea of Mr. Postel's ability:

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

Prof. Postel:

Dear Sir—You are certainly the most wonderful astrologer living. Every one of your predictions came true. I consider that you not only saved me from an awful death, but prevented the loss of hundreds of dollars. I trust that many people will profit by your advice. Sincerely,

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

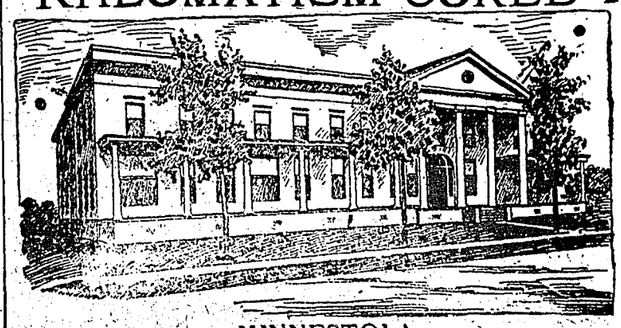
The accuracy of recent predictions made by this eminent Astrologer has caused many of his friends to believe that he possesses a supernatural power, but he modestly asserts that his predictions are due alone to a scientific understanding of natural laws. The many thankful letters Prof. Postel has received from people who have benefited by his advice furnish ample proof that he is sincere in his work and has a kindly feeling toward humanity.

Readers of this paper can obtain a reading free of charge by addressing a letter to Prof. Postel, Dept. 462, No. 126 West 34th street, New York. Simply say you wish a reading of your life, stating your birth date, sex and whether married or single. If you wish to do so you may inclose 10 cents (silver or stamps) to pay postage and clerical work; however, the reading will be promptly sent, whether you inclose the 10 cents or not.

Three Remarkable Books

"The Divine Pedigree of Man."
"The Law of Psychic Phenomena."
"A Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life."

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Thompson Jay Hudson, LL. D. A most remarkable work, demonstrating the existence of the Soul and Future Life. It is scientific throughout. Price $1.50. Dr. Hudson's work on "The Law of Psychic Phenomena" is also valuable. Price, $1.50. His "Scientific Demonstration of the Future Life" should be read by all. Price $1.50.



WORLD MAKING A scientific explanation of the Birth, Growth and Death of Worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland Ph. D., LL. D., Emeritus Professor of Astronomy and lecturer on science in Charles City College. A Work of intense interest, by a scientist and profound thinker. Cloth, price, 75 cts.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man. Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How it Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality. Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary; What Must We Do to Be Saved? For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS,

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Not Parallel Cases.

An Episcopal clergyman of Chicago lately declared in his pulpit:

"Were the state here to claim the ownership of the churches we worship in, the investments, books, and other accessories we use in divine worship, or to insist that we use them only by the permission of the state, there is not a priest or congregation in the land that would not refuse."

Rev. Dr. Stone was criticising the late action of the French government in regard to the falsely stated confiscation of Catholic churches. Evidently he neglected to take into consideration the difference between church property in America and France. Here the church and its furnishings are individual property, the cost usually voluntarily contributed by its members. In France the cost of the soil on which the structure is erected, as the building itself, came out of the national treasury. And the officiating priest derived his support from the same source. The money was wrung from the pockets of all classes and all beliefs, a majority, probably, having no sympathy with Catholicism. In taking possession of the churches the government only reclaimed its own.

The use of those churches was tendered the late occupants, conditioned they acknowledge the sovereignty of the state. This they were instructed by the Pope not to do, so the authorities took possession, and will do as they please with their own.

Our American clergy are intent on usurping control of this government, and running it in their interest. Every act of theirs betrays their purpose. They would have the churches built, and the cost of their support taken from the national treasury. No person but a churchman would hold a public office, if they could prevent it. They would do just what France and Great Britain are trying to get rid of, a union of church and state.

Absurdities of Christian Teaching.

A God who made the boundless universe, with more than fifty millions of suns, in a wrestling match with one of his creatures.—Gen. 32:24.

That same God talking face to face with Jacob.—Gen. 32:29, 30.

The route to heaven, a ladder on which angels ascend and descend.—Gen. 28:12.

The sulphurous flames of a burning hell that never flamed.

A God-made devil to keep alive the eternal fires of that hell.

A Jewish maiden metamorphosed into the mother of God and Queen of heaven.

A supper in which the flesh of a God is eaten, and his blood is drunk.

An altar on which sacrificed victims are roasted, yet have ceased to smoke.

A baptism, otherwise purification, which never cleanses.

A Savior who never saves until a falsehood is believed.

A Redeemer who never redeemed.

Death on a cross for the sins of the world by an agonizing God at the hands of men.

A Prince of Peace directing his followers to bring his enemies to be slain before him.

That same Prince directing the garment of his disciples, consisting of a sleeveless tunic, a sort of shirt in fact, be sold to buy swords.

And then promising those brothers, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children who have forsaken their houses, a hundred fold and everlasting life.—Matt. 19:29.

A teacher of "love your enemies," requiring the multitude to HATE father, and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, yea, his own life, else he could not become his disciple!—Luke 14:26.

These are enough of the Christian absurdities for the present. They should be thought over at leisure, and be eliminated from the holy book, and from popular belief.

Be Sure to Read It.

If The Progressive Thinker has a single patron who failed to read the two column article on page 7, in our issue of March 30, headed, "The Bible Crumbling," copied from the Chicago Tribune, we pray him most earnestly to hunt up the paper, and read every word of it. And those who shall find they have read it, we ask them to read it again. It was not written by a Spiritualist, nor an Agnostic, but by a lover of truth still within the church, as we infer by expressions in the article. The writer of that article had brains to comprehend a fact, and bravery to declare his convictions, though what he writes is a vital blow, not only to a crumbling Bible, but it is equally destructive to a badly shattered creed. The closing words of that article, near the foot of the second column of the page, struck us with great force:

"Truth is never tolerant of Error; and a good cause gains nothing by compromise. If there is anything for which men should contend, it is the living and eternal truth of God."

Such words deserve to be written in letters of gold, and should be memorized by every honest thinker.

Let it be remembered, the first step towards accepting Christianity, with all its terrible errors, is belief that Jesus is the eternal son of God. It was not enough for a Servetus to declare, "He is the son of the Eternal God," but he must concede "he is the eternal son," that is: Jesus had no beginning, but co-existed from eternity with the Father. That was too much for a philosopher, and a man of sense, so Servetus was chained to the stake, the books he had written were strapped to his person, and, to prolong his sufferings, he was burned with green wood; and John Calvin, the author of the Presbyterian creed, who had instigated the crime against humanity, is one of the most distinguished Protestant fathers.

The church is generous after all. It proffers us a reserved seat in heaven, a large bribe certainly, if we will believe Jesus is the Savior of the world. If we do not accept the alluring offer then: "Believe or be damned," and the bottomless pit with sulphurous flame, and of eternal duration follows.

The laws of all Christian countries from the days of Constantine to our own times, have been enacted to protect a belief forced on the world. We denounce the Catholics for destroying great libraries, and positively forbidding the reading of books which would furnish the truth in regard to the infamous acts of the church; but Protestants are equally careful to guard their members from knowing the truth. They exclude from the public libraries all books which militate against and expose their wrong doings; and though they have no Index Expurgatorius, the average churchman absolutely refuses to read, else seem incapable of comprehending what is taught them.

We boast of the freedom of speech and of the press in America; but here is a quotation from the statute books of Pennsylvania enacted in 1700, and re-enacted in 1860. Sec. 32 of that act of March, 1860, p. 392 of the pamphlet laws of that version, reads as follows:

"If any person shall wilfully, premeditatedly, and despitefully blaspheme, or speak loosely and profanely of Almighty God, Christ Jesus, the Holy Spirit, or the Holy Scriptures of Truth, such person, on conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, and undergo an imprisonment not exceeding three months, or either at the discretion of the court."

This act is almost identical with laws in force in all the original thirteen states. Those states carved out of the Northwestern territory, to-wit: Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, which were protected by the Ordinance of 1789, were not, and could not be cursed by such a statute as we have recited, hence blasphemy is unknown to our Illinois laws. Thanks to the influence of Thomas Jefferson. This fact has allowed Chicago and its press to publish what Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Washington can only publish under the shadow of the penitentiary. The Liberal press in all the original states is necessarily careful to not place itself in danger of criminal prosecutions by criticising the junior God, his Spook associate, or the pretended Jewish history.

The Weight of a Soul.

Late news from San Francisco said an attempt was to be made in San Quentin prison to determine the weight of a human soul. Dr. P. Sumner, the prison physician, determined to superintend the work in the interest of science. The reports of the protracted experiments in Boston have made the rounds of the secular press, and all the world is interested in the subject.

A prisoner was to have been executed March 22, for murder. He was selected for a subject. Possibly we may receive a report before we go to press; but we apprehend any results gained through a criminal source will not prove satisfactory. Besides it would seem difficult to perform so desirable an operation from the scales to the gallows, then from the gallows to the scales so as to avoid trifling errors, when so small a variation is expected.

General attention having been arrested by the publication, an abundance of observations will now be made before the question is permitted to rest.

It was fortunate Prof. Larkin published the facts in regard to corpuscles which science has demonstrated at the time he did.

The Arrest and Acquittal of Mediums in Indianapolis.

Our crowded columns will not allow us to give in full detail the particulars of the recent stir-up among mediums on the Indianapolis field. We therefore condense reports therefrom, for which we are indebted to Mrs. Martha Woolsey and others. On Tuesday morning, the 2nd inst., the court-room of Police Judge Whallon looked as if it were the place for holding a mass-meeting of Spiritualists. Local mediums and lay workers were out in force. President Schram and Secretary Mong of the Indiana State Association, and Dr. George B. Warne, vice-president of the N. S. A. were also there to aid by their presence, and appearance on the witness stand, if necessary, the cause of justice.

After disposal of the ordinary "drunks" and "disorderlies" customarily heard at such a place, the court passed to the hearing of the cases against the well-known mediums, Mrs. Woolsey, Mrs. Frances Ruddick, and Mrs. Annie Throndsen. J. Dwight Hagaman had sworn out warrants against them and others, charging violation of the city's ordinance, forbidding the advertising of clairvoyant and well-known phases of mediumistic phenomena.

The defendants were ably represented by Attorneys Holmes and Groninger, who maintained that under the Indiana statutes the special charter of Indianapolis did not authorize the city council to levy an annual license of fifty dollars upon mediums, and also that such demonstrations were a part of the religious ceremonials of Spiritualism.

The city prosecutor contended that they were shows because an admission fee was charged. He introduced only one witness, the redoubtable Hagaman himself. Mrs. Throndsen and Mrs. Ruddick were sworn in their own defense. Spicy exchange of Compliments and legal contentions passed between the lawyers, of whom Attorney Holmes easily proved himself the keenest one of the entire bunch. Finally the judge ordered the above defendants discharged, and the pending cases against all the other mediums dismissed, among whom were such well-known workers as Mrs. Amibile, Mrs. Mattie Hayden and Mrs. Hattie Meadows.

It is believed Hagaman took the extreme step he did in retaliation for the reading of a letter from a public platform by Mrs. Woolsey, written by President Barrett in which he stated as facts some things said to have occurred in the courts of Michigan, which the notorious ex-medium insisted were not complimentary to himself.

Advantage was taken of Dr. Warne's presence in the city, and a meeting held at the old First Spiritualist Church on Wednesday evening, attended by a good-sized audience. While giving positive information as to Kingsley's methods of gathering matter for his spirit messages, Dr. Warne gave it as his belief that the former was the notorious Jules Wallace himself. Hagaman came in for some direct shots based upon Moses Hull's portrayal of him during the debate with W. F. Jamieson. Slate-writing by Mrs. Ruddick and messages by Mrs. Throndsen followed the lecture.

All of this commotion is drawing the Spiritualists of Indianapolis closer together; past differences are being forgotten; former misunderstandings forgiven and old jealousies buried. In a mysterious way the spirit world brings about its ends. Truth can never be permanently unhorsed.

Superstition on a Rampage.

Mention was made several months ago in these columns, of a "prayer-chain" having been formed by our good Christian brothers, and that the movers were hopeful of converting the world to their creed through its instrumentality. The nature of that "chain" has just come to light. Here is one of the letters:

"Dear Friend and Christian:—Below is a prayer chain just as it was sent to me. So I send it to others, for I do not want it broken in my hands. May God bless you and others to keep it going:

"'O, Lord Jesus, we implore thee, O Eternal God, to have mercy on all mankind; to keep us from all sin, and take us to live with thee eternally.'

"This prayer is dictated by Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts. He commands that it be written and sent to nine other persons. He who will not do it will be afflicted by some misfortune, and persons who pay no attention to it will meet with a terrible accident. He who will write this prayer for nine days and send it to nine others, commencing the day you receive this (only one each day) will after nine days experience some great joy. At Jerusalem at the feast, it was said he who would write this prayer would be delivered from every calamity. Please do not let this stop in your hands. I have written this just as I received it. Now, please send it to others. Sincerely,

"CHRISTIAN."

Look at that prayer. "O Lord Jesus, Eternal God!" If that is not idolatry, where shall we find it? Think of a Jewish mother giving birth to the Eternal God, nursing him, dandling him on her knee, and caring for him through all his infantile years, then his dying on a cross! And this prayer, in this age of learning and science.

But it carries a lie on its face. It says "Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts dictated it." Bishop Lawrence indignantly denies he ever commanded or authorized the prayer, and he denounces it as "a practical joke, or the work of some insane religious enthusiast."

The postal authorities have tried in vain to break the chain. It has become an exasperating nuisance to the postoffice department. Recipients beg the government officials to break the chain; but it grows stronger each month, and absolutely burdens the mails. The threat that he who receives the letter and neglects for nine days to copy and mail to nine persons "will be afflicted by some misfortune," and they who give it no attention will meet with a terrible accident," stimulates the superstitious to push on the work. Ignorance and superstition have joined hands, and the fool chain will not be broken for years.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.—Froude.

SPIRIT RETURN.

Its Counterfeiter---Legerdemain.

Spirit Return is one of the grandest truths that ever came to this earth. The good it has accomplished in enlightening mankind in regard to the spirit world and future existence is so great that IT CAN NOT BE ESTIMATED BY THE USE OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Notwithstanding this important fact, there are millions on the earth to-day who are in darkness with reference to its truthfulness, and who are still hugging to their bosoms old superstitions and traditions of the past, and who are in a most lamentable state of ignorance. Those composing this class, when they once see the light, and begin to recognize its importance, and get a glimmer of knowledge in reference to the celestial regions, and understand that they can communicate with their departed spirit friends, are often brought in contact with the trickster, and led astray, and often ruined. It has been estimated and rightly, too, that it COSTS AS MUCH TO TAKE CARE OF CRIME AND CRIMINALS EACH YEAR AS IT DOES TO RUN THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT THE SAME LENGTH OF TIME. The trial of a single murder case, frequently costs from $75,000 to $100,000.

So numerous are those who stand ready to commit any crime in order to augment their earthly gains, that it is no wonder that they have been attracted to the phenomena of Spiritualism as something that can measurably be imitated, and in proportion to their skillfulness, just in that degree will they be able to deceive the people, and make money thereby. Their ingenuity in imitating various spirit phenomena, is most remarkable, and their pretensions are monumental, and their success is just in proportion to the gullibility of those with whom they are brought in contact.

Legerdemain, often bewilderingly dextrous in its manipulations, has been brought into requisition, both in private circles and on the stage, and the eyes and the understanding of people have been deceived and led astray. The magician, like Keller, has his spirit cabinet, and the way the "spirits materialize and dematerialize" in the same—apparently—baffles all descriptions. Not a half-dozen in the audience can even imagine how the deception is done, it is so complete, so beyond their comprehension or the range of their intellect. On the stage when practiced as legerdemain only, and is recognized as such, it is strictly legitimate as illustrating the wonderful skill of some in deceiving the eye and understanding.

To imitate the genuine spirit phenomena HAS BECOME A REGULAR PROFESSION, and the same pays exceedingly well, or it would be at once relinquished as impracticable as an investment.

Take for example the notorious "Rev." "Dr." Moore, the materializing medium of New York. During the whole of his eventful career, it is alleged that legerdemain of the most bungling kind has been his chief instrument in deceiving the insatiate gullibles that flocked to his seances. The Light of Truth, the special organ of all the fakes in our ranks, extolled Moore to the very skies, and he hustled for subscribers for that paper, and completely ignored The Progressive Thinker, and for which he is entitled to our special thanks.

It is wonderful how the little fellow with a modicum of brains only, succeeded in hoodwinking his sitters, as his devious methods were bungling in the extreme, and pronounced by an expert who saw through the deception, as the veriest rot imaginable. It is a sad commentary on the intelligence of a certain class that they should be so easily misled.

Startling as the assertion may seem, YOU CAN NOT BY ANY POSSIBLE MEANS AT YOUR COMMAND RID SPIRITUALISM ENTIRELY OF THIS FAKE ELEMENT—you can only hold it in check, and thus prevent it from having a full controlling influence in our ranks. No sooner is one fake medium exposed, than another at once appears before the public. Take for example LaMott, a materializing medium of Stockton, Cal. He hold in perfect subjection his large and influential circle of extreme gullibles, some of whom were wealthy, and they contributed largely to swell his bank account to the sum of $35,000, and then exposure being at hand, he fled to other sections with the amount. The Stockton Evening Mail alleges there was a plot among some of the members to murder certain parties who were loud in their denunciations of the LaMott scheme. But more about this will follow.

The Secular Press

The Excellent Work It Is Doing for Spiritualism.

Dr. I. K. Funk, the distinguished author and investigator of psychical phenomena, sends us the following from the New York Herald, as illustrating the trend of the secular press in its treatment of Spiritualism, showing a disposition to deal fairly with it. The Doctor writes: "I am sure that the critical attitude of Spiritualists like yourself and the conservative investigators along scientific lines is having a very excellent effect on the public mind. A few years ago it would have been very unlikely that so friendly an article as the enclosed, which appeared in the Herald, would have been published in a paper of this character. The Spiritualists themselves should be the most exacting critics of spiritual phenomena. Moderation on their part will have a very excellent effect on the public mind."

Spiritualism to-day celebrates its fifty-ninth anniversary. Fifty-nine years ago to-day Modern Spiritualism, destined to become one of the most popular and far reaching religious movements of the nineteenth, or, indeed, any other century, had its inception in a little wooden house, which is still standing in the Hydesville road, near Newark, N. Y.

In one of the two rooms of this little house there sat in the pleasant March sunshine of the late afternoon a couple of young girls, Kate and Margaretta Fox. They were sewing carpet rags, and as they sewed, discussed with much mirth the various April fool jokes which they intended playing upon certain of their young friends on the following All Fools' Day. The girls were alone in the house, their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Fox, having gone to do the family marketing in Newark that afternoon. And because they were all alone their merriment was allowed to flow unrestrained by parental injunction.

In this merry fashion the afternoon was drawing to its close, when suddenly a loud knock upon the wall interrupted their flow of fun. The knock was so loud and imperious that both girls, allowing their carpet rags to drop to the floor, sprang instantly to their feet, both asking in the same breath who was there. They received no answer, but the unexplained knocking continued even louder and harder than before. The girls made a thorough examination of the premises, ultimately convincing themselves that the noise they heard was not being effected by any visible human agency. Finally Kate Fox, the elder of the sisters, conceived the very original idea that the knocker, although invisible, was intelligent, and she asked him to rap once for the letter "A," twice for the letter "B" and so on.

The Murdered Peddler.

Much to their amazement, not to say terror, the mysterious knocker responded to the suggestion, and within a phenomenally brief time communication was established. The rapper in this way introduced himself as the spirit of a pedler. He declared that many, many years before he had been murdered in this very house in which the Fox family now lived and that he had been buried in the cellar beneath their feet, where he declared they might find his bones any time they might choose to dig for them in the corner which he indicated.

Having delivered himself of this sensational statement, and indicating some jewelry which they would find, the knockings ceased and the spirit of the murdered pedler departed, leaving the young women in highly wrought nervous condition to await the home-coming of their parents.

The latter, returning at nightfall, were naturally filled with astonishment at the story related by their daughters. They were incredulous, and, due to the proximity of All Fools' Day, were inclined after their first outburst of amazement to consider themselves merely the victims of their fun-loving daughters' somewhat exaggerated sense of humor. Mr. and Mrs. Fox would have been perfectly willing to let the matter go with this explanation, but their daughters were firm in asseverating the truth of their story. Not only that, but to prove it they suggested tearing up the floor of the cellar and producing the bones of the murdered pedler. This Mr. Fox refused to listen to, but his daughters were so insistent that eventually, in order to dispose of the matter once and for all, he decided to grant their request, and the next morning found the entire family engaged in digging up the southeast corner of the cellar.

They had dug but a few inches when they made the startling discovery that bones were buried there and a few minutes afterward they had unearthed the dismembered skeleton of a man whom the girls identified by various articles the spirit had mentioned, an old-fashioned watch and a brass ring, as the bones of the murdered pedler whose spirit had spoken to them the day before.

Naturally the news of this remarkable thing spread rapidly all over the neighborhood and finally reached Newark and New York City. The result was that a great many people came to the Fox house and communicated with the spirit in the same way, Kate and Margaretta Fox acting as agents between the world of the dead and that of the living. Thus the now famous Fox sisters became the first of what are now called "mediums."

It is doubtful whether the Fox girls had sufficient imagination to even dream of the furor which their alleged discovery was shortly to make, not only in America, but all the civilized world. And, indeed, it is almost equally doubtful whether we of the present day can form any adequate conception of that same furor which raged more than fifty years ago. The fact that Christian Science has more than one million followers in the United States to-day is regarded as a phenomenal thing in the history of present day religious movements, but the Christian Science following is insignificant as compared with that of Spiritualism in the years between 1848 and 1867. For it is now a matter of record that the idea formulated by the two illiterate young girls in that little house in Newark was to grow and increase so rapidly that within two years the Spiritualists of the United States should number more than half a million and that, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, they should have increased by the year 1867 to more than eleven millions in the United States alone, or two-fifths of the entire population at that time.

The Rochester Period.

Although Spiritualism was conceived and born in the little house in Newark, it was in Rochester, N. Y., that it was to develop to its eventual proportions. Hither the Fox sisters came to live with their sister, Mrs. Fish, several months after the incident narrated, and so Rochester became in time regarded as the Mecca of Spiritualism, just as Concord is to-day regarded as the Mecca of Christian Scientists. It was after the removal to Rochester that the Fox sisters formulated and developed the cult now known as Modern Spiritualism. It was here that they first essayed the character of Spiritualistic mediums and established an alleged process whereby it was believed that communication could be carried on at will between the world of the living and the world of the dead.

The Fox sisters began to give what were known at first as seances, or spirit circles, at which lost relatives and deceased eminent men and women were communicated with. The earliest communications were carried on, as they had been in Newark, by means of raps or "percussive sounds." The movement spread like an epidemic. Those who sat at the seances of the Fox sisters were often found to become mediums themselves, and then in their turn developed mediumship in others. Indeed, it seemed that the mere reading of accounts of seances, a subject treated of at great length in the press of that day, was sufficient to develop the peculiar susceptibility in some persons, while others, who became mediums ultimately, did so only after prolonged and patient waiting. The result was that spirit circles sprang up all over the country. Men and women of all classes, and of all degrees of culture and intelligence, became interested in the phenomena. In certain communities every family established its spirit circle, which convened at regular hours each day for the purpose of holding communion with deceased members.

Meanwhile, the Fox sisters, up in Rochester, were perfecting the system of spirit communication which they had discovered, and now were able, so they believed, to obtain results by more complicated means than the earlier "raps." They now began to develop mysterious powers of "table turning," the ringing of bells and playing of musical instruments. Later followed the appearance of lights, quasi-human voices, musical sounds produced supposedly without instruments, the materialization or presence in material form of what seemed to be human hands, faces, etc., and ultimately of complete figures, alleged to be not those of any person present, and sometimes claimed by witnesses as deceased relatives.

The Fox sisters also began now to experiment with "psychography," or "direct drawing and writing," supposed to be done without human agency. They also gave manifestations of their ability to unfasten cords and bonds; elongation of the medium's body; handling of red hot coals, and apparent passage of solids through solids without disintegration.

Meanwhile, as interest in the new cult spread in this country, it also travelled to Europe, though little interest was manifested there until 1852, when Mrs. Hayden, a professional from Boston, went over to London. Within a month of her arrival Spiritualism spread like wild-fire not only over all England, but all over the Continent as well. So great, indeed, was the furor caused by the Boston woman's demonstrations that it is said on eminent scientific authority that in the year 1853 table-turning was the all-absorbing interest in every middle class and aristocratic family in Europe.

There followed everywhere, both here and abroad, an interest in occult phenomena which is unequalled for sensationalism and variety by that of any other age. What part of this phenomena was genuine will never be known, but that a considerable portion of it was, as afterward proved, the most audacious fraud, has long been a matter of record. As is the case in the organization of all other religious cults, Spiritualism naturally attracted a preponderance of morbidly curious and weak-minded constituents. The very nature of its phenomena made Spiritualism a most convenient avenue for the perpetration of all manner of fraud—fraud, too, of such a fascinating character that its victims were only too glad to give it in every case the benefit of the doubt.

One of the most notorious of these frauds is of comparatively recent date and involved a series of lawsuits and litigation which are still pending in the courts. The case referred to was the exposure of Mrs. Ann Odelia Diss De Bar in the spirit picture fraud which she perpetrated upon Luther R. Marsh, a famous and very wealthy New York lawyer. Those spirit pictures, for which he paid fabulous prices, were supposed to have been painted by supernatural agency, just as the so-called spirit photographs are to-day supposed to be effected. The pictures which the Diss De Bar woman succeeded in palming off on Mr. Marsh were not only believed by him to have been done by a mystic hand, but they purported to represent the various personages portrayed as they appeared in the spirit world. The personages included among others, the aged lawyer's deceased wife, and the late Adelaide Neilson, Mr. Marsh's "spirit wife."

But not all the sensationalism regarding Spiritualistic phenomena has been illfounded. The last decade of the nineteenth century witnessed some truly remarkable cases of mediumship, the most famous of which is that of Mrs. Piper, of Boston.

The Modern Trend.

Indeed, in spite of all the outrageous frauds which have been from its very inception perpetrated in the name of Spiritualism, in spite of the fanaticism of its zealous followers and the ignorance and superstition to which its more unscrupulous and dishonest apostles appealed, nevertheless Spiritualism as a cult stands upon a more respectable footing to-day than ever before. It is true that the number of its followers has long since been reduced to a comparatively modest figure as against the eleven millions of 1867, but nevertheless the Spiritualists of to-day represent a class of people who as a rule are firm in their conviction. Within the last few years the Spiritualists have begun to build their own churches and have organized themselves into coherent religious bodies. The largest of these churches is that known as the First Spiritualist Church of Brooklyn, the congregation numbering more than fifteen hundred.

There has also taken place within the same period of time a very great change of attitude toward Spiritualism on the part of scientists and metaphysical scholars. The tendency to ridicule, or even to lightly regard the alleged phenomena of the Spiritualistic seance has almost entirely disappeared on the part of the truly cultured and enlightened. Where they do not evince a frank interest or absorbing concern in these phenomena, the majority of scientific men to-day confess themselves in that respect as agnostics. They state that in face of the many strange things which they cannot understand and from which they have eliminated every possibility of fraud they cannot conscientiously deny that the Spiritualists may not be upon the eve of discovering something which has thus far eluded the grasp of organized science.

Indeed, Spiritualism numbers among its enthusiastic investigators to-day some of the world's greatest scientific authorities—men like Professor William Crookes, Alfred Russel Wallace, Professor William James, of Harvard University; Dr. Weir Mitchell, Professor Zollner, Sir David Brewster, Sir Oliver Lodge and a long list of other distinguished names. Among these there is perhaps, no better cultured or more scientific observer than Dr. Isaac K. Funk, of New York. Dr. Funk has been for a number of years devoting himself to the investigation of Spiritualistic phenomena, and one of the most astonishing books of the nineteenth century was his "Widow's Mite and Other Psychic Phenomena," issued in 1904.

The Spirit of Beecher.

The incident of the "Widow's Mite," which happened to be one of Dr. Funk's own personal experiences, has been and is still being a matter of discussion among scientists in every portion of the civilized world. In the early part of February, 1903, Dr. Funk heard of a woman in Brooklyn, who, on every Wednesday evening, gave Spiritualistic "sittings" to her family and a few invited guests. He obtained an invitation and one evening attended. During the progress of the seance the "control" through whom the medium supposedly communicated with the spirit world, asked abruptly: "Has anyone here got anything that belonged to Mr. Beecher?" He repeated the question several times, when suddenly Dr. Funk remembered that he had a letter in his pocket from the Rev. Dr. Hillis, the present occupant of Mr. Beecher's pulpit. Dr. Funk informed him of the fact, but the control insisted that it was not a letter from Mr. Beecher's successor that Dr. Funk had in his possession, but, much to the latter's astonishment, he declared that Mr. Beecher was much concerned about an ancient coin, "The Widow's Mite." This coin was out of its place, the spirit declared and should be returned. Dr. Funk was the only person in the room who had known Mr. Beecher, the latter having been his life-long friend. Naturally, he was astonished at mention of "The Widow's Mite," because he remembered having borrowed it nine years before from a gentleman in Brooklyn, a close friend of Mr. Beecher, and who had died four years before. Dr. Funk had borrowed it while the publishing house of which he was and is the head was making the Standard Dictionary. The man who loaned it to him cautioned him at the time that being so rare it was worth some hundred dollars, and that it was to be returned to the collection to which it belonged just as soon as it had served the purpose of the illustrator. Dr. Funk had returned this coin, or so he believed, as soon as it had been used, and he promptly informed the control to this effect. The control insisted over and over again that it had not been returned and was at that moment in a drawer in a safe under a lot of papers. Where this safe was to be found the control did not know. All he could tell was that Mr. Beecher wished it returned to its owner, the name of whom the control was not able to state.

Dr. Funk the next day called into his office everybody connected with the publishing house who had had anything to do with "The Widow's Mite," each of whom was firm in the belief that it had been returned long years before. When they had retired Dr. Funk himself went to the Funk & Wagnalls safe, opened several drawers, and in the bottom of one of them, under a pile of papers, he found an envelope neatly labelled: "The Widow's Mite," to be returned immediately to Professor Charles E. West." Inside the envelope was found the coin. Dr. Funk immediately made a thorough investigation with the purpose of eliminating ev-

(Continued on page 8.)

The Kingdom of the Spirit.

What Spiritualism Is Doing, and What Spiritualists May Do to Promote It.

A Lecture Delivered by Thomas Grimshaw, Before the Illinois State Spiritualist Association's Mass Meeting in Chicago, and Reported Expressly for The Progressive Thinker, by Louise M. Foxcroft.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—The theme upon which we propose to discourse this evening we would entitle "The Kingdom of the Spirit; What Spiritualism Is Doing and What Spiritualists May Do to Promote it."

There is no gainsaying the fact that the conditions of mortal life are to many undesirable. Nature has implanted within the human an instinctive love of life, but almost every day you read a long record of suicides, men and women who have destroyed their choicest gift, not because they did not love life but because they rebelled against, or despaired over the conditions they were compelled to meet.

The Christian world has been preaching the brotherhood of man for two thousand years. Every Christmas time the carol singers go forth and proclaim the glad tidings that a king is born, that peace and good will have been brought to earth. But the real fact of the matter is the Kingdom of Peace seems as far away to-day as it was two thousand years ago. Crime, poverty, wretchedness and injustice still exist in this world. What are we going to do about it? This is proclaimed as a utilitarian age, an age when reforms are springing up on every side. Numerous panaceas are being presented but evidently all of them fall short of accomplishing the work their promoters had in view.

Modern Spiritualism is here; we believe it has come to stay; its advocates proclaim it is the reform movement which embraces every other branch of legitimate reform. They declare that the movement has been inaugurated in order to bring more of the joys of heaven into the present life; that it is a religion which proposes to teach man how to live, not how to prepare to die, for if we live right we may fearlessly approach death, assured it will be followed by Eternal Life.

Let us briefly summarize the teachings of Spiritualism as they relate to the particular question we have chosen for consideration.

The first and most emphatic declaration Modern Spiritualism makes is, that man is more than a creature of flesh and blood, more than a thinking animal, an Immortal Soul destined to live after the destruction of his physical body. It proclaims, nay more, it demonstrates through its phenomena the continued existence of the thinker after the change called death. This is not a conditional immortality but the birthright of every human soul. That means you, it means your neighbor, the black man and the yellow man, as well as the white man. There is no color line; no distinction of sex. Men live after death not because of their superior intelligence, or social standing, or beliefs, but because they are human beings. We further deduce the fact that men are spirits now, possessing spiritual capabilities, latent spiritual attributes waiting for the opportunity of unfoldment and expression.

The religious world in the past has invited people to believe they were immortal, believe they were children of God; but mere belief is not enough. Belief is a something which exists in various degrees of intensity in the human mind. It is a changeable condition. A man may believe a thing to-day and cease to believe it to-morrow. What Spiritualism is trying to do is to help the individual to realize the fact that he is a spiritual being and that he is immortal. Once this realization is born, once men know beyond peradventure of a doubt that they will live after death, they will begin to think seriously of the relationship between the life beyond and the life before death. Whilst the intelligences communicating through mediums present different ideas regarding their condition in the world of the hereafter, they are united in declaring it is a sequential state; that they are what they are and where they are, comfortable or uncomfortable, happy or unhappy because of the lives they have lived and the motives which dominated their acts in life. In other words, the only passport to happiness in the world of the hereafter is conduct, good conduct. Live right and the consequences of that living is sure to be productive of good.

One great trouble, if not the greatest trouble with the people of the world to-day is their inability to realize their spiritual selves. They are spiritually blind, their souls are buried in the senses, the physical has been exalted; when they speak of self they are usually thinking of the body. The mind and spirit are but appendages, something intangible, unreal. It is perfectly natural whilst in this frame of mind to chase after the things considered the most real, to seek for wealth, power, personal aggrandizement.

But, ladies and gentlemen, if they could only be brought to realize the fact that the permanent in the man was the spiritual, that the physical was transient, constantly changing. Science teaches you that the particles of the body are in a state of flux, coming and going, that you do not have the same bodies you had a year ago, that the abiding part is an invisible principle, that which for want of a better name we call the spirit.

Here is where the work of the Spiritualist comes in. This work of enlightenment requires more than preaching. It requires demonstration. That demonstration is furnished by the phenomena of Spiritualism, this phenomena needs to be fostered, not merely witnessed but studied, studied with a view to discovering the laws under which they are produced, and the best conditions for their manifestation. Abandon your present haphazard methods of investigation (the use of mediumship for entertainment purposes) and work to provide a positive scientific demonstration of the reality of spirit, and spiritual phenomena.

You may tell a man he ought to be good, until doomsday, it will make very little difference to him. You may tell him he will go to hell if he is not good; he may be frightened and only do wrong when he thinks no one is looking. But if with the next breath you tell him he may do wrong and then at the eleventh hour go down on his knees and pray God to forgive him, and God in his infinite mercy will forgive and grant the sinner a choice seat in the kingdom of glory, nine times out of ten he will go on doing wrong and take advantage of the eleventh hour scheme of redemption. The doctrine of vicarious atonement has stood in the way of the establishment of the kingdom of the spirit in this world.

The Christian world has declared that the only way mankind could be saved was by coming to Christ, but they have confounded the Christ principle with the man Jesus, and the people have been coming to him and laying the burden of their iniquities upon the shoulders of an innocent man. They have said, "Jesus suffered and died to pay the penalty for my sins. I am perfectly willing that he should," then they have turned around and said, "If Jesus can save my soul and suffer for my sins, pay my just debts to God, I am going to see if I can't get someone to pay my debts in this world, get someone to do my share of work; I will do as little as possible."

Spiritualism has proclaimed all down through these fifty-nine years, that man was bound to render an equivalent for the good which he received; that he was bound to earn his right to glory, and until he was ready to pay his passage he would have to remain out of heaven. Spiritualism asks you to-night if you are ready to pay your passage, work your way, or are you coward enough to want someone else to suffer in your stead?

The old scheme of salvation presented a strange picture, a narrow road leading to the kingdom of heaven. Man must walk that road alone, Jesus beckoning him on, he must neither look to the right nor to the left, nor behind, but keep his eyes fixed in front. If ever such a man succeeded in reaching the gates of glory, by the time he reached there he would have a soul so small and insignificant it would not be worth admitting. We prefer to go to heaven by the broad path arm in arm with those we love. What is the good of going to heaven if you are to be there all alone?

They used to tell us there were no marriages in heaven, no giving in marriage. What a strange place! We do not know how you gentlemen may feel, but we declare we would rather go to hades and have the company of a good woman, than go to a literal heaven and be compelled to live alone.

The so-called religious people have been so busy getting religion and trying to save their souls, that they have neglected to study themselves, get acquainted with their spiritual natures. They have placed so much dependence upon somebody else, sung so repeatedly, "Oh, to be nothing," they have really some of them almost become nothing. As a man thinketh so is he, and if he thinks of himself as a worm of the dust he will become a cringing, crawling sycophant. If he thinks of himself as a mere beast, he will become beastly in his conduct. But think of yourselves as children of the Infinite, repositories of great power, angels in germ. Think of every person as your brother or sister in spirit.

That little boy on the street to-night barefooted and in rags, selling papers, is an angel in germ and sometime he will walk the highways of the heavenly world, not singing hallelujahs, and playing a harp, but with a smile on his face and glory in his heart. There is no person so low but that will sometime rise out of the fogs and dargness and bask in the sunlight of a glorious spiritual life. Note we say someday. You can either keep yourself out of heaven for a million years, or you can go there by lightning express. There is a divinity which shapes your ends, and that divinity has determined you will get there sometime, but you are the one to determine when. If you want to linger by the way, it is your privilege; if you want to hasten the time when you may experience this joy it is your prerogative.

It is just as easy for you to start on the way to glory now as it will be after death. Just as easy for you to commence your education here as hereafter. What is that you say, You don't have time; that your duties and obligations in this life are so great and numerous that you cannot afford to spend any of your time bothering about your spiritual interests? You are mistaken, my friend, you have been laboring under the false impression that your spiritual interests and your material interests were antagonistic to each other. We want to tell you that a man's real spiritual interest, and his real material interests are never really antagonistic.

The great teacher of two thousand years ago said, "Seek first the kingdom of heaven (we would say the kingdom of the spirit and its power) and all else needful will be added unto you."

What are dollars if they do not bring happiness to the life of man? What are horses, carriages, automobiles, castles, etc., if they do not bring happiness? It is the development of the divine attributes of man's nature that brings happiness, not lands and money, and this happiness is as easy of access to the poor as the rich, more likely to be found in the humble cottage than the mansion. When you love somebody you get a foretaste of the glories of heaven. If you hate anybody you are raising hell. If you want heaven to come to you, start in a simple rather than a pretentious way. Learn to love somebody. Love your husband or your wife. Why not? A young man and a young woman consider it eminently proper to love and manifest their love for each other before they are married. Why not afterwards? Go into a home where a husband loves his wife and the wife loves her husband, and you have found a corner in the kingdom of heaven. On the other hand visit a house where the woman is jealous of her husband, or the husband jealous of his wife, and you have found a choice location in the kingdom of hell.

Love your children; you can not waste time in devotion to a child. If you want to know something of heaven, have a little darling throw her arms about your neck, and put her soft, velvet cheek against yours, touch you with that tender touch that innocent childhood alone can give; you know then that life is worth living. The old bachelor is blind. The old maid has not found heaven yet; but she will someday, every soul shall find its mate and sometime reach that state of bliss the Creator destined it should find.

Get closer to one another; remember the friendship of a good man is better than fine gold. Try to remember that every man is your brother, every woman your sister; spend more time in trying to help humanity, and less in trying to do somebody. It costs little to give a friendly clasp of the hand, or to speak a word of encouragement, to throw out a kindly helpful thought, and yet thousands fall, pine away and die for just this kind of help.

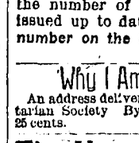
What do you say? there is too much sentiment in all this, that the advice is not practical, that it will interfere with your worldly ambition! Then let your worldly ambition die; it is false, it is leading you not to happiness but to darkness and despair.

Your real material interests do not conflict with, but contribute towards your spiritual welfare. The body is the tool of the spirit; it is yours to use not abuse; you cannot afford to neglect it, through it you may accomplish much good. There is no virtue in poverty, no holiness in fasting, a sickly body is no sign of spiritual growth.

Once more we repeat, the kingdom of the spirit will be born when men come to a realization of their spiritual selves, cultivate their mental, psychical and spiritual powers, think of themselves in the light of eternity, follow more spiritual ideals, live their lives not as if they expected to be snuffed out of existence in a few short years, or be changed in the twinkling of an eye into some sort of a winged monstrosity, but as if they were going to live on and on and be themselves forever.

Then the trifling trials, troubles, and tribulations of mortal life will sink into insignificance; viewed from the standpoint of spiritual consciousness, life will be invested with new meaning, its purposes will be better understood and become more glorious.

Think of it, my friend, when the sun has faded out of the heavens, when the stars no longer run their course, when the earth has ceased to revolve in its orbit, you and I will be alive, conscious, thoughtful, marching along the pathway towards a higher and diviner life.



Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT IMPROVES AND STRENGTHENS EYESIGHT.

Spectacles May Be Abandoned

This instrument, which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid so that any person can give it a test.

They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 842R, 811 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

907

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

Why I Am a Vegetarian.
An address delivered before the Chicago Vegetarian Society By J. Howard Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Koran Commonly called the "Alkoran of Mohammed." The standard Arabian or Mohammedan Bible. Cloth, $1.00

ANCIENT INDIA,
Its Language and Religions. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Paper, 25 cents.

COMMON SENSE By Thomas Paine. A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper, 15 cents.

The Poetical and Prose Works
—BY—
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created With portrait of author. Price $1.

AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.
A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

SUN SPOTS AND DISASTERS.

The Causes of Waves of Criminality and Disease.

The word "disaster" is astrological in its origin. Anciently it was supposed that disasters were the results of incongenial relations of the planets to each other, and of adverse relations of the planets to the constellations. There are periods in which certain classes of disasters occur more often than at other times. We know that at times there are waves of criminality, insanity, disease, etc. Why is it? I am of the opinion that it is because we are all magnetically related, not only to each other, but to all life in the universe; yes, to the universe-lum; that being parts of the infinite whole, there is an infinite relation to that whole.

Seven years ago, Saturn, Jupiter, Venus and the earth were all at once in the constellation Capricornus, with the sun in the opposite constellation, passing through Cancer to Leo. The result of these four planets and the sun being in line, was the intense heat of that summer. It was no wonder that the ancients held that when the planets all arrived in the sign of Scorpio, the same time the earth should be destroyed by fire. Such a concentration of electrical force, and such a battle in the sky could not help being disastrous to our earth, and also Venus and Mercury.

The past three years have been remarkable for spots on the sun, some of them of immense size. One now visible to the eye through a smoked glass, is 30,000 miles wide, by 118,000 miles long. Figures are apt to pass through the mind of an ordinary reader without leaving any impression as to their magnitude. Our earth is not quite eight thousand miles in diameter, and yet when we have traveled several days in crossing the continent of America, we get a very good idea of the vastness of our territory; and yet it is only about half the distance we should require to travel, if we had a railroad through it to the other side, as Pluto had a road to his dominions. But you could put forty-six of our earth or planets the size of our earth end to end and side to side in the spot now afflicting our sun and they would not touch each other. There are generally and at all times spots on the sun, but they often seem to be unimportant as to size. Once in about every eleven years they reach their maximum. I don't know whether the period of eleven years is exact, as it has been so long since I read it. I found it in a book entitled "Force and Nature," I think the name of the book was, but which I sent with other books to the Morris Pratt School Library. When these spots reach their maximum there comes a time of seismic disturbance, which is also shown in that book.

But what of these spots—what are they? In "Recreations in Astronomy," by Henry White Warren, D. D., a spot is described which Professor Young of Princeton College described as follows:

"On September 7, 1871, he was observing a large hydrogen cloud, by the sun's edge. This cloud was about 100,000 miles long, and its upper edge was some 50,000 miles above the sun's surface, the lower side some 15,000 miles. The whole had the appearance of being supported on pillars of fire, these seeming pillars being hydrogen jets, brighter and more active than the substance of the cloud. At half-past twelve, when Prof. Young chanced to be called away from his observatory, there were no indications of any approaching change, except that one of the connecting stems of the southern extremity of the cloud had grown considerably brighter and more curiously bent to one side, and near the base of another, at the northern end, a little brilliant lump had developed itself, shaped much like a thunder head.

"But when Prof. Young returned, about half an hour later, he found that a very wonderful change had taken place, and that a very remarkable process was actually in progress. 'The whole thing had been literally blown in shreds,' he says, 'by some inconceivable uprush from beneath. In place of the quiet cloud I had left, the air—if I may use the expression—was filled with flying debris, a mass of detached vertical fusiform fragments, each from ten to thirty seconds (i. e. from 4,500 to 13,500 miles long, by two or three seconds (900 to 1350 miles) wide—brighter and closer together where the pillars had formerly stood, and rapidly ascending. When I looked some of them had already reached a height of nearly four minutes (100,000 miles); and while I watched them there arose with a motion almost perceptible to the eye, until in ten minutes, the uppermost were more than 200,000 miles above the solar surface. * * * The velocity of ascent, also,—one hundred and sixty-seven miles per second—is considerably greater than anything hitherto recorded.'"

Commenting on this, Dr. Henry White Warren says:

"If we call these movements hurricanes, we must remember that what we use as a figure moves but one hundred miles an hour, while those move one hundred miles a second. Such storms of fire on earth, "coming down upon us from the north, would, in thirty seconds after they had crossed the St. Lawrence, be in the Gulf of Mexico, carrying with them the whole surface of the continent in a mass not simply of ruins, but of glowing vapor, in which the vapors arising from the dissolution of the materials composing the cities of Boston, New York and Chicago would be mixed in a single inextinguishable cloud.'"

An electric disturbance such as the present sun spot is, cannot but have a disturbing effect not only upon the earth, but upon everything upon our earth. It would bring unusual conditions as to cold and heat, storms, etc. Such violent storms in the sun can but intensify everything connected with the planets. Not only will it affect atmospheric conditions, but it will affect the health and vitality of every living thing. It would be the most marked in eccentric characters, making them more than ordinary, and every other person is liable to depart from the line of abnormality. While it has this effect on extremists, it is also likely to have an exhausting effect on some persons, so they will feel unusually tired with very little labor. There should on this account be two engineers on each train, two pilots on each vessel sailing in the waters. The casualities that are occurring in such unprecedented numbers, are but the natural consequences of the conditions forced on our planet by the electric disturbance in the sun.

When will these disturbances cease? They commenced about three years ago, and probably they have reached their maximum, but it may probably require three years before they cease to aggravate our planet and its inhabitants.

There is another phase, I will not discuss, simply because I am incompetent. What of the children born in this intensified condition of our earth? We may arrive at some conclusion by inquiring into the ages of our criminals, and insane persons and also persons conspicuous on other lines. Take for illustration those who are now 22, 88 or 44 years old. But we should bear in mind that the sun has not been so eccentric in any period of its spots as it has this year, so we should probably not find the same intensity as we should expect in those born this year if there is any reliance in this speculation. I give this hint without expressing any opinion, as data, for those who are curious to inquire into the matter.

I am of opinion that crime is more rampant, especially in uxoricide, and malicious murders, but that I do not know.

D. W. HULL, M. H.

Olympia, Wash.

ANNIVERSARY OF SPIRITUALISM.

It Is Celebrated by the First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society, of Boston.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society celebrated the 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism on Friday, March 29, with three sessions. The platform was decorated with the stars and stripes, and many flowers and potted plants; the meeting opened with the audience singing "America," after which the president, Mrs. Mattie E. A. Allbe, greeted the friends in a most cordial manner, bidding them welcome to our society.

Mrs. A. F. Butterfield, and Mr. Hebron Libbey, two of our principal workers, were seated upon the platform. Mrs. Butterfield said Spiritualism had brought happiness to her; it had sustained her through trials and shadows, and she was proud to be a Spiritualist; she had been a member of the Ladies' Aid Society for 43 years and she had never regretted it.

Mr. Hebron Libbey said he was proud to say he was a graduate from the Baptist Church. He had been a Spiritualist for over 50 years, and he had never regretted the step, he had taken. Spiritualism to him was as pure as the lilies, and he was glad to be able to say he was a Spiritualist.

Mrs. Morgan sang two selections which were well rendered.

Mrs. Alice S. Waterhouse another pioneer, voiced choice thoughts in regard to Spiritualism, and spoke of the Anniversary time and of its meaning to us.

Dr. Prentiss gave an Invocation and spoke of the light which had come to Mortals 59 years ago.

Mrs. Hattie C. Mason sang, after which she spoke briefly and said this was an occasion for rejoicing, the 59th Anniversary of the birth of our grand religion of light and truth; truly we should be happy and seek to shed the light along the pathway of sorrowing mortals. She spoke of the picture of our arisen sister, Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes, and said that she knew that Mrs. Byrnes in spirit was glad to be remembered.

Mrs. Nellie Abbott of Lawrence, spoke briefly and voiced messages of love to the friends which were well received.

Mrs. Belcher spoke briefly and gave messages.

The afternoon meeting opened with singing. Mr. R. F. Churchill, president of the Greenfield society, was the first speaker. He said in part, "Do to others as ye would that others should do unto you," and there would be no doubt that we would make converts throughout the land."

Mrs. Kate R. Stiles gave a short address, and said, "Let us gain a lesson by the milestone we are passing; let us see to it that if we live until the next Anniversary, this blessed truth will mean infinitely more to us than it does at the present time, that is the way for us to grow."

Mrs. S. C. Cunningham gave some remarkable tests. Asking for strangers in the audience, she gave fine tests which were recognized, and then said to them, "remember, then, that next year you will have something to testify to, that Spiritualism has meant more to you from to-day."

Mrs. N. J. Willis spoke of the significance of the meeting and of the good that was accomplished in coming together at these times; of the dear loved ones who had been with us in earth life only a short time ago, and how they were rejoicing with the mortals to-day. The meeting adjourned with singing "Auld Lang Syne."

The evening meeting opened with a song by Mrs. Haidee Hall, after which Mr. R. F. Churchill spoke on "Immortality." Roy Boyden, a little boy, gave a recitation. Mrs. Barker sang a beautiful song. Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, treasurer of the M. S. A. gave greeting to the friends, spoke of our Arisen workers and gave messages during the afternoon.

Rev. F. A. Wiggin also spoke and said in part that the infidel has always been the leader of advanced thought, and has established the line of growth. He spoke of Jesus and of ancient times.

Little Bernice Abbott gave a very fine whistling solo, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Abbott of Lawrence. They were well received.

Mrs. Chapman spoke at length and gave messages. Mrs. Alice Whall also gave messages which were well received. Miss Otto Willis recited a poem that had a fine moral to it. Miss Maude Litch gave messages. Mrs. Lewis sang an original song which was very beautiful. Mrs. S. C. Cunningham gave some more convincing messages to strangers. Mrs. M. J. Butler spoke of the beauties of our religion and of the truth of the messages. Mrs. N. J. Willis again spoke briefly, giving a message from Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes. Dr. Bishop voiced messages which were well received, and Mrs. B. W. Belcher and Mrs. Chapman made remarks. Dr. Hale spoke of the newspaper he was interested in, and asked for the support of the Spiritualists for "The Herald of Truth."

Thanks are due to Mr. J. E. Hayward, Mrs. A. F. Butterfield, Mr. Prentiss, and Mrs. Bennett for flowers; to Mrs. Waterhouse for flags, and to Mr. J. B. Hatch for flags and signs; also, thanks to all who, in any way assisted in making the meeting a success. Mrs. Mary F. Lovering presided at the piano, and the following message to the Spiritualists from Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes was written by her.

C. L. HATCH.

Message From Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes, by Mary F. Lovering.

Mrs. Mary F. Lovering:—With the permission of your spirit guide, I approach into your atmosphere of thought, and voice a few words from the spirit side of life. I was present last evening at the Ladies' Aid Society. I was with you again, although unseen from mortal view. I noted my form, and listened to the remarks by the various mediums, and I would that one glimpse of the spirit world came before your vision, for you are in the shadow-land, while I am in the sunlight of God's eternal truth, free from suffering and bodily ills. I have met some of the old workers who encouraged me in my earthly mission; they have assisted me into the heights of learning, for I am only a student in these vast realms of knowledge and power. I sit at the feet of these wise teachers and drink in the sublime truths and past experiences through which they gained their present position. I will mention the names of some of these arisen ones whom I have met: Moses Hull, Jennie B. Hagan Brown, William H. Banks, Prof Buchanan, Prof. Hildreth, Nelson Cross, Ellen Colby, H. B. Stover, A. L Hayward, Jacob Edson and many others. They gave me a grand reception, and a welcome to my spirit home.

Many friends of the past, Mrs. Lovering, are encircling you with their presence this morning and say to you, do not be weary in well-doing, press on, let your light shine, and always testify to the truth of spirit return, for it is destined to fill the earth with such a vivifying influence that all tongues and languages will exclaim, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice." You are living in an age when the churches, ministers and people, are waking from their slumbers, and beholding this "King of Glory," thus realizing their is only a curtain or thin veil between the two spheres of life and spirit telephone messages are constantly descending upon mortals, if they listen, will catch the vibration of thought from the arisen ones. Rev. Warren H. Cudworth and Frank Bonter step in, Charles Sullivan says, "Put my name in, I did what I could to cheer the friends while on earth plane."

Another anniversary is near at hand, we old workers will band together and visit your halls during the exercises and make known our presence. I well remember, Mrs. L., your visit to the hospital and the reading of those spirit messages, written while you were in London. It was a comfort and cheer to me, and now it is my privilege to have the experience of touching your brain, with my few broken thoughts. All the sacrifices I made, and the labor put forth to advance this cause while among you, I was more than compensated for when my dear mother and my boy approached me when I awoke to the reality of spirit life; they clasped my hand with a joyous welcome. I knew and recognized earth life was over, I was filled with joy and peace. I am not forgetful of those dear ones left behind, and leave blessings in their pathway.

I would a harmonious influence penetrate through the ranks of all Spiritualists, and they be imbued with the divine love which penetrates through all space, and spheres of light, which brings a healing power on wings of love. Much more would I say to you as time moves on, and I gain more knowledge. I will often wend my way earthward and give out crumbs of comfort to the friends. I thank the spirit friends near, who have assisted me in giving this short message.

I hope in days to come I can voice my thoughts better through mortal brains. This is my first experience through this medium and friend. I leave words of hope and cheer unto all with whom I was associated, hoping this will be a new stimulus to those who listen, and would I be remembered in this writing at the coming anniversary. Yours for the cause of truth.

MRS. SARAH A. BYRNES.

TRY IT.

One day last year a young lad died,
Yet none of his friends moaned nor cried.
'Twas not a physical death, that's sure,
'Twas his habits died, for a life more pure.

He'd thought for a long time that he'd try,
Until one day he resolved to die
Of the filthy life that he had led,
To follow the Better Way instead.

* * * * *

I saw the lad again to-day
Still walking in the Better Way,
His step was firm and his eyes were bright,
An inspiration to everyone's sight.

* * * * *

Let your bad habits die, my friend,
And you will feel a real God-send
That will make you what you ought to be.
If you don't believe it—try it and see.

W. B. CONNOLLY.

PILES

Wonderful New 3-Fold Remedy Curing Thousands—Anyone May Try It Without Cost.

Send Your Address To-day and Get a $1 Package to Try—FREE

We want every sufferer from piles who sees this advertisement to send us his or her address at once. Return mail will bring—Free to Try—our complete new three-fold absorption cure for Piles, Ulcer, Fissure, Prolapse, Tumors, Constipation and all rectal troubles If you are fully satisfied with the benefit received, send us One Dollar. If not we take your word and it costs you nothing; you decide after a thorough trial. This treatment is curing even cases of 30 and 40 years' standing, as well as all the earlier stages. Act now and perhaps save yourself great suffering. Our three-fold treatment cures to stay cured, because it is constitutional as well as local, and we want you to try it at our expense. Our valuable new Pile Book (in colors) comes free with the approval treatment, all in plain package. Send no money—but write to-day—to Dr. Van Vleck Co., X015 Majestic Building, Jackson, Mich.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lillian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

THE BIBLE

New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work; and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

B. G. Sweet, in renewing his subscription, writes from Empire City, Kansas: "I see by the tag on my paper, the grand old Progressive Thinker, that my subscription will expire with 009, and as I have been a subscriber for about fifteen years to that staunch exponent of PURE SPIRITUALISM, I should feel lost if a single number should be missing. I enclose $1 for renewal. I see that some writers in a certain other paper claiming to be an exponent of true Spiritualism, infer that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is an enemy to mediumship, but so far as I have read The Progressive Thinker, the editor is in full accord with ALL TRUE MEDIUMSHIP, and his effort is to separate the chaff from the pure grain, so that those who are seeking light in Spiritualism may not be compelled to wade through a stack of chaff and become SUFFOCATED WITH FRAUD before they obtain a grain of truth. Every person knows that many articles of the food we buy are adulterated for gain, and that gold, silver and paper money is counterfeited, but if we do not critically examine it when received, if counterfeit, it is a loss. Just so in Spiritualism; if we do not use common sense to learn if a medium be genuine or a fraud, finally learning that we have been humbugged, we lose time, money and temper."

Hattie G. Webster writes from Columbus, Ohio: "The West Side Spiritual Church, Columbus, Ohio, McDowell street, near State street, celebrated the fifty-ninth anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, March 31. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, aspidistia and cut flowers, and presented a fine Easter appearance and as usual we were greeted with a large and very appreciative audience. Our church was never more harmonious or more prosperous, adding new members all the time. We still hold the banner for Ohio, and the celebration of such events as last Sunday has a glory with it that can only be appreciated by those who experience the influence of the spirit attendants upon them."

Mrs. Helen Stuart-Richings lectured at Meadville, Pa., March 31 and April 7. She lectures there again the 14th.

Mrs. Nina D. Challen of Toledo, Ohio, writes that she has just returned home from a trip in the eastern part of the state, having visited several cities by request, holding meetings which were well attended. She can be addressed at No. 2540 Foraker avenue, Toledo, Ohio, for engagements.

Mrs. H. E. Smith writes: "The First Church of Spiritualists, Williamsport, Pa., celebrated the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism by a beautiful display of flowers and a special musical, and by the young people reciting some very entertaining poems. Our president, Mr. C. A. Kiehl, in a eloquent address, held the audience in close attention. Our loyal workers were amply repaid by a large attendance, and we propose to be ever loyal, and do what we can to make Spiritualism the universal blessing it should be."

Mr. Andrew Merkel writes: "The Spiritualistic Church Students of Nature, 461 W. North avenue, corner Robey street, celebrated the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, the history of which was given by our pastor, Mrs. M. Schumacher. The hall was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and cut flowers. Miss A. Kernner, the elocutionist, favored the society with an eloquently delivered discourse. The children were given colored eggs as a token of rejoicing and resurrection of all life from its wintry sleep. The pastor gave tests, and all were well pleased."

Ferd C. Sahrer writes: "The 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism was most fittingly observed Sunday, March 31, by the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists. Our spacious hall with accommodations for 300 was filled to overflowing by an audience expectant and happy, many coming from suburban towns adjacent to Chicago. The interior of the hall was appropriately decorated with white and yellow bunting, while the rostrum was adorned by palms and white and yellow flowers. The invocation by our three youngest mediums, Misses Helen Harvey, Winnifred Thompson and Grace Kaiser, was a prominent feature of the afternoon. Rev. Thos Seeley Warner's address was brief but contained much wholesome advice worthy anyone's consideration. The reading of sealed letters by Mrs. Hilbert, Mrs. Bloom, Mrs. Caird, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Sexsmith and Mr. Chas. A. Thompson was a revelation to many, and succeeded in chasing away the clouds of sorrow that seemed to surround many. Easter greeting by telegram, sent by Mrs. A. A. Averill, secretary of the Lynn Spiritualist Association of Lynn, Mass., was received and read from the platform. The singing of Messrs. R. V. Fessler, Hugh Craig Anderson and Nicholas G. Prester was excellent, all being soloists of reputation, and it is difficult to say who was the most popular of the three. A larger number than usual remained for supper and the evening. At our concert at 7 o'clock, Prof. Singer added to his laurels as a master of the violin, while Miss Gordon's close acquaintance with the piano was demonstrated to our delight. Mrs. Henrietta Lichtig and Miss Caroline R. Mills, as readers, added considerable to the enjoyment as did also the soprano solo by Miss Mary Smith. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's address in the evening was listened to with a growing interest as she proceeded with her discourse, which was uncommonly appropriate. Dr. Warne's remarks were peculiarly fitting and found a responsive audience ready to welcome him at any time. Sunday, April 14, all who have joined the society will be initiated. This will be public, and all who wish to become members can do so at that time."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley arrived Thursday evening from St. Louis, Mo., where she has been attending Brother Grimshaw's Anniversary meeting, and has wisely concluded to take a much needed rest of a week or so before going to aid Brother Brooks in the three days' meeting of the Wisconsin State Association. The recent mental strain passed through and the long journey have told on her, as it naturally would, but with a little rest she will again jump into the harness for the summer.

Ada M. Came writes from Cambridge, Mass.: "The Cambridge Spiritual Industrial Society held its regular meeting in Cambridge Lower Hall, March 22, when Mrs. Katie Ham was the speaker. The largest audience of the season was present and gave generous applause to all of her efforts. The next meeting will be April 12, and Mrs. Putney will be the speaker."

Joseph W. Lyon writes from Canton, Ohio: "I wish to record the transition, also a portion of the life-work of a good man, a true medium and hard worker in the cause of Spiritualism and the betterment of humanity. The medium and worker to whom I refer is Professor John D. Lyon, a brother of the writer, and late of Cincinnati, Ohio, but who passed to the higher life from his home in that city, at the age of 68 years, Feb. 1, 1907. He was a natural born medium, since at the age of five years, a mere child, he was frequently controlled by an eminent spirit physician, who through him as an instrument diagnosed various diseases for Cincinnati physicians. At the age of 18 he began lecturing, was a trance speaker, also a test medium, having the power to give full names and accurate descriptions of spirit friends. In addition to his lecturing for societies, he for some years delivered lectures and gave tests weekly in his own home, 931 Armory avenue, Cincinnati, where he could comfortably seat 175 people. At his funeral, Mrs. Hattie Radcliffe of Cincinnati, officiated. The attendance, which was composed mostly of his old-time friends, numbered over 300. His body was interred in our family lot in the Methodists' cemetery.

G. W. Bush writes from Minneapolis, Minn.: "We have two lyceums in Minneapolis, now in good running order. I started the Progressive Lyceum two years ago, and now I have started the North Side Lyceum. Yesterday we had a good showing. Our two and the St. Paul lyceum were at the North Side Society's anniversary of Modern Spiritualism. We had a crowded house all day.

J. W. Gill writes: "The 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, especially the evening service, held by the Christian Spiritualists, at Van Buren Opera House, Madison street and California avenue, was greeted by a large audience. Our speaker was warmly applauded. Mr. Ray gave us a violin solo, and sung one of his own compositions. The English and German speaking controls of Mrs. Hamilton Gill gave some excellent spirit messages, quite a few strangers receiving communications from their loved ones. I think these anniversary services should be devoted more to the memory of the old pioneer mediums now passed on. Where have we to-day in the younger contingent such workers as Emma Hardinge Britten, D. D. Home and others? The motive of of most of our speakers seems to tear down, and not to build up, to decry the phenomena. I should like to know where the movement would have been to-day if it were not for the phenomena. The tiny rap at Hydesville has set the whole world thinking. Mrs Hamilton Gill has done a great work in a quiet way. Any deficit we gladly made it up, and have never asked our audience to contribute a penny outside the usual collection for our expenses. As long as Mrs. Gill's health keeps good we shall continue these meetings, and try to reach as many as possible with loving messages from the spirit world."

Oscar A. Edgerly writes: "During the month of March I filled a most pleasant engagement with the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C. I found the members of the society genial, kind and sympathetic, supplying ideal conditions for the work of my guides. The very presence of the president, Mr. F. A. Wood, on the rostrum, in my opinion, is sufficient to furnish good conditions to any medium. Mrs. H. D. Morgan, the secretary, with Mrs. M. J. Stevens and Mrs. M. T. Longley furnish a coterie of workers of which any society might well be pround. During my stay in Washington I have been entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Collins, constituting, indeed, a true home for mediums. By the way it might be well to announce that Mrs. Collins, after a number of years spent here in Washington in government employ, is about to return to her work as a public exponent of Spiritualism. She is a very competent medium, and holds papers of endorsement from the New York State Spiritualist Association. I am confident that she and her guides will soon be widely employed, and that to the benefit of Spiritualism. I find that the Spiritualist press is well represented at the hall of the First Association. Miss Fielding, presiding at the news stand, seems to be well patronized."

Mrs. Alice L. Kane writes from North Topeka, Kansas: "The Spiritualists and New Thought friends joined in an anniversary meeting Easter evening at my home. The speaker was one of Topeka's old-time mediums, Alla A. McHenry, who of late years is a resident of Excelsior Springs, Mo. Subject, 'What Relation Have Modern Spiritualism and New Thought and Christian Science to Christianity.' Mrs. McHenry showed that if people got any good out of the Bible it was from a Spiritualistic viewpoint. A lecture on the 'Divine Awakening was given by her at the same place last Friday afternoon, to a good audience, showing Topeka to be still alive to spiritual thought. We have several small societies that meet around each week under different names, which are usually well attended. One under the name of Mystic Circle, is beneficial in individual development. Topeka is a progressive city, full of good people who are always ready to do their part for a true worker for the spiritual philosophy."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

ATTENTION, LYCEUMS. — Please send in second quarterly report before April 15. All lyceums not reported are most earnestly requested to do so. Yours for the young people, Anna L. Gillespie, National Sup't. Children's Lyceums, 180 Calhoun street, Battle Creek, Mich.

W. J. Elmo Writes: "Spiritual Alliance Society in Vincennes Hall, No. 3514 vincennes ave., cor. 35th and Cottage Grove. Services is held at 3 and 8 p. m. Afternoon meetings will be a general conference. Evenings, during the month of April, will bring forth lectures on a trip through the Orient and the mediumship displayed there. Mrs. May Elmo will give tests and messages at each meeting. Our social and dance held every Saturday evening is enjoyed by a large attendance. All are welcome."

Wm. Hassmann writes: "The concert given by the North Star Spiritual Union at its hall, 1546 Milwaukee avenue, March 31, was a grand success. The hall was packed with friends of the above society. Brother Winter opened the services with a beautiful lecture, explaining the life of Christ in a masterly way. After the audience sang 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' Miss Musika opened the exercises for the evening with a zither solo followed by recitations from Miss Jos. Gasalle, Miss Eva Dolebeson, Miss Emma Van Shiel, Master Orval Eddy, Miss Musika, Miss Grace Acree, Master Walter Hassmann and Miss Amy Gulling. Great applause was given to the children. Sister Winter, Sister Musika and Sister Golden aided the society by giving spirit messages. Sister S. Mueller, the medium for the above society, is recovering rapidly, and will be with us again in the near future."

Thos. Wardall, a veteran Spiritualist of Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "I have been a subscriber to The Progressive Thinker ever since the first number was issued. I am nearly 92 years young, but can read The Progressive Thinker without spectacles."

Correspondent writes from Detroit, Mich.: "Sunday evening, March 31, the First Church of the Soul, 46 Grand River avenue, celebrated the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism with a special program. The hall was crowded to the door to witness the beautiful rites of baptism administered to Baby Jeffrey of Windsor, Canada. Her life was consecrated to Love, Truth and the good of humanity, by our pastor, Laura L. Crawford, assisted by the lyceum children. Miss Gladys Waterland sang "Angels Ever Bright and Fair." Then came the lyceum children's exercises, followed by a lecture by Mrs. Crawford; her subject, "The Message of Easter," followed by messages. In the absence of our pastor, Mrs. Minnie Sharlow will occupy our rostrum."

H. T. Aller, Chicago, writes: "The Christian Spiritual Society, conducted by Miss Sarah Thomas, held its last meeting Sunday evening, March 24, and closed with a great success. The developing class, which she formed of 240 members, many who had previously been visitors of her meeting, and have never believed in Spiritualism, have been converted, and are no longer skeptical, and numbers have been controlled by spirits. Many outsiders from Kankakee, all strictly church members, became so enthusiastic that, upon their return home, they concluded to form a spiritual class among themselves and are now strong believers in the faith, and have thrown their doors wide open to Miss Thomas to come to their home and hold circles in their parlors in her evangelical way. She is now forming a class in Kankakee, and will organize a meeting there April 7, and also in other cities on the following dates: Troy, Michigan, April 14; Lansing, April 21; Michigan City, April 28. It speaks well for the intelligence that controls her brain. I myself as a business man was once one of the greatest skeptics that she ever converted, and I am no longer skeptical."

Mrs. Marian Carpenter, lecturer and test medium, writes from Cuba, where she has been spending the winter: "I will reach home April 15, and will be ready to answer calls for funerals, weddings and other engagements. We have spent a most delightful winter. My health is very much improved. We have enjoyed The Progressive Thinker; it has reached us every week, and kept us in touch with the work and workers. My home address is No. 58 W. Columbia street, Detroit, Mich."

W. R. Cooper writes: "Truly a faithful servant to our cause—five years consecutively, every Sunday evening—such is the record of our little home meetings at 320 Flournoy street, officiated over by Sister Mary Hill. Easter Sunday was made doubly important, being the fifth anniversary and as in all the past, the flow of inspiration was at its best, giving us full proof of invisible workers or guides. There was complete harmony, and owing to that fact, we had a royal treat in inspirational work from many. The one that appealed to me the most was given by a Mrs. Campbell to our teacher, Mrs. Hill. It was truly apropos to the occasion, and fully represented the angelic nature of the donor, and a glowing tribute to our teacher. I also wish to say that Mrs. Hill never neglects an opportunity to put in a good word for The Progressive Thinker, which it fully deserves."

Correspondent writes of the Psychic Research Society of Rockford, Ill.: "On Sunday afternoon, March 31, the society celebrated the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism. Mr. Church, a very gifted young gentleman, a member of the society, gave the address, which must have been prepared with great labor, and was generously applauded, eliciting complimentary remarks from all who heard it. Mr. Church merits a prominent place on the spiritual platform. The lecture was followed by messages from the unseen, by Mrs. Cleveland, of Chicago, which were generally well received. Your reporter was not present at the evening session, hence is unable to report the doings."

H. D. Morgan writes: "I am pleased at this time to report a very successful season for the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Mary T. Longley was our speaker during November. It is unnecessary for me to comment on her work, as she is always a favorite in Washington. Following her for the month of December, came Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, giving us a rich treat of intellectual inspiration. Following Dr. Fuller came the Sprague's for a two months' engagement; their earnest work and genial presence added very much to the success of our season. During March the well known trance speaker and message medium, Oscar A. Edgerly, served our society. Mr. Edgerly's guides gave a series of every eloquent and instructive lectures, a notable feature of his work being the answers given at the morning meetings to questions propounded by the audience. The answers were in every case wonderful in their elucidation of the question asked. With Mrs. Longley, Dr. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Sprague and Oscar A. Edgerly we feel that our rostrum has presented as able a coterie of workers as the field of Spiritualism affords. In common with other Spiritualists of our city, we regret the seeming untimely transition of our friend and benefactor, Theo. J. Mayer. We feel, however, that he is still with us in spirit and by his kindly inspirations will aid us in our future efforts. The season has been notable for many social functions, that have been not only pleasant but conducive of creating a desirable harmony among our people."

Mrs. A. J. Quinn writes: "The services of the 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism were held at Maccabee Temple by the Truth Seekers' Spiritualist Society of Dallas, Texas, March 31. At the afternoon and night meetings, Rev. Isa Wilson Kayner delivered short but interesting and appropriate addresses. The invocations were given by Mrs. Quinn and the music was under the direction of Miss Miriam C. Campbell. We were favored with the duet by Mrs. Bachelor and Mrs. Rendlauv. Mrs. Phillips assisted Mrs. Kayner with the message work. A number of the members told of the proofs of spirit return. Mrs. Craig of Portland, Oregon, brought greetings from the West, and gave in part an interesting account of how the grand movement of Spiritualism had spread over the country since the knowledge came through the three little girls in Hydesville, N. Y. Mr. Morris, president, and Mrs. Morris, treasurer, and the committee on refreshments were very zealous in serving the supper to the many persons who remained at the Temple to enjoy the evening service. Everyone appeared to be happy over a well-spent day."

Mary B. Hill writes: "The dollar experience meeting of the Band of Harmony, April 4, was a decided success. There were many very amusing experiences related as to how the dollar was obtained, and the number of dollars that rolled in far outreached all expectation. April 1, being the birthday of Mrs. Lucinda B. Chandler, the ladies of the Band of Harmony appreciating her ability and true worth, presented her with a magnificent boquet of roses. The next meeting will be held April 18, in Hall 512, Masonic Temple, this being the last one in the hall for the season, also the the anniversary week of the pastor's birthday, a very pleasant and enjoyable session is anticipated. No farther comment is necessary as all know what these anniversaries mean, and none should feel they could afford to miss a single one. Bring your supper and invite your friends to the feast."

Samuel A. Huntington, Malden, Mass., writes: ""Malden's Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism was held on Thursday afternoon and evening, March 28, and was a very successful affair. The following speakers took part, in the order named. Dr. J. Noble of Washington, D. C., address; Mrs. Smith of Lawrence, Mass., address; Mrs. Nellie E. Abbott, So Lawrence, Mass., messages; her daughter, Miss Bernice Abbott, whistling solo; Mr. J. B. Hatch, of the Massachusetts State Association, address; Mrs. B. W. Belcher of Marlboro, address; Rev. F. A. Wiggin of Boston, gave a very fine address on 'Spiritualism of To-Day'; Mrs. Waterhouse, one of the oldest Spiritualists in New England, address; Mr. Chas F. Hewitt of Boston, address and messages; Prof. J. M. Temple, address and messages. Speakers at the evening meeting were Mr. Litchman of Boston, address and messages; Mrs. Annie R. Chapman of Brighton, Mass., address and messages; solo, beautifully rendered, entitled 'The Scent of the Rose,' by Miss Cousins; Mr. Hall, president of the Brighton Society, address; Mrs. A. M. Whall, of Everett, remarks and messages; Mrs. Butler of Lynn, also Mr. Bishop of same city, address and messages; Mrs. Raulett of Boston address and messages. Sunday services, March 31 were very interesting, many taking part at the 3 o'clock circle. At the evening meeting, Mrs. Annie R. Chapman of Brighton, was the speaker and message bearer. She gave a fine address and many messages. The Rev. F. A. Wiggin, Thursday evenings, April 4 and 11; Sunday, April 7, Prof. R. A. Macurda, of Lynn, Mass., and Mrs. R. A. Swift of Haverhill, Mass, the 14th."

David A. Leisk has been lecturing in San Diego, Cal., on the following important subjects: Spirit and Matter—the Dual Action of Life; The Veil Rent in Twain; The Evolution of Consciousness; The Use and Abuse of Soul Force; Fate, Free-Will and Destiny; Life Eternal—Can We Earn Immortality?; The Future of San Diego Spiritually Considered.

Dr. G. B. Warne, President of the Illinois State Spiritualist Association, and Vice-President of the N. S. A., visited Indianapolis, Ind., last week, to assist in the work of defending the mediums there who had been unjustly arrested.

E. J. Trott writes of the American Psychical Research Society: "Our last Spiritualistic meeting of the season was held at 200 Huntington avenue, Boston, Mass. We had very successful meetings. Mr. Redding as President and speaker has been an Ornament to the platform. Mrs. Redding has been his constant companion, thereby adding good will and harmony to the meeting. The president has been assisted by different mediums, as follows: Mrs. Abbie N. Buchanan, recording secretary of the society, whose eloquence is well known; Mr. and Mrs. Osgood F. Stiles, Mrs. Pye, Mrs. Stackpole, Mrs. Williams, and others. The season has been successful socially, financially and spiritually, and we look forward to another opening with anticipation of continued success. Thursday evening circles will continue at the home of the President, Harvey Redding, 202 Main street, Everett, Mass. Mr. Redding's messages satisfy all. He is assisted by Mrs. M. E. Dean (who answers mental questions), Mrs. Knight and others."

Lydia Chase writes: "On Thursday, March 28, in Trent, N. J., by Rev. J. Morgan Reed of the M. E. Church, Miss Etta Marie Prettyman, of Parkland, P., was married to S. Robert Dunlop, M. D., of New York City. The bride, Miss Prettyman, had been for one year physical director of the Parkland Progressive Lyceum, and on anniversary Sunday, after exercise of the Lyceum had been concluded, some of the members gave the happy visiting couple a reception and supper, at which over thirty guests were present."

W. J. Colville has lately delivered numerous lectures to excellent audiences in San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, and other places. Sunday, April 14, he begins a term of work in Toronto. His address until further notice will be 162 Cowan avenue, Parkdale, Toronto, Can.

The Society of San Diego, Cal., have issued the following circular in connection with the work of Mr. John W Ring: "Spiritualist Temple, 7th st., between A and B, under auspices of the First Spiritual Society. Mr. John W. Ring will address meetings on dates and topics as follows: March 26, at 8 o'clock, "Entering the Gates With Thanksgiving;' March 29, at 8 o'clock, 'The Message From Spirit Land;' April 2, at 8 o'clock, subject, 'The Effects of the Message;' April 5, at 8 o'clock, musical and literary entertainment, under auspices of and benefit for Children's Progressive Lyceum. Admission 10 cents. Mr. John W. Ring is a young man of national reputation—he having held the office of National Superintendent of Lyceum Work."

Lily M. Thiebaud writes of the anniversary from San Bernardino, Cal.: "The local papers were very generous in printing programs and other notices of the meeting. Mr. Will C. Hodge of San Diego, was to have been with us, but owing to a severe cold was unable to come. Mr. Arthur S. Howe, president of C. S. S. A.; Dr. Adah Patterson, director and Mrs. Lamont, Miss Maggie Potter of Riverside, assisted by myself, were the workers in these meetings. On Sunday there were a number of visitors from Riverside and Redlands. Much interest was manifested throughout the services. Both Spiritualists and non-Spiritualists who were present expressed themselves as well pleased with the lectures and messages. At our late annual meeting of San Bernardino Spiritualists Society, I was invited to accept a position of pastor indefinitely, which I did with the proviso that I might call to my assistance, at intervals, other workers. This was agreed to, willingly. The conditions here are very harmonious. Respect and appreciation by the citizens are shown us, all of which strengthens and encourages. My best wishes are extended to The Progressive Thinker and my many friends in the East."

C. L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton, street, Boston, Mass: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Allbe in the chair. The evening was devoted to speaking and singing. Mrs. Alice Waterhouse was the first speaker. She always opens the meeting with some choice thoughts. Mrs. Annie Morgan sang and then gave messages. Mr. Elmer Packard spoke briefly of Spiritualism, and the satisfaction it is to receive the message from our loved ones. Mr. Edminster told of his experience with Spiritualism. Mr. Beekman told of experiences that brought him into Spiritualism. Mr. Bakstron closed the meeting. Meetings are held every Friday evening. Friday, April 19, we will have a Colonial Party and a social time will be indulged in."

Rev. David A. Leisk writes from San Diego, Cal.: "The First Spiritualist Society of San Diego, held especial Easter and Anniversary services on Sunday, March 31." The Rev. John W. Ring was the speaker at both the afternoon and evening sessions and the invocations were given by the writer. A special feature of the afternoon service was the raising of a white silk banner, inscribed with the words, 'Peace unto the Nations,' in gold lettering. This was the carrying out of the suggestion of Mr. W. J. Colville, when he was in San Diego a few weeks ago. Owing to a delay at the post office in the delivery of a letter containing a poem sent by Brother W. J. Colville, written especially for the occasion, it was not received in time for services. However, Brother Ring's inspirers were equal to the occasion and gave through him some very beautiful verses of poetry. Brother Ring had designed a gate decorated with flowers, which on opening automatically displayed a white silk banner bearing the inscription, 'Peace Unto All Nations.' The Temple was, on this auspicious occasion certainly one of the best decorated places in San Diego, and the crowds attending the afternoon and evening sessions, fully testified to the attraction of the service. Brother Ring, at the evening service, spoke on the subject 'Counting our Trophies,' exposing the orthodox absurdities of belief in a very sarcastic and clever address. Brother Ring will serve the society on April 2, 7, 9, and 11. I will serve the society until April 18, and both Mr. Ring and I are working co-operatively together for the best interests of the cause of Spiritualism in San Diego."

E. J. Trott writes; "A church social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Redding, 202 Main street, Everett, Mass, on March 29. Many were present and enjoyed a royal good time. We were entertained by Miss Lottie Abramson, who sang, 'Sing Me to Sleep,' beautifully, and several other songs, accompanied by Mrs. Grace Reader. Mr. Irving Simmonds made remarks appropriate to the occasion. Mrs Minnie Soule contributed to the pleasure of the evening. The Sisters, Carrie and May Hughes, gave duets and solos on the piano. Miss Ruth Cole recited comic pieces in her own inimitable way. The evening passed with music and merriment."

LETTER FROM GEO. H. BROOKS.

Of Especial Interest to Wisconsin Spiritualists.

The party and dance given by the State Society in Severance Hall, Saturday, March 30, was a grand success, not only socially, but financially.

Sunday afternoon and evening the anniversary exercises were held. In the afternoon various speakers took part, among them Mr. M. Hoffman. In the evening I delivered the anniversary address. After the address Mr. Hoffman gave some of his marked tests. After the messages I ordained to the spiritual ministry Mr. F. L. Hitt. There was a good attendance at both services.

The state convention meets in Ethical Hall, 558 Jefferson street, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 16, 17 and 18 and it is to be hoped there will be a large attendance. There is a fine program arranged and the prospect is there will be a good attendance. The ladies are to serve meals in the hall, and good meals they will be, too, I assure you. So come one and all to the convention, and help to make this session one long to be remembered.

I also wish to inform my many friends that we have disposed of our home and on the first of May we leave good, orthodox Wheaton. We now intend to locate in Milwaukee, but may change our mind. I will keep the friends posted. Trusting there will be a good attendance at the convention, I am as ever, the friend of all humanity.

G. H. BROOKS.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of

FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.

CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us" and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

A. V. Metcalf: Q. Shall we preserve the home circle?

Fifty years ago it was a common practice in many families in this town and other parts of the state, to hold regular meetings of this kind. A few of the interested neighbors would be invited and often mediums would be developed where the gift was not previously known. Now it is very rare to hear of a spiritual circle in this vicinity, and most of the younger people hardly know what Spiritualism means. This fact I deplore and suggest that it might be a good idea for some one to write a few simple rules and regulations for forming these circles and urge the importance of a revival along these lines. I would suggest that they be printed in a tract, costing only a few cents and have them distributed broadcast.

A. The Progressive Thinker has constantly urged the formation of home circles, as the most successful method of investigating and gaining a knowledge of Spiritualism. The results with those who have availed themselves of this means, as reported have been highly satisfactory and often astonishing. Of course the manifestations are not as startling as those of professional mediums, or the manifestations reported of those afterwards detected. They are, however, of genuine worth, and as the means are ready to hand may be sought at any convenient time.

A tract of 8 pages was prepared for just the purpose designated by Mr. Metcalf, with the title, "What is Spiritualism; How to Investigate, Form Circles and Develop Mediumship; A list of Names of Eminent Spiritualists and What They Say of Spiritualism." I published this tract for missionary use and sent out 4,700 copies, using the profits on those sold to pay for the free distribution of others.

At the suggestion of the executive board of the National Spiritualists' Association I gave it into their hands, and it is now distributed from the office of the Association. A German translation was made and published by Wilhelm Bessie, a Leipsig (Germany) publisher.

Mediumship and Its Laws, which I have since published, explaining as it does, all the more pertinent questions, phenomena and manifestations which may arise in pursuing investigation along this line, is a more helpful guide than the tract, the information in which is necessarily exceedingly condensed and brief.

T. S. Erwin: Q. Where can I find a history of the Celts? What was their religion, language, origin?

A. The history of the Celts or Kelts, is diffused through that of other peoples, and I fail to find any especial historical work on that race of mankind. Of the great waves of immigration which came through the gates of the Caucasus from Asia into Europe the first appear to have been the people whom are now known by their lingering representatives, as Iberians, Finns, Lapps, etc. Another wave of a more developed people poured in, and pressed this primitive people to the north, and into mountain fastnesses where they could protect themselves from the invaders. This last race are known as Kelts. They spread all over Europe and remained until the ancestors of the Aryan races, the Indo-European, pressed them to remote and undesirable regions. The Kelts did not apparently absorb the primitive people, as the Aryans did the Kelts, though in many regions the type has been preserved in purity as in the Highlands og Scotland, Ireland, the Isle of Man, Wales, etc.

I quote from "Origin and Antiquity of Man," page 184:

"The origin of the Kelts extends beyond the reach of history and must be read by the light of fossils and linguistic researches. Their language is considered by many scholars, to be of earlier date than the Sanskrit, belonging directly to the ancient tongue from which the Sanskrit also was derived. The hypothesis of Myer accounts for the facts connected with the migration of this people in a very clear and satisfactory manner. He supposes that they entered Europe in two streams, one passing through Syria, Egypt and along the northern Mediterranean, entering Europe at the Straits of Gibraltar; the other passing to the north of Europe. Authentic history finds the Kelts from northern Scotland to the extreme south of Italy. In the third century they captured Rome and entered Greece, Macedonia and Thessaly, ravaged Asia Minor and attacked the Scythians.

The Kelts were a noisy and warring people, elastic but unenduring, with the restless folly of childhood, with rust hopes and few joys. With swift feet they overran Europe, and subjugated or destroyed the Turanian tribes which preoccupied that country. They met the ocean when it interrupted them, with arms, and shot arrows at the lightning. Never to flee was a point of honor; and often they would not leave a house on fire, but perish in the flames. Of enormous appetites, their feasts seldom ended without a quarrel; for the thigh belonged to the bravest at the board, and to determine who was the bravest was a source of constant dispute. No people held life cheaper. They would sell their lives for a little wine or piece of money. Next to fighting and feasting they loved tales of other lands, and would compel strangers to entertain them. They were great talkers, and in their public assemblies, drawn swords only secured the speakers a hearing. They were abandoned through levity, and at random ran wildly into the most licentious pleasures. They broke faith with a jest; had no idea of the obligation of a promise; so impatient of control and fickle were they; that they were incapable of founding permanent states."

The religion of this widely-diffused race was the mysterious Druidic worship, the weird rites of which were performed at Cromlech altars in the depths of the forest. There is a great diversity of language, although all are reducible to a common source. The Irish and Scotch are examples.

The literature of the Kelts is of most primitive form, hymns, chronicles, and tales. Of these perhaps the largest share belong to Ireland. The character of these is well imitated in "Ossian," but that forgery is softened unconsciously by a more refined spirit, and does not breathe the fierce love of slaughter and servile fear of the terrible gods.

I. O. M.: Q. Can you recommend any book on magnetic healing? Or is there any book on that subject?

A. Yes, there is a little book, a pamphlet, by Daniel W. Hull, a magnetic healer, brother to Moses Hull, living at Olympia, Wash., which can be unqualifiedly recommended. There are but 51 pages, yet these contain all the knowledge that is essential to the practicing healer, and professional hypnotist. The book might have been padded to ten times the size, without adding one iota to its value.

He has prepared this pamphlet from a sense of duty. He felt that he had more to teach than the "professors" who advertised, "institutes," and courses of lessons, and instead of asking from $25 to $100 for the course, he condensed all he had learned by years of practice into these pages at a nominal cost.

He exemplifies his teaching that the first requisite for successful healing must be unselfish desire to heal; a deep sympathy for the suffering, regardless of money consideration. The magnetist should be also clean of person and of spirit, of sweet temper, modest and unselfishly devoted.

There are in all twelve lessons, all giving direct and clear instruction.

Mr. Hull is a vegetarian. He does not think it absolutely necessary for a healer to eschew meat, but as health is an important consideration and its perfect enjoyment is not compatible with a flesh diet, he strongly favors a purely vegetable diet.

The book is, indeed, a treasure for those seeking information on the subject on which it treats.

O, GLORIOUS TRUTH.

O glorious Truth, I am glad it is mine,
That life is unending and always will be,
That those who have gone we shall meet again
When we shall cross over the crystal sea.

When our journey is ended, our work here complete,
Our hearts are made glad our old friends to greet;
What has seemed so complex and mysterious here,
Will there be explained and all made clear.

God's ways, we've been told, are past finding out,
And yet again, ask and ye shall receive.
We've conned history's pages in years past and gone
But still cried, "More light," or we could not believe.

We've prayed and listened to the still small voice,
And ever its answer: "Seek wisdom while here.
If you'd know of the home that's just out there
The angels will teach you; O list them so near."

Sometimes for good wine the wormwood we drink,
Mayhap in future we'll know the reason why;
As children like too much sweets for their good,
So we like life's pleasant paths, the thorns we pass by.

When to us this great truth came, how great was our joy,
The raps, and whispers, the voices of yore;
"We live, O earth loved ones, and are with you, so near;
We bring you glad tidings and our love evermore."

"No Death's cold fingers held us fast in his grasp.
But joy, and sweet freedom, and the friends we thought lost;
So ring out the joy bells this anniversary time
And proclaim the glad tidings from the angelic host.

"We live on forever, and never grow old;
Our work is not finished, or our laborscomplete,
To teach all earth's children who in error are bound
That our heaven, or the shadows, we surely must meet."

HARRIET W. HILDRETH.

Worcester, Mass.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

The Pilgrim In Ceylon.

An Interesting Account of His Experiences in India.

It is unnecessary to say that since leaving Battle Creek last October, I have written very little for the Spiritualist press of America, but a good deal for the English and Colonial press as far away as Australia and New Zealand.

You see by this circular heading that I am in Ceylon, termed by the poet, the "gem of the sea and the pearl of the ocean," and among a class of people where "every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

Five days on the Palawan steamer, crossing the uncertain Bay of Bengal, and I reached Colombo, Ceylon, a city of 180,000. You see by the heading of this circular sheet that I am at Cinnamon Gardens and a guest of the Museus School for Buddhist girls. The lady at the head of this school is Mrs. Maria Higgins, the widow of Anthony Higgins, a well-known Spiritualist lecturer, passing to the higher life from Washington, D. C., some thirty years ago. This school building is a very large, brick edifice, located in a beautiful grove of palm trees that shade the older portion of the cinnamon fields.

It is nearly thirty years since I first visited Ceylon, forming the acquaintance of several Buddhist priests. Just after this I published that large pamphlet in London entitled "Buddhism and Christianity Face to Face." It embodied a sharp debate between a missionary and a Buddhist priest, the latter getting the best of the argument. This I shall enlarge and re-issue upon returning to America. I am proud to say that I have twice contributed (liberally) financially to the support of this school. On one corner of these school grounds a Buddhist temple is being built. A Buddhist monk visits this school twice a week to hear the girls chant the Buddhist precepts. There is one room in this fine brick edifice enclosing a court, called the "pilgrims' corner," It is my Ceylon home.

Yesterday I addressed this body of Buddhist school-girls. To-morrow I address the students of Ananda College, in number about 500, Buddhist young men, and Saturday at 3 o'clock, I deliver an address in connection with a Buddhist priest and the president of the Ananda College, upon the life-work of the late Col. H. S. Olcott, whom I first met with Madam Blavatsky at the Eddy mediums' home in Chittenden, Vermont. Madam Blavatsky then was a wonderful physical medium and the Colonel was a devoted Spiritualist.

On Saturday evening I meet a little band of Buddhist Spiritists, who received their Spiritualist literature from England. On Sunday morning I sail by the Moldavia for Melbourne, sea voyage of seventeen days with favoring sea-currents.

But I have said nothing about India with her 300,000,000 of people, and the original fountain of the six great philosophies. For several weeks I remained in Calcutta, lecturing upon Spiritualism in the Tagore King's palace, in the Star Theatre, the Theatre Royal, twice before the Calcutta Literary Society, and before other societies upon Spiritualism. At Hooglev the crowd was immense, and all Hindus.

The glitter and the gorgeousness of the king's palace beggars my powers of description. The chandeliers were hung on chains of silver. Those present at this meeting in the palace hall were invited by card, 300 in number, and constituting what was considered of Calcutta. There were but few ladies present and these were English. Long as I remained in this country, I never saw a Hindu wife or mother. Those walking in the narrow streets with jewelry in the nose, the ears, and upon their ankles are considered as outcasts. The hiding of women, with caste and child-marriage, are the curses of India.

As has been often said and written, the Hindus are all Spiritualists, that is if Spiritualism means converse with the dead. Their Shastras, Upanishads and other religious and philosophical books abound in trances, ecstasies, visions and apparitions. The more materialistic among them cry aloud for physical phenomena. Hindu priests and the forest yogis oppose the practice of spirit communion, on the ground of its being dangerous. This is a common objection in all countries.

The last two weeks of my stay in India I was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Armitage, the latter a fine medium, and both excellent people. The Armitage family has a full set of Andrew Jackson Davis's books. Two of my books are in process of translation into Bengali and Hindustani. A portion of the "Seers of the Ages" was translated into Hindustani a quarter of a century ago. Herein lay the secret of my call to India.

Old Mr. Ritter, an octogenarian Spiritualist of Allahabad, came to see me. He sat in some of Judge Edmonds' circles and in many of Mrs. Conant's in Boston. Our conversation of old times in Boston, New York and Philadelphia, of Dr. A. J. Davis, William White and others was perpetual for the day. He was a great admirer of A. E. Newton and the Spears, somewhat erratic, but conscientious, self-sacrificing pioneers, who, persecuted and slandered, never turned the back to their foes. The history of Spiritualism and of Spiritualists is at my tongue and pen's end. A biographical book will ere long lift this and show the balancing scales of justice.

When it was announced in the Indian press from Bombay to Calcutta, that I had come from America, a physician, an author and a Spiritualist lecturer, the missionaries and priesthood commenced their opposition to Spiritualism. A fanatical Seventh-Day Adventist advertised two lectures to be delivered against Spiritualism, which, with hypnotism and psychology, he said, was the "work of the devil."

Of course I replied. It was then taken up by correspondents of the press, and for a few weeks there were hot times in Zion. Candidly, I did not polish my language in replying to these attacks, but sought to make hell appear so hellish, the devil so devilish, the atonement so bloody, and Calvinistic creeds so damnable, that the "Hindu Rajas blest" my efforts. The daily News said that I was "unnecessarily severe on orthodox creeds." The Daily Statesman declared that I was "better skilled in the dark side of church history, in irony and sarcasm than in the logic of religion."

The Calcutta Daily Sentinel remarked: "While pronouncing neither for nor against Spiritualism, it is very evident that Dr. Peebles is an advocate of great ability and of full faith in his convictions and the phenomena that he has witnessed."

The Daily Englishman, the fairest and ablest conducted journal in Calcutta, published the following in its issue of February 12:

"The attacks on Dr. Peebles and his vehement replies thereto have induced a number of correspondents to take sides. We regret we are unable to find space for all the letters which are reaching us on the subject. Dr. Peebles's visit to Calcutta has brought into existence a Calcutta Psychical Society. The inaugural meeting was held at Tagore Castle on Monday and about fifty Europeans and Indians were present. The society is to hold meetings, to discuss Spiritualistic matters and arrange for seances. The society has made a small but promising start, and there is enthusiasm shown in the fact that the day following the inaugural gathering was set aside for the first meeting of the society."

It would astonish Americans to know of the intelligence, the research and metaphysical acumen of the higher class of Hindus. And yet the masses are steeped in ignorance and superstition. Every family has its household god, and yet, they are not idolators. They do not worship these brass and stone gods. They are only manifest principles, they say, of the forces of nature or of the invisible gods and spirits. They are monotheists, declaring that over and above all there is one infinite and omnipotent being, invisible yet manifest in all nature.

My labors in India in receiving calls, in lecturing in halls and theatres and writing for the press, with the heat, were arduous enough to relieve me of seventeen pounds of flesh, but the world being my parish I press forward, believing it better to wear out than rust out.

J. M. PEEBLES, M. D.

Museus School, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo, Ceylon.

IN MEMORIAM.

A Prominent Medium Passed to Spirit Life.

Passed to spirit life, on March 27, 1907, Mrs. Rosalia J. Rood, beloved mother of Hattie F. R. Peet, at the ripe age of 83 years.

For more than thirty years Mrs. Rood has been a member of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's congregation, and was one of the charter members of the Church of the Soul, also a member of the Band of Harmony.

Three loved children awaited her entrance to spirit life; one daughter, Mrs. Hattie F. R. Peet, survives her, also two grandsons, Harry T. and William W. Peet, and two great-granddaughters, Lillian and Anna Peet.

Transition services were held, on Friday morning, March 29, Rev. Kelly and Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond officiating. Mr. Kelly spoke from the words, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Two sweet hymns were sung, "The Lord Is My Shepherd," and "Abide With Me," the latter chosen by Mrs. Rood, before her transition.

Mrs. Richmond's words were full of pathos and beauty as she spoke of the life beyond.

The day before Mrs. Rood passed away, with a countenance illumined, she said to her daughter, "I almost caught a glimpse of glory! I saw the shining ones!" These words formed the theme of the impromptu poem, which closed Mrs. Richmond's address.

"I almost caught a glimpse of glory!
I saw the shining ones!"
How beautiful to tell the story—
That when the passing earthly scenes
Were fading from her sight away,
She almost saw the bright new day!

"I almost caught a glimpse of glory!
I saw the shining ones!"
Spring-time succeeds the winter hoary
As Time his course forever runs;
How sweet to meet the Spring-time there,
Greeted by loved ones true and fair!

"I almost caught a glimpse of glory!"
She saw beyond the human sight
The Living Land—woven in story—
The realm of the eternal light!
Ready to cross that narrow stream,
And pass from earth's dim shadowed dream!

"I saw the shining ones," she said,
The loved ones who had gone before;
The ones long-mourned, and miscalled dead,
Came near to welcome, and to pour
Their strength and help, like balm on you
Who miss her from the mortal view.

"I almost caught a glimpse of glory!
I saw the shining ones!"
They greet her at the shining portal,
They scatter blossoms on the way.
When you, too, join the band immortal,
They'll welcome to the Eternal Day.

The loved form, beautiful even in death, was laid to rest at Forest Home, by the side of the son, George T. Rood, who passed away in 1897.

And naught of grief or care
Shall she know now—nor ever burdens bear;
For far beyond the darkness was she led,
Until at last, by Life's great fountain head
She breathed the essence of eternal air
In heaven's fields; in the bright valleys, where
There is no sorrow and there are no dead.
Love, peace and rest, all these I know are hers,
And yet within my breast a feeling stirs,
Telling me this, that by the heavenly gates,
Past the dark billows of the unknown sea,
Through all the days to come she bravely waits,
Loving and true, my mother waits for me!

HATTIE F. R. PEET.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world, revelation of reserve power, etc.

MY MOTHER.

Lines From Georgia Gladys Cooley Upon the Life and Recent Transition of Her Mother.

On the morning of March 4, I received a telegram which read "Mother ill with pneumonia, Doctor says she cannot recover," and in a few hours I was speeding westward on the limited, and while the train made its usual time each revolution of the wheels seemed to me to be made by some living, groaning, tired being bent on a rest. However, we reached our destination four hours late, to find husband waiting at the depot with the cheering news that "Grandma is better."

She had asked for me and counted the hours when I should have arrived, but growing weary with waiting, had fallen asleep and was enjoying nature's sweet repose for the first time in days, when I crossed the threshold of the old home.

Fearful of awakening her I refrained from entering the room, but softly stepped to the door to see her resting against the faithful nurse's breast with a respiration that meant dreadful times to the poor sufferer.

On awakening her first words were "Has Georgia come?" and in a few moments we were embraced in each other's arms.

Naturally, we had both prepared ourselves for the meeting, as we knew the least shock meant danger to the sick one. Following our meeting she began to improve rapidly and was pronounced out of danger by the physicians, and I myself was tempted several times to almost set aside the information given by my faithful guides, that "she would soon be with them." Every day she grew in strength and was happy in the thought that all the family were with her; but this week of happiness was the crowning week of her life, for just as the morning of March 16 was making her bow to the world of earth, the dewdrop of death imprinted its kiss of peace upon mother's brow, freshening her spirit as it withdrew from the withered house of clay, and wafted its way to a more congenial clime. She gave up the shadow for the true substance of real life, and will wait for us on that eternal shore where there are no delays of trains, and where our barque will carry us to the home we have built by deeds, words and actions.

To each and everyone our own mother is the dearest and best, and I will always believe mine was, and confirm it by the words of a good friend who knew her well, and whose letter reached me shortly after I arrived in the West: "Sad news for you, but glorious news for her whom we all loved, and if ever a saint lived on earth, your mother was one. What a beautiful life she lived; so sweet and endearing to all who came into her life; surely when she passes into the 'Father's House of many mansions, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens,' there will be accorded your dear one a reception from the many loved and dear, who have preceded her, in 'the Home of the Soul.' We see only 'in our visions and dreams,' this home will then, to her, have become a reality. You, my friend, were separated from your mother by miles. After the passing only the thought-force will be necessary to have her with you at any and all times; so there is a great advantage for both, but the greater will be for the risen spirit." AND I HAVE FOUND IT THUS.

The funeral was held at the old home and was conducted by Rev. Dr. Elliott, of the Unitarian Church, and Rev. G. C. Love of the Spiritualist Association, both being old acquaintances and friends of our dear one. The words at the grave as pronounced by the latter, were worth their weight in gold, and will ever be appreciated and never forgotten by the bereaved family and friends. Beautiful and appropriate songs were rendered in the sweetest voice by Mrs. Love and Mrs. Campbell, who knew and loved mother for her real worth. A large concourse of friends came to pay their respects, in fact the home grew too small for the numbers, and every room as well as the yard was filled with those who loved her well, and the large and numerous floral offerings were silent tokens that spoke more than words of the esteem in which our darling mother was held by the community in which her last life was lived.

When All Alone.

I feel sweet zephyrs falling in upon me,
And they fill my being with a sense of calm;
I feel strong arms folding close about me,
As if to shield and protect me from all harm.

And yet, friends tell me there is no one near me;
That they sense no zephyrs and no arm they see.
With such protection I would e'er be shielded
From sorrow's blast, and from all sadness free.

Such zephyrs and such touches to the soul belong,
And those with senses dulled and eyes bedimmed—not strong—
Must needs have grosser contact far than this
That brings unto my hungry soul such perfect bliss.

O, how grand, to have such consciousness of life,
For in such consciousness ever we grow strong.
I know those calm zephyrs breathe the breath of love,
And that love will ever lead away from wrong.

GEORGIA GLADYS COOLEY.

The Psychic Riddle.

By I. K. Funk, D.D., LL.D., Editor-in-Chief of "The Standard Dictionary"; Author of "The Widow's Mite, and Other Psychic Phenomena," "The Next Step in Evolution," etc.

A book full of psychic suggestions, supported by startling experiences, all told in a wonderfully conservative way. It harmonizes with the judgment pronounced by The Review of Reviews, New York, on the author's previous publication of this subject: "A very sensible, cautious, level-headed piece of work all through;" and also with the judgment on the same book pronounced by the Cleveland Record: "There has never been so fair and painstaking a book put forth on this subject as this one." Price, $1.00.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

Esoteric Lessons. A valuable book by Sarah Stanley Grimke, Ph. B. Cloth cover. Price, $1.50.

Every Living Creature, or a heart-training through the animal world. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Cloth. Price, 35 cents.

Fate Mastered, Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville. 30 cents.

Father Tom and the Pope and the History of the Pope's Mule. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth 50 cents.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. A book that has done more to enlighten the world of Catholicism than any other two published. By Rev. Chas. Chiniquy, ex-priest. Price $2.25.

Force and Matter, or the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon. A very popular scientific exposition. By Prof. Ludwig Buchner, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

From Dreamland Sent. A book of poems. Verses of life to come. By Lilian Whiting. Price, $1. White and gold, $1.25.

From Soul to Soul. This beautiful book of beautiful poems is all that the title indicates—profound, sublime and tunefully poetic and restful in its variation. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price, cloth, $1.

Future Life. In the Light of Ancient and Modern Science. A work of immense importance. By Louis Elbe. Price, $1.20.

Germs of Mind in Plants. By R. H. France. Translated by A. M. Simons. Cloth, illustrated, 50 cents.

Gospel of Buddha. According to old records. A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Rev. Shaku Soyen, delegate to the Parliament of Religions. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.

Gospel of Nature. A book filled from beginning to end with spiritual truth of the most sublime and soul-stirring character. In touch with all life. By M. L. Sherman and Wm. F. Lyon. Price, $1.

Great Roman Anaconda, or Thirty-seven and a half years in the Church of Rome. A 32-page pamphlet. By Prof. George P. Rudolph, Ph. D. Price, 15 cents.

Happiness and Marriage. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 50 cents.

Harmonics of Evolution. A valuable work by Florence Huntley. Cloth. Price, $2.

Health and Power. A handbook of cure and human upbuilding by aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price 30 cents.

Heaven Revised. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey. Price 25 cents.

Heliocentric Astrology and Solar Mentality, with illustrations and ephemeris. By Verno Vedra. Cloth. Price, $1.50.

Heresy, or Led to the Light. By the well known writer, Hudson Tuttle. Paper cover only. Price 30 cents.

Heroes and Hero Worship. By Thomas Carlyle. Price 50 cents.

History of Atharael. Life in the Stone Age. The history of Atharael, chief priest of Ar Aryans. Written through U. G. Figley. It is very interesting. Price 30 cents.

History of the Inquisition. Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. By Cyrus Mason, M. D. Price 25 cents.

How the Bible Was Invented. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price 10 cts.

How to Grow Success. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 50 cents.

How to Train Children and Parents. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 25 cents.

Hypnotism, Its History and Present Development. By Fredrik Bjornstrom, M. D. Price 75 cents.

Human Culture and Cure. Part First. Philosophy of Cure, Including Methods and Instruments. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D. Price, 75 cts. Part Second, Marriage, Sexual Development and Social Upbuilding. Price, 75 cents. Parts Third and Fourth, in one volume, Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price $1. Part Fifth, The Bodily Organs, Their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.

Human Personality, and Its Survival of Bodily Death. By F. W. H. Myers. 470 Pages. Price, $3.00.

Karma. By A. P. Sinnett. Price 50 cents.

Hypnotism. By Albert Moll. Price $1.50.

Hypnotism. By L. W. DeLaurence. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Hypnotism and Suggestion. By C. Lloyd Tuckey. Price, $3.

Hypnotism. An Experimental Study. By Dr. R. von Krafft-Ebing. Price, $1.25.

Influence of the Zodiac Upon Human Life. This book states the simple principles of the Zodiac in simple terms, and in a manner highly interesting and instructive. By Eleanor Kirk. Price, cloth $1.

Immortality. Its naturalness, its possibilities and proofs. By J. M. Peebles, M. D. Price 10 cents.

Ingersoll's Lectures. Forty-four addresses and answers to his critics. A portly volume containing an immense amount of matter. Price, postpaid, $1.

Interviews With Spirits. A real visit with friends on the other side of life and a familiar talk. An interesting book. By Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. Price 50 cents.

In the World Celestial. A story of spirit life. By Dr. T. A. Bland. Cloth. Price, $1.

In Tune With the Infinite, or Fullness of Peace, Power and Plenty. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

Invisible Helpers. By C. W. Leadbeater. Written in the author's charming style. Cloth. Price, 55 cents.

Jesus Christ a Myth. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price 25 cents.

Jim. A story for young people, teaching spirit guidance. By Carrie E. S. Twing. Price $1.

Joan, the Medium, or the Inspired Heroine of Orleans. This is the most beautiful history of Joan of Arc ever written. Thrillingly interesting and convincing. By Moses Hull. Price, paper, 25c.

Journeys to the Planet Mars, or Our Mission to Ento. By Sara Weiss. Cloth bound. Price $1.50.

Just How to Concentrate. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 25 cents.

Just How to Cook Meals Without Meat. A small valuable book on vegetarian cooking. By Mrs. Elizabeth Towne. 25 cents.

Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus. By Mrs. Towne. A book on concentration. Price 25 cents.

Karezza. Ethics of Marriage. A plea for a better birthright for children and a higher development of parentage through the most sacred relations. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

Kate Field. A Record. By Lilian Whiting. Price $2.

Kingdom of Love and Other Poems. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price $1.

Koran. From the original Arabic. Price, cloth, $1.

Koradine. A prophetic story, and a valuable book for girls to read. Written by Dr. Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Price $1.

Language of the Stars. This important work is the first practical exposition of the Astro-Magnetic forces of Nature—in relation to man—yet issued. Price 50 cents.

Law of Psychic Phenomena. By Dr. T. J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

Longley's Choice Collection of Beautiful Songs. Price, board covers, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Life and Matter. An answer to Haeckel's Riddle of the Universe. By Sir Oliver Lodge. Price $1; postage 12 cents.

Life and Reminiscences of Robert G. Ingersoll. The work is well written by his life-long friend Edward C. Smith. Handsomely bound in cloth. Price, postpaid, $2.

Life Beyond Death. Being a review of the World's Beliefs on the Subject, a Consideration of Present Conditions of Thought and Feeling, Leading to the Question as to Whether It Can Be Demonstrated as a Fact, to Which Is Added an Appendix Containing Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions. By Minot Judson Savage, D. D. Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer In Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00. Paper, 50 cents. Postage, 12 cents.

ASK AND RECEIVE.

Material Help From the Spirit Side of Life—"We Can Not Sow Seed on a Barren Soil, and Expect a Rich Harvest."

There are those who claim we should not look to the spirit world for any assistance along material lines. But if not, then why not?

Of course it is of paramount interest that we have it proven to us that there is continuity of life. This is hopeful and helpful to us all along the line; but we are living on a material plane, subject to material needs from the time we enter life until we pass out.

We have a physical make-up which needs food, raiment and shelter. Ingersoll said that man is what he eats. If he eats coarse food he becomes coarse.

No one can come up half-fed, half-clothed and half-sheltered, and be right morally, mentally or physically. That race is stunted that is brought up under this regime.

We cannot sow seed on a barren soil and expect a rich harvest. The plant must be given rich and appropriate soil, sunlight, warmth and moisture to develop into a rich and beautiful bloom. And yet, because of the need of money, we eat such foods as lack everything in the way of nourishment. And not only this but such as are ruinous to our health of body and destructive to our peace of mind. For no one with broken health can be normal. No one suffering with dyspepsia can be an agreeable companion at any time. The old Romans were wise in their generation when they took this for their motto: "Mens sana in corpore sano."

In other words they recognized the fact that to be sound mentally one should be sound physically.

We need good homes to live in and good clothes to wear if we would develop the best that is in us. We largely come up to our surroundings. If our surroundings are good we are bettered because of this. "Poverty makes strange bed-fellows." Poverty develops a cringing spirit. It dwarfs and cripples and maims in every way. Therefore we should shun it and if possible work out from under it.

"Familiarity breeds similarity," and when we are well-equiped financially we are brought in touch with the best things in life. Not only the material things—but we are brought in touch with those who are mentally strong and capable because of the advantage in an educational way which money gives, not only in the schools and colleges, but also in travel.

Young Patterson, the millionaire socialist, says, "Money is self-respect and the respect of everyone else."

The world has no use for us when we are poor. It may throw us a sop of sympathy and then pass on. But pity is another word for contempt, and the proud, sensitive spirit does not want it.

No one can do good work along any line under the stress of poverty.

Mediums, no matter how well equipped for the work, because of strong mediumistic gifts, cannot do good work while the hungry wolves of poverty are hounding their footsteps. They are worried all the time, and worry unfits us for work.

The great cry raised against Spiritualists and mediums by the outsider is that they are so many times in such hard straits financially. Their publications go under for lack of patronage, and mediums are forced many times to give up their work before the public and seek other callings in order to make both ends meet.

It is well enough for those who have plenty to sit in the background and tell those who are poor that they should not look to the spirit world for any help in a material way, but should look for their reward in the beyond. This is foolish and selfish talk.

If those in the spirit world can do no more for me than I can do for myself then of what avail are they to me? And why should I strive to open up a communnication between them and me and waste time in this direction? What good comes of it? I can easily bide the time until I pass out to become familiar with the other side of life.

Would the name of "Christ" have gone ringing down the ages if he did no more to establish the cause of Christianity than we do in the present day to establish the cause of Spiritualism? Christ demonstrated beyond a doubt the power of the spirit over material conditions. The blind were made to see, the deaf to hear and the lame to walk. And he, himself said that greater things than he did we should do. The God that ruled in Moses' time is just the same to-day. Then what is the matter with us?

Putting aside the miraculous gifts, can we not at least demonstrate the power of the spirit world to help us over the rough places in life? And to those who say we should not seek assistance for material needs, I quote the prayer Christ himself taught us, the "Lord's Prayer," wherein we are taught to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Again he says: "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

No doubt, because of our very unrighteousness of living we are sadly out of tune with the divine forces, and herein the whole trouble lies, for do we not read in the Bible, "the prayer of the just man availeth much."

Speaking with a leader in Christian Science along this line, a woman of rare capabilities, she said to me: "The cattle on the thousand hills belong to God; all the grain in the granaries belong to the Lord, and all the gold and silver in the treasury belongs to God. You are the daughter of the King—ask and ask largely for all your material needs." And do not the Christian Scientists manifestly apply this principle; for taking them as a whole they are a prosperous people with beautiful temples scattered over the country wherein to hold divine service. Their very prosperity attracts the attention and admiration of the outside world. They believe in demonstrating the power of the spirit over matter and material conditions; and the sooner Spiritualists come into this way of thinking the better.

"Nothing succeeds like success." and when the Spiritualists can gain such a foothold financially as to be able to erect beautiful schools, and universities for study, and magnificent temples for worship, then, and not till then, will the world look on and applaud, and many who are now almost ashamed to ally themselves with the cause of Spiritualism will then gladly enter the fold.

William E. Curtis, writing for the Record-Herald, says that the Japanese before going to battle with the Russians burnt incense at the shrines of their ancestors who were warriors and statesmen, and implored their assistance on the field of battle. And because they defeated the Russians they command the respect of the world to-day. How much of respect would the world show the Japanese had their armies been defeated. "Defeat finds no mercy." No doubt also they were largely successful because they earnestly called upon the spirit forces for direction and help.

KATHERINE A. DRISCOLL.

Chicago, Ill.

CLERICAL RESIDENCES.

Shall They Be Taxed the Same as All Other Property?—The American Secular Union and Freethought Federation Says "Yes" Most Emphatically—A Document That All Spiritualists Should Carefully Consider.

To the Members of the Illinois Legislature:—Protest of the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation against the bill for the exemption of clerical residences from their just taxes.

There is no ranker injustice than that the Legislature of this state should exempt by an unconstitutional measure these residences. Their occupants claim police and fire protection, and yet are contriving to shirk their share of the costs to keep up such protection.

They make the false claim that they exert a moral influence in the community. But do they exert a moral influence? Statistics from every prison prove that they do not, for according to the report of the Joliet (Ill.) state prison commissioner, 95.2 per cent of the convicts profess religion, the chief tenet of which is that the thief was saved for belief only, and honest moral men are condemned if they do not conform to this belief. Do these men encourage that enlightened desire for knowledge, that persistent unbiased search for truth which is certainly the basis for true morality? No, they do not, for they are hired and paid to preach certain beliefs as of vastly more importance than morality, and if they should discover any new facts which are contrary to the prejudices and opinions of their employers they must keep them to themselves (thus shutting the door to all progress), or they will lose their jobs. Do they recognize the moral obligations demanded by the "Golden Rule"? Do they render to Cesar (or the state) the things that are Cesar's, or rather in this case are they not utterly repudiating the demands which their Christ commanded in Matthew 22:21. More expressly in Matthew 17:27 we find: "Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou down to the sea and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money; that take and give unto them for me and thee."

There was no excuse made here on the ground of moral teaching but it was simply an act of justice expressed in the words, "lest we offend them." Do they not in this case utterly repudiate his express command, "Render unto Cesar the things that are Cesar's," in attempting to have their just taxes on their residences exempted; or do they regard it as a fish story?

The exemption of these places from taxation would be a gross evasion of the well-known principle which underlies the Constitution of the United States as also of the several states. With reference to the question of religion there are express provisions against donating any of the public moneys for the support of religion, or indeed for the recognition of any religion; whether Jewish, Christian, Mohammedan or Mormon, as this exemption would clearly be so much money given to the support of religion, which is distinct from morality.

What a glaring injustice it would be if these residences were exempted from taxation when their occupants are usually well paid in salaries, perquisites and gifts, besides being allowed children's fare on railroads, when laborers and widows, who often with their small incomes find it difficult to make ends meet, are obliged to pay taxes on their humble homes, and if they are not able to meet them, their homes are sold for taxes to sordid tax sharpers.

Let no one say we have not a union of church and state in this country when these pretended followers of a tax commanding Christ are allowed to escape their just taxation on their residences.

President Garfield said: "The divorce between church and state should be so absolute that no church property anywhere, in any state or in the nation, should be exempt from equal taxation."

Gentlemen of the legislature, seriously consider this matter before you allow yourselves to countenance such an unconstitutional and unjust measure, which is clearly class legislation.

Yours for absolutely equal taxation,
The American Secular Union and Freethought Federation.
E. C. REICHWALD, Secretary.

FREEDOM.

Oh! Freedom Fair, immortal word,
Whispered in heaven, and by us heard;
Thou art a star along our way
Bringing gleams of a better day.

Gleams of a day when hand in hand
Men as brothers shall walk the land;
Brothers in word, and heart and deed,
Working together for every need.

Humanity has pitifully cried aloud,
But her voice was hushed by the maddening crowd.
Our awakened souls now hear her moan
And will carry her sorrows, as our own.

A mighty love must surge each heart,
If we are to heal the wounds that smart;
Love that can ache for another's sorrow,
And show him the dawn of a bright to-morrow.

ALICE L. HOLBROOKE.

Rockland, Me.

$2,000 REWARD.

Cecil A. Brittan taken from the toll gate, Umatilla county, Oregon, July 15, 1906. $2,000 reward if he is returned alive, or $50 for his body. DESCRIPTION: Complexion very fair. Rosy Cheeks. Small nose and mouth. Light brown hair. Round face and head. Small scar on left side of lower lip. Small feet and hands. Very bright. Talks very plain. Height about 3 feet 6 inches. Five years of age. Information wanted by R. L. Brittan, 117 East Main street, Walla Walla, Washington.

To the Editor:—Please impart the above information to some of your best mediums. They may be able to find our child, and if so they can get the reward. This message comes from the heart-broken parents.

MR. AND MRS. R. L. BRITTAN.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.0.

SHE SPEAKS FOR HERSELF.

Mrs. Alice D. Green Has Her Views of the Man Who Wrote About Spiritual Phenomena in the Green Household.

To the Editor:—For personal reasons of my own I wish to write this tribute to the worth of Marion G. Scheitlin. In reviewing his mental capacity I am filled with a lofty desire to publicly acknowledge his genius. His ability to grasp surroundings, and round up details is superb, and while I am compelled to look up to his dome of thought (he being two and a half feet taller than I), I note with sincere sorrow his inability to describe a country woman. Although aware of her presence, he saw her thfough the smoked glasses of city life. I could give him many points in his description, and beat him in the game.

Regarding my humble self, he writes, in his article concerning spiritual phenomena in the Green household: "She is a hard-working farmer's wife, with black hair streaked with gray; chin strong, even to masculinity; rules household; uneducated," etc., etc.

Now in view of the fact that this article really introduces me to hundreds and thousands of valued readers, would it not have been more thoughtful and kind to have polished the smoke from his city glasses, and to have described me from a standpoint of country simplicity along these truthful lines: She is 56 years of age, with wavy brown hair, brown eyes, genial smile, fair, rosy complexion, slender face, well educated along the lines of all that is practical or useful, as is well attested by the numbers of books and musical instruments everywhere displayed. I would expect this much as a result of casual observation.

I can add many notes regarding this education, or rather the lack of it. I know but little regarding the rules of ping-pong or lawn tennis, and would be completely lost in the art of making up a pretty face; but I know how to fill my home with an atmosphere of peace and rest, and how to start a little song in sorrowing hearts. I know that two and three makes six, because as the Jewish father said, "you have one to fall with."

I know where the Philippine Islands are situated, and also know that if the money expended in holding them were spent in irrigating and redeeming the arid plains of the West, America could furnish homes for the brave in the land of the free.

I know how to make good old-fashioned "salt-risin'" bread, and lye hominy, and maple sugar, and soft soap (for the city dudes) and rag carpets and quilts, and feather beds, soft, and such as our dear old mothers used to make. I know how to compose a tune that will bring tears to my own eyes (and also to the eyes of every one who hears it). I know where the red-bird builds its nest, and the brown thrush rears its young. I know each limpid pool where sportive fishes play, and where the softest mosses grow, and many is the happy hour I spent with microscope in hand tracing the dainty flowers and tiny trees, that are peopled with living creatures, possessing many of the attributes that seem a part of our noble (?) selves, viz., a struggle to outdo the others, and absorb most of the luxuries of their fairy planet. I know the music of the woodland, and many golden hours are spent with old God Pan. I lie with my face by his shaggy hoofs, and together we revel in the musical notes that ripple through the reedy pipes on the willow stream. To-day we heard the great pulsing heart of Mather Earth, as she awakened the daisies and violets and cool anemones, and we saw a beautiful golden butterfly burst its bonds of earthly environment, and sail free and exulting to explore the azure depths of ether blue, and I said in my heart, "Thank God for this beautiful simile of immortality."

And while mine ear has grown dim to the gossip of petty affairs, it has grown strangely receptive to the voices of angel whisperings that come with messages of love and cheer, bidding each hungry, sorrowing heart look up with joyful gladness to the Summerland of the after while, where united with the loved and blest, we will mingle our voices in anthems of praise that will ring and reverberate through the vaulted dome of heaven.

ALICE D. GREEN.

Hamilton, Ill.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

The Work of Mrs. Patterson—A Lawyer Trumpet Medium.

The Spiritualistic meetings being held at the residence of Mrs. W. S. Patterson, 933 Taylor avenue, Alameda, each Sunday at 11 o'clock, are awakening increased interest. Mrs. Patterson, in conjunction with the society known as the "Sisterhood," has fitted up the basement of her residence into a neat little hall. Pictures and other decorations, together with a piano, go toward making it a cozy home for those who believe in progression, with Truth as the standard bearer. That Mrs. Patterson is an enthusiast along Spiritualistic lines is evidenced by her work.

The present speaker is Mr. B. F. Sliter, of Alameda, who has, in the opinion of the writer, no superiors and but few equals on the Spiritualistic platform of to-day on the Pacific Coast.

The 59th anniversary of Modern Spiritualism was celebrated at this hall on Sunday, March 31. Singing was rendered by a trio consisting of Mrs. Eileen Allen, Mrs. B. F. Sliter and Mrs. O. A. Ward. Mr. Sliter gave one of his forceful, philosophic lectures, which I wish time and space would permit reporting in full. He commented in brief upon the remarks of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, who said if one wanted authority to fight, or kill the wives and children of an enemy, they have but to go to the Old Testament. Mr. Sliter, in addition, said that it was astounding how many were shackled and chained to the superstitions of past ages. That for almost every known crime, vice or degradation, excuses could be found in that book. I wish to state a fact, not generally known, that Mr. Slyiter is one of the best trumpet mediums on the Coast. A lawyer by profession, he abhors commercial Spiritualism and the publicity connected therewith. To a few of his personal acquaintances he allows the privilege of private seances, where, in very dim light, trumpets can be seen floating about the room, voices loud and clear emanating therefrom. It is interesting to read in the San Francisco secular press of the opinions of certain noted London scientists favoring the possibility of true psychic phenomena, when we have right here in Alameda, wonderful physical demonstrations along Spiritualistic lines, that can be obtained by any earnest truth seeker by simply crossing the bay.

O. A. WARD.

Alameda, Cal.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About seven words constitute one line.]

The transition of Mr. Chas Schwenker of 98 N. Front street, Columbus, Ohio, occurred March 20, in the 77th year of his age. He was a staunch Spiritualist, a noble man of moral worth and excellent character, as well as one of Columbus' most influential and wealthy citizens. His funeral was conducted under the auspices of the West Side Spiritual Church, Rev. H. E. Boerstler officiating, and was largely attended. The floral tributes were grand in the extreme, typical of the glorious Easter Sunday on which the funeral was held.

HATTIE G. WEBSTER.

Passed to spirit life, from Northboro, Mass., March 21, Silas Howe, aged 79 years. He had been an ardent Spiritualists for more than forty years. He was much respected by all who know him. The funeral took place Sunday, March 24, and was conducted by the writer, and the Masonic lodge to which he belonged. Its quartet rendered beautiful selections.

JULIETTE YEAW.

Passed to spirit life, from Worcester, Mass., March 24, Mrs. Sophia E. (Parker) Cheever, aged 78 years. She is survived by one son, George A. Cheever, and one sister, Mrs. Lucy M. Underwood, living in the same house, in a feeble condition. She was a firm Spiritualist, and a member of the Worcester Ladies' Auxiliary. The funeral service was conducted from the home by the writer, many friends being present. Burial was in Milford, Mass.

JULIETTE YEAW.

Passed to spirit life, from Fitchburg, Mass., March 24, Flora (Stockwell) Cate, widow of George Cate. A long and painful illness was borne with angelic patience and smiling courage. The funeral service was conducted in the presence of a large assemblage by Rev. Mr. Kempton and the writer. Beautiful music and a profusion of rare flowers brought cheer and comfort.

JULIETTE YEAW.

On Easter morning, after a decline (owing to old age) lasting over three years, my husband, Dr. D. R. Higbie, departed this mortal life, at West Branch, Mich., quietly and peacefully, leaving us lonely and bereft of his physical presence. He was born in Delaware county, N. Y., on Nov. 11, 1816, being one of a family of nine children, only two of whom survive him.

MRS. D. R. HIGBIE.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. Price, 25 cents.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

The Secular Press.

(Continued from page four.)

ery possibility of fraud or telepathic influence, and with excellent results. He proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the incident of the borrowing of this coin had been forgotten not only by everybody concerned, but even by himself and the gentleman from whom it had been borrowed. Just why Mr. Beecher should concern himself with the return of the coin was and is thus far unexplainable beyond the fact that the gentleman from whom it had been borrowed—that is, Professor West—had been one of Mr. Beecher's dearest friends.

But the phenomena of the "Widow's Mite," marvellous as it is, is not more so than scores of other equally well authenticated cases reported by men of science and unimpeachable veracity all over the world. For to-day the scientific man is not only willing to approach the phenomena of Spiritualism with a noble agnosticism, where he has not already formed a definite bias in favor of its genuineness, but, where the occasion warrants, he is not above lending his co-operation to their investigation.

PIONEERS OF PROGRESS.

BY T. A. BLAND.

"It is a historic review of the progress of the nineteenth century on all lines. But the element that makes it universally popular is its human interest."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"A broad-minded lover of his fellows, Dr. Bland delights in giving credit to those men and women who have said things or done things to help forward the welfare of mankind."—Chicago Post.

"It contains biographies of some forty men and women whose live thoughts and heroic deeds gave character to the most wonderful century of the world's history."—Farm, Field and Fireside.

"It is just such a book as one might expect from a man who looks back over seventy-six years spent in tireless pursuit of high ideals."—Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, in Unity.

"The work is written in an easy, pleasing style, and is so interesting that we doubt if one reader in a score who commences one of the sketches will lay the book down until he has finished it."—The Arena.

It has 254 pages, is bound in best cloth with gold title. Price $1.00.

"The Truth Seeker Collection of Forms and Ceremonies for the Use of Liberals." Price, 25 cents.

CURE YOUR RHEUMATISM At Our Expense ABSOLUTELY FREE

We will send to any Sufferer from Rheumatism or Gout "Dalton's Gout and Rheumatic Compound." WITHOUT ANY CHARGE. If used according to directions relief will be had in 3 days. Our Booklet is free. A Postal Card will bring our Story and Remedy. Why suffer! When you can be relieved entirely free. Are you among the unfortunates who undergo the awful torture of Rheumatism. That grinding pain. That hopeless feeling. Those wretched, miserable days and nights. Don't stand this torture any longer. Write to-day. Will you? Address THE DALTON CHEMICAL CO., Dept 71 CINCINNATI, OHIO.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

(Advertisement.)

IN A VISION.

In a vision I have gotten the location of a tract of mineral land in Missouri, but have no money to buy it with. Who will furnish the money and let me buy it for them. My getting, and owing for, without interest, a divided interest in the land. I had never visited the town where the mineral land is up to the time of getting its name in a vision, but I afterwards purposely visited it and found the location of the land as I had seen it in my vision. I am honest, and will not cheat any person of anything, and any honest and capable medium would say the same if given any writing of mine for a test of knowing about my honesty and truthfulness. Would not buying this land be better than investing in ninety per cent of mining stock of to-day? as you would own the land, and develop it if you wished. Address C. M., P. O. Box 573, St. Louis, Missouri.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

MRS. E. M. HITCHCOCK will answer 3 questions for 25c. Send own handwriting and lock of hair, Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash

WALNAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Walnah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

FRED P. EVANS,
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address, FRED P. EVANS, 2028 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity. From an angel's viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Mary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd., Brookline, Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head, Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts. FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth St.
San Jose, Cal.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth, 50c.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism
A Treatise on
HUMAN CULTURE.

By Leroy Berrier, Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas. Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

Aryan Sun Myths, the Origin of Religion.

By Sarah E. Titcomb. With an introduction by Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race." Price, cloth, $1.00.

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

BARRELS OF AIR BURNED AS FUEL

New, Remarkable Stove—Ohioan's Great Invention—Consumes 395 Barrels of Air to One Gallon of common Kerosene oil making oil-gas—the New Fuel that looks and burns like gas!

Wood, coal and oil all cost money. ONLY FREE FUEL IS AIR! Unlimited supply—no trust in control. Air belongs to rich and poor alike. We can't burn air alone but see here! Our wonderful stove burns air and gas—very little gas—principally air. Takes its fuel almost entirely from the atmosphere.

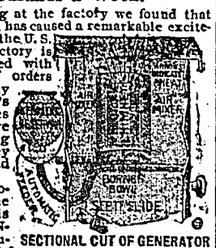
A miniature gas works—penny fuel for every family—save ⅓ to ½ on cost—save dirt and drudgery—no more coal or wood to carry—ashes unknown—absolute safety.

SEE HOW SIMPLE! TURN A KNOB—TOUCH A MATCH—FIRE IS ON. TURN AGAIN—FIRE IS OFF! THAT'S ALL.

Astonishing but true—time-tested—proven facts—circulars give startling details—overwhelming evidence.

NO SUCH STOVE SOLD IN STORES—UNLIKE ANYTHING YOU'VE SEEN OR HEARD OF.

A genius of Cincinnati has invented a new, scientific oil-gas generator, that is proving a blessing to women folks, enabling them to cook with gas—relieving them of drudgery. Makes cooking and housework a delight and at the same time often saves ⅓ to ½ in cost of fuel.



How often have many of our lady readers remarked that they would give anything to get rid of the drudgery of using the dirty coal and wood stoves—also the smoky oil wick stoves and their gasoline stoves which are so dangerous and liable to cause explosions or fire at any time.

Well, that day has arrived and a fine substitute has been discovered and every family can now have gas fuel for cooking, baking and heating and not have their kitchens a hot, fiery furnace in summer, and be carrying coal and ashes—ruining their looks and health.

Thousands a Week.

Upon calling at the factory we found that this invention has caused a remarkable excitement all over the U. S.—that the factory is already rushed with thousands of orders and evidently the Company's representatives and agents are making big profits as they offer splendid inducements.

As will be noticed from the engraving, this OIL-GAS GENERATOR is entirely different from any other stove—although its construction is very simple—may be easily and safely operated and is built on the latest scientific principles, having no valves, which is a marked improvement, as all valves are liable to leak, carbonize, clog up or overflow.

SECTIONAL CUT OF GENERATOR

By simply moving a knob the oil is automatically fed to a small, steel burner bowl or retort where it is instantly changed into gas, which is drawn upwards between two red hot perforated steel chimneys, thoroughly mixed with air and consumed, giving a bright blue flame—hottest gas fire, similar in color and heating power to natural gas.

This invention has been fully protected in the U. S. Patent Office and is known as the HARRISON VALVELESS, WICKLESS, AUTOMATIC OIL-GAS GENERATOR—the only one yet discovered that consumes the carbon and by-products of the oil.

The extremely small amount of Kerosene Oil that is needed to produce so large a volume of gas make it one of the most economical fuels on earth and the reason for the great success of this Generator is based on the well known fact of the enormous expansiveness of oil-gas when mixed with oxygen or common air.

Oil-gas is praying so cheap that 15c to 30c a week should furnish fuel gas for cooking for a small family.

Kerosene oil from which oil-gas is made may be purchased in every grocery—is cheap and a gallon of it will furnish a hot, blue flame gas fire in the burner for about 18 hours and as a stove is only used 3 or 4 hours a day in most families for cooking, the expense of operating would be but little.

In addition to its cheapness is added the comfort, cleanliness—absence of soot, coal, dirt, ashes, etc.

What pleasure to just turn on the oil—light the gas—a hot fire ready to cook. When through, turn it off. Just think; a little kerosene oil—one match—light—a beautiful blue gas flame—hottest fire—always ready—quick meals—a gas stove in your home.

It generates the gas only as needed—is not complicated, but simple—easily operated and another feature is its PERFECT SAFETY.

NOT DANGEROUS LIKE GASOLINE

And liable to explode and cause fire at any moment. This stove is so safe that you could drop a match in the oil tank and it would go out.

This Oil-Gas Stove does any kind of cooking that a coal or gas range will do—invaluable for the kitchen, laundry—summer cottage—washing—ironing—canning, etc. Splendid for canning fruit—with a portable oven placed over the burner splendid baking can be done.

Another Important Feature

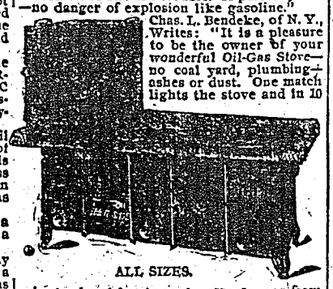
Is the invention of a small Radiator Attachment which if placed over the burner makes a desirable heating stove during the fall and winter so that the old cook stove may be done away with entirely.

While at the factory in Cincinnati the writer was shown thousands of letters from customers who were using this wonderful oil-gas stove, showing that it is not an experiment but a positive success and giving splendid satisfaction and as a few extracts may be interesting to our readers we produce them:

L. S. Norris, of Vt., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Generators are wonderful savers of fuel—at least 50% to 75% over wood and coal."

Mr. H. Howe, of N. Y., writes: "I find the Harrison is the first and only perfect oil-gas stove I have ever seen—so simple anyone can safely use it. It is what I have wanted for years. Certainly, a blessing to human kind."

Mr. E. D. Arnold, of Nebr., writes: "That he saved $4.25 a month for fuel by using the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove. That his gas range cost him $5.50 per month and the Harrison only $1.25 per month."



J. A. Shafer, of Pa., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Stove makes an intense heat from a small quantity of oil—entirely free from smoke or smell—great improvement over any other oil stove. Has a perfect arrangement for combustion—can scarcely be distinguished from a natural gas fire."

Mr. H. B. Thompson, of Ohio, writes: "I congratulate you on such a grand invention to aid the poor in this time of high fuel. The mechanism is so simple—easily operated—no danger. The color of the gas flame is beautiful dark blue, and so hot seems almost double as powerful as gasoline."

Mrs. J. L. Hamilton, writes: "Am delighted—Oil-Gas Stoves so much nicer and cheaper than others—no wood, coal, ashes, smoke, no pipe, no wick, cannot explode."

Hon. Ira Eble, J. P., of Wis., writes: "Well pleased with the Harrison—far ahead of gasoline. No smoke or dirt—no trouble. Is perfectly safe—no danger of explosion like gasoline."

Chas. L. Bendeke, of N. Y., Writes: "It is a pleasure to be the owner of your wonderful Oil-Gas Stove—no coal yard, plumbing—ashes or dust. One match lights the stove and in 10 minutes breakfast is ready. No danger from an explosion—no smoke—no dirt—simply turn it off and expense ceases. For cheapness it has no equal."

ALL SIZES.

Agents are doing fine—Making big money.

WONDERFUL QUICK SELLER.

Geo. Robertson, of Maine, writes: "Am delighted with Oil-Gas, so are my friends—took 12 orders in 3 days."

A. B. Slimp, of Texas, writes: "I want the agency—in a day and a half took over a dozen orders."

Edward Wilson, of Mo., writes: "The Harrison very satisfactory—Sold 5 stoves first day I had mine."

J. H. Helman, of Tenn., writes: "Already have 70 orders."

This is certainly a good chance for our readers to make money this summer.

Hundreds of other prominent people highly endorse and recommend oil-gas fuel and there certainly seems to be no doubt that it is a wonderful improvement over other stoves.

The writer personally saw these Oil-Gas Stoves in operation—in fact, uses one in his own home—is delighted with its working and after a thorough investigation can say to our readers that this Harrison Oil-Gas Stove made by the Cincinnati firm is the only perfect burner of its kind.

It is made in three sizes 1, 2 or 3 generators to a stove. They are made of steel throughout—thoroughly tested before shipping—sent out complete—ready for use as soon as received—nicely finished with nickel trimmings and as there seems to be nothing about it to wear out, they should last for years. They seem to satisfy and delight every user and the makers fully guarantee them.

THE WORLD MFG. CO. CINTI. O.

HOW TO GET ONE

All our lady readers who want to enjoy the pleasures of a gas stove—the cheapest, cleanest and safest fuel—save ¼ to ½ on fuel bills and do their cooking, baking, ironing and canning fruit at small expense should have one of these remarkable stoves.

Space prevents a more detailed description, but these oil-gas stoves will bear out the most exacting demand for durability and satisfactory properties.

If you will write to the only makers, The World Mfg. Co., 6502 World Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, and ask for their illustrated pamphlet describing this invention and also letters from hundreds of delighted users you will receive much valuable information.

The price of these Stoves is remarkably low, only $3.25 up. And it is indeed, difficult to imagine where that amount of money could be invested in anything else that would bring such saving in fuel bills, so much good health and satisfaction to our wives.

DON'T FAIL

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 20, 1907 NO. 908

Patriotism In this One Spirit.

Ikey, the Control of Young Woman Medium, Gayly Rapped out Yankee Doodle.

To hear a spirit tap out Yankee Doodle on the floor might seem a little strange to the uninitiated, but it was only one of the wonderful things done by Ikey (he will give no other name) at the Spiritual Temple last night. It seemed uncanny that he should be so gay.

Yesterday was a great day for the Spiritualists of Buffalo. It was the 59th anniversary of the advent of Spiritualism at Hydesville through the famous Fox sisters, Katie and Maggie. There were three services at the Temple on the corner of Jersey street and Prospect avenue and meals were served in the dining-room of the temple between sessions. Plenty of talent was present and there were lots of people to hear them. The service last night was more than three hours in length—but hardly anybody went away and all who stayed looked happy over it all. It was a great day.

Miss Floy Cottrill of Hamburg, introduced as "the noted rapping medium," assisted Professor Lockwood of this city, formerly of Chicago, in demonstrating. Ikey, her control, did everything Professor Lockwood told him to do. The professor predicted a great future for the girl as a medium. She is yet quite young and he thinks she has not begun to reach the limit of her psychic endowments.

Ikey Spells Adam.

Calling Miss Cottrill, a mild-faced, modest-looking girl to stand beside him on the platform, Professor Lockwood said the raps from Ikey through the medium were on the plan of the dots and dashes of the telegraphic code. "Now," said he, "let raps represent thought, by symbols of sound, so many raps for yes, so many for no. If the raps come in intellectual order, then the existence of spirit forces is proved."

Then the rapping began. Wherever the medium stood, at the professor's word came the raps—loud or low, but never changing the tempo except when as a sort of tour de force Ikey rapped out Yankee Doodle.

Then Miss Cottrill went down the aisle, stopping at different points and Ikey never failed with taps, one, two three. The control spelled the word Adam rapping when the speaker had come to the right letter in calling the alphabet.

"A man told me the other day," said Professor Lockwood, "that this lady must have something in her shoe. (Laughter). Now I will ask her to stand on a chair and we will see if there is anything in that. (President Hoyt placed a chair on the floor in front of the rostrum.) Now, Ikey, can you rap on the chair?"

Rap, rap, rap come the answer. Then he asked him "to give a parting salute," Ikey responded.

"What you have just seen," said the professor, "is in conformity to principles of mental electro induction. Electro induction in telegraphic art is the rapping or articulation of the sounder, without reference to order. But when the operator sends a mental message, it is in accord with the science of mental electro induction. What you have just witnessed is in accord with that science. Spiritualism is based on natural science. Every religion is founded upon a miracle; Spiritualism has neither miracle nor mystery in it. The people want facts today and Spiritualism supplies those facts."

Easter is Pagan.

All the above came after Professor Lockwood had told his audience about the origin of Easter. He went into the "time cycles," the "lunar and solar sidereals," the vernal and autumnal equinoxes" and Chaldean, Egyptian and Babylonish contributions to this festival. He referred his hearers to the encyclopedias for certain details he said he hadn't time to mention. He made this observation concerning Christendom's celebration of Easter day:

"The festival of Easter as kept today throughout all Christendom means nothing but a social gathering for the display of flowers and spring garments. It has no place in the minds of scholars. The story of a bodily resurrection is all legend, all tradition. They tell me that scarcely a clergyman in the country believes in the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ and yet they preach the doctrine."

But Professor Lockwood was not the only speaker. He was preceded by W. H. Bach, editor of the Sunflower.

Mr. Bach's address was along general lines. He began by saying that "we commemorate to-day one of the greatest events which has ever occurred in the history of the world." He was not speaking of the resurrection, but of the discovery of Spiritualism by the Fox sisters, Katie and Maggie.

Ingersoll and the Occult.

Mr. Bach related a conversation he once had with Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll. He asked Ingersoll what he thought of Spiritualism.

"Well," replied the great agnostic, "I don't know; I wish I did. I hope it's true."

The speaker related a number of his experiences in talking with the dead or, as the Spiritualists say, "those "who have passed out of the body." He claimed to have received messages from relatives and friends within four hours after their death. Speaking of the receptivity of mind and heart necessary to receive a spirit message, Mr. Bach said that some folk stood "with their fists doubled up and just dared the message to come—and expected results."

President Hoyt, as usual was active in lending a helpful hand wherever it was needed. He is the most energetic and painstaking president the society has ever had. Mrs. M. E. Lane, our vice-president, had the arrangement of the programme, and special vocal talent from the city and from abroad, as well as some beautiful orchestral selections, attest her interest in the occasion.

Brother Walker, of Hamburg, who accompanied a large delegation from that locality, startled the audience with an eloquent address, while Bro. Bach of the Sunflower, reviewed the origin of the movement in this country, its data and growth, and some of the evils menacing it, in a manner to merit strong applause. Brother Nite, from everywhere, in a felicitous spirit that brought out round after round of applause, in his forenoon speech outlined the mental menu on the programme. Styling himself as only the soup in the bill of fare, he told the auditors that solid beefsteak with pumpkin pie, and strawberries and cream were yet to be served. It is the opinion of the writer of this, that Bro. Nite's soup had a stimulating effect upon the good feeling pervading the audience, and was a factor in making our anniversary one of fraternal character; and a smile of commendation will arise with the many when they recall the digestibility of Bro. Nite's soup. The eighteen names that were handed in for membership to the society, by some of the best people in this section, attest that Spiritualism is not dead or dying in Buffalo.

CORRESPONDENT.

THE HAUNTED BEDSTEAD.

And the Curious Scene It Presented.

A little over 40 years ago I commenced to teach music on piano and organ, in Akron, Ohio, and was asked to take a class of six scholars in Springfield, about six miles from my home in the country.

I had to remain over night, and stayed at the home of two of my scholars. Everything possible was done for my comfort, and when it was time to retire for the night I was conducted to the bed room. On entering the same a strange feeling came over me—chilly and trembling and a vivid impression that a corpse was laid out on that bedstead, which, by the way, was an old-fashioned cord bedstead, with high turned posts, and a nicely made-up feather bed, which ought to have looked inviting to anyone; but what seemed plainer to me than the bed itself was the fact apparently, that the whole of the bed clothes were removed and a board lay on the cords, and a white sheet spread over it, and on that lay the corpse. My friend set the candle down and bidding me good night, he left the room. I wished very much to call him back and ask him to stay with me, but not wishing to be thought a coward, I did not do so. But mustering all my courage, I got into bed—but not to sleep, for all night long the impression was the same, and as soon as morning came I got up and left the room—a great relief to me.

I thought then I could never stay in that room again, but the following week I did, and the same feelings came over me as I entered the room. I went to bed, and the night was passed in a very wretched manner. I felt sure there must be some reason for my strange thought, and it was not imagination. I was always afraid of a dead person. I could not be induced to sleep there another night for anything. The third week I went to the same place, and as there was a donation for the minister, and a sleigh ride to attend, we did not get home till 2 o'clock in the morning, and the people where I stopped were afraid I might take cold to sleep in that room, as the fire was all out and the night extremely cold, and my friend asked me if I had just as soon sleep up stairs that night. I was only too glad to have a change of any sort, so I went to bed alone, but felt perfectly at ease, and slept good all night, with no such thoughts as I had had in the other room.

I told my folks my experience, and would never have thought it anything but a foolish imagination of my own, had it not been for the experience of a lady friend who visited the same people, and slept in the same bed. Her experience was precisely the same as my own. She said she could not have stayed there all night alone, but her little daughter was company for her. The next morning she told Mrs. H. she would not sleep in the room again if she would give her their farm, and she did not. She was given a bed up stairs while she stayed there, and felt all right. They only laughed at her, but never explained anything about it.

A few years passed, and a young man, an old school-mate of mine, visited me, and he was speaking of his mother who had been dead many years, and he said he only had one thing that was hers, and that was the bedstead she died on, and that his sister had it to keep for him till he wanted it.

Like a flash it all came back to me, and I asked him if she was laid out on it, as I have before described, and he said, "Yes;" thus proving my impressions to be correct.

Akron, O. WM. P. PAYNE.

IMMORTALITY IN BEING.

Immortality is in being, not seeming.
The facts of the present outvie
The wisdom of the past and the teeming,
Swift changing centuries fly.
While the thoughts of a Plato are with you,
And Horeb's mystical spell.
Are being's living ever-changing and new
Embodied forever they dwell.

We hear the world's great divas singing,
A Patti, a Neilson, a Lind,
And the music in our souls goes ringing
Like the mighty sweep of the wind;
And the story of their lives is repeated
In peans of praise that draw
The soul of their music we greeted
By love's immutable law.

We look when the West blazes red,
And the stars are dully seen,
And the world is uplifted and fed
By its radiant matchless sheen,
And the earth's narrow limits seem pale,
Man a creature of but a day,
When the star-ships through the vasty deep sail,
He longs for the eternal way.

Man, impetuous by nature and being,
Sees his life-race only begun,
And the cycles of worlds but a gleaming
Of the soul's unfading sun,
And the millions of years in their sweep,
To his being are but as a day,
And though time and eternity sleep,
His soul pursues its glad way.

Man immortal by nature and being,
Counts not the swift fleeting years,
But by his intuitive soul's far seeing,
And the music of infinite spheres;
He sees the world's vast systems and things
With the eye of a prophet and seer,
And mounts as an eagle's swift wings,
Undaunted by sorrow or fear.

BISHOP A. BEALS.
Summerland, Cal

Thought controls the universe,
Controls your life and mine,
Sways the destiny of nations,
Yet servant is of mine and thine.

The glory of science is that it is freeing the soul, breaking the mental manacles, getting the brain out of bondage, giving courage to thought—filling the world with mercy, justice and joy.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of to-day.—Goethe.

The idle man is the devil's cushion.—Bishop Hall.

DANIEL GORDON.

A Prominent Spiritualist Passed to the Realm of Souls.

Not long ago news came to hand from the far-away State of Maine, announcing the transition of my old and highly esteemed friend, Daniel Gordon of Thorndike. He fell asleep to things earthly near Christmas-tide, 1906, and returned quietly to his home in the spheres of the soul, whence he came to make this earth of ours a brief visit of seventy-one years as we count time. He realized his need of experiences he knew he would meet during that visit; and deliberately made his choice, in order that he might receive them. Perhaps the why thereof was not always clear to his finite self; yet the soul-self knew the purpose, wise, just and benign that lay behind his every joy, his every sorrow. So it is with all of the sons and daughters of earth, hence the life of Daniel Gordon does not stand alone in its sufferings, nor in its achievements, its successes.

Daniel Gordon was and is a man of talent—a unique character. He was a born mathematician and corresponded with skilled professors of this great science in all sections of the nation. Any problem that was solvable, could and would be reduced to orderly form and thoroughly explained by this peculiar genius.

As Mozart in music, so was Daniel Gordon in Mathematics—the vehicle of expression for powers greater than himself. The Unit was, to him, the base of all existing things, and because of that Unit, this village scientist and philosopher was able to reason himself back to God, likewise to a consciousness of the Soul's immortality. To this illumined mind, an Eternal Future was unthinkable without an Eternal Past, hence Life—the Unit of all things, must always have existed, and would ever continue to exist. This postulate carried with it the eternal existence of the finite unit—man.

Mr. Gordon became a teacher at an early age. By a seeming coincidence, he taught as many terms of school as he lived years in his present expression, seventy-one. His scholars in his last years were the grand-children of those whom he had taught in early manhood. He was original in all things, especially in his thought of life. His methods of teaching were his own, for he possessed the happy faculty of imparting knowledge to an extraordinary degree. Misfortunes in the way of sickness and seeming accidents, prevented him from realizing many of his youthful ideals, but he gained more than he lost, as he can now most plainly see, by his seeming defeats. He followed the light of reason in all of his undertakings, and was never afraid to let its "little flame burn," as Robert G. Ingersoll was wont to say. By that light he was led to see the iniquities of human slavery, of economic bondage, and the fearful weight of the caste system upon American life. He was a natural reformer, hence in his reasoning was guilty of being far in advance of his times.

In religion he was a Spiritualist of the most pronounced type—not a phenomenalist—but a mathematical Spiritualist, by reason of the inexorable logic of the only exact science known to man. From the Unit, Daniel Gordon posited and proved a living, loving God, Infinite in all things, like the "Great Positive Mind" of Andrew Jackson Davis, as "The Causeless Cause" of all existing things. From that Self-same Unit, he posited and proved man's survival of the change called death, and his immortal existence through the twin Eternities, the Past and the Future, between which, as a connecting link, was the Eternal Now. He was highly mediumistic and received many important messages through his own organism, from the "land o' the leal." This, perhaps, was the secret of his great ability to make sweetest music out of the strange echoes that came forth from his constant use of numbers. It will never be known as to the number of lives this man influenced for good during his sojourn as a visitor on earth through seventy-one years.

Mr. Gordon married early in life. Five children were born to him, but all save his daughter, Mrs. Percey Crosby, preceded him by many years in their return to their home in the Soul world. His wife, the loved and loving companion of his earth journey, survives him. She and the daughter know the way he has gone, for they shared with him the comforting knowledge that Spiritualism gives to all who fully accept it; hence they do not mourn as do those who are without hope. He was a patron of The Progressive Thinker and other Spiritualist papers for many years, but was not able to enjoy them during the closing days of his earth life because of chronic invalidism. He rejoices in his freedom from the limitations of the body, and reports that he is already at work in his favorite field of endeavor in his new life. Greetings to him in spirit! Joy, Peace, Strength to his loved ones still in the mortal!

A tribute from his friend,
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

In Response to Prof. Larkin.

"Getting Into Tune With the Infinite."—"Directivity," Etc.

To the Editor:—I am deeply interested in the "Scintillations" from Prof. Larkin in The Progressive Thinker No. 902, page 3, and especially in regard to that part of his essays which relates to the heading of this letter, and the planetary positions at the winter solstice at the beginning of the Christian era. I have computed the planetary positions for this date myself, the date handed down to us by the early Fathers of the Church as being the real birthday of our Savior, and this is one of the leading features of my book; and, if some one else has computed these planetary positions also I am naturally interested in it and anxious to learn of the results.

A few months ago I sent Prof. Larkin a complimentary copy of my book, "Science and Religion," and called his attention to the horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam, and asked his opinion of them. In his reply he said: "I fear I will have to disagree with your conclusions, judging from your letter which mentions horoscopes. No astronomer pays the slightest attention to horoscopes, nor believes in them."

I had conceded in the preface of my book that "The astronomers, as a class, do not believe in astrology," and his letter only confirms my statement.

How any one can conceive of "Getting into tune with the Infinite" and at the same time deny the planetary and stellar influences, is more than I can imagine. I have not yet read Trine's views on this important question, nor have I heard Prof. Larkin express himself at length.

Why should not man believe in the influence of the stars and planets? Are we to believe that he is chained down to earth and has no affinity for the rest of the system of which the earth is only a finitesimal part? Or, if man is an epitome of the universe, as most men believe we are, is he to believe that he has no affinity for, or bears no relation to the universe in which he lives? With the facts we have before us we have good evidence and even conclusive proof that the mind and destiny of man is molded and formed not by the laws of the world alone, but by the laws of the whole of the solar system, and that this solar system bears a certain relation to the sidereal universe with which it is surrounded, and that these relations extend also to man. If this were not so, then how is it possible for man to get into harmonious relation or in tune with the Infinite?

What is meant by "Getting into tune with the Infinite?" What is the Infinite that Prof. Larkin wishes to get into tune with? and how are we to go about it to accomplish that end? These stupendous questions are too profound for us to more than approximate, yet I will agree that an attempt to solve them is a move in the right direction.

Perhaps I may be able to throw some light on these questions, yet I cannot profess to have perfect knowledge of them. I think it is conceded that any speculations on these questions will be acceptable, and I believe it worth while to make the effort, even though I may be partly wrong.

To begin with, I wish to advance the theory that this solar system is a great cosmic corpuscle. Since Prof. Larkin advocates that there is nothing in the human body but corpuscles, then since man is an epitome of the universe, I must maintain that there is nothing in the sidereal universe but solar systems, and that these are relatively the great cosmic corpuscles. If this is correct, then if we wish to know our relation to the Infinite, we have only to compare one of our corpuscles to a solar system, and then we have our knowledge down to an exact science.

I have made some attempt in my book to solve the mystery of this sublime harmony of the universe, the music of the spheres, but to re-tell here what little I know would be too elaborate for a letter like this; and, moreover, I cannot profess to have perfect knowledge on the subject.

Briefly stated, our solar system is a separate entity, and it contains everything there is in the universe on a miniature scale. Our planetary system has perfect correspondence with the human mind, and there is not an organ of our mind but that has a corresponding planet in our solar system, thus making it a perfect prototype of what we are, so far as our mental faculties are concerned.

Thus: Vulcan and Mercury are allied to the Perceptive and Literary organs respectively. These two planets are near the Sun and occupy the first zone of actinicity which corresponds to the first note A of the scale. Venus is allied to the Social group of organs and occupies the second zone or note B of the scale. The Earth is allied to our Selfish organs, and Mars to the Executives, and these two planets occupy the third zone or note C of the scale. The Asteroids correspond to the organ of Cautiousness. Jupiter is allied to the Aspiring organs, and occupies the fourth zone or note D of the scale. Saturn is allied to the Perfective organs, and occupies the fifth zone and corresponds to the note E of the scale. Uranus is allied to the Reflective or Reasoning organs and occupies the sixth zone, and corresponds to the note F of the scale; while Neptune is allied to the Moral group of organs, and corresponds to the note G of the scale. The Moon is allied to the Cerebellum, and the Sun is allied to the heart. All the celestial bodies revolve in circles, and these revolutions produce cycles.

It is claimed that each succeeding decade in the world's progress results from a higher rate of vibration, and thus it brings into activity a higher class or group of organs, and that the inhabitants of earth are in consequence evolved to a higher state of consciousness. The following is clipped from "Septenary Man," by J. A. Anderson:

"This earth, therefore, is now in a condition of molecular vibration, and in the fourth, or kamic, or desire, Round, which Round will last so long as the 'life' wave or impulse has its activity in molecular matter. * * * But the duration of each [illegible] mode of vibration covers an immense cycle of time, and, in Brahminical literature, is called a Day of Brahma, and is a period involving some 4,330 millions of years. This is the astronomical period required for all the planets of our system to be in conjunction; an event which may well produce even physical causes sufficient to terminate or entirely change the conditions of physical existence on one or more planets." I have recognized a much shorter race period than this, a period of some 7,000 years from one millennium to another, but there is no need to consider this further here."

It is further claimed by this same author that while we are now in the fourth Round, we are also in the fifth subdivision of that Round, and therefore we are "said to be in the kama-manasic state;" that kama is the present ruling Principle, while manas is the subtone. This is probably the reason why one of our recent authors, Mr. H. E. Butler has said: "Nature is now playing to the tune of E minor."

If this information is correct (and I infer that it may be relatively so) then if Prof. Larkin will determine the number of vibrations contained in E. Minor, then screw up his own "inherent corpuscular directivity" to that pitch, then Eureka! He will then be able to kick every disease and drugstore "from the beautiful face of our home—the earth," perform miracles, raise the dead, and above all, become converted to the Christ Principle, whether he believes in the existence of the Scriptural Jesus or not.

Say, did it ever occur to you that Christ, the apostles, Lord Buddha, the prophets, and in fact, all the really inspired men in any age of the world found this "pulse of the Infinite" and lived in it during their spiritual service? Yes, really I believe they did, notwithstanding the puerile attempts made by the learned and illiterate alike to find flaws in the matchless characters of these world's greatest men. And right here I want to say a word to the modern Spiritualists. These mediums apparently seek communion with the spirits of the departed dead, while the really inspired man seeks to be moved by the Holy Spirit—the Cosmic Mind. I have experienced both these phases of Spiritualism, and I believe I know whereof I speak. If I understand it correctly, there is precisely the same difference between these two phases of Spiritualism as there is between the real prophet and the witch or wizard of Endor. This medium is represented as having a familiar spirit, and as bringing up the spirits of the departed dead to commune with them (I. Sam. 28: 8-20), while the really inspired man, the prophet, is moved by the Holy Spirit, or if I understand it correctly, he is in touch or in tune with the Infinite Mind.

No Bible student can reasonably doubt "spirit return," or the ability of mediums to converse with the departed dead. To my mind this is an established fact "as old as the hills." I only wish to say that the prophet or the really inspired man exercises a much superior talent to that of the medium.

I must beg to disagree with Prof. Larkin in reference to his statement: "It is with extreme regret that the author marred the white paper with the horrible words, 'religion,' 'sin,' 'evil'; nature knows nothing of these and they should be put in the back part of the dictionary."

As a phrenologist I know that man has a religious group of organs. These organs are: Veneration, Conscientiousness, Hope, Spirituality and Benevolence. These organs are bestowed upon us by Nature, or by the Almighty if you please, and therefore Nature does know something of them. It is the possession of these faculties which places man above the animal. They contain nearly all that makes man—MAN. Deprive man of these and he would be no better than the monkey. From these facts I infer that Mr. Larkin is not a phrenologist, that right here are a few laws which he has not yet analyzed—the laws of mind.

I have claimed that this religious group of organs is the fruit of the mind, that it is the vital complex unity of all the lower organs, and therefore all the physical senses are spiritualized here. This gives us clairvoyance, corresponding to physical sight; clairaudience, corresponding to physical hearing, and the same may be said of all the other senses and organs. This is not yet popularly believed among phrenologists, but I am certain beyond a reasonable doubt that it is the correct idea.

This being true, it naturally follows that if we wish to become spiritual we must ascend in our interior consciousness to the moral or religious group of organs, since these are the seat of our spirituality. And it is here also that we must ascend if we wish to succeed in "getting into tune with the Infinite." To become spiritual we should exercise a pure high moral character and seek and pray for spiritual enlightenment. Jesus gave the keynote to the situation when He said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and then all these things shall be added unto you." This is the equivalent of, "First get into tune with the Infinite, and then all is yours."

We now come to the question, what is the Infinite which we wish to get into tune with? This is such a many-sided question that it is more difficult to answer. The Sun gives out heat, light and electricity. Our Sun with its system, and in fact all other systems, are said to revolve around a grand central Sun. Now these suns, to all appearances at least, are the only source of life we have. And if you will analyze this vast universe from one end to the other in the effort to discover God, the results would undoubtedly be very similar to those of Prof. Larkin's in his endeavor to find the soul. It is likely true that there are no known laws by which we may prove either that man has a soul, or that the universe has a God, because everything with the scientist is accounted for by physical means.

Therefore, anyone who seeks for God in Nature, or seeks to look through Nature up to Nature's God, will certainly find the Sun and become a sun-worshiper if he worships anything at all. It seems that the Sun is Nature's God. It is the God of the pantheist, the atheist, and of the "natural man," and of all those persons who indulge in Nature-worship; but the Sun is not the God of the Christian. The Christian recognizes the fact that God is something separate and apart from Nature, that He is a something outside of Nature, and is not to be confounded with it, yet acting in perfect harmony with Nature.

Nature is the temple in which God resides, just as our body is the temple in which we reside. It is conceded by many of these scientific men that our body is held alive and intact by and through the emanations or vibrations of the spirit within us, and the same principle is true of Nature. If the Spirit of God were withdrawn from our solar system, our solar system would at once become a lifeless corpse. The Sun would cease to give its light; the law of gravitation would cease to exist, and the worlds would crumble and fall apart and thus disintegrate until lifeless chaos would be the inevitable result.

Viola, Cal. B. F. LOOMIS.

Spirit Doctrine Called Immoral

Harrison D. Barrett Replies to the Aspersions of a St. Louis Minister.

Editor St. Louis Post-Dispatch:—

As Editor-at-Large of and for The National Spiritualists' Association of the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada, my attention has been called to an excerpt from a sermon by Rev. Joseph Stephan, pastor of the Shaw Avenue M. E. Church in your city delivered by him Sunday, February 24th, ult. Be so kind as to permit me to review in brief, the reverend gentleman's statements. I do not do this with any desire to enter into controversy by letter or in print with my clerical friend. My purpose is to correct his misstatements in order that the public may not be deceived by his baseless assertions.

Homer is said to have declared, "He who talks the most, knows the least." This aphorism is especially applicable to the case of Rev. Stephan. He knows nothing about Spiritualism, hence he assumes to talk the most about it and against it. Men who are too narrow to see beyond the horizon of their own ignorance, often feel qualified to sit in judgment upon the world. This critic of Spiritualism belongs to this very class. Wise men fear to pronounce an opinion upon any subject, or concerning any man, lest they make a mistake. The uninformed do not hesitate to speak, not knowing that action is equal to reaction in a contrary direction.

In the name of three hundred thousand avowed Spiritualists, and one million and a half of investigators who are partial supporters of our movement, I challenge him to produce one substantial proof that Spiritualism, pure and undefiled, induces immorality and irreligion. Were I to cite the early history of the Methodist Church, I could find not a few instances of gross immorality on the part of some Methodist preachers, likewise the most profound ignorance that ever assayed a position as a teacher of men. But, because some Methodist clergymen were bad, and many ignorant, it does not follow that all were. The majority of them were high-minded, noble-souled servants of God, who sought to make this world better for their having lived in it.

In Spiritualism there may be some who are immoral and irreligious, but they do not represent the rank and file of our people any more that the erring ones in Methodism represented all of the followers of that great movement, which has done so much for untold millions of people. As a matter of fact, Spiritualism is the very reverse of irreligion and immorality in its influence upon those who accept it. It demonstrates the Immanence of God in the Universe, and proves that man is a direct child of God, hence responsible for his every act and thought. It further declares that there is no forgiveness for sin, and that man must do right as a Spiritualist, or suffer for his error throughout all time. It next asserts that clean thinking, pure living, noble striving are daily essentials for every man, and that when one fails to live up to these divine commands, no eleventh-hour repentance will enable him to escape the consequences of his sin. Methodism throws the burden on an innocent Being, urges its followers to shirk their duty by letting someone else pay their debts for them. This is immorality of the rankest kind. I wonder if Rev. Stephan is guilty of it?

Spiritualism demands purity of life and rectitude of conduct in all things on the part of its votaries. It demands a sweet, wholesome home atmosphere, and never fails to defend the sanctity of the marriage tie. It does not believe in murder, legal, or illegal, hence, is opposed to war and capital punishment, in both of which Rev. Stephan's Church, as a body, if not he himself, are devout believers. Which is the more Christian—a belief in war, in executions upon the gallows—or a belief that they are relics of barbarism and should be abolished? Brother Stephan, is there not a commandment "Thou shalt not kill?" Did not Jesus say: "Love your enemies as yourself"? Do you heed these commands, or are you still apologizing for Rev. E. K. Avery?

Rev. Stephan's reference to John Wesley is ample proof to me that he has never read any reliable biography of the noble "Saint of Epworth."

Brother Stephan, secure an unabridged edition of some good life of Wesley and "read up". Take the one written in 1818, published by the Methodist Book Concern, London, Paternoster Row, written, I think, by Daviess, and read it carefully. Don't tear out page 41 in Volume I, nor pages 341 et. sq. in the same volume. If you don't find Wesley a good Spiritualist by his own confession, his own written statements, it will be no fault of the author, nor that of Wesley himself, but of your own bigotry and prejudice against God's truth.

Rev. Stephan is utterly mistaken when he says that Spiritualists "Call up the spirits of the dead." There are no dead, hence they could not call them up if they wished to do so. The dear ones of our lives do not go away from us when they exchange worlds. They go neither up nor down. They stay with those whom they love, whom they know love them. They, therefore, are not obliged to "come back," nor "come up." They simply make themselves visible to the inner vision of some sensitive, or impress their loving thoughts upon the minds of those whom they wish to have their message of comfort, consolation and good cheer. Spiritualism deals with angels of light and love—not with those whom Rev. Stephan and his ministerial brethren have so long been contending—the imps of darkness and their satanic leaders.

That the phenomena of Spiritualism are frequntly counterfeited by conscienceless tricksters, I will freely admit. Were not the phenomena that were produced by Moses and Aaron, Jesus and his Apostles, likewise duplicated by the soothsayers, necromancers and astrologers? In each case were there not a few genuine manifestations which the so-called wise men could not duplicate? Did not Aaron's rod in serpent form eat up all of the other rods? This is a figurative declaration of the superiority of truth to error, of genuineness to base or even clever counterfeits. So it is in Spiritualism. It presents a clear, substantial residuum of genuine phenomena behind which are to be found causes, the disembodied intelligencies of finite beings, who thus seek to prove that they have survived the change called death. One genuine message, and that proof is given. Aaron's rod has swallowed up all counterfeits, leaving God's Truth master of the fields. Spiritualism's proofs to the world are legion, and in giving this demonstration to the children of men, it has done more to comfort the sorrowing, cheer the broken-hearted, encourage the weak and weary laden than all the churches and material science taken together, have been able to do in fifteen hundred years.

You may have your mesmerism, your hypnotism, your telepathy as playthings, as the rods that will vanish when the rod of wisdom overtakes them, Brother Stephan, but there will remain the residuum of God's sacred truth in the fourth which you rejected. Like the loaves and fishes in the hands of Jesus, this residium will be multiplied many fold until it is sufficient in quantity to feed all the hungry sons and daughters of the Infinite. Spiritualism gives the substance of spiritual truth to all, while Brother Stephan and his brethren are content to eat the husks.

"Come with us," Brother Stephan, learn the truth, and the truth shall make you free. Yours for truth,

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
President National Spiritualists' Association, and Editor-at-Large, seattle, Wash.

NOTES FROM BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Interesting Anniversary Exercises in the Church Presided Over by the Rev. May S. Pepper.

The First Spiritual Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., held afternoon and evening services on Sunday, March 31, 1907, in commemoration of the fifty-ninth anniversary of modern Spiritualism, at Aurora Grata Cathedral, Bedford ave., corner Madison street.

The pastor, Rev. May S. Pepper, presided at both sessions and delivered an interesting address on each occasion. The other speakers were Mrs. Carrie S. Thomas, Miss Amalia F. Pfenning and Dr. Wyman. Most excellent spirit tests, messages and psychometric readings were given by Mrs. Pepper, Mrs. Thomas and Mme. Marcia, which were thoroughly convincing to the large and enthusiastic audiences gathered, and elicited the warmest commendations for their lucidity and reliability.

It is a matter of sincere regret that, owing to the greatly impaired health of our pastor, and her proposed early trip to Europe for rest and recuperation, the church services will close with the last Sunday in April, and these will not probably be resumed until October, when Mrs. Pepper hopes to return with health fully restored and again take up her spiritual work.

Her faithful and efficient services as pastor, lecturer and psychic during the past three years in Brooklyn, have been productive of great good, and many thousands of skeptics and unbelievers concerning the important phenomena and philosophy or Spiritualism, have received the most convincing proofs of the reality of spirit intercourse and guardianship

Very large numbers of attendants upon our services have been drawn from the congregations and membership of the various denominational churches of this city, with the encouraging result that these thousands of investigators and seekers after newer facts and truths than are furnished by orthodox Christianity, have been instructed, liberalized, and spiritually illuminated by the inspirational discourses, and the wonderful psychic demonstrations given by Mrs. Pepper during the term of her pastorate.

The Progressive Thinker has always been on sale at every session, and furnished to the people its weekly feast of intellectual and spiritual refreshment. The Editor of this splendid and successful journal deserves the unstinted praise of all who love our grand cause of Spiritualism, and who desire its progress throughout the world.

DR. JOHN C. WYMAN.

A good Christian should never go to law; rather should he give up his coat and his pants, and everything that he hath. Churchmen never go to law; they are the most docile and easy creatures in the world on matters of business.—Voltaire.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

SUGGESTION.

Can Criminals or Wayward Boys and Girls be Reformed by Suggestion?

That wonderful results have followed when Suggestion has been properly made on the minds of those who have a tendency to commit crime, is now a conceded fact. We invite the careful attention of our readers to the following, a veritable mine of information for every Spiritualist to consider.

Judges of the future may sentence criminals to be sent to a hypnotist instead of to a prison if the theory of Dr. John D. Quackenbos of New York, specialist in nervous and mental diseases, hypnotist, and student of psychic phenomena, that hypnotism can be used to reform the enemies of society should obtain [as set forth in the Chicago Inter Ocean].

A series of experiments conducted by Dr. Quackenbos upon some wayward girls to cure them of their waywardness has been so successful that they have attracted the attention of students of hypnotism all over the country. Dr. Quackenbos maintains that his system would result in reforming criminals to a great extent and that it would make useful citizens out of men who otherwise would become habitual offenders against society.

"Do I believe that hypnotism would be efficacious in reforming criminals?" said Dr. C. Pruyn Stringfield, a well-known physician who has made a considerable study of hypnotism. "I certainly do if it is systematically and rationally applied, and if the person co-operates to make it successful. In fact, hypnotism is used to a great extent now by physicians in a certain class of cases and I believe that as it certainly has its influence over patients it would be even more effective with men who are classed as criminals, but who perhaps are merely first offenders, and who need the help of a stronger will to guide them in the right path.

Believes Thoroughly in Theory of Hypnotism.

"I have followed Dr. Quackenbos' experiments and am a firm believer in his theories. As a matter of fact, more efforts should be made to influence criminals along different lines than are made to punish them. The jails are full of criminals who only need a helping hand to aid them, and their minds in many cases would be receptive to the influence of the hypnotist. In my practice I have a great many cases of alcoholism to deal with. I find that when men have no will at all if they are made to believe that the doctor is their friend, that he is trying to aid them, they can be made to let liquor alone and will reform. I do not know exactly how we could go to work to establish a systematic bureau of hypnotism in the case of criminals, but I am certain that the future will see far different methods adopted for dealing with them than are in use at present.

"As for the employment of hypnotism by doctors, it is done regularly. In fact, suggestion or hypnotism is involved in the very giving of medicine. The patient takes the medicine and is told that it will have a certain effect upon him. He naturally looks for that effect and that is the first element of suggestion. I have followed up the theory of hypnotism very closely and I am convinced that hypnotism may be used to reform criminals."

Dr. Quackenbos in New York has made an elaborate explanation of how he arrived at his results.

The first suggestions were given by the doctor in his office to two of the girls last June and the effects were so marked that last week a woman of wealth paid the expenses of six more girls from Trenton to New York and return so that these too might be benefited by the odd treatment.

Dr. Quackenbos' System Not Akin to Christian Science.

"My system is not akin to Christian Science," said Dr. Quackenbos, somewhat forcibly. "To begin with, Christian Science is a religion, with which hypnotic suggestion has nothing to do. Furthermore, hypnotic suggestion differs from Christian Science in that hypnosis is exact, scientific, takes into consideration the peculiarities of particular cases, and recognizes limitations. We can't cure a hole in the lungs or a heart lesion by hypnotic suggestion. Christian Science, on the other hand, makes claim to do anything.

To tell in a sentence what I claim for hypnotism in medicine, I should say: By suggestion in hypnosis one can make a man do anything physically possible and morally right."

Dr. Quackenbos said he did not know how the first two girls from the Trenton home happened into his hands further than one day he received a letter from Mrs. Elizabeth V. H. Mansell, the superintendent, saying that she would like to see if hypnotic suggestion would have any effect upon the ungovernable tempers of some young girls in the home. Upon the doctor's replying that he would like to make the experiments, Mrs. Mansell brought the two girls to his office during the early part of the summer.

One of the girls was referred to by the doctor as Mary B., a young white girl. Hers was one of the most pathetic cases in the home, Dr. Quackenbos said. At the age of 14 she had become the mother of a mulatto baby, and although she always exhibited an intense maternal love for her black child, she developed violent fits of temper after the child was born and would fly into an uncontrollable, destructive rage upon the slightest provocation. Another of the girls had been placed in a low resort when but 9 years old. This girl, too, gave vent to violent outburst of anger after being received into the home.

Poor Creatures Reach Out for Human Sympathy.

"If you could see how these poor little creatures reach out for a bit of human sympathy," said the doctor, "you would realize how much they will do for one who they think has their interest at heart. Take, for instance, the six girls that came here to my office. There was no coercion necessary on the part of the officers of the home to get them to come here for treatment after they had seen the beneficial results of one treatment on the two girls who were placed in the hypnotic sleep last summer. When the patient comes in that frame of mind half the battle is won.

"I worked with those six girls from about 11 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening. The details of the treatment are simple. First of all I learned from the officers of the home which, if any, kind of work each particular girl showed a fancy for, because after I suggest to a patient what not to do I then begin to turn the sleeping subject's mind toward something constructive—tell her, I mean, that instead of working off her energy in breaking china, for instance, she would be much better off if she were to devote that time to practicing on the piano, sewing, or whatever vocation those who know her best say she inclines toward.

"I used three of the rooms here in my house and my office. Mrs. Mansell, a Mrs. Irving, Mr. Hughes of the London Society for Psychic Research, and two nurses were present in the house at the time, but all these were excluded from the room, of course, until after the patient had gone into the hypnotic sleep.

"Physiologically speaking, the sleep is a perfectly natural one and doesn't have any weakening effect upon the will. The oftener a subject is placed under the hypnotic influence the easier he succumbs to it, but there are no harmful results. Before the sleep comes on we tell the subject that he will be wakened at a certain time or will waken himself at a fixed time feeling refreshed and invigorated, and this is brought about.

Sleep Is Induced Entirely by Talking.

"The sleep is induced entirely by talking to the subject in a monotone. This droning conversation serves the double purpose of bringing on the hypnotic state and at the same time of making the patient see that the doctor is not there to scold or cross examine. Take Mary B., for instance.

"'Mary,' I said, 'you came here to be helped and I want to help you all I can. Tell me all about yourself—why you give way to these fits of anger. You see, Mary, I never saw you before and all I know about you is that you want me to help you. If you will tell me about yourself I'm sure I can.'

"Bit by bit the little girl would begin her confidences and when she had told me all she could I began to tell her what she should do, always speaking in the same steady monotone. After a while Mary's eyes had stopped shifting from the rug to the pictures and back again, and now she was looking at me with a fixed gaze. And I talked on and on and gradually her eyes drooped and closed and she was asleep.

"And now I talked on to her just the same except that the sentences were more sharply inflected. 'You're not going to fly into these fits again, Mary,' I would say in a decided tone. 'You are never again going to be jealous of the other girls and fly into a wild anger. You like to play the piano, Mary, I know that, and when you leave the home you will have practised so much and so faithfully that you will play beautifully.'

"Again and again I went through this with each girl in turn, varying it only in one case to dressmaking instead of piano playing, in another case to the violin, or cooking, or what not as the subject's mind ran. And at the time appointed Mary or whatever girl it was would wake up or be awakened and depart refreshed and happy.

"How long does it last? In the case of the two girls I treated last June the outbursts of anger disappeared after that one treatment.

"Five years ago a man came to me to be cured of alcoholism by suggestion, and although I've told him since that the treatment ought to be repeated as a safeguard he tells me that it isn't necessary as he has never taken a drink since that first hypnotic suggestion. Perhaps he is exceptional, because sometimes there is a relapse. But I've found that the effects of the second treatment after a relapse are more lasting. I don't believe the will has much to do with the phenomenon. Take the drunkard. He is not keeping away from drink since that first suggestion because he wills to abstain, but simply because he has no desire to drink after being told in the sleep that he will not have the desire.

"The suggestion makes a physiological as well as a psychological change of being. In all of us there is what Professor James of Harvard calls the 'higher spiritual self'—the 'inner man' of St. Paul—which when it is aroused by suggestion is a thousand times stronger than any passion or appetite. After I have made the suggestion I leave them to waken at the time they were told to waken. Recently I hurried to catch a train for Boston after making the suggestions to a patient and at the stated time the patient aroused himself and left the house as naturally as you would get up in the morning and go down for breakfast.

Says Subject Rarely Talks Back to Physician.

"No, the subject rarely talks back to the physician during the sleep conversation," said Dr. Quackenbos in answer to a question. "Sometimes a person, however, has what is known as an 'alternating personality' and will orally combat the suggestions, 'give sass' as it were; but this is rare. One woman whom I treated about a year ago got up after I had left the house, spoke to the nurse in a seemingly natural way, and then went out to go to her hotel. This was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and she has absolutely no recollection of what happened from that time until 10 o'clock that night except one trifling incident. Still in the hypnotic sleep she walked over to her hotel, where a negro buttons noticed that her bracelet had become unclasped as she was going toward the elevator. The boy aided her to fasten the bracelet, and this incident was all she recalled until she woke up in the house of a friend that evening.

"If Mrs. Sage is anxious to aid the city of New York I know of no better object for her to endow than a hospital that might be named off-hand the 'Institute for Applied Psychics,' with a laboratory, an infirmary, an out patient department, and a large sanitarium for the wealthy, which would go far to keep up the place financially. It's amazing what could be done then to relieve the abnormal morally and mentally. You can imagine the hundreds of morally diseased that can be got at in no other way except by the methods I have described. You might as well punish a person for kleptomania, for instance, as for diphtheria. Kleptomania is simply moral hysterics—the person so afflicted grabs for an object because he wants it. The term is abused, I know, but real kleptomania can be overcome by suggestion in hypnosis.

Honest People Not Hypnotized Into Committing Crimes.

"Don't believe the tales that honest people are hypnotized into doing crime. The patient can't be made to do things that in a normal state would be revolting to him—he doesn't act on suggestions that are against his convictions. He may stab you with a paper knife upon suggestion, it is true, but all the time he knows it is a paper knife. The ethical victory in the case of these poor girls from the Trenton institution is that they are anxious to do what is right at heart and so they are influenced gladly by this strange force of which we know so little as yet.

"The churches are coming to see the value of the treatment. The Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester of Boston has a class of 800 men and women who meet once a week to learn what they can of hypnotic suggestion and its remedial powers among the mentally abnormal. A Baptist minister in Washington is carrying on the same work in the capital city. In Stockholm Dr. Wetterstrand, one of the master minds in European science, holds clinics daily during which he places twenty patients in the sleep simultaneously in a sort of salon he has for the purpose. Dr. Wetterstrand, however, passes from chair to chair, stroking each patient's brow in turn and saying at the same time very softly and persuasively, 'Go to sleep, go to sleep.' After this his treatment is the same as I have described.

Much Can Be Done With Insane in Incipient Stage.

"The insane? Well, a great deal can be done with the insane in the incipient stages of the disease. Before the delusions have become fixed they can be driven away by suggestion, but after they have became fixed, chronic, it is too late then. I can't say much about the effects of the suggestion upon the mentally unbalanced, however, as my experience with such cases has not been large. One man was brought to me from Virginia by his wife after he had been confined in an asylum for a year. His delusions were marked and he was very violent during the trip to this city. After treament by suggestion he had forgotten his delusions enough to permit me to send him away to the mountains with orders to walk and fish—I'm keen on fishing, you know—and above all things to 'forget it.' Now he is engaged in active business again, and is as well mentally and physically as could be wished.

Declares Hypnosis Is Still in Its Infancy.

Hypnosis is in its infancy as yet, but physicians, the clergy, and laymen are coming to know more and more of its possibilities. A great scientific medical school, like the University of Berlin, is working constantly to spread knowledge of its uses in medicine. In America an article will soon appear over the signature of Dr Worcester that will attract much attention. If the scoffers could see those little girls—daughters of degenerates, ill-treated and kicked about the streets before they were received into the home—come in here and see them depart radiant, sweet, and happy one would realize what an amazing turning about in a personality can be accomplished within an hour. From the thousands of cases that have come under my observation I know that the suggestion will overcome absolutely viciousness and moral degeneracy if the operator can but obtain his subject's confidence."

A case in which hypnotism will probably be employed to bring about the reformation of a criminal is that of Harry Hamburger, a boy homicide, who, seven years ago shocked the people of Detroit with one of the most brutal murders ever committed in that part of the United States.

Hypnotism to Be Tried on Detroit Murderer.

For nearly seven years Hamburger has been in the asylum for the criminal insane, his case being believed to be hopeless, but gradually his mind is being restored to its normal condition, and Dr. O. R. Long, an expert criminologist, who has charge of Hamburger, will see what he can do to influence Hamburger's mind in the right direction now that his liberation is probable.

Connected with the story of Hamburger is a tale of a mother's love and devotion which is almost unparalleled in the annals of such cases. The murder in which Hamburger was implicated was that of Charles J. Reindel, a downtown merchant, which occurred on the evening of December 2, 1899. The body of Reindel was found in his store, where it had been frightfully beaten with a club and afterward saturated with oil and set on fire. When the fire was discovered by a theater employe, hundreds of people were pouring into the theater, but a little later the body of the unfortunate merchant was discovered by the police and firemen.

After a five days' search the police got a clew to the murderer, and Hamburger, but 19 years old, was convicted of the crime. He had killed the merchant with the sole object of robbery, and had then set fire to the building.

Although experts pronounced him insane he was found guilty and sent to the Jackson prison for life. There his condition grew worse instead of better and a commission appointed by the court decided that he was insane, a hopeless imbecile of the worst type, with not the slightest chance for recovery.

When he was finally consigned to the care of Dr. O. R. Long it was believed that the world had lost sight of him forever and that the asylum would prove his living tomb. But it was not to be. Hamburger's mother never gave up hope that her boy would regain his reason. She visited him day by day, and went to work to earn her own living so that she could get money to make her son's life more bearable.

Mother Came Every Two Weeks to Visit Her Son.

Mrs. Hamburger lived in Ionia and every two weeks she traveled the weary road between the little town and the state prison to visit her boy, and her interest compelled the asylum authorities to pay more attention to Hamburger's case. More than a year after his mother had commenced these visits she was rewarded by seeing a few signs of consciousness on the part of the insane boy, and then he gradually began to recognize her and to look for her visits. The doctors at first paid but slight attention to these indications of an intellect, but when he began to respond when they talked to him in whispers and then in a stronger tone they believed that a miracle was being worked. One of them was interested in athletics and succeeded in getting Hamburger to take up outdoor sports, and succeeded beyond his most sanguine exjectations. This was followed by Hamburger's being interested in books. The work of teaching him was tedious, but they persevered and the patient responded more and more readily.

It is said that he now possesses as much knowledge as the normal man of his age, plays bridge whist and can use shorthand, discusses political economy, can run 100 yards in twelve seconds, and likes to discuss politics. He will not discuss the murder in the little store in Detroit, however.

Suggestion Used to Bring About Normal State of Mind.

In bringing Hamburger to this state of existence hypnotism was used to a great extent after it was seen that there was an awakening in his mind. There is no thought that he will became a criminal again, but it is believed that it will be necessary for a time to have a man of stronger intellect with him, so that in moments of despondency he will not become morbid and brood over the events of his past. Dr. Long believes that it would be entirely safe to restore him to liberty, but under the statutes he must go back to the state prison, where, Dr. Long is positive, he would relapse into his former hopeless state. The asylum doctor is keeping him there because he says that it would be no less than a crime if the rigors of the law were carried out. His mother is steadily working to secure for him a pardon from the Governor, but has not succeeded as yet.

BEYOND THE VEIL.

And I Will Send You a Comforter.

This is a mandate issued by the Infinite Spirit to mankind, for their comfort and consolation in times of great sorrow and affliction, when the days are like one long, sad dream, while weary eyes look forth on the beautiful earth, but fail to sense the brightness of the sunshine, the song of birds, the lovely tinted flowers, for all is seen through a mist of tears, by the eyes from which the light of joy has fled.

But the great Infinite Mind, whose nature is love, kindness, mercy and justice, knew the souls of men must experience times of agony and tribulation too great for word expression, too deep for even the dearest friends of earth to minister consolation. Look up, sad hearts, and learn a comforter has come into the world, even unto you, if you will list to its beautiful teachings, your sorrow will be lightened, and in place of silent despair, a holy, tranquil calm will take its place, as you look forward to a time when a recompense for all trials nobly borne will be thine.

Yes, even to-day has this divine comforter appeared, and been accepted by many on the earth plane of life. To the lowly as well as the great, it is a friend. It lingers by many firesides, tried and trusted by years of experience; its beauty never wanes, nor its divine luster grow dim. It is lifting the gloomy shadows from the lives of many, and paving the way to brighter and better things in the future years. It has shed many gleams of sunshine athwart your pathway, opening as it has the door to your free communication with departed loved ones.

This great comforter from the divine spirit, we call the beautiful far-reaching philosophy of Spiritualism. And what greater comforter can the people of earth desire or wish than this same philosophy, which is food, and comfort to the understanding soul. It is a soft, white-plumaged dove, whose snowy wings with swift flight bring you tidings from beyond the veil, of loving arms waiting to fold you, hearts beating with love's purest, sweetest affection. It brings you tidings from those you knew and loved in the summertime of youth, when life was bright and fair; and held a promise of greatness, when cloudy skies were unknown and all the present blossomed with hopes that were to bloom into reality in future years, and fear of failure was unknown.

It brings tidings of a land where friend is united with friend, father and son clasp hands and feel again the kindling of true parental love, renewed, intensified by the years of separation; mother and daughter greet each other with kisses of love and fond embraces, while they journey to their spiritual home, where arm in arm they tread the mossy grass or linger in homes of love.

This comforter brings you tidings of a land where again meet husband and wife, and renew the tender companionship, while the golden link of life is bound together, never to be separated; here they will abide, their sweet true love growing sweeter and brighter as time rolls on.

It tells you in this summerland of immortal life you may work out all the beautiful ideas, which you longed to accomplish during your earthly journey, but failed, while heartsick and weary you felt yourself defeated in the battle of life. Oh, on how many anxious waiting hearts has this divine comforter descended; how many tears has it wiped away, to replace with smiles; how many hearts has it filled with peace and consolation; how many weary hands have been folded over peaceful breasts as with unfaltering trust, and smiling lip, they greeted the angel of life as they received the command to come one step higher. Why do they smile and reach out their hands to welcome what has for so long been called the king of terrors? Why? Because this comforter has come to them, and they know that so-called death is not an enemy but the giver of real life, eternal life, to the soul of man; they are only going home, to meet some loved one, therefore they know no fear.

In the soft twilight of departing day, when all nature is hushed and still, when the long shadows cast by the last rays of departing sunlight fling their wavering beauty across the fragrant dewy grass, and daisy strewed meadow, then sit silently in some quiet spot, and give yourself up to spiritual thought and soul communion, while your mind wanders in memory to some departed friend, now dwelling in spirit realms. Then will you sense a feeling of rest, and sweet content, while the trials of life will seem as naught, for a response has come from the silence, and soul speaks to soul; the comforter has come to you in the form of your spirit friend and brought the sweet fragrance of his love for you for your strength and rest.

May the knowledge of this beautiful philosophy, which can alone offer the true and everlasting comfort to the world, be cultivated in every household to become to all the comforter of mankind. MRS. JAMES RILEY.

Marcellus, Mich.

IMMORTALITY.

Demonstrated by Convincing Personal Experience.

"You have had false prophets among you—for centuries you have had them, solemnly warned against them though you were; false prophets, who have told you that all men are nothing but fiends or wolves, half beast, half devil.

"Believe that, and indeed you may sink to that."—Ruskin, "Crown of Olives."

Of a surety, "a tree is known by its fruits." Nineteen centuries of Catholicism and Protestantism bear witness to the truth of Ruskin's words.

It is far from my purpose to offend adherents of the churches; for I well know that among them are many sincere and well-meaning people.

But the church is on trial; and its false teachings, having brought about such appalling calamities of the past, worse being threatened; and the present barbarous state of society—with men, women and children sold in slavery, sacrificed to Mammon—being but the fruit of pernicious doctrines and false teachings of the church, we can no longer mince words nor delay the urgent demands for the truth that the people may be free.

That true nobleman, Ruskin, by sternly denying that debasing doctrine of the "inherent baseness of man" and, like Emerson and indeed all truly great men from Plato and Jesus down, standing and declaring for the inherent and divine nature of man and woman, sweeps away the very basis on which the whole structure of false Christianity is built.

For, man, being divinely immortal in his own right, needs no church nor special savior to remit his sins, but must needs cling to what is upright and noble in him to work out his own salvation.

These twin doctrines, diseases rather, of "inherent baseness" and "vicarious atonement" which the early "church fathers" introduced into the world have done more to wreck humanity than all other causes combined.

But mark the unscrupulous cunning of that notorious council, that framed the theological scheme, and formed a trust in religion, beside which all our modern trusts pale into insignificance!

They schemed thus: First they invented an ever-burning lake, into which all unbelievers were to be cast for eternal torment.

Then man was to be made so vile that it was an utter impossibility for him to escape that lake and "everlasting damnation" except through the church and its doctrine of "vicarious atonement."

The church waxed fat and wealthy on sin, by selling absolutions!

Poor, simple, ignorant humanity; what sins have been committed against you in the name of Christ!

The church still claims to have the souls of men in its power to consign either to hell or heaven. The church still guarantees the admission of any monster to heaven if he will but obey its conditions.

But in a few years the church will be bereft of even that hold on the people; for its power, even to get people to listen, is rapidly waning.

"It was the selling of absolution that ended the medieval faith; and I can tell you more, it is the selling of absolution which, to the end of time, will mark false Christianity. Pure Christianity gives her remission of sins only by ending them; but false Christianity gets her remission of sins by compounding for them."—Crown of Olives, p. 65.

True and noble words! Jesus taught the immutable laws of Cause and Effect as applied to the conduct of men one to another, in clear and emphatic language. He also taught that all violations of that law brought their own terrible punishments.

He taught the Brotherhood of Man, and the divine basis of it, in the words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done it unto me."

The church has to answer to the charge of cunningly altered documents; altered to suit its own nefarious ends!

The teaching of Jesus as to the inherent divine nature of man is so abundant and clear that there can be no misconstruction about it.

And it may be said—I challenge the church to prove otherwise—that in proportion as men have disregarded its first essential false doctrine, and clung to their own innate divinity, so have they become noble and divine instructors to humanity. I point to our great men of science, philosophy and poetry, as proof of my statement.

I go a step farther than that and, denying all your doctrines from your Jehovah down, and declaring them false and degrading, I add my individual testimony as to the royal and divine nature of all human beings.

Some twenty years ago I resolved to investigate, myself, as to the truth of the immortality of man. My mother had suddenly died outside the "pale of the church." It was strongly insinuated to me that she had gone to hell. Indeed, under the terrible church doctrines, there was no other alternative for her! Naturally my boy's nature revolted.

I cut loose from the church; and had it not been for an innate devotional tendency, doubtless I should have become a bitter atheist. I was satisfied that Jesus had lived, and looked upon him as I did Plato but a greater than he. Taking the suggestion of Jesus as to praying to "thy Father in secret," for about seven years some time was given every night in "intending my mind" actively on this diviner part of myself. All my life was made to tend to the devotional attitude.

One night, after this seven years' period, I had hardly sat down in my privacy when several rapid, rosy electric waves swept downward and over me. Invisible fetters fell from me.

I stood up another being. The slow, lethargic bodily sensation vanished, and it seemed as though my body was composed of light and love.

The whole being became finer, more delicate, and all aglow in exquisite, serene and holy bliss.

Moreover, I had the innocence of childhood with one predominant idea—the "Christ child state."

There was healing in my hands and love in my heart. The glory of that presence did not entirely vanish for three days, when the charnel vapors of this earth compelled its departure to its own serene abode.

After a lapse of several years a similar phenomenon came about in the following manner:

Lying in my bed, late at night, my mind being normal and conducive to sleep, I suddenly became aware of an invisible and holy personage by my side. Naturally I am analytical and I closely analyzed this sacred phenomenon from its inception. It entered my body at the spleen and, inly ascending, pervaded my heart, breast and brain. It was like a beautiful, warm, rosy, blissful substance.

Slowly this holy presence absorbed my personal consciousness till there seemed but a spark left me to analyze and comprehend. I was borne aloft to the realms wherein our diviner souls have their being, moving in peace, love and harmony.

Ah, we have no idea of that heaven world!

Two predominant ideas were borne in upon me—great power and surpassing wisdom held only by virtue of obedience to the harmonious laws of nature.

So close was my comprehension that I asked, what about my sins? And the answer came clear, "Your sins concern you; you must atone."

Then ensued complete oblivion till the waking the next morning to the shadows of earth.

In the foregoing you have absolute verities. I should be doubly accursed were I deceiving you in one detail.

It is a piece of significant and singular good tidings to all men and women.

Now note the inevitable conclusions to be drawn:

1. If one man is so divinely blest by an inherent immortal soul, then all people must be so blest.

2. That love, harmony, unity, are the natural attributes of our souls, therefore, spiritually, there is a sacred and divine brotherhood of humanity moving always in accord with harmonious and universal laws.

Summed up: We are inherently noble, royal, immortal; and the brotherhood of man is a natural law—to be violated at our peril—and the ultimate goal to which all evolution tends.

What a sublime ideal! Adopt that as a working basis for our national life and civilization!

Let the diviner sympathies have their play!

Then how quickly would the centralization of wealth give way and make means to allay all poverty and gaunt want, banish misery, and introduce happiness. The greatness of a nation is in exact proportion to the happiness of all its people.

In conclusion I grant you this seeming mystery of the duality of the Soul.

But undoubtedly we draw our mental sustenance from that source.

How carefully, then, should we use our mental forces! What appalling adjustments await those who wilfully use it against humanity! The gamblers on the necessities of the people for instance!

I choose my words, and in view of the past and the present, I do not think them extravagant, and I give the lie direct to every church dogma, excepting the "communion of saints." It is time for plain speaking. For ages the church has given false doctrines, scared the people and well-nigh wrecked the present civilization with its awful man-made theories.

Now look to yourselves, priests, good and bad. Take the full responsibility of your teachings.

You yourselves will have to answer before a stern and implacable Justice. Would you scare me with your talk of an uneasy deathbed, as you tried to do to Thomas Paine? If so, I want to tell you that I gladly, so gladly would welcome release from this life to get far, far away from your Christian society; and from this earth which the church has made accursed.

"Words, phrases, fashions, pass away,
But Truth and Nature live through all."

WM. JOHN WARD.

Clinton, Iowa.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes 1 and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

THE THEODORE J. MAYER ENDOWMENT FUND.

Spiritualists of the World, a word with you.

Theodore J. Mayer has taken leave of earth.

Do you know what he has done for Spiritualism?

Do you know what he has done for you?

He has given $100,000 to our Cause in Twenty Years.

How?

He has paid liberal salaries to worthy mediums for spiritual work!

He has helped the sick, the needy and unfortunate!

He has supplied money needed in cases in court where worthy mediums have been persecuted because of their vocation.

He has given liberally to speakers and mediums in distress!

He has been a generous supporter of many local Spiritualist Societies!

He was one of the founders of our Pension Fund, giving $1,500 as his first offering.

He has given thousands to that same Fund since its establishment!

He has given large sums to the General Fund of the National Spiritualists' Association, and to its many activities he has been a loyal friend!

He gave the N. S. A. its present Headquarters, and has supplemented that gift with three other houses and lots adjoining Headquarters, making two brick and two frame dwellings now owned by the N. S. A.

All of these things you—we—owe to the generosity of one man—

THEODORE J. MAYER.

Do we not owe him something in return?

Do we not owe him a monument?

What kind of a monument would best please him?

Not one of bronze, nor of granite, nor of marble!

One of deeds rather!

He wants the N. S. A. made strong to do its needed work!

Such a monument would please him much in his spirit home!

Let us Build it—you and I!

HOW?

By establishing the Theodore J. Mayer Endowment Fund of $100,000!

Do we not owe this offering as a token of our gratitude to the good man gone?

There are 300,000 Spiritualists who are avowedly such in America to-day!

Surely every one of them loves Spiritualism one dollar's worth, both for his own and Mr. Mayer's sake!

Spiritualists of the World, Arouse yourselves! and do now this deed of love, out of your regard for the Cause and your affection for Mr. Mayer!

Let us honor his name and memory in this practical manner!

Send in your dollars at once, and induce your friends and neighbors to do likewise! Address your letters to

MRS. MARY T. LONGLEY.
600 Pa. Ave., S. E., Washington, D. C.

Mark thus:—ENDOWMENT FUND.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH

OR

Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid; and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?

Do you wish to develop Mediumship?

Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the

FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

The Development of the Spirit
After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Price, 10 cents.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic
By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. Price, paper, 25 cents.

BOOKS BY—

LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25. In this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful." Leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."

CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE; or Death as an Event in Life. cloth, $1.00 A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume.

CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends Discovered, not made; A Psychological Problem; The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Scorning Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in sorrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth. $1.25. Lilian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decorated cloth. $2.00

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. With Portraits. Decorated cloth. $1.25.

Womanly Beauty
ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

The Dark Seance.

J. C. Craig, a Prominent Lawyer of Los Angeles, Cal., and a most excellent medium, gives his experience in connection with the Cause at Toledo, Ohio.

To the Editor:—I realize how eager the world is becoming to learn of existence beyond the veil called death. We are grasping at each straw as a buoy to keep from sinking into the mire of materialism and to assist in rising out of the weird and uncomforting teachings of dogmatism. In this world of thought there are three classes, First, the ignorant wise, or those who claim to have sprung from Missouri, and must be shown, and who are so wise that they are unable to see except it be as they have read about in their own text book and measured according to their own narrow standard. The second class are those who have intelligence enough outside of what books they have read, and who are in fact, wise people, but are a trifle overzealous in giving credit to spirit forces which does not belong to the same. They have investigated and are not surprised at the many wonderful manifestations of spirit power, and yet are so happy with learning the truth of life that they do not always stop to discriminate between and are apt to credit too much to unseen forces. The third class are those who recognize the truth and have sufficient intellect to investigate and learn that spiritual phenomena are possible. This class call themselves the safe and sane, but like the others, they have some weaknesses. They are apt to stop too short of learning the whole truth, so that in any class we find there is some defeat, and that it is impossible to get the absolute perfect, for the perfect man has not yet manifested himself.

I shall not deal with the first class in this article, but will do so at some future time.

As to the second and third classes, in reference to one thing I desire to speak. I find that there are many people who know of the fact of spirit return, but who have not investigated far enough to know very much about the possibilities of spirit power, and who are ready and willing to deny the truth of many grand things which are absolutely as true and possible as continuity of life. They have foggy notions, and are like the gopher, they come to the surface just enough to keep alive. They are not willing at times to admit the possibilities of things unless it has been their experience. They are willing to cry fake and fraud, like the cawing of the crow at the first approach of imaginary danger to the nest. Some may be properly called "back numbers," while others may sometime moult and change their plumage, and some day be brighter birds. The second class especially are those too ready and willing to take in everything presented to their gaze as of the spiritual.

I believe in investigation, and I shall always be ready and willing to investigate every phase of mediumship, and I am willing to be gulled a few times to learn the exact truth.

Some time ago a Christian handed me a bogus dollar with some good silver dollars.

Now do you think that I was foolish enough to throw away all the money because one piece was a fraud?

No, I threw away the one and retained the others. Neither did I stop working for money because some of that which circulates for money was and is fraud.

So with phenomena—I shall keep on investigating and out of the whole I will get much good.

There has been much said about the appearance of spirit so as to be visible to the physical eye, and according to the degree of density it seems to take a different name. That to which I allude is called materialization. Personally I do not know. I am doubtful, although I am willing to learn. I am not willing to say that many of my friends who implicitly believe in it are mistaken because I have not witnessed the genuine. I may become discouraged in trying to get the genuine, by finding so much fraud, but I am willing to learn, and when I find the genuine I am willing to herald it from the housetops I am not afraid to acknowledge spirit return, nor that there are many things which can be done by spirit forces.

Some people say all dark seances are a fraud, but they are the children or offspring of the ignorant wise. It was the dark seance which brought many a person out of darkness to light, and the dark seances have their places in the work of teaching the people, as any other phase of mediumship. There are people who never would know the truth were it not for the closed blinds. Yet the dark seances afford a greater opportunity of palming off the imitation for the genuine to a much better advantage, just the same as the party mixed the bogus dollars with the good when he paid me in the twilight. But let us be careful and neither condemn too hastily nor be too ready to accept everything as genuine, for in either event we may be mistaken. My own experience has taught me to go slow and to use some reason in all things. I have never seen a genuine materialization—or at any rate, I have not seen such as I believe to be genuine—yet intelligent, honest people declare it to be possible and to have witnessed it.

In the fall of 1906 I attended a supposed materialization at Toledo, O. The medium, a lady, gives her demonstrations for the benefit of her friends. Her seance room is a sitting-room, and the cabinet is a part of a hall-way which is accessible from the kitchen, dining-room and the up-stairs occupied by her boarders. At the first meeting the materialized forms came to the curtain with sufficient strength to walk, bow, etc., but not enough to utter a word above a whisper, and not even a distinct syllable until some sitter was charitable enough to imagine a likeness. Some looked as though they had materialized their face in the flour barrel and retained all but the staves; others had the fragrance of an onion bed, and some even worse—something like the fumes from a soap factory, but it was materialized (?) breath.

Later on and during the last of November again I attended her seance, but before the show began, and under promise of no exposure I was told how to hold a materializing seance, and that if I would call the next day I would be given the name and address of some firm who made all the paraphernalia necessary for a first-class exhibition. I was treated very kindly at the seance, and I remained for the purpose of gaining information as to how the affair was conducted. She also told me that any person could give a materialization if they were slick enough and had someone to attend to the curtain who was friendly. She also disclaimed any belief in Spiritualism. That evening was a repetition of the first but not so smoothly done. I was taken into the cabinet and was also allowed to stand by the curtain and to touch the spirits, which honor was not given other friends. One spirit (?) was so anxious to see his wife that his moustache fell off. I did not return the next day to get information as to the makers of the paraphernalia, but I would like to have one of those illuminated flags, Mr. Editor, which she had, and which are often used. The same medium told me of other people who represented themselves as materializing mediums, and who obtained their goods from the same firm.

Now shall I give up in despair and cry fraud? No, I shall keep on investigating, for I firmly believe that the time will come when the physical eye, under certain conditions, will be enabled to behold more clearly our spirit friends.

I do not expect to see them everywhere on the street, but I do believe that our physical eye may be developed and with the development of the spirit forces we will live in closer touch.

I have witnessed some excellent demonstrations in the dark seance, and the entire world would not be able to change my mind as to the genuineness of those manifestations, but I shall not join the rabble who disclaim other manifestations because I have not witnessed them. I have my own notions about materialization; it may not be as strong as the opinion of others in some respects, but I am like an Ohio politician who was always "in a receptive mood." I am willing to have the scales fall, and will not pre-judge. However, let us all reason for ourselves and be not too willing to accept everything as the truth. There are pretenders everywhere who are willing to dupe us if they can, and in the end it only hurts us when we learn that we have been duped. It would be better to belong to the ignorant smart class than to be too gullible.

The lady whose seance I have mentioned does not believe in spirit return, and it is by that class we may be taken in, and when the truth appears, unless we have witnessed enough of the good things in spirit manifestations we are apt to give up our investigation in utter disgust.

The fakirs have done more to bring disgrace to the cause than anything else could do, yet Spiritualism is a truth and nothing can injure it, except in name.

We have no use for buzzards and vultures, but they will hang around, and it seems as if we could not get rid of them. When some are exposed their friends will still cling to them as being misused.

Sometimes I feel that an exposure does no good, for the people who are constantly fooled by the faker will always be fooled, and are willing to be fooled, and the more that is said against the faker, the more will some people rally round them.

J. C. CRAIG.

Los Angeles, Cal.

BOWER OF BEAUTY LYCEUM.

Report of the Work for the Year Ending February, 1907.

Dear Children, Sisters and Brothers of the Lyceum Work:—Again it becomes my sweet privilege to review the work of the past year and submit to you the sixth annual report of the Bower of Beauty Lyceum of Monson, Maine. As we look carefully over the work of the past year we feel certain that the word failure need not be written upon it, although it has been the hardest year we have experienced. Still we move on with courage, knowing full well our arisen loved ones will still assist us. You will remember that our last report contained a notice of the transition of our beloved leader, Mrs. Delan S. Drake. Her home, in which was the Bower of Beauty Lyceum room, passed into other hands and so we had to give up that sacred meeting-place. The year before, Grandpa Drake, another devoted lyceum soul, left us. So sometimes the way has seemed drear without the physical forms of the dear souls who loved us best, but their spiritual presences are often manifest to us, so we still press on.

The loss of our lyceum lesson paper, The Progressive Lyceum, edited by our noble self-sacrificing Brother John W. Ring, has been a sore trial to us. We mourn its loss, but to help ourselves over that hard place, we (having a complete file of the four years' issues) are reviewing the lesson papers and find we are receiving much good.

Our membership from other towns in the state has increased, and we now have 48 members, only about one-fourth residing in Monson, but our members from other towns keep in touch with us by sending verses for "Flower Basket" and small contributions as they are able to help on the work.

We have some aged members who deserve especial mention, one of them has upon several occasions driven through the cold piercing air fourteen miles to be with us in our lyceum. Others in feeble conditions have written to us sending beautiful thoughts.

During the year faithful members have been doing what they could to get a library for the Bower of Beauty Lyceum. We have now 25 volumes, and would gladly receive many more.

Ulmer Stevens Coy, our one-year-old member, has only been absent from our lyceum a very few Sundays since he came to earth to live. He behaves very nicely, and while as yet he takes no part except to make a sunshiny corner, we feel sure he is drinking in these grand spiritual truths, and will become a better man because of the hours of his babyhood spent in the lyceum room.

I am sure if all friends of the lyceum cause could know our struggles, our great efforts, during the past year, they would send to the Bower of Beauty lyceum loving thoughts, earnest prayers, visible expressions of their interest for the children.

We hold our sessions regularly every Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, not in our sweet beautiful lyceum room as of old, but in our own home for a time, until something better may come. We will not give up, for we realize the great value of the lyceum, and know that the hope of the world lies in teaching all children the truth. Outwardly our success during the past year has been small, but the inward unfolding has been great, and we know every effort has been well repaid through the real soul growth apparent in our children's lives. So, dear friends, never forget lyceum work pays and is always worthy of our best efforts. Children are the rarest, sweetest, best of all gifts given to us. We only get the best out of life when we pour into their sweet lives the sunlight of truth and help them to naturally unfold and progress. Always and ever for the lyceum work, I am, fraternally yours,

MRS. MARY DRAKE JENNE,
Secretary of Bower of Beauty Lyceum,
Monson, Maine.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties, needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Materialization." By Mme. Ad-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.
Price, 20 cents.

AN ETERNAL PAST,

It Is the Basis of Immortality Future.

To the Editor:—In the long ago, before the "Great Fire," I lived in your city, and was conversant with the trend of spiritual thought, was acquainted with Mr. Jones, the founder of the Religio Philosophical Journal, and remember conversing with him on the same subject that Dr. J. H. Mendenhall discusses in the paper before me, viz.: "Fake Seances," and "Spiritualistic Frauds;" also the lack of a defined and authorized "Standard Spiritualism," discussed in the article beside his, by Frederick A. Wiggin. And I must say it seems very strange that in all these past years there has not been power enough evolved from the union of the intelligence of the earth and the spheres, to have settled both questions long ago.

But I have an idea that there is a question of individualism that enters into the subject, that must be cognized and properly dealt with, before any standard of Spiritualism can be set up and maintained. Spirits, so-called, are individuals, and are found to maintain their individual opinions and present their individual understanding and knowledge of conditions in the spheres toward which we are all truly tending; again in the expression of those varying opinions and understandings there is no select highway or pathway, there is only the broad, open road where each and all can travel who may be able to develop the power of locomotion thereon; that is to say, the law of control is general, so it matters not what the moral tendency and development of the controling spirit may be, so far as the law of control is concerned, the lowest has the same right to express his or her opinion as the highest and most fully unfolded soul has.

Now, under such conditions suppose an honest investigator desires to learn the truth of the conditions on the thither shore, and has opportunities to converse with spirits from different planes of different spheres of the realms beyond the mist of time, and they do not agree, as they certainly will not, is he not bound to be led into a mental morass in regard to the whole subject? But if an honest investigator from another locality desires to learn the truth of the conditions of the planet earth he would not expect that a Bushman or any ignorant human could teach the truth of the conditions of earth where they had never been; so it is with the denizens of the spheres, each can tell truthfully only the part or parts where their powers from soul unfoldment will permit them to go, and gather knowledge from direct contact and experience.

Soul unfoldment furnishes the power that enables a spirit to climb toward the heights of perfect attainment in the beyond; it operates there as persistently as does the law of gravitation on the earth plane, and the lack of it relegates a spirit to its own plane and place, even as gravitation holds a rock to the bosom of earth; this being true, how can you establish a standard based upon the conditions in spirit life, even the absolute truth of that realm, which is far more varied in its constitution and characteristics than is the earth plane, and far more difficult to describe on account of the poverty of earth-language and the constitutional difference between earth and spirit realms?

However, if a move is to be made to establish some standard, I would suggest that the committee be of those who dare to question the heights and obtain the truthful version from that source, showing, What we are, from whence we are, why we are, whither we go, and what we will find. Now I am free to state that a standard declaring the truth upon those five points cannot be raised without establishing the principle of real immortality, an immortality that holds an eternal past record upon which an eternal future may be predicated; an immortality that has a beginning in principle, is no immortality, is not worthy of the name. Again, those several vital points cannot be established without recourse to and acceptance of the fact of the soul's many unfoldments in clothing of earth; in order to do that the eternal persistency of the individualized atom of God denominated Soul, must be recognized and carefully presented.

If all this can be done, you will have reared a spiritual standard that will recognize the right of every individual soul to express its own attainments, God-given in principle, and soul-attained through persistent efforts to master adverse conditions of earth, and thus unfold its divine attributes which were entirely germinal at the starting out to attain active self-consciousness, which had been passive ever before.

I have written this much, hoping you will see fit to print it in The Progressive Thinker, for it may bring out thought from those who think to some purpose, and inasmuch as I have subscribed for the paper, I can note what effect is produced.

Hoping for valuable results, I am sincerely yours,

E. R. ROCKWOOD.

Fruitvale Cal.

Christening Children.

Why Do Some Spiritualists Follow a Pagan-Romish Custom?

To the Editor:—Your faithful messenger, The Progressive Thinker, never fails to reach its destination every week, and I am like a strong, healthy growing youth, always ready to eat at meal time, and more especially so, when I know the table will be spread with good, wholesome food, suited to my special taste. So it is with your weekly messenger of good cheer, mentally and spiritually, because I realize more and more, all the time, that there is something dwells within this body, that requires daily food, as well as the body itself. In my youth I was taught to call it soul, but no matter what we call it, I for one, know that it is a living, moving, craving something, that is ever seeking to be satisfied, and the reason why I am moved to write these thoughts to you is because I also find something in your great "Thinker" to give me new life, new hope, and new ambition to live, and do the best I can while living, and a stronger hope in the future, no matter in what form it may be.

But, I must not omit to state to you a special reason why I address you at this hour. Having just picked up the Thinker of February 9, for another general survey of its contents and especially the department under the heading "General Survey," in whic I always find something suggestive and otherwise instructive. I want to call special attention to a communication in the third column under that heading, and near the bottom, which says, a lecturer used flowers in the christening of five children in the San Diego, Cal., Spiritualist's Temple, Sunday, January 6."

I will say, that I am a large way on the road to what is commonly, and erroneously called the allotted age of man, and have seen, studied, and read considerable about such matters, and ordinances; but have never had the pleasure of listening to a Spiritualist deliver a discourse, or witnessed a seance, but I have noticed from time to time in The Progressive Thinker, that some Spiritualists practice that, to me, misleading custom, (if they like that word better) of "Christening," a term, and a custom (although the originators of it call it a "divine ordinance"). So misleading is such a term and such a custom to me that I should have to undergo a great change of mind before I could bring myself to be a voluntary witness of such a popish institution.

I was born and raised in England, and as my good sincere parents were members of what is known as the Established Church, I as well as my nine brothers and sisters, (so I was told, and the popish register would show it) were initiated into not only that offshoot of the Romish church, but also by the same act of "Christening" into the kingdom of heaven by the manipulation of a few drops of water on or from the tips of the fingers of the priestly manipulator, whereby, according to his priestly dictum I had been changed from a child of the devil to a child of God and a sure inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Then, as I grew into a youth, I had to attend the only school there was for such as I to attend, i. e., what was known as "The National School" dominated over entirely by the National Church, wherein my mind was again trained not only to acknowledge the act of "Christening" as being of divine origin, but against my intuitive common sense, (which asserted itself when I was quite young). I was made under penalty of punishment for disobedience to an absolute command, to say when and every time I repeated the Church Catechism, that I believed all such nonsense to be true.

So repulsive was that misleading doctrine to me in my youth that I resolved that if in the course of my life I should become the father of a family of children, no man or anyone else in the capacity of priest or teacher should with my consent, ever attempt to place a hand on a child of mine, and I kept my resolve, although at great cost, through my strong affection for the angel mother of my children. In my boyhood the Bible, and especially what is known as the New Testament was the only reader that was used in the National School, Consequently I became pretty well acquainted with the history of Jesus of Nazareth, and his immediate followers, as given in that book, and I never could make the church teachings and practices agree with the New Testament record but continued to be a student from that time until now, and expect to continue as such as long as mind, soul, spirit, or whatever else it is that leads us on, shall continue the leadership.

At the age of twelve and a half years, my good, kind, loving parents had to take me from the only school I ever attended until I was past twenty-five, in order to help them earn a scant living. At twenty-five I had reached the continent and was located in what is now known as the Dominion of Canada, where I became a member of the Baptist church, under the rules and regulations governing the same.

At the end of four years I drifted back to England, primarily on account of ill health; secondarily, to help comfort my good parents in their declining years. During my sojourn of seven years there, I saw the mortal remains of my parents laid to rest in mother earth, amongst the dust of all my ancestors so far as I know anything about them. During those seven years, the last I spent in England, I had many opportunities to continue my studies, about half of which I spent in London, and was a member of what was known as The Metropolitan Tabernacle Church, presided over by that once noted preacher, known as Charles Haddon Spurgeon, with whom I was personally acquainted.

Circumstances took me out of London into a country village, near where I spent my boyhood, to superintend the pulling down of an old church edifice, and to rebuild the same, which, being constructed of stone, occupied my attention for about twenty months, during which I became quite well acquainted with the clergyman, as all the Established Church Ministers are called, and it is in order to more clearly establish my reason for being opposed to the "Christening" custom that I recite this incident of my acquaintance with him. In the old church edifice referred to there were some relics of Norman architecture, and Norman art, including a very large stone basement fount, large enough to immerse a common sized child in from one to twelve months old. The clergyman informed me that the fount was a very precious relic, because there were only three of them then in existence in England. It was the first that I had seen of such a large size, consequently it became a study to me. The clergyman asked me as a personal favor to take particular care of that precious font, have it taken out of the church carefully, box it up, mark the spot on the plans so that if either of us should not be there when the church was completed, anyone could place the font in the old position.

I agreed to do so, but intentionally neglected to carry out his instructions because I wanted to discuss the font, as an out-of-date and useless relic. The opportunity came, when I suggested that as the real use and intention of the font had been abandoned, it had become useless, and therefore of no value. I also saw that the font itself was a silent monitor of the fact that the so-called Christian Church had not leaped at one bound from the primitive custom of practicing what the New Testament recorded and taught in relation to baptism, for while they had abandoned the ceremony of baptism on the profession of faith of the candidate, they still clung to the mode of baptism by immersion, at the time the font in question was brought into use, and I raised the question with the clergyman on this issue because, as I argued with him that a teaspoon would hold all the water that the established church then used in the ceremony that they called baptism, because all that they do is dip a finger in water and make the sign of the cross on the child's forehead and call that baptism. He granted me the truth of my position, and then endeavored to prove to me that as they the clergy, representing the only true church, were in the direct line of apostolic descent, that they could and did change ordinances and articles of faith to suit occasions, and being ordained of God to represent him in this work, it became as thoroughly of divine authenticity as the primitive mode; and he could have said without any fear of contradiction, and a great deal easier in Manipulation.

Now, to the point, Mr. Editor. On what grounds or pretense does any teacher or preacher, justify himself or herself, in even seeming to pattern after a Pagan Romish ceremony in this advanced, enlightened age? I have no difficulty in seeing the reason why Presbyterianism, Methodism, and other such isms, cling to such Romish ideas, because they are young papacies themselves, but for unique Spiritualism to do so puzzles a student.

G. A.

SOMEWHAT CRITICAL.

In Reference to Works That Treat of the Spirit Realms.

I have been for years trying to find some book that gives the actual conditions of spirit life in the beyond as accepted by the leading and highest expounders of Spiritualism, or to get from the many books purporting to give these conditions some general idea or consensus of facts in which all accounts are in harmony. Some of these conditions are too fanciful; some apparently too realistic; some appear to be gotten up to "cater" to orthodox Christian notions, so as not to offend or too rudely shock their ideas; this is probably a good idea as a matter of policy, and is best for the cause, but it must be what they do tell us.

If, when we pass out we simply stand on the outer side, the self-same person, having a spiritual body as tangible to spirit vision as the physical body is to the natural eye, I see no lack of language to say so.

If it is possible that the spirit can look down and see the physical body, stand by the grave and see that body laid in the grave, see and hear the expressions of sorrow from those friends, can return to earth, visit their old homes, can see their friends left behind, can minister to them and console them by the influence, although unseen by mortal eyes, I see no lack of words to express it.

If birds or animals of any kind are there, or are not there, we have words to express that; in that I see no lack of language to plainly state the contradictions we find in the different accounts, and while spirits in all probability cannot describe the beauty and perfection of the spirit spheres, cannot describe to our comprehension the causes or laws by which mountains, valleys, rivers, mansions, etc., they do or do not exist. I see no lack of language to tell us the actual conditions as they find them.

Cannot travelers in the world tell us of the grand scenery of other countries, the mountains, the lakes, the rivers?

It seems to me that spirits or mediums—more likely the mediums—still are influenced by the old ideas that every living thing relative to a life beyond must necessarily be mixed up with mysticism and supernaturalism.

We find that Spiritualists who have come from the orthodox churches almost invariably persist in hitching their old customs and ideas on to Spiritualism—their bible, their prayers, their christening of children, their baptism, their "Rev." etc.

If I study astronomy I gain nothing by reading some work not recognized as authority by astronomy. If I study medical science, I gain nothing by reading a lot of stuff not accepted by medical men. If I wish to inform myself on electricity, I gain nothing by reading a whole lot of works thereon not recognized as of any authority by electricians. If I wish to gain a knowledge of what Spiritualism teaches, I gain nothing by reading any number of books thereon not recognized as authority by the best informed Spiritualists, and it is begging the question for the astronomer, the electrician, the Spiritualist, etc., to say, you must read these books and then use your own reason and your judgment as to what is true.

Arlington, O. S. F. MOORE.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies; a Review of Rev. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated attacks upon Spiritualism." By Moses Hull. Price, 10 cents.

[Advertisement.]

A Powerful Strange Force

THat Would Do Away With the Mails, Telepathy and Drugs.

Would Be But Little More Startling Than the Marvelous Things Done by People Who Have Tried This Wonderful System.

How Prominent Men and Women Use It to Influence the Minds of Others—Heal Themselves and Others of Chronic Diseases, Nervous Disorders and Habits as If by Magic—Any One Can Do It—Distance No Barrier—One Person's Control Over Another Now Fully Explained.

How Every Man, Woman and Child in the World Can Have "The Secrets of Magnetic Force, Health and Power" Absolutely Free.

Professor F. T. McIntyre, a well-to-do scientist of this city, has created a sensation in the hypnotic world. Through delving down in the realms of nature's mysteries he has discovered a delicate but powerful system that seems destined to revolutionize the theories of the most noted authorities on Mind Force. Some people look upon him as a man possessing a strange power, for he has told them how to influence people far and near and to heal themselves and others of their ills as if by magic. He tells them how to project their thoughts, develop a powerful mentality and build up the mechanism of the body and brain. Doctors and magnetists who have tested the workings of his new discovery admit that it surpasses anything in the history of psychic power.

In explaining the method Professor McIntyre says: "I am convinced that everybody can accomplish the things I have done if they understand the system. It would be a grand thing if every man, woman and child in this country learned the use of this wonderful system. There should be no more disease, immorality, drunkenness, despondency, separations, poverty or failures in life. I have sent free illustrated pamphlets to people in many parts of the world, which explain the principles of my new discovery, and I find they can do the same wonderful things I have done, and for which some persons think I possess a special power. I have sent these printed pamphlets out without any charge whatever, as I am anxious to have every one try the wonders of this new discovery. The letters received from persons who tried it are the same. Many are loud in their exclamations of surprise and thanks, and say they never dreamed such things possible. I receive many fine presents and enjoy working for the uplifting of mankind and science. The kind letters received from grateful hearts more than pay for the interest I take. I will send a copy of my free book to every person who writes me without any charge whatever."

Professor McIntyre has a basketful of letters, from people in many parts of the world. They are, indeed, startling. Mr. James Kubal, a prominent business man of Chicago, writes the following:

"I never dreamed such things possible. If I had only known of this sooner. This system has made a different man of me. I shall give up business and make more money through the use of this system than I can in my business. It has brought back my sight. I can see without glasses, and work without them, too. It has overcome my backwardness, and I can now handle my customers in fine shape. I did not know I was so full of the magnetism. I think your system wonderful."

Mr. Eugene Devenson, Baton Rouge, La., writes: "Having tried your system, I unhesitatingly pronounce it to be and to do all you claim for it."

Rev. E. G. King, pastor Christian Church, Upper Lake, Cal., writes: "I cannot recommend your system too highly, and I am willing to answer any inquiries in regard to it."

Dr. H. A. Lounsburg, Wheatly, Ontario, Canada, writes: "I have thoroughly investigated the methods and inventions of Professor McIntyre, and can say that his system is scientific and surpasses anything in the line of therapeutics that has come to my notice."

Fred S. Brett, Apartado 285, Guadalajara, Mexico, writes: "I have done wonderful things in influencing people with this system. Have had over 50 persons under my control and compelled them to do startling things. I advise everybody to try it. This system is truly marvelous."

This free book is full of startling explanations and pictures, showing that any one can master, in a short time, the power to control and sway the minds of others. It describes the strange phenomena of Psychic and Hypnotic Influence. Mystic Healing, Psycho and Suggestive Therapeutics, Personal Magnetism, and a combined, simple system of reading the characters of others, though thousands of miles away. It gives you the key to the development of the inner or dormant forces of concentration, force of character, will power, memory, determination, ambition, enthusiasm, inspiration, continuity of thought and the ability to throw off the evil effects of disease and despondency.

It is, indeed, one of the most amazingly interesting books of the age, beaming with interest from cover to cover, and all who receive free copies of it can be thankful. It points out the road to financial and social success; it reveals astonishing facts that have been overlooked by the public for many years.

If you wish a free copy of this wonderful book write a postal or letter to Professor F. T. McIntyre, Dept. 1626, No. 126 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, N. Y. All who write will receive it; no one will be disappointed. It is sent by mail, postage paid, absolutely free.

"AS IT IS TO BE."

A Very Suggestive Work Which Beams With Spiritual Truths.

This is a beautiful book, by Cora Lynn Daniels, and it scintillates with grand spiritual thought. An idea of this work can be obtained by reading the titles of a few of the chapters therein:

The process of Dying; Light and Spirit; The Law of Attraction; Senses of the Spirit; What is unconscious Will; Fear; Astrology; The God-Soul of Man; The Drama; A Day in Heaven. Price $1.00.

ASTRAL WORSHIP By J. H. Hill, M.D. A valuable contribution to the current discussion of religious problems. The author by illustrations and a planisphere (a representation of the celestial sphere upon a plane with adjustable circles), traces most of the myths which lie at the base of Christianity to their origin in sun and star worship. The astronomical facts given possess great value, the illustrations rare and curious. The book is bound in only one style—heavy boards. Price $1.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man; Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How It Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary; "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office.

Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper 50c.

MEDIUMSHIP and Its DEVELOPMENT, and how to Mesmerize to Assist Development. By W. H. Bach. Paper 25 cents;

MOLLIE FANCHER,
The Brooklyn Enigma.

An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50.

The Influence of the Zodiac Upon Human Life,
With Character Readings of Persons Born Upon the Cusp.

The principles found in this volume are both a science and a religion, for a better and a far happier humanity. It points to the planets as an index to the human character and liability to diseases; also gives the gems and colors suited to temperaments evolved under certain planets. But the author, ELEANOR HIRK, lays special stress upon the fundamental principle that "All maladies known to man can be entirely dominated, forever cast out, by those who realize that mind is the master and body the servant." Price, cloth, $1.00.

ORIGIN OF LIFE
and How the Spirit Body Grows. By M. Faraday. Price, 10c. For sale at this office

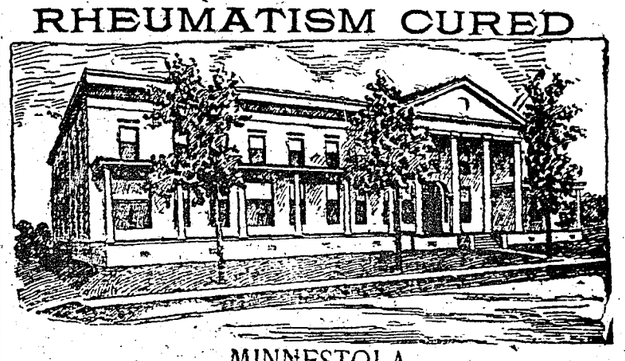
WOMAN: Her Centuries of Progress. A Lecture delivered at the Freethinker's International Congress, Chicago, Ill., October, 1893. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, 10c.

RIGHT LIVING
— BY —
SUSAN H. WIXON,
Author of "Apples of Gold," "All in a Lifetime," "The Story Hour," "Summer Days at Onset," "Sunday Observance," etc., etc.

"Living is an art, a method of expressing great conceptions; in fact, the highest method, the noblest of the arts."—THOMAS STARR KING.

This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book especially adapted to the comprehension of children, as well as older persons whom it is wisely and appropriately designed to interest while teaching them valuable ethical lessons.

The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principles of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in children's lyceums. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it.



The Majesty of Calmness, The Kingship of Self-Control,

- Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the
- New Thought.

They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price, 80 cents each.

THE SOUL: ITS NATURE, RELATIONS AND EXPRESSIONS IN HUMAN EMBODIMENTS. Third edition now on sale. Price $1.00. This is one of the best books given by the guides of Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond. They are really lessons, published primarily, as a book of reference for those who have been members of the classes receiving them. This volume is a careful compilation from reports of lessons, containing the bases of the teachings.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS,
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Don't Hob-Nob With Satan.

"We ought to watch night and day to keep Satan out of the household; for if ever he gets his head in he will never be content until his whole body is in."

Thus Rev. Dr. Wylie, pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian church of New York. Is it not possible too much attention is given to the doings of the Devil by churchmen, and too little to their own conduct? Because of that little tete a tete of Jesus with his Satanic majesty, while seated on "a pinnacle of the temple," and later, on "an exceeding high mountain," Jesus' disciples have been suspicious of him. They should be made to understand the devil covets larger game than common mortals. Milton, for authority, he, Satan, waged for a time a war with God Almighty, and had the best of it on the first day; but, defeated, he, God, was reinforced by his Son, born of a Jewish mother 4,000 years later, who, with lightning for a weapon, the prince of darkness was defeated, and was thrown over the battlements, from which he fell down, down "nine days" says Milton, into the bottomless pit. There he collected his forces, and through all the subsequent years has been augmented by more than ninety-nine one-hundredths of all the souls which have peopled this earth. All the great conquerors, and all the scientists have joined him, whilst, as Prof. Denton told it, "heaven has only gained the idiots, the infants, their mothers, possibly, and the preachers," in another light, with such an innumerable force to contend with, and with feeble support, it is questionable if the "Lord of Hosts" can hold his own.

The conclusion of the whole matter is, the preacher and his friends should be careful of their own conduct, and never imitate the master by hob-nobbing with Satan.

A Base Occupation of the Soul.

Wm. Hazlett, a learned English critic and miscellaneous writer, died in 1830, thus discoursed on death and beyond. He said:

"Death cancels everything but truth, and strips a man of everything but genius and virtue. It is a sort of natural canonization. It makes the meanest of us sacred; it installs the poet in his immortality, and lifts him to the skies. Death is the great assayer of the sterling ore of talent. At his touch the drossy particles fall off—the irritable, the personal, the gross—and mingle with the dust; the finer and more ethereal part mounts with the winged spirit to watch over our latest memory, and protect our ashes from insult. We consign the least worthy qualities to oblivion, and cherish the nobler and imperishable nature with double pride and fondness."

"The winged spirits" is a euphemism, borrowed from Babylonian mythology. That people gave wings to their gods and to their attendants. The Jews, after their captivity in Babylon, taking the Bible for authority seem to have carried back with them to Jerusalem the ideas gained from their masters, and thereafter, instead of the ladder Jacob saw in his dream, or the spiral roadway around the tower of Babel to heaven, just above cloudland, they had wings "to mount, to fly."

Whilst Hazlett was doubtless correct in crediting the soul with being the finer and more ethereal part of the gross body, that part of which Spiritualists now teach is the soul, he conveys the idea that their future mission is to "watch over our memory and protect our bones from insult," a very humble and unworthy duty, nearly on a par with orthodox teaching, that it will spend eternity in singing "glory, glory, glory, to God and the Lamb forever."

Platitudes against sin are as harmful as applause for sin.—Anon.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

Tainted and Blood Money.

Many years ago an anti-slavery lecturer made the statement that Liverpool, the great commercial metropolis of the world, owed its magnificence to the African slave trade. He said the ships engaged in that devilish traffic were generally fitted out in the Liverpool port; that they were manned by English seamen; and set out on their voyages of plunder and crime for the wharves of that great city. Because of that terrible traffic in the lives and liberty of a barbarian people, whom the Pope at Rome had made subjects for avarice and bondage, Liverpool became the prosperous city it now is, with her whitened sails in every port. The casuist searching for facts would find every block of stone, every brick, and every grain of mortar represented the agony, the tears and groans of those who had been torn from kindred, home and loved ones, to minister to the enslavers' cupidity.

The Christian press has been very severe during the last year or two on "TAINTED MONEY." Some of the churches declined to accept donations from Rockefeller and other capitalists, "because," said they, "the money is tainted." But in the lecturer's story, whether true or false we do not undertake to say, we see how a great city may have grown to its mammoth proportions on blood money.

Do Christians ever stop to consider that it was cupidity of the priesthood, and the terrible crimes for which the system is responsible, Christianity has become the great power it is to-day?

Roman Catholics are the parents of Protestantism. Had there been no Catholics there could not have been any protest against the damnable methods employed to propagate the Christian faith. There would have been no sale of "criminal indulgences," which aroused Luther and his associates to action. Those indulgences licensed the commission of crime. They were inspired by the need of money, tainted money, if the reader pleases, to construct St. Peters at Rome. That tainted money enabled the parent Christian church to build the most gorgeous temple of the ages. The great churches and cathedrals all over Christendom, each one has a story of its own. Bankers, ambitious to gain the applause of the church, have stolen the deposits of widows and orphans deposited in those banks, and given it to rear palaces for God, then have fled; some were pursued, arrested, convicted, and are now doing service to the State; while the poor victims are suffering in penury and want for the money thus criminally stolen and given to the church. Was not such money tainted with crime?

Now some startling facts:

The Inquisition, with all its awful horrors, furnishes material from which Christians must recoil! But for that institution, sanctioned by priest, prelate and Pope, and approved by governments, Christianity would not be what it is to-day. Possibly it would have ceased to be. Because of it they who opposed its infernal teaching got a foretaste of that hell which human demons invented and imposed on humanity as an institution of God. The "believe or be damned" was made by it a realistic affair in this life.

The victims of the Inquisition were either men of learning, or of wealth. Frequently of both. Their estates were always confiscated. Half went to the papal treasury, probably to be expended for propaganda purposes; the other half to the Inquisitors. Historians of the times say: frequently the principal incentives to prosecution of persons for heresy, was to supply the needs of their empty treasury. Money was indispensable, and human rights were not considered of any account by an unfeeling hierarchy.

The "Holy Inquisition" was founded by Pope Innocent IV., in 1243. Its power was firmly established in Italy, Spain, Germany, and in the southern provinces of France. Its influence was interrupted to some extent by the Reformation, about the middle of the 16th century, but it was not formally abrogated until 1808, and then by Napoleon. It is thought to be still in force to a small extent in the secret councils of the Jesuits. The Encyclopedia Britannica, article "Inquisition," says:

"And now again, from 1878 to this day, a crowd of defenders has risen up: Father Wieser and the Innsbruck Jesuits, in their journal 1877, yearn for its re-establishment."

We greatly condense, but the following is mostly extracted from page 93, Vol. XIII. of the Encyclopedia Britannica:

"It was the uniform practice of the Inquisition to confiscate the estates of those charged with heresy. The hope of a rich booty from confiscations was a characteristic which specially marks the history of the Spanish Inquisition. King Ferdinand, led by his hunger for gold, and Queen Isabella, guided by her piety, encouraged the Inquisition. Persons accused were usually among the wealthiest in the land. Bad blood was aroused between the Pope and the Inquisitors growing out of a division of the spoils. The officials were well paid for their services out of the confiscation fund. It was the interest of all that this stream of wealth should never run dry. The money question came up perpetually in all heresy trials."

Thus it appears money saturated with blood and life, was an important factor in the propagation of Christianity, and every available method was employed to gain it. We are all rejoiced that the leaders now recoil at a simple taint, which probably reminds them of the noxious odors of the late past. As time advances is it not hopeful they will discover that a system of religion whose history all along the ages, was marked by fraud and violence, is a false religion? And should it not give way to the new, founded on knowledge and spirit revelation, which has no angered God to placate; has made no sacrifice of life; never had a smoking altar reeking with blood; nor a demon damned; nor a flaming hell; and has not propagated its truths by wealth wrested from anguished and impoverished wife and babes, whose protector was tortured, and burned, that his accumulations of long years of toil and frugality might minister to the propagation of a damnable creed, and the support of a vicious priesthood, who preached the love of God to the end that they could the more successfully rob and enslave humanity.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

Nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interchange of power, pressed too far and relaxed too much.—Bacon.

Drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt nor his wife a widow.—John Neal.

Another Thoughtful Minister.

Rev. Gustavus Tuckerman, of Boston, formerly of New York and St. Louis, late of the Episcopal church, has voluntarily closed his connection with his church, because he could no longer accept the teachings of that denomination regarding the trinity, and the virgin birth of Jesus. He has subsequently connected himself with the Unitarians.

Bishop Dr. Greer, of New York, says of Rev. Tuckerman: "There is nothing whatever in his moral character which can be criticised." From this it appears the seceding clergyman had too much brains, and good, practical common sense to believe the nonsensical story of the "immaculate conception," a tale for the marines.

The time is not distant when Spiritualism, purified, and its truths better known, will be frequently augmented by those who dare think, now in the churches. Only gross ignorance, thoughtlessness or violence, could have imposed a virgin-born God on the world, with an inspired Bible, written by rude barbarians, to sustain the fraud.

Gross Ignorance.

A Yale Professor, referring to the prevalent ignorance of students in college, says:

"If all the undergraduates in American colleges could be placed in one room and tested by a common examination on the stories of the Old Testament, the result would be a magnificent contribution to American humor."

Whether that statement is complimentary or otherwise to the students depends on the view a person takes of many of those stories. Those who receive as a fact that God wrestled with Jacob all night, put his thigh out of joint, and was face to face in conversation with the patriarch, would probably be vexed, instead of humored, to see the incredulity on the part of the students who should attempt to relate the adventure. A thousand other stories, found in the same old book would excite mirth, if told by a thinker, and we suspicion it would cause derision.

Money in Religious Leadership.

Mrs. Eddy, of Christian Science fame., has appointed a Board of Trustees to care for her property. She claims other demands on her time were too great to permit personal attention to pecuniary interests.

It seems to be a money-making business to be at the head of a great religious movement. Joe Smith, Brigham Young, Dowie, and Mrs. Eddy, all were in an impoverished condition when they entered on their mission, and all accumulated large estates. Smith lost his life at the hands of a mob while the Mormon movement was yet in its experimental stage, hence was the least successful of the entire quartet.

IMPRESSIVE THOUGHTS.

From An Inspired Lecture, Delivered at Meadville, Pa., April 7, by Helen Stuart-Richings.

It is a law of nature that everything conceivable has its opposite, night is the opposite of day; down is the opposite of up; darkness is the opposite of light. There is no truth which in its logical extreme is not false; no virtue that exaggeration will no make into a vice. One may travel so far west as to find himself in the east. Knowledge of this law, and observation of the results of intercourse with the spirit world, lead one irresistibly to the conclusion that there is a dark as well as a radiant side to Spiritualism; that, on the one hand it is helpful, and on the other dangerous; that, in contradistinction to its power to bless and uplift, is its power to degrade and enslave.

Pressing through the open gates are angels—and devils.

Hence the need of preparation before rushing into mediumship.

If, instead of the outward preparation of special room, adorned and beautified for the seance, filled with the fragrance of flowers, and burning spices, we would throw open the windows and doors of our hearts and let the sweet winds of heaven blow through them, sweeping out the hate, the malice, the meanness, the dishonesty, the impurity, and burn on their altars the sacrifice of our selfish desires, we would indeed prepare a banquet room for the angels.

Phenomena, however interesting, are not, in themselves, valuable. Phenomena are Nature's indexes of what is of far greater importance—the laws, the causes behind them.

Spirit messages and psychometric readings are phenomena of deep interest to all thoughtful minds. But, behind the message is the realm from which it came—beyond the psychometrizing is the soul that psychometrizes.

Of more value than the spirit message, is the fact it demonstrates, that death is only a change of state for the ever-present ego.

Of greater import than the psychic reading of things beyond the ken of the physical senses, is the grand fact that the ego is neither dependent upon these senses, nor yet upon other egos, in, or out of the flesh, for knowledge of things spiritual, but has powers of perception inherent in its very nature as a spiritual being living in a world of which these very powers demonstrate the existence.

As you value your soul's growth, liberty, peace—refrain from the development of mediumship until you can come to it "with clean hands and a pure heart," for only thus will you avoid the shoals and rocks upon which so many individuals and societies have been wrecked. Let us all recognize and seek the rational development of the powers of our own being, a development that should combine the broadest freedom and the deepest research, with that grandest of all human attainments—self-control.

HELEN STUART-RICHINGS.

One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the midst of poverty, but not a whole nation.—Isaac Iselin.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

Let none of you treat his brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated.—Mohammedan.

LEGERDEMAIN.

An Object Lesson, Showing the Part It Plays.

It is appalling, the deep impression that Legerdemain Spiritualism has made on a certain class that do not seem competent to grasp the exact status of genuine spirit phenomena. Week after week the insatiate gullibles and Dead Easies attended "Rev. Dr." Moore's materializing circles in New York city, where they had the privilege of hugging, caressing and kissing the "spirits" that came, providing their gullibility had been sufficiently developed for that purpose so they would restrain from grabbing the confederate, and thus not expose to view the imposture that was being so openly practiced.

These Dead Easies in New York were deeply exasperated when the "Rev. Dr." Moore was exposed, still vociferously proclaiming him a genuine medium. Such being the case, the spirits dressed in a material garb which artificial work had given them, resolved to teach those who had been so egregiously humbugged an important lesson. As set forth in the New York World, about a dozen ex-believers in the materializing seances Hugh Moore at his spook shop, No. 120 West Thirteenth street, spent their Easter Sunday evening in an educational and edifying way at the home of Mrs. Harriet C. Strickland, who recently sued the "Rev. Dr." for defamation of character.

She had arranged her little flat, at No. 1788 Amsterdam avenue, so that it duplicated conditions at the spook shop as nearly as possible. These people came, all of them former believers and adherents of the "Rev. Dr." and all his works: Milo Rice, Mrs. Hazeltine, Mr. Hynes, Mrs. Taylor, of Brooklyn; James Crowe, Frank Corcoran, a former stenographer of "The Banner of Light," the spiritualistic paper in Boston; Miss Amy Smith and Miss Carrie Townsend.

Just to show how easy it was to fool them, Mrs. Strickland last night duplicated the old performances for their enlightenment. To Milo Rice, one of the firmest of the old believers and a man who proselyted vigorously for the "church," she had appeared as his wife. Last night she told him, in the blackness with the glow of the little lamp only illuminating the flat, all the nonsense he had poured so eagerly into her ears when she was a spirit.

Mr. Rice admitted sheepishly that he was convinced, but he had very little to say. When he believed, he had written some curious letters to his wife asking about the spirit land, and has been on pins and needles lest they be made public. To Mrs. Taylor she had appeared as her mother, and Mrs. Taylor had given her a locket and chain to take with her into spirit land. This bauble Mrs. Strickland showed Mrs. Taylor, who blushingly admitted that she had been duped.

After appearing in forms that they instantly recognized the light was turned up and Mrs. Strickland appeared in the white cheese cloth garb that so successfully disguises the "spirits."

Then the lights were put out and she materialized through the floor, an act that had mystified the believers. When she showed how she only had to wave a bit of cloth soaked in phosphorescent paint about on the floor and then rise they were a disgusted lot. Several said if they had Moore there they would give him a lively time.

What an extremely sad lesson the complete exposure of the "Rev. Dr." Moore imparts. All of his "materialized spirits", were confederates, and the manifestations given by them secured the unqualified endorsement of as disreputable a paper as ever was published in the interest of any cause—the Light of Truth of King Soloman's mining scheme notoriety. That paper, edited as claimed, by Angels of Light—Benjamin Franklin and others of like ilk, hadn't the horse sense to discern the confederates at Moore's circles, but took them for genuine spirits right from the celestial regions. Alas! what next?

BENJAMIN FAY MILLS.

He is a most profound thinker along progressive lines. His church at Los Angeles, Cal., is in many respects a model for Spiritualists to follow, as it is doing a work in full accord with the Angel World. As an unselfish, efficient worker in the ranks of Liberalism, he stands forth as one of the most remarkable men of the present age—the peer of any of the leading liberal divines of the present age. His lectures are eloquent, instructive and at the same time spiritually elevating. At the Studebaker Theatre, on Sunday, April 21, at 4 p. m., he will lecture on "The Man, Walt Whitman"; at 8 p. m. his subject will be "Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Prophet of the New Thought." Admission to one Sunday lecture, 35 cents; to both Sunday lectures, 50 cents. Mr. Mills will preach at St. Paul's Universalist Church, corner of Prairie Ave. and 30th Street, on Sunday morning, April 21, at 10:45, on, "Have You Seen God."

When any one of the prouder passions are hurt, it is much better philosophy to let a man slip into a good temper than to attack him in a bad one.—Thomas Paine, in Crisis.

Solitude and concentration will reveal a world of thought, the likeness of which man had never dreamed.—Abolt.

When we have but the will to do it, that very moment will justice be done; that very instant the tyrants of the earth shall bite the dust!—Peter Kropotkin.

SPIRITUALISM VERSUS ORGANIZATION.

A Plea for a Higher Degree of Spirituality in Our Work—The Salvation Army Pointed Out as A Pattern in Certain Directions.

To day I read an article by President H. D. Barrett, of April 6, in which he replies to Clara Watson. I endorse every word of this valuable article. For years I have been thinking of the importance of those truths along just these lines in relation to mediumship. I hope every Spiritualist in the land will read this article and every one arise to the importance of giving consent and acting with the same. I have given many lectures on "Mediumship, Right and Wrong Uses of the Same." I always take from the scripture the history of Belshazzar's feast. He had four hundred fortune-tellers and soothsayers in his land—commercial mediums; yet when the handwriting came on the wall he was in consternation and his wife fled to his rescue, not having been to the feast. She declared to him she knew a man who could read that writing; one who had lived a sweet, pure spiritual life; one who could control even the lions in their dens; and when Daniel was summoned and came Belshazzar tried to bribe him to read the writing, he refused all his bribes and offers of power and fine clothing, but declared unto him, I can read the handwriting on the wall, which he did. This is the redemption to mediumship. Spiritual life in our ranks, sacred, holy, truly, religious life—that alone can save Spiritualism; not alone with our mediums, but with our speakers who should teach the truth as given.

Spiritualism as a fact never had so much power in the world as today. Our greatest teachers, scientists and scholars all over the world are investigating psychic phenomena, and everywhere the inquiry is going out, "If a man die, shall he live again." I have no fear for this great truth, the conscious knowledge that spirit communion is true. The only fear I have, and which makes my heart ache, is the methods used and practiced in our efforts to organize Spiritualism.

Great progress has been made in that way, and great hindrances have arisen. A few of the most important things I wish to state, and to see if I cannot through your valued paper arouse the mass of Spiritualists to action. One of the greatest hindrances is that many elected to office act selfishly, and instead of magnifying the great truths they represent, they magnify themselves. Then again the people who have a right to vote and elect officers, too often elect those whom they personally like, without regard to their adaptation to the place, or the good of the cause; and again there are speakers and mediums who long ago were children, just learning to walk in the spiritual ranks, but under the inspiration of their spiritual guides through much suffering and persecution, have become unfolded, strong, popular and self-reliant workers to-day. Too often instead of helping the weak ones who are pushed forward by the angel world, they hold them back, persecute, malign and hinder their progress, forgetting that once they themselves had to be helped to the front.

Again in public work as public officers, differences of opinion will arise, which is proper, but instead of being broad enough to differ and allow the majority to rule, personal pique, jealousy and enmity will arise, and those who are in the minority or who have been beaten by the stronger forces (sometimes selfishly) instead of arising above these conditions will hold malice in their hearts and hatred towards those who have succeeded and become their masters, publicly, temporarily, and thus break up the harmony, strength and spiritual work of local, state, and national societies. All these things indicate and prove that we need in our ranks more true religion, more spirituality, more living as Paul taught in I. Corinthians, 12th chapter. He commended spiritual gifts, and said to the world, 'Ye were carried away unto dumb idols" before they knew these things.

In the last verse of that chapter he said "Covet the best gifts, and I will show you a more excellent way." When every officer in our land is elected to carry the flag of true Spiritualism toward a higher and better destiny for the human race, and all will incorporate that chapter into their hearts and lives, we will then have no more critical talking, and on every occasion portraying the weakness of our brother officers and fellow workers. Instead of that, then all that is good, noble and commendable in each one will be extolled and fully appreciated. Then when people act or vote it will not be to please some personal friends, but to select that person best adapted for certain places of office. When a medium or speaker is impelled by the best in them, having outgrown old conditions, and wishing license to preach this glorious gospel, coming before a board authorized to grant the same, every mistake or weakness that hitherto has existed or occurred in that personal life will not be dragged up against them, to discourage them in their work. They will be taken by the hand and given encouragement to make their life better in the future than in the past, and any officer on that board who may have received in the past some injury, true or fancied, from such medium or speaker, who will allow their personal prejudice, malice or revenge to influence them to vote against such a person, is not fit for that office.

Fifty-nine years ago we hailed with joy those who were inspired by the spirit world, and entranced to teach these glorious truths, as controlled by the risen ones, whether they were proficient in education or not. The question was never asked whether they were born in a manger or palace. The Angels of Light had found an organization they could speak through; but today some of our Spiritualists are so critical that unless a person has just so much education, they must not be ordained to speak.

I often feel that all the Spiritualists in our land, and every one of our speakers and mediums should have six months' active work in the Salvation Army, which would teach them something; it would teach them what it means to talk about love, charity and spirituality. They take up the weakest men and women in our land who make an effort to live a better and higher life. They do not taunt them with what they have been, but point to them what they may be. It matters not how perfect or how imperfect their education is, so long as they speak the truths divine, and manifest in their work the desire to redeem their fellow men, they are enrolled in the army, encouraged in their work, pressed forward toward the aspirations of a higher life.

Mrs. Ballington Booth from the time she was a little girl in her teens in the slums of London, in the prisons of America, made her life so sweet and perfect in spirituality, love, tenderness, and charity, that she held a charmed life to the lowest villains and the most depraved women, and they would not harm her, but loved her, and she could and did lift them up, and saved them.

If our mediums, speakers, officers, State and National board, president of camps and all the officers who are in our ranks would act, and forget themselves and their selfishness, and love the truths of Spiritualism as she did, her mission and her idea of truth, we should have an organization, and that organization would so far forget self—personal aims, hate, malice, revenge and all the train of evils that grow out of these things, that we would become a power in the land, and money would flow into our hands and be used for the cause and sustenance of speakers and mediums, and the needs of humanity.

A. B. SPINNEY.

Belding, Mich.

The world is continually growing better to all who are honestly trying to make it better.—Everett McNeil.

Correction does much, but encouragement does more.—Goethe.

A DANGER SIGNAL!

The Time for Immediate Action on the Part of Spiritualists Has Arrived!

The time for action on the part of the Spiritualists of Illinois has arrived. The enemies of Spiritualism have made the initial move to suppress mediumship, and unless immediate action be taken, results disastrous to our Cause may follow. We are informed that during the past few months at least thirty bills similar to the one mentioned below, have been introduced in as many different places, in States and Cities, a condition that requires the IMMEDIATE ATTENTION OF ALL THE SPIRITUALISTS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Eugene Danaher, Democratic Member from Cook County in the House of Representatives now sitting at Springfield, Ill., acting for those forces which through the centuries have hung as millstones upon the mental development and spiritual freedom of humanity, has introduced into that body the following Bill, known as House File Number 756, which has been referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects:

BILL.

"For an act to prevent persons from advertising or holding themselves out to be fortune tellers, clairvoyants, mediums, astrologers, trance mediums, palmists, life readers, and from obtaining money by means of representation that they can read the past, present or future by means of cards, spirits, palms, stars, trances or anything of like nature and providing a penalty therefor."

Every Spiritualist, after reading this infamous blow at his liberties, ought to rouse to immediate action, and call the attention of all of his acquaintances to the iniquitous measure. Write at once to the Senator and Representatives of his own Legislative District a stirring protest against the enactment of the proposed measure into Statutory laws; paste the form of petition following hereafter upon legal cap paper, and circulate the same widely and rapidly for signature by these of his own faith, as well as by liberal minded citizens in every walk of life; forward such petitions without delay to The Progressive Thinker, 40 Loomis street, Chicago, for use by the Committee already designated by the Illinois State Spiritualist Association.

It is an emergency hour for our Cause in the Prairie State. Delay means danger! Now is the time to concentrate our guns upon our ancient, ignorant and insidious foes. This opportunity will measure our alertness, zeal and devotion in Illinois. Let no individual be found indifferent or disloyal. GEO. B. WARNE.

President Illinois State Spiritualist Association, 4203 Evans ave., Chicago, Illinois.

PETITION.

To the Honorable Members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Forty-fifth General Assembly of the State of Illinois:

We, the undersigned tax-paying and law-abiding citizens of Illinois, do for ourselves and on behalf of other thousands of her residents whom we have not had time to reach, most earnestly protest against the enactment into a statute of House Bill Number 756, introduced by Representative Danaher and entitled:

"A Bill for an Act to prevent persons from attending or holding themselves out to be fortune tellers, clairvoyants, mediums, astrologers, trance mediums, palmists, life readers, and from obtaining money by means of representation that they can read the past, present, or future by means of cards, spirits, palms, stars, trances, or anything of a like nature, and providing a penalty therefor."

We urge against this measure: That mediums of different phases not only PRETEND TO, BUT ACTUALLY DO read with accuracy the past, present and future of individuals of whom they have no knowledge through mortal sources, just as their predecessors among all nations have done in every age since man's mortal existence began.

That the spirit of this Bill would have prohibited the Prophets and Seers of Bible days; forbidden the foretelling of the birth of John the Baptist and Jesus of Nazareth; prevented the exercise of the clairvoyant, clairaudient, and healing mediumship of Christ and the Apostles, and destroyed the foundation for the present beliefs of Catholics and Protestants alike.

That this measure is tainted with the odious principle of class legislation in that its object is to advance the doctrines of certain creeds and denominations, and prevent the spread of the religion of Spiritualism, which teaches an Infinite Intelligence, the practice of the Golden Rule, the existence and personal identity of the individual after death, and that man can communicate with his fellows whether in the physical or spiritual body.

That it interferes with the liberty of conscience and abridges the freedom of Religious Worship guaranteed to every individual by the Constitution of Illinois as well as by the Constitution of the United States.

That it seeks to annul the vested rights of the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association, incorporated under the statutes of this commonwealth and granted by the secretary of the State, July 16, 1896, a charter authorizing it to establish auxiliary bodies; "to license, constitute and empower lecturers and mediums to solemnize marriages, and exercise all other rights now delegated by statute to Ministers of the Christian churches; to promote general intelligence, good morals and the diffusion of Spiritualism as a Religion; to inculcate by the Philosophy and Phenomena of Spiritualism, the truth that our friends and loved ones who have preceded us to the spirit world can and do return and communicate with us." Therefore this proposed act would be unlawful and void in so far as it seeks to take away privileges and powers already bestowed upon the said State Association by the State of Illinois.

That in forbidding the practice of genuine mediumship, it prohibits the residents of Illinois from pursuing an unfettered study of the problems of Psychology; forbids their joining with citizens of other States and Nations in verifying the researches in the realm of Psychic Science by such scholars as Sir William Crookes, Alfred Russel Wallace, F. R. S., Sir Oliver Lodge, Camille Flammarion, the eminent astronomer, Prof. William James of Harvard University, Prof. James H. Hyslop, and hosts of their associate workers.

As your fellow-citizens, we ask for the defeat of House Bill No. 756, not as a special privilege to us, but as an act of equal justice to every religious system. Whatever of our teachings is of man, will not endure, but whatever is of God can not be overthrown.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

I belong to the great church that holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.—Ingersoll.

Genius always gives its best first prudence at last.—Lavater.

Man alone is and shall be our god.—Feuerbach.

There would be more happiness in the world if we would rejoice more with others instead of feigning sympathy with their sorrows.—Mary Bower.

Universal Ethical Instruction Vs. Sectarian Religious Training in Public Schools.

A Lecture by W. J. Colville, Recently Delivered in California.

"The Highest morality, the purest ethics, can be sustained and promulgated by conscientious teachers without their ever uttering a word of formal prayers or quoting a text of scripture in the presence of their scholars."

Truly has it been said time and time again that eternal vigilance is the price we must pay for liberty. Not content with acting in accordance with the noble provision of the Constitution of the United States of America, which secures to every denomination the inalienable right of religious liberty, zealous advocates of many peculiar forms of religion are insistent that the tenets of their respective theologies shall be forced upon the young in schools supported by means collected from citizens of all shades of opinion and belief.

It is the proud heritage of every freeborn American citizen, and also of every British subject, to be permitted to exercise untrammeled freedom in the exercise of religious worship, provided always that the equal rights of one's neighbors are not invaded. Places of worship of all denominations are treated equally by the civil authorities, for no matter whether ecclesiastical property be taxed or untaxed no discrimination is made on account of creed. These edifices, whose number is legion all over the American Republic and the British Empire, are admirably equiped for carrying forward the special work for which they are intended, and in these buildings it is quite fair and just that sectarian religious instruction should be given to all children whose parents or lawful guardians desire them to receive it. Two whole days of each week, Saturday and Sunday, and long vacation periods besides occasional holidays, offer ample opportunity for conveying such special instruction in theology as parents and guardians may wish their children to receive.

But here must the line be drawn and drawn rigidly. No incursion of religious doctrines, concerning which reputable people differ widely, must be permitted to enter the doors of public schools supported at public expense and necessarily open alike to Jew and Gentile, to Christian and Agnostic, to Spiritualist and Materialist. But the cry is raised, and raised loudly and often, that the morals of the community must be looked after and that immorality must needs prevail if religious training is not included in the common school curriculum. This assertion is ridiculous and utterly false, as statistics have abundantly proven. Indeed we may, and that without endorsing to the full the extreme statements of Zola and other French writers who have shared his sentiments, unhesitatingly declare that sectarian religious teaching in public schools invariably leads to ill-feeling and injustice, and far from aiding moral development it is frequently associated with deceit and dastardly hypocrisy.

The cry is raised with much fervor and great frequency that schools are godless where no readings are given from the Bible and where no prayers are offeren and no hymns sung at the commencement or close of school exercises, but this is an absurd misstatement. If people mean by godless, destitute of morality; and such is evidently their meaning when they tell us that it is impossible to develop virtue, and discountenance all vicious tendencies unless definitely theological propositions are submitted to scholars for their acceptance. Let us clearly take issue with all who venture such an assertion by discriminating unmistakably between ethical training and sectarian religious inculcations.

No respectable man or woman wishes his or her boy or girl brought up to tell lies or steal, and did not some ratic person desire that falsehood and dishonesty should be countenanced, the whole sentiment of the community would at once be aroused, and it could most readily be proved that lying and stealing were subversive of the general peace and safety of the commonwealth. Concerning the essentials of morality there is no controversy. Several New York papers, during December 1906, overflowed with protests against introducing distinctively Christian religious exercises at Christmas-tide into public schools supported very largely by taxes paid by Jews and attended much more largely by Jewish than by any other class of children. In schools where fully ninety per cent of the children regularly attending are of Jewish parentage (and such is often the case on the east side of New York City) a vigorous and righteous protest has been made against forcing the Christian Religion upon sons and daughters of Israel, and be it remembered to the honor of the Jewish population that no attempt whatever is made by Jews, even when in an overwhelming majority, to force Judaism upon their non-Jewish neighbors.

Simple secular education need by no means be unmoral and it is on the great moral issue that war must be waged until a complete victory for equity has been won. No observer can possibly dispute the fact which is self-evident that the moral character of a teacher exercises a great influence upon susceptible youth. Teachers should be chosen and appointed not only for their scholastic attainments, but for their high principled conduct. No matter whether a teacher is a Jew or a Christian or an Agnostic, no teacher should be selected who does not give evidence of fitness for the position to be filled. Examiners have a perfect right to require that a high ethical standard be set to all the scholars by their instructors, but on investigation it will not be discovered that moral excellencies are determined by introductory exercises of a sectarian religious character. No teacher can conscientiously teach what he or she does not believe to be true, and it has hitherto proved impossible to select or compile religious text books upon which all duly qualified teachers can agree, but no such difficulty has arisen on any distinctly moral issue, for morality does not need to be taught and studied as a thing apart from the everyday affairs of life; it would therefore be inappropriate to have even a department of ethical culture in a public school apart from the continuous moral training which should run through the pursuit of every study.

Now that the civilized world at large is rapidly awakening to some sense of the immeasurable importance and wide-extending influence of silent thought, it is rapidly becoming easier than formerly to convince the general public that our full duty to the rising generation cannot possibly be done unless we employ every means at our disposal to provide the purest possible moral atmosphere for boys and girls while receiving the external instruction necessary to prepare them to become valuable and upright members of society. Schools are filled with children gathered from all sorts of homes, and many come from dwelling-places to which the endearing title "home" can scarcely be applied. Many children who attend public schools have not been blessed with any ennobling prenatal influences, and their infancy and earliest childhood have been passed amid surroundings which certainly cannot have contributed to the development of the sweetest and tenderest side of human nature.

Children thus handicapped are to be trained by the State to become useful citizens, and their moral evolution is a very serious problem which confronts the nation. Though it is absurd to suppose that creeds and catechisms must be taught to these neglected ones in order to influence them to tread the path of righteousness. It is far from unreasonable to demand that teachers should be speedily equiped for the arduous but delightful task of calling forth, by the very influence they exert, the dormant virtue which now lies latent below the surface of these unpromising exteriors. Public schools are places of preparation for the larger world upon which youth must enter when school days shall have reached their end, therefore that discipline alone which truly prepares boys and girls for the actual duties of manhood and womanhood deserves to be called "common school education."

As members of a reputed commonwealth we must look to the common good at all times and in all ways, and we cannot begin too early in the life of any unit in the social mass to instil that doctrine of fraternity which is the only safeguard of our rights and liberties.

Sectarian religious teaching in public schools is a rank injustice, and nothing serves to stir up greater animosity among fellow-citizens. Ethical training on the other hand is a bond of union, a healer of breaches, a reconciling agent which leads eventually to the burning (not burying) of ancient hatchets of dissension. No pessimist, no believer in the intrinsic badness of human nature can be a successful teacher in the moral sense, for it stands to reason that one cannot successfully appeal to the dormant goodness in refractory children if one does not believe that such goodness inheres in all. The object of education is not to drive evil out of children, but to awaken unawakened righteousness. We are unrighteous before we have become righteous, as we are uneducated and unwise before we have become educated or attained to the heights of wisdom.

Some children, as we all know, are so gentle and amiable that they seem to require no special moral training, but many others are greatly in need of it, and the very atmosphere which is most congenial to the most amiable is also most helpful to the most obdurate. The average child is largely a copyist, easily imitating the example set by elders, and yet more easily and subtly influenced by the deeply felt though unseen mental radiations which proceed from those in any position of authority. Youth is always influenced more strongly by love than fear. Many teachers are saints and heroes in the esteem of their pupils, their lightest word is highly prized as though it fell from an infallible oracle, their simplest act is regarded as a deed of vast importance and far-sreaching significance, and all because of the halo of romance with which romantic children have surrounded their preceptor, through their glorifying imagination.

It is well that all teachers should realize something at least of the enormous influence they exert, even unknowingly and unwittingly, provided they have succeeded in calling forth the twin impulses of respect and love in my own childhood how, at seven, from their pupils. I well remember nine, ten,, and following years of age, I was gladly obedient to the silent example of teachers whom I venerated and admired, and I recall with equal clearness my deliberate aversion to following any kind of conduct pursued by teachers for whom I entertained no exalted sentiment. It is certainly easy for the average child to be kindly, gracious and considerate for the welfare of others when teachers and monitors exhibit such characteristics in eminent degree, and it is rarely, if ever difficult to wean children from such pernicious habits as thieving and falsifying if the teacher who is beloved and honored is a man or woman of exceptionally high moral principle.

Words of rebuke are often wasted unless lovingly administered, or worse than useless when spoken by one who is not an object of loving esteem. Threats of punishment are generally worse than useless because they frequently inspire a feeling of rebellion against oppression and awaken a defiant sense of brutal courage in the breasts of young human animals who have inherited war-like tendencies from a long line of war-like ancestors. The poet who has told us to let the ape and tiger die has counseled very wisely; few, however, heed his admonition. It seems extremely difficult for many people to realize divine resistance to lower impulses as somethink quite distinct from either brutal resistance or non-resistance, but neither by ferocious onslaughts nor by tame neglect can we truly advance the moral progress of humanity.

A high standard must be raised by teachers and that standard must be continuously adhered to. Discipline must be strict, but always benevolent, and so reasonable must all commands appear that the rising intelligence of even the youngest scholars, must be adequate to grasp the wisdom and equity of all established rules. The first great lesson taught in a public school must be the equality of citizens before the law. No matter whether a child comes fram a mansion of a hovel, or whether dressed in the coarsest or the most delicate clothing, that child must obey a law which is no respecter of persons. Punctuality, cleanliness, order, industry, obedience are exacted alike from all, therefore, though no mention is made of God or the Bible, though no hymn was sung, the moral law (without which true religion is unthinkable) sheds its benign light and exerts its holy suasion in such a manner as to prove that all that is really excellent in religious systems is fundamental in the conduct of secular affairs.

No possible good can be done by attempting to tell children, gathered from families which profess every imaginable variety of religious creed, or none at all, that certain formulated statements of religion are essential to human safety, and such a declaration is indeed untrue, and falsehood born of ignorance, cannot possibly constitute a moral elevator. But the essential essence of morality, without which as a foundation no abiding social fabric can be reared, can be proved necessary to bind in one glorious fraternal bond all the children of the great republic. The public school is a great leveler of artificial caste distinctions for very early in life the children of purse-proud parents of those who boast unduly of illustrious pedigree, come to learn that nothing other than individual ability and merit really counts in this practical, prosaic world, which is howbrilliantly illumined with the fires of genuine ideality. Perfect fairness toward all strict impartiality displayed in recognizing merit wherever found, appreciation of industry coupled with entire absence of irritability, must be displayed by every teacher toward every scholar. There must be nothing left to chance, no trust reposed in fancied luck or fickle fortune, the school room must be a world in miniature regulated by undeviating law which knows no favorites but by its very nature renders to all their due. Whatever in any religious system tends toward the genuine interests of our humanity must be in complete accord with this high ethical standard, and whatever in any church or creed fosters injustice must needs be outgrown and left to perish as human enlightenment progresses.

It is certain that people of many nationalities and creeds are now obliged to live side by side and do business together in all modern cities, and with the ever-increasing facilities for extended travel which now abound it is clearly impossible to keep up the clanishness and exclusiveness which flourished naturally in days when it seemed more difficult to ford a stream than it now appears to cross the ocean. no trouble whatever need arise in public schools over special religious observances, for schools close usually as early as 4 p. m., on Fridays and do not re-open till 9 a. m. on Mondays. Jewish children can observe the Sabbath from Friday at sunset till Saturday at sunset and attend whatever religious exercises at home or in a synagogue their parents may approve. Children of Christian parents have ample opportunity for attending church and school on Sundays. If Jewish parents wish their children to receive extra religious teachings there are schools conducted on Sundays in many synagogues and temples of Jewish faith, and religious lessons can easily be given at home. If Christian parents wish individual training given to their children on Saturdays no difficulty is in the way of providing bible classes in church schoolrooms or in administering instructions at home. When special festivals occur and parents wish their children to observe them they can be excused from attendance at school on such days, but a public school is no place in which to conduct sectarian religious exercises of any variety. Many people attempt impossible compromises and propose ridiculous concessions, all of which, though kindly intended, work disastrously as they invariably result in havoc and confusion, and they breed an endless amount of bickering and ill-will.

There seems no injustice in allowing ministers of different religious persuasions to enter schools and conduct religious services in different rooms at the same time, provided parents can select the kind of religion in which they wish their children to be instructed, but such a policy is always injurious and neither priest, clergyman, pastor or rabbi does ahy really good work in such circumstances. Religious controversy begins early among children and seeds of ill-will are thickly sown by such proceedings. Our contention is that it is fundamentally false to allege that there can be no sound ethical instruction given in a secular school without the introduction of theology. It is quite conceivable that teachers and pupils alike derive benefit from attendance at religious services conducted in proper places, but those exercises they must attend freely according to the provisions of the constitution of the United States or the laws of the British Empire. The struggle for complete religious liberty is still waging and we must range ourselves squarely on the side of complete separation of Church and State.

The highest morality, the purest ethics, can be sustained and promulgated by conscientious teachers without their ever uttering a word of formal prayers or quoting a text of scripture in the presence of their scholars. We are not saying that all biblical allusions must be rigidly excluded, but we are treading on dangerous ground immediately we insinuate that the bible is any more or less sacred than other literature when we are filling positions as teachers in public schools. What then remains to be done is clearly obvious. Raise the standard of thought, word and action, to the highest possible level. Remember your precepts are of less moment than your silent influence, which is of far more value than anything you can say or do, and for the boundless encouragement of conscientious teachers everywhere let it be universally understood that there was never a louder call for virtuous living than there is to-day, and never were more testimonials accumulating than at present to the abundant success of righteous endeavors to raise the moral tone of even the most undeveloped elements in unpromising communities.

Those of us who know how sympathetic the average child is to the approach of kindness, and how resentful against all that borders upon cruelty, will very readily perceive how enormous are the possibilities for good involved in a purely unsectarian system of moral training which never intrudes into the domain of controversial theology and for that very reason touches the hearts of all alike. These children are like the wolf-dog in Jack London's forcible story White Fang, susceptible to kindness but very ready to resent the slightest infraction of their rights and natural liberties. As the savage animal in the story became a life-saver and was ultimately known as the blessed wolf in place of fighting wolf, so can ferocity and duplicity in children be exchanged for courage and devotion to noble principles through the benign agency of truly moral educational influences.

No child is rendered moral by any other process than kindly firmness on the part of teachers engaged in truly exemplifying in character and conduct the external moral law. Forcing and threatening are brutal and immoral, or at least unmoral practices pertaining to an utterly uncivilized degree of human consciousness. The modern child is usually far from submissive to authority, and it is very rarely in these days that parents or teachers can compel submission by the rod as in less enlightened days gone by. A bully brandishing a stick may well be mistaken for an ape, and will certainly call forth neither respect or love from children. Harsh punishments are brutalizing and all threats of hell and damnation in a future life are but portions of the stock-in-trade of ignorant zealots who imagine that Deity is as mean and petty as their own paltry misconceptions of the order of the Universe. But though brutal measures must not be tolerated nor brutal doctrines allowed to assail the ears of the young, the stern equity of the true moral law, which is manifested universally, must be explained and honored.

Penalties must be all corrective, discipline must be entirely benevolent, but effects follow causes inevitably, and no child in any school is too young to take primary lessons in a course of action conformable with uncompromising equity. If damage is done to school property no thrashing of a curprit can ever repair the waste, but work must be exacted from the offender who is righteously called upon to contribute time and effort toward the replacement of what his indiscretion has destroyed. Principles must be shown to be earnable, not conferred partially on favorites. Cooperation must be demonstrated as the law of life, and as prizes are given and degrees conferred solely on account of merit, never until honestly earned, children will soon learn that life is not a lottery and that the villainy of gambling consists in its tendency to induce reliance upon mythical instead of upon intelligent industry.

No raffles should be tolerated in public schools, no methods of getting something apparently by chance or at the expense of others should ever be allowed, and it is our most positive duty to insist that public institutions supported by public money shall be so conducted that fitness for noble citizenship shall be the aim of every educational establishment. Nothing can be more unjust that to give special privileges to any class in a community. All must stand on an equal footing before the law, and as universal experience abundantly demonstrates the necessity of fair play and honorable dealing in every relationship of life, that social well-being be established and maintained, ethical training must be placed in the forefront in every school, and whatever savors of special privilege resolutely resisted till the very attempt to introduce it shall be utterly abandoned.

It rests with the people at large in every nation to decide whether they will uphold their rights and liberties, or permit unjust discriminations to corrupt administration of public affairs. France has been roundly absolved by shaking off the yoke of clerical opposition, and during a reactionary wave of sentiment some unduly extreme measures against established Religious Orders have been enforced. But the French Republic has set an excellent example in the main, for other lands to copy, in strictly insisting upon the completest possible separation between Church and State. The future will surely justify this attitude.

A BIG SOCIETY.

About two months ago I wrote an article in The Progressive Thinker on the subject of 'How to have one big harmonious society in every city."

The ideas and suggestions that I wrote about have borne fruit, and been acted upon in this city of Grand Rapids.

The two societies have united under a new name, the Psychical Research Society, and we will take out a charter from our state association.

By organizing under the state and N. S. A., we make all our customs and usages uniform and respected by the public and by our opponents.

Mr. John Andre, who has been president of one society for nearly three years, and who has done the most to bring about harmony and union, was unanimously elected vice-president; Mrs. Jennie Hosken, who shares like honors, was chosen president; Mrs. Lavinie Wardle was elected secretary.

In the election, some of the nominees modestly declined in favor of others, thus showing an unselfish and fraternal feeling. By electing new officers, the old prejudices and criticisms are forgotten more easily. Better have a new officer who is willing to be told a little, than to have an old officer re-elected by a few votes year after year and who thinks he knows so much that he cannot receive a suggestion, and runs things into the ground. Let the members know and feel that the society belongs to them and the public, and not to a few managers and then the society will grow.

Shakspeare's plays (some of them) contain fictitious characters. Are they in consequence, contaminating or corrupt?

The following quotations have been found to be most useful:

"Have more than thou showest;
Speak less than thou knowest."

And—

"This above all; to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

That which we find, whether true or the reverse, do not our motives determine to a great extent the result of our searching?

The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, is a national lesson in tolerance. History shows how the Puritans and Pilgrims were persecuted in England, and on coming to this country, they also, were guilty of persecuting Baptists, Quakers, etc.

As our lyceum cards say: "A lie is sure to be found out or die at last," peaceful methods of teaching seem to us wiser than the turning away from us by harsh terms. From our rostums we have heard much that was uncalled for, and we are glad to know The Progressive Thinker doesn't employ the "logic" of vituperation.

Round us are persons stooping to all sorts of meanness. What good would it do to upbraid them? They must learn, as others do; there must be a desire from within, a daily aspiration to be wiser, kinder, cleaner. Progression is the law and to quote Professor Lockwood, "Eternity is long and kind."

We are as desirous of truth as our reviewer, but what was thought to be truth in some things a few years ago, is not considered so now, and many facts, apparently, of to-day may be found errors to-morrow.

It is always well to replace what is destroyed by something better, and it looks as though we Spiritualists have our hands full sifting wheat from chaff in our own ranks.

E. K. EAGER.

Celebration at Lake Pleasant.

The Independent Order of Scalpers, are to have a great time at Lake Pleasant this summer. Some 75 of the gentlemen who are at this popular camp ground during each summer season compose its membership.

Its rights and ceremonies are a reproduction of those in use by the American Indians.

Three years ago they purchased reservations about one quarter of a mile west of the camp ground. Upon their five acres of land is a "Long House," with twenty sleeping rooms, a dining room that will seat one hundred people, a large barn, used as an automobile garage, ice house, etc. This property is valued at one thousand dollars. In August the 15th anniversary of the founding of the order will be celebrated, also a special day of rejoicing will be held, over the fact of the trustees coming into full ownership of the property, free from debt.

The officers: High chief, Charles Bickford; scribe, Francis B. woodbury; keeper of wampum, Louis Peffeele, are receiving many compliments for their successful labors, especially in being able to own this property free from debt.

A prominent member of the Lake Pleasant Summer Colony, was instantly killed while operating a new automobile, which had been delivered to her yesterday.

In attempting to turn around on Chestnut street, Mrs. Loveland unintentionally turned on full power and the car shot across the sidewalk and plunged over a stone wall that crowns a 20-foot embankment.

Mrs. Loveland was a highly respected woman. She was a summer resident at Lake Pleasant, where she owned the largest summer cottage, formerly known as the White Cottage. A woman possessed of wealth, of quiet and unassuming ways that endeared her to all her many friends. Funeral at Oneonta, N. Y.

CRIME AND ITS CAUSE AND CURE.

A Specific and Special Course of Education Is Commended.

In these days when everyone seems to perceive and acknowledge the prevalence of crime, or in other words, wrong action (bad morals) of individuals towards each other and to society in general, it would be well for every true Spiritualist to study this subject for himself and to give to the public for its benefit the result of that study, and by so doing add his quota to the general in order that an elucidation of the necessary means for the rectification or cure of the evils might be forthcoming. To be optimistic is good, to be Utopian, useless, from a Spiritualist's standpoint, as we know the principle or law of evolution rules in this and succeeding spheres of progression. Therefore, we might wish but cannot expect complete eradication in this first sphere of action of crime.

To get a perception of the necessary means for its cure, partial or complete, we must search for and arrive at the causes and not only the causes, but THE cause.

At the present time and in years gone, all conceivable remedies have been suggested, a few amongst the number being Punishment, Religion (or as the cant phrase goes, "Get religion instilled into the general public, especially the young), Education, Science, Physical Culture and so on. These have been advocated singly, each advocate having (and rightly) his or her own particular view.

Now, the writer in claiming that education would be (not is) the panacea for crime or evil desires to be heard or read to the finish in order that he may not be misunderstood or misquoted.

No educated man or woman will deny the value of scholastic or collegiate education. The writer, however, humbly thinks and prefers that our present elaborate system is defective. It appears to him that the natural sciences of anatomy, physiology, astronomy, chemistry, botany, have been relegated to the rear to give prominence to the classics and mathematics (so very desirable).

Now to the practical application of this thought, as the writer before said, education should be the cure for crime, and he believes would be were it complete.

The writer believes there is a prior and deeper cure for crime, viz.: the right or correct birth of the individual. The human race must be rightly born, or we need never expect anything near an approximation to the cure of crime.

Now, the writer claims that direct and specific attention to the education of the young is the only hope for arriving at the desired goal, right or correct birth.

The science of anatomy properly taught to those old enough to grasp its practical application, is the first nail to be struck and driven well home. This has been and is neglected through ignorance, oversight or possibly false modesty, which from time immemorial appears to have been one of the causes of its neglect. Anatomy should be taught thoroughly by competent anatomists, men for the boys and women for the girls (of course). It should be taught by aid of models and particularly by diagrams, plainly and vividly drawn so that the interest and undivided attention (for the time) might be given by the young. Most of our diseases, malformations, can, we believe, be traced to a lack of anatomical knowledge (or ignorance) upon his subect. Knowledge must be given to the young before evil or bad habits of any description have been formed or at least in their incipiency. Causes and their effects can be vividly shown along this line of education. This, in the writer's opinion, would eventually strike at the root or cause of wrong birth, and ultimately and approximately eradicate crime or evil, and introduce a race of man and womanhood, intellectually, morally, and spiritually evenly poised or balanced, in other words, Harmonious man and womanhood.

The writer has not mentioned psychology, no doubt in the future, to be the right basic foundation for all education.

In conclusion, the writer would give as his opinion and preference along the educational line the sciences of chemistry, astronomy, and if possible, botany (practically). If the writer has any preference after anatomy, it certainly lies in the direction of astronomy, on account of its sublimity and its natural tendency towards elevating and spiritualizing thought.

A. C. PRIEST.

Oakland, Cal.

"AN HONEST QUESTION."

To the Reviewer, From the Correspondent.

In No. 904 of The Progressive Thinker a review of one answer to "An Honest Question," has just come to the notice of the correspondent, who, woman-like, would like to say a few words more.

The question asked: "If ancient faiths are false, when will the time come to discard them, if not now?"

It must be proved, first, that they are false. We understand no person or ism except Spiritualism (Science of Life) has all the truth; that in every religion of to-day there is a germ of truth; this is the reason these religions exist.

We lament our ignorance concerning the Bible. It had no place in our childhood's home except to record birth, deaths, marriages, etc. Would that we had the knowledge of our arisen Moses Hull on this subject. Our reviewer says: "It (the Old Testament) has no rightful place in this age of culture and scientific knowledge." Yet scholars accord the Bible the highest place in literature, apart from its teachings. However doubtful its origin may be, it has been, and is, the guide to right living for thousands.

SPIRITUALISM IN KANSAS CITY.

A New Society and Its Spiritual Basis.

A few years ago there were very few Spiritualists in this city, and there was no Spiritualist society. Now there are four holding regular stated meetings which are well attended, and much interest is taken in them; and a number of resident mediums who have many attending their seances, and the public press is much more tolerant than ever before.

Recently a new society has been organized—the Society of Spiritual Truth, with C. H. Moody, president; G. W. Anderson, secretary, and F. Josselyn, treasurer, with a board of trustees and a goodly number of vice-presidents residing in this city and Kansas City in Kansas.

The first meeting of this society after its organization, was in commemoration of the fifty-ninth anniversary of the advent of Modern Spiritualism. The lecture was delivered by Mrs. Smith-Baker, an able and veteran lecturer; and among the audience were many of the most prominent Spiritualists of the two cities. The large hall was filled to overflowing and the meeting proved to be a very interesting occasion.

This society has an independent charter and aims at a higher standard of Spiritualism than it has hitherto attained. It has already demonstrated the fact of continued existence beyond the grave—a most essential and important fact; it has revealed the fact of spirit return and communion with mortals—a grand and glorious revelation and it has been the means of emancipating many from the thralldom of ecclesiastical despotism, to rejoice in the light of mental freedom. These are three grand steps never before taken in the world. But is Spiritualism to stop here? Has it no other purpose?

Spiritualists are a rule are satisfied with these results, and contemplate nothing more. But in a knowledge of immortality there is neither morality nor power per se; in communion with the loved ones gone before there is no essential virtue; nor is there a guarantee of good conduct in the emancipation from church thralldom; for it is in the experience of every observer that there are men well established in all these steps that are as mean as the meanest of mankind.

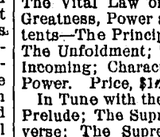
If Spiritualists are satisfied with what they have, since there is no guarantee per se of anything higher, it is evident that without the aid of physical demonstration of those essential steps, Spiritualism will become a creed giving rise to an impulse for the dissemination of doctrines after the manner of the priesthood, and its living, vitalizing power will be lost to the world.

Spiritualism is far more than these three steps. They are only the a b c of the grand destiny that man may achieve in mortal life. The element of that destiny and the means of its achievement are in him, prevented only by the error and superstition that prevail in the world. If it stops in its present stage of advancement, its believers in the course of time will become the subjects of a class not unlike the priesthood, exercising power which they will arrogate to themselves; and even among themselves there will arise doctrinal points, in which one part of the people will believe this, and another part, that. Spiritualism thus arrested in its progress, will be instrumental in evil instead of good.

Having this tendency in view, and to aid in checking it, this society was organized. It began with a goodly number of members and it is supported by those Spiritualists who sympathize with its purposes, and are able and willing to aid in its accomplishment.

E. J. SCHELLHOUS.

Kansas City, Mo.



Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT IMPROVES AND STRENGTHENS EYESIGHT.

Spectacles May Be Abandoned

This instrument, which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid so that any person can give it a test.

They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342R, 811 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

907

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

"THE LIFE BOOKS"

BY RALPH WALDO TRINE.

What All the World's A-Seeking, or The Vital Law of True Life, True Greatness, Power and Happiness. Contents—The Principle; The Application; The Unfoldment; The Awakening; The Incoming; Character Building Thought Power. Price, $1.25.

In Tune with the Infinite. Contents—Prelude; The Supreme Fact of the Universe; The Supreme Fact of Human Life; Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; The Secret, Power and Effects of Love; Wisdom and Interior Illumination; The Realization of Perfect Peace; Coming into Fullness of Power; Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages and Saviors; The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; Entering Now Into the Realization of the Highest Riches. Price $1.25.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. "The moment we fully and vitally realize who and what we are, we then begin to build our own world even as God builds His."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Every Living Creature. "The tender and humane passion in the human heart is too precious a quality to allow it to be hardened or effaced by practices such as we often indulge in."—From title-page. Price, 35 cents.

Character Building Thought Power. "A thought, good or evil, an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, sooner or later, you will find objectified in your life."—From title-page. Price 35 cents.

The Proofs of Life After Death

A Twentieth Century Symposium.

An assembly and collation of letters and expressions from eminent scientists and thinkers of the world, giving the strongest and best reasons known to the world to-day, as substantial evidence of the continued existence of the soul after death. Arranged under the several heads of Science, Psychical Research, Philosophy, Spiritualism. With a special contribution on Immortality from New Standpoints.

Compiled and edited by Robert J. Thompson, Late Special Envoy of the United States to the President of the French Republic.

A work of especial value, giving the views of a large number of eminent persons. Finely printed and bound. Price $2. For sale at this office.

Science and a Future Life

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

Discovery of a Lost Trail

BY CHARLES B. NEWCOMB,

Author of "All's Right with the World." Cloth 270 pages. Mr. Newcomb made a distinct success with "All's Right with the World," which continues in the front rank of the Metaphysical books that are now so popular. The great number who have been cheered and strengthened by him will welcome another book by this wise teacher whose words of help are doing so much to make the world better by making men and women better able to understand and enjoy it.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail"

is a simple study of that strange and beautiful thing called life, but grand in its scholarly simplicity. It will be in demand by many who have not previously read metaphysical writings. Price $1.00. For sale at this office.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.

Lectures by the Swami Vivekananda, on Raja Yoga; or Conquering the Internal Nature, and other subjects; also, Patanjali's Yoga Aphorisms, with commentaries and a copious glossary of Sanskrit terms. Revised and enlarged, 12mo., Cloth, $1.50. "Raja Yoga is an ancient system of Indian Philosophy, and one of the four chief methods that the Vedanta Philosophy offers to obtain freedom and perfection. Swami Vivekananda became a familiar figure in several American cities during the three years following the Parliament of Religions at Chicago; he was cordially received in America, where the breadth and depth of his teachings were soon recognized. His teachings are universal in their application. The book is cheap at $1.50. For sale at this office.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

J. C. F. Grumbine will again address the Connecticut Spiritualist State Convention which meets at Hartford, Conn., May 4 and 5, in Unity Church. This makes the fourth season he has served the State society. While in Hartford he will hold classes and help the local society in its propaganda work. On May 9, he speaks for the Occultists of Washington, D. C., in the spacious parlors of Mr. and Mrs. Hooker, well known Spiritualists, and continues the class work May 10, 13, 14, and lecturing in Goode's hall on F and 14th sts., May 12 at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. There is every indication that there will be a large outpouring of the people at all of these meetings. Subjects are ready in a printed circular and will be mailed to anyone who wishes one. Address 24 Strathmore Rd. Brookline, Mass.

Rebecca Still writes: "If all persons were as interested as myself they would never be without The Progressive Thinker in the home. You give both sides of all parties without fear or favor. We have some of the lectures of our best writers; and every week it is full of food for thinkers. My sincere wish is that your life will be long spared for the good work. When I receive the Occult Life of Christ I will have all your premium books."

The Spiritual Society Students of Nature, had a good attendance. Mrs. Schumacher lectured on this subject: "Was Christ in a trance when taken down from the cross?" Spirit communications were given by Sister Smith and Sister Bundrock; they were well received. Flower readings by mediums the last Sunday evening of April.

Wm. Hassman writes: "Brother Winters, who is conducting the Sunday evening service in the Hall of the North Star Spiritual Union, 1546 Milwaukee avenue, during the illness of Sister C. Mueller, gave a very impressive lecture on 'Mediumship and the Golden Rule,' Sister Winters gave many messages to weary hearts, and all were well received. Sister C. Mueller, who has been sick for the past 8 weeks, will be with us again Sunday evening, April 14. All are invited to be present to welcome her."

Mrs. S. V. Booth writes: "The First Spiritualist and Liberal Union of Hardwick, Vt., met at S. V. Hall, March 31, to celebrate the birth of Modern Spiritualism. Mrs. Effie Webster Chapman of Cambridge, Vt., was the speaker. She lectured in the afternoon on the "Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of Man," and in the evening on the "Growth of Modern Spiritualism." These addresses were followed by tests by her control, "Sunbeam." She is indeed rightly named, for she brings sunshine to many sitting in darkness. Her tests were without exception, recognized. Our society, though small, is standing firmly for the beautiful truth of Spiritualism, and we ask the readers as we labor away up here among the granite Hills of Old Vermont, to send their best thoughts to us."

Mrs. A. J. Pettingill of Malden, Mass., will follow with spirit mesages the address of Rev. A. P. Blinn, at the First Spiritual Union, Norwich, Ct., Sunday morning and evening, April 21. The Imperial Quartette, the regular quartette of the Y. M. C. A., has volunteered to give the Union a benefit concert the last week of this month, and as it is an excellent musical organization the society anticipates a big success financially and otherwise.

First German Spiritual Society will give a concert on Sunday afternoon, April 21, and dance in the evening, at its Hall, 762 West 13th st., corner S. Ashland avenue. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Old People's Home. The first picnic of the season will be given in Jestram's Grove, on May 19. Take the Aurora & Elgin electric car to Bellwood; there to the grove. The grove is opened by the First German Spiritual Society, and known as Jestram's Grove. It will be opened free to all Spiritual societies and gatherings for the coming summer. For further information call or write to Mrs. Gartleman, 762 W. 13th street.

Ferd C. Suhrer writes: "Mediums' day at the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Sunday, April 7, was productive of much good. New faces were seen in the congregation; and our mediums faced a select audience that gave them inspiration for their work, which they performed with telling effect, as was evidenced by the different ones acknowledging the definite descriptions, etc., as transmitted by the reader. Quite a number arrived just in time for the circles at 4 o'clock, and it was a pleasant sight to see the many mutual surprises as different ones greeted each other. We attribute our large and increasing attendance mostly to the wide circulation of The Progressive Thinker, which contains notices of every meeting in the country and the coming and going of every Spiritualist doing public work. Through this same medium we have also had applications for membership from other states, until now our foreign membership is almost as great as that in Chicago, including almost every State in the Union. Large bodies move slowly, 'tis said, and it will be, as expected, some little time before our idea of a Fraternal Order is fully appreciated, when the response will meet with our expectations, as we are led to believe now, by its ready acceptance by prominent people of liberal thought in Chicago and other cities. Our platform mediums are being sought and engaged by other societies in neighboring cities, and their re-engagement is the best recommendation of their services. We would like to enroll enough names this month to exceed those of March. $1.00 pays for a year's membership, and we need between 15 and 20 more. Will you help us? Be with us next Sunday, and stay for our famous "bean supper." Don't forget the address, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street; top floor, in Hygeia Hall."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

The Meadville, Pa., Independent Spiritual Society—meeting in the Odd Fellow's Temple, at one time the First Baptist Church, and now the largest hall in the city—is having the services of Mrs. Helen Stuart-Richings, with good and increasing audiences.

Mrs. Martha Woolsey writes: "After reading an article in your paper saying that Hagaman took the extreme step he did in retaliation for the reading of a letter from the public platform by me, written by President Barrett, in which he stated as facts some things said to have occurred in Michigan, which Hagaman the exmedium did not consider complimentary to him, Allow me to say, Brother Francis, you have been misinformed. I had a letter from President Barrett but I never read it from any platform. I simply said what I thought of Kingsley and him before I had received the letter."

Dr. B. S. Eskelson writes from Sabula, Iowa: "I have engaged in doing literary work for several months past, and that I might do my work more effectually I almost isolated myself from the world in general for the time being; but we can always find opportunity to do something for that which we love best. This is a small place of about 1200 inhabitants, of which only one single person was a pronounced Spiritualist when I arrived. I soon began to devote my Sunday evenings to giving lectures on Spiritualism, and now I am happy to say that I am about to close a very successful winter's work for the cause of truth. And thus the cause of the angels is going on. Truly what would it profit a man if he gained the whole world, if there was no wisdom and love to get, no light to shed into dark places?"

Mrs. Bertha Morris writes: "The Earnest Workers, of Detroit, Mich., have had a very successful year financially and spiritually, and great credit is due to the officers and members of said organization. Especial mention should be made of the grand work by our loved and esteemed Pastor, Rev. Mary Stein, who by her unselfish devotion to our noble cause, has placed the Earnest Workers in the front rank of the Spiritual societies of Detroit. At the last regular meeting, as her year as pastor has expired, she tendered her resignation, believing that in the general field she could accomplish much more for the good of humanity, but the society appreciating her grand work were loth to release her and unanimously elected her as their pastor for the second term with the privilege to accept calls from the outside at her discretion. She is open to engagements in the surrounding states, and no society can fail to be benefited, and the cause at large uplifted by engaging her services. This is an unsolicited tribute to a noble and true hearted worker for the cause of truth and justice."

S. S. King writes from Hamilton, Ont.: "The First Spiritual Society of Hamilton is in a prosperous condition. Mrs. C. Fannie Allyn of Boston, was our pastor during the month of March, and any person who ever had the pleasure of hearing her grand lectures and beautiful poems know that her services must be appreciated. While here she started a Lyceum. It was surprising to see the interest the children took in so short a time. Mrs. Ripley of Toronto assisted at a social entertainment last week, which proved to be a success, both socially and financially. She will be with us during April and May. We have engaged Mrs. Spalding to follow her. I have received a letter from Mrs. L. A. Griffin of Lancaster, Eng., stating that she will again visit Hamilton on her way to Australia, and New Zealand. She being a very talented lady, sensitive medium and eloquent speaker, I would recommend any society in need of a medium to secure her services. I will be pleased to furnish anyone with her address when possible to do so."

Mrs. L. Rech writes from Toledo, Ohio: "Editor Progressive Thinker, Will you kindly find space in the columns of your dear little paper for the enclosed item and oblige, yours for the good cause. Mrs. Minnie Sherdow of Detroit, Mich., has closed her engagement with the Independent Association of Spiritualists of Toledo, Ohio. We feel that she is worthy of the highest commendation, both as a woman and a medium. Her lectures and messages are always appreciated, and her cheery words and kindly smile carry the sunshine wherever she goes. She has the hearty good wishes of the Spiritualists of Toledo, among whom she has made many friends, and in whose ranks she has worked faithfully and well."

Simon Barrett writes from White Hall, N. Y., expressing his great astonishment that some good medium does not locate the children who have been stolen by brutes, inasmuch as the bodies of persons who have been drowned have often been located by those who are controlled by spirits.

Correspondent writes: "The Golden Rule Spiritualist Society is still holding large meetings. On Sunday evening, March 31, our speaker was detained at the bedside of his sick wife, and our pastor, Mrs. Nora E. Hill, filled the place of that worthy speaker, Hon. Charles Hughes. After the address and some vocal selections by Mrs. Frankie Cole, and Mrs. Hill, the friends listened to a beautiful vocal solo entitled "My Dream," by Miss Alice Johnson, our sweet singer of fifteen summers. After this Mrs. Frankie Cole sang "Flowers in Heaven," followed by the christening of a sweet little girl of four years, Miss Edna Traquitz, and if ever angel hands or spirits controlled the mortal, this child was governed by the unseen on this occasion. Messages followed by Mr. Temple. On the evening of April 7, our speaker was Dr. Frost, and his address was soul-stirring; and on Sunday, the 14th, Dr. J. H. Randall, was our speaker. On April 21, the pastor, Mrs. Nora E. Hill, will lecture; on April 28, Mrs J. L. Fravel, of Austin. On that evening there will be christening of three children. O'Donnell's College Hall, 43 South Paulina, between Washington boulevard and Park avenue."

TAKE NOTICE—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies'-Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Seventh Annual Convention of the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association, at Milwaukee, Wis., Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, April 16, 17, 18, 1907, at Ethical Hall, 558 Jefferson street. The following well-known persons will participate in the exercises: Rev. Geo. H. Brooks, Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, Mrs. Alfa H. Niver, Mrs. Louise Hinckel, Mrs. Annie Huebner, Rev. F. L. Witt, Mr. A P. Roberts, Mrs Cora L. V. Richmond, Mrs. C. McFarlin, Mr. S. T. Helgason, Mrs. M. Holmes, Mrs. J. Smead, Prof. A. J. Weaver, Dr. F. L. Mehrtens, Rev. Anna Mehrtens, and others. Mr. Brooks, the president of the State Association, will have charge of the various sessions, and he is exceptionally efficient in work of that kind.

S. A. Huntington writes from Malden, Mass.: "The Rev. F. A. Wiggin commenced his second course of lectures and ballot reading on Thursday evening, April 4. He chose for his theme, 'Tricks of Spiritualism,' or 'Tricks Practiced by so-called Spiritualists.' After exposing the tricks of so-called Spiritualists, he maintained that Spiritualism is not supernaturalism, but natural law, which is God's Law. After his able address concluded he occupied half an hour in giving many fine ballot readings. He spoke for us again on the 11th inst. At the 3 p. m. circle Sunday, April 1, Prof. Macurda, of Lynn, Mrs. Duren of Boston, and Mrs. Barry of Everett, took part. At the evening session Prof. R. A. Macurda, was the speaker and message bearer. He prefaced his work by reading a fine poem entitled, 'Eternal Goodness,' by John G. Whittier. He chose for his theme, 'Some of the Conditions Surrounding Spiritualism;' giving a fine address, also at its close giving many fine messages. Mrs. R. A. Swift, of Haverhill, was the speaker on the 14th, and Mrs. Carrie H. Tainter, Derry, N. H., on the 21st."

John W. Ring, who is at present lecturing in San Diego, Cal., is delighted with sunny California.

Frank T. Ripley, speaker and test medium, has the Sundays of May and June open for lectures and messages. Terms will be reasonable. Address all letters to Mr. Ripley at 112 N. Beech street, Oxford, Ohio.

Mrs. McMenamin writes from Buffalo, N. Y., announcing the death of Samuel Forbes, a devout Spiritualist, at the age of 83. She says: "Not only Spiritualists, but those who are bitterly opposed to our cause, will miss him, for many times he has fought in law and out of law for us, and always came out victorious. He leaves many friends to mourn his passing out. Spiritualism is gaining ground in Buffalo. Many of our best citizens are holding circles in their own homes. This is a city of Inspiration, and could be made a great spiritual center."

Mrs. A. Sharp, secretary, writes from Billings, Mont.: "I wish to tell you about our celebration on Easter Sunday, our anniversary. We had forty children at the Lyceum, and fourteen grown people. The children had a lovely program, consisting of recitations, a song by three of the girls, 'Greeting Dear Children, to you.' One of the girls played the violin. We also had a Wand Drill of eight children. Mr. D. A. How conducted it. All the other children took part in the drill following the Wand Drill. All of them had flags which our conductor, Mrs. Eva McCoy, had presented to the Lyceum. Mr. How also presented to the Sunlight Lyceum wands for use in the Wand Drill. After the drill, the children marched up to the conductor, and sang 'America,' and waved their flags. It was a very pretty sight. They also took the same part at the evening meeting, and had a good many out to see them. When we first started the Sunlight Lyceum we had only four children. We have now about fifty. We are all delighted with our Lyceum, and our conductor and pastor, Mrs. Eva McCoy; everyone loves her dearly. She has built up a fine church here, as she gives some excellent lectures and test readings. I was at the Ladies' Aid Society on Friday afternoon, April 5, at Mrs. Martin's, 319 31st street; there were about thirty who attended."

M. B. Herrick writes: "The Progressive Spiritualist Society of Augusta, Maine, have just closed a very successful month's meetings with Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, of E. Somerville, as speaker and message bearer. Mrs. Harding's work is of the highest order and not alone among Spiritualists is she appreciated, but among strangers. She has awakened a lively interest, and many who had never given a thought to the grand truth of the continuity of life and spirit return, were interested listeners among her large and constantly increasing audiences. Anniversary Sunday was fittingly observed with especial music, decorations, etc., and the service was one long to be remembered by those who had the pleasure of listening to it."

E. R. Fielding writes from Washington, D. C.: "Mrs. Mary T. Longley is speaking for the First Association of Spiritualists for April. A memorial services will be held for the late Theodore J. Mayer. The George Washington University fund is growing. This is the University which our late lamented Theodore J. Mayer contributed several thousand dollars for a suitable site for the erection of a National University."

The Progressive Spiritual Church held its regular Sunday public meeting at the old, well-known place, northwest corner of North avenue and Burling street, and was well attended. Mr. & Mrs. A. W. Bloom assisted our pastor Rev. B. Hilbert. Mr. Bloom's guide gave us an interesting vision in the life and condition of the lower spheres, which was a good lesson for everyone of us. Pleasing and convincing tests were given by our pastor and Mrs. A. W. Bloom. Next Sunday, April 14, Mrs. Dr. Caird will kindly honor us with her presence, and we expect quite a crowd of people to hear her.

Mrs. Lole F. Prior, who has been lecturing in various parts of the Old World, has returned to this country and is now in Logansport, Ind. She has done a most excellent work.

This will be one of the most interesting Spiritual Meetings of the season. Bring your friends along. Program of the Regular Monthly Meeting of the Chicago Spiritualists' League, K. & K. Hall, 106 Randolph street, two flights up, Thursday, April 18, 1907, 8 o'clock P. m. sharp. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Opening hymn; invocation, Dr. J. H. Randall; music, William W. Kirtland Orchestra; congregational singing; recitation, donated by Mrs. O. B. Wilson; song, Mr. Hooper; Message bearers, Mrs. A. W. Bloom, Mrs. Mary Weaver and Mrs. Isa Cleveland; music, W. W. Kirtland; debate—"What Qualifications Do Spirit Intelligences Seek in Those Whom They Choose to Be Their Medium on Earth?". Debate opened by Dr. J. H. Randall and Dr. Gustafson; admission 15 cents.

The Sunflower Club will give the last of its series of dance parties on the evening of April 22nd. Come one and all, and bring your friends.

Prof. W. M. Lockwood made it so decidedly hot for the late sensational revivalists in Buffalo, that they appointed a committee to wait on the press and advise the editors not to publish any extracts from his lectures that were averse to their meetings. The Professor's lecture upon "Periodical Religious Brain Storms, are They Induced by Sun-spots, Sin-spots, or the Almighty Dollar," created great interest—in fact a decided sensation. His lecture on the "Sin of Hereditary Insanity, Scientifically Illustrated," contained a veritable mine of valuable information.

Prof. G. L. Work, a lecturer on subjects pertaining to Spiritualism, arrived in the city last week, accompanied with his wife. He intends to locate at an early day in Los Angeles, Cal.

Fannie Allyn writes: Our Canadian cousins in the pretty city of Hamilton, Ont., are working faithfully to build the philosophy and phenomena of Spiritualism. I worked with the First Society during March and brought away pleasant memories. I organized a lyceum, and the blessed children assited in the anniversary exercises. Their sunny faces and desire to do their work right, made us feel proud of them. All speakers enjoy the encouraging words of the President, Mr. S. S. King, who is the right man in the right place. The sunny face and kindly words of his wife are a present help in time of need. The Ladies' Aid is an auxiliary of earnest ladies, whom it is a pleasure to meet. Mrs. Jane Goodwin, faithful and true, is their valued President. I am now in the thriving city of Watertown, N. Y., for April, and in Philadelphia, Pa., for May. Watertown friends have a good temple. Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Webster, local mediums, have done good work. Long live the Progressive Thinker, that is not afraid of Truth—popular or not.

Harrison D. Barrett, of President of the N. S. A., passed through Chicago last week, on his way to Washington. Letters will reach him if addressed in care of the N. S. A.

Dr. Geo. B. Warne is now in Washington, D. C., attending a meeting of the N. S. A. officials.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Schmidt have opened a meeting at Garfield Hall, corner Hamlin and Chicago Avenues; Sunday servies at 7:30 p. m.

Harry J. Moore informs us he will have to cancel his engagements for April in consequence of ill health. He is now in Portland, Ore. We hope he will soon recover. His services are needed in our ranks.

Mrs. Hattie F. R. Peet writes: Members and friends of the Illinois Sunflower Club, do not forget the Tea party to be held on Tuesday, April 23rd, at 2 p. m., at No. 70 Adams St., Lincoln Hall. Mrs. Druliner will preside at the urn; each cup of tea entitles to a reading. Good mediums in attendance.

C. L. Hatch writes from No. 9 Appleton St., Appleton Hall, Boston: The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual, with the president, Mrs. M. E. A. Allbe, in the chair. A good meeting was held in the evening, the following taking part after a service of song: Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse, Mrs. Carbee, Mrs. Hattie C. Mason, Mrs. Seers-Hill and Mrs. Shirley. Mrs. Mary F. Lovering presided at the piano. Next Friday a Colonial Party will be held. The 19th of April is a holiday in Massachusetts, and the Aid will observe it with a social and general good time. Supper served at 6 p. m.

Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale is still doing an excellent work with the society at Galveston, Tex.

Albert P. Blinn writes from Norwich, Conn.: This society celebrated the 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism holding two services on Sunday, March 31st, both of which were largely attended and very interesting, and attracted a number from Willimantic, New London and Stonington. In the morning the writer gave an address upon "Spiritualism of Yesterday and Today," and Mrs. M. A. Gridley gave a very interesting talk upon her reminiscences of the Fox sisters, she having been one of the principal speakers at the transition service of Margaret Fox Kane. The musical program was especially good as prepared by Organist Charles A. Dowsett, and rendered by our quartette, and by Mrs. Beebe as soloist, and Mrs. C. A. Dowsett as violinist. In the evening the speakers were W. DeLoss Wood of Danielson, Mrs. M. A. Gridley and the writer. Mr. Wood spoke at some length upon the dangers of psychism, illustrating his theme with incidents from his experiments in hypnotism. Mrs. Gridley spoke upon the value and good of the phenomena, and followed her remarks with psychometric readings, and the writer touched upon the general trend of the movement and its far reaching effects upon all departments of thought. Altogether the day was a splendid success. The platform was beautifully decorated with potted plants, palms and flowers; one of our faithful workers, Mrs. Wales W. Clapp, having most successfully seen to it all winter long that the platform never lacked flowers at any of the services.

Mary B. Hill writes: The regular meeting of the Band of Harmony occurs April 18. Upon reconsidering, it has been decided to take the floral offerings to the hall at the Sunday morning service, April 21st, as that is the real date of Mrs. Richmond's (the pastor) birthday, which was spoken of in the last issue of the Progressive Thinker.

Mrs. Mattie E. Hull will attend the Lily Dale Camp meeting the coming season. She is under engagement to lecture August 18, 21 and 26. She will remain in Los Angeles, Cal., until the latter part of this month or the first of May. Correspondents will address accordingly, at 1410 Kellam Ave., Los Angeles. Permanent address, Whitewater, Wis.

"Spiritual Fire Crackers, Bible Chestnuts and Political Pin Points." By J. S. Harrington. A pamphlet containing 79 pages of racy reading. Price 25 cts.

ANNIVERSARY AT SEATTLE,

It Is Celebrated With Appropriate Services.

The Seattle Spiritual Association, at Seattle, on March 31st, celebrated the Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, at K. P. Hall, the hall being decorated for the occasion with flowers and palms and emblem colors. With a well filled hall, people being on time, and at a little past 2 o'clock, the meeting was called to order, by our president, Mr. W. A. Hall.

Meeting opened with singing; all sang joyously, following which a good religiously Spiritualistic invocation was given by Mrs. Florence V. Hibner, a speaker and co-worker of the society. Then our National President, Harrison D. Barrett, gave us his address, "Why We Celebrate The Day." I am sure we all felt grand upliftment of soul, as the eloquent speaker poured forth his beautiful thoughts, with inspiring convictions to our hearts. We all felt the great power he possesses. He is a great good man.

Following the address, Miss. Dice rendered a beautiful instrumental solo, which was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Pomeroy gave a short address on Spiritualism, which was very good, well chosen words, and deep feeling. She reached our hearts. She was followed by Mrs. Lapworth, "What we should do the coming year." With good remarks and sincerity of soul, she inspired us to work, and to do better work. Also Mrs. Willis, a very promising worker, gave us a short address, "The Need of the Hour." We all enjoyed her thoughts for we all know she is earnest in her work. We all sent her our best thoughts.

Mrs. Rogers then gave us a beautiful vocal solo, which was enjoyed by all. Then the messages were given by some of our workers; Mrs. Fairfield, Mrs. Hensen, and Mr. Cobb. They did good work, Mr. Cobb giving full names in every message to the astonishment of all skeptics. He is a good platform worker.

He was followed by a beautiful vocal solo by little Miss Adair, "The Night Is Long". She has a beautiful voice, sweet and clear, and was encored on and on. She is a promising great singer.

Then closing remarks by our National President, Harrison D. Barrett, which, with fitting words and to the surprise of many, he presented to the president of our society, Mr. Walter A. Hall, a beautiful gold watch, given by the members of the society, and tendered with the love and esteem they feel for him, for his good work, always on time at every meeting, looking out for the welfare of all, sincere in all things, and we all felt as he rose to thank us, the deep feeling he felt for us all. Long may he live to do good for the cause.

We then adjourned until the evening meeting, but not until we had partaken of tempting refreshments, prepared by the ladies of the society, in which a sum was raised to put in the treasury. Thus concluding the program of the afternoon.

Evening Meeting.

Opened at 8 o'clock, with congregational singing.

Poem by Mrs. Dahnken: "Our Message," good soul thoughts, uplifting and inspiring and received great applause; the poem being original.

Invocation by Mrs. Chassee one of our able speakers and co-workers, after which Mr. Harrison D. Barrett gave his address with great feeling and his hearers imbibed the great truths he gave forth with marked attention and satisfaction. Followed by Mrs. Cobb, in memoriam of some of our lately arisen friends, speaking at length of each one, of their good work done here on earth, and spoke with feeling of Moses Hull and Jennie Hagan Brown, Theo. J. Mayer, and many others whom we shall miss in the field of work. She said they had gone to their reward; to take up their work in a larger field. Mrs. Cobb is a good speaker, we all enjoyed her.

Following this, a beautiful vocal solo was given by Mrs. Pomeroy in her rich clear voice, we could feel her soul force, pouring forth, which was a great treat to us all.

Then our platform work of the evening was given by Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Emmett, Mrs. Ross. They did very good work; giving consolation and comfort, and proof to many; after which Mr. Barrett, with closing remarks made us all feel encouraged to work and to do better work in the future.

Mrs. Cobb dismissing us with her blessing, we dispersed feeling we had spent a good, profitable and uplifting day, long to be remembered.

MRS. FLORENCE E. HIBNER.
Corresponding Secretary, 311 Nob Hill Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of
FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.
Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.
Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.
Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.
Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.
Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.
Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.
Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.
Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.
Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.
Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the home, the lyceum and societies. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture. By Emma Rood Tuttle. A book by the aid of which a progressive lyceum, a spiritual or liberal society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents; by the dozen, 40 cents. Express charges unpaid.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts. THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty stories, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep-thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death or worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

Can Telepathy Explain?

Results of Psychical Research.

By Minot J. Savage.

Dr. Savage in this book of 243 pages, discusses problems that have vexed intelligent minds probably to a greater extent than any others, saving those of the religious life. He states a great number of well-authenticated instances of spiritist revelation or communication. His discussion is frank and fearless, and merits the widest reading, for he deals with facts and experiences. Price, cloth, $1.00.

HARMONICS OF EVOLUTION.

The Philosophy of Individual Life, Based Upon Natural Science

As taught by modern masters of law. By Florence Huntley. An exceedingly interesting and distinctly valuable contribution to the literature of evolution, unfolding its laws from the deeper and clearer spiritual aspect, and illustrating the defects of the Darwinian theory. Spiritualists and Materialists alike can gain much from its perusal. Price, finely bound in cloth, $2.

A MASTERLY WORK.

Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth

By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.

A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth, $1.00.

A Strange, Weird Mystery.

How a Baby's Building Blocks Warn Against Evil and Give Good Advice.

Wappinger Falls, N. Y., has produced one of the strangest and weirdest mysteries of the year [says the Chicago Tribune] a mystery so unusual, seemingly it has bewildered all who have striven to solve it.

The mystery revolves entirely around little Ted Wilton, aged 11 months, and his set of building blocks.

Whether the secret of the thing is contained in the person of the infant, or whether the blocks themselves are bewitched, whether some outside influence is at work, or somebody playing a trick which has overwrought the nerves of all concerned, or whether, as one New York man claims, some one is hypnotizing the entire family and all those who have been present to witness the strange phenomenon of the blocks and caused them to imagine that these things happened, no one can tell.

The deeper the case is investigated the stranger and more uncanny it becomes.

Theories and guesses count for nothing. No one has explained or satisfactorily theorized even in regard to the case.

Magic Blocks Made in Usual Way.

The plain, bald facts in regard to this mystery are enough to make the occultists and that kind of persons smack their lips with glee. These are the known facts:

On a Christmas Edward Halliday Wilton was presented with a box of building blocks. His father, George N. Wilton, purchased the blocks at the principal store in town, and that store bought them from a New York jobbing firm, which had them direct from the manufactory, and absolute proof discovered that they were manufactured in the ordinary course of business, out of white pine, stamped and colored by machine, sorted and boxed by girls in the factory, and sent to the jobber in a fancy pine box.

There is no evidence that there existed any difference between them and any other of the thousands of boxes of alphabet blocks sent out by the firm. Nor is there any evidence that any hands skilled in jugglery or occultism or any other mysterious science ever touched them. They were carried to the Wilton home, just outside the town of Wappingers Falls, there with the other toys on "Ted's" first Christmas tree, and thrown, and scattered, and kicked around by him in his play.

The baby, of course, could not talk. He was creeping and just beginning to stand alone. He apparently was no brighter than any other baby of that age, nor did he evince any abnormal mental or spiritual gifts. He simply is a healthy, pretty, and normal child.

Baby Spells Words of Warning.

For two weeks after Christmas nothing peculiar was noticed. The first thing peculiar observed in connection with the child or the blocks was on Jan. 8. On that day Mrs. Wilton, who is only 22 years old and extremely proud of baby, was going to her mother's to spend the afternoon. She was dressing, and Ted was sitting on the floor playing with his blocks. His mother purposely had postponed dressing him until the last minute knowing his predilection for getting dirty. She came into the room to get him, and noticed the blocks arranged in regular order—or something approaching regularity. She stood smiling and watching the baby until she noticed the letters on the blocks read:

"STAY."

"O, Mollie," she called, "come quick and see what baby has written with his blocks!"

Mollie came. The two women stood and marveled. Mollie was sure it was only an accident, but Mrs. Wilton had her doubts. She continued dressing, but grew more and more worried.

'Do you think he meant to warn me?" she asked.

Mollie laughed, and assured her mistress that the idea was foolish.

Still Mrs. Wilton worried. Five minutes later she went back to get the baby, and there on the floor were four blocks, and she read:

"HURT."

True the blocks were scattered a bit, but the word read right. Mrs. Wilton was certain that if she went to her mother's she would be injured. In spite of Mollie's jests she telephoned her mother that she could not come.

When Wilton came home he roared. He heehawed with glee over her story until she drew herself up in new dignity and relapsed into silence that was filled with reproach. Then he got down on his knees, held her close in his arms, and lied, like the loving young husband he is, swearing he never doubted a word of it, but simply was overjoyed because the boy was so bright.

Two days later, as Mrs. Wilton was getting ready to go downtown to buy some outing flannel to make Ted some little night gowns, she bent to kiss him, and saw the blocks read: "RAIN."

"No, no, Ted," she laughed. "You can't fool me this time. It's too cold to rain.'

Two hours later she came back, drenched and soaked, having been caught in a heavy rain that broke almost without warning from a sky that had threatened snow.

Secretly Mrs. Wilton began to stand in awe of her baby. Her husband still believed that his wife was imagining things, but a couple of days later the greatest surprise and mystery of all came.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilton were sitting together by the fire. Ted was in bed, and had been asleep for hours. They were discussing the question of buying a home of their own, and Wilton was telling her that he could get the Hooper place cheap. Hooper wanted $2,250, but he thought he could buy it for $2,100, half cash.

During the discussion the baby's blocks were scattered around the floor, apparently over half the room. Mrs. Wilton, as she started to bed, commenced picking up the blocks, and suddenly cried out to her husband:

"Look!" and stood pointing at the floor. Plainly she was a bit frightened and nervous. On the carpet three blocks were ranged together, and they read:

"BUY."

Wilton laughed. "Anyhow," he said. "Ted's advice is good."

"Ted didn't do that," said Mrs. Wilton. "You kicked his blocks all around. Those blocks got together while we were talking."

Wilton laughed again, but his wife was nervous and excited. She was half afraid to touch the blocks. Next day, however, Wilton closed the deal for the Hooper place. Mrs. Wilton put the blocks on a shelf, and they remained there for three days. Then Ted was fretful, and, as she had begun to laugh at her fears, she took them down to give him.

Warnings of Fire and Loss.

Nothing happened for four days. Then one night a coal fell out of the grate and set fire to the carpet. When Wilton smelled smoke the fire was eating into the floor. He put out the blaze and the loss was trifling. The next morning the blocks were found scattered in a corner of the living room—and the only four that were together spelled "FIRE."

Wilton suspected his wife of doing it—and she accused him. Both denied. "All right, then," said Mr. Wilton. "But I piled the blocks in a corner myself."

A couple of days later Mrs. Wilton, who, in her superstitious dread of the blocks had begun to watch them constantly, in spite of herself read: "WARE LOSS."

Two days later, while driving through town, she lost her new mink collarette that she got for Christmas from Mrs. Sadie Fleming, and never found it.

The blocks continued to utter warnings and give advice. Usually they performed only when Ted was playing with them, and they spelled words that it seemed impossible he should even have heard.

Nobody Can Solve the Mystery.

Once, on Feb. 11, the blocks were found scattered on the floor, and Mrs. Wilton read "SICK" on four which were ranged in almost an exact line, the rest being thrown all around. She took medicine and gave Ted a dose, but in spite of that, he got a terrible cold and had croup during the night.

The fame of the "haunted blocks" spread. Mollie, who had been the loudest of the scoffers, became the most awed of all. Neighbors witnessed some of the strangest freaks of the blocks. Once while two neighbors were calling, Mollie came in to ask Mrs. Wilton what to have for dessert, and Mrs. Wilton looked at the blocks, and started.

Then she pointed. The blocks read: "PIE."

Some of the most learned men of the town have examined the blocks and the baby—and have given varying opinions. Charles N. Slater-Zinc, a New York friend of the family, who has made a deep study of hypnotism and kindred arts, and who has delved into the occult for years, vows that hypnotism is back of it all. Some of the neighbors declare it is all chance, and yet admit that the dozens of coincidences are strange, to say the least.

DRUGLESS MEDICATION.

Performs Healing That Is Credited to Various Other Sources.

To the Editor:—H. C. F., a veteran Spiritualist and constant reader of The Progressive Thinker, writes from Cusseta, Texas, asking my medical opinion concerning "Oxydoner", a new, widely advertised, alleged cure-all.

The following being my reply, and thinking the same might be of interest to some among your readers, I therefore send you copy.

The "Oxydoner" is simply a small mechanical device, three inches long and with wire cord attached. This wire cord, with mechanical device, immersed in water, has to be circled up over the ankles as an alleged conductor of Oxygen from the surrounding indoor air, hence the name "Oxydoner"—(Oxygen giver.)

The whole thing in its simple modus operandi and make-up seems to me a toy, a harmless romantic, medical toy or plaything, invented for the express purpose of playing upon the plastic imagination. Apart from this, I see no further merits in "Oxydoner", nevertheless, "Oxydoner," is doing good, has many friends and I do not condemn it.

Like Christian Science Healing," "Oxydoner" is intended ostensibly as a substitute for drug healing, and like "Christian Science," too, while its modus operandi amuses the patient, Nature, in the absence of drugs, cures the disease.

When the sick or invalid are induced to adopt either or any such and go without drugs, they usually get well, but when they do they usually, too, ascribe the cure to one or the other of these imaginary causes, instead of to the real cause itself—the cessation from drugs.

This, positively, is the sole secret of "Oxydoner," and of "Christian Science" healing, and, here, too, in drug cessation lies the secret of health and longevity among Spiritualists, Latter-Day-Saints, Dowieites and others who repudiate drug healing.

To you this solution may be new, but from my long observation and experience in the use and disuse of drugs, as medicaments. The solution to me is absolute certainty.

Thus, the secret of drug cessation, in healing, and which Christian Scientists so proudly ascribe to miracle or "Divine healing" is no miracle, nor divine healing, when logically understood.

Since the advent of Modern Spiritualism, wise spirits have ever warned against crude drug medication, declaring that crude drug medication and drastic drug medication, as well as poison drug medication, were often directly responsible for many premature deaths, declaring, also, that while such were among the remedies of the past, their cessation would now, be first among the remedies of the future.

And so any drugless healing, whether by "Christian Science" or "Oxydoner", electric or magnetic, water-cure or mud cure, is safer than by any crude drug healing. But by far the best healing and without which there can be no healing, is correct living. DR. R. GREER.

Maywood, Ill.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

THE CAUSE IN CALIFORNIA.

Mrs. R. S. Lillie Gives a Glowing Account of California and the Anniversary Exercises at Summerland, and Santa Barbara—She Alludes to an Obnoxious Law Passed by the City Council of Los Angeles, Imposing a License of $50 per Month on All Mediums.

Again the hands on the dial of time have turned past the 31st of March, the "New Year of the New Spiritual Era;" and all Spiritualists, according to a well established custom, have held special services in honor and commemoration of the time when intelligent communication was established between the two states of being, the Spiritual world and this our earthland.

And here by the blue waters of the Pacific, in beautiful flower-crowned California, there is no exception to the general rule. I can say "flower-crowned" at this time with peculiar fitness, for the winter rains have been so abundant that every tree and bush which ever has a blossom, is loaded now, and from every direction, peeping through the grasses and trailing everywhere are flowers of every hue. The Lilies are in the height of their beauty and perfection just in time for the eastertide, and roses are as abundant as in your June time. We do not forget you, and how happy we should have been to have placed a great bouquet of them upon your editorial table, Brother Francis, and on altars of the many societies over the land.

Mr. Lillie and I have been employed since my return from the east last fall with the two societies near our home, Santa Barbara and Summerland. A lecture is given at Summerland each Sunday at 2:30, and in Santa Barbara in the evening. These societies are composed of earnest, faithful men and women who have a good many obstacles to overcome, and who are to be commended for what they have accomplished. The Summerland society owns its hall, a fine piano, and an organ; a dining-room and kitchen well furnished, where they frequently gather for the social element and to assist in the financial part; and everyone knows when the call is sent out, that it means a good time.

The president of this society is Mr. A. L. Bourquin, an excellent man, one who possesses in a marked degree inspiration and mediumistic gifts. The auxiliary or Mite Society is an exceptional band of self-sacrificing workers; their worthy president is Mrs. Laura Darling.

The Santa Barbara Society holds meetings in the Grand Army Hall, which is in a comparatively new building, is a pleasant, home-like place, Their president is J. H. Black, whose heart is in the cause.

On this Anniversary occasion they arranged to hold services in union as far as possible. So all who could, went to Summerland for the day and to Santa Barbara for the evening. Col. J. L. Dryden of Los Angeles, secretary of the California State Spiritualist Association, an excellent speaker, and one who never fails to deliver a message of unqualified truth, was sent for to take part in both places.

My guides delivered an address in the morning in Summerland, and Col. Dryden spoke in the afternoon. An excellent dinner was served between the two services.

We have been so fortunate in Santa Barbara for several Sunday evenings as to have the services of Mrs Grace E Aitken, formerly of Chicago, in reading and answering questions, giving spirit messages, etc., following my addresses. Her work is fine, her manner pleasing, and she impresses all with her sincerity and her sweet and womanly graces. Her ability to sense the contents of the papers upon which questions are written, and to answer the same is unusual, and it is done without ostentation or anything like sensationalism. She followed the afternoon lecture at Summerland, and the evening work in Santa Barbara. Mr. Aitken assists in a part of her work under the head of mental telepathy, acting in an intermediate way between her and the audience.

The Success Club, an auxiliary to the Santa Barbara Society, held a Fair, with supper and dance, Saturday evening the 30th. They are doing an excellent work, their entertainment proving them to be in all respects worthy of their name. Col Dryden gave in the evening at Santa Barbara a lecture on present conditions of the world, of the unrest, the dishonesty and the need of true men and of wise heads. His thoughts were grand. My guides spoke of the day we celebrated, and the music was conducted by J. T. Lillie. Much credit was due to the committees who decorated our halls, as they could be decorated only in California.

And what else does California do? Los Angeles has for several years imposed a license fee of $15 a month upon mediums who used their gifts in the city for a fee. We felt this was unjust, but yesterday's Examiner contained the notice that hereafter all Spiritualistic mediums will be compelled to pay $50 a month in order to carry on their business. The ordinance as first presented provided for a fee of $100, but was cut in half.

We thought we needed the influence of the N. S. A. in California when we asked it last fall. Where are we now, and what will be done with our mediums? This ordinance was passed April 3rd. We have heard nothing yet. We do not know whether the Spiritualists were aware of what was going on, or whether it was sprung without warning.

A test case should be made immediately now to know whether we have any benefit or strength from organization as a religious body, or whether such mediums as are under the authority and sanction, and possessing the papers of the N. S. A. or its associate bodies, shall suffer such indignities. We shall want now to see what it means to be a medium, and to have worked for organization in a land where we are supposed to have religious liberty. R. S. LILLIE.

The Psychic Riddle.

By I. K. Funk, D.D., LL.D., Editor-in-Chief of "The Standard Dictionary"; Author of "The Widow's Mite, and Other Psychic Phenomena," "The Next Step in Evolution," etc.

A book full of psychic suggestions, supported by startling experiences, all told in a wonderfully conservative way. It harmonizes with the judgment pronounced by The Review of Reviews, New York, on the author's previous publication of this subject: "A very sensible, cautious, level-headed piece of work all through;" and also with the judgment on the same book pronounced by the Cleveland Record: "There has never been so fair and painstaking a book put forth on this subject as this one." Price, $1.00.

SPIRITUAL INTERPRETATION.

Is the World Coming to An End?

There appeared recently in a leading New York Sunday paper, an article from a scientist, who claimed that after thirty years' study and investigation, he had arrived at the conclusion that the world would be visited again by a glacial deluge, and that the only place in all North America that would offer a refuge for the people would be the lofty table lands of Mexico.

He further emphasized the sincerity of his statements, by stating that a company had been formed to secure those portions of land that would remain above the level of the waters, and hold them for such people as desired to take advantage of a place of safety during the terrible calamity.

Another article from the pen of one having already made some prophecies that came true, claims that New York City will be destroyed in 1908.

Such statements as these, coming from men of seeming credibility—together with the many calamities that have occurred in recent years of floods, famines, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, wars, etc., would make it seems as if the "signs" that were promised as foreshadowing the so-called "end of the world" were really here, and that we are truly living in what may be properly styled the "latter days."

But with these signs that have all along been taken to portend an actual dissolution of the globe itself, go others hand in hand that make for reform, reconstruction, restitution and spiritual enlightenment.

These were recognized in the great social and political reforms of the present time; in the organization of labor, and in the liberalizing and Spiritualizing of religious thought and life.

Hence, we have reason to believe that the end meant is that relating to the breaking up of the old state of things social, political and religious; and that instead of hastening on to our destruction by a second deluge, we are passing through a crucial season of travail wherein old conditions are giving way before new ideas, and the old dispensation receding before the oncoming of the new.

With the coming of this time of such momentous import to Christian believers it was also promised that Christ would come again in judgment, and that the graves would give up their dead.

Just as they must give up their idea of a literal end of the world, so must they come to realize and accept a more reasonable and spiritual interpretation of these two latter events than the one now held. We who are Spiritualists know that "the graves have given up their dead," and that the great "day of resurrection is already here; because spirit return and communion is an established fact to us.

We also know that many forerunners have appeared upon the scene in late years, crying, Lo! Here!; Lo! There; I am the Christ," as was long ago promised there would be; and some of these are still active in the work of keeping alive the idea of a final practical realization of Christ's second coming to complete and perfect the work begun so long ago.

Spiritualism being nearest to that early movement that laid the foundations of the Christian church and gave birth to Jesus of Nazareth, naturally represents the "second coming of spiritual truth and fact in a general sense; and should ultimate in a central messianic impersonation of the Divine Will and Wisdom in a special sense. This latter idea has been foreshadowed by Mrs. Cora Richmond from time to time in her lectures, and the last issue of the "Spirit of Truth," published by Thos. Cook of Hot Springs, Ark., contains three such prophecies given through her instrumentality.

Thus, I have endeavored to show that while our Christian friends are all wrong in the view they take of how these great bible prophecies are to be fulfilled; yet the facts themselves are none the less true, when viewed from a rational and spiritual standpoint. Thus "the great day of the Lord is here; the day of Resurrection; of judgment; of the Second Coming of Christ; and the so-called "end of the world."

W. J. CUSHING.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Compliments the Views of Harrison D. Barrett in His Article in The Progressive Thinker, of April 6 and 13.

To the Editor:—The able and interesting article in the late Progressive Thinker from Brother Barrett in defense of his position before the Spiritualists of America and the world, is brimfull of good things, and places him not only as a strong man morally, but an intellectual stalwart, strong in the integrity of purpose, and as the President of the N. S. A., the right man in the right place.

There has come a time in our Cause when to be a Spiritualist means more than the belief in spirit communion, but the moral integrity of the individual as well, and the aim for all that true manhood and womanhood implies.

Commercial Spiritualism and mediumship must be disassociated from the true teachings and philosophy of Spiritualism before it can stand upon the high pedestal of moral and spiritual growth and be the light that lighteth the world. The Spiritualists owe you, Brother Francis, a debt of gratitude for the publication of The Progressive Thinker, which makes for truth and progress

BISHOP A. BEALS.

Summerland, Cali.

SPIRITUAL ACADEMY CONCERT.

Large Number in Attendance Sunday Evening.

On Sunday evening there was a large number in attendance at the concert given in the Spiritual Academy, and it was received with much pleasure. Each number was well given as follows: Invocation, Rev. A. P. Blinn, pastor; hymn, congregation; reading, Mrs. Charles E. Burdick; duet, Light at Evening Time, Misses Blackstone and Leopold; intermezzo, Cavalleria Rusticana, Mr. and Mrs. Dowsett and Mr. Crowell; alto solo, The Spirit Light, Mrs. George W. Beebe; Cantilene, for organ and piano, op. 17, Emil Hartmann; poem, The Builders, Rev. A. P. Blinn; address, Soul Builders, Rev. A. P. Blinn; The Sweetest Song, Ladies quartette; violin solo, selected, Mrs. Charles A. Dowsett; benediction, Rev. A. P. Blinn; postlude, Mr. Charles Dowsett, organist.—Norwich (Ct. Bulletin.

"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

And Matters of Interest from the Secretary of the N. S. A.

To the Editor:—Perhaps the readers of your valuable journal would like to learn of the progress of matters at this office, especially in the receipt and expenditure of financial contributions. The work is of course more or less of routine order, and it has been going steadily on during the months since our last annual convention. Each duty at this office has been discharged and we have had no friction or unpleasant experience of any sort in our correspondence and association with our auxiliaries and the world.

The illness and decease of our beloved treasurer, of necessity, for a time, brought additional and new responsibilities to the N. S. A. secretary, but these have been met in the best possible manner and as our board is to hold a semi-annual meeting at headquarters the middle of April, at which a new treasurer will be elected, it is expected that these matters that belong to the office of treasurer will be diverted to their regular channel of adjustment.

Endowment Fund:—At last convention, President Barrett in his annual report urged upon the delegates and the Spiritualistic world at large the necessity of creating an endowment fund for the N. S. A., that a regular income might be established by which the good work of the National body might be carried on without interruption or fear of such drainage on the capital of the Association as to cripple its usefulness if not founder its life.

At different periods our president has continued his appeals for such an established fund, through the press and from the platform, but with what result? Up to this date we have collected just $39.20—two dollars and twenty cents of which came in ten-cent donations of a chainless letter system started by Mrs. Florence Hewes of Maine. Mr. Frank T. Ripley and Mr. Titus Welch have been very helpful in the matter of endowment as far as we have gone, and a few other friends have manifested their interest in the case, but mostly indifference is the sign on this important financial branch of our association.

The Mediums' Relief Fund has fared a little better, a few friends have contributed to that necessary branch of our finances. Rev. Frank T. Ripley has taken penny collections for the Relief Fund and Rev. H. C. Dorn of Newark, has sent in contributions from his appeals to the people; in February, Mrs. M. J. Stephens and Mrs. M. T. Longley of Washington held a seance for the Mediums' Relief Fund and raised Five dollars from their work. Since Nov. 1, we have received less than fifty dollars for the poor mediums, and yet our expense from that fund averages one hundred and fifty dollars per month. The general fund has been somewhat blest by the payment of some of the pledges made at last convention, by a few generous contributions and by collections from a few of our societies. The First Spiritualist Church of Allegheny sent in a good collection with promise to take one each month. All of this help is highly appreciated and thankfully credited to the donors' names. Unless contributions are marked otherwise we credit them to the general fund which must be maintained if we would continue the general and worthy work of the N. S. A. In view of the facts herein given, comment is unnecessary; the public seems to think that as the N. S. A. is possessed of property it needs no endowment fund, regardless of the fact that its expense from year to year is heavy and must be met. It is noticeable that almost every donation comes from those who are accustomed to give—and give largely according to their means—and that but few names of contributors are enrolled on our books. Mediums and workers at large—who benefit by our ordination rules and privileges and in other ways from the protection that the N. S. A. can give—are conspicuous by their absence from our contributors' list; some promise to give a seance now and then for the benefit of relief or general funds, but in nearly every instance they forget all about their pledge after it is given.

Mr. Editor, I am not writing this in a spirit of complaint but simply to place the facts before you and at the same time to publicly thank every friend and helper of the N. S. A. for individual encouragement and aid to our cause.

Our love and good will go to all mankind.

MARY T. LONGLEY.
N. S. A. Secretary.
600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Jared Chapman.

The remains of Mrs. Jared Chapman arrived here from Yonkers Saturday afternoon and were taken charge of by Undertaker Gager.

The funeral services were held in the Spiritual Academy Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Among those in attendance were old friends of the deceased and relatives from Yonkers, Schenectady and other places. Rev. Albert P. Blinn conducted the services. He read a scriptural lesson, offered prayer and read an Arabian poem entitled, "He Who Died at Azan." It was read at the funeral of Mayor P. A. Collins in Boston in accordance with the request of Mr. Collins before he died. Mr. Blinn also made an address, his theme being life and death. He referred to Mrs. Chapman's membership in the Norwich Spiritual union and said she had no fear of the future life, as she had solved the mystery. No eulogy was pronounced as the speaker said her good life was her best eulogy. Mrs. Charles S. Twist sang "Where the Roses Never Fade" and "Lead Kindly Light." Charles A. Dowsett presided at the organ.

The remains were exposed to view after the services. Burial was in the Chapman plot in the cemetery at Poquetanuck and Rev. Mr. Blinn read a committal service at the grave. The bearers were Louis Chapman of Schenectady and Elwood, F. T. and James Gilbert Maples of Yonkers. Easter lilies and floral forms were placed on the grave.—Norwich (Ct.) Daily Record.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 165 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

Life of Thomas Paine. Illustrated with views of the old Paine homestead and Paine Monument at New Rochelle. By the editor of the National, with preface and notes by Peter Eckler. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

Life's Progression, Researches in Metaphysics. By Edward C. Randall. Price $1.50.

Life Work of Cora L. V. Richmond. An interesting book regarding a world-renowned inspirational lecturer, a pioneer worker in Spiritualism. Compiled and edited by H. D. Barrett. Price $2, postpaid.

Light of Egypt, or the Science of the Soul and the Stars. A grand work of profound philosophical deductions, on a theme of great interest to everybody. Price $2.

Magic—The Old and New Magic. An explanation of the tricks of legerdemain. Price, $1.50; postage 10 cents.

Mahomet, His Birth, Character and Doctrine. Historically correct. Exact and perfect in every detail and beyond adverse criticism. By Edward Gibbon. Price, 25 cents.

Mahomet the Illustrious. An apology for the life and character of this celebrated prophet of Arabia, containing 118 neatly printed pages. By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. Price 25 cents.

Man and the Spiritual World, as disclosed by the Bible and study along the line of Biblical Spiritualism. By Rev. Arthur Chambers. Price, $1.10.

Man in the Past, Present and Future. A popular account of results of recent scientific research regarding the origin, position and prospects of mankind. By Dr. Ludwig Buchner. Price, cloth, $1.

Maurine and Other Poems. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price $1.

Mary Anne Carew. By Carlyle Petersilea. Price $1.

Mediumship and Its Laws. A most valuable book by Hudson Tuttle. Price, 35 cents.

Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development. An every-day useful instructor in Psychic Science. By W. H. Bach. Price, 25 cents.

Mollie Fancher, or the Brooklyn Enigma. Giving an account of the most marvelous case of spirit control on record. By Judge Abram H. Dailey. Price, $1.50.

Morality Without God. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price 10 cents.

Mysteries of the Seance, or Tricks and Traps of Bogus Mediums. By a life-long Spiritualist. Being an expose of how fraudulent mediums perform their tricks. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Myth of the Great Deluge. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. A very interesting pamphlet. By James M. McCann. Price 15 cents.

Nature Cure. This is an excellent book for suffering humanity. It simply tells how to prevent and cure the ills of the flesh in a natural way. By Drs. M. E. and Rosa C. Conger. Price, cloth, fancy $2; common $1.50.

New Testament Stories Comically Illustrated. By Watson Heston. Price, cloth, $1.50; board cover, $1.

No Beginnings. By W. H. Maple. Price 75 cents.

Obsession. How evil spirits influence mortals, and how to guard against the same. A very necessary and interesting study for sensitives. By M. Faraday. 23 pages. Price 10 cents.

Oceanides. A story of spirit life, by Carlyle Petersilea. Price, paper cover only, 50 cents.

Old Testament Stories. By Watson Heston. Price, boards, $1; cloth, $1.50.

Origin of Species. By Charles Darwin. Price, cloth, gilt top, 50 cts.

Our Children. Hints from Practical Experience for Parents and Teachers. By Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

Out of the Depths Into the Light. This little book will be read with intense interest by thousands. By Samuel Bowles; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. Price 25 cents.

Our Bible, Who Wrote It, and a Few Thoughts on Other Bibles. By Moses Hull. Price, $1.

Past and Present. By Thomas Carlyle. Price 50 cents.

Perfect Motherhood, or Mabel Raymond's Resolve. Dedicated to woman everywhere, that children may cease to be born accursed. By Lois Waisbrooker. Price, cloth, $1.

Philip Carlislie. By Carlyle Petersilea. Price $1.10.

Palmistry. By Comte de Saint Germain, A. B., L. L M. Practical palmistry, or hand reading simplified. Price 75 cents.

Pearls. Brave Thoughts from Brave Minds. Selected and Arranged by M. M. Mangasarian; 75 pages, neatly bound. Price, paper, 25 cts.; cloth 35 cents.

Philosophy of Phenomena. Physical and Metaphysical. Matter phenomena and life phenomena. Objective and subjective phenomena. Hyperbole metaphysical. By Geo. M. Ramsey, M. D. Price, cloth $1.

Pioneers of Progress. Dr. Dr. T. A. Bland. Price $1.

Poems of Passion. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price $1.

Poems of Pleasure. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price $1.

Poems of Power. By Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Price $1.

Political Works of Thomas Paine. Containing the three volumes—"Common Sense," "The Crisis" and "Rights of Man"—three volumes in one. Just the book for patriotic Americans. Price, cloth $1.

Power of Self-Formation. By Leroy Berrier. In two styles of binding; paper cover, 50 cents; cloth cover, 80 cents.

Practical Bungalows and Cottages for Town and Country. By Fred. T. Hodgson. Price, $1.00.

Practical Methods for Self-Development. Spiritual, Mental, Physical By Elizabeth Towne. Price, $1.00.

Practical Methods to Insure Success. A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to the physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price 10 cents.

Primary Factors of Organic Evolution. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D., Member of the U. S. National Academy of Science, Professor of Zoology in the University of Pennsylvania. Price, cloth, $2.

Psychic Riddle, The, By I. K. Funk, D. D., LL.D. A book full of psychic suggestions. Price, $1.00.

Prophets of Israel. Comprises in the main popular sketches from Old Testament History. By Carl H. Cornill, Doctor of Theology and Professor of Old Testament History. Price 25 cents.

Psychic Light. Continuity of Law and Life. By Maud Lord Drake. This book is from the pen of an acknowledged leader in psychic philosophy and a successful demonstrator of its phenomena, and one of the oldest advocates of New Thought and Higher Education. Cloth bound. Price, $1.50.

Psychometry. Its Science and Law of Unfoldment. By J. C. F. Grumbine. Price, 50 cents.

Pulpit, Pew and Cradle. Second paragraph in book, last two lines reads: "Christianity is one thing for grown men. It is quite another thing for women and children. By Helen H. Gardner. Price 10 cents.

Radiant Energy and Its Analysis. Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics. By Prof. Edgar L. Larkin, director of Lowe Observatory. Containing numerous illustrations and diagrams. Price $1.75.

Rational Memory Training. By Rev. B. F. Austin. Price, 75 cents.

Realization. A Course of Lessons Upon the Inner Nature of the Self. By Loraine Follett. Price, 50 cents.

Reincarnation. By Walker and Wood. Price, leatherette, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents;

Reincarnation, or the Doctrine of the Soul's Successive Embodiments. Examined and discussed pro and con by Dr. J. M. Peebles versus Dr. Helen Densmore and W. J. Colville. Paper cover. Price 30 cents.

Relation of the Spiritual to the Material Universe, and the Law of Control. New edition, enlarged and revised and greatly improved. By M. Faraday. Price 15 cents.

Researches Into the Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By Sir Wm. Crookes. Illustrated. Price 50 cents.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of
"A Wanderer In Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the st, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsession and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

The National Spiritualists' Association.

A List of Chartered Societies.

By vote of the last N. S. A. Convention the National Secretary was instructed to have a list of chartered societies printed and a copy of the same supplied to each auxiliary of the organization. The following list I do not consider complete, as some of those named are in arrears for dues, and yet they are not sufficiently so to have their charters revoked before another annual convocation; some others may have joined State associations but they have not so notified the National Secretary. This is the best that we can offer until the list is revised after the convention of 1907. The N. S. A. has issued during its existence, 358 charters, but many of the societies have subsequently withdrawn from the National and joined the State body; other local societies have disbanded and a very few have decided to affiliate with neither the National or State organizations and to continue their work as independent bodies.

MARY T. LONGLEY,
N. S. A. Secretary.

STATE ASSOCIATIONS.

California—Arthur S. Howe, Los Angeles, President.

Connecticut—Mrs. J. E. B. Dillon, Hartford, Secretary.

Illinois—Dr. G. B. Warne, Chicago, President.

Indiana—Mrs. Carrie H. Mong, Muncie, Secretary.

Iowa—Hawkeye State Association, W. A. Willing, Northwood, President.

Kansas—A. Scott Bledsoe, Topeka, President.

Maine—Mrs. Viola A. B. Rand, Hartland, Secretary.

Massachusetts—Mrs. C. L. Hatch, Dorchester, Boston, Secretary.

Michigan—Miss Genevra Spaulding, Lansing, Secretary.

Minnesota—John S. Maxwell, Minneapolis, President.

Missouri—H. R. Gates, St. Louis, Secretary.

Montana—Mrs. F. D. McCormick, Billings, President.

Nebraska—G. S. Klock, Lincoln, Secretary.

New York—H. W. Richardson, East Aurora, President.

Ohio—C. A. Sollinger, Cleveland, Secretary.

Oklahoma—R. E. Lee, Hedrick, Okla., Secretary.

Oregon—H. W. Behnke, Portland, Secretary.

Texas—Mrs. Carrie Hinsdale, Fort Worth, President.

Washington—F. W. McPheirson, Daily Times Office, Seattle, Secretary.

Wisconsin—Miss Louise G. Loebel, Milwaukee, Secretary.

LOCAL SOCIETIES.

COLORADO.

Denver—Church of Spirit Communion, Geo. M. Bacon, Lawrence street; Psychical Research Society, W. L. Marshall, Sherman avenue.

Grand Junction—Progressive Spiritual Society, Mrs. Ida B. Chase, Grand avenue.

Leadville—Occult Society, Mrs. Agnes Moulton, The Moulton.

CONNECTICUT.

Compounce Camp—Mrs. J. E. B. Dillon, Hartford.

Niantic Camp—Miss Mary A. Hatch S. Windham.

Society.

Norwich—First Spiritual Church, Mrs. M. P. Clapp, Roath street.

DELAWARE.

Wilmington—Mrs. M. C. Hatrman, West street.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington—First Association, F. A. Wood, A street S. E.

FLORIDA.

Jacksonville—Zuleika Society, Mrs. Amy Buchanan, E. Eighth street.

Tampa—Mrs. J. J. Lumsford, Beach street.

IDAHO.

Pocatello—Mrs. E. Estoria, South Third street.

ILLINOIS.

Our Illinois local societies went into the State Association, as is the case with all the locals of several other states.

INDIANA.

Americus—Newton Bower, Colburn.

Balbec, West Grove and Pennville Society, Eva Paxon, Balbec.

Chesterfield Camp—Mrs. Flora H. Millspaugh, Chesterfield.

Dunkirk—Barney Leitz.

Economy—A. W. Swain.

Harlan—Mrs. Jennie Keever.

Hartford City—John Lennox.

Fort Wayne—H. H. Haines, Columbia avenue.

Frankfort—Asa H. Boulden.

Marion—Mrs. M. Bonerrortz.

Mechanicsburg—C. R. Keesling.

Muncie—Jan. Schemen.

Noblesville—E. S. Palmer.

Plymouth—S. B. Fanning.

Portland—Ray Hammatt.

Remington—John Jordan.

Rensaleaer—James Welch.

Rochester—Albert Bitters.

Sedalia—J. H. Rockwood.

Sullivan—P. D. Lowe.

Sweetser—Cleo Harter.

Thornton—James A. Ball.

Trafalga—W. H. Barnett.

Williamsburg—Columbus Reynolds.

IOWA.

M. V. S. A. Camp, Mollie B. Anderson, Clarksville, Mo.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville—Church of Divine Truth, Mrs. Emma Young, West Walnut street; Church of the Soul, Chas. Grimwald, Bank street; Light of Truth Church, D. F. Rectanus, Jefferson street.

Newport—H. F. Schraeder, York street.

LOUISIANA.

New Orleans—Miss K. Willig, 831 Sixth street.

MAINE.

Kenduskeag Society—L. M. Hewes, Main street, Bangor.

Portland—First Society—E. G. Bragdon, Congress street.

Camps—Etna, H. D. Barrett, Canaan, Me.; Madison, Rev. F. A. Wiggin, Alaska street, Boston, Mass.; Verona, A. F. Smith, Hodgdon street, Bangor, Me.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore—First Church, Chas. R. Schirm, Builders' Exchange Building.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston—Gospel Spirit Return Society, Minnie M. Soule, 17 Fayette street, Cambridge, Mass.; Ladies' Industrial Union, Mrs. S. F. Belcher, Marlboro, Mass.

Fall River—M. T. Bardsley, Fall River.

Haverhill—Shepard Ham, Mills street.

Lawrence—German Society, Wm. Fischer, Hall street.

Malden—Rebecca Morton, Main street.

New Bedford—Mrs. R. C. Reynolds, Fourth street.

Newburyport—Geo. W. Quimby, Purchase street.

Salem—First Spiritualist Association, Dora M. Webster, Winthrop street; Spiritual Research Society, E. E. Woodbury, Beverly, Mass.

Springfield—Ladies' Aid, Mrs. E. B. Wood, Main street.

Worcester—Geo. H. Woodis, Havland street.

MISSOURI.

Joplin—Mrs. J. L. Power, High street.

St. Louis—Spiritual Temple, Rev. Thos. Grimshaw, Pine Street Church; Spiritual Research Society, Mrs. E. B. Price, Goutois street.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Manchester—Andrew Kay, R. F. D. No 2.

NEW JERSEY.

Newark—H. C. Dorn, Columbia st.

Paterson—J. Thornley, Silk Mills.

NEW YORK.

Rochester—F. D. Cushman, Sawyer street.

Troy—F. P. Edgerton, Second street, Albany.

Waverly—Mrs. C. F. Lyons, Clinton avenue.

Yonkers—Prof. Alfred Andrews, Hawthorne avenue.

OHIO.

Lima—Mrs. Kittie Lister.

Van Wert—Miss Ora C. Rose, Washington street.

OREGON.

New Era Camp—Geo. M. Lazelle, Oregon City.

Portland—First Association—C. H. Goodman, East Twelfth street.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Allegheny City—First Church, S. B. Fetzer, Ingram; Charter 352, Dr. John Ehler, E. Ohio street.

Bradford—C. J. Heinzmann, Cliff street.

Eagles Mere—Mr. Ayice Dunham.

Erie—Charter 284, Dr. W. Greenfield, W. Fifth street; Charter 299, L. L. Bruder, E. Sixth street.

Kanesville—I. F. Kirkwood.

Lancaster—John B. Hartmann, King street.

McKeesport—Mrs. Nellie G. Sullivan, Fifth avenue.

Philadelphia—First Association, F. H. Morrill, Ritchie street; Helping Hand Society, Mary Humphreys, N. Tenth street; Children's Lyceum and Sunshine Club, Mrs. M. E. Cadwallader, N. Thirteenth street; Woman's Union, Helen A. Milliman, Valeria street; Spiritualists' Society, Charter 32, Thomas M. Locke, N. Seventh street; Willing Workers, Ladies Society, Mrs. T. M. Locke, N. Seventh street; Second Society, James Wallace, Thompson street; German Society, Mrs. S. Snyder, N. Seventh street; United Society, Mary E. Williams, Quince street.

Pittsburg—First Spiritual Church, C. L. Stevens, Seventh street.

Tidioute—Mrs. S. P. Singleton.

Titusville—C. M. Hayes.

Washington—Mrs. Lucy Carroll, Franklin street.

Williamsport—Chas. A. Keihl, West street.

RHODE ISLAND.

Pawtucket—Matthew Tatersall, Columbia street.

Providence—Louis D. Francis, Moore street.

TENNESSEE.

Memphis—Mrs. Mary Meder, Parker street.

TEXAS.

El Paso—Mrs. Ada V. Lane.

VERMONT.

Queen City Park Camp, Mrs. Effie I Chapman, Cambridge.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond—F. L. Jobson, Beach street.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Wheeling—Rev. G. W. Way, Vermont avenue.

Parkersburg—Mrs. Ruth Stevenson, E. Seventh street.

WISCONSIN.

Morris Pratt Institute—Rev. J. A. Weaver, Whitewater.

Stevens Point—Mrs. Daisy Stewart.

WYOMING.

Sheridan—Miss Fannie Tibbetts, Park street.

NATIONAL IN SCOPE.

Temple Building Fund Association—Rev. G. W. Kates, Cheney, Pa.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitaints of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

Third Annual Convention

Of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.

The Third Annual Convention of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists was held in Orpheum Hall, 135 N. Delaware St., Indianapolis, Ind., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 29, 30 and 31, 1907.

While there were not as many delegates present as we had hoped for, the reports showed that there were two societies now in good standing, but all did not send delegates.

Much important business was transacted, among which was the adoption of some amendments to our By-Laws, and some good resolutions.

The reports of the President, Secretary and Missionary showed that much good work had been done for our cause during the past year.

From every viewpoint the convention was a grand success; perfect harmony prevailed, the weather was beautiful, and all meetings were largely attended. Sunday night every available seat was occupied and many were compelled to stand, notwithstanding it was Easter, with special services in all the churches of the city.

On Friday and Saturday we had with us as lecturer Miss Elizabeth Harlow, whose work is always good, but on this occasion she seemed to excel herself, saying just the things that were in keeping with the contention in the city.

On Sunday we had Will J. Erwood as lecturer. He always pleases his audiences, and bids fair to be one of our best teachers. He talked to large audiences both morning and night and had their entire attention.

At all the meetings Mrs. Anna Throndsen and Mrs. Mattie Hayden gave clear and concise messages, all of which were acknowledged, and Mrs. Frances Ruddick gave slate-writings from the platform, some of the messages being written on top of the table in full glare of the electric light, and many persons holding the slate.

On Monday, the 25th, occurred the wholesale arrest of the local mediums, at the instigation of Hagaman; and on the 26th and 27th the wonderful debate between J. Dwight Hagaman and Dr. Leslie R. Kingsley, "The Great", took place in Tomlinson Hall with an attendance of fully 2,000 people, and it was pronounced the greatest farce that ever took place in the city. But notwithstanding all of this our meetings were a perfect success, as this only served as an advertisement for us.

On Tuesday following our convention occurred the trial of these mediums, at which time Hagaman proved his own undoing. Only two of the mediums were called to the witness stand and asked a few questions when they were discharged and all others were dismissed, and Judge Whallon recommended that hereafter if arrests are to be made they be made through the City Controller, and not by some stranger who does these things for his own advertisement.

Both the National and the State Associations were represented at the trial, ready to take the stand in defense of the mediums if necessary.

Dr. George B. Warne endeared himself to the mediums of Indianapolis by his willingness to appear in their defense, and they now understand his position as never before, and know him to be the loyal friend of true mediumship.

The benefits of organization were presented to the mediums and Spiritualists of Inianapolis in a more forcible manner than they ever could be otherwise. When Attorney Holmes presented the Articles of Incorporation of the State Association, signed and sealed by the Secretary of State, to Hagaman, it was as if some one had dealt him a blow and he had nothing further to say.

We feel that our convention came just at the right time and that Spiritualism has gained a great victory in that field.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, E. A. Schram, Peru, Ind.

First Vice-President, Byron W. Barge, Indianopolis, Ind.

Second Vice-President, R. E. Bragdon, Anderson, Ind.

Secretary, Mrs. Carrie H. Mong, Muncie, Ind.

Treasurer, Mrs. Lou. Schwennesen, Muncie, Ind.

Trustees, Mrs. Marguerite L. Miller, Rochester, Ind.; J. H. Campbell, Sheridan, Ind.; E. A. Gray, Balbec, Ind.; Mrs. Della Bragdon, Anderson, Ind.

CARRIE H. MONG.
Secretary Indiana State Association, Muncie, Ind.

Report of the Committee on Amendments.

To the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists, in Convention assembled:

We, your Committee on Amendments beg to report that we have carefully considered the several amendments proposed, and would recommend as follows:

First, That that portion of Sec. 1, Art. 6, of the Constitution of the State Spiritualists Association of Minnesota, which covers the matter of individual membership—with the additional clause suggested in the president's report, and which reads as follows: "provided that not more than seven individuals in any one locality shall be received as personal members—be adopted, and become Section 2 of Article II. of our By-Laws.

Second, That Section 3 of Article 6 of the Constitution of the Minnesota State Spiritualist Association, be adopted into our By-Laws, and become Section Five (5) of Article 2 thereof.

Third, That only those portions of Article 10 of the By-Laws of the State Spiritualist Association of Minnesota, which cover points upon the matter of Ordination, not already covered in our own Constitution and By-Laws, be adopted, and be inserted as an additional section to Article 6 of our By-Laws.

Fourth, That the incoming Secretary be instructed to make typewritten copies of all amendments, insert said copies in their proper places in the Constitution and By-Laws of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists, and mail copies of such amended Constitutions, to the Secretaries of all Local Societies auxiliary to this Association.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
WILL J. ERWOOD,
LYDIA A. CRANE,
MARGUERITE L. MILLER
SUSANNA A. GRAY.
Committee on Amendments.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists, in Convention Assembled:

Your Committee to which was submitted the preparation of a series of Resolutions for this Convention, begs to submit the following:

Whereas, Modern Spiritualism has been before the world for more than a half century, and has proved itself a most important factor in the progress of the world; has removed much of the doubt incidental to the continuity of life, and brought such positive proof of the fact that our arisen friends still live; and has thus earned for itself an enviable position among the religions, sciences and philosophies of the world, therefore be it

Resolved, That it is our duty, and our privilege, to use every legitimate means to further the study of Spiritualism, and to place Spiritualists upon a higher intellectual and philosophical plane, and to this end we urge every society and individual to pursue more scientific methods of study and investigation of the phenomena of Spiritualism.

Resolved, That while we have the greatest deference for the product of inspiration and the worthy individuals who have been the "mouthpieces" of the higher Intelligences, we urge that every Spiritualist seek, as never before, to cultivate his or her own splendid individuality to the end that instead of simply being the passive instrument of arisen intelligences, they may rise to such an exalted plane intellectually and spiritually, as to be enabled to consciously co-operate with the advanced thinkers of the "World of Souls", thus becoming more perfect instruments for the transmission of truth and inspiration to the world.

Resolved, That, inasmuch as we cannot depend upon the schools of the present day to furnish education along the lines of the truths of Spiritualism, relative to the Soul Growth and the Inner Man, we will endorse and help to sustain the Morris Pratt Institute and other similar institutions of learning.

Resolved, That as mediumship is the channel through which the realization of the continuity of life is brought to humanity, and that as the phenomenon is sometimes colored by the channel through which it passes, we deprecate the hap-hazard way in which some individuals seek to cultivate this commendable gift.

Resolved, That we realize that the only way to have the best is to furnish the best possible conditions under which to bring the truth to men, and we, therefore, urge every society and individual to exercise the greatest care in the selection of time and place in which their spiritual gatherings are to be held; and particularly in the selection of the individuals who are to represent them as mediators between the material and spiritual worlds, and to this end we urge the State Association to devise a system of reading and study especially suited to investigators and students who desire a thorough understanding of the principles of the philosophy and phenomena of Spiritualism.

Resolved, That while we fully uphold all genuine phenomena and real mediumship, we are unalterably opposed to all simulations and fraudulent practices in all phases of life, and we pledge ourselves to use every legitimate means to rid the cause of the impostors who are but barnacles upon the ship of Spiritual Progress, and will aid the law to the extent of our ability in the prosecution of the same. To the end that this may be facilitated, we urge that all local societies refuse absolutely to engage any but the most reliable and true workers, and such as are recognized as workers by this and other State Associations, or the National Association.

Resolved, That as we cannot bestow life, we have no legal or moral right to take life, therefore we are unalterably opposed to capital punishment.

Resolved, That as we are opposed to all forms of dissipation, we urge that Spiritualists everywhere assert their every effort toward the elimination of the use of everything which has a tendency to destroy them physically, mentally and spiritually.

Resolved, That as the "Old Guard" who have so long stood in the van of progress are slowly but surely passing away, and the day dawns upon which we will have need of younger teachers to step into the breach, we urge the Spiritualists everywhere to organize and sustain Lyceums for the education of our children to the end that they may become familiarized with the philosophical and spiritual aspects of Spiritualism, thus becoming qualified to take charge of the movement in the days to come.

Resolved, That as the Angel of Deliverance—sometimes called Death—has unlocked the door of Mortality and set free our Beloved Moses Hull, Theodore J. Mayer, Jennie Hagan Brown, and many others, we rejoice with them that their physical pilgrimage is o'er and that they have been set free; at the same time we deplore their absence in the physical—the stilling of their voices, ever raised in the cause of right—and extend our loving sympathy to all those whose lives have been so directly altered by their transition.

Resolved, That a copy of the above resolution be sent, by the secretary, to the bereaved companions and friends of the above workers; and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to all the Spiritualist papers.

Resolved, That we urge our Spiritualists, and Societies everywhere to stand firm to what they know to be the truth; we beseech them to take no heed of those individuals, seeking after notoriety, who go up and down like ravening wolves, seeking whom they may devour, and we urge that Spiritualists everywhere refuse to allow the Banner of Spiritualism to be besmirched by being dragged into disgraceful controversy with opponents whose only purpose is self-advertisement; and to enter into discussion with whom is merely to lower ourselves to the standard.

Resolved, That we desire to put ourselves on record as being entirely in sympathy with, and endorsing the efforts of Senator Bereridge of this State, in his efforts to further progressive legislation upon the child-labor question.

Resolved, That we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions which now appear in the Constitution of the New York State Association, as being peculiarly fitted to the needs of our own State Association:

1st. That we recognize in Spiritualism the science of life and the religion of humanity.

2nd. We demand that no legislation shall be enacted that seeks the union of Church and State.

3rd. That while we favor the attainment of the highest education possible for the youth of our land, that we most earnestly protest against the use of public funds for the support of schools where sectarianism is taught in any form.

4th. Believing that all days are equally holy, we desire that no special Sunday laws shall restrict the rights of sects who worship on other days.

5th. We protest against all laws tending to restrict the free exercise of spiritual mediumship and of magnetic healing.

6th. We commend to the public that they shall read the literature of Spiritualism comprised in a vast array of books, periodicals, papers and pamphlets, thus deriving a better idea of the true value of philosophy and phenomena, both of which are so positively requisite to a true understanding and enjoyment of Spiritualism.

7th. That we deprecate the wasting of our forces and our means in the present system of itineracy, so largely in vogue, as subversive of the best interest of societies and a serious barrier to true spiritual advancement, and we recommend the settlement of our speakers for a term of at least one year, with the privilege of an occasional exchange of services with other speakers that belong to the clergy of the sectarian denominations.

Resolved, That our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to our President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Board of officers for their faithful and efficient service of the past year.

Resolved, That our thanks are due, and are hereby tendered to the several workers, in Indianapolis and elsewhere, who have, by their efforts contributed to the success of this convention.

Resolved, That our thanks are due, and are hereby tendered to the Spiritual press for its courteous treatment of our people.

All of which is respectfully submitted. Committee.

Spiritualist Meetings.

It is important when a meeting is suspended, that notice be given us, so that inquirers may not be mislead. We want new notices of all meetings being held here in public halls at the present time.

The Church of the Soul, Rev. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor, holds regular services every Sunday at 11 o'clock, in Hall 309 Masonic Temple (corner State and Randolph streets). Sunday-school at 10 a. m. All are invited.

The Band of Harmony (auxiliary to the Church of the Soul) holds regular meetings the first and third Thursdays of each month, at 3:30 to 10 p. m. Ladies bring lunch. Coffee served at 6 p. m. All are made welcome.

The Christian Spiritualists will hold services at the Van Buren Opera House, corner Madison street and California avenue, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Hamilton Gill will lecture and give spirit messages.

The Progressive Spiritual Society. Services at 8 p. m., 183 E. North avenue, corner Burling street. Mrs. B. Hilbert, speaker.

First German Spiritualist Society on the West Side. Meetings every Sunday at 3 p. m. in Garselman's Hall, corner Ashland avenue and W. 13th street.

The Light of Truth Church will hold services in Hopkins' Hall 528 W 63rd street, near Stewart avenue. Conference at 3 p. m. Lecture at 7:45. Messages at each service. Midweek meeting Thursday 8 p. m. Mrs. Jeffery Burland, pastor.

Central Spiritual Church holds services each Sunday evening at Trimble Hall, 1977 W. Madison street (near 40th avenue) commencing at 7:30 sharp. Conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Howes.

The Church of the Psychic Forces holds services at Wilcox Hall, corner Champlain avenue and 43d street, every Sunday. Conference at 8 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m. The hall number is 361-363 East 43d street. Conducted by Mrs. Ida Cleveland.

The Society of Spiritual Truth holds services every Sunday at 2:30 p. m., at 3539 Calumet avenue. Lecture and spirit messages. All are welcome. J. K. Hillis, Psychic.

The Spiritualist Church of Students of Nature will hold its services at Flynn's Hall, 461 North avenue, corner Robey street and Milwaukee avenue, every Sunday evening at 7:30. The hall can be reached by Milwaukee avenue North avenue and Robey street cars, and the Logan Square and Humboldt Park Metropolitan elevated. Mrs. M. Schumacher, pastor.

The Christian Spiritualists Society will hold meetings during the winter months, conducted by Miss Sarah Thomas, every Sunday afternoon and evening, at 3 and 8 o'clock, at Conway Hall, corner Western avenue and West Lake street; entrance on Western avenue, over drug store.

Golden Rule Spiritualist Society, Nora E. Hill, pastor; Dr. J. H. Randall, assistant pastor. Holds services every Sunday evening during July and August, at O'Donnell's College Hall, Paulina street, near Washington Boulevard. All welcome.

Temple Light and Truth, 370 Wabansia avenue, near Robey street and North avenue. Sunday-school 10:30 a. m. Lectures and spirit messages given at 3 and 8 p. m., by Mrs. T. Loll, pastor, every Sunday, in German and English.

The Hyde Park Occult Society holds regular Sunday evening services, 7:45 o'clock, at 319 E. 55th street, between Kimbark and Monroe avenues. Jackson Park cars pass the door. The best talent available will be secured for all meetings. To spread the truth is the object of this society. Address all communications to Miss Eva L. Stewart, corresponding secretary, 455 E. 55th street. Entrance to hall, 319 E. 55th street.

Spiritual Mission Chapel (Old 77) 77 East Thirty-first street. Services every Sunday at 3 and 8 p. m. Scientific and philosophical lectures; best psychic and message bearers in attendance. Prof. F. M. Stoller, conductor.

The German-English Society, Bund der Wahrheit No. 18, holds services every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in Brand's Hall, 152 North avenue, between Halsted and Clybourn. Also every Thursday evening in Math. Jung's Hall, 1071 Lincoln avenue, southeast corner Ashland and Lincoln avenues; entrance first door north of Howard's theater. Frank Joseph, medium. Everybody welcome.

Church of the North Star Spiritual Union, incorporated. Meetings Sundays at 8 p. m. sharp, at Perls Hall, 1546 Milwaukee avenue, near Western avenue. Mrs. Letzter, speaker and medium. All welcome.

Chicago Spiritual Alliance Church, in Vincennes Hall, 35th and Cottage Grove avenue. Mrs. May Elmo, pastor. All welcome. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

Mrs. Mary Hill holds meetings every Sunday and Wednesday evenings at 320 Flournoy street. Good speakers and messages.

Lake View Spiritual Union holds services Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock in Wells Hall, 1629 North Clark street, corner Fletcher street, conducted by Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Wickland, assisted by others. All are cordially welcome. Residence, 616 Wells street.

The Golden Center Spiritualist Society meets at Star Lodge Hall, No. 378 S. Western avenue, between Harrison and Polk streets. Conducted by Prof. McLane and J. E. Coe.

First Society Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, Dr. Alex Caird, president. Services at Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street. Every Sunday, afternoon 2:30; circles, 4; supper, 5; song service, 6:30; concert, 7; evening, 8.

The Brotherhood of Spiritual Truth meets Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p. m., in Temperance Hall, 330 West Sixty-third street. Services conducted by Prof. J. K. Hilles and wife.

The Church of Spiritual Revelation will hold services every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at Butler Hall, 57th Court and State street. Conducted by Edward A. Dierkes and T. D. Jones.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

Pythagoras.

That Greek Philosopher who was born 582 and died 510 B. C., has been variously described by ancient historians. It requires a careful study of their disconnected, rambling and contradictory statements to determine what was his view of religious, political, social and financial policy

His religious views may be fairly stated as follows:

To God from whom I came I shall return. He is the Beginning and the End, the all in all. What matters, then the deaths I die or forms I wear in transmigration back to Him who breathed me forth a living soul? For what can die? The ever-living God cannot, and his immortal presence fills immensity. Then what can die? Since all that live but live in Him who cannot cease to be? I have attained the highest form that earth affords or matter can assume. But it is dust and must be laid again. And knowing this I lift my gaze aloft above the pyramids which I have spanned, unto those circling isles of light which seem to blazon on the upper skies my title to Eternity. My spirit will triumphantly outlast the wreck of pyramids and suns, I shall progressively pass through the varied forms of being's high gradations, evermore approaching Him whom I nevermore shall reach throughout the great and round Eternity.

WINSLOW W. TUCKER.
Watertown, N. Y.

PIONEERS OF PROGRESS.

BY T. A. BLAND.

"It is a historic review of the progress of the nineteenth century on all lines. But the element that makes it universally popular is its human interest."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"A broad-minded lover of his fellows, Dr. Bland delights in giving credit to those men and women who have said things or done things to help forward the welfare of mankind."—Chicago Post.

"It contains biographies of some forty men and women whose live thoughts and heroic deeds gave character to the most wonderful century of the world's history."—Farm, Field and Fireside.

"It is just such a book as one might expect from a man who looks back over seventy-six years spent in tireless pursuit of high ideals."—Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, in Unity.

"The work is written in an easy, pleasing style, and is so interesting that we doubt if one reader in a score who commences one of the sketches will lay the book down until he has finished it."—The Arena.

It has 254 pages, is bound in best cloth with gold title. Price $1.00.

MRS. E. M. SITTOMOCK will answer 1 questions for 25c. Send own handwriting and lock of hair. Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash.

WALNAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Walnah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

$10 Makes $150 IN 60 DAYS. A woman's full chance for a little money to make you a competency with absolute safety, without any work on your part. A positive guarantee given in our business. The best of Bank References. Address M. J. Cannon, Treasurer, Block 352, Farmers Bank Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . . . of Your Spirit Friends, can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.
FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

FRED P. EVANS.
Noted Medium for
Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.
Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,
FRED P. EVANS.
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity. From an angel's viewpoint, including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Astrological Horoscopes.
Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

Be Sure to Read This.
Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to
FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.
My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write: "My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.
"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.
Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd, Brookline, Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.
Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.00; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts. FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 167 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER
Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.
Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth st.
San Jose, Cal

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.
BY DR. T. A. BLAND,
With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.
"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.
"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.
Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.
By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

Zoroaster's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." (Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

SOMETHING'S HAPPENED! FOR WOMEN'S SAKE. SOMETHING KILLED!
READERS LISTEN SHARP, DON'T MISS—BEST THING EVER HAPPENED!
Hundred years coming, here at last, full grown—so startling will say it's impossible—but wait, don't worry—Ladies, Your Prayer Answered.
THERE'S NO MORE WASH DAY!—IT'S DEAD! LAID AWAY! WIPED OUT FOREVER!

The world's watched for the man to cut wash day in two. He lives—takes more than half—left only minutes—cut so much wash day's all over, changed—there's new way cleaning clothes—different from anything known—new principles, ideas, methods, NEW EVERYTHING. Wonderful, but true, family washing cleaned with no more work than getting a simple meal, less time—no rubbing, squeezing, pounding, packing, pressing, no injury—no drudgery—that's part. Good-bye wash boards, washing machines, laundries—throw them away—the EASY WAY is here to bless humanity. Women have prayed for death of wash day—for clean clothes without rubbing—ruining health, looks—when they could wash, get dinner, see friends, indulge in recreation without fatigue—when women thought no more of washing clothes than to get a simple meal. That glorious day has come. The world's full wash boards, so-called washing machines, yet wash day same as ever—still long, dreary day—no easier, no shorter, no better. Use wash board or washing machine, its drudgery, long hours, hard work—backache—a day no woman forgets. Invention that killed wash day, named EASY WAY—name tells whole story—easy on clothes—easy used—kept clean—handled—easy on women—makes washing easy—easy to buy and sell. Not called a machine—powers inside concealed—caution the way it gets dirt—has awful appetite for dirt—increases more it gets—goes after all the dirt in all the clothes at same time—little, but mighty—silent, but powerful—uses no spirits, yet works in darkness. OPERATED ON STOVE—move knob occasionally—that's all—scarcely anything to do but wait between batches—child can do it. All iron and steel—always ready—sets away on shelf. Entirely unlike old methods. Verily, wash day is dead—EASY WAY settled that—woman's joy and satisfaction. Less than an hour cleans washing which before took all day—cleans all clothes, finest laces, curtains, etc., in about one-tenth time without rubbing, squeezing, pushing, pressing—without chemicals to injure goods. SAVES $2

Hindu Spiritualism

Its Aim and Scope Comprehensively Defined.

The Progressive Thinker is EDUCATIONAL along new lines of thought. For a long time Spiritualist papers absolutely refused to publish cases of obsession, or moral obliquity on the part of fakes and mediums, fearing the same would hurt the cause. This paper recognizing NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH as the fundamental basis of Spiritualism, it has, therefore, often presented conditions that existed in our Cause and which are exercising a baneful influence, retarding progress in the right direction.

The fact that DANGEROUS OBSESSIONS frequently occur, often resulting in insanity, should be known by all Spiritualists.

The one is guided rightly, and is educated along correct lines, who wants to know SPIRIT RETURN as it is, in all of its KALEIDOSCOPIC characteristic—its angelic bright side, its dark side, and the road that leads to a hell (and as some claim to annihilation), and the one that leads to a heaven surpassing in BEAUTY, GRANDEUR AND LOVELINESS the loftiest imagination of poet, philosopher or seer.

The readers of this paper are the best POSTED CLASS in the world on Occult and Spiritualistic subjects. They know the exact status of Spirit Return in all of its kaleidoscopic characteristic, possessing knowledge that can not be obtained from any other source in this country. Read the following chapter from The Hindu Spiritual Magazine, published at Calcutta, India:

The sacred books of the Hindus declare that there are seven lokas or places in the spiritual world as, for instance, Bhu, Bhuba, Swa, Juna, Maha, Tapa and Satya.

These are scientific divisions; but for practical purposes we have divided the lokas into three only, viz., the Hell, the Hades, and the Heaven. In the Hell reside earth-bound souls; in the Hades, the souls of ordinary men; and in the Heaven those of superior men.

Spirits in the higher spheres rarely come to communicate with mortals, unless they have some great object in view. Thus the high inspirations, intellectual and religious, come from them. Spirits from the second sphere come only when they are summoned or to serve mortals to whom they might be attached. Thus, they will give warning of a danger, they will even sometimes give information leading to the discovery of a lost article, or the detection of a criminal.

Spirits from the lowest sphere, as a rule, come of their own accord. We say as a rule, for sometimes they too are summoned by those who deal in black magic. But as they are very much earthy, the other world does not please them much, and so they never let slip an opportunity to come back to this earth whenever they find an open door, which, however, they do but rarely. Thus if they find a medium, they enter his body slowly and gradually, and eventually they obtain complete possession of it. And when they have done this, they refuse to leave it, and make it their own as did the old man to Sindabab in the Arabian Nights. And this is called demoniacal possession.

This demoniacal possession, or obsession, though very dreadful to the victim, is of very great use to mankind. For, such cases completely establish the survival of men after death—a knowledge most precious to mankind.

Scientists like Crookes, or careful investigators like Hodgson may prove this truth in a scientific way after a great deal of research, trouble and ingenuity, but a case of obsession proves the survival after death at once and to the meanest intellect too. Just read the account of the ghosts at the dak Bungalow in Hazaribagh (vol. I., No. 2). Who can, after such experience, refuse to believe in spirits and the moral government of the universe? These obsessions also give mortals an opportunity of knowing something definite about the spirit world.

The knowledge can be obtained in this manner. A man obsessed is nothing but a dead man with a material body. Do you want to see a spirit walking amongst men? If so you find him in a man or woman who is obsessed. Do you want to see a spirit face to face in broad daylight? Then find a man who has been possessed by an earth-bound soul.

In spiritual circles spirits take possession of the faculties of the medium and come in contact with mortals. But these spirits, as a rule, cannot take complete possession of the faculties of their mediums; and the result is that the mind of the mediums asserts itself at times, so that the communications from the spirits become unreliable. And this is the reason why even good mediums commit mistakes, and often talk nonsense.

But in the case of obsession the spirit obtains complete control of the faculties of his victim; and so obsession means practically a spirit among men on earth. One of the most wonderful cases on record is that of Lurancy Vennum and Mary Roff. We quote from Dr. Peebles' "Spirit Obsessions."

"Of this case of possession, referred to by Professor James, of Harvard, and Dr. Hodgson, I can speak knowingly, positively, for Mr. Asa B. Roff, only recently deceased, was one of my patients several years ago. I knew him not only intimately, but knew his cultured daughter, Minerva Alter, sister of Mary Roff, that possessed the body of Mary Lurancy Vennum. It was my further privilege to know other members of this excellent Roff family, and some of the Watseka citizens who were witnesses of this singular psychic, not of a double consciousness, but of an actual re-possession again by a spirit of human body.

"The history very briefly told is this: Miss Vennum when about fourteen, had a series of attacks called hysteria. She was so annoyed by spells of hearing her name called out of the silence by night that her mother frequently slept with her.

"Not feeling well on the eleventh day of July, she fell to the floor, apparently dead. She thus lay five hours. When falling at other times, she declared that she saw spirits, describing and identifying them. In these further trances she saw angels and beautiful spirit scenery. Physicians, the Rev. Mr. Baker, and others pronounced her insane and proposed putting her into a lunatic asylum.

"At the crisis, Mr. Roff and Dr. Stevens, of Janesville, called, finding her sitting by the stove, hands upon her knees, eyes staring wildly, thoroughly obsessed. Dr. Stevens, by magnetic treatment and a strong will, dispossessed the evil influences; and then Miss Vennum said, 'I see many good, bright spirits here, and among them one Mary Roff,' whereupon Mr. Roff remarked promptly, 'That's my daughter Mary. She has been in heaven these twelve years.'

"Counseling with the spirits it was here arranged that Mary Roff take the place of the former wild demon influences. Miss Roff had many strange experiences before she passed to the spirit-world. On Feb. 1, 1878, she took complete control of Lurancy's body, and dressed to go home to Mr. Roff's residence.

"From this time 'Rancy' Vennum did not know her parents, and took no interest in family affairs. In fact, it was not her, but Mary Roff dwelling in her body, and she hourly pleaded to go home.

"Mrs. Roff and her daughter, Mrs. Alter, hearing of these strange things, called to Mr. Vennum's, when Mary Roff, in Lurancy's body rushed to meet them. She threw her arms around their necks, and wept for joy. On Feb. 11, 1878, the Vennums sent their daughter (her body possessed by Mary Roff) to Mr. Roff's residence, where she was perfectly happy. She knew where everything was about the house, and talked of hundreds of things that happened when she was a girl in her own body. She said the angels told her that she was to stay with them till some time in May, a happy, contented daughter, and a loving sister in a borrowed body.

"While in Mr. Roff's house, she did not know the Vennums, nor would she recognize them. She declared that she frequently saw spirits, frequently went to heaven, naming those whom she there met. Some of her tests were remarkable.

"On May 7, she told Mrs. Roff that Lurancy Vennum was coming back into her body again. It was a sad and tearful hour. Mary, after saying good-by sat down, was entranced, and Lurancy had control of her own body. She looked anxiously, wildly around, and asked, 'Where am I? I was never here before.'

"Mr. Roff replied, 'You are at Mr. Roff's, brought here by Mary to cure your body.'

"Lurancy wept and said, 'I want to go home.'

"In about five minutes the change came again, and Mary was once more in Lurancy's body. She was overjoyed, asking them to sing her girlhood song, 'We Are Coming, Sister Mary.' Her conversation at this time, though joyous, was exceedingly serious. She informed them that the good angels told her she could not remain long, as her work was about done; but she assured them that she should often return to them as a loving spirit and expressed the fear that they would not be able to recognize her. She had been the instrument under angel guidance of seeing Lurancy's health restored, of giving almost unbounded joy to her parents and relatives, and of adding tangible proofs of the future, immortal existence."

This case is certified as true by Prof. James, by Dr. Hodgson and Dr. Peebles. It occurred in Watseka and was seen by a large number of citizens. The case is known as Watseka wonder. It absolutely establishes survival after death.

These obsession cases are so common in India that hospitals have been established in this country solely for the cure of obsessed persons. We have already tried to explain why they are so plentiful in India. Among Hindus the opinion prevails that an earth-bound soul can liberate himself or herself by the help of men below. So, when dead, it tries to find a medium to communicate its condition and wishes to friends. If it has no such friends, it makes itself disagreeable in every way, so that the victims try, for their own sake, to liberate the soul from bondage. Thus it is that cases of obsession are so frequent in India.

When Dr. Peebles came to India before, he made enquiries about some of these hospitals. These institutions are more frequent in Southern India. Thus we find, in Dr. Peebles' work on "Spirit Obsessions":

"There is a small temple at Dattatrya, on the confluence of the Krishna and Cunch Ganga.

"I saw several obsessed persons there. The place is very famous for curing people suffering from obsession."

And again:—

"There are various Saivite and Vishnuvite temples which are famed for relieving persons from obsessing pichases (earth-bound souls). The informant of Dr. Peebles saw a score of times the phenomenon at the Hanumanta and Durga Temples."

Regarding these obsession hospitals a friend writes that formerly he had no knowledge of their existence. But he went to Konkan in Southern India for the purpose of collecting facts for a History of Sivaji, which he was then contemplating and which he subsequently wrote. He was led to visit a beautiful place situted on the shores of the Arabian Sea. Besides the place being considered a sanitarium, there is a celebrated temple, so every morning a vessel leaves Bombay for it. "My object was," says he, "to see the principal Fort of Sivaji at Raigarh, and while there I heard the fame of the Temple of Rari Hareshwar."

Our correspondent continues: "In course of conversation, my host informed me that a very interesting Brahmin ghost had made his appearance in the Temple. I could not at first understand what he meant, but he informed me that people obsessed were brought to the Temple of Hari Hareshwar for cure, and they were almost invariably relieved of their "possessions." Hearing this I lost no time in paying a visit to the Temple. My curiosity was soon satisfied. After the worship of the image had been finished, the patients were brought forward. They were made to sit in a row, and the priest brought holy ashes and sprinkled them on the persons of the obsessed. The effect was instantaneous—some swooned away and some fell down as dead. Others shouted while still others began to show the anguish of their soul in various ways.

"But a woman among them attracted my attention as also of other spectators. She was repeating the Vedas! First, a woman is prohibited from reading the Vedas. Secondly, she belonged to a very low caste and was, therefore, illiterate. The Vedas are, as you know, only accessible to the highest and most learned Brahmins. As I knew Sanskrit I could understand what she said, and I was, I assure you, enthralled by the spectacle of a low-caste perfectly illiterate woman repeating the Vedas!

"But my attention was soon distracted by the howlings of another woman. It appeared to me that she was possessed by perhaps the most ferocious ghost in existence, whose object was evidently the destruction of the world. He was making himself disagreeable in every way and trying to frighten every one. The priest accosted this terrible soul and asked his name, but he refused point blank. Thereupon the priest left him to return to the Image, and prayed awhile for help. Returning to the woman he commanded the ghost, who possessed her, to come to the post. This time the ghost perhaps found himself unable to disobey, for he came humbly to the post. The priest then ordered some invisible spirits, who evidently attended upon the Deity to tie the hands of the woman to the post. But though no chain was visible, nor any spirit, the possessed woman twined her hands round the post as if she was being tied by others. It looked as if the attendant spirit had heard the command of the priest and tied the woman's hands to the post with an invisible chain. The priest next ordered the spirits to thrash the ghost soundly. And though nobody saw anything it appeared that some invisible hands were really applying an invisible birch on the back of the ghost or rather the woman, as every stroke was being followed by a piercing shriek from the woman, that is, the evil spirit who possessed her, till at last the latter prayed for mercy. He was forgiven and the woman relieved of her tormentor."

Now it appears that every such hospital is in charge of some guardian spirits, who evidently were, when on earth, votaries of the Deity in the Temple. Their work lies in helping the priest to exorcise ghosts. The exorcising means not only the relief of the possessed patients, but also the liberation of the earth-bound souls who possess them. Their object then in obsessing persons generally is that by this means they might be brought to the Temple and helped by the attendant spirits in being liberated from their bondage.

The correspondent continues: "I saw the woman who repeated the Vedas at her lodgings when I heard that she had almost given up her food. Ordinarily she talked to herself but occasionally a Brahmin repeated the Vedas through her. This Brahmin at last quitted her."

STRENUOUS WORK.

Account of Labors in Minnesota, and Some Practical Reflections.

During the early part of the winter I could not dare accept of the many calls for my services, but as my mother's health permitted me to do some work after the holidays I engaged with the Minnesota State Spiritualist Association to serve them for two months, and began my labors the first Sunday in February, by speaking for the Band of Peace Society of Minneapolis, of which Mrs. Lowell is regular pastor.

The next three Sundays I served the St. Paul Spiritual Alliance, with large audiences and pleasant atmosphere to work under. Then came the State Mass Meeting, which has been before repeated in the columns of the Thinker as a "Grand Success."

The first Sunday in March I spoke for the North Minneapolis Spiritualist Society of which Mr. Harry Hegdahl is regular speaker, and found a nice strong band of willing workers there also. Then the State sent me out to Blue Earth for a series of meetings assisted by Mr. Hegdahl and Mrs. Paul Buehler of Minneapolis. The meetings increased in number and interest until there was not even any more standing room the last evening, and many wishes for a speedy return.

I was next sent to Bemidji, Minn., accompanied by Mr. Hegdahl and Mrs. Harold Courtney of Minneapolis, for another series, with grand results. We held our meetings in the beautiful Court House Hall and it was well filled. Bemidji once had a nice prosperous society, we were informed, but when Mrs. Smith, who was the regular speaker, ceased her labors there, the society was suspended on account of not having the proper speaker to carry it on. And right here I wish to make this point: Many societies are in the same condition for the lack of capable ministers to keep them alive.

Our cause needs qualified workers badly and that is one of the reasons the Churches of other denominations are so full of our people, and it is a shame too. The complaint one continually hears is, We would attend Spiritualist meetings if we could endure it; but one is continually annoyed with listening to outraged English, bad grammar and poor logic, reminding one of the need of an educated ministry or at least of having cultivated brains through which to reflect inspiration.

But to return to my report, after returning from Bemidji to the cities I learned of the serious illness of Brother Brooks and as I am the vice-president of the Wisconsin State Association I felt I owed my office my first duty, hence asked to cancel my last two weeks' engagement and came home intending to start for Milwaukee to assist the secretary to put on the coming annual convention; but on returning found my mother quite feeble again, and learning of Brother Brooks' improvement, I did not go. But as her health is much improved, I will be en route for Milwaukee the 11th of April and stay there for about ten days, then I return again to the Twin Cities to make up the canceled engagement again for the Minnesota State Association for May.

Friends, Spiritualism is dear to me! And I love to do all in my power to promote it wherever I can, and while I found the Minnesota Association gracious, courteous and fine to work for, I cannot help but feel a part of a jealous pride in the state of my adoption—Wisconsin—and I do hope the Spiritualists of that state will wake up and not let the state of Minnesota leave them too far behind. You have had a noble President in Brother Brooks, and he has had a good and willing state board backed by a willing and conscientious Secretary, and no one could help seeing that President Brooks has strained every nerve during his yearly service to wipe the blot of indebtedness from off the State Calendar of Wisconsin, until he collapsed. But I am sorry to say I fear too few have appreciated his efforts, as he has surely manifested a spirit of devotion and self-sacrifice. For if every Spiritualist in the state had even contributed one dollar it would have gone a good ways toward lifting the burden, for I feel sure your officers are conscientious about this debt, if you are not, and I can't understand how you can feel the joys that the message of the spirit brings without a pang of fear at your neglected duty.

Minnesota can raise hundreds of dollars to carry on missionary work in their state and pay their workers ungrudgingly, and what is Wisconsin going to do?

I do hope whoever the coming officers of the incoming election will be, they will be sustained financially until the banner of Spiritualism in the state of Wisconsin is white as snow. Friends, you owe it to the cause and to your spirit friends, and to yourselves, if you are true Spiritualists, and we hope you are, as to us Spiritualism is the grandest religion on earth.

And now I bring this already too long letter to a close by stating that I still have the month of June open to engagements and am engaged to serve the Clinton Camp for the first two weeks of their session. Would be glad to serve any other camp after that and am also open to engagements for the coming winter season. Will serve at funerals, weddings, etc. My address is:

CATHARINE McFARLIN,
Plainview, Minn.

PROGRESS IN PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Anniversary Celebration by a Young Society.

To the Editor: A very busy woman has been trying for months to find time to write you a little about the work for Spiritualism which has been going on in Pittsfield for the past year.

A little more than a year ago the Massachusetts State Association was invited to come to Pittsfield and hold a meeting for the purpose of ascertaining whether there were any people in the place sufficiently interested to attend a meeting in the interest of Spiritualism. A hall was procured and the meeting advertised in the local papers. About one dozen people were interviewed as to whether they would like to attend such a meeting; further than this it was not known whether there would be any larger number in attendance, and it was thought if there should be as many as twenty it would be a surprise and would be well worth holding the meeting. The president of the Association, Dr. Fuller, who is as every one knows, a fine speaker, with Mr. Hatch, the treasurer, and Mrs. Hatch, his wife, the secretary, came. They also brought a good medium, Mrs. Maude Litch. The meeting was a grand success. Contrary to all expectations 100 people were present. Through the efforts of Dr. Fuller and Mrs. Hatch a temporary society was formed called The First Spiritualist Church of Pittsfield. Later a more permanent organization was completed and meetings have been held weekly ever since. As is the case with all beginnings, finances are slow to come, and we have only been able thus far to hold meetings with speaker but once a month. The attendance has been good all the time showing that effort should be made to have the cause represented here although it may be only in a small way.

Among those who have ministered to us, all of them good, are Mrs. A. J. Pettengill of Malden, Mass.; Mrs. Whiting of Springfield, Mass.; Oscar A. Edgerly, Mrs. Butler of Lynn, Mass.; Mrs. Reynolds of Troy, New York. On April 30th we are to have Mrs. Cunningham from Cambridge, Mass.

We have just held an anniversary meeting, with Helen Temple Brigham for speaker, who captivated the people. We are hoping to continue the work, and though our growth may be slow we trust it will be healthy and sure.

The following paper was written and read by myself at our anniversary meeting:

Fifty-nine years have rolled by since the advent of Modern Spiritualism. It has been the custom on these anniversary occasions to have a somewhat detailed history given of the origin and onward march of this movement. Of the past I shall say but little. Spiritualism came to a world fast lasping into materialism, and in a simple way, through little children. The common people heard of it gladly, and were comforted, and assuredly its teachings and the facts given, proving the continuity of life.

Reverends and men of learning were also drawn into giving it attraction. Nearly all the reverends were not long in deciding it to be the work of the Devil. The men of learning that there must be some other explanation of the phenomena found than that which it claimed for itself. So they have tried, each in his own way, these 59 years to put it down, to smother it, but like Banquos ghost, it will not down. It has come to stay, and is fast taking its place in the world as a Science, a Philosophy and a Religion.

Another class of learned men have pronounced it unworthy of investigation, and have ignored it, except, maybe, to sneer at its claims. Among those who have after fair and thorough investigation acknowledged its truth we find the names of Flammarion, Prof. Robert Hare, Cromwell F. Varley, Zollner, Rudolph Virchow, Carl Du Prel, Count Alexander Aksakof and many others. Prof. Thomson Jay Hudson, as our N. S. A. president has written, "of just name and fame, and exceptionally gifted in his special line of study, has gone so far as to declare that he who doubts psychic phenomena is not entitled to be called a skeptic, he is simply ignorant."

I am moved to speak particularly this evening of Alfred Russel Wallace, as I have recently read his Life, written by himself, in which he so candidly speaks of all his investigations of Spiritualism, and of his associations with Spiritualists. The latter do indeed owe him a great debt of gratitude. Now that so many men of science are looking into the matter and the Psychic Research Society is doing its work, Spiritualists need no longer be so much on the defensive, but can take time to live more in the present of Spiritualism.

Although fifty-nine years is not very long when compared with the rise and progress of other forms of religion, yet we can see greater progress in the length of time than in all that have preceded it, and a glorious future for it. Many deny us the term religion. Well, this depends on ones definition of the term. If as one Great Book says, "Pure religion and undefiled is to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction and keep one's self unspotted from the world"; and in another place "What is required of thee but to deal justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God," and "Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you." I claim Spiritualism teaches all this. If you tell me its followers do not practice all this, I say, let the followers of other religions who are without sin, cast the first stone. Spiritualists have to most bitterly acknowledge the short-comings of many of its professed followers.

It would seem that this Truth came to the world simply for the purpose of establishing the fact that man can not die. I have sometimes felt to say: Would that it had stopped there, because of the many things which have attached themselves to it—the things which have been done in its name. It has been well night disgraced by commercialism and fakism as well as by the unholy lives of some of its professed followers. As I write there arises before my subjective vision a pure white banner with the word Spiritualism inscribed in letters of gold upon it, and these words come to me: Oh, Spiritualists, hold high above the debris with which ignorance and misunderstanding are seeking to cover it, this pure white banner, and it shall remain to you. So I would fain cast to the winds all that which greed and malice would attach to it, and speak only of its present best and of the eternal progression which it teaches.

Thorough students of Spiritualism seek to understand life by tracing through cause and effect its successive developments from the lowest forms of vegetable life on through all the forms of animal life up to man as we find him today, a dweller on this planet earth, everywhere subject to natural law. Recognizing an unseen power which in the vegetable may be termed motion, in the animal, sensation; and in man, soul! not stopping here they go on, and through the established scientific facts of the phenomena of Modern Spiritualism seek to learn of his future and of natural law in the spirit world. All forms and expressions of religion have had somewhat to do with an unseen power which men have little understood but have named God, also with a life hereafter. So the followers of Spiritualism have found that its teachings of this power and a life hereafter are more rational and natural than those of any other religion; so natural that I would from this time on we might call it as I am sure we one day shall, Naturalism; but not because of the ridicule and unpopularity with which the word Spiritualism has been surrounded. It is fast outgrowing all that.

As a form and expression of religion it has fought its way until there is scarcely a city or town where effort is not being made to have it represented, and many cities and towns maintain flourishing societies. We have our State Associations and a National Association working for the benefit of all smaller organizations.

We have, too, one educational institution, the Morris Pratt Institute, at Whitewater, Wisconsin. These institutions do not claim perfection, but aim to put Spiritualism before the world in its highest and best form. The true workers in these associations are trying to help those who are called to espouse this unpopular cause, to be worthy of their work and to make it sacred.

I should be false to duty if I neglected this opportunity to say that Spiritualism as an organized movement must fail in part of its mission if it does not stand and work for the three great reforms upon which all others hinge, that of the equality of men and women in all the walks of life, the emancipation of the industrial world from the system of wage slavery, and last but not least the temperance reform. Oh! Spiritualists, pray without ceasing, but while you pray work, for what does to pray without ceasing mean but to work. Every obstacle in the way of the education and the Spiritualization of humanity must be removed, until we have a people where though intoxicating liquors should flow through the streets as rivers to the ocean there would be none to drink it because none would desire it.

J. M. KINGMAN.
Pittsfield, Mass.

Ascended Higher.

Passed to spirit life from his home in Alliance, Ohio, April 2, 1907, Mr. Harry C. Russell, aged 51 years. The disease was cancer of the stomach, from which he suffered terribly the last few weeks of his illness.

On the evening of April 4th, the local fraternal orders, the K. O. T. M. and the Ben Hur, gave their impressive ritualistic services at the home and on the following day the fraternal order of Eagles gave their touching service at the Independent Church (Spiritualist), and under the leadership of Mr. Reese Jones, rendered sweetest music, and also served as pall bearers. This was followed by the funeral address by the writer, and was the fulfillment of a request made several years ago by Mr. Russell. In his address the speaker gave a brief explanation of the teachings of Spiritualism, and said that Mr. Russell had proved to his own satisfaction that they were true, and he gladly and fully accepted them. He also explained that the deceased wanted the listeners to know that he was a Spiritualist, and requested that the speaker explain its teachings on this occasion.

The speaker made it clear that Spiritualism was the true comfort at the time of death, both to the one departing this life, and the bereaved one left behind.

There were many relatives and friends present from out of town, and the large attendance and many beautiful floral offerings were evidence of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

His wife, Mrs. Flora Russell, is well known, and has many friends among Spiritualists, as her sweet voice and Spiritualistic songs have charmed them at their camp meetings, state and National conventions for years. Their kindly thoughts and sympathy will bless her in this hour of sorrow.

Harry Russell was a good man, a true Spiritualist, a faithful member of the Alliance Society and a good worker in the cause of Spiritualism. His earthly form will be greatly missed in the home, but his spiritual presence will comfort and cheer his good wife and children, his dear aged mother and sisters and brothers in their sorrow.

E. W. SPRAGUE,
Detroit, Mich.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

Religious and Theological works of Thomas Paine, Here is a book that should be in the library of every Spiritualist and Freethinker in the land. Price, cloth, $1.

Religion. A profound philosophical treatise on this world-wide subject of contention. It is a good book for students preparing for the spiritual rostrum. By E. D. Babbitt. Price, cloth $1; paper, 50c; postage, 10 cents.

Right Living. This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book adapted to the comprehension of children. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, cloth, $1.

Rights of Man. Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. By Thomas Paine. Post 8vo; 279 pages. Price, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Romance of Two Worlds. By Marie Corelli. Price 50 cents.

Schopenhauer's Essays. Translated by T. B. Saunders. Price 75 cts.

Science and the Future Life. By Prof James H. Hyslop. Price, postpaid, $1.60.

Science of Spirit Return. By one of the scientific minds of The Progressive Thinker corps of contributors. Rich with profound thought. By Charles Dawbarn. Price 10 cents.

Six Historic Americans. By John E. Remsburg. Price $1.25.

Sixth and Seventh Book of Moses. Translated from the ancient Hebrew. Price, $1.

Social Upbuilding, including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. By E. D Babbitt, M. D. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Some Glimpses of Occultism Ancient and Modern. A series of lectures by C. W. Leadbeater. Price, $1.50.

Standing up for Jesus, or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him on general principles. Profound, biblical, sarcastic. Price 4 cents; 25 copies for 50 cents.

Spiritual Songster. By Mattie E. Hull, containing 38 songs. Price, 10 cents each, or $7.00 per hundred.

Startling Facts or Deeds of Darkness Disclosed, Relative to Auricular Confession, and Its Relations to Sacerdotal Celibacy, Convents, Monasteries, Morality, and Civil and Religious Liberty. By Rev. J. G. White. Price, 75 cents.

Studies in the Outlying Fields of Psychic Science. How to investigate, form circles and develop mediumship. A test of genuine mediumship. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

Superstition in All Ages, or "Le Bons Sens." Testimony of a Catholic priest who abjured the Christian religion and asked God's pardon for having taught it. Price, cloth, $1; postage 14 cents.

Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope. This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. Price 25 cents.

Teachings of Jesus, Not Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. A book full of truth. By George W. Brown, M. D. Price 15 cents.

Ten Commandments Analyzed. By W. H. Bach. Price, 25 cents.

The Arcana of Spiritualism. A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. A splendid work by the seer and philosospher, Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

The Aristocracy of Health. A Study of Physical Culture, and Our Favorite Poisons. A masterly work on the subject, by the gifted writer, Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson. Price, $1.50.

The A, B, Z, of Our Own Nutrition. An excellent work and guide perfect health. By Horace Fletcher. Price, $1. Price $1.25.

The Candle From Under the Bushel, or Thirteen Hundred and Questions to the Clergy. Nuts that are hard for them to crack. An interesting book. By Wm. Heart. Price 40 cents.

The Constitution of Man. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 50 cents.

The Crisis. By Thomas Paine. Price, 25 cents.

The Demonism of the Ages. Spirit Obsessions so Common in Spiritism, Oriental and Occidental Occultism. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Cloth-bound. Price $1, postage, 19 cents.

The Development of Spirit—After Transition. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. By the late M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

The Dream Child. Reads like an inspiration. Treating clearly upon the laws of affinity, love and the attendant pain and sorrow invariably experienced therewith. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

The Evolution of the Christ Idea. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

The Fairy Land of Science. This beautiful book fills a niche in the hearts of the young people. Lyceum library literature. By Arabella B. Buckley. Price 50.

The Great Psychological Crime, which claims that subjective mediumship is injurious, is edited by Florence Huntley, author of "The Dream Child" and "Harmonics of Evolution." Price $2.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. A dainty, helpful book. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price 35 cents.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Fourth edition. 32 pages. "An effort to purify our 'Idea of God' that it may be greater, sublimer, and more awe-inspiring to future generations than it has ever been yet."—Literary World, London. Paper cover, 15 cents.

The Kingship of Self-Control. Full of most helpful ideas, and bound in white covers with pretty floral design. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cents.

The Life of Jesus. By Ernest Renan. Translated from the original French. Price, cloth, gilt top, 75 cents.

The Life Radiant. For every one in every walk of life. By Lilian Whiting. Cloth binding. Price, $1.

The Living Decalogue. From Sinai to Zion. By W. J. Colville. Price 50 cents.

The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature. Demonstrates the continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences. Free from all theories of superstition. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Price 25 cents.

The Lover's World. A Wheel of Life. Treating on the subjects of love, marriage and parenthood. By Dr. Alice B. Stockham. "The Lover's World, garnered sheaves from the wisdom of books and life's experiences, is now returned to the heart of humanity." Price, silk cloth, $2.25.

The Majesty of Calmness. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cts.

The Mystic Thesaurus. By W. F. Whitehead. Leatherette, Price, $1.

The New Life. By Leroy Berrier. Price 50 cents.

The Priest, Woman and the Confessional. This is a most valuable book. It comes from an ex-priest whose character is above reproach. By Father Chiniquy. Price $1.

The Prophets of Israel. Popular sketches from Old Testament History, than which no branch of science in the last generation, has undergone a more profound revolution. By Carl Heinrich Cornell. Price 25c.

The Other Side of Death. Scientifically examined and carefully described by C. W. Leadbeater. Price $1.50.

The Relations of Science to the Phenomena of Life. Ideas of life scientifically expressed in contradistinction from the old-theories. By Spirit Professor M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Religion of Cheerfulness. By Sara A. Hubbard. Price 50 cents.

The Pathway of the Human Spirit. By J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

The Riddle of the Universe at the close of the nineteenth century. By Prof. Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. Bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Abriniman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Abrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsession, other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.50. Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

Hindu Spiritualism

Its Aim and Scope Comprehensively Defined.

The Progressive Thinker is EDUCATIONAL along new lines of thought. For a long time Spiritualist papers absolutely refused to publish cases of obsession, or moral obliquity on the part of fakes and mediums, fearing the same would hurt the cause. This paper recognizing NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH as the fundamental basis of Spiritualism, it has, therefore, often presented conditions that existed in our Cause and which are exercising a baneful influence, retarding progress in the right direction.

The fact that DANGEROUS OBSESSIONS frequently occur, often resulting in insanity, should be known by all Spiritualists.

The one is guided rightly, and is educated along correct lines, who wants to know SPIRIT RETURN as it is, in all of its KALEIDOSCOPIC characteristic—its angelic bright side, its dark side, and the road that leads to a hell (and as some claim to annihilation), and the one that leads to a heaven surpassing in BEAUTY, GRANDEUR AND LOVELINESS the loftiest imagination of poet, philosopher or seer.

The readers of this paper are the best POSTED CLASS in the world on Occult and Spiritualistic subjects. They know the exact status of Spirit Return in all of its kaleidoscopic characteristic, possessing knowledge that can not be obtained from any other source in this country. Read the following chapter from The Hindu Spiritual Magazine, published at Calcutta, India:

The sacred books of the Hindus declare that there are seven lokas or places in the spiritual world as, for instance, Bhu, Bhuba, Swa, Juna, Maha, Tapa and Satya.

These are scientific divisions; but for practical purposes we have divided the lokas into three only, viz., the Hell, the Hades, and the Heaven. In the Hell reside earth-bound souls; in the Hades, the souls of ordinary men; and in the Heaven those of superior men.

Spirits in the higher spheres rarely come to communicate with mortals, unless they have some great object in view. Thus the high inspirations, intellectual and religious, come from them. Spirits from the second sphere come only when they are summoned or to serve mortals to whom they might be attached. Thus, they will give warning of a danger, they will even sometimes give information leading to the discovery of a lost article, or the detection of a criminal.

Spirits from the lowest sphere, as a rule, come of their own accord. We say as a rule, for sometimes they too are summoned by those who deal in black magic. But as they are very much earthy, the other world does not please them much, and so they never let slip an opportunity to come back to this earth whenever they find an open door, which, however, they do but rarely. Thus if they find a medium, they enter his body slowly and gradually, and eventually they obtain complete possession of it. And when they have done this, they refuse to leave it, and make it their own as did the old man to Sindabab in the Arabian Nights. And this is called demoniacal possession.

This demoniacal possession, or obsession, though very dreadful to the victim, is of very great use to mankind. For, such cases completely establish the survival of men after death—a knowledge most precious to mankind.

Scientists like Crookes, or careful investigators like Hodgson may prove this truth in a scientific way after a great deal of research, trouble and ingenuity, but a case of obsession proves the survival after death at once and to the meanest intellect too. Just read the account of the ghosts at the dak Bungalow in Hazaribagh (vol. I., No. 2). Who can, after such experience, refuse to believe in spirits and the moral government of the universe? These obsessions also give mortals an opportunity of knowing something definite about the spirit world.

The knowledge can be obtained in this manner. A man obsessed is nothing but a dead man with a material body. Do you want to see a spirit walking amongst men? If so you find him in a man or woman who is obsessed. Do you want to see a spirit face to face in broad daylight? Then find a man who has been possessed by an earth-bound soul.

In spiritual circles spirits take possession of the faculties of the medium and come in contact with mortals. But these spirits, as a rule, cannot take complete possession of the faculties of their mediums; and the result is that the mind of the mediums asserts itself at times, so that the communications from the spirits become unreliable. And this is the reason why even good mediums commit mistakes, and often talk nonsense.

But in the case of obsession the spirit obtains complete control of the faculties of his victim; and so obsession means practically a spirit among men on earth. One of the most wonderful cases on record is that of Lurancy Vennum and Mary Roff. We quote from Dr. Peebles' "Spirit Obsessions."

"Of this case of possession, referred to by Professor James, of Harvard, and Dr. Hodgson, I can speak knowingly, positively, for Mr. Asa B. Roff, only recently deceased, was one of my patients several years ago. I knew him not only intimately, but knew his cultured daughter, Minerva Alter, sister of Mary Roff, that possessed the body of Mary Lurancy Vennum. It was my further privilege to know other members of this excellent Roff family, and some of the Watseka citizens who were witnesses of this singular psychic, not of a double consciousness, but of an actual re-possession again by a spirit of human body.

"The history very briefly told is this: Miss Vennum when about fourteen, had a series of attacks called hysteria. She was so annoyed by spells of hearing her name called out of the silence by night that her mother frequently slept with her.

"Not feeling well on the eleventh day of July, she fell to the floor, apparently dead. She thus lay five hours. When falling at other times, she declared that she saw spirits, describing and identifying them. In these further trances she saw angels and beautiful spirit scenery. Physicians, the Rev. Mr. Baker, and others pronounced her insane and proposed putting her into a lunatic asylum.

"At the crisis, Mr. Roff and Dr. Stevens, of Janesville, called, finding her sitting by the stove, hands upon her knees, eyes staring wildly, thoroughly obsessed. Dr. Stevens, by magnetic treatment and a strong will, dispossessed the evil influences; and then Miss Vennum said, 'I see many good, bright spirits here, and among them one Mary Roff,' whereupon Mr. Roff remarked promptly, 'That's my daughter Mary. She has been in heaven these twelve years.'

"Counseling with the spirits it was here arranged that Mary Roff take the place of the former wild demon influences. Miss Roff had many strange experiences before she passed to the spirit-world. On Feb. 1, 1878, she took complete control of Lurancy's body, and dressed to go home to Mr. Roff's residence.

"From this time 'Rancy' Vennum did not know her parents, and took no interest in family affairs. In fact, it was not her, but Mary Roff dwelling in her body, and she hourly pleaded to go home.

"Mrs. Roff and her daughter, Mrs. Alter, hearing of these strange things, called to Mr. Vennum's, when Mary Roff, in Lurancy's body rushed to meet them. She threw her arms around their necks, and wept for joy. On Feb. 11, 1878, the Vennums sent their daughter (her body possessed by Mary Roff) to Mr. Roff's residence, where she was perfectly happy. She knew where everything was about the house, and talked of hundreds of things that happened when she was a girl in her own body. She said the angels told her that she was to stay with them till some time in May, a happy, contented daughter, and a loving sister in a borrowed body.

"While in Mr. Roff's house, she did not know the Vennums, nor would she recognize them. She declared that she frequently saw spirits, — frequently went to heaven, naming those whom she there met. Some of her tests were remarkable.

"On May 7, she told Mrs. Roff that Lurancy Vennum was coming back into her body again. It was a sad and tearful hour. Mary, after saying good-by sat down, was entranced, and Lurancy had control of her own body. She looked anxiously, wildly around, and asked, 'Where am I? I was never here before.'

"Mr. Roff replied, 'You are at Mr. Roff's, brought here by Mary to cure your body.'

"'Lurancy wept and said, 'I want to go home.'

"In about five minutes the change came again, and Mary was once more in Lurancy's body. She was overjoyed, asking them to sing her girlhood song, 'We Are Coming, Sister Mary.' Her conversation at this time, though joyous, was exceedingly serious. She informed them that the good angels told her she could not remain long, as her work was about done; but she assured them that she should often return to them as a loving spirit and expressed the fear that they would not be able to recognize her. She had been the instrument under angel guidance of seeing Lurancy's health restored, of giving almost unbounded joy to her parents and relatives, and of adding tangible proofs of the future, immortal existence."

This case is certified as true by Prof. James, by Dr. Hodgson and Dr. Peebles. It occurred in Watseka and was seen by a large number of citizens. The case is known as Watseka wonder. It absolutely establishes survival after death.

These obsession cases are so common in India that hospitals have been established in this country solely for the cure of obsessed persons. We have already tried to explain why they are so plentiful in India. Among Hindus the opinion prevails that an earth-bound soul can liberate himself or herself by the help of men below. So, when dead, it tries to find a medium to communicate its condition and wishes to friends. If it has no such friends, it makes itself disagreeable in every way, so that the victims try, for their own sake, to liberate the soul from bondage. Thus it is that cases of obsession are so frequent in India.

When Dr. Peebles came to India before, he made enquiries about some of these hospitals. These institutions are more frequent in Southern India. Thus we find, in Dr. Peebles' work on "Spirit Obsessions":

"There is a small temple at Dattatrya, on the confluence of the Krishna and Cunch Ganga.

"I saw several obsessed persons there. The place is very famous for curing people suffering from obsession."

And again:—

"There are various Saivite and Vishnuvite temples which are famed for relieving persons from obsessing pichases (earth-bound souls). The informant of Dr. Peebles saw a score of times the phenomenon at the Hanumanta and Durga Temples."

Regarding these obsession hospitals a friend writes that formerly he had no knowledge of their existence. But he went to Konkan in Southern India for the purpose of collecting facts for a History of Sivaji, which he was then contemplating and which he subsequently wrote. He was led to visit a beautiful place situted on the shores of the Arabian Sea. Besides the place being considered a sanitarium, there is a celebrated temple, so every morning a vessel leaves Bombay for it. "My object was," says he, "to see the principal Fort of Sivaji at Raigarh, and while there I heard the fame of the Temple of Rari Hareshwar."

Our correspondent continues: "In course of conversation, my host informed me that a very interesting Brahmin ghost had made his appearance in the Temple. I could not at first understand what he meant, but he informed me that people obsessed were brought to the Temple of Hari Hareshwar for cure, and they were almost invariably relieved of their "possessions." Hearing this I lost no time in paying a visit to the Temple. My curiosity was soon satisfied. After the worship of the image had been finished, the patients were brought forward. They were made to sit in a row, and the priest brought holy ashes and sprinkled them on the persons of the obsessed. The effect was instantaneous—some swooned away and some fell down as dead. Others shouted while still others began to show the anguish of their soul in various ways.

"But a woman among them attracted my attention as also of other spectators. She was repeating the Vedas! First, a woman is prohibited from reading the Vedas. Secondly, she belonged to a very low caste and was, therefore, illiterate. The Vedas are, as you know, only accessible to the highest and most learned Brahmins. As I knew Sanskrit I could understand what she said, and I was, I assure you, enthralled by the spectacle of a low-caste perfectly illiterate woman repeating the Vedas!

"But my attention was soon distracted by the howlings of another woman. It appeared to me that she was possessed by perhaps the most ferocious ghost in existence, whose object was evidently the destruction of the world. He was making himself disagreeable in every way and trying to frighten every one. The priest accosted this terrible soul and asked his name, but he refused point blank. Thereupon the priest left him to return to the Image, and prayed awhile for help. Returning to the woman he commanded the ghost, who possessed her, to come to the post. This time the ghost perhaps found himself unable to disobey, for he came humbly to the post. The priest then ordered some invisible spirits, who evidently attended upon the Deity to tie the hands of the woman to the post. But though no chain was visible, nor any spirit, the possessed woman twined her hands round the post as if she was being tied by others. It looked as if the attendant spirit had heard the command of the priest and tied the woman's hands to the post with an invisible chain. The priest next ordered the spirits to thrash the ghost soundly. And though nobody saw anything it appeared that some invisible hands were fully applying an invisible birch on the back of the ghost or rather the woman, as every stroke was being followed by a piercing shriek from the woman, that is, the evil spirit who possessed her, till at last the latter prayed for mercy. He was forgiven and the woman relieved of her tormentor."

Now it appears that every such hospital is in charge of some guardian spirits, who evidently were, when on earth, votaries of the Deity in the Temple. Their work lies in helping the priest to exorcise ghosts. The exorcising means not only the relief of the possessed patients, but also the liberation of the earth-bound souls who possess them. Their object then in obsessing persons generally is that by this means they might be brought to the Temple and helped by the attendant spirits in being liberated from their bondage.

The correspondent continues: "I saw the woman who repeated the Vedas at her lodgings when I heard that she had almost given up her food. Ordinarily she talked to herself but occasionally a Brahmin repeated the Vedas through her. This Brahmin at last quitted her."

STRENUOUS WORK.

Account of Labors in Minnesota, and Some Practical Reflections.

During the early part of the winter I could not dare accept of the many calls for my services, but as my mother's health permitted me to do some work after the holidays I engaged with the Minnesota State Spiritualist Association to serve them for two months, and began my labors the first Sunday in February, by speaking for the Band of Peace Society of Minneapolis, of which Mrs. Lowell is regular pastor.

The next three Sundays I served the St. Paul Spiritual Alliance, with large audiences and pleasant atmosphere to work under. Then came the State Mass Meeting, which has been before repeated in the columns of the Thinker as a "Grand Success."

The first Sunday in March I spoke for the North Minneapolis Spiritualist Society of which Mr. Harry Hegdahl is regular speaker, and found a nice strong band of willing workers there also. Then the State sent me out to Blue Earth for a series of meetings assisted by Mr. Hegdahl and Mrs. Paul Buehler of Minneapolis. The meetings increased in number and interest until there was not even any more standing room the last evening, and many wishes for a speedy return.

I was next sent to Bemidji, Minn., accompanied by Mr. Hegdahl and Mrs. Harold Courtney of Minneapolis, for another series, with grand results. We held our meetings in the beautiful Court House Hall and it was well filled. Bemidji once had a nice prosperous society, we were informed, but when Mrs. Smith, who was the regular speaker, ceased her labors there, the society was suspended on account of not having the proper speaker to carry it on. And right here I wish to make this point: Many societies are in the same condition for the lack of capable ministers to keep them anve.

Our cause needs qualified workers badly and that is one of the reasons the Churches of other denominations are so full of our people, and it is a shame too. The complaint one continually hears is, We would attend Spiritualist meetings if we could endure it; but one is continually annoyed with listening to outraged English, bad grammar and poor logic, reminding one of the need of an educated ministry or at least of having cultivated brains through which to reflect inspiration.

But to return to my report, after returning from Bemidji to the cities I learned of the serious illness of Brother Brooks and as I am the vice-president of the Wisconsin State Association I felt I owed my office my first duty, hence asked to cancel my last two weeks' engagement and came home intending to start for Milwaukee to assist the secretary to put on the coming annual convention; but on returning found my mother quite feeble again, and learning of Brother Brooks' improvement, I did not go. But as her health is much improved, I will be en route for Milwaukee the 11th of April and stay there for about ten days, then I return again to the Twin Cities to make up the canceled engagement again for the Minnesota State Association for May.

Friends, Spiritualism is dear to me! And I love to do all in my power to promote it wherever I can, and while I found the Minnesota Association gracious, courteous and fine to work for, I cannot help but feel a part of a jealous pride in the state of my adoption—Wisconsin—and I do hope the Spiritualists of that state will wake up and not let the state of Minnesota leave them too far behind. You have had a noble President in Brother Brooks, and he has had a good and willing state board backed by a willing and conscientious Secretary, and no one could help seeing that President Brooks has strained every nerve during his yearly service to wipe the blot of indebtedness from off the State Calendar of Wisconsin, until he collapsed. But I am sorry to say I fear too few have appreciated his efforts, as he has surely manifested a spirit of devotion and self-sacrifice. For if every Spiritualist in the state had even contributed one dollar it would have gone a good ways toward lifting the burden for I feel sure your officers are conscientious about this debt, if you are not, and I can't understand how you can feel the joys that the message of the spirit brings without a pang of fear at your neglected duty.

Minnesota can raise hundreds of dollars to carry on missionary work in their state and pay their workers ungrudgingly, and what is Wisconsin going to do?

I do hope whoever the coming officers of the incoming election will be, they will be sustained financially until the banner of Spiritualism in the state of Wisconsin is white as snow. Friends, you owe it to the cause and to your spirit friends, and to yourselves, if you are true Spiritualists, and we hope you are, as to us Spiritualism is the grandest religion on earth.

And now I bring this already too long letter to a close by stating that I still have the month of June open to engagements and am engaged to serve the Clinton Camp for the first two weeks of their session. Would be glad to serve any other camp after that and am also open to engagements for the coming winter season. Will serve at funerals, weddings, etc. My address is:

CATHARINE McFARLIN,
Plainview, Minn.

PROGRESS IN PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Anniversary Celebration by a Young Society.

To the Editor: A very busy woman has been trying for months to find time to write you a little about the work for Spiritualism which has been going on in Pittsfield for the past year.

A little more than a year ago the Massachusetts State Association was invited to come to Pittsfield and hold a meeting for the purpose of ascertaining whether there were any people in the place sufficiently interested to attend a meeting in the interest of Spiritualism. A hall was procured and the meeting advertised in the local papers. About one dozen people were interviewed as to whether they would like to attend such a meeting; further than this it was not known whether there would be any larger number in attendance, and it was thought if there should be as many as twenty it would be a surprise and would be well worth holding the meeting. The president of the Association, Dr. Fuller, who is as every one knows, a fine speaker, with Mr. Hatch, the treasurer, and Mrs. Hatch, his wife, the secretary, came. They also brought a good medium, Mrs. Maude Litch. The meeting was a grand success. Contrary to all expectations 100 people were present. Through the efforts of Dr. Fuller and Mrs. Hatch a temporary society was formed called The First Spiritualist Church of Pittsfield. Later a more permanent organization was completed and meetings have been held weekly ever since. As is the case with all beginnings, finances are slow to come, and we have only been able thus far to hold meetings with speaker but once a month. The attendance has been good all the time showing that effort should be made to have the cause represented here although it may be only in a small way.

Among those who have ministered to us, all of them good, are Mrs. A. J. Pettengill of Malden, Mass.; Mrs. Whiting of Springfield, Mass.; Oscar A. Edgerly, Mrs. Butler of Lynn, Mass.; Mrs. Reynolds of Troy, New York. On April 30th we are to have Mrs. Cunningham from Cambridge, Mass.

We have just held an anniversary meeting, with Helen Temple Brigham for speaker, who captivated the people. We are hoping to continue the work, and though our growth may be slow we trust it will be healthy and sure.

The following paper was written and read by myself at our anniversary meeting:

Fifty-nine years have rolled by since the advent of Modern Spiritualism. It has been the custom on these anniversary occasions to have a somewhat detailed history given of the origin and onward march of this movement. Of the past I shall say but little. Spiritualism came to a world fast lasping into materialism, and in a simple way, through little children. The common people heard of it gladly, and were comforted, and assuredly its teachings and the facts given, proving the continuity of life.

Reverends and men of learning were also drawn into giving it attraction. Nearly all the reverends were not long in deciding it to be the work of the Devil. The men of learning that there must be some other explanation of the phenomena found than that which it claimed for itself. So they have tried, each in his own way, these 59 years to put it down, to smother it, but like Banquos ghost, it will not down. It has come to stay, and is fast taking its place in the world as a Science, a Philosophy and a Religion.

Another class of learned men have pronounced it unworthy of investigation, and have ignored it, except, maybe, to sneer at its claims. Among those who have after fair and thorough investigation acknowledged its truth we find the names of Flammarion, Prof. Robert Hare, Cromwell F. Varley, Zollner, Rudolph Virchow, Carl Du Prel, Count Alexander Aksakof and many others. Prof. Thomson Jay Hudson, as our N. S. A. president has written, "of just name and fame, and exceptionally gifted in his special line of study, has gone so far as to declare that he who doubts psychic phenomena is not entitled to be called a skeptic, he is simply ignorant."

I am moved to speak particularly this evening of Alfred Russel Wallace, as I have recently read his Life, written by himself, in which he so candidly speaks of all his investigations of Spiritualism, and of his associations with Spiritualists. The latter do indeed owe him a great debt of gratitude. Now that so many men of science are looking into the matter and the Psychic Research Society is doing its work, Spiritualists need no longer be so much on the defensive, but can take time to live more in the present of Spiritualism.

Although fifty-nine years is not very long when compared with the rise and progress of other forms of religion, yet we can see greater progress in the length of time than in all that have preceded it, and a glorious future for it. Many deny us the term religion. Well, this depends on ones definition of the term. If as one Great Book says, "Pure religion and undefiled is to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction and keep one's self unspotted from the world"; and in another place "What is required of thee but to deal justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God," and "Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you." I claim Spiritualism teaches all this. If you tell me its followers do not practice all this, I say, let the followers of other religions who are without sin, cast the first stone. Spiritualists have to most bitterly acknowledge the short-comings of many of its professed followers.

It would seem that this Truth came to the world simply for the purpose of establishing the fact that man can not die. I have sometimes felt to say: Would that it had stopped there, because of the many things which have attached themselves to it—the things which have been done in its name. It has been well night disgraced by commercialism and fakism as well as by the unholy lives of some of its professed followers. As I write there arises before my subjective vision a pure white banner with the word Spiritualism inscribed in letters of gold upon it, and these words come to me: Oh, Spiritualists, hold high above the debris with which ignorance and misunderstanding are seeking to cover it, this pure white banner, and it shall remain to you. So I would fain cast to the winds all that which greed and malice would attach to it, and speak only of its present best and of the eternal progression which it teaches.

Thorough students of Spiritualism seek to understand life by tracing through cause and effect its successive developments from the lowest forms of vegetable life on through all the forms of animal life up to man as we find him today, a dweller on this planet earth, everywhere subject to natural law. Recognizing an unseen power which in the vegetable may be termed motion, in the animal, sensation; and in man, soul! not stopping here they go on, and through the established scientific facts of the phenomena of Modern Spiritualism seek to learn of his future and of natural law in the spirit world. All forms and expressions of religion have had somewhat to do with an unseen power which men have little understood but have named God, also with a life hereafter. So the followers of Spiritualism have found that its teachings of this power and a life hereafter are more rational and natural than those of any other religion; so natural that I would from this time on we might call it as I am sure we one day shall, Naturalism; but not because of the ridicule and unpopularity with which the word Spiritualism has been surrounded. It is fast outgrowing all that.

As a form and expression of religion it has fought its way until there is scarcely a city or town where effort is not being made to have it represented, and many cities and towns maintain flourishing societies. We have our State Associations and a National Association working for the benefit of all smaller organizations.

We have, too, one educational institution, the Morris Pratt Institute, at Whitewater, Wisconsin. These institutions do not claim perfection, but aim to put Spiritualism before the world in its highest and best form. The true workers in these associations are trying to help those who are called to espouse this unpopular cause, to be worthy of their work and to make it sacred.

I should be false to duty if I neglected this opportunity to say that Spiritualism as an organized movement must fail in part of its mission if it does not stand and work for the three great reforms upon which all others hinge, that of the equality of men and women in all the walks of life, the emancipation of the industrial world from the system of wage slavery, and last but not least the temperance reform. Oh! Spiritualists, pray without ceasing, but while you pray work, for what does to pray without ceasing mean but to work. Every obstacle in the way of the education and the Spiritualization of humanity must be removed, until we have a people where though intoxicating liquors should flow through the streets as rivers to the ocean there would be none to drink it because none would desire it.

J. M. KINGMAN.
Pittsfield, Mass.

Ascended Higher.

Passed to spirit life from his home in Alliance, Ohio, April 2, 1907, Mr. Harry C. Russell, aged 51 years. The disease was cancer of the stomach, from which he suffered terribly the last few weeks of his illness.

On the evening of April 4th, the local fraternal orders, the K. O. T. M. and the Ben Hur, gave their impressive ritualistic services at the home and on the following day the fraternal order of Eagles gave their touching service at the Independent Church (Spiritualist), and under the leadership of Mr. Reese Jones, rendered sweetest music, and also served as pall bearers. This was followed by the funeral address by the writer, and was the fulfillment of a request made several years ago by Mr. Russell. In his address the speaker gave a brief explanation of the teachings of Spiritualism, and said that Mr. Russell had proved to his own satisfaction that they were true, and he gladly and fully accepted them. He also explained that the deceased wanted the listeners to know that he was a Spiritualist, and requested that the speaker explain its teachings on this occasion.

The speaker made it clear that Spiritualism was the true comfort at the time of death, both to the one departing this life, and the bereaved one left behind.

There were many relatives and friends present from out of town, and the large attendance and many beautiful floral offerings were evidence of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

His wife, Mrs. Flora Russell, is well known, and has many friends among Spiritualists, as her sweet voice and Spiritualistic songs have charmed them at their camp meetings, state and National conventions for years. Their kindly thoughts and sympathy will bless her in this hour of sorrow.

Harry Russell was a good man, a true Spiritualist, a faithful member of the Alliance Society and a good worker in the cause of Spiritualism. His earthly form will be greatly missed in the home, but his spiritual presence will comfort and cheer his good wife and children, his dear aged mother and sisters and brothers in their sorrow.

E. W. SPRAGUE.
Detroit, Mich.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

Religious and Theological works of Thomas Paine, Here is a book that should be in the library of every Spiritualist and Freethinker in the land. Price, cloth, $1.

Religion. A profound philosophical treatise on this world-wide subject of contention. It is a good book for students preparing for the spiritual rostrum. By E. D. Babbitt. Price, cloth $1; paper, 50c; postage, 10 cents.

Right Living. This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book adapted to the comprehension of children. By Susan H. Wixon. Price, cloth, $1.

Rights of Man. Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. By Thomas Paine. Post 8vo; 279 pages. Price, paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Romance of Two Worlds. By Marie Corelli. Price 50 cents.

Schopenhauer's Essays. Translated by T. B. Saunders. Price 75 cts.

Science and the Future Life. By Prof James H. Hyslop. Price, postpaid, $1.60.

Science of Spirit Return. By one of the scientific minds of The Progressive Thinker corps of contributors. Rich with profound thought. By Charles Dawbarn. Price 10 cents.

Six Historic Americans. By John E. Remsburg. Price $1.25.

Sixth and Seventh Book of Moses. Translated from the ancient Hebrew. Price, $1.

Social Upbuilding, including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. By E. D Babbitt, M. D. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Some Glimpses of Occultism Ancient and Modern. A series of lectures by C. W. Leadbeater. Price, $1.50.

Standing up for Jesus, or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him on general principles. Profound, biblical, sarcastic. Price 4 cents; 25 copies for 50 cents.

Spiritual Songster. By Mattie E. Hull, containing 38 songs. Price, 10 cents each, or $7.00 per hundred.

Startling Facts or Deeds of Darkness Disclosed, Relative to Auricular Confession, and Its Relations to Sacerdotal Celibacy, Convents, Monasteries, Morality, and Civil and Religious Liberty. By Rev. J. G. White. Price, 75 cents.

Studies in the Outlying Fields of Psychic Science. How to investigate, form circles and develop mediumship. A test of genuine mediumship. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

Superstition in All Ages, or "Le Bons Sens." Testimony of a Catholic priest who abjured the Christian religion and asked God's pardon for having taught it. Price, cloth, $1; postage 14 cents.

Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope. This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. Price 25 cents.

Teachings of Jesus, Not Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. A book full of truth. By George W. Brown, M. D. Price 15 cents.

Ten Commandments Analyzed. By W. H. Bach. Price, 25 cents.

The Arcana of Spiritualism. A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. A splendid work by the seer and philosospher, Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

The Aristocracy of Health. A Study of Physical Culture, and Our Favorite Poisons. A masterly work on the subject, by the gifted writer, Mrs. Mary Footé Henderson. Price, $1.50.

The A, B, Z, of Our Own Nutrition. An excellent work and guide perfect health. By Horace Fletcher. Price, $1. Price $1.25.

The Candle From Under the Bushel, or Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy. Nuts that are hard for them to crack. An interesting book. By Wm. Heart. Price 40 cents.

The Constitution of Man. By Elizabeth Towne. Price 50 cents.

The Crisis. By Thomas Paine. Price, 25 cents.

The Demonism of the Ages. Spirit Obsessions so Common in Spiritism, Oriental and Occidental Occultism. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Cloth bound. Price $1, postage, 19 cents.

The Development of Spirit—After Transition. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. By the late M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Divine Pedigree of Man, or the Testimony of Evolution and Psychology to the Fatherhood of God. By Dr. Thomson J. Hudson. Price $1.50.

The Dream Child. Reads like an inspiration. Treating clearly upon the laws of affinity, love and the attendant pain and sorrow invariably experienced therewith. By Florence Huntley. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

The Evolution of the Christ Idea. By Hudson Tuttle. Price, $1.25.

The Fairy Land of Science. This beautiful book fills a niche in the hearts of the young people. Lyceum library literature. By Arabella B. Buckley. Price 50.

The Great Psychological Crime, which claims that subjective mediumship is injurious, is edited by Florence Huntley, author of "The Dream Child" and "Harmonics of Evolution." Price $2.

The Greatest Thing Ever Known. A dainty, helpful book. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price 35 cents.

The Idea of God. By Dr. Paul Carus. Fourth edition. 32 pages. "An effort to purify our 'Idea of God' that it may be greater, sublimer, and more awe-inspiring to future generations than it has ever been yet."—Literary World, London. Paper cover, 15 cents.

The Kingship of Self-Control. Full of most helpful ideas, and bound in white covers with pretty floral design. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cents.

The Life of Jesus. By Ernest Renan. Translated from the original French. Price, cloth, gilt top, 75 cents.

The Life Radiant. For every one in every walk of life. By Lilian Whiting. Cloth binding. Price, $1.

The Living Decalogue. From Sinai to Zion. By W. J. Colville. Price 50 cents.

The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature. Demonstrates the continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences. Free from all theories of superstition. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Price 25 cents.

The Lover's World. A Wheel of Life. Treating on the subjects of love, marriage and parenthood. By Dr. Alice B. Stockham. "The Lover's World, garnered sheaves from the wisdom of books and life's experiences, is now returned to the heart of humanity." Price, silk cloth, $2.25.

The Majesty of Calmness. By William George Jordan. Price 30 cts.

The Mystic Thesaurus. By W. F. Whitehead. Leatherette, Price, $1.

The New Life. By Leroy Berrier. Price 50 cents.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional. This is a most valuable book. It comes from an ex-priest whose character is above reproach. By Father Chiniquy. Price $1.

The Prophets of Israel. Popular sketches from Old Testament History, than which no branch of science in the last generation, has undergone a more profound revolution. By Carl Heinrich Cornell. Price 25c.

The Other Side of Death. Scientifically examined and carefully described by C. W. Leadbeater. Price $1.50.

The Relations of Science to the Phenomena of Life. Ideas of life scientifically expressed in contradistinction from the old theories. By Spirit Professor M. Faraday. Price 10 cents.

The Religion of Cheerfulness. By Sara A. Hubbard. Price 50 cents.

The Pathway of the Human Spirit. By J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents.

The Riddle of the Universe at the close of the nineteenth century. By Prof. Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. Bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer in Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Abriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions, other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.50. Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

Seventh Annual Convention

Of the Wisconsin State Spiritualists' Association.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

The Seventh Annual Convention of the Wisconsin State Spiritualists' Association is bringing together a large number of delegates and friends from all parts of the State. The St Charles Hotel, one of the finest and most home-like in the city, is the headquarters for the officers, delegates and visitors at the convention.

The reception tendered to visitors and delegates by the Association Monday evening was well attended, notwithstanding the day had been most unpleasant.

The President, Geo. H. Brooks, genial as ever, showed the results of his recent illness, but all were glad to see him well again.

Mrs. McFarlin, the vice-president, had also arrived and was looking well and beaming as usual.

Miss Louise Loebel, the active and efficient secretary, being a resident of Milwaukee, was most charmingly active in receiving and introducing the guests to each other. All the speakers and delegates who had arrived in the city—and a goodly number of local workers and prominent Spiritualists of the city, were present. Several students from the Morris Pratt Institute were present, having been granted their usual spring vacation of one week at this time in order to enable them to attend the convention.

Mr. Brooks, in brief, and appropriate introduction called upon the officers of the State Association for remarks. After a most beautiful musical selection by Mrs. Dr. Ray, of Milwaukee, Mrs. Abbott and Miss Spaulding gave recitations (students of the Morris Pratt Institute), Mrs. Smead (local worker), Mrs. McFarlin, Miss Loebel and Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, all made brief addresses, concluding with a poem by Ouina.

Refreshments were served and the delightful evening closed with promises to meet early on the morrow for the work of the convention

Tuesday, April 10.—10:30 A. M.

Invocation by Mrs Richmond.

The convention was called to order by President Brooks, and twe Committees appointed on Rules and Credentials.

Pending the reports of these committees an informal meeting was held.

The chairman called on Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. Witte, Miss Spaulding, Mrs. Smead, and Mr. Jones, who made remarks and suggestions for the coming work.

Committee on Rules (chairman, Mrs. Smead), reported Roberts' Rules of Order.

Committee on Credentials (Mrs. McFarlin chairman), could only make partial report.

Afternoon Session.

Secretary (Miss Louise Loebel), read minutes of last convention and subsequent board meetings, which occupied all the time until 3 p. m., when Mrs. Catharine McFarlin, vice-president of the association, made an address, replete with interesting personal experiences, pathetic and humorous, and an earnest appeal to all workers to bear forward the real work of the association.

Messages followed from two home workers, and remarks from Mrs. Smead, an earnest and beautiful spirit in the body.

Evening Session.

The evening session was delayed in opening (announced at 7:45) waiting for the promised presence of the Mayor, who was to welcome the convention to the city. But no Mayor or representative of that official came, and the convention welcomed itself and went on with the program. A large audience was present.

A piano solo by Mrs. Dr. Ray, a song by the congregation, invocation and address by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, who received a warm welcome, and whose guides reached the people with an address that was greatly appreciated.

At the close of Mrs. Richmond's address she presented the following preamble and resolutions which were read by the chairman and were passed by a rising vote of the audience:

[See Report of Committee on Resolutions, in which those of Mrs. Richmond were incorporated.]

(The vote was preceded by a brief and glowing tribute to Mr. W. T. Stead for his courage in announcing his belief in the knowledge of the truth of Spiritualism, and his great work in the Cause of International Peace through arbitration.)

Mrs. Nivers, teacher of oratory at the Morris Pratt Institute, daughter of Moses Hull, was introduced, and more than delighted the audience with two recitations. Her work is indeed surpassingly fine.

Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley gave excellent satisfaction in the messages she gave, although she is weary from a long journey and watching by the bedside of her mother, recently arisen.

The meeting closed with benediction by Mrs. Richmond.

Wednesday Morning.—10:30 A. M.

Convention called to order. Mr. Brooks called for reports of committees and appointed other committees.

The morning session was occupied with the reading of the President's Report, and that of the Secretary. Your correspondent can truly say that these reports are brief, masterly and cover an amount of work accomplished that amply justifies the selection of those two officers to serve the Wisconsin Association.

A remarkable feature is that in both instances they are the first reports of the kind that the President (Mr. Brooks), and the Secretary (Miss Loebel) ever made. Your correspondent would mention some of the salient points, but feels certain the entire reports will be published in The Progressive Thinker for the benefit of the societies throughout the State of Wisconsin, and encouragement of workers in other states.

The most encouraging financial feature of the year's work will be the wiping out of the largest debt (amounting to several hundred dollars) of the association, which was in existence before the present official board took up the work.

At 2 p. m. pending reports of committees, the meeting took up the subject of the Morris Pratt School, and the various speakers made enthusiastic remarks concerning it.

At 3 p. m., Professor Weaver gave the regular address of the afternoon, on "Nature's Laws." It was a masterly address and adapted to students of Life in all ages and conditions. Professor Weaver was most enthusiastically applauded.

raising a fund in aid of this Convention. And also to those who have donated articles to be sold for the benefit of the Association.

Resolved: That too much praise cannot be given to our Sisters, Mrs. Schneider, her two daughters and Mrs. Waite, Mrs. Hattie Smith, Mrs. Smead and Miss Richards for the wonderful work they have accomplished under difficulties in creating and serving meals during this Convention.

Resolved: That we thank the friends in this city who have so freely extended the hospitality of their homes to delegates and members of this convention—this spirit and action is most sincerely appreciated.

Resolved: That we thank all who have assisted in the work of this convention (without hope of reward or fear of punishment) who were not members, and many of them not residents of the State.

Resolved: That in furnishing delightful music, Mrs. Dr. Ray, Miss Golden and Miss Grace Smith have our sincere thanks.

Resolved; That this Convention acknowledge with thanks and appreciation the courtesies of the Press of this city for their friendly attitude toward this Convention and the Cause in general, and the Manager of the St. Charles Hotel for rates and favors to officers and visitors.

The Arisen Ones.

Whereas, As in the course of the year, the harvest of arisen ones has been quite large and many of our prominent workers and dear friends have been called home;

Resolved: That this Convention extends its sympathy to the friends of Mrs. King of Milwaukee, Geo. B. McKnight of Oldfield, Mrs. Winter of Milwaukee, Mrs. Robert Schilling of Milwaukee, Miss Jennie Botiker of Milwaukee, Master Oscar O. Vitig, for the loss in mortal form of these arisen ones, but we rejoice in the knowledge if their continued life and activity.

Whereas, That in the passing on of our Brother Moses Hull, life-long worker for humanity, teacher, leader, friend, President of the Morris Pratt School, the cause in this State and throughout the world has lost in the mortal side one of the grandest, noblest and best of men, one of the most intellectual and spiritual minds and one most devoted to the highest interests of humanity;

Resolved: That we extend to the wife, Mrs. Mattie E. Hull, noble woman and worthy companion of Moses Hull, and to the daughters and household, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and to the members of the Morris Pratt Institute, its faculty and pupils our most fervent love and sympathy. But we know that not being dead, "He yet speaketh" and that his noble spirit worketh ever for our grand cause.

Whereas, In the transition of Theodore J. Mayer, the treasurer of the N. S. A., the National Association has met with a loss that is not to be measured in words. An earnest and devoted Spiritualist, a sympathetic friend, a promoter of valuable and beneficent institutions, a financial bulwark.

Resolved: That we extend to the officers and trustees of the N. S. A and the members throughout the United States our sympathy and appreciation of this great vacancy that has gone, but ever realizing that he will still watch over and aid as far as possible the work of the N. S. A, so dear to his heart. We trust and know that in his arisen state, he will more than ever be a helper and friend.

Resolved: That in the passing on of Jennie Hagan Brown the cause has been deprived of one of its most interesting, winning and gifted speakers, whose lectures and improvisations have charmed thousands. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved husband, and share the mortal loss with all Spiritualists who have known her. Yet, she also has joined the band of arisen workers.

Respectfully submitted,
CORA L. V. RICHMOND.
CATHARINE McFARLIN,
Committee.

Milwaukee, April 18, 1907

Unanimously adopted by the Convention.

Personnel of the Convention.

The long and short of it is that Brother Brooks (long) and Sister McFarlin (short) make a good more than average president and vice-president.

It is no libel on others to say that Miss Louise Loebel should have a label marked "First Prize" as secretary.

Brother W. E. Bristol has never, never, never decamped with the surplus in the treasury of the W. S. S. A. Why? First, Because he is honest, and, Second, there is money in the treasury.

Professor A. J. Weaver of the Morris Pratt Institute is delegate from that society to the Convention, but he can't get away from his pupils, several are at the Convention. They idolize him. Yet, we are told the M. P. I. does not uphold idolatry.

Mrs Abbott, of the Morris Pratt Institute is assistant secretary of the Convention, and no wonder, for besides being genial and accomplished, she has a most prodigious memory, as that recitation she gave us Monday evening at the reception proves. If all the minutes (and hours, too), of the Convention were lost, she would find them in her memory box

Delegates and members all remarkably good looking. A number of young people.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Whereas, a great International, world-wide and heaven inspired movement is now taking form and activity under the name of International Arbitration. The peace movement so long delayed, so fervently longed for promises to bring effective results in the near future; and whereas, both the letter and the spirit of modern Spiritualism are in perfect accord with the principles of justice, liberty and peace; and whereas, a conference National in significance and scope is now in session in New York favorable to and a preparation for the International Congress to be held at The Hague, June 15;

Resolved: That this convention send to our esteemed and eminent coworker, W. T. Stead of London, now in New York, our greetings and the hearty sympathy of the Spiritualists of Wisconsin (and we believe of the whole United States) with the movement for Universal Disarmament, Arbitration and Peace of which he is so devoted a champion, and we invoke the blessings of heaven and Our Arisen Statesmen and Philanthropists and lovers of peace on the deliberations of the Conference, now in session in New York.

Resolved: That the President of this Association and Convention be empowered to send the substance and spirit of these resolutions to Mr. Stead and the Conference in New York.

(The above was unanimously passed by the Convention, Tuesday evening.

Whereas, we recognize the great progress that our cause has made throughout the world; in the organization of a new Scientific Association for the investigation of the phenomena by scientific men, and in the spread of the essential truths of our philosophy in general literature, and in the liberalizing of the sermons of the clergy of all denominations, and believing that the time is not far distant when Spiritualism will be the religion of the world;

Resolved: That this association press forward with the work so well begun and so ably borne forward in this State, one of the pioneer states, in giving Spiritualism to the world.

Resolved that the organization of local societies and their continuance depends on the securing of local workers and settled speakers, and if one society is not able to bear the financial burden alone, we recommend that three or four towns unite in employing a speaker.

Resolved: That the importance of training the children of Spiritualists in the fundamental truths of Spiritualism cannot be too urgently stated and we recommend the establishment of Sunday-Schools and Lyceums even if there are only a few children.

Resolved: That we recognize in the Morris Pratt Institute the one desirable school in advanced studies (established by the spirit world through the mediumship of Mrs. Hayes) and earnestly urge our friends throughout the state and everywhere to sustain that school; for we have evidence by the presence and work in this Convention of Professor Weaver, Mrs. Nivers and some of the students of that school of the good work it is doing.

Resolved: That as the Spiritualistic press must be for some time to come the principal means of disseminating our philosophy and knowledge of the phenomena, we urge upon our people everywhere the importance of sustaining that press.

Resolved: That we thank most fervently the Spiritualists and mediums of Milwaukee and throughout the State, who gave their services and the use of their homes for the purpose of Afternoon Session.

Report of Committee on Ways and Means closed the business session of the present convention.

At 3 p. m. the meeting, mostly in the hands of the German societies and workers in the city and delegates from other parts of the state. No more earnest or intelligent workers are found than these Germans.—

Afternoon Session.

Music by Mrs. Ray, Miss Smith.

Invocation, Mrs. Richmond, congregational singing.

Address by Mrs. Richmond, after answers to questions, on "The Majesty and Power of the Human Spirit."

Inspirational poem, subject given by the audience.

Brief remarks by Chairman.

Recitations by Mrs. Nivers (better than ever).

Messages by Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, all recognized.

The platform workers have been thoroughly appreciated by the convention and audiences.

Thus closes one of the most harmonious, business-like and spiritual conventions ever held in the state, (or elsewhere. Perfect harmony prevailed.

The 59th Anniversary at Ashtabula, Ohio.

The 59th anniversary of modern Spiritualism was fittingly celebrated by the Ashtabula Psychic Research Society at G. A. R. Hall, March 31st. At the evening service the hall was crowded beyond its capacity. Friends from Geneva and Conneaut assisted with their presence and helped to make our day one of immense value, both socially and spiritually.

The hall was nicely decorated with bunting and flags. Beautiful flowers were everywhere in evidence. The sweet harmonious conditions seemed to baptise us all anew, and invigorate us in our efforts to do honor to the occasion.

The readings by Mrs. Van Tassell of Ashtabula, and Mrs. Grant of Conneaut, were of a very high order, and strictly in keeping with the occasion, so beautifully rendered; they were a valuable feature of our program.

At the beginning of the afternoon session the President called upon Mrs. Lyman Ward, who chanced to be in the audience. She responded with some wholesome remarks.

Mrs. Sadie Herrick, whom we were fortunate enough to have with us, favored us most pleasingly with several solos. Messages were also given in the evening by Mrs. Herrick and were very favorably received.

Mrs. Wallace spoke both afternoon and evening. Her poetical remarks were forcible and did much to impress the audience with the beauty

GLORIOUS CELEBRATION.

By the Oldest Association in the World.

The First Association of Spiritualists of Philadelphia, Pa., which is also the oldest society in the world, may well be proud of the celebration at its temple, 12th and Thompson sts., Philadelphia, on Sunday, April 7, in commemoration of the 59th anniversary of the advent of Modern Spiritualism, for it was deserving of more than passing notice.

The venerable president, Captain Francis J. Keffer, "The Dear Old Captain," who is well loved by young and old, presided over the morning and evening service The faithful secretary and treasurer, F. H. Morrill, was at his post of duty. Samuel M. Stretton did good service at the organ, and the other officers were on hand looking after the interest of the society. The work of the Woman's Progressive Union was noticeamle everywhere. Lunches were served to a large number of people.

The decorations were indeed beautiful, the rostrum being transformed into a bower of loveliness, with a profusion of blooming plants and choice fragrant cut-flowers, fitting emblems to inspire all with higher, more noble living, for truly this is the real mission of the religion of Spiritualism, the religion of a right everyday living.

In the morning service, G. Tabor Thompson, the speaker of the Association, read part of a chapter from the Bible, and took for the subject of his morning discourse, "Woman's Place in Spiritualism," paying a fitting tribute to the Fox Sisters, and the long list of noble women workers in our cause.

The afternoon was devoted entirely to lyceum work. The recently elected conductor, Robert Williams, is instilling new life into this work at the temple, and the little ones acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner. The Guardian, Mrs Myers, and the secretary, Mrs. Birtwistle are also deserving of special mention in the training of these little blossoms of humanity. It was a beautiful sight to behold so many bright young faces animated with the spirit of joy and happiness, and many showed marked talent in their different ways.

The lyceum conducted by George W. Brelsford, at Parkland, Pa., was invited to participate in the exercises, and rendered several numbers in a pleasing manner.

Floral Heights Lyceum was also invited to co-operate with the Temple Lyceum, but the conductor being unable to take her little band, prepared and read a paper on Lyceum work, closing with one of the Lyceum pieces, "Floral Heights Happy Lyceum Band."

G. Tabor Thompson spoke kindly and interestingly to the children, giving some good and wholesome advice, recognizing the good this work is destined to do. Mrs Hannah Luce also spoke in a loving manner to the children. Nearly three hours were given to this work, which was much enjoyed by all.

Following the song service in the evening, G. Tabor Thompson delivered a very fine address on, "What Does Spiritualism Stand For?" Handling his subect in a scholarly, masterly manner, which left a good impression on his large audience.

Mrs. F. Essenwanger, who is a very pleasing message bearer, followed.

Throughout the day music and singing formed a prominent part of the program. The solos by Alexander Jackson, a Philadelphia boy only 15 years of age, is deserving of special mention.

Mr. Thompson has recently published a song book, called the "Psychic Songster," mostly his own compositions. This book has met with great favor, and is in general use at the temple.

During the morning Mr. Thompson introduced a novel and original plan to raise the debt of $200 against the society, to Mr. Morrill, the treasurer, who had paid the amount out of his own pocket for incidental expenses. Mr. Thompson brought forward a glass dish containing 200 chestnuts, on the top of which rested a good fresh hen's egg. He told how each chestnut represented one dollar of the indebtedness, that for every dollar pledged a chestnut would be given, and he desired to raise the full amount before the day closed; not only the full amount, but he hoped to raise a sum over as a nest egg. Should he succeed, Mr. Morrill was to have the egg for his breakfast.

The chestnuts were to be planted, and the young plants brought to the Temple one year hence, and the largest one selected to be placed in some public park, as a memorial of the 59th anniversary. The rest of the trees to be sold at auction, and the proceeds turned into the treasury of the society.

Well! it was a grand success; money sufficient to liquidate the debt was pledged, and some over for the "nest egg." The egg was presented to Mr. Morrill, who received it with many thanks to the audience for raising this debt, which relieved him greatly. He was then presented with one of the finest bouquets, and Captain Keffer received another.

And now, friends, I hope to have a very good report to make next year in regard to some very fine young chestnut trees.

ELIZABETH M. FISH.

and value of Spiritualism.

D. A. Herrick, the speaker of the day, delivered three masterly addresses. His language was beautiful, logical and convincing. The most sweeping claims were made for Spiritualism. Tender and touching were his references to our arisen friends. Every address was listened to with rapt attention and caused many strangers to enquire and wonder.

Truly a sweet ending of a very profitable month's work. A great work has been done, great good has been accomplished.

Brother Herrick has been a credit to our cause, has aided us with our Temple fund, by way of seances and contributions, this with several additions to our membership, makes us feel frateful.

JOHN WALLACE,

Ashtabula, O., April 7, 1907.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Rochester, N.Y.

THE EASTER BELLS.

Hear the song of the Easter Bells, as joyfully they fling
Their gladsome notes in the morning breeze, in the hours of budding spring;
Hear them tell their merry notes, unchanged through changing years,
Notes with love's message vibrant, as the nascent spring appears.
How comes it that your nimble tongue so early taught to sing
Your prayerful song in joyous notes, at opening of the spring?
How comes it that those tongues of sadder, graver tone,
Until like mine they utter notes of gravity alone?

How comes it that, (they answer back with notes of laughing scorn)
How comes it that yourself's so changed since in life's budding Morn?
Then laughter's shout was on your lips, your heart o'erflowed with bliss,
And even to your finger tips, you thrilled at mother's kiss.
And now, to-day, you're silv'r'd, gray, your voice rings not with joy;
And whither fled the vaulting pride that stirred you when a boy?
These notes, they said, are clanging loud, they unisoned reply,
Are echoes of the song which thrills through human destiny.

That song sometimes is sung in glee, surchanged with joyful note,
But oftener far it but vibrates the swelling in the throat.
For sorrows played upon our chimes, since first they poised us here
A hundred hundred times for once that laughing joy comes near.
But learn ye this (and murmuring low they settled down to rest),
Not those alone who listen to the song of joy are blessed,
But blessed are they, thrice happy blest, who gather from the roll
Of sorrow's chimes a subtler joy, to stay the fainting soul.

Nay, of the million notes we chime, but few are caught by men,
And even pleasure's song contains a a thousand notes of pain;
For thus has nature planned her scheme, that those who keenest quaffed
The cup of pleasure, these should drink of sorrow's deepest draught.

CHAS. MONTAGUE.

Spokane, Wash.

SUNSET ON THE RIVER.

How grand the beauteous sunset when shadows slowly fall!
Across the flowing river the echoes softly call.
The sky a brilliant opal, the sun's rich golden ray,
Spread shifting varied lights as twilight shadows play.
No artist brush can paint the mingling light and shade,
The opalescent searchlight that tints the forest glade.
Harken from the distance to echo of the hailing,
From snowy-plumed heron across the river sailing,
The gentle, waving wing, like white and floating mist,
Will carry him across the Western amethyst.
The purest angel white and downy feathery garment,
Was given to the heron for his nuptial adornment,
How proud the egret moves through air ere comes the night!
With noble grace and rapid, he taxes aerial flight,
And as the shadows fall, peeps forth the palid moon,
While distant echoes call so like a dying swoon;
For far across the river, in yonder willow's pond,
His lonely mate is calling, of whom he is so fond.
The sun is slowly sinking while Luna proudly looms,
Now lights the snowy heron and folds his magic plumes.
While yonder ship at anchor awaits the break of day,
The evening star is shining while the currents sweetly play.
A song of the deep, deep sea the lonely sailor sings;
A distant melody the south wind gently brings.
And when the day is done we bless the Mighty Giver
For all the glowing splendor, the sunset on the river

—Marie Elizabeth Lamb.

BEYOND.

It seemeth such a little way to me
Across that strange country—the Beyond;
And yet, not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond;
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant regions near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear
I think I almost see the gleaming strand
I know I feel those who have gone from here
Come near enough and sometimes touch my hand.
I often think but for our veiled eyes
We should find heaven right round about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about.
I love this world, yet shall I love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me I know.

I never stand above a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face
But what I think, "One more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one 'over there;'
One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair.

And so for me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory,
It is but crossing—with a bated breath
And white, set face—a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before.

—Selected.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and the "Counseling Place." Cloth, [illegible]

Mrs. Jacquet in Iowa.

To the Editor: Here I am in the hospitable home of Mr. J. D. Sketchley, one of your long time subscribers to the Spiritualist paper of America.

Mr. Sketchley and friends are of the old Virginia stock, and know how to most loyally entertain. I am meeting with fine success here; have had two large circles. I lectured last Sunday afternoon in the Universalist Church, and every pew was filled; so you see, friends, Webster City, is not so far behind the times in spiritual affairs.

Brother N. G. Olmstead and wife are true and very enthusiastic workers also. I held a circle in their beautiful home, and met with excellent success. Both Mr. Sketchley and Olmstead are never so happy as when communing with the dear departed ones.

It would pay any good honorable medium to come here and hold a series of meetings. And, oh, that such speakers as Elizabeth Harlow, Mrs. Lillie, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, and our most worthy president pass through such towns as Cedar Rapids and Webster City. Iowa towns certainly need a revival of true spiritual work.

I said in my last that after I got through with Webster, Leigh and Lemars, I would be done with Iowa, but I should have added, "with my engagements in the state; but I find I will not be through with Iowa even then, as I am expecting to remain until after the Clinton Camp meeting. I will be here some time, and any mail will reach me here if addressed in care of J. D. Sketchley.

MRS. E. J. JACQUET.

Webster City, Iowa.

The Anniversary at Galveston, Texas.

Our Anniversary extended over ten days. On the 22nd and 23rd we held our annual Bazaar. The night of the 22nd the Lyceum gave an entertainment consisting of recitations, singing and tableaus. It was well attended. Sunday, the 24th, Mrs. S. J. Chambers was ordained a minister of the gospel of Spiritualism by Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale, President of the Texas State Association, who has been engaged as our speaker for three months. On March the 31st we celebrated the anniversary of the 59th advent of Modern Spiritualism. The rostrum was elaborately trimmed with palms and cut flowers arranged in an artistic manner, rendering it a bower of beauty. Coming as it did, on Easter Sunday, we combined with it our usual memorial service. Two chairs were beautifully decorated in memory of Moses Hull and Mr. Mayer, and placed on the rostrum. Many others were decorated, their loved ones sitting beside them, knowing that the one passed on occupied the vacant chair. Mrs. Hinsdale's remarks were soul-stirring; very touchingly she spoke of the loved ones who had passed to higher life. She is indeed a fine inspirational speaker. On the afternoon of the 31st, she named the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilson. Our society is increasing its membership.

MRS. J. E. MUNN, Sec'y.

PIONEERS OF PROGRESS.

BY T. A. BLAND.

"It is a historic review of the progress of the nineteenth century on all lines. But the element that makes it universally popular is its human interest."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"A broad-minded lover of his fellows, Dr. Bland delights in giving credit to those men and women who have said things or done things to help forward the welfare of mankind."—Chicago Post.

"It contains biographies of some forty men and women whose live thoughts and heroic deeds gave character to the most wonderful century of the world's history."—Farm, Field and Fireside.

"It is just such a book as one might expect from a man who looks back over seventy-six years spent in tireless pursuit of high ideals."—Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, in Unity.

"The work is written in an easy, pleasing style, and is so interesting that we doubt if one reader in a score who commences one of the sketches will lay the book down until he has finished it."—The Arena.

It has 254 pages, is bound in best cloth with gold title. Price $1.00.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.

600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

MRS. E. M. RITCHCOCK will answer questions for 25c. Send own handwriting and lock of hair. Full reading, $1. Fern Hill, Pierce Co., Wash

WALNAH (Indian), during light of moon, will treat and cure you of salt rheum, tetter, old or scrofulous sores, scald-head, pimples, any eruptions, eczema, rheumatism, catarrh. $1 box treatment. Walnah, 2405 U St., South Omaha, Neb.

$10 Makes $150 IN 60 DAYS. A wonderful chance for a little money to make you a competency with absolute safety, without any work on your part. A positive guarantee given in our business. The best of Bank References. Address M. J. Cannon, Treasurer, Block 352, Farmers Bank Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . . . of Your Spirit Friends can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.

FRANK N. FOSTER.

Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

FRED P. EVANS.

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS.

2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angello visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free; worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,

21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Spriggs, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write: "My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. P. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd, Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head, Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Allantinns; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth St.

San Jose, Cal.

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

THE LEADING WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, M. D.

The Principles of Light and Color.

Superbly issued, royal 8vo, with over 200 engravings and colored plates. Price, $5.00; in massive binding, imitating half Russia, 50c. extra. "An imposing volume of nearly 600 pages. Shows a great amount of research on the part of the author. Will prove a great acquisition to Scientific Libraries."—N. Y. Herald.

Human Culture and Cure.

In six parts, five parts being already issued.

PART I. The Philosophy of Cure, including Methods and Instruments; 75 cents.

PARTS III and IV in one volume; $1.00. Part III treats of Mental and Psychological forces; Part IV of the Nervous System and Insanity. "This work discloses for the first time the chemical mystery of mental phenomena, throws the first clear light upon the nature and processes of hypnotism and all kindred psychological phenomena which have never before been explained or understood. Dr. Babbitt has here not only given the rationale of hypnotism, psychometry, clairvoyance and mental science, including the mysterious subject of memory, but has furnished abundant illustrations of their working. The subject of Phreno-physiognomy alone is of priceless value as enabling us to understand our fellow beings around us."—Prof. W. C. Bowman.

PART V. "The Bodily Organs, their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure," aims to be the most practical work on healing thus far given to the public. Price, $1.

Health and Power.

Brief Natural Treatment for 110 Diseases. Price, 25 cents. "Worth its weight in diamonds."

SOCIAL UPBUILDING, Paper, 15 cents.

RELIGION.—A most thoughtful and excellent work. Price, cloth, $1.10; paper, 60 cents.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type, [illegible]

What a Martian Would Think If He Visited the Earth.

A Discourse by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Chicago, Feb. 17, 1907

Of course it is hypothetical as far as you are concernod, yet in these days of many systems of knowledge and of many ways of arriving at knowledge, we are not obliged to wait for the laggard footsteps of science to declare that some things are known under the sun that it takes science a long time to accept. People have known about spirit and about spirit intercourse many years before the Psychic Research Society was thought of. There are thousands of people who are living now who knew about the other world by clairvoyance and spirit manifestations long before the Psychic Research Society condescended to have existence.

Planets are under the scrutiny of astronomers, but there are those endowed with other gifts, and among those who have these gifts are those who are the recipients of inspiration concerning other worlds.

Our teaching is, that the planets in proportion to their distance from the sun are more perfect; those nearer the sun are less perfect. As far as you know the planets Mercury is the least unfolded and Neptune is the greatest in unfoldment. Although there will be found to be twelve planets, including the Asteroids as one planet, when all are discovered in the solar system.

So naturally the planet Mars is the next in advance of the Earth, and if our teaching be true, then the inhabitants of Mars are in every way superior to the inhabitants of Earth. The planet Mars itself being the next step in advance is realizing in its material, mental and spiritual aspects that which you are just hoping to realize, or longing to realize. It is like the next grade in school. You have to pass the examination in the lower degree before you can enter the higher. So with the inhabitants of Earth; their next step or degree will be the planet Mars.

Admitting that there may be visitants from Mars, they have to pass into the atmosphere of Earth first to become dwellers upon the Earth. The special messengers in Grecian mythology were "Jove's Thunderers," those gods who dwelt near men as tutelar deities. Among the inhabitants of India they were divas, divine messengers, Avatars chosen to bear a message to the time and place, not as inhabitants of Earth simply, but as superior beings.

An inhabitants of Mars approaching the Earth would not approach it as you would approach with uncertainty a primary school, but as, civilized nations, so-called, approach some of those islands of the sea where civilization has not extended. Of course there must be a degree of sympathy between the condition of Earth and the inhabitants of Mars, or nothing could be done for you by those ministering presences from Mars.

Supposing such a life were approaching the Earth and there was an object for its finding expression here in human form. From the very first that child would be different from other children. From the first the Earth would seem to be an alien place; perhaps there would be some years of nostalgia, a sort of reminiscence of something lost; the Earth would seem to be different from the preceding state. If you were taken from a beautiful home, even in early childhood, and surrounded by inferior things to those that you had been accustomed to, there would be a sort of reminiscence and a longing for the beautiful lake, the beautiful mother you might have left behind, for the beautiful things that had surrounded you. So there are people who from the very time of their earliest thought and existence seem to be "home-sick." Perhaps some of these in growing older will evince some great power, some great ability, and often in such cases they come for a distinct purpose which they had in view, a distinct mission. In such cases although the parents or family might seek to govern them, they are not able to govern them.

Suppose Joan d'Arc, when the voice came to her inspiring her to go forward to save France, might have been a messenger? Suppose William Lloyd Garrison, when he first heard the voice concerning the abolition of slavery, when the great cry of the world was for the release of those in thralldom, still not accepting the thought of the sword, but always the higher and more perfect methods, suppose him as a messenger. We are only supposing this. But suppose in the midst of earthly existence that there would be those feelings that it is cold, cheerless, lonely.

It is true that substances are not as pliable here as on some other planets; and grown up people here would seem to them as grown up children. Their knowledge would seem to be infantile. You have known some people to walk directly to a height, to some particular position while others were slowly plodding on; but usually it would be the case that the visitor from Mars would present something so far in advance of the age that the tidings would be in fact only to those vivified by knowledge from within.

But suppose a Martian could plant the seed of a great truth and could live to bear it forward to maturity and could then realize its ripening, and suppose in doing this that all the time he was aware that no one in the world knew, necessarily, that he was doing this; as certain older teachers set an example for the children to follow. Many times those who announce a great mathematical proposition or a great mechanical discovery know that it cannot be adopted in the age in which they live. They place it on record; they place it where people will be able to realize it when they grow up to it and know that it has been announced. The announcement of a truth in the Earth's atmosphere, that is two or three hundred years, or a thousand years in advance of the growth of the people, nevertheless produces an impression on the most advanced lives here and remains a permanent possession until the people grow up to it.

Supposing a teacher, a greater teacher than any you know in this city, and you have some very great ones, was to visit you; suppose some one especially endowed with the divine sympathy for children and for teaching, for instance, like Dr. Parker, was to come and visit all the schools and give something so far in advance of the thought of the age that every one would know that it could not be adopted—but it would form an ideal, even as Froebel did, and wait for the future teaching to adopt the plan; that would be with regard to the Earth, or with regard to the schools of Earth what the visitant from Mars would be with regard to the Earth. It would not be the result of a long line of prophets like those in Israel; it would not be a culmination like the result of some schools of art or philosophy, but it would be a scintillant, shining light, not as great as that of a Messiah, but in some directions similar.

You may not know where to place Edison, since he not only announces, but realizes, and seems to fulfill in his personality that which others have announced; yet, he says, all these best things come to him, his inventions, his discoveries, in those hours when his body is asleep, and his spirit is apart from the earth. How do you know but what Edison has known and experimented on the planet Mars, where substances are more pliable, where the atmosphere does not offer so great a degree of resistence? Would not your slow progress in the adoption of these faster and finer methods refuse to yield to them, and all material influences discourage anyone unless that one was really endowed by a mission, and came to present something to you? Think how long, comparatively, the improved methods of transportation have been in their adoption. Think how long a suffering people have been in the adoption of these methods. Think of the condition of your thoroughfares and roads when there might be good roads throughout the country. The automobile is the compulsory agent for bringing about good roads. That wonderful man from Ohio who started out for Washington with his wonderful advance guard (Coxies Army), could not compel the government, even with his unarmed army to listen to the cry of the people; but the automobile can compel it, of course, because its demonstration of the necessity must be responded to.

But the great perception is to know that these things can be foreseen hundreds of years before their adoption. Steam as a motor power was slow in possessing the minds of the people. Your sapient legislators were sitting in Congress declaring that the steam engine could never be practical, while it was demonstrating its practicality. The telegraph was thought to be merely a matter of ornament or amusement. When Dr. Franklin, imitating Prometheus, stole the same fire from the heavens, he was not impaled upon a rock for doing this, but his discovery was impaled for a long time. There have been thousands of inventions put aside as impractical and useless, merely because the people were not ready, and commerce would not adopt them. How many improvements have been in the same way set aside! Air ships could have been practical long ago if the people had been ready, and even now the most successful ones are not encouraged. The truth is, when a Martian comes and announces an air ship, and goes away, the world grows up to it by the birth of the inventor and manufacturer who are ready for the idea. But commerce responds the latest because commerce must be "safe." There are a great many possessions in the earth today and upon the earth that are but waiting for you to be ready.

Of course you have a great many new things and a great many mysterious things and a great many things that the present civilization regards as necessities that a later civilization will put aside.

By and by you will not shut out the fresh air and sunshine from your dwellings and places of work or business. There will be room enough for all occupations and room enough for all buildings where there will be sunshine and all the vitality that the sunshines and fresh air can give. Now you regard it as a wonderful thing that you have these immense structures, and you never think them too high, however high. If there is a Martian embodied here today, doing his best for people not to have them, you do not know him. By and by you will. If there is a Martian embodied here today teaching civilization a better way, you are not ready, the world is not ready. They must be as veritable prophets for the time fulfilling their work, not heeding the sluggard and laggard steps of the people.

The truth is, these various steps that are taken emphasize and exemplify the better way. It requires a poet to perfectly read and interpret a poet; but you all have more poetic perception than you are aware of. It requires an artist to clearly understand what an artist means by his picture. It requires an artist to gaze upon the sunset and know what the Master has painted there in colors. It requires a real humanitarian, a true philanthropist to know the great step that is needed, and not to heed the hue and cry that goes forth, that "it will wield so disturbing an influence—it will upset all existing institutions." Certainly. Institutions are the outgrowth of human conditions, they do not make them, and just as soon as they do not serve their purpose there comes some one along to knock them down. But you are not ready, you do not want them torn down, you are not ready for the next structure. But at the same time "Thy will be done." Oftentimes it is done through seas of human bloodshed.

One of the arguments raised against woman's suffrage—and that cannot be any more—is, they say that women cannot fight. That argument has been knocked out. Of course, we know that with the urgency or necessity of the time, whatever it is, the thing that is to come and that is best to be done will be done. Of course, if it is best the Houses of Parliament may see it clearly sooner than your legislators, because England is very susceptible when the riot act is being read. The members of Parliament are afraid to meet the women in argument. In such an emergency England took an added step in advance in abolishing the corn laws, because the people went up there and demanded bread; they DEMANDED BREAD! So the "bread of Life' that the people hunger for (the right to live) may come to them in various ways, but always along the pathway where there has been some one to sow the seed.

We do not think the women of this country are ready to go up to the state legislature or to Congress in the same attitude that the women of England went to the Houses of Parliament, but Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others have been doing this morally and mentally for the last sixty years. Their fruitage has come in the steps that woman has taken in advance in schools, in colleges, in industrial pursuits, in the privileges of labor, and added compensation for her work; all this is the result of the Woman's Suffrage Movement. Men will give women higher wages and all that, but not the ballot, but that is what they are crying for, for that is the sine qua non of citizenship. If the ballot is of any value to man it is equally valuable to woman as a citizen. If it is of no value, where is the need of discouraging woman? Politicians assume that it is the ballot that makes the man. We think the state of man's advancement makes the ballot; and we think the time will come, perhaps, when women will vote, but it will be at such a time when voting may not be so necessary as it is now. The world grows to the achievement of its ideals by what we have said of these particular visitants. What Elizabeth Cady Stanton, as first president of the Woman's Suffrage Association, announced becomes the fulfillment of the age when law-making and law-fulfilling will be the least thing and the least necessary. People who are well governed, individuals who are well governed, are not restrained from stealing or attempting murder by the laws on the statute books, nor do they aid in the perfect well being of the community by the fear of the penalties for these crimes. If you are honest in your daily dealings it is because you are honest. If you are dishonest you employ a lawyer to keep you out of jail, as many bankers and senators do to enable you to do a thing within legal boundaries that you will not do outside. But the average honesty of the world is based upon the old adage that "honesty is the best policy." We would drop the last word, so the world grows to its inheritance by the announcement of certain principles that you aim to live up to. We think the world is living up to the highest that it can today, meaning not the highest that it ever will be able to, but in accordance with the highest conditions considering the state of growth, and the state of the personal and collective morality of the community. The morality of the community consists of the individual morality of the members of the community. So when public opinion, under the high ideal announced by some prophet, reaches the realization of that ideal, of course, it may be long ages after the prophet is dead to the world. But both the announcement and the fulfillment may come under the dominion of that angelic life that makes the announcement.

Therefore, while the earth, as said before, would seem to one from Mars to be very inferior, it would seem a desert place almost compared to Mars. It would also be a place in which an inhabitant from Mars would exercise a distinctive mission and influence, and in his coming announce a distinctive purpose, whether it be like John the Baptist, saying, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord and make his paths straight," or whether it be like Victor Hugo, saying: "The time will come when you France, you Italy, you Spain, you Russia, you Germany, you England, you America, you all the nations of the earth will be linked together in one Sisterhood of nations." Victor Hugo saw that vision, the poet-prophet who knew he would not remain in the physical form long enough to see it fulfilled, but he also knew that inevitably the time would come when it would be fulfilled. How dreary and desolate the waiting would seem if the prophet or teacher did not see through all the shadows of the intermediate years and know that the triumph would ultimately come.

The day of peace has been declared. Peace societies, national and international, world wide, have been formed for the abolition of war; for the disarmament of nations, and for the ceasing to celebrate your national holiday with loud noises and loud acclaim like that of battle. But all this prophecy the nations do not heed; they go on getting armies; they go on building warships; they go on using the elements of physical destruction; but that announcement stands clear in the horizon of the few, though the one who made the announcement first knew that wars would intervene through all these hundreds of years, that "Peace on earth and good will to mankind" would not have immediate fulfillment.

The love of peace prevails after justice prevails, and it can no more be peace until justice prevails than it can be during the time that injustice is here. All injustice is warfare. Therefore, when the nemesis from Mars comes to inspire a sword like that of General Grant, we know that it means something. We know that it is not simply military ambition like that of Napoleon; we know that it is not just to overcome an army equally well equiped, but it stands for a light in the world. The difference between a Napoleon and a Grant is, that a Napoleon is the nemesis of ambition. He taught the sublime lesson to the nations of Europe that one can spring up from obscurity and make all the nations of the earth, even Rome, quail; and yet he could illustrate but one thing, personal ambition. A Grant can say to the world, that a citizen, a quiet, unambitious man can take possession of the sword for a cause and show the world what freedom means; then when it is no longer necessary withdraw as speedily from the sword as it was taken up. Without any personal ambition, but receiving an ovation from the world as no one else ever did, was General Grant's experience after the arms of war were laid aside.

The truth is, that when one has a work to do, as Abraham Lincoln had, he comes equipped for it. You have celebrated his birthday sinte you last met here. The nation has at last accepted the wonderful light of his great personality, and has made a national holiday of the anniversary of his birth here, and business has consented to stop in memory of Abraham Lincoln. Dreaming along the waters of the western rivers or using his muscular frame for the ordinary necessities of life, the great mission that he came to fulfill was upon him from the first, and when he stepped forth with the words against chattel slavery, he also carried within his soul the next great step of human progress, and he knew that industrial freedom should follow, and in that message that he gave to Congress, that especial last message, he urged the working men of this country to beware of the gradual encroaching power of capital. What did he mean? He meant just that which is surrounding you today. And he would by no means exclude woman from the full privilege of citizenship; and what did he mean? He meant that one half of the race should be recognized as equal with the other half—Prof. Thomas to the contrary, notwithstanding. And the fact that the great herald of Freedom was in the air, for the voice that compelled him to govern the nation was the result of what his birth was destined to fulfill. None the less is that great spirit power upon the nation today to fulfill his ideals in those other and added directions.

So, to return to other themes, this electric light which to you is so wonderful, is superseded on the planet Mars by an especially wonderful and beautiful arrangement of the solar rays. The time will come here when it will not be electric light nor storage batteries, but the solar light and heat will be stored up in the summer time for winter use. The time will come when the higher range of the vibrations of the sun will be employed in your conversation with Mars. There is a Martian here who is seeing to it now, who is impressing and inspiring inventors along that line. Edison is closely allied to that thought and expects not only to feel the pulse of the sun with regard to its action upon the earth, but expects that his solar engine will be fulfilled in his day. When you have imprisoned the solar light and solar heat this Martian will have fulfilled his mission, and will have gone on his way. Perhaps the man most unheeded, one least recognized, from whom the machinist steals an invention, is the one who is the visitant; perhaps the one who declares in the most peaceful and unostentatious way his lines of life, his desire for doing the best to all humanity, is a visitor. You do not recognize who may live next door to you; he may be called eccentric, but when he dies the greatest obituary you will read, the greatest monument you will build to his memory is: "He was an honest man." So rare is this, so wonderfully does it shine out when it is written upon the slab of marble, or printed in the obituary notice, it forms one of the most beautiful monuments that a human being could have. If you leave a legacy to your sons and daughters, which would you rather leave, that record or a hundred million dollars? A man may think he is perfectly honest and have a hundred million dollars; but he is not, he cannot be—though he has no perception of the proposition—he is the victim of the conditions of the times that permit one man to accumulate so much money. He does not realize that there are no distinguished alienists employed to feel the mental pulse of the multi-millionaire to decide, by his mental vibrations, whether he be sane or not. But there will be something more potent than that;—The time will come when every sane man will refuse to have more money than is necessary for his daily bread or needs. That will be sanity.

The visitant that is upon the earth today is ferreting out, is finding out all these weaknesses, and is showing you the better way. Not always by warfare; sometimes it is in the lines of peaceful and direct unfoldment and education, and the great steps that have been taken toward this end are expressing themselves. There are more people today amenable to the Golden Rule than in any other age of the world. With all the crime and the luxurious living that there is in the world, there are more people ready for the simple life, for the light that is shining upon the world today is illuminating the spiritual avenues until there is such an awakening, such a desire to know, and such interest in that which shall be the spiritual enlightenment that you cannot keep the people back.

One thing is perfectly evident at this hour: A visitant from Mars has opened up the spiritual avenues of information and of human thought so there are more people ready to build up society from within than ever there were before. Perhaps that is why legislation is neglected; perhaps that is why you do not go to the primary meetings. The one thing the people need to know is, that they must vote, and act, and think each day according to their highest convictions for that day; and perhaps exalting the ideal and the bringing in the knowledge of the spiritual power will aid in awakening in human lives something of this up-building from within.

More and more the visitant from Mars is telling you abroad in the world that the Martians are waiting for you to recognize the signals that have been placed upon Mars for years and years, waiting for you to advance sufficiently. The means have been suggested here for the purpose. If you had attained more knowledge; if there were more powerful telescopes; if there was recognition of intuition; if there were protected messages through mediums who can give them without being influenced by their surroundings, or by position, or by money, that which they know to be true, and more perfect methods of arriving at the fruition of the inventions by inventors who are obscure.

You may not know it, but it is positively true, from information received through the Patent Office in Washington, prominent electricians for the benefit of electric companies have kept back inventions through which many of these things would have been realized today. And, but for persecution and oppression and ridicule many revealments from the realm of spirits would have been long ago an adjunct in established science for scientific men to realize what is passing in the great realm beyond.

Fifty years ago when a woman in Boston was entranced to paint as well as she could, not being a trained artist, what were called pictures of the inhabitants of Mars and Jupiter, her own brother, who was a professor at Harvard, and a number of his brother professors went to her studio to see these pictures just to please her. They went away shouting with laughter as soon as they were on the street, thinking, of course, that something was the matter with her brain. But it now transpires that Camille Flammarion, one of the first astronomers of this age, has suggested that if Mars and Jupiter are inhabited they have probably unfolded along different lines from the inhabitants of Earth, and they really may be endowed with wings. Had those professors known of the life on those planets they might not have laughed so heartily at the pictures of the lady. It may be those who saw the angels in ancient days saw them with wings. Whatever their method of flight, they may have seen those who had already learned to navigate the air; those who had learned the powers that you are trying to grasp which are already fulfilled in Mars. They wonder that the people have to walk upon the earth, when to them the air is as navigable as your seas here are.

The day of scoffing and ridicule is at an end. Anything that is worthy of being thought about is worth being investigated; and when added vision shall reveal more and more that in your midst there are not only "clouds of witnesses" of your own arisen ones, statesmen, scientists, seers and philosophers, but from those other worlds beneficent angels and spirits who are helping to guide and lead you, will you not be more ready to open the door of intuition to allow these messengers to enter? And then instead of being clad in red, the messengers of Mars, not the red planet, will come clothed in white, and will teach you to know the strength and the legitimate light of the next step of planetary existence.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF "ACTINA"

In the Treatment of

Afflictions of the Eye

Every person with impaired eyesight or suffering from weak or diseased eyes should write for our latest free booklet, entitled "Positive Evidence."

The records of phenomenal cures by the "Actina" treatment, as described therein by grateful patients themselves—names and addresses given—will satisfy the most skeptical that "Actina" is not only a remarkable, simple and harmless invention, but restores eyesight even after specialists have pronounced cases incurable.

Following are a few of the successes produced by "Actina," but more fully described in our free booklet.

A Chicago gentleman, after suffering 12 months with inflammation of the iris, used "Actina" a few weeks. He says he can now see as well and as far as anybody.

An Iowa lady writes that after being under treatment of specialists for 15 years, "Actina" completely restored her eyesight and she no longer uses glasses.

Astigmatism and granulated lids impaired the eyesight of a Hartford (Conn.) lady. Specialists failed to cure. As a last resort, against advice of friends, she tried "Actina." She writes:—"For many months I have written almost daily without glasses. No more pain in my eyes and drooping eyelid is restored."

"Actina" removed a cataract from the eye of an Oklahoma lady; relieved the closure of a tear duct for a well known Chicago lady, and in scores of instances people have been able to discard eyeglasses through the faithful use of "Actina." To get an idea of the enthusiasm of our patients the entire letters as printed in our book should be read.

"Actina is made on common sense principles. Its simplicity, effectiveness add lasting qualities will appeal to any one that will investigate. Let us send you one on two weeks' trial. Use it as often as you please and if you are not benefited, or for any other reason are dissatisfied, send it back and no charge will be made. Write today. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342 W., 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

909

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

CONCENTRATION.

A Valuable Work.

Concentration, Meditation and Inspiration. How to develop these desirable gifts according to the most approved methods of ancient and modern teachers, together with a set of six symbols comprising six months' study. By Laura G. Fixen.

A course of practical experimental lessons, of especial value and assistance to those who desire to be benefited by the development of powers of concentration of thought, clear meditation and superior inspiration.

Sent complete for 50 cents.

A Study of

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

By Lilian Whiting,

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music-Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.

LOVES OF THE POETS. The Prefigured Friend; Vita Nuova; "One Day, My Siren."

IN THAT NEW WORLD. Plea and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.

ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.

LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.

For Sale at this office.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS

A real visit with friends on the other side of life, and a familiar talk. By Spirit Samuel Bowles; Carrie E. S. Twing, Medium. Price 80c.

VOLNEY'S RUINS

—AND—

THE LAW OF NATURE,

TO WHICH IS ADDED

Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical Notice by Count Daru, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor;

Also, a Map of the Astrological Heavens o the Ancients.

Printed on heavy paper, from new plates, in large, clear type, with portrait and illustrations. One vol., post 8vo, 248 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind, and clearly points out the sources of human ignorance and misery. The author is supposed to meet in the ruins of Palmyra an apparition or phantom, which explains the true principles of society, and the causes of both the prosperity and the ruin of ancient states. A general assembly of the nations is at length convened, a legislative body formed, the source and origin of religion, of government, and of laws discussed, and the Law of Nature—founded on justice and equity—is finally proclaimed to an expectant world.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price, 15 cents.

The Religion of Spiritualism.

Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By the Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price, $1.00. A valuable book for the money.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism

A treatise on Human Culture. By Leroy Berrier, anthropologist and author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price $1.00.

Practical Methods to Insure Success.

A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price 10 cents.

Force and Matter By Ludwig Buechner. A celebrated book. A profound work upon a profound subject. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism,

A Menace to American Civilization. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. A trenchant and masterly treatise. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

THE NEW THEOLOGY.

A Segment of it is Located in England, and it Stirs the Whole World—Religious Belief of Coming Century Is Sketched by Pastor Campbell—City Temple Thronged — Reform Wave Reaches Into All Corners of Society, Displacing Frivolity.

A man has sprung up in London who has set the whole of Britain by the ears as regards religious beliefs. He is Rev. R. J. Campbell, M. A., minister of the City Temple, London. This church was built by the admirers of the late Dr. Parker, and from its pulpit was expounded the orthodox Christian faith until his death.

There is some question as to the ethics of Dr. Campbell's course in taking possession of the temple built by Dr. Parker's admirers, and making it the place of expounding what is now termed the New Theology. But this criticism does not appears to have weight with Dr. Campbell, for in the book just issued, wherein he sets forth fully his ideas concerning the Christian religion, and his manner of interpreting it, he does not mention this stricture on his present position.

After all it ought not to matter to the men whose money built the beautiful temple what kind of theology was preached from the pulpit, so that it had in it the salt that has not lost its savor.

The important thing about Dr. Campbell's preaching is that it is effective. He has aroused England as it has not been aroused before since the days of the Reformation. Everybody, almost, seems to be talking religion.

So much criticism was leveled at Dr. Campbell that he wrote his book to explain his position. In the opening chapters he says:

"Christianity has for the moment lost its hold. Can it recover it? I am sure it can, if only because the moral movements of the age, such as the great labor movement, are in reality the expression of the Christian spirit, and only need to recognize themselves as such in order to become irresistible. The wagon of socialism needs to be hitched to the star of religious faith. But have the churches spiritual energy enough to recover their lost position? That depends upon themselves. If they consent to be bound by dogmatic statements inherited from the past they are doomed. The world is not listening to theologians today. They have no message for it."

Soul Is Self-Consciouness.

Dr. Campbell thinks he has. He believes in moral honesty, to begin with. "It is one thing to know that you are a lover of truth," he says; "it another thing to realize it, when your immediate safety would bid you hedge and lie."

"The universe is God's thought about himself," is one of his definitions. "The body is the thought-form through which the individuality finds expression on our present limited plane; the soul is man's consciousness of himself, as apart from all the rest of existence and even from God.

The soul, therefore, according to the "New Theology," is what we make it. What we are here to do is to grow in soul until it becomes pure spirit. There is nothing peculiarly new or startling in this. In fact, Dr. Campbell in his book does not depart from any of the fundamental beliefs of accepted Christian doctrine. Add to the teachings of the New Testament the Hindu teachings, and explanations of consciousness by modern psychologists, together with a belief in Jesus as the highest expression of God's consciousness in the human form, and you would seem to have compassed the article of faith in the New Theology, as interpreted by Dr. Campbell.

The author of "The New Theology"—I refer to the book—is a clear and lofty reasoner. He has a sublime idea of man and his relations to the universe. He does not doubt the divinity of Jesus, but he declares it to be a limited divinity, a man made perfect by love. To this state, says Dr. Campbell, all men are to finally come.

Dr. Campbell denies that the New Theology is Unitarianism, although, he says, "present-day Unitarianism is preaching with fervor and clearness the foundation of the New Theology. It is only the sectarian Unitarians who would try to claim it for their own denomination; the best and most outstanding exponents of Unitarianism would not wish to do anything of the kind; for they know well enough that historically speaking they have not consistenly stood for it, any more than any other denomination. The New Theology does not belong to any one church, but to all.

Does Not Believe in Conversion.

"For my own part, I would not even take the trouble to try to turn a Roman Catholic into a Protestant. Let every man stay in the church whose spiritual atmosphere and modes of worship best accord with his temperament, but let him recognize the deeper unity that lies below all creeds."

Dr. Campbell is a theorist. He writes well, and his book will give delight to religious controversialists for a long time to come. But after all, religion is something more than theory. What is the use of proving that it was possible for the Savior to conquer sin, sickness and death 2,000 years ago, and then telling the poor starving soul in the garret that Jesus took with him to heaven all his healing powers, all the blessing that might serve to relieve the human family of its heavy burdens of sorrow and woe? What the world wants today is an active spirit of help, not a fine-drawn theory of the evolution of the soul. Had Dr. Campbell read further into his Hindu books, from which he evidently draws his theory of incarnation, he would have found this statement: "Nothing that is without beginning can have an end." Also the reverse reasoning, "Whatever has a beginning must have an end."

This is certainly logic, and it makes it impossible that man should be anything less than immortal if he is anything. But the poor we have always with us, and the Salvation Army preaches a religion more vital than words.—Charles Eugene Banks in Chicago Examiner.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.

What a Martian Would Think If He Visited the Earth.

A Discourse by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Chicago, Feb. 17, 1907

Of course it is hypothetical as far as you are concernod, yet in these days of many systems of knowledge and of many ways of arriving at knowledge, we are not obliged to wait for the laggard footsteps of science to declare that some things are known under the sun that it takes science a long time to accept. People have known about spirit and about spirit intercourse many years before the Psychic Research Society was thought of. There are thousands of people who are living now who knew about the other world by clairvoyance and spirit manifestations long before the Psychic Research Society condescended to have existence.

Planets are under the scrutiny of astronomers, but there are those endowed with other gifts, and among those who have these gifts are those who are the recipients of inspiration concerning other worlds.

Our teaching is, that the planets in proportion to their distance from the sun are more perfect; those nearer the sun are less perfect. As far as you know the planets Mercury is the least unfolded and Neptune is the greatest in unfoldment. Although there will be found to be twelve planets, including the Asteroids as one planet, when all are discovered in the solar system.

So naturally the planet Mars is the next in advance of the Earth, and if our teaching be true, then the inhabitants of Mars are in every way superior to the inhabitants of Earth. The planet Mars itself being the next step in advance is realizing in its material, mental and spiritual aspects that which you are just hoping to realize, or longing to realize. It is like the next grade in school. You have to pass the examination in the lower degree before you can enter the higher. So with the inhabitants of Earth; their next step or degree will be the planet Mars.

Admitting that there may be visitants from Mars, they have to pass into the atmosphere of Earth first to become dwellers upon the Earth. The special messengers in Grecian mythology were "Jove's Thunderers," those gods who dwelt near men as tutelar deities. Among the inhabitants of India they were divas, divine messengers, Avatars chosen to bear a message to the time and place, not as inhabitants of Earth simply, but as superior beings.

An inhabitants of Mars approaching the Earth would not approach it as you would approach with uncertainty a primary school, but as civilized nations, so-called, approach some of those islands of the sea where civilization has not extended. Of course there must be a degree of sympathy between the condition of Earth and the inhabitants of Mars, or nothing could be done for you by those ministering presences from Mars.

Supposing such a life were approaching the Earth and there was an object for its finding expression here in human form. From the very first that child would be different from other children. From the first the Earth would seem to be an alien place; perhaps there would be some years of nostalgia, a sort of reminiscence of something lost; the Earth would seem to be different from the preceding state. If you were taken from a beautiful home, even in early childhood, and surrounded by inferior things to those that you had been accustomed to, there would be a sort of reminiscence and a longing for the beautiful lake, the beautiful mother you might have left behind, for the beautiful things that had surrounded you. So there are people who from the very time of their earliest thought and existence seem to be "home-sick." Perhaps some of these in growing older will evince some great power, some great ability, and often in such cases they come for a distinct purpose which they had in view, a distinct mission. In such cases although the parents or family might seek to govern them, they are not able to govern them.

Suppose Joan d'Arc, when the voice came to her inspiring her to go forward to save France, might have been a messenger? Suppose William Lloyd Garrison, when he first heard the voice concerning the abolition of slavery, when the great cry of the world was for the release of those in thralldom, still not accepting the thought of the sword, but always the higher and more perfect methods, suppose him as a messenger. We are only supposing this. But suppose in the midst of earthly existence that there would be those feelings that it is cold, cheerless, lonely.

It is true that substances are not as pliable here as on some other planets; and grown up people here would seem to them as grown up children. Their knowledge would seem to be infantile. You have known some people to walk directly to a height, to some particular position while others were slowly plodding on; but usually it would be the case that the visitor from Mars would present something so far in advance of the age that the tidings would be in fact only to those vivified by knowledge from within.

But suppose a Martian could plant the seed of a great truth and could live to bear it forward to maturity and could then realize its ripening, and suppose in doing this that all the time he was aware that no one in the world knew, necessarily, that he was doing this; as certain older teachers set an example for the children to follow. Many times those who announce a great mathematical proposition or a great mechanical discovery know that it cannot be adopted in the age in which they live. They place it on record; they place it where people will be able to realize it when they grow up to it and know that it has been announced. The announcement of a truth in the Earth's atmosphere, that is two or three hundred years, or a thousand years in advance of the growth of the people, nevertheless produces an impression on the most advanced lives here and remains a permanent possession until the people grow up to it.

Supposing a teacher, a greater teacher than any you know in this city, and you have some very great ones, was to visit you; suppose some one especially endowed with the divine sympathy for children and for teaching, for instance, like Dr. Parker, was to come and visit all the schools and give something so far in advance of the thought of the age that every one would know that it could not be adopted—but it would form an ideal, even as Froebel did, and wait for the future teaching to adopt the plan; that would be with regard to the Earth, or with regard to the schools of Earth what the visitant from Mars would be with regard to the Earth. It would not be the result of a long line of prophets like those in Israel; it would not be a culmination like the result of some schools of art or philosophy, but it would be a scintillant, shining light, not as great as that of a Messiah, but in some directions similar.

You may not know where to place Edison, since he not only announces, but realizes, and seems to fulfill in his personality that which others have announced; yet, he says, all these best things come to him, his inventions, his discoveries, in those hours when his body is asleep, and his spirit is apart from the earth. How do you know but what Edison has known and experimented on the planet Mars, where substances are more pliable, where the atmosphere does not offer so great a degree of resistence? Would not your slow progress in the adoption of these faster and finer methods refuse to yield to them, and all material influences discourage anyone unless that one was really endowed by a mission, and came to present something to you? Think how long, comparatively, the improved methods of transportation have been in their adoption. Think how long a suffering people have been in the adoption of these methods. Think of the condition of your thoroughfares and roads when there might be good roads throughout the country. The automobile is the compulsory agent for bringing about good roads. That wonderful man from Ohio who started out for Washington with his wonderful advance guard (Coxies Army), could not compel the government, even with his unarmed army to listen to the cry of the people; but the automobile can compel it, of course, because its demonstration of the necessity must be responded to.

But the great perception is to know that these things can be foreseen hundreds of years before their adoption. Steam as a motor power was slow in possessing the minds of the people. Your sapient legislators were sitting in Congress declaring that the steam engine could never be practical, while it was demonstrating its practicality. The telegraph was thought to be merely a matter of ornament or amusement. When Dr. Franklin, imitating Prometheus, stole the same fire from the heavens, he was not impaled upon a rock for doing this, but his discovery was impaled for a long time. There have been thousands of inventions put aside as impractical and useless, merely because the people were not ready, and commerce would not adopt them. How many improvements have been in the same way set aside! Air ships could have been practical long ago if the people had been ready, and even now the most successful ones are not encouraged. The truth is, when a Martian comes and announces an air ship, and goes away, the world grows up to it by the birth of the inventor and manufacturer who are ready for the idea. But commerce responds the latest because commerce must be "safe." There are a great many possessions in the earth today and upon the earth that are but waiting for you to be ready.

Of course you have a great many new things and a great many mysterious things and a great many things that the present civilization regards as necessities that a later civilization will put aside.

By and by you will not shut out the fresh air and sunshine from your dwellings and places of work or business. There will be room enough for all occupations and room enough for all buildings where there will be sunshine and all the vitality that the sunshines and fresh air can give. Now you regard it as a wonderful thing that you have these immense structures, and you never think them too high, however high. If there is a Martian embodied here today, doing his best for people not to have them, you do not know him. By and by you will. If there is a Martian embodied here today teaching civilization a better way, you are not ready, the world is not ready. They must be as veritable prophets for the time fulfilling their work, not heeding the sluggard and laggard steps of the people.

The truth is, these various steps that are taken emphasize and exemplify the better way. It requires a poet to perfectly read and interpret a poet; but you all have more poetic perception than you are aware of. It requires an artist to clearly understand what an artist means by his picture. It requires an artist to gaze upon the sunset and know what the Master has painted there in colors. It requires a real humanitarian, a true philanthropist to know the great step that is needed, and not to heed the hue and cry that goes forth, that "it will wield so disturbing an influence—it will upset all existing institutions." Certainly. Institutions are the outgrowth of human conditions, they do not make them, and just as soon as they do not serve their purpose there comes some one along to knock them down. But you are not ready, you do not want them torn down, you are not ready for the next structure. But at the same time "Thy will be done." Oftentimes it is done through seas of human bloodshed.

One of the arguments raised against woman's suffrage—and that cannot be any more—is, they say that women cannot fight. That argument has been knocked out. Of course, we know that with the urgency or necessity of the time, whatever it is, the thing that is to come and that is best to be done will be done. Of course, if it is best the Houses of Parliament may see it clearly sooner than your legislators, because England is very susceptible when the riot act is being read. The members of Parliament are afraid to meet the women in argument. In such an emergency England took an added step in advance in abolishing the corn laws, because the people went up there and demanded bread; they DEMANDED BREAD! So the "bread of Life" that the people hunger for (the right to live) may come to them in various ways, but always along the pathway where there has been some one to sow the seed.

We do not think the women of this country are ready to go up to the state legislature or to Congress in the same attitude that the women of England went to the Houses of Parliament, but Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others have been doing this morally and mentally for the last sixty years. Their fruitage has come in the steps that woman has taken in advance in schools, in colleges, in industrial pursuits, in the privileges of labor, and added compensation for her work; all this is the result of the Woman's Suffrage Movement. Men will give women higher wages and all that, but not the ballot, but that is what they are crying for, for that is the sine qua non of citizenship. If the ballot is of any value to man it is equally valuable to woman as a citizen. If it is of no value, where is the need of discouraging woman? Politicians assume that it is the ballot that makes the man. We think the state of man's advancement makes the ballot; and we think the time will come, perhaps, when women will vote, but it will be at such a time when voting may not be so necessary as it is now. The world grows to the achievement of its ideals by what we have said of these particular visitants. What Elizabeth Cady Stanton, as first president of the Woman's Suffrage Association, announced becomes the fulfillment of the age when law-making and law-fulfilling will be the least thing and the least necessary. People who are well governed, individuals who are well governed, are not restrained from stealing or attempting murder by the laws on the statute books, nor do they aid in the perfect well being of the community by the fear of the penalties for these crimes. If you are honest in your daily dealings it is because you are honest. If you are dishonest you employ a lawyer to keep you out of jail, as many bankers and senators do to enable you to do a thing within legal boundaries that you will not do outside. But the average honesty of the world is based upon the old adage that "honesty is the best policy." We would drop the last word, so the world grows to its inheritance by the announcement of certain principles that you aim to live up to. We think the world is living up to the highest that it can today, meaning not the highest that it ever will be able to, but in accordance with the highest conditions considering the state of growth, and the state of the personal and collective morality of the community. The morality of the community consists of the individual morality of the members of the community. So when public opinion, under the high ideal announced by some prophet, reaches the realization of that ideal, of course, it may be long ages after the prophet is dead to the world. But both the announcement and the fulfillment may come under the dominion of that angelic life that makes the announcement.

Therefore, while the earth, as said before, would seem to one from Mars to be very inferior, it would seem a desert place almost compared to Mars. It would also be a place in which an inhabitant from Mars would exercise a distinctive mission and influence, and in his coming announce a distinctive purpose, whether it be like John the Baptist, saying: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord and make his paths straight," or whether it be like Victor Hugo, saying: "The time will come when you France, you Italy, you Spain, you Russia, you Germany, you England, you America, you all the nations of the earth will be linked together in one Sisterhood of nations." Victor Hugo saw that vision, the poet-prophet who knew he would not remain in the physical form long enough to see it fulfilled, but he also knew that inevitably the time would come when it would be fulfilled. How dreary and desolate the waiting would seem if the prophet or teacher did not see through all the shadows of the intermediate years and know that the triumph would ultimately come.

The day of peace has been declared. Peace societies, national and international, world wide, have been formed for the abolition of war; for the disarmament of nations, and for the ceasing to celebrate your national holiday with loud noises and loud acclaim like that of battle. But all this prophecy the nations do not heed; they go on getting armies; they go on building warships; they go on using the elements of physical destruction; but that announcement stands clear in the horizon of the few, though the one who made the announcement first knew that wars would intervene through all these hundreds of years, that "Peace on earth and good will to mankind" would not have immediate fulfillment.

The love of peace prevails after justice prevails, and it can no more be peace until justice prevails than it can be during the time that injustice is here. All injustice is warfare. Therefore, when the nemesis from Mars comes to inspire a sword like that of General Grant, we know that it means something. We know that it is not simply military ambition like that of Napoleon; we know that it is not just to overcome an army equally well equiped, but it stands for a light in the world. The difference between a Napoleon and a Grant is, that a Napoleon is the nemesis of ambition. He taught the sublime lesson to the nations of Europe that one can spring up from obscurity and make all the nations of the earth, even Rome, quail; and yet he could illustrate but one thing, personal ambition. A Grant can say to the world, that a citizen, a quiet, unambitious man can take possession of the sword for a cause and show the world what freedom means; then when it is no longer necessary withdraw as speedily from the sword as it was taken up. Without any personal ambition, but receiving an ovation from the world as no one else ever did, was General Grant's experience after the arms of war were laid aside.

The truth is, that when one has a work to do, as Abraham Lincoln had, he comes equipped for it. You have celebrated his birthday since you last met here. The nation has at last accepted the wonderful light of his great personality, and has made a national holiday of the anniversary of his birth here, and business has consented to stop in memory of Abraham Lincoln. Dreaming along the waters of the western rivers or using his muscular frame for the ordinary necessities of life, the great mission that he came to fulfill was upon him from the first, and when he stepped forth with the words against chattel slavery, he also carried within his soul the next great step of human progress, and he knew that industrial freedom should follow, and in that message that he gave to Congress, that especial last message, he urged the working men of this country to beware of the gradual encroaching power of capital. What did he mean? He meant just that which is surrounding you today. And he would by no means exclude woman from the full privilege of citizenship; and what did he mean? He meant that one half of the race should be recognized as equal with the other half—Prof. Thomas to the contrary, notwithstanding. And the fact that the great herald of Freedom was in the air, for the voice that compelled him to govern the nation was the result of what his birth was destined to fulfill. None the less is that great spirit power upon the nation today to fulfill his ideals in those other and added directions.

So, to return to other themes, this electric light which to you is so wonderful, is superseded on the planet Mars by an especially wonderful and beautiful arrangement of the solar rays. The time will come here when it will not be electric light nor storage batteries, but the solar light and heat will be stored up in the summer time for winter use. The time will come when the higher range of the vibrations of the sun will be employed in your conversation with Mars. There is a Martian here who is seeing to it now, who is impressing and inspiring inventors along that line. Edison is closely allied to that thought and expects not only to feel the pulse of the sun with regard to its action upon the earth, but expects that his solar engine will be fulfilled in his day. When you have imprisoned the solar light and solar heat this Martian will have fulfilled his mission, and will have gone on his way. Perhaps the man most unheeded, one least recognized, from whom the machinist steals an invention, is the one who is the visitant; perhaps the one who declares in the most peaceful and unostentatious way his lines of life, his desire for doing the best to all humanity, is a visitor. You do not recognize who may live next door to you; he may be called eccentric, but when he dies the greatest obituary you will read, the greatest monument you will build to his memory is: "He was an honest man." So rare is this, so wonderfully does it shine out when it is written upon the slab of marble, or printed in the obituary notice, it forms one of the most beautiful monuments that a human being could have. If you leave a legacy to your sons and daughters, which would you rather leave, that record or a hundred million dollars? A man may think he is perfectly honest and have a hundred million dollars; but he is not, he cannot be—though he has no perception of the proposition—he is the victim of the conditions of the times that permit one man to accumulate so much money. He does not realize that there are no distinguished alienists employed to feel the mental pulse of the multi-millionaire to decide, by his mental vibrations, whether he be sane or not. But there will be something more potent than that;—The time will come when every sane man will refuse to have more money than is necessary for his daily bread or needs. That will be sanity.

The visitant that is upon the earth today is ferreting out, is finding out all these weaknesses, and is showing you the better way. Not always by warfare; sometimes it is in the lines of peaceful and direct unfoldment and education, and the great steps that have been taken toward this end are expressing themselves. There are more people today amenable to the Golden Rule than in any other age of the world. With all the crime and the luxurious living that there is in the world, there are more people ready for the simple life, for the light that is shining upon the world today is illuminating the spiritual avenues until there is such an awakening, such a desire to know, and such interest in that which shall be the spiritual enlightenment that you cannot keep the people back.

One thing is perfectly evident at this hour: A visitant from Mars has opened up the spiritual avenues of information and of human thought so there are more people ready to build up society from within than ever there were before. Perhaps that is why legislation is neglected; perhaps that is why you do not go to the primary meetings. The one thing the people need to know is, that they must vote, and act, and think each day according to their highest convictions for that day; and perhaps exalting the ideal and the bringing in the knowledge of the spiritual power will aid in awakening in human lives something of this up-building from within.

More and more the visitant from Mars is telling you abroad in the world that the Martians are waiting for you to recognize the signals that have been placed upon Mars for years and years, waiting for you to advance sufficiently. The means have been suggested here for the purpose. If you had attained more knowledge; if there were more powerful telescopes; if there was recognition of intuition; if there were protected messages through mediums who can give them without being influenced by their surroundings, or by position, or by money, that which they know to be true, and more perfect methods of arriving at the fruition of the inventions by inventors who are obscure.

You may not know it, but it is positively true, from information received through the Patent Office in Washington, prominent electricians for the benefit of electric companies have kept back inventions through which many of these things would have been realized today. And, but for persecution and oppression and ridicule many revealments from the realm of spirits would have been long ago an adjunct in established science for scientific men to realize what is passing in the great realm beyond.

Fifty years ago when a woman in Boston was entranced to paint as well as she could, not being a trained artist, what were called pictures of the inhabitants of Mars and Jupiter, her own brother, who was a professor at Harvard, and a number of his brother professors went to her studio to see these pictures just to please her. They went away shouting with laughter as soon as they were on the street, thinking, of course, that something was the matter with her brain. But it now transpires that Camille Flammarion, one of the first astronomers of this age, has suggested that if Mars and Jupiter are inhabited they have probably unfolded along different lines from the inhabitants of Earth, and they really may be endowed with wings. Had those professors known of the life on those planets they might not have laughed so heartily at the pictures of the lady. It may be those who saw the angels in ancient days saw them with wings. Whatever their method of flight, they may have seen those who had already learned to navigate the air; those who had learned the powers that you are trying to grasp which are already fulfilled in Mars. They wonder that the people have to walk upon the earth, when to them the air is as navigable as your seas here are.

The day of scoffing and ridicule is at an end. Anything that is worthy of being thought about is worth being investigated; and when added vision shall reveal more and more that in your midst there are not only "clouds of witnesses" of your own arisen ones, statesmen, scientists, seers and philosophers, but from those other worlds beneficent angels and spirits who are helping to guide and lead you, will you not be more ready to open the door of intuition to allow these messengers to enter? And then instead of being clad in red, the messengers of Mars, not the red planet, will come clothed in white, and will teach you to know the strength and the legitimate light of the next step of planetary existence.

THE NEW THEOLOGY.

A Segment of it is Located in England, and it Stirs the Whole World—Religious Belief of Coming Century Is Sketched by Pastor Campbell—City Temple Thronged — Reform Wave Reaches Into All Corners of Society, Displacing Frivolity.

A man has sprung up in London who has set the whole of Britain by the ears as regards religious beliefs. He is Rev. R. J. Campbell, M. A., minister of the City Temple, London. This church was built by the admirers of the late Dr. Parker, and from its pulpit was expounded the orthodox Christian faith until his death.

There is some question as to the ethics of Dr. Campbell's course in taking possession of the temple built by Dr. Parker's admirers, and making it the place of expounding what is now termed the New Theology. But this criticism does not appear to have weight with Dr. Campbell, for in the book just issued, wherein he sets forth fully his ideas concerning the Christian religion, and his manner of interpreting it, he does not mention this stricture on his present position.

After all it ought not to matter to the men whose money built the beautiful temple what kind of theology was preached from the pulpit, so that it had in it the salt that has not lost its savor.

The important thing about Dr. Campbell's preaching is that it is effective. He has aroused England as it has not been aroused before since the days of the Reformation. Everybody, almost, seems to be talking religion.

So much criticism was leveled at Dr. Campbell that he wrote his book to explain his position. In the opening chapters he says:

"Christianity has for the moment lost its hold. Can it recover it? I am sure it can, if only because the moral movements of the age, such as the great labor movement, are in reality the expression of the Christian spirit, and only need to recognize themselves as such in order to become irresistible. The wagon of socialism needs to be hitched to the star of religious faith. But have the churches spiritual energy enough to recover their lost position? That depends upon themselves. If they consent to be bound by dogmatic statements inherited from the past they are doomed. The world is not listening to theologians today. They have no message for it."

Soul Is Self-Consciouness.

Dr. Campbell thinks he has. He believes in moral honesty, to begin with. "It is one thing to know that you are a lover of truth," he says; "it it another thing to realize it, when your immediate safety would bid you hedge and lie."

"The universe is God's thought about himself," is one of his definitions. "The body is the thought-form through which the individuality finds expression on our present limited plane; the soul is man's consciousness of himself, as apart from all the rest of existence and even from God.

The soul, therefore, according to the "New Theology," is what we make it. What we are here to do is to grow in soul until it becomes pure spirit. There is nothing peculiarly new or startling in this. In fact, Dr. Campbell in his book does not depart from any of the fundamental beliefs of accepted Christian doctrine. Add to the teachings of the New Testament the Hindu teachings, and explanations of consciousness by modern psychologists, together with a belief in Jesus as the highest expression of God's consciousness in the human form, and you would seem to have compassed the article of faith in the New Theology, as interpreted by Dr. Campbell.

The author of "The New Theology"—I refer to the book—is a clear and lofty reasoner. He has a sublime idea of man and his relations to the universe. He does not doubt the divinity of Jesus, but he declares it to be a limited divinity, a man made perfect by love. To this state, says Dr. Campbell, all men are to finally come.

Dr. Campbell denies that the New Theology is Unitarianism, although, he says, "present-day Unitarianism is preaching with fervor and clearness the foundation of the New Theology. It is only the sectarian Unitarians who would try to claim it for their own denomination; the best and most outstanding exponents of Unitarianism would not wish to do anything of the kind; for they know well enough that historically speaking they have not consistenly stood for it, any more than any other denomination. The New Theology does not belong to any one church, but to all.

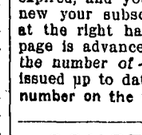
Does Not Believe in Conversion.

"For my own part, I would not even take the trouble to try to turn a Roman Catholic into a Protestant. Let every man stay in the church whose spiritual atmosphere and modes of worship best accord with his temperament, but let him recognize the deeper unity that lies below all creeds."

Dr. Campbell is a theorist. He writes well, and his book will give delight to religious controversialists for a long time to come. But after all, religion is something more than theory. What is the use of proving that it was possible for the Savior to conquer sin, sickness and death 2,000 years ago, and then telling the poor starving soul in the garret that Jesus took with him to heaven all his healing powers, all the blessing that might serve to relieve the human family of its heavy burdens of sorrow and woe? What the world wants today is an active spirit of help, not a fine-drawn theory of the evolution of the soul. Had Dr. Campbell read further into his Hindu books, from which he evidently draws his theory of incarnation, he would have found this statement: "Nothing that is without beginning can have an end." Also the reverse reasoning, "Whatever has a beginning must have an end."

This is certainly logic, and it makes it impossible that man should be anything less than immortal if he is anything. But the poor we have always with us, and the Salvation Army preaches a religion more vital than words.—Charles Eugene Banks in Chicago Examiner.

"In the World Celestial," by Dr. T. A. Bland. Interesting, instructive and helpful; Spiritually uplifting. Cloth bound, price $1.



WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF "ACTINA"

In the Treatment of

Afflictions of the Eye

Every person with impaired eyesight or suffering from weak or diseased eyes should write for our latest free booklet, entitled "Positive Evidence."

The records of phenomenal cures by the "Actina" treatment, as described therein by grateful patients themselves—names and addresses given—will satisfy the most skeptical that "Actina" is not only a remarkable, simple and harmless invention, but restores eyesight even after specialists have pronounced cases incurable.

Following are a few of the successes produced by "Actina," but more fully described in our free booklet.

A Chicago gentleman, after suffering 12 months with inflammation of the iris, used "Actina" a few weeks. He says he can now see as well and as far as anybody.

An Iowa lady writes that after being under treatment of specialists for 15 years, "Actina" completely restored her eyesight and she no longer uses glasses.

Astigmatism and granulated lids impaired the eyesight of a Hartford (Conn.) lady. Specialists failed to cure. As a last resort, against advice of friends, she tried "Actina." She writes;—"For many months I have written almost daily without glasses. No more pain in my eyes and drooping eyelid is restored."

"Actina" removed a cataract from the eye of an Oklahoma lady; relieved the closure of a tear duct for a well known Chicago lady, and in scores of instances people have been able to discard eyeglasses through the faithful use of "Actina." To get an idea of the enthusiasm of our patients the entire letters as printed in our book should be read.

"Actina is made on common sense principles. Its simplicity, effectiveness add lasting qualities will appeal to any one that will investigate. Let us send you one on two weeks' trial. Use it as often as you please and if you are not benefited, or for any other reason are dissatisfied, send it back and no charge will be made. Write today. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342 W., 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

909

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

CONCENTRATION.

A Valuable Work.

Concentration, Meditation and Inspiration. How to develop these desirable gifts according to the most approved methods of ancient and modern teachers, together with a set of six symbols comprising six months' study. By Laura G. Fixen.

A course of practical experimental lessons, of especial value and assistance to those who desire to be benefited by the development of powers of concentration of thought, clear meditation and superior inspiration.

Sent complete for 50 cents.

A Study of

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

By Lilian Whiting.

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music-Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.

LOVES OF THE POETS. The Prefigured Friend; Vita Nouva; "One Day, My Siren."

IN THAT NEW WORLD. Plea and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.

ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.

LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.

For Sale at this office.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS

A real visit with friends on the other side of life, and a familiar talk. By Spirit Samuel Bowles; Carrie E. S. Twing, Medium. Price 80c.

VOLNEY'S RUINS

—AND—

THE LAW OF NATURE,

TO WHICH IS ADDED

Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical Notice by Count Daru; and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor;

Also, a Map of the Astrological Heavens o the Ancients.

Printed on heavy paper, from new plates, in large, clear type, with portrait and illustrations. One vol., post 8vo, 248 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind, and clearly points out the sources of human ignorance and misery. The author is supposed to meet in the ruins of Palmyra an apparition or phantom, which explains the true principles of society, and the causes of both the prosperity and the ruin of ancient states. A general assembly of the nations is at length convened, a legislative body formed, the source and origin of religion, of government, and of laws discussed, and the Law of Nature—founded on justice and equity—is finally proclaimed to an expectant world.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price, 15 cents.

The Religion of Spiritualism.

Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By the Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price, $1.00. A valuable book for the money.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism.

A treatise on Human Culture. By Leroy Barrier, anthropologist and author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price $1.00.

Practical Methods to Insure Success.

A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price 10 cents.

Force and Matter By Ludwig Buechner. A celebrated book. A profound work upon a profound subject. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism,

A Menace to American Civilization. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. A trenchant and masterly treatise. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Correspondent writes:

"Mrs. Alice Sexsmith, of Chicago, ministered to the Psychical Research Society, of Rockford, Ill., on Sunday evening, April 14, to a very good house. Her address was well received and happily adapted to the occasion. This was followed by spirit messages, nearly all of which seemed acceptable to recipients, and were welcomed as truths from the unseen. President McDougall, in introducing Mrs. Sexsmith, related the experience of Dr. Funk, of the Widow's Mite memory, and intimated the learned gentleman's critical tests, were over critical, and the conclusion unreasonable. Mrs. Weaver is engaged for service to the society for the evening of April 21."

Rev. Alice Baker, State Missionary for Oklahoma, writes that the anniversary services held at Lawton were exceptionally fine. The meeting was closed with a consecration service—consecrating several children to the gospel of Spiritualism. The Lawton church is the leading one in the state. Mrs. Baker has also visited Walter and found quite an interest manifested. Until May 1, letters will reach her addressed in care of Rankin Hotel, Lawton, Okla. Her home address is 449 Live Oak street, Dallas, Texas.

Charles S. Simmons writes: "Our State Missionary, Rev. Alice Baker, is working away faithfully in Lawton, for the local society there. She does, however, fill engagements in the adjoining country towns through the week. She has many calls from different parts of the state from individuals who have the cause at heart, and wish to organize societies and build up the Cause of Spiritualism. But our missionary is hampered in her efforts by the State organization not having funds to assist in the work, but she works away courageously, meeting every opposition with a faith that is sure to win all in the end. I wish to say a few words of commendation for the officers of Lawton society: The President, Brother Rankin, and his family have attended meetings when they were sick, and scarcely able to be about; our faithful secretary, B. Parmenter, never fails. Other members do their work quietly in their own way, only caring for the approval of a happy conscience and the loving communion of the angel world."

Mrs. S. A. Smith writes from Excelsior Springs, Mo.: "The Anniversary meeting was held here April 7, the first of the kind we have ever had. It was also the anniversary of Mrs. McHenry's work here in the Cause. Fifteen years ago she first took up the work to advance our beautiful religion, with many phases of ignorance to contend with here. She has blazed a way for our blessed cause. The meeting was crowded, and good order prevailed."

Wm. Lynch writes from Portland, Me.: "I will try to briefly outline the Anniversary Exercises held by the First Spiritualist Society of Portland, Me., March 31, 1907. Two services were held, afternoon and evening. The hall was very prettily decorated and an abundance of flowers, potted plants and ferns were placed upon the rostrum. Professor R. A. Macurda, of Lynn, was the speaker and medium of the day. The evening service was especially impressive. Prof. Macurda lecturing, following it with spirit messages of a remarkable degree for correctness. The day will be long remembered by the Spiritualists of Portland as one beautifully spent. At the close of the evening service the President and Board of Directors waited upon Mr. Macurda and tendered him a call to serve the society as pastor for the coming year from June 1907 to June 1908, placing as an inducement a nice weekly salary. The Professor made the board happy by accepting the call and will enter upon his duties the First Sunday in June."

J. W. Gill writes: "Saturday, the 28th inst., a special memorial service will be held at the evening meeting of the Christian Spiritualists, Van Buren Palace, Madison street and California avenue. A cordial invitation is extended to our co-workers, as this evening is to be devoted to the memory of mediums now passed on. This will be Mrs. Gill's last meeting till fall, as she must take a needed rest till camp opens. Sunday, the 14th, we had another very large audience in the evening. Our speaker lectured on the subject, "Seek and ye shall find," Mrs. Gill following with spirit messages."

Mary Hahn writes from San Francisco, Cal.: "I am glad to send to The Progressive Thinker the joyful tidings of San Francisco's 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, by all the societies under the auspices of the California State Spiritualist Association. It was the first great gathering after the fire and we did not know how we would come out; but the Ladies First Spiritualist Aid Society started the ball rolling, electing the different committees; they started the work with a will. Everyone they called on to help gave their hearty co-operation. Madam Young, Pastor of the Church of the Soul, Mrs. S. Eberhardt, minister in the Medium's Protective Association; Mrs. A. Sexton, president of the Ladies' Aid; Mrs. Kate Harveston, minister under the California State Spiritualist Association, and many others gave very substantial evidence towards meeting expenses. What big hearts they all have. The Anniversary opened at 945 Golden Gate Avenue, Jefferson Square Hall, at 10 a. m.; conference and circle led by Mrs. Sarah Seal; very interesting. 2 p. m., instrumental music by Mrs. Norton; opening remarks by Mrs. Ella York, chairman of the committee; address by Mrs. M. E. Howe, missionary California State Association; messages by Mrs. Wren; song by Edith Norton; messages by Mrs. Kate Harveston; address by Mrs. Addie L. Ballou; messages by Mrs. Canary; recitation by Mrs Price; messages by Mrs. Place; address by Mrs. Mary Welsh; closing song by audience; 7:50 p. m. instrumental music by Leonard Brothers; address by Mrs. Kate Harveston; Instrumental duet by Prof. and Madame Young; address by Mrs. Sarah Seal, also messages; Indian music led by Prof. Young, for the benefit of the Indian guides; messages by Madame Young; address and messages by Mrs. M. E. Howe; messages by Mrs. Sadie Eberhardt; solo by Mrs. Arthur Melvin; closing song by the audience. What a glorious and harmonious work was done on the 59th Anniversary by stricken San Francisco Spiritualists."

The Spiritual Science Society of Rockford, Ill., has for the past six weeks been holding a series of Sunday evening meetings in K. of P. Hall, on South Main street, under the leadership of Madame Brunswick, of Chicago. The meetings have been well attended and the message work was most excellent. On the 7th of April, the rostrum was occupied by Mrs. Susie Thompson, of Chicago. This was her first appearance in Rockford, and she created a very favorable impression. Her message work was bright, direct and of such a positive character that the large audience present was well pleased. She will again serve the society on the evening of April 21. The society is doing well and the large attendance they are having shows an increasing interest in the cause for which all Spiritualists will rejoice.

W. D. Noyes writes: "We left Tacoma, Wash., March 7, and went direct to Cottage Grove, Ore., and held two public meetings in Masonic Hall, and one parlor meeting. We were entertained by that true Spiritualist, Mrs. Stouffer. Then to Roseburg, and held the first public Spiritualist meeting there. Quite a large number of people met us at the I. O. O. F. Hall. Our next stop, Grant's Pass. We held three meetings in the Court House, and then to Medford, one public meeting. Then to Ashland, one meeting to a large audience. The Ashland Society owns its building. A store on the ground floor; office and hall on second floor. The society has a fine hall, library, banquet room, and kitchen. The hall is rented every week night. The front office and store rent for $90 per month. Profits on the building, $80 per month. Other societies ought to become wise. We go from here to Chico, Cal."

Frank T. Ripley writes from Ashtabula, Ohio: "The First and only Spiritualist Temple ever built in Ohio from the ground up, is to be dedicated here the last of May. It is built of brick with stone facing. It has an auditorium that will seat 400 people. It has a dining room and kitchen in the basement. It is a beautiful building. The society here is very prosperous, for it owns the temple. Mr. John Wallace, a long-time Spiritualist, president, Brother Sheldon is its treasurer. Both are subscribers to The Progressive Thinker. I find a large subscription list to the paper here in Ashtabula—larger than any other Spiritualist paper. I have the pleasure of serving this society this month. Here is where you find the best of harmony, all working together for the good of the cause."

Dr. C. A. Burgess lectured in Rockford, Ill., on Sunday, April 14.

M. Lizzie Beals writes from Worcester, Mass.: "For the first Sunday in March, Rev. Juliette Yeaw of Leominster, occupies our platform at G. A. R. Hall, 35 Pearl street. Her work is too well and favorable known to need any comment. The second and third Sundays in March, Mr. Thomas Cross, of Fall River, served our society very acceptably. The last two Sundays in March Mrs. Ruth A. Swift, of Haverhill, occupied our platform. Sunday, March 31st services were held in commemoration of the 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritism. The President, Woodbury C. Smith, gave a descriptive historical account of the birth of Modern Spiritualism, its growth and power as an organized movement, standing to-day as a great factor in the world's progress. Inspirational poem by Miss Florence Nichols, followed by spirit messages, which were all readily recognized. Solo by Lillian Hanson Gray, and address and ballot reading by our speaker, Mrs. Ruth A. Swift. The annual Fair and Supper of the Woman's Auxiliary was held March 27, and met with unusual success, adding over one hundred dollars to our treasury."

Miss Ada M. Came writes from Cambridge, Mass.: "The Cambridge Spiritual Industrial Society held its regular meeting in Cambridge Lower Hall, 631 Mass., ave., Mrs. Emma E. Zwahlen president. Miss Nellie Putnam was the speaker and message bearer, and gave great satisfaction to the many present. She is a stranger to the Cambridge audiences. The next meeting will be April 26; and Miss Putney will be the speaker."

Sunday, the 28th of April, Mrs. Dr. Juliet H. Severance will speak for the Hyde Park Occult Society.

Mrs. Semsoth writes from Brooklyn, N. Y.: "As we feel much interested in all the meetings mentioned in The Progressive Thinker, which we sell readily from week to week, we will let others hear from us. Our medium, Miss Emma C. Resch, is doing a grand work in spreading the truth. She has occupied this platform, not missing one Sunday, without salary of any kind, unassisted by anyone, and as a church body we feel very proud of her. We have a building fund nicely started and hope to soon have our home church. We have opened our doors from the start free to all, and have been more than successful. Our work goes on in perfect harmony, and harmony is the foundation of success. Anyone who would like to donate to our church in loving memory of some loved one, can do so by sending the same to the treasurer J. P. Loeb, 708 Hancock st., Brooklyn. Mr. Loeb is to be thanked for the solos he has sung gratis during the past three years. We wish all societies success, and invite any who should be in Brooklyn to be with us at our services."

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

THE FRATERNAL ORDER OF SPIRITUALISTS.—Ferd. C. Suhrer, 95 Loomis street, Chicago, writes: "The apparent lack of co-operation among Spiritualists in general and the extreme need of the fraternal Soul of Brotherhood which draws closer and makes stronger the ties of human sympathy was fully realized by Alex Caird, M. D., who conceived the idea of establishing the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists in Chicago, whose influence will permeate the entire world. That our object is being slowly and surely understood, is apparent from the growing correspondence with those seeking information and otherwise showing a pleasing interest. We have already had the services of speakers and mediums of national fame, and have been successful in carrying out our idea of interchanging workers with societies in this and other cities to the extreme satisfaction of those interested, which will in time lead to the establishment of a Fraternal Camp Association, and will enable us to engage the foremost workers in the country to serve the different societies in Illinois and other states. We are now furnishing platform and circle mediums to societies in places near Chicago, and to those who are in need of such help our mediums will accept the first call for car fare and entertainment, when arrangements can be made for future engagements. This offer is a grand opportunity for Spiritualists where there is no society or meeting. Any society or person wishing to join or ask for further information will please address, Ferd. C. Suhrer, Secretary, 95 Loomis st., Chicago."

Despite the nervous strain to which she has recently been put, watching at the sick bed of her now arisen mother, the pang of sorrow caused by the loss of that sweet physical presence, the long journey to and from Portland, Oregon, and the still more recent dispatch announcing the serious illness of her husband, Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley filled her engagement with the Wisconsin State Association, by becoming its message bearer at the convention, April 16, 17, and 18. And from reports, she was even more highly appreciated for her excellent work that ever before, and was the recipient of an armful of pink and white carnations, and lots of enthusiasm from the audience besides.

Our Sandusky, Ohio, correspondent, writes: "W. V. Nicum, of Dayton, O., visited our city Sunday, April 14, and delivered two eloquent addresses before the Psychic Research Society. Mr. Nicum is a forceful and logical speaker, and his words carry conviction to the minds of all who hear him. This was his first visit here, but it is hoped that he may be induced to cross the state again, and lend his talents for the benefit of the cause in this section at another date. Spiritualism has need of such able and willing workers as Mr. Nicum, and his lectures cannot but reflect credit to the cause."

E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters of the First Society F. O. O. S., held their semi-weekly tea-party, April 17, at 406 Ogden ave., in Atlas Hall, and are pleased to state that it was both a social and financial success. In the evening at 8 p. m., we had tests and messages, and short talks from the following: Sisters Squire and Knapp, and Mrs. Dr. Caird, and Brothers Thompson and Travis. This being the first time in our society for Sister Knapp and Brother Travis, to speak from the rostrum, and we sincerely hope to hear from them often in the future. Our next meeting is Wednesday, May 1st, 2 p. m. All are cordially invited."

Mrs. M. E. Jenkins writes from Windsor, Ont.: ""The First National Spiritual Church, Detroit, Mich., celebrated the 59th Anniversary in Prismatic Hall, 140 First st., with special services. The hall was nicely decorated with festoons, and palms, flowers, and potted plants were grouped about the platform, making an altar of flowers. A beautiful white dove was suspended over the desk by white ribbons. Mrs. W. E. Jenkins was the principal speaker for the evening, assisted by Mrs. M. Cain. Special music was given by Mrs. Bebeley and son, who gave excellent selections of classical music, on piano and violin; also Miss Nellie Goucher played some fine selections, which were enjoyed by all, making a pleasant anniversary service."

Mrs. Geo. Williams writes from Cleveland, Ohio: "The Ladies' Spiritualist Temple First Society of Fullerton street, Cleveland, Ohio, have the pleasure of having with them the Rev. Geo. W. Kates and wife. These two estimable persons are drawing large audiences on Sundays, and also on Thursday evening, at the message meetings. They will remain with us during April and May. The Church Fair will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, April 23 and 24. A fine supper will be served at all these meetings for the small sum of fifteen cents. Everybody is welcome at all of these services. Come and have a good social time with us."

S. Stephenson writes: "The Anniversary Services held in Sandusky, O., was a grand success. Mr. W. E. Jenkins of Windsor, Canada, was the speaker for the season. Her lectures were of a high order, and many spirit messages were given, which were recognized. Special singing by the choir, with piano and violin selections. Prof. Longley's beautiful song, "Only a Thin Vail Between Us," was rendered with feeling and sweetness by a quartet. The President, Mr. T. Jackson and his officers deserve much credit for the able manner they have kept their meetings open every Sunday, in spite of the late disaster by fire of the old hall. The temple was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants. The large and commodious hall was crowded to its utmost capacity."

A Markel writes: "Sunday evening, April 14, The Students of Nature, 461 W. North avenue, had the pleasure of listening to an inspired lecture by Mrs. Schumacher, the pastor, on 'Be Careful What You Say!' Sister Smith and Sister Buntrock gave messages, which were recognized. Mrs. Schumacher has gone to Milwaukee, Wis., answering a mission call to the Christian Science. Will return April 20."

Addie Jeter writes from Apalachicola, Florida: "There being a little band of us here who are interested in psychic research, we secured the services of Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, who came here at the close of the camp at Lake Helen, and delivered a series of lectures, beginning April 6, and closing April 14. She gave some soul-stirring addresses; also many test readings which were all good. At the close of the meeting we organized with thirty members, what will be known as 'The Apalachicola Psychic Research Society.' Officers elected were, Dr. W. T. Marler, president; Mrs. U. M. Wright, vice-president; Mrs. A. Jeter secretary and treasurer. We have applied for charter to the Board of the N. S. A."

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: "The services of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, on Sunday, April 14, were attended with their usual success. Messages and the reading of sealed letters by the guides of our mediums proved advantageous to many. The initiation of members followed and all who were present assumed the obligations of the Order. This service is impressive and each one fully realized its importance. In May another opportunity will be given those to be initiated who were not present; the date will be given later. The circles at 4 o'clock were all filled with anxious ones awaiting a greeting from some loved one, and the mediums were kept busy for another hour, when the march to supper began, in which nearly everyone in the hall joined. The sweet music of Professor Singer's violin was welcomed, as that able artist was absent for several Sundays, being out of the city. Mrs. Edith Hill has accepted the duties of pianist, to the delight of the congregation, and we are fortunate in securing the services of such an efficient musician. Rev. Thos. Seeley Warner was not with us in the evening on account of illness, and we missed his usual timely discourse. Our platform mediums again voiced messages that carried hope and comfort to those in need. Do not forget Sunday, April 28. Rev. Thos. Grimshaw, pastor of the Spiritualist Temple of St. Louis, Mo., will be with us again, and no Spiritualist can afford to miss hearing what he will have to say. Our services commence at 2:30 sharp. Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street, top floor. All are made welcome."

Mrs. S. A. Walters-White writes: "The Second Spiritual Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., will continue its meetings through May, and possibly June; that, however, will depend on the Thermometer. The Church was opened the first Sunday of December, last, and has held successful meetings Sunday evenings since, at 1246, Bedford avenue, with Mrs. Louise Miller as message bearer, and your correspondent as lecturer. The Progressive Thinker is on sale. All are welcome, and the seats are free; 8 o'clock the service begins."

U. S. Weeman writes: "Miss Chrissie M. Bartle, of New Brunswick, N. J., addressed the Cathedral Classes of the First Spiritual Church of Brooklyn, last Sunday afternoon. The lady demonstrated a very unique study called the "Vibration of Names and Numbers." This is not a new science, but an old truth revived and reinforced. Its origin can be traced into the mystical depths of Egypt and India, and around it hovers the psychic atmosphere of ancient occultism. For more than an hour and a half, Miss Bartle kept her intelligent audience in close rapport with her subject, and their interest continued to the finish. The science can be taught to any person of average intelligence, even a child may learn how to keep within the law of his vibration. Miss Bartle intends to visit some of the camps this summer, including Lily Dale, Onset and Lake Pleasant. Her work will consist in giving readings and forming classes whereby every student can learn to help himself and others. Her class at Lake Pleasant last Summer, was large and enthusiastic, and more than one business man can testify to the practical application of her science."

S. A. Huntington of Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritualist Society, F. S. Sheriff, president: "The Rev. F. A. Wiggin served our Society the second time in his second course of lectures and ballot reading, on Thursday evening, April 11. He chose for his theme, "All Roads Meet Out Yonder." His address was able and logical. After the lecture he devoted about 40 minutes to ballot reading, giving many fine messages. He will be with us on the evening of the 18th and 25th. Sunday services, April 14, at the 3 p. m. circle. Sisters Barry and Johnson of Everett, Mass., and others took part. Mrs. R. A. Swift of Haverhill, Mass., was the speaker at the evening service. She gave a very interesting address, after which many ballot readings. Mrs. Carrie H. Tainter of Derry N. H., will be the speaker on the 21st, and Mrs. B. W. Belcher of Marlboro, Mass., on the 28th."

Helen Stuart-Richings closes a month's engagement with the Meadville (Pa.) society, on Sunday, April 21st, and then goes to Conneaut, O. Mrs. Stuart-Richings is desirous to correspond with secretaries for unengaged dates, in 1907-8. Address her at Boston, Mass., General Delivery.

Mary B. Hill writes: "April 17 was the last of the meetings in the hall of the Band of Harmony, but in spite of the absence of the pastor, Mrs. Richmond, who was spirited away to participate in the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association, the hall was filled, and great tribute was given to her who has borne this banner of light for 56 consecutive years, one whose "armor of Truth" has shielded her from all missiles of dogma, superstition and ignorance, and who has never failed or grown weary in sowing the seeds of truth, but has been a most earnest advocate, a most willing instrument in the hands of the spirit world, a bright and shining star in the spiritual ranks. On May 2nd, the Band of Harmony will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richmond, 3802 Ridge Boul., Rogers Park. Supply yourselves with supper. Afternoon session begins at 3:30 o'clock; evening at 7:30. Clark street and Limits car; take Halstead to end of line; there take Evanston car to Lunt avenue."

William Hassmann writes: "The audience at the hall of the North Star Spiritual Union, 1546 Milwaukee ave., last Sunday evening, April 14, had the pleasure of welcoming Sister C. Mueller, who for the first time after her illness for the past eight weeks, came to greet her many friends. Brother Winters opened the ceremony with a short prayer, followed by Sister Mueller, who, hardly able to stand on her feet, gave a very touching lecture, thanking the mediums and her many friends for the charity which they had bestowed upon her during her illness. Many tears were shed listening to the pathetic voice of the frail little sister. Brother and Sister Winters, who so faithfully conducted the meeting during the sister's absence, were presented with a large bouquet of American Beauties; also Sister Mueller was presented with a large bouquet of flowers from the Society. Sister Winters then gave some very fine tests to those present, followed by Sister Mueller, who, being so weak, not being able to stand, was seated in a chair, giving many messages and brought sunlight and happiness to many."

Mr. Thomas Grimshaw of St. Louis, Mo., lectured for Dr. Caird's Society last Sunday, delivering one of his eloquent, soul-stirring addresses.

Mrs. McBride writes: "I, for one, feel that the Spiritualists of Lansing, Mich., are looking at the true light that Spiritualism brings to all who seek it in truth. We have between twenty-five and thirty good workers in our Ladies' Aid. We have a sum in the bank toward building a Temple. The Local Society holds meetings in the Magi Temple every Sunday, and we always get something good."

Brother Orrin Merritt writes from Genoa, Ill.: "During the past three or four years, we have been holding public meetings once a month, with interest steadily increasing. We were disappointed last month in not being able to hold a meeting as usual. Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, who was to be with us was compelled to cancel the date owing to the sickness and death of her mother What we lost in March, however, we made up on the tenth of this month, when Mrs. Sexsmith of Chicago was with us. She gave one of the most interesting talks that it has been our privilege to hear in a long time. There were 150 people present in the hall and all were so well pleased that they made the meeting a financial success as well as showing unusual interest in the Spiritualistic belief. We expect Mrs. Cooley with us some time in May.

D. G. Hill writes: "On Sunday, April 14, the Golden Rule Spiritualist Society was granted the usual fine audiences, both afternoon and evening In the afternoon we had a dear sister, Mrs. Wasson (formerly Mrs. McEntyre), lately from Canada, as speaker and message bearer. To mention her name is evidence of the splendid work she did. In the evening Dr. J. H. Randall was the speaker, with Mrs. McIntyre-Wasson as message bearer; their work gave great satisfaction. Sunday evening, April 28, our speaker will be sister Mrs. J. L. Fravel of Austin, followed by the beautiful christening service of three little folks. This service will be conducted by the guides of Mrs. Nora E. Hill. The speaker for Sunday evening, May 5, will be Dr. George B. Warne; May 12, Dr. J. H. Randall, with Mrs. Isa Cleveland as message bearer; May 19, Attorney Charles Hughes. O'Donnell College Hall, S. Paulina st., between Washington boul. and Park ave. Open doors; all welcome."

The Chicago Herald has the following dispatch from Pittsburg, Pa.: "A "ghost" has kept the Thaw family in fear of Lyndhurst, the family mansion here, for five years. Belief that the specter of a relative of the family who killed herself in the house in 1902, nightly stalks its halls is said to have determined Mrs. William Thaw to sell the property. The secret came out to-day, after having been suppressed for years. In the spring of 1902 a Kentucky woman, wife of a Presbyterian minister and a relative of Mrs. William Thaw, while visiting Mrs. Thaw, at Lyndhurst committed suicide by hanging in the bath room. Not a word of the tragedy was allowed to go any further. Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, has since declined to stay in Lyndhurst save when surrounded by a large party, as she is superstitious. She has advertised Lyndhurst for sale and has built another residence near. It is said that Harry Thaw has always urged his mother to sell this house, which he asserted was "haunted" since the suicide, and that Harry never would sleep there without a light in his room."

C. L. Hatch writes from Appleton, street, Boston, Mass.: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual with business meeting at 4:30 p. m. The evening was devoted to varied sources of amusement, recitation (comic), by Mr. Griffith; Whistling solos, by Mrs. Lewis, and singing of many war songs, led by Mrs. Lovering. Dancing was then enjoyed until 10:30 p. m. Mr. Sam. Graham, violinist, and Miss Sanches, pianist. All enjoyed a good time on this, our Colonial Holiday. Next Friday a benefit will be given the society by Mrs. B. W. Belcher, medium.

Miss E. Fielding writes from Washington, D. C.: "Memorial Services were held in Gude's Hall, in honor of the late Theodore J. Mayer, treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association. Mrs. Mary T. Longley was the speaker of the evening, assisted by H. D. Barrett, president of the N. S. A.; Rev. Grimshaw of St. Louis; Dr. G. B. Warne of Chicago, vice-president of the N. S. A.; Mr. Stevens of Pittsburg; Mr. I. C. I. Evans, and all the officers of the N. S. A. were here to do honor to the occasion. Mr. F. A. Wood, president of the First Association of Spiritualists of this city introduced the speakers. It is needless to say the occasion was sad but beautiful, each speaker doing honor to his memory by clothing in language the choicest thoughts and sayings, coming from the fertile brains of the high estimation in which he was held by rich and poor, high and low. Mr. Henry C. Brumhaus, of Wheeling, West Va., was a caller at the headquarters of the N. S. A., The annual election of officers for the First Association: Mr. F. A. Wood, president; Mrs. M. J. Stephens, vice-president; Mrs. H. D. Morgan, secretary; Mr. W. Crowell, treasurer. Mr. and Mrs. Perrie Keeler will entertain the Ladies' Auxiliary, with a euchre party. The Temple League holds meetings as usual in the Pythian Temple. Mr. Alfred Terry and Miss Susie Clarke will close their meetings in April. Miss Clarke will go to Jamestown, and then home to Cambridge, Mass."

MARRIED—At Meadville, Pa., Wednesday, April 17, by Rev. Helen Stuart-Richings, Mr. Isaac Onspaugh and Mrs. Eva M. Thompson.

The Psychic Riddle.

By I. K. Funk, D.D., LL.D., Editor-in-Chief of "The Standard Dictionary"; Author of "The Widow's Mite, and Other Psychic Phenomena," "The Next Step in Evolution," etc.

A book full of psychic suggestions, supported by startling experiences, all told in a wonderfully conservative way. It harmonizes with the judgment pronounced by The Review of Reviews, New York, on the author's previous publication of this subject: "A very sensible, cautious, level-headed piece of work all through;" and also with the judgment on the same book pronounced by the Cleveland Record: "There has never been so fair and painstaking a book put forth on this subject as this one." Price, $1.00.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.

Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.

Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.

Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.

Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.

Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.

Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.

Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.

Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.

Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.

Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility of composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty stories, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title-page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green raised cloth, stamped in deep old-green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of
FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary.
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

Helena Blavatsky.

A Wonderful Psychic Who Founded the Theosophical Society.

We present below a thrilling history of the woman who for many years mystified scientists and occultists all over the world.

THE LIFE OF HELENA BLAVATSKY IS ONE THAT DESERVES TO BE STUDIED. SHE WAS A CONTRADICTION WITHIN HERSELF, AN ENIGMA, A PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED, YET AT TIMES ONE OF THE BEST PSYCHICS THAT EVER LIVED, AND THE FOUNDER OF A SECT NOW NUMBERING 100,000 ADHERENTS. THE PHENOMENA OCCURRING IN HER PRESENCE AT TIMES BORDERED CLOSELY ON THE MIRACULOUS, AND ATTRACTED TO HER MANY ADHERENTS.

HER LIFE IS A VOLUME TO BE STUDIED, INASMUCH AS IT ILLUSTRATES THE IMPORTANT FACT THAT PSYCHIC POWER IS OFTEN POSSESSED BY THOSE WHO ARE ERRATIC, DECEITFUL, AND WHO WILL RESORT TO TRICKERY OF THE BASEST KIND, IF NECESSARY TO FURTHER THEIR ENDS. BUT WHAT WONDERS SHE COULD PERFORM. SHE PRACTICED HER MARVELS, HAD AIR-SENT LETTERS FROM THE SNOW MOUNTAINS OF TIBET, PRODUCED TEAPOTS FROM UNDER HER CHAIR, WALKED ABOUT FAMILIARLY WITH VISIONARY "MASTERS," AND THE HINDUS BOWED DOWN AND WORSHIPED HER.

FAR MORE THAN THAT, SHE COULD ALWAYS EXTRACT THE GREATEST AMOUNT OF JOYOUS AND ROBUST EXCITEMENT OUT OF THE ASTONISHMENT OF HER SPECTATORS, IF HER ATTEMPT SUCCEEDED, OR FURIOUS WRATH AT THEIR LACK OF SYMPATHY IF SHE FAILED. SHE PRODUCED STRINGS OF BEADS OUT OF THE AIR; SHE MADE TWO HANDKERCHIEFS GROW WHERE ONE GREW BEFORE; SHE DEPOSITED WRITTEN ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ASKED A MOMENT BEFORE, BEHIND PICTURE FRAMES; SHE GREW BUNCHES OF GRAPES OUT OF BOOKCASES; QUOTED FROM BOOKS SHE HAD NEVER SEEN, IN LANGUAGES SHE DID NOT KNOW; SHE CAUSED OBJECTS SELECTED BY THOSE PRESENT TO APPEAR AND DISAPPEAR AT WILL.

THUS THIS WOMAN PERFORMED HER PSYCHIC MARVELS, AND FORMED FROM HER OWN PERSONALITY THE NUCLEUS OF A GREAT SECT, WITHOUT HER PSYCHIC POWERS THAT COULD NOT HAVE BEEN ACCOMPLISHED, AND THE RESULT FURNISHES ANOTHER ILLUSTRATION OF THE IMPORTANT FACT THAT THEOSOPHY HAS FOR ITS BASIC STRUCTURE SPIRIT RETURN, THE SAME AS SPIRITUALISM HAS, FOR WITHOUT THE ASSISTANCE OF THOSE ON THE OTHER SIDE, MADAM BLAVATSKY WOULD HAVE BEEN POWERLESS TO PERFORM THOSE WONDERFUL FEATS. THUS IT IS THAT SPIRIT RETURN IS THE SUPERSTRUCTURE NOT ONLY OF SPIRITUALISM, BUT THEOSOPHY —RIVALS IN MANY RESPECTS.

In the last century arose a woman [as comprehensively and interestingly set forth in the Chicago Record-Herald], who with inspired certainty turned aside from worn out sources of excitement, and blazed a new trail into a new world where excitement is to be had for the asking—excitement that never palls; that in her case grew keener and intenser during all the years of a long and infinitely varied life. Leaving on one side the too well known and constantly narrowing bonds of the material world, Helena Blavatsky, by stepping into the as yet almost wholly unexplored world of psychic phenomena, succeeded in living a life of sixty years in which there was not one dull moment. The true and disinterested lover of risk and excitement must feel a bitter envy in reading the life of Madam Blavatsky. She had more than her share; with every breath she drew she lived through a crisis in her life—which most of us can manage only two or three times.

Her worshipers insist that she was animated solely by a love of humanity and a pure desire to give it a new and true religion. Her detractors cry that she was a cheap impostor, dealing in coarse tricks of jugglery to deceive her credulous disciples.

Long before her special and wonderful powers as a soldier of fortune in the world of the unseen were developed, she showed the same craving for risk and excitement that she later grew to be able to satisfy in so complete a manner. She was born, in 1831, in Russia, a daughter of a family of good though not noble descent. A wild, undisciplined girl, fond of dark corners and paroxysms of adventurous exploits, she was the despair of her family. She rode any horse on a man's saddle, and defied any and all orders or requests with dashing and unfailing rebellion, keeping her family in the wildest turmoil of apprehension of her next crazy notion. But more than this, she surrounded herself constantly with a throng of invisible companions, playfellows or frightful enemies, until she frightened the younger children almost into convulsions. She insisted that everything had a personality, even to her shoes and chest of drawers, some kindly, some terrifying. She disappeared at times wholly, and could be found only after long search in out of the way, remote locality, and she had a strange power over birds and animals.

Of course, like all imaginative children, she made up "pretend" playmates, many and divers, and was often found talking and playing with them. One such vision of early childhood she claimed to have met in later life, and to have known him as though she had been brought up with him. At seventeen she married a man old enough to be her grandfather, because her governess laid her a wager that she couldn't make him propose—another striking proof of the sporting instinct carried to the nth power. After three months of the cat and dog battle that would naturally result from such a marriage, she ran away from her husband, her family, her country, and for ten years indulged to its fullest extent her passion for adventure by world wide wanderings.

Her father supplied her with money; and there are a few hints to be gained through his connection with her. We see her in Paris, arousing the enthusiasm of an old mesmerist, who sees in her the possibility of great development as a medium; we catch a glimpse of her in London; we see her rushing to Canada to try to meet a real James Fenimore Cooper Indian, and then, disgusted with the contrast between the real and her ideal, descending to New Orleans and studying the voodoo Negro experts in the black arts, and continuing through Texas to Mexico. About this time she received a large legacy from a godmother, which she dissipated in a short time, throwing the money, as she always did when she had any, to the winds with both hands. She thought that she had bought some large tracts of land in America, but soon forgot where they were located, and thought no more of them, as the project of going to India to study the Oriental mystic science took possession of her.

Around the Cape she went to Ceylon, and thence to Bombay. It is to be remembered that all this took place in 1852, when globe trotting was not the domestic pastime it has since become. For the first time, just before this expedition, she joined forces with others and went with two companions, an English occultist and a Hindu adept in occult science; but the party broke up soon after their arrival in India, in the complete inharmony which always followed Madam Blavatsky's attempt at co-operation. She left India and returned to England; thence to New York and to Chicago, at that time the crudest of Western boom cities. There were no railways to the far West, a circumstance which allured one of her temperament, and she made the trip to San Francisco in an emigrant's caravan.

A Himalayan Retreat.

From there she went back again to India, where she was lost to sight for two years, during which she always said she was making a "Himalayan retreat" and laying the foundation for her system of philosophy. In 1858, when she returned to Russia, the world knew of her. Vaguely, with curious, distorted versions, the story of her eccentric wanderings and strange powers began to be known.

For ten or twelve years she lived with various members of her family in Russia and in the Caucasus Mountains. During this time her remarkable powers as a medium showed themselves more and more clearly. No disinterested person, reading of the psychic phenomena which took place about her, can doubt that she had strange powers in this direction, any more than he can doubt the intense delight she took in exercising them to the mystification of her observers, a passion which grew upon her as the years passed; until there can be little doubt of the fact that when she failed to control these powers, or they were not complete enough to satisfy her, she pieced them out with various tricks and devices.

For a period of years she lived thus, reveling in the excitement produced by her gifts as a medium. There was not one of the familiar phenomena which she did not spring on her amazed and long suffering family; who, unless they shared her sublimely robust taste for excitement, must have grown heartily weary of so disconcerting a visitor. She surrounded the most simple operations of every day life with mystery. Arm chairs glided about like house cats. Tables became alternately as light as a feather or impossible to move, according as she could most thoroughly dismay her skeptical brother, and she played pranks on her father, a rugged old unbeliever in the occult, until she frightened the poor man into the most abject credulity.

Involved with the Police.

Once indeed she nearly involved the whole family in an alarming fracas with the police, by her suspiciously complete knowledge of the details of a murder which had been committed near them. The hard hearted police officials pooh-poohed at the idea of supernational powers, and Colonel Hahn (Blavatsky's father) had all the difficulty in the world to assure them that there was no foul play in the matter.

When family life grew dull, Helena would liven things with a few phenomena calculated to drive any housekeeper mad. She waved her hand, and in the ensuing darkness her invisible forces turned all the furniture topsyturvy, even the heavy sideboard. It is related to her credit that this was gently done so that none of the carving was injured; but it is not stated she set them upon their feet again or lighted the lights. One imagines it difficult to keep housemaids under such conditions. Some of the phenomena sound like the cheapest of claptrap mediumistic tricks, and others foreshadow the amazing and inexplicable powers that were displayed in her later life.

After a time, this lover of change felt the need of making more than a few people shake in agitated shivers, and the early '70's saw her launched upon a new sea, as tumultuous and gratefully productive of tempests as any she had known. The next twenty years, the last of her life, are a veritable kaleidoscope of every imaginable and unimaginable variety of spice. She allied herself with the Spiritualists when they were throwing all America into convulsions of wonder. She withdrew from them when they were discredited by a series of detected impostures.

She made one of the most remarkable examples of conversions known in religious history, in attaching Colonel Olcott to her. She was at this time a monstrously fat, middle aged woman, excessively ugly, with a taste in dress both barbaric and slovenly. She smoked incessantly, she swore like a trooper, she was subject to ungovernable fits of passion over the slightest incident of every day life; she was notoriously unwise in her judgment of people, taking up with the most fervid eagerness creatures who turned out unscrupulous sharpers; she was regarded by the world in general as a prodigiously entertaining charlatan. Yet she attached to her Colonel Olcott, well known man of letters, gallant ex-soldier in the Civil War, refined gentleman, and a prominent figure in the best circles of New York intellectual society. From that time to the day of her death, he lived on terms of great though respectful, not to say venerating, intimacy with her, and never failed to regard her as a Heaven sent teacher to impart pure and uplifting spiritual truths to suffering humanity. It is noteworthy of the patent purity of their relations that, in spite of the closeness and intimacy of their daily life together, there never was a breath of scandal about them; nor indeed ever about Madam Blavatsky, notwithstanding the amazing amount of talk which centered on her, and the wild eccentricities of her life.

With Colonel Olcott she founded the Theosophical Society in 1875, in New York, after a lamentable failure of a beginning she had made in Cairo a few years before. At this time she was immensely talked of in the American press; and the stories that are told of her remarkable psychic powers are startling. All during the second half of her life she performed every day feats, or tricks, or illusions —whatever one may choose to call them—that sound incredible. From time to time she was exposed in some juggling of secret cabinets, with sliding doors, absent confederates, and the like; but she continued to do things that seemed impossible to suspect of fraud. People who did not believe in her at all, were constantly forced to amazement by her powers.

One skeptic was told to think of something that he wished. In a stuffy little room in a city flat, he wished for a fresh plucked rose; and, looking up, saw one descend toward him, all dewy and fresh. He put it in his buttonhole, where it wilted and died like any rose, and he always kept the leaves as a souvenir. Another time she took a ring, which someone had admired, from her finger, held it closely for a moment, and then, opening her hand, showed two rings identical, but for the color of the stone. She would read the contents of a letter by holding it closely to her forehead, and mark the paper inside of a sealed envelope in any way that might be desired.

Skeptical reporters from the newspapers went to her strange, cluttered little apartment, prepared to make fun of the fat Russian woman, and to this day they shake bewildered heads over the wonders she showed them, and the disconcerting tricks played on their incredulity. The furniture of the whole room hummed and sang at her word, and from a closed and locked piano flowed forth the strains of any selection desired. She said that she was in the hands of "The Masters" (high priests of occult science in India), that they took possession of her and used her as an instrument for furthering their holy ends; and she frequently was able to show their apparitions to those about her.

Instances of Her Magic.

It is impossible to record the innumerable instances of seeming magic which arose every day, the grotesque and useless tests with which she delighted to mystify people. Although many of her wonders appear incontestably genuine, they all have one curious trait in common. Never were they of any moment or significance. Like the idle writings of Planchette, they were indubitably psychic in origin, but wholly lacking in dignity or worth. It seemed to be her idea that people would be converted to Theosophy by marveling at her display of psychic legerdemain.

Far more than that, she could always extract the greatest amount of joyous and robust excitement out of the astonishment of her spectators, if her attempt succeeded, or furious wrath at their lack of sympathy if she failed. She produced strings of beads out of the air; she deposited written answers to questions asked a moment before, behind picture frames; she grew bunches of grapes out of bookcases; quoted from books she had never seen, in languages she did not know; she caused objects selected by those present to appear and disappear at will; and she produced phenomena that would not materialize in her spectators' experience till long afterward.

New York in particular, and America in general, stared and exclaimed and wondered; but the most amazing and fantastic feats of mediumship did not impress hard headed Americans as the best material for building a new philosophy of life; and, finding such crass materialism somewhat daunting, she went to India in 1877, taking with her the devoted Colonel Olcott. Here the society took a firm grip on life and began to increase mightily. Colonel Olcott's dignified and sincere personality added much to the general credit of the organization, and consistency was given to the intellectual side of the esoteric movement by his keen mind and his grasp on the significance of some of the tangled maze of facts and powers and psychic capacities of Madam Blavatsky.

She practised her marvels, had airsent letters from the snow mountains of Tibet, produced teapots from under her chair, walked about familiarly with visionary "masters," and the Hindus bowed down and worshiped her. She was ostracised by the white population of Madras for her association with the natives; but this was far from a disadvantage to her in the eyes of the outside world. She wrote vigorously with the furious energy of her actions, spreading far and wide her doctrines, and it was not long before she was heard of.

She and her Theosophical Society became vastly important. People who believed in her and in the strange mixture of Buddhism, Spiritualism, and Blavatskyism which she was developing, were becoming more numerous, and people who intensely disliked what one English review called roundly "the complex and repulsive nature of the impostor," became louder and more sweeping in their accusations of fraud. The Theosophical Society flourished like a green bay tree, and its detractors racked their brains and the dictionary for epithets vigorous enough to apply to it.

In Whirling Excitement.

Again we see the powerful and enigmatic figure of its founder, placed where she fain would be and was all the days of her life, in a whirling stream of excitement. She wrote books—"revelations of divine truth unexampled," or "coarse and stupid plagiarisms," according to the point of view. She made triumphant circuits in India, was received with great pomp by native sovereigns, with a circus like array of elephants and processions of white horses, fit to make a small boy's mouth water. She ran a sort of Hindu retreat in India where she was worshiped by white robed, brown skinned acolytes, and when she wanted a change she went to London, the stronghold of conservative conventional feeling, and was worshiped by dark robed, English-women.

Grave scholars took her up and cast her down, wrote articles trying ponderously to extract the true from the false in her doctrines; disciples turned against her and claimed to expose cheats and sleight of hand performances. After one such frightful explosion in the ranks of the faithful, the indomitable woman wrote triumphantly to an ex-devotee who had tried her best to ruin her, "I have a thousand strings to my bow, and God Almighty Himself could not make some of my disciples disbelieve in me."

As she grew older and feebler, so that she was necessarily more stationary, she still procured for herself the wherewithal to live in a state of furious excitement; she repelled with a ferocious virulence attacks on her; she took part with a wild absence of restraint in the continued and turbulent quarrels in her society.

Could Not Be Daunted.

Up to the last she continued the dauntless and irresponsible soldier of fortune. Where the intrigante, where the imposter pure and simple, where the religious enthusiast, would have striven by smooth words and placating actions to keep the loyalty of those devoted to her, she risked it a thousand times by her roughness and utter indifference to them. She swore at the devoted and refined Colonel Olcott, the mainstay of her enterprises, like a dragoon of the guard, and he took it as "one of the hardships of his initiation into a higher world." She confessed certain frauds callously to non-believers, and as callously denied the confession afterward. Never for a moment did she attempt to direct the seething flood of her impulses into the channel of "good policy."

And like all true soldiers of fortune who put their trust wholly and with a sublime insouciance in chance, her indifference served her well. She began her adult life as the run away girl bride of an obscure Russian officer, and by the sheer force of her personality molded to her will a considerable part of modern intelligent society. During a long life she not only had more variety, excitement, spice, danger, risk, notoriety, and influence than any other woman in the world, but when she died, on May 8, 1891, she was the acknowledged head of a community of one hundred thousand followers, scattered all over the globe, organized into a powerful force, with journals in London, Paris, New York, and Madras. What soldier of fortune of the opposite sex can point to as great an achievement?

DOROTHA CANFIELD.

THE CLINTON CAMP.

Some Reflections in Regard to the Same by the Secretary.

While arranging the program for the coming meeting which will be held at Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Iowa, beginning July 28, and closing August 25, I am reminded that it is the 25th anniversary of this camp.

A quarter of a century has passed since it was spoken into existence; a quarter of a century and it has sprung from a weed-grown forest to a place of beauty. Conceived in the brain of man to here establish a park center for the teaching and preaching of the gospel of Spiritualism, which means a new heaven and a new earth through new and humane spiritual concepts, a committee banded together to arrange for the first meeting. Speakers and mediums were engaged, tents secured at an enormous rental in which to domicile the guests, while crude boards composed a "speaker's stand," and formed seats in the grove for the comfort of the audiences.

Time speeds on. One by one the tents gave way for more substantial cottages, until today the tent city is no more.

A commodious lodging hotel, pavilion, auditorium, dining hall and restaurant are permanent fixtures, while beautiful flower beds dot the grounds, and electric lights equal the noon-day sun in their brilliancy.

Holmes has said the one great thing in life is not so much where you stand but which direction are you going. Each year has found the M. V. S. A. pressing forward, and the interest spreading until this season's program, scintillating with names of the most eminent statesmen and divines from sectarian churches, will in all probability prove to be the most interesting in the history of the camp.

Hon. Champ Clark, who is famous for his loyalty to his state, Missouri, has consented to deliver one of his most popular lectures August 18. Mr. Clark is conceded to be one of the wittiest and most entertaining speakers on the floor of Congress, and his eulogy on Lincoln in a recent speech at Pittsburg touched the heart-strings of humanity and proved the spirit of reconciliation and fraternity.

Some two or three ministers from Clinton have suggested a willingness to assist us and will find a place on our platform. Unity is the teaching of God. The dissemination of the truth from the individual standpoint of these friends help to make Spiritualism felt in all the circles of life. Let us then honor intellectual labor in all its forms, and from whatever source it comes.

We are proud of our own brilliant leaders when we name Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Thomas Grimshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, Mrs. Cooley, Mrs. Catharine McFarlin, W. F. Peck, Frank Ripley, Mrs. Jaquet and others who will aid us in the solution of living problems and make the assembly of 1907 a grand success.

Come friends and learn with us, for knowledge and truth can never be exhausted. The most earnest seeker must confess that for all his attainments he seems only a child playing by the sea shore, while the great ocean of undiscovered truth stretches away before him.

MRS. M. B. ANDERSON,
Secretary.

Clarksville, Mo.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

"Materialization." By Mme. Emma d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents. Price, 50 cents.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

UNIQUE SPIRITUALIST SOCIETY.

Its Celebration of the Anniversary of Spiritualism.

The 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism was a memorable day in the history of the People's Spiritual Association of Los Angeles, Cal., memorable not only because of the many interesting features of its program and the large audiences which enjoyed them with hearty appreciation, but memorable especially because of the marked success of the principles of its inauguration.

The People's Association which assembles every Sunday in Burbank Hall is not yet a year old, and this 59th anniversary is the first one it has been possible to celebrate. There seems a popular significance in the fact that this should have occurred on Easter Sunday, as though in commemoration of the spirit which gave it birth, from the earnest desire of its founders—a desire for the resurrection of the true Christ Spirit within the material body of Spiritualism and the opening of broader fields of wisdom and enlightenment.

In harmony with the spirit of its inception all mediums, speakers, musicians and others who have in any way aided in the upbuilding of the Association, or in its anniversary program have donated their services, while those of other Spiritualist Societies and churches have usually been paid.

This People's Association has no organization save for the transaction of business. It has no rules or regulations, no aspirants for office, no lobbies or wire-pulling machines and no "axes to grind," but from its success thus far, it occupies one of the largest halls in the city. It has a free developing circle every Sunday morning at 9:15, which has been one of the best and most harmonious within the knowledge of its many attendants. It has a People's Conference open for all at 10:30, and tests given later. This association owns a tract of about eighteen acres of exceptionally desirable land within twenty minutes ride from the business part of the city, where many of its members are preparing to build homes. A large auditorium is expected to be in readiness for the camp-meeting in August, where some of the best talent in the United States is expected. A State Charter has also been secured and an organization perfected for building an educational institution on the grounds, to be known as The American University of the Science and Philosophy of Life," and designed to cover all phases of science, phenomena and philosophy pertaining to life here and hereafter.

The Convention proper began with a feast of good things on Saturday afternoon, a feast of music, a feast of eloquence, and a feast of spirit communion which culminated in the superior work of Mrs. Sanford Johnson, slate-writing medium, who answered numbers of questions passed in from the audience and placed on a table without any possibility of her seeing them. Those who sat near could distinctly hear the spirit raps as they rapidly indicated where to find each question after it was answered. Without looking at the question Mrs. Johnson then passed it to the chairman or to someone who read it to the audience, proving in every instance the accuracy of names and details with which it had already been answered.

A feast of coffee, sandwiches, cake, and countless other substantial things followed the afternoon session.

The evening program was greeted with a very large and enthusiastic audience. The opening address was made by Prof. or Rev. McLean, so widely known in many cities for his eloquence and inspirational poems. Certainly never could his genius or his gifts have lifted an audience on the crest of thought waves which enveloped them more successfully than on Saturday night, until from the state of their exaltation he landed them gracefully amid the breezy merriment and pungent spices of several extemporaneous poems; then a final and touching poetical tribute to the little daughter who brings to him so many helpful messages from the Unseen World.

Fine music and other excellent addresses followed before Mrs. J. J. Whitney was called to the platform as a message bearer. Mrs. Whitney is widely known as one of the best if not the best trance medium in the United States, yet she has for many months donated her time and services in the People's meetings at Burbank Hall, and has also taken time to organize and lead the Sunday morning circle where so much of good and helpfulness has come from her labor of love. Never did she give more striking evidence of a masterful and unseen intelligence linking her vocal organs with the unseen world than in the messages, incidents and prophecies so clearly and rapidly given, together with long and difficult names in full of the spirits who brought them and the individuals in the audience or their friends to whom the messages were given. Incidents and names unknown to the medium and unknown to anyone in the audience save to the ones addressed, which fact was repeatedly vouched for by the ones receiving the messages, who in some instances declared they were total strangers in the city and strangers to the medium and to everyone present.

After the messages, Dr. Althea Briggs was called to the rostrum and stated that her call was merely to find an owner for a small gold watch and chain which she held in her hand. It is a very plain and unpretentious one, she said, which doubtless would not attract the attention of the casual observer, but as I scan it closely it appears the most beautiful watch I have ever seen, for it is studded full of priceless jewels, jewels of every form and tinting set in many powerful designs of symbolic meaning. Beautiful thought jewels which the alchemy of love and lasting gratitude have created deep in the hearts and memories of all who had given these jewels or conceived the symbols of their setting. May the brilliancy of these priceless gems ever illumine the pathway of her to whom they are given, enriching life with softer tints and warmer glow than the past has given; proving themselves to be of far more value than gold for which so many strive and more lasting than Time which this trinket measures. Before Mrs. Whitney had fairly recovered from the trance in which she had so recently stood before the audience she was "chained" with the golden thread and dragged to the front.

"May its rhythmic 'ticks' measure for you the cycle of many happy future years—years in which you will always feel that the time given to the Sunday morning circle at Burbank Hall was time well spent, to you as well as to the many members who have been so greatly benefited in them." With a bow and hasty departure of the speaker, Mrs. Whitney was left in a genuine confusion and embarrassment which the audience evidently enjoyed much more than did the lady herself. "I don't know what to say—I just do not know what to say"—she faltered at last in such unfeigned bewilderment that a ripple of spontaneous laughter shot through the entire audience. Confusion on the one side and rich, merry laughter on the other were happily mingled for some moments, sending everybody home with sharpened appetites for the sessions of the following day, which were both largely attended by cultured, intelligent and highly appreciative audiences.

The Sunday morning session had many very interesting features, including also the usual song service and conference.

Sunday afternoon Mrs. Mattie Hull delivered a very able and interesting address, reviewing the history of Modern Spiritualism which all thoroughly enjoyed. But that which sank deepest and most ineffaceably into our hearts was the courage and heroism with which she is sustained in her great bereavement. All who have ever known Moses and Mattie Hull have ever been touched by the sweetness and beauty of the unfeigned devotion which cemented such a perfect union during the many years of their married life, and sustained them ever in the labor of love and sacrifice which they gave for the Truth they loved and fearlessly proclaimed; the Truth for which Moses Hull in reality sacrificed his mortal life so recently. All who know the meaning of the deepest human heartthrobs know that from a human standpoint, Mattie Hull has nothing left to live for. Were it not for the solace which comes to her from the touch of invisible hands and the whisper of unseen lips there would be little indeed to feed the flickering flame of life which still sheds forth its helpful light to the world in the fragile frame of Mattie Hull.

There were numerous other speakers, musicians and helpers in the various sessions of the convention who received warm appreciation, but space will not here permit the tribute they merited. Among these were Mrs. Brooks, who sang so beautifully the words and music which were inspired as she sang from the guidance of an unseen singer; Miss Freda Geltzer, one of the youngest mediums who has ever appeared before the public in giving test messages, and last of all is much—very much of appreciation due to Mrs. Nettie Howell, whose never ending faithfulness and devotion to the cause, planned and directed the convention through its more laborious stages, just as she has arranged or financed or pushed ahead so many other helpful or philanthropic undertakings in the interests of Spiritualism and the interests of humanity

ALTHEA C. BRIGGS.

Los Angeles, Cal.

WOMEN AND THEIR WORK.

At Montrose, Colo., Mrs. Amanda S. McKee has been elected to succeed herself as city treasurer. She was the candidate of both Republicans and Democrats.

Twenty-six women have just been graduated from the law school of the University of New York.

Women physicians are employed in the State Hospitals at Toledo, Cleveland, Dayton and the institution for epileptics at Gallipolis, Ohio. Those appointments are made by the Governor.

Woman suffragists of Illinois had legislative hearings at Springfield, March 29th, on three important measures. In the evening they were given a reception by Governor and Mrs. Deneen at the Executive Mansion.

At the woman suffrage meeting held in Exeter Hall, London, the night following the defeat of the suffrage bill a collection was taken which amounted to £1,100. The "suffragettes" are evidently acquainted with the American maxim that "money talks."

A petition for equal suffrage, signed by 142,128 women, has been presented to the Swedish Parliament.

Anniversary in Detroit, Mich.

I conducted anniversary seances, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Penna, Sunday evening, at 55 Grand River Ave., Detroit, Mich., and although the rain fell in torrents, still the hall was filled with an earnest class of Spiritualists and investigators. The hall was simply a bower of beauty. Palms and cut flowers with other decorations made it most attractive, and a small chain draped in white, with ferns and smilax covered with tiny white blossoms, reminded many parents of the little ones who have been transplanted to more congenial climes, but with the knowledge that at our transition we shall meet them again in the sweet sometime. A large chair was also covered with the sweetest of flowers, each flower representing our arisen friends, while a white dove was nestled among the foliage at the top of the chair, which seemed like a benediction of peace that fell over the assembly. Mrs. Penna gave several demonstrations of spirit power. Her messages seemed to comfort many hearts, and as the friends brought in more flowers she described the spirits who came before, at the same time presenting them with a flower in loving remembrance of their arisen friends. Then after singing, my guide, Miss Rosa Lathrop, gave nearly all of her messages in poetry that brought tears of joy to those fortunate enough to receive them, after which I described the spirits as they appeared before me, which I hope brought sunshine into the lives of the recipients. I must not fail to mention the singing by babe Penna, so sweet and yet so comforting. She is simply a musical prodigy that will be heard from later. Thus closed another anniversary which was one of the best ever held in this city.

REV. NELLIE S. BAADE,
Detroit, Mich.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne. Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

(Advertisement.)

STRANGE PREDICTIONS

Planetary Professor Foretells Events and Quickly Reads the Lives of People, Though Thousands of Miles Away.

Sends Letters to the Rich and Poor Alike In Which He Advises Them About Business, Marriage, Speculation, Love Affairs, Wealth, Etc.

Offers Free Readings to All Who Write and Send Date of Birth.

In his office in New York City, surrounded by charts and dials of strange design, Prof. Albert H. Postel studies daily over the lives of men and women who have written him for advice on affairs of business, love, speculation, travel, marriage, health and the important events of life. The following letter gives an idea of Mr. Postel's ability:

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

Prof. Postel:

Dear Sir—You are certainly the most wonderful astrologer living. Every one of your predictions came true. I consider that you not only saved me from an awful death, but prevented the loss of hundreds of dollars. I trust that many people will profit by your advice. Sincerely,

MISS EFFA M. TRYON.

The accuracy of recent predictions made by this eminent Astrologer has caused many of his friends to believe that he possesses a supernatural power, but he modestly asserts that his predictions are due alone to a scientific understanding of natural laws. The many thankful letters Prof. Postel has received from people who have benefited by his advice furnish ample proof that he is sincere in his work and has a kindly feeling toward humanity.

Readers of this paper can obtain a reading free of charge by addressing a letter to Prof. Postel, Dept. 487, No. 126 West 34th street, New York. Simply say you wish a reading of your life, stating your birth date, sex and whether married or single. If you wish to do so you may inclose 10 cents (silver or stamps) to pay postage and clerical work; however, the reading will be promptly sent, whether you inclose the 10 cents or not.

Father Tom and the Pope,
Or a Night at the Vatican. Written probably by Sir Samuel Ferguson. From Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine. This is a humorous account of a rollicksome visit to the Pope of Rome by Father Tom, an Irish priest, armed with a superabundance of Irish wit, two imperial quart bottles of Irish "potteen," and an Irish recipe for "conwounding" the same. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

RADIANT ENERGY and Its Analysis, Its Relation to Modern Astrophysics, by Edgar L. Larkin, Director Lowe Observatory, Echo Mountain, California. This book treats upon a new branch of research into the laws of nature, and to the student or even an admirer of the modern astrological literature will surely come with great interest. Price, cloth, $1.75.

TWO IN ONE

A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

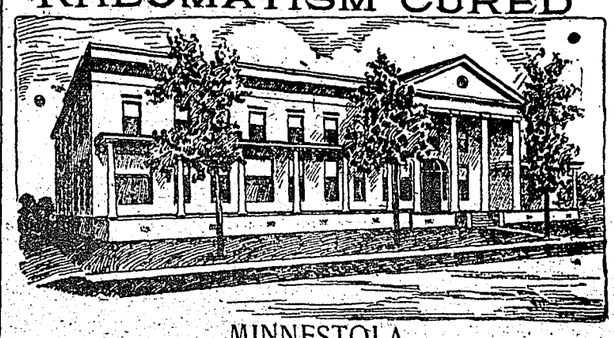
This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books combined at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED

is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.



PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
By the Editor of the National, with Prefaces and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle; also portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joel Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorce, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

The Universe By L. M. Rose.
This booklet contains 71 pages of explanation regarding force; the beginning of creation; what matter is; what life is; immortality; psychic science; the soul of things, and ends with a poem entitled "Song of Psyche," by Emma Nickerson-Warne. Price 25 cents.

THUMBSCREW AND RACK.
Torture implements employed in the 15th and 16th centuries for the promulgation of Christianity, with pictorial illustrations. By George E. Macdonald. Price, 10 cents.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,
H. D. C. MILLS.
Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street,

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Not Wiser or Better for Preaching

That learned English scholar, author and Parliamentarian, Samuel Laing, in his "A Modern Zoroastrian," thus casually compliments, over the left, the Christian clergy:

"In the course of a long life I have gained innumerable ideas, and experienced innumerable influences from contact with the world, with fellowmen, and with books; but although I have heard a good many sermons, I cannot honestly say I ever got an idea or an influence from one of them which made me wiser, or better, or different in any respect from what I should have been had I slept through them."

There are other persons who can write in the same strain with Hon. Mr. Laing. The writer who was in the weekly habit for years of listening to the preaching of an endless hell, learned to hate, with all the intensity of his nature, a system of religion taught in those sermons, which so dishonored the Almighty Father as to represent him the founder of an infernal prison for purpose of eternal torture of those who would not believe he held incestuous relations with his own child, a finite Jewish maiden, and then allowed the fruit of that union to die on a cross, to appease his own infinite anger. That hatred drove us from the church, and made us despise a religion fabricated along such damnable lines.

Col. Ingersoll on Spiritualism.

The brave Ingersoll, who joyed to find the grain of gold in every creed, thus expressed himself in regard to the religion of the immortals:

"There are several good things about the Spiritualists. First, they are not bigoted. Second, they do not believe in salvation by faith. Third, they do not expect to be happy in another world because Christ was good in this. Fourth, they do not preach the consolation of hell. Fifth, they do not believe in God as an infinite monster. Sixth, the Spiritualists believe in intellectual hospitality. In these respects they differ from our Christian brethren, and in these respects they are far superior to the saints. * * They ask all to investigate, and then to make up their minds from the evidence. Hundreds of thousands of well educated, intelligent people are satisfied with the evidence, and firmly believe in the existence of spirits. For all I know, THEY MAY BE RIGHT."

There was candor and cordiality, something rarely met with from a churchman.

The Coward's Castle.

Rev. Dougherty, pastor of Zion Baptist Church, Springfield, Ill., entered his pulpit on the 6th inst., "armed with a gun," says a news dispatch, which he placed on the sacred desk beside the Bible. A warrant was sworn out against the preacher by one of the members of the church, who said the pastor threatened to shoot daylight out of any person who should interfere with his preaching.

The pulpit has been known for many years as a coward's castle, because the occupants decline to allow any person to controvert, or even question statements made therein. Rev. D. made his cowardice conspicuous by his display of a deadly weapon, and his faith in orthdox teaching by threatening to use force in the promulgation of his creed.

RESIGNED.

The secretary of the Illinois State Association, Dr. H. A. Cross, of Chicago, has resigned. The name and address of his successor will be announced in the columns of this paper at some future date.

Reason must be our last guide and judge in everything.—John Locke.

The Mosaic Account of Creation.

We are asked to relate facts in regard to ancient Christian writings which are claimed to have been recently discovered; and give an account of late "finds," which completely upset the Mosiac account of creation.

The subjects would require too much space to be treated in a single article, so we will reserve the "Christian writings" for reviewal at another time.

We have before us as we write "Fresh Light from the Ancient Monuments," by Rev. A. H. Sayce, A. M., LL. D., professor of Comparative Philology in Oxford University. It was published by the Religious Tract Society, London. Where can better Christian authority be found?

The author, a Sanscrit scholar, after telling how it chanced the great library of Assurbanipal was discovered, and the pantiles covered with inscriptions in wedge-shaped characters were deciphered, and the language was discovered, then relates what was found on those plates.

The translations are too numerous and comprehensive to be detailed at length, so we will briefly recount some of the points detailed.

There was found the story of creation by the gods, as related in Genesis, before the translator changed the plural gods into a single person. These gods performed the same tasks, and in the same order as the "inspired" Bible writer relates them. These gods made living creatures, the cattle of the field, the beasts of the forests, the creeping things. They made man and woman. On a gem was found engraved a tree. On either side of the tree sat a man and woman, and they were pointing to the fruit on the tree, as if the subject of conversation. Behind the woman, standing on its tail, was a snake, the serpent of the inspired volume. It seems in conversation with the woman. It was doubtless on this occasion the serpent told the good Eve: "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt not surely die," thus giving god the lie, who had asserted to the contrary.

Of course the Fall of Man, occurred at that time, requiring the death of the Son of God on a cross 4,000 years after for redemption. The Garden of Eden, in the valley of Euphrates, planted by the hands of the gods, from which our first parents were expelled, was found. Yes, and the cherubs, with their bright swords glistening in the sun, were there guarding the gate, to prevent the return of the unfortunate Adam and Eve.

Adam proves to have been a Babylonian word, and the Adamites were "the white race," whilst the Semites were known as "black heads."

Strange, is it not? That Sabbath which we were taught to keep holy, proves to have been a Babylonian sacred day before a Jew was ever known. We quote from "Fresh Light from the Monuments," p. 24:

"The seventh day was observed as a day of rest among the Babylonians, as it was among the Jews. It was even called by the same name of Sabbath, defined in an Assyrian text as 'a day of rest for the heart.' * * On that day flesh cooked on the fire may not be eaten, clothing may not be changed, white garments may not be put on, a sacrifice may not be offered, the king may not ride in his chariot or speak in public, the augur may not mutter in a secret place, medicine of the body may not be given, nor may any curse be uttered."

This paragraph on page 10:

"The monuments of Egypt, of Babylonia, and of Assyria have been rescued from their hiding-places, and the writing upon them has been made to speak once more in living words. A dead world has been called again to life by the spade of the excavator and the patient labor of the decipherer. We find ourselves, as it were, face to face with Sennacherib, with Nebuchadnezzar, and with Cyrus, with those whose names have been familiar to us from childhood, but who have hitherto been to us mere names, mere shadowy occupants of an unreal world. Thanks to the research of the last half-century, we can now penetrate into the details of their daily life, can examine their religious ideas, can listen to them as they themselves recount the events of their own times or the traditions of the past which had been handed down to them."

Without following the revelations from the monuments further, giving an account of the Deluge, the Tower of Babel, and the many attendant events, which priestcraft has taught us was revealed by God to man through the inspired Moses, we open to the same author's "Hibbert Lectures," and there, in an extended note, pages 26 and 27, find the story of Moses in the Bullrushes, where the kid was found, and is almost unquestionably proved an occurrence on the Euphrates, instead of on the Nile, and related to Sargon. The story was stolen from the monuments, and was made to do duty in Egypt, to the glory of a mythical Moses.

The whole account of the Jews in Egypt is believed by critical scholars to have been fiction. The Egyptian Exploration Fund spent many years of zealous labor in an earnest search for some trace of the Jews in that country, but found nothing. Those who have searched among the Babylonian records are confident they were drawn upon, and were adapted to the needs of possibly Ezra, to make it appear the Jews resided for a time in Egypt.

We are conscious attempts have been made by theologians to interpret discoveries in Egypt as traces of Jews. Bricks made without straw were found and that has been cited as evidence, and of the cruelty of the Egyptian taskmaster. Bricks made without straw were found in the ruins of Babylon—so wrote Sayce. This is corroborative evidence that Babylonian records were drawn upon for facts when Genesis was compiled.

The truth is, the Old Testament—all of it of a historical character—is a compilation of very late date, plagiarized from the records of Phenicia, Syria, Babylonia, Egypt, etc., and adapted to the formation of what constituted a Jewish library, consisting of a series of tracts. The love stories, and songs of the seraglio, now labeled Songs of Solomon, with chapter head lines to deceive: "The church's love of Christ; The mutual love of Christ and the church; The church professeth faith in Christ," etc. The headlines illy fit the libidinous songs which, published outside the Bible, would arouse the watchful Anthony Comstock into immediate activity, and a prosecution for obscenity would follow.

Only Church Pettifoggers.

Wrote Rev. Minot J. Savage: "I had a minister say to me some years ago: 'What I think in my study is one thing; what I think wise and best to give the people from my pulpit, that is another thing.'"

These words of Rev. Savage quoted by him from an orthodox preacher, coincide with the statement of Bishop Grafton, of Fond du Lac, Wis., before reported, who said:

"We of the clergy have been made by the church her ministers to teach, not what we think is true, but what she puts into our mouths to teach."

According to this idea, an Agnostic who denies the fall of man, of total depravity, of an atonement by a crucified Savior, and who repudiates the whole story of the immculate conception, birth, growth and preaching of Jesus, is all right so long as he keeps in line while preaching, with what his clintele have taught him to say.

Thomas Paine's Creed.

"I believe in one God, and no more; and I hope for happiness beyond this life. * * I trouble not myself about the manner of that future existence. I content myself with believing, even to positive conviction, that the power that gave me existence is able to continue it in any form and manner he pleases, either with or without this body. * * I do not believe in the creed professed by the Jewish Church, by the Roman Church, by the Protestant Church, nor by any church I know of. My mind is my own church. To do good is my religion."

The above extracts are all from Thomas Paine's Age of Reason, as is the following, showing very clearly he possessed mediumistic powers, and that he was conscious of it.

"There are two distinct classes of what are called Thoughts; those we produce in ourselves by reflection and the act of thinking, and those that BOLT INTO THE MIND OF THEIR OWN ACCORD. I have always made it a rule to treat those voluntary visitors with civility, taking care to examine, as well as I was able, if they were worth entertaining; and IT IS FROM THEM I HAVE ACQUIRED ALMOST ALL THE KNOWLEDGE I HAVE."

Many a medium has made the same statement, almost in Paine's own words, but ignorant that he, or others, had made the same admission.

Here is another statement of Paine's on which the eye fell as we were closing the book:

"Any system of religion that has anything in it to shock the mind of a child, cannot be a true religion."

The Wisconsin State Spiritualists' Association.

Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond has been the speaker for every evening of the Wisconsin State Association Convention, April 16, 17, 18. This is the fourth annual convention Mrs. Richmond has attended of the Wisconsin State Association. We know what that means.

TATE HOSPITAL.

Clever Recitations and Impersonations by Mrs. Richings.

The entertainment given at the Hospital Opera House, Gowanda, N. Y., March 26, by Mrs. Helen Stuart-Richings, the Scotch-American reciter and impersonator, was a very pleasing and diversified performance. Mrs. Richings has a happy way of establishing friendly relations with her audience, and her elocutionary efforts were rewarded with hearty applause and an unusual number of encores. Her first selection was a patriotic legend of "Christmas, 1776," in which a certain bewitching Penelope Penwick occupies the attention of the British revelers while Washington is crossing the storm-beaten Delaware. In the "Yellow Bird" she gave a delightfully life-like imitation of a feathered songster, and in "Fine Feathers" the dialogue between a haughty rooster and a humble gosling was highly amusing. Especially good was a group of three old-fashioned songs sung in the old-fashioned way—the Scotch "Laird o'Cockpen" as rendered by a braw Highlander, "Lord Lovel" as a demure English dame of uncertain age and voice would have sung it, and "O, Religion," a negro hymn shouted with all the pious fervor of a good Methodist colored sister in camp meeting time. The last recitation, representing a wild and woolly cowboy calling off for the dance in a "Colorado Ball Room," amused the audience extremely.

The first impersonation in costume, on the program, "A Naughty Little Girl," was one of the cleverest things ever seen on the Hospital stage. It is not so very hard for an actress in the early twenties to seem to throw off a dozen years, but Mrs. Richings is at the meridian of life and yet she counterfeited "a cute and sassy kid" of ten years or thereabouts with a perfect accuracy that was really amazing. The child's naive story of turning somersaults on her mother's bed, eavesdropping under the parlor sofa and drinking stolen champagne evoked the liveliest applause. The next number was a costume impersonation of "A Broth of a Boy," a rollicking young Irishman who sang and danced and bragged about the colleens in true Tipperary style. The entertainment concluded with "Simple Mary Ann," a backwoods damsel whose excruciating costume and baby red parasol provoked almost as much mirth as her ludicrous confidences about her "paw and maw," and the ear-splitting results of the twenty-five cent singing lesson. Musical interludes by the Hospital orchestra under the direction of Prof. Jay completed the program of a very successful entertainment.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

Nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interchange of power, pressed too far and relaxed too much.—Bacon.

THE NEW LIGHT.

In Which We See Death Under a New Aspect.

Every day that passes brings us "nearer our home where we lay our burdens down," and where we shall meet those who long since have departed hence. May we be so fitted through the disciplinary life of earth that we shall feel worthy to stand in the presence of these risen souls. How our hearts should throb with rapture when we think of that time. Far from being filled with fear or dismay at the thought of death, we should rejoice that we are counted worthy to go—that we are not to be left to longer suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, but that our release has come and we are to go home to our father's house, that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Great should be our joy that we are chosen to take that journey. If our faith is worth anything it should support us at such a time.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Such should be our thought whenever we hear the call "Come up higher."

But, alas! how few those who call themselves Christians are of this mind. There must be something wrong with their theology, when they lose all hope and courage, and are so full of fear when death touches them or theirs.

"See how we grovel here below,
Fond of these earthly toys,
Our souls, how heavily they go,
To reach eternal joys."

It must be that we don't really believe it is "eternal joy" we are seeking. Why is it that all our church-going does not help us at such a time? We surely ought to have more to comfort us when our loved ones leave us. It must be because we cling to the earthly form, and cannot rise to the higher thought that the body is not our friend, our mother, our brother, our child. We see only the prostrate form, our thoughts are with that, our tears blind us and our grief prevents us from seeing the risen spirit.

"There is no death—although we grieve
When beautiful familiar forms
That we have learned to love are torn
From our embracing arms.

"Although with bowed and breaking heart
With sable garb and silent tread
We bear their senseless dust to rest,
And say that they are "dead"—

"They are not dead! They have but passed
Beyond the mists that blind us here
Into the new and larger life
Of that serener sphere.

They have but dropped their robe of clay,
To put their shining raiment on;
They have not wandered far away,
They are not lost nor gone.

Lo! disenthralled and glorified,
They still are here and love us yet.
The dear ones they have left behind,
They never can forget.

"And sometimes when our hearts grow faint
Amid temptations fierce and deep
Or when the wildly raging waves
Of grief or passion sweep;

"We feel upon our fevered form
Their gentle touch, their breath of balm,
Their arms enfold us, and our hearts
Grow comforted and calm.

For, ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is Life. There are no dead!"

"He is not the God of the dead,
But of the living, for all live unto Him."

And as Gerald Massey wrote:

"Nor fear the grave, that door of heaven on earth,
All changed and beautiful ye shall come forth,
As from the dark, cold clouds the winter showers
Go underground to dress, and come forth flowers CLEORA.

RACE SUICIDE AGAIN.

A Mother's Explicit Views on the Subject.

In The Progressive Thinker of April 13, I notice an article from the pen of Hattie Winter, in answer to an article by E. C. Barnett, who it seems, had given his opinion in a rather curt manner, in regard to race suicide.

Miss Winter is right. It truly was very hard a few years ago for the children of the poor to obtain even a common school education. I myself am one of that class; a poor man's child, I wanted to learn. I read the old Webster's spelling-book at home, learned to write at home, and at seventeen got married, raised eleven children, and I love them everyone. My oldest is a man, almost fifty-five, and is still my darling son. He lives in Idaho, and though he was the oldest of eleven, we are lovers yet. He is almost a self-taught man; but I am told by his youngest brother, who was with him ten years, that he can hold an argument on any subject and come out ahead of his opponent.

I say these things to show Mr. Barnett that poverty need neither make children degenerates nor ignoramuses; and a real mother will love and have the welfare of a dozen children in her heart; and though sickness, poverty, and death are inmates of the home, that mother's love remains the same. And here I want to say that I believe the destruction of the little ones, a race suicide, as Roosevelt terms it, to be the lowest, meanest, and wickedest kind of murder; and I fear that those who commit that crime will find no place of forgiveness, either here or hereafter. I am seventy-three years old, have no excuse to make for poor writing.

MRS. CAROLINE JACKSON.
North Baltimore, Ohio.

DR. LEWIS BUSHNELL.

Dr. Lewis Bushnell, at the ripe age of 81, passed serenely to spirit life on the evening of April 19, at his home on Randolph street, this city. He was a most excellent man from every point of view, a prominent Spiritualist of many years' standing, and a powerful magnetic healer. He had a host of friends who will miss his genial presence. Further particulars next week.

I belong to the great church that holds the world within its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy the grain of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul.—Ingersoll.

Soft is the music that would charm forever.—Wordsworth.

The Notorious "Rev. Dr." Moore

A Comprehensive Pen Picture of Budd Lake Camp Meeting Resort, Illustrating the Trend of Legerdemain Spiritualism, the Greatest Curse our Heaven-Born Cause Has to Contend With.

The notorious "Rev. Dr." Moore is now in Los Angeles, Cal., and is probably carrying on the same game that he did in New York.

California is an attractive place for those who have been compelled to leave the East in consequence of questionable practices in connection with occult phenomena.

During Moore's whole remarkable career, he never presented a genuine materialization, yet his methods deceived the public, just as the sleight-of-hand performer deceived his audience by his artful tricks.

In Los Angeles Moore is protected by law, paying $50 a month for a license, and thus will be able to carry on his legerdemain work. To license any one to hold a materializing seance where deception is practiced is almost as bad as to license a gambling hell, a house of prostitution, or a place where young girls are led to ruin and despair.

Read the following from Robert H. Crowe, of New York, illustrating the low strata occupied by that notorious resort, Budd Lake Camp, a place that has reflected from the start the feats of bogus mediumship, and at the same time bear in mind that the Light of Truth has been the acknowledged organ of Moore and all other fake mediums in our ranks, thus besmirching our Cause.

To the Editor: With regard to the matter published in your paper, concerning the "Rev. Dr. Hugh R. and Mrs. Cora H. Moore and Company," I may state I have made a patient and thorough search into the "phenomena" produced at 120 West 13th St., New York City, N. Y., by the above mentioned parties, and have accumulated a mass of facts, which if you deem fit for publication, will startle all believers in "materialization. If you can procure a "Light of Truth" of the latter part of July, 1906, you will find therein an article written by Col. Charles McArthur, describing a seance held by the "Rev. Dr." and Co. in the large tent on the camp grounds at Budd Lake, Morris Co., New Jersey. The first of the article written by the Col. explains how the camp ground was selected, and will explain this matter better than I can and will save time and trouble. Previous to the first and only "Materializing Seance" held in the tent, seances were held in the "Moore's" living rooms, three in number, situated at extreme south end of the third floor of the Forest House Hotel. The rooms mentioned were situated so that they were entirely cut off from all others, the first room being at the head of the stairs and the third at the end of the corridor, and bounded by the south and east walls, the three rooms connected with each other from the inside, having also individual connection with the hall. The first was the bedroom of Niobe and Irma Moore, children of the "Rev. Dr."; the second the bedroom of the "Rev. Dr." and wife, also was used as the cabinet; the third was the seance room and contained nothing but a few chairs. The rooms were numbered, first 49, second 47, and third 45. When I first visited the Budd Lake Assembly there were about 70 guests, among whom were the following: Frank Montske, "Trumpet Medium"; Louis J. Cohen, "Do."; Martin Teitzen, "Magnetic Healer," Mrs. H. E. Strickland and Miss Tessie White. These persons made a habit of disappearing after supper every evening, and were not seen again until after a seance the next morning. This created suspicion among the "Rev. Dr.'s" followers who thought and asserted that they recognized in the "Spirits," the voices and mannerisms of some of the persons I have mentioned as suspects, especially Louis Cohen and Mrs. Strickland. The outcome of this suspicion resulted in the demand for a test seance, which demand worried the "Rev. Dr." very much, as the seance was demanded late in afternoon, it of a consequence resulted in failure, "Pansy" being the only one who "materialized."

Mrs. Moore was very indignant and apparently much hurt by the followers questioning her mediumship, and as a consequence the gentlemen who on behalf of the rest of the community demanded the "test" approached, Mr. Moore, and expressed their regret for having caused the trouble. The "Dr.," however, decided that he would convince the most skeptical, and the next morning called a meeting of his "spirits," and asked their advice on giving a test seance, the meeting resulting in Martin Teitzen, Tessie White, and Mrs. Strickland being selected as the persons to perform at the "test seance" that evening. Frank Montske being very much scared dropped out, and did not impersonate again for some time. The "Rev. Dr.'s" father, Chas. Moore, was then summoned to prepare the hiding places for the "spirits." The hiding places were of course in the rooms of the Moores; in room 49 was a bureau from which Chas. Moore removed the back and also the bottoms of the drawers; in room 47 the same operation was performed on the bureau there; the parts removed were then taken to Mrs. Strickland's room (50 directly opposite room 49), and concealed between the mattresses. On the evening of the same day, directly after supper, the three selected "spirits" disappeared and went straight to the "Moore's" room, where they remained and prepared for work, putting on their "spirit robes," veils, etc. After the people gathered for the seance, Mrs. Moore told her confederates to get to their hiding places. Martin Teitzen went into the bureau from which the back had been removed. The bureau was then pushed into place against the wall; this took place in room 47; Mrs. Strickland going through the same performance in room 49, while Tessie White went into a large trunk in the same room. When this was done, the "Rev. Dr." announced to his audience in room 45, as the seance held on the previous evening had not proved entirely satisfactory, that this seance would be under strictly test conditions. He then invited Mr. Fred A. Baker, Milo Grant Rice, "Leut." Wallace Sheppard, and Mr. Fred D'Ath, to inspect the rooms. Mr. Baker at first declined, saying that if the people under suspicion could be located during the seance that he would have no doubt. Mr. Moore replied that as he was not responsible for any person in the hotel, he could not satisfy Mr. Baker in that respect. The above mentioned gentlemen then proceeded to "examine" the rooms, and of course they found nothing. During the inspection Mr. Rice suggested the locking of the connecting door between room 49, the bedroom of Niobe and Irma Moore, and room 47, the bedroom of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, which was used as a cabinet. Mr. Moore, however, declined to do so, saying that the children might be suddenly taken sick or become frightened, so Mr. Rice's suggestion unfortunately was overruled. The "Committee" then declared their satisfaction; the lights were turned down and the "seance" began. "Dr." Moore began his usual lecture and did not forget to rake his followers for their doubt and unbelief. He was cut short, however, by Mrs. Moore who sat in room 47, the cabinet, and whispered to him that the "spirits" were suffocating in their confined quarters and could not be released until the people commenced to sing, the noise of which would drown the moving of the bureaus. The seance proceeded and before the opening hymn was finished Martin Teitzen appeared in the full regalia of an Indian Chief, Big Moose, a guide to J. Wallace Bunker. Immediately after this Mrs. Strickland appeared to Mrs. Taylor as her mother, and Tessie White to Col. Chas. McArthur as his adopted Indian daughter, Bluebell. After this the farce went merrily along, and was voted by all a huge success, thus once more establishing "The Rev. Dr.'s" reputation, but still leaving a little suspicion in the minds of a few.

Perhaps the explaining away of who "Pansy" really is will be a help to some of those who still believe in the "Rev." H. Moore. "Pansy," who is the "Chief Guide" of the "Rev. Dr.," is supposed to be the spirit of a little Indian girl who passed over some sixty years ago, at the age of four; she always "returns" in the form of a little child as she claims that by coming back in a childish form she is able to win the sympathy and affections of the admirers better than if she came in a grown up form. This is as the "Dr." explains it. His daughter Niobe, aged 12, performs the "Pansy" large form, and the younger daughter, Irma, aged 7, takes the part of the small "Pansy." The children never do any talking; Mr. Moore being an excellent mimic produces a childish voice which is supposed to emanate from "Pansy" as she sits on "her Moories" knee (this is what she terms him), and addresses her admirers.

Previous to the camp, "Pansy" promised that the seance would be held in a large tent there. Col. Chas. McArthur's article in the Light of Truth of the latter part of July gives a good description of what occurred at that one and only "materializing seance" as seer from the inside, but he makes a mistake when he stated that Frank Montske, Martin Teitzen and Louis J. Cohen, were in the audience, for "Pansy" appointed these persons, with the addition of Chas. Moore, to act as patrols to keep watch on the outside of the tent while the seance went on.

On the evening of this seance the confederates went upstairs immediately after supper and donned their spirit garb which was concealed by their ordinary clothing; they then came down and mingled with the rest of the people on the grounds. Shortly after eight o'clock the lights were put out in the tent and the "seance" began. During the first hymn, Mr. Chas. Moore obligingly pulled the stakes and raised the back wall of the tent where the cabinet was situated, and allowed Mrs. H. E. Strickland, Tessie White, Louis J. Cohen, Martin Teitjen, Frank Montske and the two Moore children, Niobe and Irma, to enter. They then prepared to give the promised seance which passed off successfully, the spooks getting out a few minutes before Moore allowed the lights to be turned up. This seance, however, was the last of its kind held in the tent, as the natives of the district proved too curious for the "Rev. Dr." and he dared not repeat the performance for fear of discovery, so he had to go back to room 45.

Mr. McArthur asserts (in the Light of Truth in the article previously mentioned) that 17 spirit forms appeared at one time on the platform at this seance. I am able to state on good authority that there were only the forms of the confederates, the "medium," Mrs. Moore, and the two children, thus making in all eight "very material forms."

When "materializing seances" were not going on at room 45, the "Rev." S. O. Fenner, the famous trance ballot test medium, and wife of Philadelphia, held "etherealizing" seances in that room. Mrs. Strickland performed the "ethereal forms" at all of these seances held by Fenner. At one of these, Col. Charles McArthur, Lieut. W. Sheppard, U. S. A., Milo Grant Rice, Mrs. Etta L. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Baker, Mr. Isaac Mann, Miss Jennie Marland, Mrs. Sarah Walters, Mrs. Von Kanzler, Mrs. Pills, and Mrs. Hannah Beard, were present. Mrs. Strickland appeared as the "ethereal forms"; to Col. McArthur as his wife, children and Indian; to Lieut. Sheppard, U. S. A., as his sweetheart, Bessie Lynch; to Milo Rice as his wife Anna and daughter; to Mrs. Taylor as her pet Indian Walbo, her mother and daughter; to the Bakers, as his mother Margaret L. Baker; to Mr. Mann as his wife and daughter; to Miss Maitland as her brother; to Mrs. Von Kanzler, Sarah Walters, as their mother; to Mrs. Pills as her guide Bertha; to Mrs. Hannah Beard, as her sister Carrie, Guides Posseus, Powers, Snow Rock, and her adopted spirit daughter Lottie.

The forms of course being "ethereal" could not talk, and Mr. and Mrs. Fenner kindly officiated by trumpet as each form appeared. Mrs. Walters and Mrs. Von Kanzler, about this time, wrote a note to Williard J. Hull of the Light of Truth informing him that they had at different times seen the persons suspected enter Moore's rooms on seance night in their spirit robes, and denouncing him (Moore) as a trickster, but Mr. Hull instead of publishing the letter sent by the ladies forwarded it to the "Rev. Dr." with a copy of his answer to them, and a note; nothing further has been heard of this in the Light of Truth.

ROBERT H. CROWE.
1788 Amsterdam Ave.,
New York City, N. Y.

WHEN THE SOUL IS FULL OF WOE.

Respectfully dedicated to Georgia Gladys Cooley, of Chicago, and Eliza Beth Schauss, of Toledo, O., each of whom has recently parted with a mother, and each an active speaker and medium in the out-field work.

It is hard to smile with gladness unto all the world around,
When the bursting heart of sadness is in teardrops almost drowned;
It is hard to bring much sunlight to the souls in trouble bowed,
When one's own life seems so darkened by the presence of a cloud.

It is hard to give sweet comfort, with one's own soul full of woe;
It is hard upon the moment to let all one's sadness go;
It is hard to calm tornadoes in one's own life when they come,
And breathe sweet cheer to others who in sadness are struck dumb.

It is easy to spread splendor and good feeling when the heart
With its rhythmic, vibrant pulsing, plays its full harmonic part;
But with sunlight almost banished from one's spirit for the time
By the death of a sweet mother, there seems little left sublime.

But to think of her arisen to a brighter, purer sphere
Than she ever could have entered while her spirit lingered here
Seems to touch a chord responsive and a smile excludes the cloud,
And sweet flowers and bright sunlight tint the darkness of death's shroud.

It were better to go smiling from the tomb of grief and woe,
And resume again your labors ere the
teardrops cease to flow,
For the world is starving ever for the comfort you can give,
In the proof that their dear kindred in a higher life shall live.

But 'tis hard to smile with gladness unto all the world around,
When one's bursting heart of sadness is in teardrops almost drowned;
And 'tis hard to bring bright sunlight to the souls in trouble bowed,
When one's own life seems so darkened by the presence of a cloud.

DR. T. WILKINS.

ANNIVERSARY POEM.

During this anniversary season,
my mind dwelling upon it, I received clairaudiently the following poem which I believe was given me by James G. Clark:

Arise and hail the glorious day
"Foretold by seer and sung in story,"
When error's fortress would give way
And all the world be crowned with glory.
Dark clouds have rolled from o'er the sky,
The sun is rising in its splendor,
Which drives away the darksome night,
And gives the dawn rays warm and tender.

And with the night has risen and flown
An ominous brood, on noisesome
pinion,
They hate the light, and will not stay,
And hasten back to hell's dominion
Old superstitions bald and grey,
Dogmas and doctrines long time
cherished,
Have risen and flown at dawn of day,
Or in the light of Truth have perished

Let them begone! The darksome brood
Will not be bound by error longer;
The soul of man sees Freedom's dawn;
The light of Truth is mightier,
stronger;
She comes, and on her radiant brow
Shineth the light of love in splendor
And man receives her message now,
In words of love so sweet and tender.

She points, and through the mists that hang,
We see the faces, long-time vanished;
They live, they speak, they love, they know,
Thus are our fears forever banished.
Let us rejoice and hold our feast,
Our Easter and our Christmas ever,
Arisen from power of creed and priest
Salvation comes by soul endeavor.

O, souls immortal, who have wrought
This precious boon to sorrowing mortals,
Accept our heartfelt tribute now,
For throwing wide the heavenly portals.
Help us to hold the banner high,
With its silken folds of white unfurled,
Until the wrong shall disappear,
And freedom crown a suffering world. MRS. R. S. LILLIE.

An Excellent Test.

In New Hampshire where I was raised, there was a young girl of my acquaintance who died soon after I came West. Planchette will write very readily under my hand. One night I was writing and this girl came and wrote for me. I asked her (mentally) if she could be seen if we had a medium. She said she could. There was living in the same house with us Mrs. E., a very good clairvoyant. I said, "Mrs. E. is coming in this evening, will you show yourself to her?"

She said, "I'll try."

I then said, "You stand at my left."

She said, "I will."

In the evening Mrs. E. came and sat conversing with my wife. I sat on the opposite side of the room about twelve feet away. Mrs. E. stopped in the midst of her conversation and said "Mr. Stevens, there is a young lady standing at your left." She then described her perfectly.

Now Mrs. E. never saw or even heard of the young lady. There is no one (except myself and wife) west of New Hampshire who ever saw her or even heard of her. Mrs. E. was not in a trance state; she just broke in on her regular conversation, and after saying what she did, resumed conversation with my wife. I asked her afterwards how she could describe the young lady so well. She said, "Why, I saw her just as plain as I now see you."

C. N. STEVENS.

One solitary philosopher may be great, virtuous and happy in the midst of poverty, but not a whole nation.—Isaac Iselin.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is last year's nest from which the bird has flown.—H. W. Beecher.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 27, 1907 NO. 909

Spiritualism Defended.

Even In Far-Off India It Has Noble Defenders.

To the Editor of the "Englishman," Calcutta, India:

Sir.—As a spiritualist I would like to answer C. M. G.'s letter appearing in your issue of the 24th inst.

Regarding his statement that "the theory of man's inherent immortality" is itself anti-Christian I would refer this modern Sadducee to Christ's answer to the Sadducees of his day vide Mark XII Chapter, 26th and 27th verses. "For as touching the dead that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him saying I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. He is not the God of the dead but of the living."

Regarding it being wrong to hold communication with the so-called dead? or as "C. M. G." puts it "one is forbidden to deal with familiar spirits," which by the way admits that spirits or rather the so-called dead? are conscious, I would refer him to the 9th Chapter of St. Mark in which, what we would now call "a spiritualistic seance," was held by Christ and his disciples, and that according to the 4th verse of that Chapter "There appeared unto them Elias with Moses," and also Christ after his death appeared to his disciples when they were in a room with all the doors closed or in other words he "materialised." So that Christ both when he was alive held communication with the so-called dead? and when he was dead"? or as spiritualists say "passed on to a higher life" he communicated and held intercourse with his disciples and if we would follow his example we should do the same.

Regarding the statement that it is "the devil and the fallen angels that represent the dead relatives and friends of people," when a spirit communicates with us either by knocks on a table, or by writing or speaking through a trance medium or by any other method we do, as St. Paul advises us to do, "try the spirits," and ask them to prove that they are the persons they represent themselves as being or in other words, prove their identity, and if "C. M. G." or any of your readers would like to know how this is done I would refer them to the following books as it would take too much time and space to explain:—

1. Mrs. Piper and the Society for Psychical Research with an introduction by Sir Oliver Lodge.

This book gives the methods and results of the British Society for Psychical Research in their investigation of the trance medium Mrs. Piper which investigation extended over a period of more than 14 years.

2. Researches in Modern Spiritualism by Sir William Crookes.

3. Miracles and Modern Spiritualism by Alfred Russell Wallace the friend and fellow worker of Darwin, and numerous other books by Dr. Peebles, E. Wallis, A, Smedley, etc., etc.

C. C. A.

Dr. Peebles Replies.

To the Editor of the "Englishman," Calcutta, India—Sir: In your issue of January 24th my name is mentioned and a direct attack is made upon Spiritualism by one "C. M. G." whose full name and address should have been given. I am sure that your combined liberalism and hospitality will allow me a reply.

This writer who so vigorously attacks Spiritualism has all the religious ear-marks of the Seventh Day Adventists, a small sect with its original head-center in Battle Creek, Michigan, where I have lived much of the time for fifty years. I personally knew Elder and Eldress White, the latter was a visionist who professed to have visions from God stating that the world was about to end and Jesus Christ was to immediately come in His Glory, destroying the wicked and saving the elect. These prophesying have all along proved complete failures. This "C. M. G.," with all Adventists, believes that there is nothing naturally immortal in a man—that he dies as does the mosquito or the grass-hopper—that Plato and Socrates, Tennyson and Abraham Lincoln with the countless millions of the great and the good of the past are dead—unconsciously dead and will remain dead till some future resurrection, which will take place no one knows when. It is recorded that Jesus said:—"Now that the dead are raised Moses showed at the bush" and so forth; and Moses and Elias "appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration," appeared and "talked." Other passages of the Scriptures teach a similar doctrine. However, this matter of "the immortality of the soul," this Adventist must settle with all Christian denominations, for they all believe the conscious soul to be immortal. Personally, I never use the phrase "immortal soul" considering the phrase the "immortal spirit," a much stronger and more potent word to express the continuity of conscious life. God is called the "Father of the Spirits of all flesh." Jesus upon the Cross cried out into "Into Thy hands I commend My Spirit." In Job we read thus: "In whose hand (nephesh) is the soul of every animal, and the (ruach) spirit of all flesh that is human." I quote from memory but I am sure I give the correct idea.

"The central truth of Spiritualism is that the dead are conscious," says this "C. M. G." This remark of his is but half of the truth. The central truth of Spiritualism, is that the conscious spirit the "atma" in man, is immortal and has the power after death, under proper conditions, to communicate with human beings. This writer also says that it is "forbidden" in the Bible to converse or "deal with familiar spirits." But surely, the Bible would not condemn what did not exist. This class of Bible texts clearly prove so far as they are authoritative that Spiritualism was a fact in Jewish times. It is a recorded fact in all Bibles. The Shastras abound in the facts and phenomena of spiritual manifestations. The most learned men of the world today such as Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge the distinguished Alfred R. Wallace, the compeer of Charles Darwin, the distinguished W. T. Stead, editor of the London "Review of Reviews," Professor Hyslop of the New York University and I might quote scores of similar illustrious men who after years of investigation have become pronounced Spiritualists.

"All heathen religions," writes this critic, "teach a conscious existence in death, and therefore, are susceptible to the influence of Spiritualism." "Heathen religions" in so far as they teach "the conscious existence of the spirit in an after death, prove themselves to be infinitely superior to the soul-sleeping doctrine of the Adventists, or the endless hell torments of Calvinistic sectarians.

"That Spiritualism is a doctrine of the devil is admitted by some of its own advocates." This is a shameful false statement; for Spiritualists do not believe there is a personal semi-omnipotent devil roaming up and down the earth deceiving people. There is quite enough deception and lying and slandering and moral wickedness afloat in the world without any personal devil to incite these emotions.

By the way, who made the Seventh Day Adventist devil? When God pronounced His works "all good" did this include the devil? What intelligent, rational man ever saw the devil? If the devil through mediums proves a future existence to atheists and materialists and exhorts people to be good and spiritually minded is he not to be honored both for his industry and his high moral teachings? I never knew of but one person that ever actually saw this personal devil and that was Eldress E. G. White, the corner-stone visionist of the Seventh Day Adventists. She declared that she saw him and that he "still bears a kingly form. His features ("Early Writings," page 24) are still noble . . . that brow which was once so noble I particularly noticed . . . His eyes were cunning, shy, and showed great penetration. His frame was large, but the flesh hung loosely, about his face and hands. As I beheld him, his chin was resting upon his left hand. He appeared to be in deep thought. A smile was upon his countenance which made me tremble," and so forth.

In line with this she further says, "Satan was seeking a dispute with Jesus, concerning his being the Son of God, and Satan, to manifest his power, (page 27) carried Jesus (she does not say just how he carried him) to Jerusalem and set him upon the pinnacle of the temple and there tempted him." Now mark! This Seventh Day Adventist devil sometimes "smiles," has a kingly form, a noble brow, a receding forehead, cunning eyes, and a "large frame with the flesh hanging loosely about his hands;" and yet strange—strange to tell "seven" of "Him"—seven of these monsters "were cast out of Mary Magdalene." These are Luke's words "Out of whom (Mary) went seven devils." Adventists insist that we must take the Bible just as it reads. And yet, when we read in the 20th chapter of Isaiah that "the Lord commanded his servant Isaiah to walk naked and bare-foot three years for a sign" and so forth, they think there must have here been a mistranslation. This writer in quoting from that old pessimistic agnostic (Ec. 9:6) was not in a sense so very wide from the mark, simply because there are no "dead." In fact, there is no absolute death in God's universe. Modern science shows that the very corpuscles that constitute the atom are alive. God is conscious, energy and life "imminent" in all the universe. What we in our blindness call death, the angels call birth, And physically death is simply the severing of the co-partnership existing between the physical body and the conscious spirit. To this end it is reported that Paul said "there is a natural body and a spiritual body." Theosophists term it the "astral body" and the American Transcendentalists term it the "etheric body." It is this spiritual body that aided by the intelligent spirits of the Heavens can so manipulate the auras, emanations, atomis, electrons, ions and other subtle substances as to produce what are termed the "Materialisation of spirits." This I have repeatedly seen, and seen them also after a few moments, dematerialise and vanish. This people, this little narrow-minded sect of Seventh Day Adventists whom the Evangelical denominations do not recognise as orthodox Christians, are called in America "Soul-sleepers," of "Devil-admirers"? because they insist that Spiritualism, mesmerism, hypnotism, clairvoyance and kindred occult phenomena are all the works of the devil.

Spiritualism is not as this nameless "C. M. G." asserts "anti-Christ," nor is it anti-Krishna, but is a well-established fact—a blessed truth—proving a future existence, comforting the sick and brushing away the mourner's tears. Well did the illustrious Alfred R. Wallace, pensioned by the late Queen Victoria, say, "My position, therefore, is that the phenomena of Spiritualism in their entirety do not require further confirmation. They are proven quite as well as any facts are proven in other sciences."

And the eminent Dr. Thomson J. Hudson writes in his Law of Psychic Phenomena, (page 206) thus—"The man who denies the phenomena of Spiritualism is not entitled to be called a sceptic; he is simply ignorant; and it would be a hopeless task to attempt to enlighten him."

J. M. PEEBLES, M. D.

NOT FOR THYSELF.

Not for thyself, O violet fair,
To bud and bloom and die;
The maiden plucks thee for her hair,
In children's hands you lie.

Not for thyself, alone, dear bird,
Is sung that plaintive song;
Some tender human soul is stirred,
As thy sweet notes prolong.

Not for thyself, pure little child,
Those dimpled cheeks and hands;
Those tresses bright, and blue eyes mild,—
A mother understands.

Not for thyself, poor, tired heart;
Toil on and hope anew;
Some loved one, of your life a part,
Is glad because of you.

ALICE M. WARREN.

Proctorsville, Vt.

Dr. Hidden and Spiritualism.

Some Mistakes and Corrections Noted by Harrison D. Barrett.

Editor Daily News:—My attention has been called to your review of an address given by Dr. C. W. Hidden of your city, in the Dudley street Baptist Church, Boston, Feb. 17. As Editor-at-Large of our movement, and president of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States of America and Dominion of Canada, I respectfully request space in your columns to reply to certain statements that the speaker made on the occasion in question. There are more than 300,000 avowed Spiritualists in America, who are actively supporting the movement as their souls' religion. There are at least 1,500,000 unattached believers and investigators, who accord Spiritualism a quasi support, as it seems to them, at times, to be the truth they need.

Dr. Hidden said many kind things of Spiritualism and its followers with which neither they nor the writer have any exceptions to take. Some of his statements are not clear, while others are quite misleading. Let me place Spiritualism's central claim in its true light before your readers. It claims to be a religion, pure and undefiled, impressing its followers to be doers of good deeds, and inspiring them to maintain pure moral characters before all of the world. "Good works and the maintenance of pure moral characters," as laid down by the Apostle James, means something to them. With this statement from the only New Testament writer who ever presumed to give a definition of religion, the Spiritualists link the recognition of God.

The following is our "Declaration of Principles," adopted at our National Convention, held in Chicago in October, 1899:

1. We believe in Infinite Intelligence.

2. We believe that the phenomena of nature, physical and psychical, are expressions of Infinite Intelligence.

3. We affirm that a correct understanding of such phenomena and living in harmony therewith, constitute the true religion.

4. We affirm that the process of life is not interrupted by the change called death, but that man lives on, a conscious being beyond the tomb.

5. We affirm that communion between the seen and unseen worlds is a fact scientifically proven by the phenomena of Spiritualism.

6. We believe that the highest morality is contained in the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

The foregoing is offered in evidence of the claim that to all intelligent Spiritualists, Spiritualism is a religion. Let me at this point further correct Dr. Hidden. No intelligent Spiritualist presumes to claim that psychic phenomena, or demonstrations, prove the immortality of the Soul. They assert, with truth, that such phenomena only prove that men and women, as intelligent entities, survive the change called death. No living being can prove the soul's immortality until it can be shown that at least one intelligent entity has lived eternally. This is a mathematical impossibility. Spiritualism, however, does affirm the eternality of God, and declares that man is the child of God, hence is as old and will continue to live as long as his parent lives. In this sense only, does Spiritualism have aught to say of a demonstrated Immortality. When the existence of Infinite Intelligence, is accepted, then, by inference and logical reasoning, man's eternal duration may be declared.

With Dr. Hidden's denunciations of fraud, of counterfeiting, of the dark, commercial seance, and other deceptions practiced by tricksters in the name of Spiritualism, every true Spiritualist is in full accord, with this advantage on the side of the believer—he is trying to clean out the Spiritualistic temple, and has no time to mind other people's business. Had Dr. Hidden, as a Spiritualist, worked heart and hand with the anti-fraud, anti-commercial elements in our own ranks, it would have been more to his credit than it was to openly consort with some of them for the sake of official position, and possible leadership. I want to be just to him, however, and must say here that he has always been an open opponent of the shams practiced under the cloak of materialization, trumpet and other dark seance nonsense. When he was a Spiritualist, it is known that he did little or nothing to remove the evils of which he complains.

Against the true teachings of Jesus, the honest Spiritualist has not one word to say. That Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism are branches of the same great tree of Truth, no intelligent person among us will deny. That Spiritualism, as a power for good in the world is on the wane, any intelligent person can see is a mistake. It is moving scientists, philosophers, and even the theologians as they never have been moved before. The intelligent ministers of the present day are turning to its sacred truths for bread with which to feed the despairing members of their flocks. It is softening pulpit utterances as never before in the history of the ministry, and is comforting untold millions as they stand weeping beside the biers of their beloved dead, with the uplifting assurance that the departed live beyond the grave. It has put scientific Atheism and its twin brother, Materialism, to flight, and glorified the grave as the open door to a brighter world. Its motto is "Equal rights for all, special privileges to none," while its watchword on earth and in spirit spheres is "Progression."

It has been called upon to aid Science, and has shown the children of men that sulphur can be put to far better uses than to be wasted in burning those non-material things—human souls—throughout all time. It has proved itself the strong ally, the genuine friend of philosophy by giving it a true basis, far removed from the one offered by Materialism. It has become the expounder of ethics, and led the way to a higher civilization for all mankind over the broad road of duty, on each side of which every traveler will find the beautiful flowers of love and sympathy to inspire him to press forward. It has revealed most clearly to the sight of all who have eyes to see, the perfect law of consequences, and demonstrated that each mortal must reap as he sows. It has told every traveler over the roadway of life, that there never was and is not now any forgiveness for sin, save that obtained by each individual through his personal efforts to perfect his character. In fine, Spiritualism is the religion of life, here and hereafter. It has gone into the laboratory of God, and there in the rare alembic of purity, rewrought the lessons of life eternal. It has rolled the stone away from the sepulchers of millions of human souls, and bidden the smiling angels of Love and Wisdom to come forth. It is God's truest revelation to man—a religion by which to live—a religion to sustain men as they graduate from the world of sense into the radiant spheres of the supernal world.

Yours for truth,

HARRISON D. BARRETT,
President N. S. A. and Editor-at-Large.

Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas.

The word God is to me a sound conveying no clear or distinct affirmation. —Chas. Bradlaugh.

Any person who attempts to define the absolute, to describe that which lies below phenomena, attempts the impossible.—B. F. Underwood.

From the most remote period of primitive man, the various races have had a belief that there must be something outside, independent and superior to, the universe, and from this absolutely impossible hypothesis all of the various forms of religion have arose. This work dilates on this idea and shows that there is absolutely no exception in civilized and semi-civilized races of man.

In Huxley's "Man's Place in Nature," this assumption of a God does not occur. The word "God" is not within its pages.

This work will be found beneficial to all inquiring minds that are eager to have a full and fair understanding of those mystic nonentities that have in all ages been a fetter upon the intellectuality and individuality of man.

The Gods must be dethroned, and man, instead of gazing into void and empty space, will sooner or later realize the necessity of his own attention.

The Vedas is the the oldest bible in existence. The Shasters, Puranas and Zendavesta are of very ancient date, and are held in sacred remembrance by millions.

The author, Hudson Tuttle, has clearly set forth the ideas of these ancient bibles in shape so that the reader with due diligence can comprehend them. Man in all past ages and the present has been the prey of priests and kings. A few heroic souls have stemmed the tide against the encroachments of these, and labored to free the mind from the thraldom of superstition. Man has not only had imaginary gods but virgin-born saviors as well. This may be fully realized by reading the work in question. But the Jewish Savior is considered of the most importance. Did he ever live, or was he a myth? This question has engaged the attention of some of the most learned critics. To my mind I must confess that while there is no contemporary history to substantiate the claim, I think he lived. There must have been some foundation for the New Testament.

But the accounts set forth therein are so contradictory within themselves they cannot be a solid foundation to stand upon. This matter is very clearly brought out in Waite's History ch. xxvii, a work that ought not to ever be allowed to go out of print. Let Mr. Waite be heard:

"It is true that Jesus himself at no time during his preliminary examination, either before the council or before Pilate or on his way to execution, or at the crucifixion, gave any intimation that he was about to die for the sins of the world."—5th edition, page 531.

The greatest Biblical scholars hold that the four gospels were not in existence in the first century. How, then was it that the sayings and doings of this man were kept and handed down to the writers of Matthew, Mark and Luke, saying nothing of John, which was of later date.

"Was Christ Crucified?" by Austin Bierbower, a Jewish lawyer of Chicago, labors to the end to prove that there were no laws in those days in that country demanding a crucifixion; if this an irrefutable fact, the crucifixion of Jesus Christ is a falsehood. It has proven to be a worthless tax of great scholars and critics from Irenæus to the present day, and all of these labors have been and will continue to be futile of demonstration or even proof as to the origin of the four gospels.

It is held that the Savior was to be of the blood and seed and root of David. If that is true, he was of human origin and forever vitiates the claim of an immaculate conception, and being the son of any ghost real or imaginary. Matthew says he was born in the days of Herod, the king; Luke says he was born in the days of Cyrenius, some nine years later. See Waite, 3rd edition, page 322; also Dr. Brown's Researches in Oriental History, page 213. Let the most learned scholar of Protestant Germany be heard, Schleiermacher, "the most indispensable conditions are wanting. No one has yet met with the slightest degree of success." He means in attempting to reconcile their chronological absurdities.

Mr. Tuttle has endeavored to portray this matter to the understanding of the English reading public; his work is of research and critical examination, and deserves a liberal patronage from the public; all who diligently read its pages will know more of the absurdities of the mystic gods and saviors of past ages. Let Waite and Brown be read in connection, which will furnish much valuable matter for the consideration of all students of religious lore. B. G. FENTON.

Chardon, Ohio.

Heart keeping is the secret of happy housekeeping.—Anon.

REFLECTIONS.

As Presented by Miss Elizabeth Harlow.

To the Editor:—A late Progressive Thinker has so much in it that has set me to thinking, I wish to express myself as well.

First, Mr. Barrett's splendid article that has run through two issues, is one that should make every true Spiritualist think, and deeply too. We certainly have the broadest concept of life yet unfolded to man, and if truth is worth anything, it is worth fighting for if necessary. That such fraud is practiced in its name, is most dreadful to me. It proves one thing, that the individual who practices it has no realization of its teachings, for if the law of cause and effect is a fact, these very creatures that are making a business of deception are weaving around their own spirit nature a web that will be most dreadful to them when they stand face to face with themselves the morning after death.

I firmly believe that all the dollars they have reaped from such practice will become as needles on which they will find themselves resting; and the more suave and sympathetic they dress up their fraud to get into the confidence of their dupes, the more dreadful will be their own state.

I know of no crime so heinous as to play upon the heart-strings of love and grief for money, as the notorious Moore did, and as many more do whom I might mention, that are not in the field of materialization.

As to those who have left us, it is, indeed, a sad commentary upon us. But is Spiritualism or Spiritualists ALL to blame? I know full well that the Cause does not support TALENT and WORTH as much as it should, and no one deplores it more than I, and with Mr. Barrett I say the days of martyrdom are past, and the age of tramp Spiritualism is PAST. So long as we will consent to be tramps, so long we will get a tramp's portion and place. I WANT and Demand MORE for myself and the CAUSE I represent. To the men and women who had others dependent upon them and could not get support on our platform, I have nothing to say; but there are two instances which come to my mind I would use for illustration: One is our friend Jamieson, who converted our Moses. It is always amusing to me, but as well disgusting, when I read the excuses he makes for leaving the Cause. To me it is evident he did not intelligently understand the teachings of Spiritualism; if he had, no matter how many fake materializations he ran against, he would have been a Spiritualist still. To me, if every medium in the country is proven a fraud; I AM A SPIRITUALIST; there is no other sane view of life to me. So if Mr. Jamieson had no deeper grasp of this truth than that, it was a most fortunate exchange for the Cause when Moses came in and he went out. We have lived and grown in spite of it all. The other one is the "Backslider" you quote this week. I happen to know this gentleman and his history all the way from the humble home of boyhood up through the days of being a Temperance lecturer, a kind of Salvation Army preacher, into a Doctor, playing patent medicines, or trying to, on into Spiritualism. Wherever he has been he has created a "brain-storm" for a little while and then has sunk into oblivion. Well do I remember the days at Lake Pleasant when he and Bradley Newell created such a furor, and during it they lined their pockets.

He personally said to me once when we were in Cummington, Mass., that I was a fool to work for what I did; that such opportunities for getting money never lasted long, and we must use them; and be ready for the next that came. It is a well-known fact if it had not been for this very Doctor, and two or three since his day, The Waverly Home for Aged Spiritualists at Boston, would now be paid for. I feel we are better off with him as a backslider.

I feel that Spiritualism is not all to blame. There are so many that can work for awhile when everything is going fine, but when the tests come, they are found wanting. "Any dead rat can float with the tide, but it takes a good live one to go against it."

Just a word to Mr. Barrett. No one deplores "big words" more than I. A lot of words, big or little, never set the people thinking, but the man or woman who has a few ideas, even though you do not agree with them, always do. And dear Mrs. Luther was the Master who went before and made the trail that I might follow after and build. She would never have been the iconoclast she was had it not been for the "intensity of her Soul," you speak of, and I feel she did leave much in the place where she took away.

And with Mr. Barrett, I feel the Spiritualists are not devoted enough, to try, at least, to LIVE THE LIFE of the Spirit, and this will be the one condition to draw us together and make us better. I plead for more vital effort in living what we teach. To me religion is simply finding our spiritual place in the spiritual Universe. This found, all is well.

ELIZABETH HARLOW.

Wanted—Crumbs of Knowledge.

To the Editor:—I am still seeking for truth and knowledge upon the subject of reincarnation.

In The Progressive Thinker, No. 906, Jessie S. Pettit-Flint, in "A Reply to Mr. Dague," says, "My experience and studies of thirty years lead me to accept re-incarnation as a fact," also, "I gladly share all the crumbs of knowledge I have been able to gather in this great school of life."

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I will kindly ask our friend to share "the crumbs of knowledge" she has gathered on this subject—with the readers of The Progressive Thinker, giving the full particulars of the whys and wherefores that make her such a firm believer in the theory.

I have not gathered one crumb of evidence in three score years, and have never met a person who could give me one.

L. P. WHEELOCK.

Madison, Wis.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

Startling Prophecies.

Giving the Views of a Spirit and a Mortal.

Mr. W. J. Colville is a Spiritualist lecturer, and claims to get all his ideas from the spirit world. He says that he never prepares his lectures, and doesn't know beforehand what he is going to say. He pours forth a flood of eloquent discourses for two hours, concluding with an impromptu poem on any subject selected by the audience.

On a recent Sunday (at San Diego) he gave an interesting address on the "New Heaven and the New Earth," with especial reference to the sensational prophecies made by Mr. Lee Spangler of New York, who has predicted the coming destruction of Chicago, Boston and New York, and that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans will be swallowed up in great chasms to appear in the bed of these oceans, the result of which will be that this globe (like the planet Mars) will have no more oceans, and the dry beds of the Pacific and Atlantic will be available for man's use, occupation and cultivation.

Upon the vast and fertile plains thus restored to man's use a new and higher civilization on earth is to be developed, and all nations are to live there in peace and harmony.

Inasmuch as many people are liable to be alarmed and disturbed by the terrible nature of these predicted catastrophes, it is interesting to know what a prominent lecturer claiming to be the inspired mouthpiece of the spirit world, has to say on the subject of the predictions.

Mr. Colville said: "I don't believe these visions are to be taken literally, any more than St. John's visions in the Revelations are to be taken literally.

"I have never had any vision of Chicago and New York being swallowed up. These prophecies are largely exaggerated."

Then he went on to say that great changes on earth are usually preceded by signs and wonders, both inwardly and outwardly and the inward and outward changes were connected. He even hinted that in the past the surface of the earth had caved in owing to the errors of mankind, and made the startling statement that a planet formerly existed between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, and was destroyed through the sons of the people disobeying God's laws, and the fragments of this planet now form the asteroids.

There is no fatalism in prophecy. All we can do is to point out the tendency of the age and foresee that certain results must follow if a certain course is followed.

Edward Bellamy wrote two epoch-making books, "Looking Backward" and "Equality," the purport of which was to show that if we work together co-operatively (as the angels do in heaven), we can establish a new heaven on earth, and Ignatius Donnelly wrote another book entitled, "Caesar's Column," to show that if we pursue the life of selfish competition, strife and disharmony it would result in disaster and revolution.

But the world to-day is in a state of great upheaval and unrest—strikes, lockouts, and war between labor and capital!

A change is coming over the minds of the people. Instead of blind worship of mammon the day is coming when to be unduly rich will be considered a calamity. The people are turning from their idols; brightened by rays from the celestial spheres a great change for good is beginning, and the upward tendency is increasing. The wise ones will say:

We want no extremes of poverty on the one hand or riches on the other, but a comfortable competency for every one.

This is the ideal for the co-operative commonwealth which is coming. I don't believe in these predicted overwhelming disasters. I don't believe the destruction of San Francisco or any other city is a sign of Divine wrath. There are a great many good people in Chicago and New York, and a great deal of evil, but all cities are pretty much alike in this respect.

All destruction comes from within, and is the natural consequence of our own acts, and not from the external.

Rome was not destroyed by the Vandals from the North; that was merely the natural inevitable consequence of the internal dissensions within the state between patricians and plebeians. The seeds of destruction were first sown within the Roman empire. You can't have a healthy, clear complexion outwardly if you are inwardly diseased.

I admit that a tidal wave is coming, and an upheaval in New York and Chicago, but it is a spiritual upheaval, the result of the present dissatisfaction with political and social conditions, and this will be the new heaven, it will leave the people purer, happier and more united.

All these changes work for good. If sudden death comes from earthquakes and tidal waves, it is not nearly so calamitous as people suppose. Those who are suddenly killed experience no pain, and when they wake up on the other side many of them can't realize that they have passed over.

We are asked, "Why don't the spirits warn us and save the lives of many good people?"

In the first place some people's hides are so thick that no warning will penetrate, and the only thing for them is to experience the calamity; it does them good spiritually; and good people are there because their aid is needed right there, and the helpless ones could not get through without them.

On the other hand others who live in the light are warned away because their time to pass over hasn't come; they are needed here and have other work to do.

I was in San Francisco just before the earthquake, intending to stay three or four weeks, but was peremptorily ordered by the spirit voices to take steamer to New Zealand after only five days in San Francisco. I did so, and the first thing on arrival in New Zealand was to read about the earthquake. I was warned, because my work on earth isn't done yet.

Again I had a similar experience of a warning whilst traveling by rail some years ago in the East. There was a woman on the cars who was clairvoyant. She suddenly called out, "I see a vision of a terrible accident to this train, and I'm going to get out at the next station. I warn all to get out, there's danger along the road."

I got out with her, and as I stood by her on the platform the passengers stood on the cars and laughed and hooted. I told them I preferred to be on the side of safety. Next morning we read in the paper that the train had been wrecked and many injured.

So in San Francisco, just before the earthquake, a woman went along the streets predicting the coming destruction of San Francisco. Of course people thought her crazy, and paid no attention to her; so what is the good of warning people? But these calamities, if they do happen, all work out for good. We are all safe in God's keeping, but it is not pleasant nevertheless to go through some of these experiences, I admit.

I would rather err on the side of credulity than take chances of plunging over a precipice. I would rather pay heed to a prediction than reject all truth.

Chicago and New York will be overturned, I do believe, but it will be spiritually, not necessarily materially.

We are entering on a new cycle in the world's history—we are in a state of interregnum.

Self-seeking and competition means a state of independence—every man for himself. Before the competitive age appeared we were in a state of dependence. Now we are entering on an age of inter-dependence—mutual co-operation. First it was dependence, then independence, and now it is to be inter-dependence, when through the co-operative commonwealth man will work out his destiny and make this earth a terrestial paradise.

When a new age begins, there is a new climate. Siberia had once a tropical climate. Siberia has a great and wonderful future. Russia will be reconstructed and the great slavonic race will show a wonderful development in art, and produce a superb literature. Now she is going through a great scourging and suffering great humiliation, but will emerge into a new and glorious life when the people will rise in their might and shake off the chains of selfdom.

In conclusion the speaker predicted a glorious future for San Francisco and all the Pacific Coast which will be dotted with cities that will be centres of culture and civilization—there will be commercial prosperity, but more valuable than that will be spiritual, moral and artistic development.

[Notes by a Spiritualist who reports the above lecture.]

So far as concerns throwing any light on the probability of Mr. Lee Spangler's prophecy being realized, Mr. Colville's lecture is not satisfactory. He simply says he doesn't know anything; he's had no vision, and he doesn't believe it, and if true it is not a physical calamity that is threatened but a spiritual upheaval; and curiously enough he omits all reference to the prophesied swallowing up of the oceans in the earth's interior — a prophecy which in one respect would be more stupendous in its consequences to mankind than the destruction of a dozen cities, and yet he hints at a change of climate, which latter would assuredly be one result of the disappearance of the oceans.

According to Mr. Colville's own admission, it is quite possible for Mr. Spangler to receive a true vision of future events, whilst Mr. Colville is unable to receive any evidence whatever since he tells us he stood by the side of a clairvoyant who predicted the train wreck which saved his life and yet he foresaw nothing. And further, he justifies himself by saying he preferred "to be on the side of safety" and thus impliedly advises others to be "on the side of safety" in connection with Mr. Lee Spangler's prophecy.

The fact is, it is no reflection on the power of Mr. Colville's spirit guides that they are unable to foretell coming events. By analogy, a man on top of a high mountain can see much further than one on a lower elevation and yet that would be no reflection on the latter, who in turn can see much further than those in the valley, who may be highly moral and good people.

So it is with regard to prophecy. Only the loftiest spirits can foresee coming events, and if they see fit to give warning to mankind they select a suitable mouthpiece like Mr. Spangler who may possess little ability on other lines. In fact, prophecies have sometimes in the past come through the mouths of halfwitted boys or old women.

Mr. Colville's criticism leaves the matter where he found it, though his advice is excellent, and he sees the true spiritual significance of it all.

In the writer's opinion it takes a bold man, in view of the recent earthquakes, to say that these prophecies are impossible. They are quite possible—similar things have happened before—and we ought to take every precaution by removing human lives and treasure from the threatened points to places of safety. To be forewarned is to be forewarned. If the people were to take these prophecies seriously, nine-tenths of the suffering can be obviated. One conclusion we can deduce and that is that California will be a safe refuge for all who can get away.

F. A. BINNEY.

San Diego, Cal.

Who Knows?

Editor Progressive Thinker: Recent developments have led me to ask a question that may, to many, savor of the grotesque. It is this: Can disease be communicated from an excarnate spirit to a living human body?

HERBERT A. HARRELL,
Chicago, Ill.

A good Christian should never go to law; rather should he give up his coat and his pants, and everything that he hath. Churchmen never go to law; they are the most docile and easy creatures in the world on matters of business.—Voltaire.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., APRIL 27, 1907 NO. 909

Spiritualism Defended.

Even In Far-Off India It Has Noble Defenders.

To the Editor of the "Englishman," Calcutta, India:

Sir.—As a spiritualist I would like to answer C. M. G.'s letter appearing in your issue of the 24th instant.

Regarding his statement that "the theory of man's inherent immortality" is itself anti-Christian I would refer this modern Sadducee to Christ's answer to the Sadducees of his day vide Mark XII Chapter, 26th and 27th verses. "For as touching the dead that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him saying I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. He is not the God of the dead but of the living."

Regarding it being wrong to hold communication with the so-called dead? or as "C. M. G." puts it "one is forbidden to deal with familiar spirits," which by the way admits that spirits or rather the so-called dead? are conscious, I would refer him to the 9th Chapter of St. Mark in which, what we would now call "a spiritualistic seance," was held by Christ and his disciples, and that according to the 4th verse of that Chapter "There appeared unto them Elias with Moses," and also Christ after his death appeared to his disciples when they were in a room with all the doors closed or in other words he "materialised." So that Christ both when he was alive held communication with the so-called dead? and when he was dead"? or as spiritualists say "passed on to a higher life" he communicated and held intercourse with his disciples and if we would follow his example we should do the same.

Regarding the statement that it is "the devil and the fallen angels that represent the dead relatives and friends of people," when a spirit communicates with us either by knocks on a table, or by writing or speaking through a trance medium or by any other method we do, as St. Paul advises us to do, "try the spirits," and ask them to prove that they are the persons they represent themselves as being or in other words, prove their identity, and if "C. M. G." or any of your readers would like to know how this is done I would refer them to the following books as it would take too much time and space to explain:—

1. Mrs. Piper and the Society for Psychical Research with an introduction by Sir Oliver Lodge.

This book gives the methods and results of the British Society for Psychical Research in their investigation of the trance medium Mrs. Piper which investigation extended over a period of more than 14 years.

2. Researches in Modern Spiritualism by Sir William Crookes.

3. Miracles and Modern Spiritualism by Alfred Russell Wallace the friend and fellow worker of Darwin, and numerous other books by Dr. Peebles, E. Wallis, A. Smedley, etc., etc.

C. C. A.

Dr. Peebles Replies.

To the Editor of the "Englishman," Calcutta, India—Sir: In your issue of January 24th my name is mentioned and a direct attack is made upon Spiritualism by one "C. M. G." whose full name and address should have been given. I am sure that your combined liberalism and hospitality will allow me a reply.

This writer who so vigorously attacks Spiritualism has all the religious ear-marks of the Seventh Day Adventists, a small sect with its original head-center in Battle Creek, Michigan, where I have lived much of the time for fifty years. I personally knew Elder and Eldress White, the latter was a visionist who professed to have visions from God stating that the world was about to end and Jesus Christ was to immediately come in His Glory, destroying the wicked and saving the elect. These prophesying have all along proved complete failures. This "C. M. G.," with all Adventists, believes that there is nothing naturally immortal in a man—that he dies as does the mosquito or the grass-hopper—that Plato and Socrates, Tennyson and Abraham Lincoln with the countless millions of the great and the good of the past are dead—unconsciously dead and will remain dead till some future resurrection, which will take place no one knows when. It is recorded that Jesus said:—"Now that the dead are raised Moses showed at the bush" and so forth; and Moses and Elias "appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration," appeared and "talked." Other passages of the Scriptures teach a similar doctrine. However, this matter of "the immortality of the soul," this Adventist must settle with all Christian denominations, for they all believe the conscious soul to be immortal. Personally, I never use the phrase "immortal soul" considering the phrase the "immortal spirit," a much stronger and more potent word to express the continuity of conscious life. God is called the "Father of the Spirits of all flesh." Jesus upon the Cross cried out into "Into Thy hands I commend My Spirit." In Job we read thus: "In whose hand (nephesh) is the soul of every animal, and the (ruach(spirit of all flesh that is human." I quote from memory but I am sure I give the correct idea.

"The central truth of Spiritualism is that the dead are conscious," says this "C. M. G." This remark of his is but half of the truth. The central truth of Spiritualism, is that the conscious spirit the "atma" in man, is immortal and has the power after death, under proper conditions, to communicate with human beings. This writer also says that it is "forbidden" in the Bible to converse or "deal with familiar spirits." But surely, the Bible would not condemn what did not exist. This class of Bible texts clearly prove so far as they are authoritative that Spiritualism was a fact in Jewish times. It is a recorded fact in all Bibles. The Shastras abound in the facts and phenomena of spiritual manifestations. The most learned men of the world today such as Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge the distinguished Alfred R. Wallace, the compeer of Charles Darwin, the distinguished W. T. Stead, editor of the London "Review of Reviews," Professor Hyslop of the New York University and I might quote scores of similar illustrious men who after years of investigation have become pronounced Spiritualists.

"All heathen religions," writes this critic, "teach a conscious existence in death, and therefore, are susceptible to the influence of Sulritualism." "Heathen religions" in so far as they teach "the conscious existence of the spirit in an after death, prove themselves to be infinitely superior to the soul-sleeping doctrine of the Adventists, or the endless hell torments of Calvinistic sectarians.

"That Spiritualism is a doctrine of the devil is admitted by some of its own advocates." This is a shameful false statement; for Spiritualists do not believe there is a personal semi-omnipotent devil roaming up and down the earth deceiving people. There is quite enough deception and lying and slandering and moral wickedness afloat in the world without any personal devil to incite these emotions.

By the way, who made the Seventh Day Adventist devil? When God pronounced His works "all good" did this include the devil? What intelligent, rational man ever saw the devil? If the devil through mediums proves a future existence to atheists and materialists and exhorts people to be good and spiritually minded is he not to be honored beth for his industry and his high moral teachings? I never knew of but one person that ever actually saw this personal devil and that was Eldress E. G. White, the corner-store visionist of the Seventh Day Adventists. She declared that she saw him and that he "still bears a kingly form. His features ("Early Writings," page 24) are still noble . . . that brow which was once so noble I particularly noticed . . . His eyes were cunning, shy, and showed great penetration. His frame was large, but the flesh hung loosely, about his face and hands. As I beheld him, his chin was resting upon his left hand. He appeared to be in deep thought. A smile was upon his countenance which made me tremble," and so forth.

In line with this she further says, "Satan was seeking a dispute with Jesus, concerning his being the Son of God, and Satan, to manifest his power, (page 27) carried Jesue (she does not say just how he carried him) to Jerusalem and set him upon the pinnacle of the temple and there tempted him." Now mark! This Seventh Day Adventist devil sometimes "smiles," has a kingly form, a noble brow, a receding forehead, cunning eyes, and a "large frame with the flesh hanging loosely about his hands;" and yet strange—strange to tell "seven" of "Him"—seven of these monsters "were cast out of Mary Magdalene." These are Luke's words "Out of whom (Mary) went seven devils." Adventists insist that we must take the Bible just as it reads. And yet, when we read in the 20th chapter of Isaiah that "the Lord commanded his servant Isaiah to walk naked and bare-foot three years for a sign" and so forth, they think there must have here been a mistranslation. This writer in quoting from that old pessimistic agnostic (Ec. 9:6) was not in a sense so very wide from the mark, simply because there are no "dead." In fact, there is no absolute death in God's universe. Modern science shows that the very corpuscles that constitute the atom are alive. God is conscious, energy and life "imminent" in all the universe. What we in our blindness call death, the angels call birth. And physically death is simply the severing of the co-partnership existing between the physical body and the conscious spirit. To this end it is reported that Paul said "there is a natural body and a spiritual body." Theosophists term it the "astral body" and the American Transcendentalists term it the "etheric body." It is this spiritual body that aided by the intelligent spirits of the Heavens can so manipulate the auras, emanations, atomis, electrons, ions and other subtle substances as to produce what are termed the "Materialisation of spirits." This I have repeatedly seen, and seen them also after a few moments, dematerialise and vanish. This people, this little narrow-minded sect of Seventh Day Adventists whom the Evangelical denominations do not recognise as orthodox Christians, are called in America "Soul-sleepers," of "Devil-admirers"? because they insist that Spiritualism, mesmerism, hypnotism, clairvoyance and kindred occult phenomena are all the works of the devil.

Spiritualism is not as this nameless "C. M. G." asserts "anti-Christ," nor is it anti-Krishna, but is a well-established fact—a blessed truth—proving a future existence, comforting the sick and brushing away the mourner's tears. Well did the illustrious Alfred R. Wallace, pensioned by the late Queen Victoria, say, "My position, therefore, is that the phenomena of Spiritualism in their entirety do not require further confirmation. They are proven quite as well as any facts are proven in other sciences."

And the eminent Dr. Thomson J. Hudson writes in his Law of Psychic Phenomena, (page 206) thus—"The man who denies the phenomena of Spiritualism is not entitled to be called a sceptic; he is simply ignorant; and it would be a hopeless task to attempt to enlighten him."

J. M. PEEBLES, M. D.

NOT FOR THYSELF.

Not for thyself, O violet fair,
To bud and bloom and die;
The maiden plucks thee for her hair,
In children's hands you lie.

Not for thyself, alone, dear bird,
Is sung that plaintive song;
Some tender human soul is stirred,
As thy sweet notes prolong.

Not for thyself, pure little child,
Those dimpled cheeks and hands;
Those tresses bright, and blue eyes mild,—
A mother understands.

Not for thyself, poor, tired heart;
Toil on and hope anew;
Some loved one, of your life a part,
Is glad because of you.

ALICE M. WARREN.

Proctorsville, Vt.

Dr. Hidden and Spiritualism.

Some Mistakes and Corrections Noted by Harrison D. Barrett.

Editor Daily News:—My attention has been called to your review of an address given by Dr. C. W. Hidden of your city, in the Dudley street Baptist Church, Boston, Feb. 17. As Editor-at-Large of our movement, and president of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States of America and Dominion of Canada, I respectfully request space in your columns to reply to certain statements that the speaker made on the occasion in question. There are more than 300,000 avowed Spiritualists in America, who are actively supporting the movement as their souls' religion. There are at least 1,500,000 unattached believers and investigators, who accord Spiritualism a quasi support, as it seems to them, at times, to be the truth they need.

Dr. Hidden said many kind things of Spiritualism and its followers with which neither they nor the writer have any exceptions to take. Some of his statements are not clear, while others are quite misleading. Let me place Spiritualism's central claim in its true light before your readers. It claims to be a religion, pure and undefiled, impressing its followers to be doers of good deeds, and inspiring them to maintain pure moral characters before all of the world. "Good works and the maintenance of pure moral characters," as laid down by the Apostle James, means something to them. With this statement from the only New Testament writer who ever presumed to give a definition of religion, the Spiritualists link the recognition of God.

The following is our "Declaration of Principles," adopted at our National Convention, held in Chicago in October, 1899:

1. We believe in Infinite Intelligence.

2. We believe that the phenomena of nature, physical and psychical, are expressions of Infinite Intelligence.

3. We affirm that a correct understanding of such phenomena and living in harmony therewith, constitute the true religion.

4. We affirm that the process of life is not interrupted by the change called death, but that man lives on, a conscious being beyond the tomb.

5. We affirm that communion between the seen and unseen worlds is a fact scientifically proven by the phenomena of Spiritualism.

6. We believe that the highest morality is contained in the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

The foregoing is offered in evidence of the claim that to all intelligent Spiritualists, Spiritualism is a religion. Let me at this point further correct Dr. Hidden. No intelligent Spiritualist presumes to claim that psychic phenomena, or demonstrations, prove the immortality of the Soul. They assert, with truth, that such phenomena only prove that men and women, as intelligent entities, survive the change called death. No living being can prove the soul's immortality until it can be shown that at least one intelligent entity has lived eternally. This is a mathematical impossibility. Spiritualism, however, does affirm the eternality of God, and declares that man is the child of God, hence is as old and will continue to live as long as his parent lives. In this sense only, does Spiritualism have aught to say of a demonstrated Immortality. When the existence of Infinite Intelligence, is accepted, then, by inference and logical reasoning, man's eternal duration may be declared.

With Dr. Hidden's denunciations of fraud, of counterfeiting, of the dark, commercial seance, and other deceptions practiced by tricksters in the name of Spiritualism, every true Spiritualist is in full accord, with this advantage on the side of the believer—he is trying to clean out the Spiritualistic temple, and has no time to mind other people's business. Had Dr. Hidden, as a Spiritualist, worked heart and hand with the anti-fraud, anti-commercial elements in our own ranks, it would have been more to his credit than it was to openly consort with some of them for the sake of official position, and possible leadership. I want to be just to him, however, and must say here that he has always been an open opponent of the shams practiced under the cloak of materialization, trumpet and other dark seance nonsense. When he was a Spiritualist, it is known that he did little or nothing to remove the evils of which he complains.

Against the true teachings of Jesus, the honest Spiritualist has not one word to say. That Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism are branches of the same great tree of Truth, no intelligent person among us will deny. That Spiritualism, as a power for good in the world is on the wane, any intelligent person can see is a mistake. It is moving scientists, philosophers, and even the theologians as they never have been moved before. The intelligent ministers of the present day are turning to its sacred truths for bread with which to feed the despairing members of their flocks. It is softening pulpit utterances as never before in the history of the ministry, and is comforting untold millions as they stand weeping beside the biers of their beloved dead, with the uplifting assurance that the departed live beyond the grave. It has put scientific Atheism and its twin brother, Materialism, to flight, and glorified the grave as the open door to a brighter world. Its motto is "Equal rights for all, special privileges to none," while its watchword on earth and in spirit spheres is "Progression."

It has been called upon to aid Science, and has shown the children of men that sulphur can be put to far better uses than to be wasted in burning those non-material things—human souls—throughout all time. It has proved itself the strong ally, the genuine friend of philosophy by giving it a true basis, far removed from the one offered by Materialism. It has become the expounder of ethics, and led the way to a higher civilization for all mankind over the broad road of duty, on each side of which every traveler will find the beautiful flowers of love and sympathy to inspire him to press forward. It has revealed most clearly to the sight of all who have eyes to see, the perfect law of consequences, and demonstrated that each mortal must reap as he sows. It has told every traveler over the roadway of life, that there never was and is not now any forgiveness for sin, save that obtained by each individual through his personal efforts to perfect his character. In fine, Spiritualism is the religion of life, here and hereafter. It has gone into the laboratory of God, and there in the rare alembic of purity, rewrought the lessons of life eternal. It has rolled the stone away from the sepulchers of millions of human souls, and bidden the smiling angels of Love and Wisdom to come forth. It is God's truest revelation to man—a religion by which to live—a religion to sustain men as they graduate from the world of sense into the radiant spheres of the supernal world.

Yours for truth,

HARRISON D. BARRETT,
President N. S. A. and Editor-at-Large.

Evolution of the God and Christ Ideas.

The word God is to me a sound conveying no clear or distinct affirmation. —Chas. Bradlaugh.

Any person who attempts to define the absolute, to describe that which lies below phenomena, attempts the impossible.—B. F. Underwood.

From the most remote period of primitive man, the various races have had a belief that there must be something outside, independent and superior to, the universe, and from this absolutely impossible hypothesis all of the various forms of religion have arose. This work dilates on this idea and shows that there is absolutely no exception in civilized and semi-civilized races of man.

In Huxley's "Man's Place in Nature," this assumption of a God does not occur. The word "God" is not within its pages.

This work will be found beneficial to all inquiring minds that are eager to have a full and fair understanding of those mystic nonentities that have in all ages been a fetter upon the intellectuality and individuality of man.

The Gods must be dethroned, and man, instead of gazing into void and empty space, will sooner or later realize the necessity of his own attention.

The Vedda is the oldest bible in existence. The Shasters, Puranas and Zendavesta are of very ancient date, and are held in sacred remembrance by millions.

The author, Hudson Tuttle, has clearly set forth the ideas of these ancient bibles in shape so that the reader with due diligence can comprehend them. Man in all past ages and the present has been the prey of priests and kings. A few heroic souls have stemmed the tide against the encroachments of these, and labored to free the mind from the thraldom of superstition. Man has not only had imaginary gods but virgin-born saviors as well. This may be fully realized by reading the work in question. But the Jewish Savior is considered of the most importance. Did he ever live, or was he a myth? This question has engaged the attention of some of the most learned critics. To my mind I must confess that while there is no contemporary history to substantiate the claim, I think he lived. There must have been some foundation for the New Testament.

But the accounts set forth therein are so contradictory within themselves they cannot be a solid foundation to stand upon. This matter is very clearly brought out in Waite's History ch. xxvii, a work that ought not to ever be allowed to go out of print. Let Mr. Waite be heard:

"It is true that Jesus himself at no time during his preliminary examination, either before the council or before Pilate or on his way to execution, or at the crucifixion, gave any intimation that he was about to die for the sins of the world."—5th edition, page 531.

The greatest Biblical scholars hold that the four gospels were not in existence in the first century. How, then was it that the sayings and doings of this man were kept and handed down to the writers of Matthew, Mark and Luke, saying nothing of John, which was of later date.

"Was Christ Crucified?" by Austin Bierbower, a Jewish lawyer of Chicago, labors to the end to prove that there were no laws in those days in that country demanding a crucifixion; if this an irrefutable fact, the crucifixion of Jesus Christ is a falsehood. It has proven to be a worthless tax of great scholars and critics from Ireneus to the present day, and all of these labors have been and will continue to be futile of demonstration or even proof as to the origin of the four gospels.

It is held that the Savior was to be of the blood and seed and root of David. If that is true, he was of human origin and forever vitiates the claim of an immaculate conception; and being the son of any ghost real or imaginary. Matthew says he was born in the days of Herod, the king; Luke says he was born in the days of Cyrenius, some nine years later. See Waite, 3rd edition, page 322; also Dr. Brown's Researches in Oriental History, page 213. Let the most learned scholar of Protestant Germany be heard, Schleiermacher, "the most indispensable conditions are wanting. No one has yet met with the slightest degree of success." He means in attempting to reconcile their chronological absurdities.

Mr. Tuttle has endeavored to portray this matter to the understanding of the English reading public; his work is of research and critical examination, and deserves a liberal patronage from the public; all who diligently read its pages will know more of the absurdities of the mystic gods and saviors of past ages. Let Waite and Brown be read in connection, which will furnish much valuable matter for the consideration of all students of religious lore. B. G. FENTON.

Chardon, Ohio.

Heart keeping is the secret of happy housekeeping.—Anon.

REFLECTIONS.

As Presented by Miss Elizabeth Harlow.

To the Editor:—A late Progressive Thinker has so much in it that has set me to thinking, I wish to express myself as well.

First, Mr. Barrett's splendid article that has run through two issues, is one that should make every true Spiritualist think, and deeply too. We certainly have the broadest concept of life yet unfolded to man, and if truth is worth anything, it is worth fighting for if necessary. That such fraud is practiced in its name, is most dreadful to me. It proves one thing, that the individual who practices it has no realization of its teachings, for if the law of cause and effect is a fact, these very creatures that are making a business of deception are weaving around their own spirit nature a web that will be most dreadful to them when they stand face to face with themselves the morning after death.

I firmly believe that all the dollars they have reaped from such practice will become as needles on which they will find themselves resting; and the more suave and sympathetic they dress up their fraud to get into the confidence of their dupes, the more dreadful will be their own state.

I know of no crime so heinous as to play upon the heart-strings of love and grief for money, as the notorious Moore did, and as many more do whom I might mention, that are not in the field of materialization.

As to those who have left us, it is, indeed, a sad commentary upon us. But is Spiritualism or Spiritualists ALL to blame? I know full well that the Cause does not support TALENT and WORTH as much as it should, and no one deplores it more than I, and with Mr. Barrett I say the days of martyrdom are past, and the age of tramp Spiritualism is PAST. So long as we will consent to be tramps, so long we will get a tramp's portion and place. I WANT and Demand MORE for myself and the CAUSE I represent. To the men and women who had others dependent upon them and could not get support on our platform, I have nothing to say; but there are two instances which come to my mind I would use for illustration: One is our friend Jamieson, who converted our Moses. It is always amusing to me, but as well disgusting, when I read the excuses he makes for leaving the Cause. To me it is evident he did not intelligently understand the teachings of Spiritualism; if he had, no matter how many fake materializations he ran against, he would have been a Spiritualist still. To me, if every medium in the country is proven a fraud, I AM A SPIRITUALIST; there is no other sane view of life to me. So if Mr. Jamieson had no deeper grasp of this truth than that, it was a most fortunate exchange for the Cause when Moses came in and he went out. We have lived and grown in spite of it all. The other one is the "Backslider" you quote this week. I happen to know this gentleman and his history all the way from the humble home of boyhood up through the days of being a Temperance lecturer, a kind of Salvation Army preacher, into a Doctor, playing patent medicines, or trying to, on into Spiritualism. Wherever he has been he has created a "brain-storm" for a little while and then has sunk into oblivion. Well do I remember the days at Lake Pleasant when he and Bradley Newell created such a furor, and during it they lined their pockets.

He personally said to me once when we were in Cummington, Mass., that I was a fool to work for what I did; that such opportunities for getting money never lasted long, and we must use them, and be ready for the next that came. It is a well-known fact if it had not been for this very Doctor, and two or three since his day, The Waverly Home for Aged Spiritualists at Boston, would now be paid for. I feel we are better off with him as a backslider.

I feel that Spiritualism is not all to blame. There are so many that can work for awhile when everything is going fine, but when the tests come, they are found wanting. "Any dead rat can float with the tide, but it takes a good live one to go against it."

Just a word to Mr. Barrett. No one deplores "big words" more than I. A lot of words, big or little, never set the people thinking, but the man or woman who has a few ideas, even though you do not agree with them, always do. And dear Mrs. Luther was the Master who went before and made the trail that I might follow after and build. She would never have been the iconoclast she was had it not been for the "intensity of her Soul," you speak of, and I feel she did leave much in the place where she took away.

And with Mr. Barrett, I feel the Spiritualists are not devoted enough, to try, at least, to LIVE THE LIFE of the Spirit, and this will be the one condition to draw us together and make us better. I plead for more vital effort in living what we teach. To me religion is simply finding our spiritual place in the spiritual Universe. This found, all is well.

ELIZABETH HARLOW.

Wanted—Crumbs of Knowledge.

To the Editor:—I am still seeking for truth and knowledge upon the subject of reincarnation.

In The Progressive Thinker, No. 906, Jessie S. Petlit-Flint, in "A Reply to Mr. Dague," says, "My experience and studies of thirty years lead me to accept re-incarnation as a fact," also, "I gladly share all the crumbs of knowledge I have been able to gather in this great school of life."

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I will kindly ask our friend to share "the crumbs of knowledge" she has gathered on this subject—with the readers of The Progressive Thinker, giving the full particulare of the whys and wherefores that make her such a firm believer in the theory.

I have not gathered one crumb of evidence in three score years, and have never met a person who could give me one.

L. P. WHEELOCK.

Madison, Wis.

With all the consecration ceremonies poured over a church it is not half so holy as the home.—L. K. Washburn.

Startling Prophecies.

Giving the Views of a Spirit and a Mortal.

Mr. W. J. Colville is a Spiritualist lecturer, and claims to get all his ideas from the spirit world. He says that he never prepares his lectures, and doesn't know beforehand what he is going to say. He pours forth a flood of eloquent discourses for two hours, concluding with an impromptu poem on any subject selected by the audience.

On a recent Sunday (at San Diego) he gave an interesting address on the "New Heaven and the New Earth," with especial reference to the sensational prophecies made by Mr. Lee Spangler of New York, who has predicted the coming destruction of Chicago, Boston and New York, and that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans will be swallowed up in great chasms to appear in the bed of these oceans, the result of which will be that this globe (like the planet Mars) will have no more oceans, and the dry beds of the Pacific and Atlantic will be available for man's use, occupation and cultivation.

Upon the vast and fertile plains thus restored to man's use a new and higher civilization on earth is to be developed, and all nations are to live there in peace and harmony.

Inasmuch as many people are liable to be alarmed and disturbed by the terrible nature of these predicted catastrophes, it is interesting to know what a prominent lecturer claiming to be the inspired mouthpiece of the spirit world, has to say on the subject of the predictions.

Mr. Colville said: "I don't believe these visions are to be taken literally, any more than St. John's visions in the Revelations are to be taken literally.

"I have never had any vision of Chicago and New York being swallowed up. These prophecies are largely exaggerated."

Then he went on to say that great changes on earth are usually preceded by signs and wonders, both inwardly and outwardly and the inward and outward changes were connected. He even hinted that in the past the surface of the earth had caved in owing to the errors of mankind, and made the startling statement that a planet formerly existed between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, and was destroyed through the sons of the people disobeying God's laws, and the fragments of this planet now form the asteroids.

There is no fatalism in prophecy. All we can do is to point out the tendency of the age and foresee that certain results must follow if a certain course is followed.

Edward Bellamy wrote two epoch-making books, "Looking Backward," and "Equality," the purport of which was to show that if we work together co-operatively (as the angels do in heaven), we can establish a new heaven on earth, and Ignatius Donnelly wrote another book entitled, "Caesar's Column," to show that if we pursue the life of selfish competition, strife and disharmony it would result in disaster and revolution.

But the world to-day is in a state of great upheaval and unrest — strikes, lockouts, and war between labor and capital!

A change is coming over the minds of the people. Instead of blind worship of mammon the day is coming when to be unduly rich will be considered a calamity. The people are turning from their idols; brightened by rays from the celestial spheres a great change for good is beginning, and the upward tendency is increasing. The wise ones will say:

We want no extremes of poverty on the one hand or riches on the other, but a comfortable competency for every one.

This is the ideal for the co-operative commonwealth which is coming. I don't believe in these predicted overwhelming disasters. I don't believe the destruction of San Francisco or any other city is a sign of Divine wrath. There are a great many good people in Chicago and New York, and a great deal of evil, but all cities are pretty much alike in this respect.

All destruction comes from within, and is the natural consequence of our own acts, and not from the external.

Rome was not destroyed by the Vandals from the North; that was merely the natural inevitable consequence of the internal dissensions within the state between patricians and plebeians. The seeds of destruction were first sown within the Roman empire. You can't have a healthy, clear complexion outwardly if you are inwardly diseased.

I admit that a tidal wave is coming, and an upheaval in New York and Chicago, but it is a spiritual upheaval, the result of the present dissatisfaction with political and social conditions, and this will be the new heaven, it will leave the people purer, happier and more united.

All these changes work for good. If sudden death comes from earthquakes and tidal waves, it is not nearly so calamitous as people suppose. Those who are suddenly killed experience no pain, and when they wake up on the other side many of them can't realize that they have passed over.

We are asked, "Why don't the spirits warn us and save the lives of many good people?"

In the first place some people's hides are so thick that no warning will penetrate, and the only thing for them is to experience the calamity; it does them good spiritually; and good people are there because their aid is needed right there, and the helpless ones could not get through without them.

On the other hand others who live in the light are warned away because their time to pass over hasn't come; they are needed here and have other work to do.

I was in San Francisco just before the earthquake, intending to stay three or four weeks, but was peremptorily ordered by the spirit voices to take steamer to New Zealand after only five days in San Francisco. I did so, and the first thing on arrival in New Zealand was to read about the earthquake. I was warned, because my work on earth isn't done yet.

Again I had a similar experience of a warning whilst traveling by rail some years ago in the East. There was a woman on the cars who was clairvoyant. She suddenly called out, "I see a vision of a terrible accident to this train, and I'm going to get out at the next station. I warn all to get out, there's danger along the road."

I got out with her, and as I stood by her on the platform the passengers stood on the cars and laughed and hooted. I told them I preferred to be on the side of safety. Next morning we read in the paper that the train had been wrecked and many injured.

So in San Francisco, just before the earthquake, a woman went along the streets predicting the coming destruction of San Francisco. Of course people thought her crazy, and paid no attention to her; so what is the good of warning people? But these calamities, if they do happen, all work out for good. We are all safe in God's keeping, but it is not pleasant nevertheless to go through some of these experiences, I admit.

I would rather err on the side of credulity than take chances of plunging over a precipice. I would rather pay heed to a prediction than reject all truth.

Chicago and New York will be overturned, I do believe, but it will be spiritually, not necessarily materially.

We are entering on a new cycle in the world's history—we are in a state of interregnum.

Self-seeking and competition means a state of independence—every man for himself. Before the competitive age appeared we were in a state of dependence. Now we are entering on an age of inter-dependence—mutual co-operation. First it was dependence, then independence, and now it is to be inter-dependence, when through the co-operative commonwealth man will work out his destiny and make this earth a terrestial paradise.

When a new age begins, there is a new climate. Siberia had once a tropical climate. Siberia has a great and wonderful future. Russia will be reconstructed and the great slavonic race will show a wonderful development in art, and produce a superb literature. Now she is going through a great scourging and suffering great humiliation, but will emerge into a new and glorious life when the people will rise in their might and shake off the chains of selfdom.

In conclusion the speaker predicted a glorious future for San Francisco and all the Pacific Coast which will be dotted with cities that will be centres of culture and civilization—there will be commercial prosperity, but more valuable than that will be spiritual, moral and artistic development.

[Notes by a Spiritualist who reports the above lecture.]

So far as concerns throwing any light on the probability of Mr. Lee Spangler's prophecy being realized, Mr. Colville's lecture is not satisfactory. He simply says he doesn't know anything; he's had no vision, and he doesn't believe it, and if true it is not a physical calamity that is threatened but a spiritual upheaval; and curiously enough he omits all reference to the prophesied swallowing up of the oceans in the earth's interior — a prophecy which in one respect would be more stupendous in its consequences to mankind than the destruction of a dozen cities, and yet he hints at a change of climate, which latter would assuredly be one result of the disappearance of the oceans.

According to Mr. Colville's own admission, it is quite possible for Mr. Spangler to receive a true vision of future events, whilst Mr. Colville is unable to receive any evidence whatever since he tells us he stood by the side of a clairvoyant who predicted the train wreck which saved his life and yet he foresaw nothing. And further, he justifies himself by saying he preferred "to be on the side of safety" and thus impliedly advises others to be "on the side of safety" in connection with Mr. Lee Spangler's prophecy.

The fact is, it is no reflection on the power of Mr. Colville's spirit guides that they are unable to foretell coming events. By analogy, a man on top of a high mountain can see much further than one on a lower elevation and yet that would be no reflection on the latter, who in turn can see much further than those in the valley, who may be highly moral and good people.

So it is with regard to prophecy. Only the loftiest spirits can foresee coming events, and if they see fit to give warning to mankind they select a suitable mouthpiece like Mr. Spangler who may possess little ability on other lines. In fact, prophecies have sometimes in the past come through the mouths of halfwitted boys or old women.

Mr. Colville's criticism leaves the matter where he found it, though his advice is excellent, and he sees the true spiritual significance of it all.

In the writer's opinion it takes a bold man, in view of the recent earthquakes, to say that these prophecies are impossible. They are quite possible—similar things have happened before—and we ought to take every precaution by removing human lives and treasure from the threatened points to places of safety. To be forewarned is to be forewarned. If the people were to take these prophecies seriously, nine-tenths of the suffering can be obviated. One conclusion we can deduce and that is that California will be a safe refuge for all who can get away.

F. A. BINNEY.

San Diego, Cal.

Who Knows?

Editor Progressive Thinker: Recent developments have led me to ask a question that may, to many, savor of the grotesque. It is this: Can disease be communicated from an excarnate spirit to a living human body?

HERBERT A. HARRELL,

Chicago, Ill.

A good Christian should never go to law; rather should he give up his coat and his pants, and everything that he hath. Churchmen never go to law; they are the most docile and easy creatures in the world on matters of business.—Voltaire.

Where Is Heaven? Where Is Hell?

A Vivid Portrayal of Both States or Places

There has recently been in two of the Melbourne papers a discussion on What and (incidentally) Where is Heaven? and the Anglican Archbishop, whose discourse led to the discussion, has suggested a new theory and locality for it [as set forth in Harbinger of Light]. It is remarkable that a matter of such importance to humanity should have remained in obscurity so long and that no rational theory with regard to it has been formulated by the theologians of any of the Christian denominations. A city paved with gold, a great white throne, an anthropomorphous God, supported by the Son and Holy Ghost, and surrounded by the multitudes of the saved, praying and singing, with the knowledge that the majority of their brethren were suffering hell torment—this is literally the biblical description and strictly orthodox presentation. How puerile and insufficient to satisfy the aspirations of a thinker! Annihilation would be preferable. The Archbishop's suggested theory, though an improvement, is lamentably insufficient. It is based upon the doctrine of "The Judgment Day" (which is in perspective, and meantime we must assume that the spirits of the dead are sleeping) and after that event all life on our earth would be destroyed. The New Jerusalem would descend from heaven and in this recreated state there would be entirely changed conditions, everything would be spiritualized, and pain, sorrow, and death would be unknown.

Contrast this with the Spiritualists' belief derived from modern seers, and confirmed by thousands of exalted intelligences now dwelling in the spirit spheres, all but the lowest of which are heavenly in degree. First as to its location, it is affirmed that this (and other inhabited worlds) is constantly spiritualizing matter, and throwing off refined emanations, which ascend and form a circle or zone some fifty miles from the earth's surface; somewhat analogous to, but less dense than the rings of Saturn. This may be called the second sphere. Still finer particles emanate from this, and from a third sphere, and so on until a more universal plane is reached where spirits from other worlds mingle. Each of these spheres is a step in the ladder of progress, and the judgment—so to speak—is at death, the spirit gravitating to the plane that it belongs to according to its life and actions in the body. Those who have led a good life find conditions in harmony with their desires and when their aspirations are for higher conditions the way of attainment is shown them, which is not for the asking, but for the earning. Hudson Tuttle, the mediumistic author of Arcana of Nature, and the Arcana of Spiritualism, two admirable scientific works (the first of which is largely quoted from by Buchner in his "Force and Matter"), says, in the course of his explanation of the philosophy of the formation of these zones: "Spiritual atoms, being affected by the same laws, partake of the earth's rotary motion, and revolve with it. If the spheres completely surrounded the earth, as first supposed, the earth remaining at rest, as soon as it began to move the superior velocity of the equatorial regions over the poles would draw away the particles from the latter and concentrate them at the equator, producing a zone, the axis, or it would revolve parallel with the equator."

Forty-five years ago an advanced spirit communicating with the writer said:

"Not a flower dies upon the earth but its counterpart spirit rises to form another flower in the spheres," and followed with a description of the spheres corresponding with what we subsequently read in Hudson Tuttle and Andrew Jackson Davis' work.

Professor Robert Hare's experiences were the same as our own; his father, who had been in the spirit world for fifty years, giving him a detailed description of the spheres pertaining to this world in harmony with what we have described. The refined matter when it aggregates in these zones or spheres is prone to assume the form it had here, though more perfect and delicate in its expression and, as everything corresponds in relative density, all is as natural to the spirit as is this world to the mortal. To quote Tuttle again:

"The surface of the sphere is solid earth, in which trees and flowers take root, and the waters of the ocean surge perpetually on the shore. An ethereal sky surges overhead, and the stars shine with increased effulgence. The spirits breathe its spiritual atmosphere, they drink its crystal waters, they partake of its luscious fruits, they bedeck themselves with gorgeous flowers."

Andrew Jackson Davis, the seer and author of Nature's Divine Revelations (now in its 36th edition) and twenty-eight other volumes, in a glowing description of scenes in the summer land says:

"There were also curious vines that grew all over very lofty trees, instead of leaves the vines gave out countless throbbing flowers. Each corolla pulsated like a harp, and when I looked more intimately and carefully I saw that every flower seemed to be conscious that it was a part of a divine plan. Along the river, of which I first spoke, I saw what appeared to be grasses, but they were not such as I have seen on earth, and yet they were emanations from the heavenly soil. They were what might be termed mossy grasses, but the fibres were silken and reflected the rainbow colors of the diamond. The exquisite fine fibres, composing the mossy grasses along the margin of the ariel Gulf-stream on a purple brilliancy which was mellowed softly down until it seemed to lose itself in a sort of atmospheric immensity of its own! As I gazed, it seemed to blend and lose itself with innumerable seas of color! I have tried to get some repetition of the effect of that color by visiting our Galleries of Painting; but I have seen nothing like it on canvas in the picture of any earthly artist. Church's 'Heart of the Andes'—the deep, rich, immense colors of the Cordcrillas, and the infinito repose expressed in the marvelous depths of that picture—seem to be the merest physicalism compared with that which, in 1855, was first reflected upon the cerebro-telescopic eye."

These brief "word pictures" convey an idea far transcending in beauty, and adaptability to the desires and requirements of humanity, and give a higher conception of the wisdom and justice of God than any orthodox description or conception of heaven we have met with. The idea of an arbitrary dividing line between Heaven and Hell is utterly repugnant to human ideas of justice; the majority of mankind would be near this dividing line, and to assume that the difference of a grain where two men were weighed in the balance would consign one to heaven and the other to hell is a gross libel on the justice of the Supreme Ruler of the Universe.

Heaven is a condition attainable by a good life; to be good is to do good. This is not done by talking piously but living holily, and those who diligently try to help their fellows, and leave the world a little better than they found it, will get a foretaste of heaven while in the body, and congenial conditions in "The house of many mansions" spoken of by the founder of Christianity whose parable of the Good Samaritan illustrates the Spiritualistic idea of a good man.

W. H. T.

WHERE AND WHAT IS HELL?

This is a question which is and has been agitating the mind of Christendom [as set forth in the Two Worlds], and a question which still remains unsolved by the Christian world. In the past the clergy universally taught that it was a place of everlasting torment, where the spirits of the departed burned, or were otherwise tormented and punished in a very material, physical sort of manner by Satan and his satellites, and that there was no return for those who entered its portals. As the ages rolled on and men's minds gradually evolved, this belief became more and more of a standing joke among the cultured classes, until doubt and disbelief gradually permeated the masses, for men were beginning to use their own brains and do their own thinking, instead of paying others to do it for them, with its inevitable consequences, viz., being led by the nose in whatever way the past expounders of religions listed.

The student of the past will observe how the clergy slowly and almost imperceptibly changed and broadened their teachings, and now at the present day it is seldom one hears this hell-fire and everlasting torment doctrine preached. It is wonderful what changes in the mode of thought takes place with the lapse of time. If the clergy had preached 100 years ago as they do now, their very lives would have been in jeopardy. As the human mind evolves, it views things from an ever-widening standpoint, and is able to grasp and assimilate greater and broader truths. Reformers are usually men and women with ideas and knowledge somewhat in advance of the masses; hence the reason they have so tough and uphill a fight to get reforms for the benefit of the human race established and accepted. The average individual has an inherent dislike to anything new, particularly when it interferes with his habits of life; and the older one grows in certain ways of thinking and habits the harder it is to get him to alter them, even if he be a physical wreck in consequence of such wrong habits of life.

Hell is a place and a condition of mind. There are many degrees of hell. Every man creates his own heaven or hell by his life here on earth. There is no avenging Deity awaiting him on the other side to inflict punishment upon him. God works through law and law only. There are spiritual laws and physical laws. Physical laws govern physical atoms, and if for instance you abuse the laws of physical health, whether wilfully or ignorantly, the punishment is the same. You simply bring it upon yourself by your own acts. Man's evolution upward toward physical and spiritual perfection is by means of natural selection and the survival of the fittest.

The abodes of those spirit beings who once lived upon earth as men and women are all around the earth at various distances, all the spheres gradually and harmoniously blending into each other, there being no line of demarcation between each. Those nearest the earth are the hells, the lowest being the worst where profound darkness, wretchedness, and misery most appalling reign supreme.

To make it plainer, let us follow the life of a man who has lost his physical body, and who during his earth life has given full rein to the desires of the flesh; who has made no endeavour to cultivate his higher or spiritual faculties; who was grossly selfish, living for the gratification of his miserable perishable body only. Such a man, on passing out of his physical habitation, finds himself so weighted with the magnetism of earth, so gross, so closely approaching physical matter that he cannot rise beyond the earth, so earth perforce must be his dwelling place.

He is exactly the same man only the body he now functions with and through is the spirit counterpart of his physical body which permeates the latter during his earth life, only with the difference that his spirit body is composed of atoms in a different form and arrangement which give off a class of vibration which the physical eyesight, ears, touch, cannot register, therefore to us he is invisible, intangible, imponderable, except to those whose spiritual senses are aroused and active and who possess clairvoyant vision. On the contrary, he himself would tell you he is as solid, real, and as alive as when encased in a physical form. He still retains all his likes and dislikes, gross passions, and strong desires for physical gratifications, but he finds to his utter dismay he cannot gratify them.

By that powerful law of attraction of like attracting like, he haunts the dens of vice and iniquity as was his custom, and poor fellow, he is doomed to witness others gratifying themselves as he once did, and as all his desires impel him to do now, but alas! he cannot, he has lost the instrument—his physical body by which alone it was made possible. Everything to him is cold, miserable, wretched, dark; the fires of ungratified desire burn within him fiercely and give him no rest. His mind is uncultivated; his spiritual faculties quite dormant and undeveloped; his associates on the spirit side are people who are gross, carnal, selfish, and evil-minded like himself. His footsteps are dogged by many of those to whom he has done injury while upon earth, and who, being perhaps as gross as he, entertain no thought of pity or forgiveness, and bitterly reproach him with his wrong-doing. He finds to his alarm he cannot turn a deaf ear to them, that somehow, in some unkind and bitter thought and word levelled at him is like the stab of a sharp knife.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Jacob G. Drake, a veteran Spiritualist, was born in Virgil, Cortland Co., New York, October 4, 1829. Passed to spirit life April 7, 1907; aged 77 years. He has been a resident of Toledo, Ohio, forty years, having come there from Dunkirk, N. Y., in 1867, to take a position with the Lake Shore railroad. This position he held up to the time of his death. Funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at his late residence, 1339 Woodland avenue, conducted by Rev. Fred. D. Dunakin, of Cecil, Ohio. Interment was in Woodland.

Mr. Charles Bates, for 73 years a highly respected resident of Grand Blanc, Mich., passed to the higher life, March 30, 1907, in the 98th year of his life. His genial good nature made him a favorite with all. He was a strong advocate of Spiritualism, and was for many years blessed with strong healing powers.

T. P. McWAIN.

Passed to high life from his home in Converse, Ind., Mr. Joe. Darby, "Uncle Joe," age 86 years. Mr. Darby was a man of great intellect, having been a close student of liberal thought for more that 50 years and also known through the entire section as one of the best posted men in that vicinity. He leaves several daughters and grand-children to mourn his departure and joins a host of loved ones beyond the "Border Line." Services were conducted by Will J. Erwood.

Passed to high life from her home in Elkhart, Ind., Mrs. Katherine Palmer, who has had nearly two years of physical weakness and pain. Mrs. Palmer was thoroughly convinced of the continuity of life, and many times expressed her confidence that the grave does not end all. She leaves a companion and several children and a number of grandchildren to mourn the absence of her physical presence. At her request the services were conducted by Will J. Erwood.

Mrs. Eliza Allen, wife of Oscar Allen of Fredonia, N. Y., formerly of Lilly Dale, passed to higher life April 4, aged 58 years. She lived and died a true Spiritualist, a dear, patient, good woman. Her friends are legion. Mrs. Clara Watso of Jamestown, officiated at the funeral. Her discourse was fine. Friends and loved ones came from far and near to pay their last respects of love and sympathy. She has gone home.

L. D. PUTNAM.

Dr. A. B. Spinney went on March 29, near Maple Rapids, Mich., to give the funeral discourse of Lewis Reynolds, one of the most prominent citizens in that section, a member of the Middleton and Maple Rapids Odd Fellows lodge, and was the owner of a large, beautiful farm and farm house. He passed to spirit life March 29, 1907, aged 80 years. Mr. Reynolds in his early life was a Methodist; after that he was a United Brethren and for about thirty years he has been a Spiritualist. He was a man of the highest integrity and lived in keeping with his religious profession. Dr. Spinney of Belding, gave an eloquent address of one hour, that pleased the family, friends and his brother Odd Fellows.

John Luick of Belding, Mich., passed to the higher life March 20, after a long illness, at the age of 78. He moved to the township of Otisco in 1844, helping to subdue the wilderness in that part of Michigan. One of his sons, Frank T. Luick, is a Spiritualist and editor of the Belding News, as is also the widow of the deceased, Louisa Luick. Eight children survive him. The deceased earnestly requested that Julia M. Walton give his funeral address, "that" as he remarked, "my children, most of whom are in the orthodox and Catholic churches, may see that we have speakers as brilliant and polished as any that the orthodox church possesses." The funeral was held at his residence, and largely attended, by the most respected and intelligent of the citizens of Belding.

Passed to the higher life March 25, 1907, Mrs. Rhoda Ann Robert, age 79 years, from her home on Vega ave., Cleveland, O. She was the mother of six children, five of whom, with her husband, had gone before, and awaiting her coming. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Rufus Roberts. Three grand-daughters and one great grandson. She was a true Spiritualist, and had been for over forty years. At her request, I W. Pope conducted the services at the house and Riverside Cemetery. COR.

Mrs. Mary Kinner Grute passed into the higher spiritual life April 2, 1907, at the residence of her son John, 11234 Bellflour Rd., Cleveland, O., aged 81 years; a pioneer Spiritualist whose soul was in tune with the infinite. The beauties of heaven and the joys of the spirit world will all join to give honor and love to such noble souls as hers. The husband Charles Grute passed to spirit life several years previous. Her life was a prayer and benediction. By request I. W. Pope conducted the services.

COR.

Mr. J. M. Harris of Williamsfield, Ashtabula County, Ohio, was called to the higher life, April 10, 1907, aged 65 years. He became a Spiritualist about 20 years ago. His wife, Mrs. R. A. Harris, and one daughter, and one son survive him.

A. F. SEE.

Passed to spirit life, from the home of his grandson, Geo. W. Jewett, Sanford Taylor, aged 90 years. Mr. Taylor had been an expert accountant and book-keeper, and a believer in Spiritualism many years. He was an exceptionally intelligent and thoroughly good man, and had been tenderly cared for in the home of his later years. The writer conducted the funeral service JULIETTE YEAW.

Leominster, Mass.

The transition of Miss Anna A. Baker, Sturgis, Mich., occurred at Frost, Minn., April 5th, in the 78th year of her age. Miss Baker was one of the early settlers of Sturgis, A staunch Spiritualist, a member of the Harmonial Society for many years, and one of its official board at her death. The funeral services were held at the home of her nephew, Ed. B. Gray, with whom she lived in Sturgis, and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Hon. S. B. McManus, an old-time friend, April 9.

HENRIETTA L. LICHTIG.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

FOR THE FUTURE.

A Few Thoughts by One Who Believes That in Union There is Strength.

President Barrett's article in the recent issue of the P. T. should not be allowed to go by without deep and serious expressed thought by the individual who believes in the beautiful philosophy of spirit return. He has shown many things in their true light, and has put many propositions squarely before those who should constitute the individual units to help to lift up this beautiful cause.

No one in the ranks of organized effort in this behalf is better fitted for these thoughts than he is, and his words should bear great weight on the future action.

Look up! Lift up! could be used very appropriately for those who are anxious to do all they can to lift up this beautiful philosophy.

Spiritualism is not new. It is as old as mankind itself. It has always been disgraced and brought in disrepute by its own devotees. However, the opportune time for its development came when in free and intelligent America its phenomena was again presented in a way that made men think. The seed at this time fell in good soil, and was watered by good, intelligent men, and if carefully watched and cultivated will become a mighty giant that will furnish shelter for all mankind.

It is said that it took science one hundred and fifty years to prepare for the work it has done in the past fifty years. This is also true with this philosophy. The printing press, broad-minded, liberal editors, a country with a broad constitution that allows men to express their own convictions; a country also in which criticism is a goad to compel men to do right, and this unmercifully used at times by the newspapers which are today the creators and regulators of public thought, has been, and will be a powerful factor to pave the way for the true spiritual kingdom of brotherly love so earnestly advocated by Jesus, but misunderstood even by his own immediate disciples.

Thus the proper psychological era has arrived in which this Christ principle is beginning to grow, and it should be our duty to encourage in the right direction all that we can.

Some fourteen years ago broad minded, intelligent men and women said we will write and aid all we can. Questions of policy will be discussed and acted upon in a united intelligent way. We will show the world that we stand for right, truth and justice. We will help to separate the wheat from the chaff, and straw as well as from the tares. This process is now going on, and the result already is shown in the higher opinion men have of these brethren.

Spiritualism by this united effort is on a higher plane than it ever was before in the world's history. This should be encouragement enough to act as a stimulus for each individual unit who believes in it to help lift it to a still higher plane.

We can help to lift it up by becoming individual units in this organized effort. In union there is strength; any thing that will tend towards diversion is a backward step. Encourage the leaders and aid them. Each society should be a unit for strength.

In these days men have learned that to do things in a modern way great combinations of units are required. Organized Spiritualism can do well to copy after the modern idea. Money and influence are necessary to carry forward the work.

The churches have learned that by a strong organization they can do much more than by single units. Organized Spiritualism can learn much from them.

Good intelligent teachers are needed and these should be encouraged in the right way so that they may take pleasure in their calling.

But what of these teachers? Are they simply to spout like the preachers of bygone days, with a large stock of enthusiasm to sing, talk, pray and eat chicken? No. Right here is where Spiritualism can make itself or land upon the rock upon which the church is about to strand. However, the church has learned that it can do some good, and everywhere church hospitals are springing up that are of great benefit to humanity. The practical work of the Y. M. C. A., the social center, the real practical prison reform work of the Volunteers, and also the practical work of the Salvation Army will never die. "Straws show which way the wind blows."

"What we want is a religion that will teach the people how to live."

To the man who knows Gray's Anatomy, life has no future terrors."—Conan Doyle.

"If mothers were educated like doctors for race reproduction, the latter would be less needed."—Dr. Alice B. Stockham.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of them, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Jesus.

The future religious teacher must do practical things—he must be able to help his brethren to share their burdens.

The man or woman who can tell the mother that it is not teething, but improper or bad food that makes her child sick, is the one who will be appreciated. The man who shows that alcohol destroys the arteries, kidneys and heart, preaches a temperance lecture that bears weight and permanent good.

The practical help and training for this life is perhaps of infinitely as much advantage as the theoretical about the future life.

A practical suggestion to Spiritualists is, teach them the rudiments of anatomy, physiology, hygiene and bacteriology, at their school in Whitewater. This could be begun without any extra expense or hardship, in a small way, and gradually enlarged until their teachers would combine many practical things that would make them teachers that any community would desire, and indeed could not do without.

Literature on health could emanate from this center. Practical hospital work and nursing could be taught. Mothers could be taught that the enormous death rate in childhood is mainly due to ignorance and neglect.

By such a course, Spiritualism could by a united effort show the world that it is no whit behind, but a leader in this practical Christ principle of brotherly love, and hence be lifted to a higher plane of practical usefulness than it is even now.

The one important thing that is needed is a united effort to help to put the practical suggestions of President Barrett into effect, and I am quite sure this can best be done by organization. Let the uplifting process go on. Organize! Encourage your society to become a unit in this mighty force that is doing so much to lift up and place upon a higher plane, this beautiful altruistic cause.

DANIEL S. HAGER, M. D.

Chicago, Ill.

Character Building.

An Important Movement for Spiritualists to Consider.

Following the example of over one-fifth of the states of the Union, a bill has been introduced in the Illinois Legislature, requiring a certain amount of moral and humane instruction in all public schools, the aim being not only to teach children how to conduct themselves as social beings in relation to each other as regards right and wrong, but through the systematic teaching of kindness and justice to all, both human and dumb—to those that cannot strike back as well as to people who can—to furnish an ideal of nobleness that strikes at the very roots of both cruelty and crime, since crime is but cruelty grown up.

That crime is increasing, that morality does not keep pace as it should with the rapid growth of mental culture shows there is some vital omission in our educational system, which can be remedied only by laying more emphasis on Character-Building through the Co-education of Heart and Head.

George T. Angell, Pres. American Humane Education Society: "All the criminals of the future are children now, life men who may throw railroad trains off the track, or put dynamite under our churches, or burn half a city some windy night. They are all children now and we are educating them. Shall we give them an education of mercy or not?

"All the Governors and Legislators and Presidents of the future are children now; the men in whose hands will be the great questions of peace and war. Shall we train them in thoughts and habits of mercy or not?

"Just so soon and so far as we pour into our schools the songs, the poems and lessons of mercy toward the lower creatures, just so soon and so far shall we reach the roots not only of cruelty but of crime. A thousand cases of cruelty and crime can be prevented by humane education for every one that can be prevented by prosecution."

Col. J. W. Cottrell, Supt. Detective Association: "With twenty years experience as an officer, I find in searching for the cause of crime that the lack of humane education is the principal one."

(It is fast becoming a matter of statistics "that humane education lowers the criminal record.")

The Boston Journal of Education: "This teaching kindness to animals may seem a simple thing; but the more one looks into its merits the more penetrating this spiritualizing influence proves to be, causing a change of conduct, inspiring justice and compassion in the place of selfishness and cruelty.

"Kindness to animals is not a mere sentiment, but a requisite of even a very ordinary education. Nothing in arithmetic or grammar is so important for a child to learn as humaneness. As a discipline it is most valuable."

Meeting of New York Association of Principals of Schools: "It is certainly true that many teachers deplore a tendency to unruliness and disregard to lawful authority among the children in the public schools. * * * The feeling that there should be some factor for obtaining a moral effect in the pupils' training seems well nigh universal over the United States."

General Federation of Women's Clubs, St. Louis: "Whereas, It is the conviction of many people interested in the right development of children that, although thousands of noble and conscientious teachers are voluntarily doing a great work in character-building, the schools do not yet provide sufficiently for the moral education of the young; Resolved, That this conference recommends that the matter of more definite and more intelligent ethical instruction shall receive special consideration by the educational section of the General Federation for the next two years."

Conference of the Congress of Mothers, Chicago; "Resolved, that we pledge our efforts to secure through the general consent of educators, through legislation or through some method some system of definite training in morality * * * in our public schools. The saving to the country in prisons, reformatories and police service would be incalculable."

B. J. Tice, A. M., Supt. of Schools, Mass.: "Fellow-teachers, let us make our teaching stronger and richer. * * * Let us reach out and take in humane education. * * * Too many of us are buried in our text-books; are mere word-jugglers, fact-peddlers and mind-stuffers. Let us put away all these things and teach. Let us become character-builders. Such work will compel people to realize the grandly important truth that teaching is the profoundest science; the highest art; the noblest profession."

To the many noble, thoughtful teachers of our state who have already learned the moral value of humane teaching, the passage of this bill can be neither a reflection on nor a hardship, while it can but prove a help to those younger or less experienced teachers whose attention has not been called to the subject. One teacher said, "Nothing ever helped me so much to manage these rough boys as teaching kindness to animals." Another teacher after two years' trial of humane education wrote, "I find it to be the best kind of discipline and worth any amount of effort."

The bill also prohibits vivisection in all public schools. To familiarize children with the dissection of either living or dead animals is not only unnecessary (since all needed facts can be illustrated by charts and manikins) but morally dangerous; shocking to the sensibilities of a normal child and likely to wake the latent criminal tendencies of an abnormal one. What more dangerous than to arouse that horrible sense of satisfaction at the sight of blood and to have in common with the very instinct of murder. Better a child ignorant of anatomy rather than one from whom all the bloom of sympathy and wonder has been crushed.

Two little girls after witnessing experiments at schools went home and to the horror of their friends were found cutting open the throat of a live duck "to see where the quack came from." A boy was found nailing down a cat preparatory to cutting her up alive "since that was the way the teacher did." These two instances are not quoted as having taken place in our state, but enough cases have come to our soon to put up the bars against such "brutalisation of childhood."

William T. Harris, A. M., LL. D., Commissioner of Education, United States: "I am glad to learn of some movement against a practice too widely extended of dissecting animals before children in the elementary schools. I think it wellnigh useless, so far as teaching children a knowledge of anatomy is concerned, and at the same time very injurious to their moral and aesthetic feelings.

Hon. Andrew D. White, LL. D., late President of Cornell University: "In my opinion experiments involving either the infliction of pain or death upon helpless animals in the presence of children should be discouraged."

Hon. Arba N. Waterman, ex-Judge of Illinois Appellate Court, Chicago: "Civilization in its moral aspect consists in a heightened sympathy with, and consideration for, those men or animals in our power. It is impossible to train a child to indifference as regards the suffering of a helpless dog, and at the same time to be mindful of the rights of little children."

Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, Chicago: "The practice of vivisection in the higher schools of our country, medical and other colleges, has been carried, to say the least, to the borders of abuse, and its introduction to the public schools should be discouraged and condemned by all who have the highest good of the rising generations at heart."

Samuel J. Barrows, Editor of The Christian Register, Boston: "The development of the spirit of love, mercy and justice is more important than to turn the school room into a butcher's shop or a dissecting room to gratify an intellectual curiosity."

"Better even a world without physiology than without pity."

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.

Ladies Overcome—Remarkable Scenes at a Spiritualist Meeting—One woman Carried Out—Others Had to leave—Mrs. Lole F. Prior, the Central Fgure.

Some remarkable scenes were witnessed last night in the Co-operative Hall, Downing street, where Manchester Spiritualists celebrated the 59th anniversary of modern Spiritualism.

Though the gathering was not in the nature of a seance, the proceedings and the atmosphere had rather an overpowering effect on a number of ladies.

Several had to leave the hall, and at one stage the proceedings were interrupted for some time by the collapse and subsequent hysterical outbreak of a woman near the platform.

Efforts to calm her failed, and she had to be carried out by a number of gentlemen. The scene had the effect of upsetting others, who also left the hall.

All the doors were thrown wide open, but even then a number of highly-wrought women might be noticed leaving their seats, and weakly making their way out into the air.

Some of those who left, it was explained, were not Spiritualists, but people who came in anticipation of a seance, and who had worked themselves up to a high pitch of nervous excitement in anticipation of a communication from the spirits.

Rev. R. T. Campbell, Prophet.

Some remarkable speeches were made.

Councilor J. T. Ward, of Blackburn, held that there was not sufficient investigation in home circles. Many of the mediums were receiving remuneration and not giving that amount of friendly helpfulness that was given in former times.

The address of the evening was delivered by Mrs. Lole F. Prior, American National State missionary medium, who described Spiritualism as "the greatest cause in the progress of religion that the world has ever known."

Spiritualism, if rightly understood, eliminated selfishness and compelled toleration to all men. It was wide as the universe, and knew no horizon, and in time would destroy the lines of nations, and would prove to the world that all men were brothers.

This was the message that had been brought to her when the invisible ones thought fit to communicate with her.

Spiritualism was older than fifty-nine years. If they were to take the phenomena out of the various Bibles of the world what would be left? When the demonstration of spiritual communication was taken out of them there was nothing left but philosophy.

Referring to "that noble, wonderful, inspired man, Rev. Mr. Campbell, of the City Temple," Mrs. Prior declared "as one who has met this gentleman, I feel I must bow before him. If there was ever a prophet born into this world he is one.

"It is true that what he has given to the world as a New Theology is old Spiritualism. But I honor the man who stands up and says: "Spiritualism I don't know as yet, but I hope it is true.'

"He recognizes that what is vital in religion is impressed in Spiritualism."

No Homes for Aged Mediums.

Proceeding the speaker claimed that the wonderful gift of mediumship was either a glorious blessing or a damnable curse.

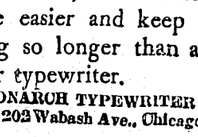
"I don't wish to be personal," she continued, when I say that Spiritualists do not make the right conditions for the mediums.

"If all the Spiritualists of the world acknowledged themselves as such in these days it would be a society of two millions."

Commenting on the growth of the movement during the last 59 years, Mrs. Prior said they had not done enough for the spirit world. "Where are our meeting places?" she asked, "our hospitals, and homes for the aged mediums, our representatives in the halls of justice."

Mr. John Walreck expressed the hope they had done Rev. Mr. Campbell no harm that night. He was doing a lot of good in the right direction, and if he were to declare himself a Spiritualist he cound not go on doing it.—Daily Despatch, Manchester, Eng.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. White, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.



"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

RHEUMATISM CURED

New External Remedy

Which Any Sufferer Is Welcome to Try Without Cost.

If you have rheumatism we want you to try a pair of our Magic Foot Drafts at our expense. We are having phenomenal success with them on all sorts of cases, after doctors had given them up.

We're so sure we can cure you that we take all the responsibility. No matter whether you've had rheumatism all your life, or whether this is your first attack, send us your name to-day. We'll send you a $1.00 Pair of Drafts by return mail, prepaid, to try in your own home, and we trust you to send us one dollar for them after you are satisfied with the benefit received—not a cent until then. We accept your word without question. Don't delay until this offer is withdrawn, but send your address to-day to Magic Foot Draft Co., X017 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich. Our new Illustrated Book on Rheumatism comes free with the trial Drafts. Write to-day.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., 200 and 202 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE WIDOW'S MITE, AND OTHER PSYCHIC PHENOMENA.

BY ISAAC K. FUNK.

A remarkable book, of intense interest to all, whether Spiritualists or Materialists, investigators or believers. The author has embodied in this book an account of his wonderful personal experience, and has culled from other sources the experiences of others, including scientists of world-wide reputte, making a volume of great value, 528 octavo pages. Price, cloth, $2.

MAHOMET, THE ILLUSTRIOUS!

By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics. No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. Price, 25 cents.

THE TALMUD Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends. Also brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polang. 856 pp. Price, cloth, $1

RATIONAL MEMORY TRAINING.

Hints and helps in memorizing figures, lists of words, prose and poetic literature, new language, etc. By B. F. Austin, author of several other works. Price, 50 cents.

A. P. A. MANUAL A complete expose of the principles and objects of the American Protective Association. A book for all patriotic American citizens. Price, 15 cents, or two for 25 cents.

The Wonders of Life.

By ERNEST HAECKEL, Author of "The Riddle of the Universe." This book is confined to the realm of organic science, and treats of "The Knowledge, Nature, Functions and History of Life." Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE RELIGION OF CHEERFULNESS

By Sara A. Hubbard.

This little booklet sets forth interestingly a religion which all may admire and experience with benefit to body and spirit. Very nice for a holiday present. Daintily printed and bound, in a case. Price 50 cents.

SIX HISTORIC AMERICANS.

A Book That Every American Freethinker Will Delight to Own.

By John E. Remsburg.

The work consists of two parts, "The Fathers of Our Republic," and "The Saviors of Our Republic." In regard to Paine's religious views, Mr. Remsburg establishes the negative of the following (1) Was Paine an Atheist? (2) Was he a Christian? (3) Did he recant? Page after page of the most radical freethought sentiments are culled from the correspondence and other writings of Franklin and Jefferson, which show that these men were as pronounced in the rejection of Christianity as Paine and Ingersoll. That Washington was not a Christian nor a believer in Christianity. In support of Lincoln's infidelity he has collected the testimony of more than one hundred witnesses.

The book is handsomely bound in cloth, giving fine portraits of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant; also portrait of the author.

This book contains 365 pages, printed on heavy paper, well bound in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism

A Treatise on

HUMAN CULTURE.

By Leroy Berrier Anthropologist and Author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price, $1.00. For sale at this office.

The Majesty of Calmness. The Kingship of Self-Control.

Two dainty white gift books by Wm. George Jordan, treating of individual problems and possibilities in the light of the

New Thought.

They are very interesting and instructive and worth more than the price indicates, as an ornamental and valuable addition to the library. Price, 80 cents each.

The Progressive Thinker.

SPIRITUALISM—Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.—SPIRITUALISM

VOL. 35 CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 4, 1907 NO. 910

The Haunted Palace.

A Rendezvous of Spirits, in Which Extraordinary Manifestations Took Place, as Related in the Annals of Psychic Science, London, Eng.

In view of the fact that certain unauthorized and wholly inaccurate versions of the incidents detailed below have been published, I consider it advisable to set forth in due sequence the events as they actually occurred; in order that those who take an intelligent interest in such phenomena may have a trustworthy and authentic account at first hand, and be able to form a judgment, whether favorable or not, as regards the interpretation of the facts, based upon an unimpeachable narration of the facts themselve.

On a certain winter evening, at the end of the nineties, Prince Nicholas Bagration, of Troubnikoff Bor, Russia, accompanied me to a concert. The music being indifferently performed, we left early, and returned to my apartment, which was situated on the second floor of an old palazzo dating from the fourteenth century, in the Via dei Bardi, Florence. On entering the drawing room the Prince suddenly remarked, "Why, this room is full of spirits! Don't you notice it?" "Yes," I replied, "I have always felt it, and whenever I want to practice after eleven at night I am invariably driven away. Suppose we put our hands on the table and see what will come of it?" The suggestion was agreed to, and we took our places accordingly.

The first communication we received was from an entity who gave the name of Rosie Mortimer, and I entirely failed to remember anything about such a person until she reminded me of certain curious circumstances, that need not be gone into here, under which I had visited her years before upon her death-bed. She then offered to tell me anything I wished to know, and I thereupon asked her about the spirits that seemed to infest the house. "If you want to know about the murder," she replied, "I will call the Cardinal." The table became still; then it began to move again, but in a totally different manner, twice tracing the sign of the Cross, and rapped out:

"I am Niccolo Ridolfi del Tolomei. My church name was Formosus. I was twice Archbishop of Florence."

"That is nonsense," said Prince Nicholas. "Nobody was ever twice Archbishop here."

"You do not believe me," replied the Cardinal. "Go to the Archbishop's Palace and see for yourself. The Archbishop is rough and stupid, and will not show you the archives; you must fee the servant. And now I will go away."

That ended the seance. But next day Prince Nicholas went to the Palace, where everything fell out exactly as the Cardinal had foretold. The Cardinal-Archbishop Bausa would not assist him so he fee'd the servant and got what he desired. The fact was established that Ridolfi had been Archbishop of Florence first in 1515 under Leo X., that he had been forced into exile during a political upheaval, and that he was reinstated in his office in 1532.

For several nights the conversation with the Cardinal was continued, a third person, whom I will call Mr. H., taking down the letters as they were rapped out. The Cardinal told us that a murder had been committed in the palace in 1472; the murderer's name he refused to give, but the victim was one Luigi Baldi, his page and the lover of his wife; and the body was buried where the murder took place, in what is now the hall. The fact of the murder came to the Cardinal's knowledge under the seal of confession long after, and it was of particular interest to him as the murdered youth was his son.

"You wicked old man!" here interrupted H,

"I mean my son in the Church," explained the Cardinal. "Four people are still unhappy; myself, the murderer, the wife, and victim, whose bones are lying in an unconsecrated place." He then went on to tell us that in former days the palace belonged to a family named Ilarione, and that then it was arranged quite differently — statements corroborated by the present owner. The body, he said, was hidden under the stones of the hall, between the window and the door leading to the corridor, and added that none of them would be happy until a service for the remission of sins had been performed by a priest. As the proprietor refused to have the tiles removed so that the body could be properly buried, a service on the spot would do as well.

We then asked about the nature of the sufferings endured by the parties to the crime, and he replied that they consisted in the murderer being compelled, as a punishment, to repeat the deed every evening between eleven o'clock and midnight. We immediately enquired whether it would be possible to see the murder, and the table did not move. I then suggested—it being Thursday—that Prince Nicholas and Mr. H. should come and dine with me on the following Saturday. The table rapped out: "Do so. We will do our best."

On Saturday evening, Mr. H. arrived first, saying that the Prince had been in town all day, but would come in a few minutes. Soon afterwards he came in, looking very white. He said he was glad to have got here, for a strange thing had happened to him during the afternoon. He had been paying one or two visits and had gone to see a lawyer, and whenever he came out of a house or a shop there was waiting outside a Franciscan monk who stared at him with large hard eyes. The monk had a hooked nose, and always kept one hand covering the lower part of his face. He followed the Prince wherever he went, and when at last he arrived at the Piazza d'Ognissanti, where he had to meet a friend, the monk was standing in the doorway of the monastery. Prince Nicholas asked his friend if he did not see him too, and the latter said no, he saw nothing. Then for the first time the Prince thought it must be a spirit. He went on to say that he was feeling very unwell, and complained of pains in the palms of his hands and in his legs. At dinner he was very quiet and ate little, and after dinner he asked if he might lie down on the sofa, as he felt very sleepy. "No," I said, "don't go to sleep. Remember that we are going into the hall tonight, and I want to ask the Cardinal first what we are to do." So very sleepily he put his hands upon the table.

Our summons was promptly answered by Rosie Mortimer, who gave us a message from the Cardinal to say that he couldn't come. "But why not?" I asked in surprise. "He has always come to us before!" "He has drawn substance from the Russian," she replied. "To-night the Russian must sleepy, and you must see the murder through him. It was the Cardinal who was with him today, as he wished to make him familiar with his appearance. He procured the Franciscan robe from a lay-brother who had died at Ognissanti. But he failed to get sufficient substance for the lower part of his face, and that is why he kept it always covered." The Prince did not seem to like all this. "No wonder I feel so queer," he said. "Well, I suppose I must go into a trance." Thereupon I asked Rosie how I was to wake him if he slept. "Wave a handkerchief in front of his face," she replied.

At a little before eleven we went into the hall. We had a lamp and the Prince sat on a sofa where we could see the corner in which Luigi Baldi was murdered. As the clock struck the hour I said to him: "Now you have to go to sleep." He was asleep in a second. Then he got up and walked to a chair, drew another towards him, and sat as if in conversation with some one. He then knelt down before the chair, rose, crossed himself, and looked towards the corner, trying apparently to get there but not being able. He groaned and sobbed, and I saw the tears rolling down his face as though in agony. At last in one bound he reached the corner; stooped down, still sobbing, and seemed to be lifting something heavy, looking meanwhile at his right arm. Then he appeared to put the weight down, gazed up and all round the hall, walked back to his chair and stretched his legs out straight in front of him. I waved the handkerchief in front of his face, and he awoke, crying, "Take me away! I have seen the most awful thing I ever witnessed in my life."

The following account of his vision was dictated by him to me word for word as it stands here:

"I first saw a man dressed in a long dark robe, with a small dark skull-cap on his head, very piercing dark eyes and a rather large nose. He was clean-shaven, and looked like a priest. He had a touch of red near the throat, small buttons all down his robe, a ring, and a cross hanging from a chain round his neck. He was sitting on a chair. I approached him and knelt down, while he laid his hand on my head and blessed me. Then he held my arm and told me not to move away from him. Immediately afterwards I saw the tapestry moved from the door and a man go behind it; but what age he was or what he was like I could not see, except that he was dressed in dark clothes. Moonlight was streaming in at the window. Then the door opened again, and I saw a dark-haired woman in a white flowing dress, with short sleeves, run in. Her face looked as though she had been crying, and I thought I heard her scream. She ran through another door facing the first one. Following her came a youth, also running. He was dressed in trunk-hose, one striped red and the other blue, a white shirt all puffed coming from under his laced waistcoat, and puffed laced sleeves. He had a pleasant expression, and his fair hair was cut straight over the forehead. He looked very young. When he entered the figure behind the tapestry pulled out a dagger and stabbed him in the back between the shoulders. The boy fell down in a heap, and the figure of the murderer disappeared. I rushed forward to take his head in my arms, but I felt that he was quite dead. Then the room seemed to fill with people, and somebody—I don't know who—said: 'It is half confessed and half forgiven.' At this juncture I awoke, and for several days afterwards I seemed to feel the grip of the Cardinal on my arm. In him, too, I recognized the person who had followed me in the street."

The door through which the woman passed was one of which we did not know the existence until the present owner of the palace told us he had walled it up.

The service of expiation was duly held. The night before this took place there seemed to be great excitement in the flat, much running about and shuffling of feet, but after the service all was quiet.

When it was finished we all laid our hands on the table and a new spirit came, who said: "I am Ilarione the murderer. I have come to thank you; I am now forgiven and am happy." Then another spirit came, who said she had been maid to Giulia Ilarione and was in the house when the murder was committed. Among other historical details given us by the Cardinal were that he was buried in Sta. Maria Maggiore in Rome, that his life is included by Landini in his History, that his portrait still exists at No. 17, Via Maggio—a statement verified by Prince Nicolas—and that the Baldi family are buried at Santa Croce in Florence. He told me to go and see the place. I asked him whether I should apply to the sacristan, and he said: "No. Walk straight up to the high altar, then turn to the left, and there you will find the Baldi stone." I followed his instructions and found everything just as he had said.

HELEN MACLEAN.

Sacred are the lips from which has issued only truth. Over all wealth, above all station, above the noble—the robed and crowned—rises the sincere man. Happy is the man who neither paints nor patches, veils nor veneers! Blessed is he who wears no mask!—Ingersoll.

Uplifting and Spiritualizing.

The Uplifting and Spiritualizing Instruction Given to the Psychic Class at the Morris Pratt Institute, by Mattie E. Hull.

I saw in The Progressive Thinker of March 9, 1907, a plea for suggestions for our beloved institute. We of the M. P. I. all welcome the call for aid in this direction. We love the school, and know that all others would love it as we do if they were only acquainted with its teachings. We heartily thank the writer of the article for his good word. But I wish to speak of a certain line of work that I am particularly interested in at this moment, that of the Psychic Class. I will quote from the paper.

A strong and comprehensive Psychic Department is needed — one that grasps the truths of mortal systems of psychology and substitutes for their mistakes the better lessons of the teachers on the higher planes of spirit life. Its principal aim should not be to make every student merely a medium but to teach each one how to attain the fullest unfoldment of mental and soul powers possible for the individual, and make all such real helpers of humanity, as well as instruments for spirit intelligences. Right living of life on this sphere is a perfect fitting for the next one to follow.

That is exactly the teaching we have always received under the leadership of Mrs. Hull. We need no other instructor as long as Mrs. Hull can be spared to us.

She is not only an amanuensis for a band of workers from the spirit side of life, who give us the best teaching for the "fullest unfoldment of mental and soul power possible for the individual." She is a highly inspired teacher. At times we are at a loss to know which is her best work, that which comes from the tongue, or from the pen. NO! WE DO NOT NEED another teacher as long as Mrs. Hull can be spared to us. I feel I must copy from a few of her lessons, which I have had the pleasure of reading to the class this winter several times as the food seemed sufficient for several classes. I have also been requested by the class to use my persuasive power upon Mrs. Hull to have these beautiful messages put in book form for the technical work in the Psychic Class, so that they could be studied as a text book. I assure you, dear readers, that I shall use every bit of oratory I possess, if necessary, to bring about this result, and shall commence my plea as quickly as the noble little woman comes within the sound of my voice.

I am anxious to give you samples of her teachings, and in looking over the many messages that have come to my hands this winter, I find it hard to make a choice. I will give a short portion of the fourth lesson on "Soul Power."

"When one becomes conscious of the awakening of the soul power, he should consider he is in possession of infinite possibilities; he should strive to express himself as one who realizes he must grow through unfoldment, and never assume the tone nor action of a suppliant, or a beggar, at the hands of spiritual beings. * * * It is your privilege to determine what you want to do with life. What door shall open a way to the noblest use of your powers. Should you consecrate your forces to the realm of spiritual work, there are two rules to be studied: One is to learn how to wisely command; the other how to wisely obey. You have a right to choose who shall take possession of the throne within your soul. Do it wisely. Be positive in establishing your rightful conditions. After the relationship has been established and you have full confidence in the associates chosen or accepted, then become negative, and obey while the co-operation continues. Our leading desire is to assist you in a normal way in the evolution of your soul's forces that you may realize the importance of knowing how to become positive to some conditions, and at the same time negative to others."

Signed, "The Band."

One of the most interesting is on the subject of "Vibration," but it would necessitate publishing the whole lesson, and it would make the article too long. I will quote a very short portion of one of the messages on Will.

"Remember we would not decry any phase of mediumship, nor discredit the, blessed work of arisen souls. We do, however, urge that every one who listens to this communication shall exert his will to such an extent that a choice be made as to whose hand even from the invisible side, shall play upon the inner strings of your sensitive souls. Are you to interpret the messages from the spiritual world in the written message, then fully appreciate your ability to do so, but consider your own hand which does the work, ever holding the individuality of the person supreme. Loan the hand at a reasonable time. A wise, well directed will must play an important part in all mediumistic work. "A wise beneficent denizen of the spiritual realm, will never demand a subjugation of your will.

"Remember, beloved student, the noblest test of will power is often manifested in the spirit of renunciation, and there are circumstances when man's sublimest strength is shown not in the accomplishment of a victory but in a gracious yielding."

Signed, "Friend of Humanity."

We will now give you a portion of a message on "Spiritual Progress":

"Spiritual progress in its fullest meaning does not necessarily include more development in any one or more phases of mediumship, but a better understanding and a higher appreciating of life in all of its forms, and under all circumstances. Spiritual progress is something apart from metaphysical theories that would loosen every cord that binds one to earth and sends him to dwell among the clouds.

"There are many popular theories extent, relative to the theme introduced in this message, but none more fallacious than that taught by the extreme metaphysician.

"True spiritual progress can have no better definition than this: A strong mastery by the spirit within us over the conditions that otherwise would crush us, brought about by an intelligent recognition of the divine force of the soul.

"Many suppose they have achieved a remarkable growth in spiritual unfoldment when they have psychically unfolded to hear and to see; when they have developed the phases of psychometry and can interpret the vibrations that radiate from inanimate objects; or if at times they can pass into a state of unconsciousness and deliver an address or diagnose disease—not one or all of these are necessarily tests of spiritual progress. We say this because we are sure every one who listens to the reading of these lines must be aware that there are persons who enter into work leading along the lines we have mentioned, who have no motive beyond the lucre that may be obtained in return. We are not decrying the fact that such work asks for reasonable remuneration, but if the only motive is based upon mercenary principles there is no holy ground upon which the person stands, hence there is no real foundation for spiritual progress.

"The test of the growth of a soul must always be proven from within.

"If a psychic is given to avarice or dishonesty of any kind he is not on the road to progress, no matter how remarkable his work may seem.

"The popular preacher who mingles little with the affairs of men, but seeks the solitude of concentration and prayer, and who with every wish gratified, no wants denied, gives no proof of spiritual progess when he presents his sermon to the Sunday congregation—until he has felt the pain throbs that sometimes pierce the heart of humanity, until he has touched the pulse of the great public and knows something of its hot tense beating, what proof has he, what proof has his friends that he is growing spiritually.

"There is another important point to touch before we leave this theme. One can seldom judge of the spiritual progress of a denizen of the spirit world; it cannot as a usual thing be fairly presented through sensitives or psychics. We might say this is almost universally true, regardless of the time in which the spirit person has been in the spirit world, if the controlling intelligence be ever so profound and the sensitive cannot respond when the control would strike his dominant tone, to use a musical term, then he is compelled to express himself on a common mental plane, or perhaps by personating through the sensitive, or by describing the cause of transition.

"We cannot say too much in encouragement of the cultivation of our spiritual nature. Strive to grow, to progress in every way along the line of spirituality; then when a grand soul touches the atmosphere of your inner life, you will more truly respond, and the arisen ones will rejoice that through human lips they can give the results of their spiritual progress in the spirit world."—"The Band."

One I shall now copy is such a beautiful description by Mrs. Hull herself of the conditions that surround her in many of her seasons of sitting that I want the lovers of this beautiful philosophy to have it to read. However I shall not give it in full.

"Beloved members of the Psychic Class,—I have just experienced a delightful season, for a brief time with my arisen friends.

"I had thought I might be compelled to forego my sitting today, as business matters compelled the attention of Mr. Hull and myself nearly all the morning; but the opportune time came and like a child, with a prospective feast of good things, who would naturally rush into the banquet when the door opens to admit an entrance, I immediately seized the opportunity, and am fully repaid. I know, however, the 'flow of soul' is not for me alone. The hush of my heart is as holy as hours when angels have flown." * * *

"My dear comrades, I feel how imperfect my translation of useful and beautiful thoughts must be, when I sit and listen almost breathlessly at times to the Voice which on many occasions has seemed so mysterious to me.

"How many times this stanza in Father Ryan's poem, "The song of the Mystic," comes to me when I sit in a conscious state and receive the message from my unseen teachers and cherished friends:

"'Far out on the deep there are billows,
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the silence,
That never shall float into speech;
And I have had dreams in the valley
Too lofty for Language to reach.'

"I see several of our band of spiritual workers about. I wish I could describe the circle as I behold it this minute, but the description would cover pages and the writing would become wearisome.

"I must speak of the noble soul who from the earliest work of the Psychic Class had been with us, the Friend of Humanity. He sits very close to me, and his right hand is somewhat elevated as though holding something. I see a soft yellow light shining over the whole hand, and extending several inches from the hand in a perfect circle. I am given to understand that he is at present the medium between myself and some spirit power apart from himself. Nearly opposite me, and a few feet away, I am shown a room which seems the duplicate of the room in which we hold the Psychic Class, only it is so much more beautiful as you can imagine the spiritual realm to be more beautiful than that of earth. The seats are arranged as ours are, and while I do not see human forms and faces, I know the chairs are occupied, and from every one radiates the color, such as I have seen respectively in the grouping of the M. P. I. Temple. The seats are covered with soft white drapery that scintillates and shines at times, then nearly fades from my sight. Sweet melody floats out on the air. I have held my breath to listen. I caught only four lines. They run thus:

"'Many a soul desires to know
If there is a place where heart dreams come true,
A place where thoughts our loved ones reach
That never in earth were framed in speech.'

[Then came the refrain.]

"'Yes beloved, in a land we know,
Many a beautiful dream comes true.'

"I turned to the noble man at my side and said: 'Can you explain this vision, and who has inspired the song?'

"He answered:

"'The vision of the group, whose faces you could not discern was presented simply to show you, for the benefit of those who will hear these words that you may know just how the noble class in the upper room in the loved Temple looked to the invisible friends, when every soul is attuned to love, harmony and peace and fully consecrated to the work of the hour.'

"'Every thought modifies the radiation of the soul's aura. No twilight sky, with its wonderful transformation of clouds, is more beautiful, nor is it half as interesting to study as the marvelous changes caused by the thought waves sent from a human soul. When this fact is universally known a new mental world or state will be evolved, and right thinking will produce right living, hence you must learn that all goodness, beauty, truth and harmony, must reach from within, outward, and then man's greatest success is achieved.'

"'There need be no impatience nor worriment relative to the unfoldment of mediumistic state. It is known that the source of it all lies within self. The springs of inspiration are within each one; it is for you to decide whether the stream of inspiration that is to reach humanity through your organism shall be clear, beautiful and refreshing, or dark, muddy and depressing.

"'Your Psychic Class in its best condition, represents harmony and beauty; live and work for the possible.

"'Peace be with you.

"'The Friend of Humanity.'

And peace is with us, and has been with us through the winter. Such messages could bring nothing but peace.

We try to conduct the class—in fact all the classes—in the way that best pleases the pupils. They are men and women in the M. P. I., and know what they want, and so we co-operate with them, and are all students, and all enjoy our work in every department.

Reading the messages to the class awakens thoughts, to express which occupies the remainder of the period. One period each week is devoted to these messages, and another to talks by two of the students on certain spiritual subjects, followed by mediumistic powers, in any phase the student feels to give.

Often during the period, independent raps will emphasize every point of thought given. Upon inquiring of the spirits as to their errands, they inform us they are simply attending the session with us.

MRS. ALFA HULL NIVER.

MR. BARRETT'S LETTER.

It Is Greeted With Hearty Approbation.

With deep satisfaction have I read Pres. Barrett's sane expose of the present status of Spiritualism. His words are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." They are words of wisdom gleaned from long experience in the fore-front of our propaganda. One point, especially, is so well taken that I want to add my word of approval.

The great army of Spiritualists who insist upon "Signs and wonders," in season and out of season is offset by as vast an army who totally abjure all demonstrations of continuity of life.

We want to reach as many people as we can. We want to gain friends and adherents from every class in the nation. To do this we must put into our Spiritualism all the tact we possess; we must not force people.

For those devoted societies who undertake the holy task of teaching the ethics of Life before and after death, it is well to hold meetings of instruction distinct from meetings of demonstration. This method will have weight with the two distinct types of humanity, viz., the exoteric, who must be reached by means of the five senses; and the esoteric, who find logic, reason and interior illumination quite sufficient evidence of immortality. I know many people who prize the religious, philosophic and scientific teachings of Spiritualism's inspired speakers, who would never enter a seance room, and vice versa.

Let societies adopt Mr. Barrett's suggestion: hold two types of meetings; be resourceful enough to feed all classes who are drawn to them. Portion the Truth out according to the needs of each, and note the gratifying results. Neglect in this essential has created the New Thought, and various other movements.

Be "all things to all men," a Religion for the religionist; a Philosophy for the philosopher; a Science for the scientists, and Phenomena for the phenomenalist.

Yours for Universal Spiritualism.

BESSIE BELLMAN,
Vice Pres. K. S. S. A.
707 Church St., Winfield, Kan.

Mind is a Wireless Telegraph.

Are you a sensitive? There is no doubt that some persons are so organized as to make natural sensitives. They have remarkable intuitive power, which means that they receive impressions easily. Supposing two sensitives to be closely related to one another or drawn together by a bond of sympathy, and supposing them to be in different parts of the world, and the life of one to be in danger, the first thought he would project into space would be for his distant friend. If that friend is actively engaged at the time the message may be lost, but if he happens to be in a passive state his brain will receive some impression, clear or confused, which will make him think of the absentee and render him anxious, as if something had gone wrong with him. Such messages are more common at night, because we are less preoccupied than during the day. By means of this wireless telegraphy an image is produced on the brain which is projected outwards, causing the absent friend to be seen as if in body, and even the actual circumstances of his dangerous position may be produced. Thus saith Dr. Bernard Hollander of London.

JOHN A. HOWLAND.

"BEWILDERED SPIRITS."

Reflections Thereon by Lewis Peterson.

To the Editor: The startling significance of the work performed at the circle described in No. 905, under the heading, "Bewildered Spirits," is so far-reaching that I again beg leave to call the readers' serious attention thereto. Unfortunately, as a general thing, unless we have been awakened by some such personal experience, we are too apt to glance over articles of the greatest importance in a superficial way, and all too quickly look elsewhere for other sensations.

I fear this is true in very many cases, and therefore it may seem almost a waste of time to write them out and go to the large expense of puting into print in order to cause the reader to think, and think deeply. One such case, if authentic, is as valuable as any number can be, and as to that, I have had anxious inquiries, and am, as certain of its genuineness as of my own existence. Let us, therefore, devote a little more thought to this case; it deserves it.

It was a private circle to which I was invited by my good friend and spirit brother, Carlyle Petersilea, and they came several miles in order to tender me the invitation. Pardon me now if I digress a little. I feel free to mention his name, because a new hope has been kindled in the breast of thousands by reading the soul-inspiriing writings of the Petersileas.

"Mary Anne Carew," for instance, telling of her birth into spirit-life, and experiences in the summer-land, is one of the sweetest books that was ever handed down by means of the fully inspired organism of a mortal. Knowing the extremely truthful channel through which it came as well as I do, I am pleased to know that it is on sale at the office of this paper.

Shall I now anticipate a little by telling that we contemplate bringing out two new books? one of which will be entitled, "Solon and Mary," a sequel to "Mary Anne Carew." It was inspired by Solon, and tells of the experience of the angels, Solon and Mary after they crossed the beautiful lake, and entered the angelic city.

The other, manuscript was inspired by that great writer, Charles Dickens. He entitles it, "A Celestial Wanderer," in which he graphically describes his entry into, and wanderings, and experiences in, the spiritual realms. They are keenly interesting, which is all I had better say on that subject at present.

And now your attention to the circle work again. The medium came into the circle with two slates in his hand, which we saw thoroughly cleaned. He also brought a new tablet for our inspection, from which were torn eight sheets, and let fall to the lap of one of the lady sitters, from which they were quickly taken and placed between the slates, which were fastened together by stout rubber bands. The medium seemed to stand irresolute for a few moments, when he held out the slates to me, which I grabbed by the two corners as he held his. I immediately felt a force within, something like the turning on of a slight current of electricity. I think in less than two minutes of time he said, "All right, separated the slates and let the papers fall to the floor. On picking them up we found seven of them fully covered with writing on one side in different colors, but the other sheet was as clean and white as when put in, besides which there was considerable writing on the inside of one of the slates. Considering the short time consumed, it was indeed a wonderful performance.

I am not able to figure out that it is within the possibilities of human achievement, and am forced to the conclusion that it was done by the higher skill of disembodied souls, for in my philosophy, "There is no death." Here is, indeed, a nut to crack for those who differ on that point, and it is up to them to put on their thinking caps and furnish a better solution.

LEWIS PETERSON.

Seattle, Washington.

THE SPIRIT REALMS.

Think and Sing in Harmony With the Inner Life.

To the Editor: In your issue of March 23d, under the heading "More Notes of a Lady's Experience," is an article by Mrs. Alice D. Green, in which she details some of the minutia of life in the spirit land.

Historians in giving a history of our country are careful to give sufficient detail to make the history easily understood, but in spirit-land history it seems we have but little of everyday vocations of life there.

"What the boy "Harry" says in Mrs. Green's letter, is extremely interesting to me. I could read such experiences every day, and not tire. Such experiences are full of promise, and are prophecies of what may yet be ours in the sweet by and by.

The lack of details in relation to the ever active life in the spirit realms, is a sad imperfection on the part of our speakers, mediums and writers. Fundamentals or basic principles we must have; but who would call a house finished with only its frame work erected? We must have doors and windows, partitions and stairways, and points of several kinds before we can call the house finished. Then various kinds of furniture must be brought in with paintings and ornaments, yet who speaks, except in a general way, of things and conditions that give joy "over there."

The most pleasurable of all my dealings with spirits was listening to details of life beyond the tombs, and my limited clairvoyant observations increased that pleasure.

Our music is sweet, but some of our songs are not in harmony, it seems to me, with the conditions of the inner life. They should reveal the condition of the soul of things. Burns at times touched deeply the soul of things on the mortal side of life, while Watts sang in harmony with the soul of the church, and Byron in harmony with a gay world. Let us sing in harmony with the beauties of the inner life as we understand it, viewed from a Spiritual standpoint.

WM. PHILLIPS.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

ANNIVERSARY IN DETROIT.

Dr. Julia M. Walton Addresses Detroit Spiritualists.

On Sunday, March 24th, the writer was called upon to address the Earnest Workers' Society of Detroit, Mich., to hold exercises in their cozy hall on Michigan Ave. The occasion was the Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, to be commemorated, also to hold memorial services for R. Winkler and Mr. Lambert, named for they have earnestly and unselfishly wrought for the purpose of sustaining the National Spiritualist Association, contributing $25 to that organization this year; and a number of dollars to the Michigan State Spiritualist Association, to help the M. S. S. A. and the Mediums' Home. Have had fine audiences in their hall, and have sustained their great-hearted and kind pastor, Mrs. Mary A. Stein, who seems to have the love and confidence of this band of Earnest Workers.

Two chairs were decorated and placed near the platform. The floral decorations profuse and beautiful, exhibiting the fraternal and unselfish spirit of the members of the society, for those whom it holds in such kindly remembrance. The hall was full to overflowing, and the hard-working and intelligent secretary of the society, Frank M. Halfman, was forced to deny many admittance to the hall.

Mrs. Dr. Fish gave sweet and correct messages and tests from our arisen friends to many in the audience, after the address by Dr. Julia M. Walton.

Mrs. Hurnie and Mrs. Line, both good mediums, and of the kind that is much in evidence in Detroit, always willing to step in the background for the great medium and speaker, kindly gave way that Mrs. Walton might give the audience the benefit of her psychic powers, after Mrs. Dr. Fish. Truly the air was permeated with harmony, and the spirit of love and toleration reigned wholly, no wonder that the angel world gave such satisfactory and correct messages and tests to many strangers, when the united thought of the other mediums present was to aid them with their loving helpful thoughts.

Mrs. Stein, the pastor, was ill but bravely kept her place in the chair, and gave a short but very fine eulogy upon the arisen members.

On the following Tuesday evening, March 26, a reception was given Mrs. Walton, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Fish, at their parlors in the Star Sanitarium on Trumbull Ave. The weather was very discouraging this evening, but quite a number of guests ventured out despite the storm, and a delightful evening was spent by all.

The writer will ever find the pleasant reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Fish one of the pleasant little memories of her life.

JULIA M. WALTON.

WHAT IS LIFE?

Life and Matter Coexisted Eternally.

Life! what is life, where does it come from? Had life on this planet a beginning? When? How? Philosophers have been seeking for the beginning of life in some animalcule which is supposed to have had its origin in spontaneous generation. A couple of years ago the Chautauqua at Jewell City, Kan., had a kind of scientific preacher who gave lectures on evolution. Among other things he said, "the very fact that there is life in this world is proof to me that there is a God."

Well, I don't deny the existence of a God, but the existence of life is no more a proof of a God than the existence of matter. There is today not a scholar living who does not believe that matter is eternal. Matter had no beginning, and matter will have no end.

All things that anybody can possibly think of are eternal. There are today plenty of so-called professors who think that perhaps there is no life except on this planet. Space goes on and on in all directions forever. All space is filled with matter.

Life exists naturally. Life exists for the same reason that matter exists. Life is necessary to the existence of matter, and matter is necessary to the existence of life. If life could be taken out of matter, then matter would cease to exist. Life and matter exist together in the present state of things, for about the same reason that oxygen and hydrogen exist together that water may have an existence.

There is organized matter in all the living animals and in all the living vegetable kingdom. Also there is organized life in living things both animal and vegetable. Unorganized life exists everywhere, in all so-called lifeless or dead matter. There is life—unorganized—in the very dirt under our feet. Scientists tell us that every thing vibrates. There is a constant vibration to everything. The molecules and atoms of which matter is composed are in constant motion, in constant vibration. What it that vibration? What causes it? Life. Take the life away and the vibration will stop and there would be no vibration, no life and no matter.

How or where did the first life cell have a beginning? I don't know. Perhaps by spontaneous generation. We trace all the animal kingdom down to a single cell. In this cell there is life, as all physiologists are agreed. Then there is a union of two cells, male and female; then and there is where organized life begins. At the union of the two cells is where the eternal life and spirit has its beginning. The above is true of both the animal and vegetable kingdom. Perhaps more anon on this subject—I wish to see what others say about it.

JACOB FULMER.

Jamestown, Kan.

A fool in revolt is infinitely wisen than the philosopher forging a learned apology for his chains.—Rossitter.

Some impose upon the world that they believe that which they do not; others more in number, make themselves believe that they believe, not being able to penetrate into what it is to believe.—Montaigne.

Fame is not got by seeking it. All such pursuit is vain. It may very well come about that a man will succeed through tact and various artifices in making for himself some sort of name. But if there is no inner worth, all will prove empty and ephemeral.—Goethe.

April in England.

Interesting Notes of Scenes, Places and Work, by Mrs. Loie F. Prior.

"When the warm sun, that brings
Seedtime and harvest, has returned again,
"Tis sweet to visit the still wood, where springs
The first flower of this plain."

The first day of April, Easter Monday, in England a Bank holiday, when everyone that can, gets out of the cities, to seaside, woods and meadows. The early spring flowers are in bloom, the trees have cast off their winter bareness, and are adorning themselves in fresh young green, while the birds each is trying to outvie the other in sweet song. All nature has awakened from the drowsy sleep of a hard cold winter; awakened suddenly to shout a glad welcome to the warm sunshine. The sun smiles sweetly and impartially upon all; shines, even here in foggy London, calling all laggards out of bed, telling of the new life to be found on hillside and yale, in glen and meadow, over moor and heath.

Never has spring been more welcome to me; perhaps because I am tired, for the past three months' work has been very hard. With the coming of April I am reminded of the fact, and that the days are passing quickly, bringing near the homeward journey, when I will step once more upon my own native heath, after an absence of more than two years.

My visit to Great Britain has been a great pleasure to me, and I hope the work done will bring its own reward, not to me, but to many who have been wandering in the dark. I have worked hard, covered much ground and had little rest time.

The method of working here is much different from that used in America and in Australasia. In the first place, the teacher (or lecturer) is not paid in actual fee, as much as in the named places; but all traveling expenses and entertainment are defrayed by the societies. I will acknowledge, from the report of some of the public workers here, I dreaded the ordeal of being entertained; however, my experiences have been very pleasant, and in one or two cases novel. I can only speak in the warmest terms as to my reception, wherever I have worked, and the best has been offered me, in several instances every luxury.

In the second place, a teacher is not engaged for more than one Sunday's work, morning and evening. The same society may engage the same speaker many times during the year, but not for consecutive work; in my case, this rule was broken many times. Of course this method necessitates a great deal of traveling, which is hard on the worker and expensive to the societies; while the distances are not great, nor are the railway carriages very comfortable, that is, to one who has been spoiled by the luxury of the railway carriages in the U. S. A. I really think that in time this system will have to be abandoned; the officers of the societies will learn that a month's engagement (or more) will be less expensive to the society, and much better for the health of the teacher. For me it has been pleasant, as I have been able to see much more of Great Britain than I could otherwise have done.

I find the societies well organized, especially in the provinces, usually meeting in a centrally located hall, which is well cared for. Special attention is paid to the music, hence the singing is usually very good, better than in many of the places where I have been in the past ten years. I often wonder why, as Spiritualists, knowing how essential harmony is, for the production of good sequences, either for a speaker or psychic, do not strive to have better music at our meeting places. Is there not still a little of the pagan in us, the pagan that loves the sound of melody? Does not the Roman Catholic appeal to that character when he places stained glass windows in his houses of worship, and holds fast to the "Ceremony Grand?" Is that not one of the secrets of his power over the people? Not that I would suggest that we as Spiritualists, should adopt any of his methods, but at the same time, would suggest that we pay a little more attention to the externals, if by doing so, we can make the conditions better for our teachers, and our teachings more impressive for those who come to be taught.

My first public work in England was for the London Spiritual Alliance. As this august body does not hold Sunday meetings, my work was for clairvoyance and during the week, on Tuesday. The success of the first meeting was such, I was invited to occupy the platform whenever I could do so, without interfering with my other engagements. In all, I believe I gave them seven Tuesdays. The only lecture given in London was for the Marylebone Association, which meets at Cavendish rooms. The societies here usually make up their list of speakers a year in advance, hence, there were no open dates for me and only through the kindness and courtesy of Mr. E. W. Wallis, who gave me one of his dates, was I able to speak in London. I was accorded an attentive and enthusiastic hearing. I have been very nicely received by all the public workers here, without exception.

On Jan. 27 I went to Cardiff, Wales, where there is a very nice society. Their hall has been leased by them for some years, so it is nicely fitted up and kept sacredly for the Spiritualists, they having full control of it. I remained at Cardiff a week, gave four meetings during that time, and was able to see much of the surrounding country. The beauty of Welsh scenery is well known, and I was in the very center of much that is both romantic and historic. The first place of interest that attracted me was Llandaff Cathedral, said to be the second oldest church in Great Britain, as the first church was built here in 170 by King Lucius. There are four Norman arches in the present building, which was constructed in 1485, destroyed by Cromwell and remained a ruin from 1575 until restored in 1869. There are a number of very interesting things to be seen. Old tombs, one dated 1875, old oak carving, and a beautiful altar piece, painted by Dante Rossetti, during its restoration. Of all places of worship which I have been able to visit Llandaff Cathedral has left the most impressive effect.

Another delightful spot, is Caerphilly, a quaint old world village, where there are the ruins of Caerphilly Castle.

When built, when destroyed, there are no authentic records, although the outer walls, which are over 12 feet thick, have the appearance of being shattered by gunpowder. The Castle is part of the estate of the Marquis of Bute, a Roman Catholic, who has been careful to preserve them in all their picturesque beauty. I spent many hours in the old keep, the psychological effect was astonishing. I could see the armored Knights and Ladies Fair.

"Many cetiuries have been numbered,
Since in death the Baron slumbered," but his spirit, and the spirits of all his retainers seemed to be walking there.

At Point-y-pridd, where I spent an afternoon, are the ruins of an old Druid shrine. Situated on the highest point, where one has a splendid view of the surrounding country, is the sacrificial stone. There is no doubt in my mind that these people of the past times indulged in human sacrifice. The temple has been built in the form of a serpent, the five stones, three placed in triangular shape, forming the head, and two round ones, on which are signs or figures that resemble our Zodiacal signs forming the eyes, are to be seen, as well as the outlining stones, that formed the body, which coiled about the sacrificial stone.

How one longs to lift the veil of the past, that he might fully understand what took place here. I regretted that I could not remain longer at Cardiff, but the work called me on to Barry Dock, where the coal mined in Wales is shipped, and then trans-shipped. I was at Barry Dock a week, and got a little insight into the lives of the coal miners of Wales.

Liverpool was my next engegement; was there four days, but beyond meeting some very p leasant people, and having large meetings, I was not interested in the city. It is very dirty, and there are many, many unemployed; at the same time some splendidly built business houses and the appearance of great wealth.

From the north (Liverpool) to the south (Bournemouth) was quite a change. Bournemouth is the winter health resort of the English. I was there when the "season" was on. There is a splendid society in this place, with Alfred Russel Wallace as Hon. President. While at Bournemouth I visited Christ church Priory, which is said to have been built with the assistance of an angel of the Lord. Ancient old legends are sometimes found in the most unexpected places. The Priory is built on the banks of the Avon, and the country round about is most peacefully beautiful.

From Bournemouth I went to Nottingham and on February 24 I lectured to packed houses. At the Monday night meetings there were fully sixty turned away, although the hall seated over five hundred people. Of course I visited the lace mills, and saw the girls and men at work. Nottingham Castle, where Queen Elizabeth was once a prisoner, and from which she escaped through an underground passage, which connected with Robin Hood's caves. I visited said caves and walked in Sherwood forest where once rode the gay highwayman with his bold followers.

My next engagement was at Sheffield, where I was the guest of Mr. Appleyard, one of the city councilors. His palatial home was opened for meetings (held in the billiard room) which were a great success. I was a week at Sheffield, a week of pleasure. Each day we drove to the beautiful Derbyshire moors, said to be one of the garden spots of England. When I grow old and weary of life's work, I'll dream of the days spent walking across the Moors! The peaceful landscape, with stone walls (no fences) and cottages, many thatched, and the songs of the larks, high over head quivering in the light and shaking out a rapturous carol, that fills one's soul with gladness.

Perhaps the crowning visit was to Stratford-on-Avon. My pen is too weak to do justice to the most sacred spot in all England; the birthplace of the immortal poet and dramatist, Shakspeare. This spot is the Mecca of all Americans; we come to it as to a shrine. In the church where lie the remains of the Bard, are two beautiful stained glass windows, gifts of Americans, and at the village center is a drinking fountain, the gift of Mr. Childs of Philadelphia. Stratford-on-Avon retains its quaintness, and there are many spots of interest. The house where Shakspeare was born, the cottage of Ann Hathaway his wife, the many gabled house where Washington Irving studied, when he visited Stratford. In the glory surrounding the poet, one loses sight of the fact that once there dwelt in the center of the village, in a quaintly beautiful old oak-beamed house, one whose name every American is familiar with, for he was the founder of one of our greatest seats of learning, Dr. Harvard.

Space will not permit me to go into detail and tell about the drive to Warwick and Warwick Castle, well known in history, nor the picturesque ruins of Kenilworth, about which Sir Walter Scott has woven a garment of romance, which compels one's attention. Never, never will I forget that quiet Sunday evening; the bells, silver chimes, were ringing for even song; the birds, going to bed, were singing the vespers; the sun was waving a scarlet banner, "good night," and into our hearts had stolen peace and rest—the world is very beautiful when the soft light of evening falls.

My next journey was to Scotland. I was there ten days, each day filled full. I opened at Edinburg, "the Athens of the North," and remained three days; the time altogether too short. I visited John Knox's house; well preserved it has been, and is now a museum. St. Giles Cathedral, which has seen many changes, built by the Catholics, it was used to imprison some of the early Covenanters; when Scotland became Presbyterian the Cathedral was turned into three Kirks, then later restored to its former size by the Church of England. It is very beautiful both in archtecture and interior decorations, there are some magnificent stained glass windows. In this church I saw the bronze memorial tablet given by America, as token of admiration for Robert Louis Stevenson.

Holyrood, built by the Stuarts, by James the V., I believe, and for many months the home of the beautiful, but ill-fated Queen Mary of Scots and her unhappy husband, Lord Darnley. The Holy Chapel at Holyrood House, is a ruin, but most interesting, for about it clusters the historic and romantic. Edinburgh Castle, a fortified Castle, from which Mary Queen of Scots, smuggled her little son, turning him over to her friends, the Catholics. The Castle is said to have been built by the Romans. 'Tis now used as barracks, although one sees soldiers everywhere about the Castle, it does not prevent the imaginative mind to see the Duke of Argyle, a prisoner in the tower, nor to recall the fact that he and many others gave their heads for their religion. Oh, the history, the romance, the legends that cluster about this granite built city. And Sir Walter Scott, to whom the most magnificent memorial has been placed (on Princess street), has by his writings lent charm to it all. Ere leaving Edinburgh, I must not fail to mention the fact that a drinking fountain, a memorial to the medium D. D. Home, is also there.

From Edinburgh I went to Greenock and Gourock, on the Firth of the Clyde. At the first named place are the great ship yards, where are built some of the best vessels in the world. The Clyde is a beautiful stream.

Sunday, March 24, I was at Glasgow, where I lectured to packed houses. Glasgow is a busy center, without the romance of Edinburg, a dirty place but a great deal of weath, and very Socialistic. While at Glasgow I spent a day at Ayr, 40 miles distant, stood in the room where the Scotch Bard was born, Robert Burns. I visited "Alloway Kirk," where Tam O'Shanter had his experiences with witches; walked over the "Bridge-o-Doon," where his good horse, minus her tail, carried him safely; and listened to the waters of the rivers sighing "Mary Campbell, my Sweet Mary!" I saw the "Brig-o-Ayr" and the "Two Brigs;" went to the "Tam O'Shanter Inn," and there drank a glass of ale to the memory of the ploughman poet, whose sympathies were so keenly alive that he could feel the pain of a "wee mousie."

I am just returned from Manchester, where I have been attending the anniversary meetings. The enclosed clipping will speak better of the work done than can I.

On the 8th I am leaving for Paris, where I shall be ten days. I will sail from Cherbourg, France, on the 20th of April and hope to reach New York by the 27th, ready for work. I am going to Logansport, Indiana, and all letters may be addressed to me there.

LOIE F. PRIOR.

Logansport, Ind.

"The Kingship of Self-Control." By Wm. George Jordan. It treats of the crimes of the tongue, the Red Tape duty, the supreme charity of the world,

SPIRITUAL FLASHLIGHTS.

One Who Found the Great Light in the Works of Andrew Jackson Davis.

To the Editor: Some few evenings ago I was standing on the balcony of our residence enjoying the marvelous flashlights that were being thrown upon us from the warships then at anchor in the bay. After a length of of time, agreeable to the cool breeze from old Pacific, I returned within doors to take up again my most valued Progressive Thinker, and, as I often say, enjoy a sitting with its numerous readers elsewhere.

In its broad and liberal pages I am sometimes inclined to try my ability to send a pen flash, but whether it give more light I am unable to decide; hence I will come in my way, and lend a few thoughts of ye olden time, as a basis to the new age, in which we now live.

On taking up my paper, almost the first item my eyes rested upon was the glad tidings of the hopeful return of the marvelous flashlights of A. J. Davis—he who brought the full light to the understanding of the new age, which had then been ushered in.

I had spent the winter reading the works of Thomas Paine, political and religious, and gathered up the status of the man. I then read several volumes of Swedenborg in a very quiet way. It was interesting, something new to me, and there it rested.

Not long after this I heard that they were having circles at the house of a Methodist friend, where spirits were said to be rapping. I was in a fright for two or three days, when I seemed to be impressed to go and see for myself what there was to be afaid of, and what a lesson it was.

The good seed was then and there sown on a soil hungering for the bread of life. "The angels came to live with me." I might say spirits, but I learned in my cradle days to say angels. I am still old-fashioned. They came with force, until I cried aloud, "What is this power that fills my whole being with such a weight of glory?" I fancied myself alone, but a voice said, "Spiritualism," in tones not to be misunderstood. I then and there embraced the new "Ism," for all the years of my existence.

I had a few dear friends who were in sympathy with me, not of my own household, for in spiritual words even. I was forbidden to speak to them—but to think or not to think, no one can control us.

I soon had the good fortune to have the loan of "Nature's Divine Revelations," a new volume to me of A. J. Davis. I read it with the utmost care, every line, or word, seemed filled to the utmost with Divine inspiration. The light had come with all its fullness. The flashlight of eternal life. I soon had other volumes of his, of which I wish to speak later on.

From my youth up I had been reared in the most liberal Bible truths which to this day so few of us seem to fully understand. I accepted them as most others do, because it said so; but "causality" being large, I wanted to know the truth and be free from others' opinons. I made a study of the former "great medium," with good effect. I with other ignorant ones, in all ages, had so often read of his speaking in parables which he tells them "They could not bear the full light." We, instead of seeking to understand him, in all its brightness, were too apt to cover it with the chaff of materialism, and rest in our ignorance.

With Spiritualism the full light had come, on the wings of science, or electricity, which had been covered with the same debris for all these centuries, since the Mosaic period, when poor Uzzah had given his life by touching the electric "Ark of God," that marvelous dynamo; probably saving the lives of them all, from the endangered explosion.

I soon possessed myself of a later work, "The Magic Staff," by the same author, which has been a help to me of untold value. I hear our speakers of the present day say that we should not lean upon the gospel. But what said our medium, A. J. Davis, of the staff? "Under all circumstances keep an even mind. Take it, try it, walk with it, talk with it, lean on it forever." O, but you say this is not the gospel. Let me ask you what said the former great medium? "In your patience possess ye your souls." Where do they differ? One spoke in parables, the other nearly two thousand years later gave us the full light.

Rake off the chaff of materialism, which has so long been trying to bury it out of sight, and let us again witness the glorious flashlight of truth.

HARRIET S. PARKER.

THE SILENT PARTNER.

The Great Influence That He, She or It Can Exert Over the Mind and Body.

The member who is most valued, and who exerts the greatest and best influence upon the business affairs of the present day is that well-nigh indispensable individual, the Silent Partner.

Although no one seems to have seen him behind the counter, at the desk, or behind the cashier's window, his money and suggestions are alike welcome to the active, visible workers. He, himself, is always silent, so far as spoken words are concerned. Hence the name, Silent Partner. One does not need to talk when others perform that function for one.

Let us, then, ask: "Who is our Silent Partner and thereby learn if all is well with the business of life.

The self-hypnotized "Christian Scientist" has saddled our Silent Partner with a rather meaningless name, "Infinite Mind." Very unsatisfactory! We don't feel ourselves attracted by the cold and distant "Infinite Mind."

It is amusing to note the self-deluded Scientist's unsuccessful struggles with "Infinite Mind." For instance, when a follower of the "Great Plagiarist" becomes hungry, he does not "treat" himself by mentally affirming that hunger is "error!" He goes right on assuming ("affirming," he names it) that the Silent Partner (our jocular name for the soul, because it is the silent partner of the body) "Infinite Mind," and therefore must "square" with "Perfection."

"Silly foolishness!" exclaims the practical man. Can you blame him for thus summing up the round-the-bush reasoning and boomerang logic of the "Scientist?"

"Christian Science" silliness reminds one of the story told of Sheridan's old bridge builder. It seems that Sheridan desired to move his troops over a certain unfordable river, and sent for his bridge builder.

"Now," said Sheridan, "I want a bridge thrown over this river within three days, and have directed the draughtsman to draw plans accordingly. Put your men at work on the bridge soon as possible."

"All right, sir," said the bridge builder.

Two days later Sheridan sent for the bridge builder and asked, "When will the bridge be finished?"

"This afternoon."

"Where are the plans?"

"I didn't wait for them. They won't be done for two whole days yet. If you don't have to have 'em, you can use the bridge this afternoon. A man that knows HOW, don't need no plans."

While the "Scientist" is vexing himself and everyone else near him with "affirmations," calling the "Infinite Mind," "Divine Mind," etc., the Spiritualist cures himself by becoming at one, in harmony with the laws of Nature, quickly as well as successfully. To quote the bridge builder, "A man that knows HOW, don't need no plans."

Those who become enmeshed in the tangled skein of argument, the thousand-so theories, the god-worshiping ideas of bible-reading narrow heads, can never hope to have success crown their efforts toward mental and physical clarity.

Consult the Silent Partner. Hear that still small voice! It's you, yourself, your soul, the Silent Partner (call it an understandable name, however, not "Infinite," etc.), trying to teach you some solid common sense. David Harum would call that "horse sense," I'm sure.

This is a practical age, and theories get rusty. We need to be ourselves more and someone else less. Get that? It's an everyday way of saying, "Be more individualistic, and let the other fellow gang his own gait."

Now, we are not "Scientists," so we'll just "get well," anyway, while the Scientist is sitting over there in the corner with his eyes squinted tightly shut, looking like a tired owl.

And your Uncle Frank will now tell you how to fool disease and sidetrack sorrow.

Now, sickness is merely an inharmonious condition of either our souls or our bodies—sometimes both—therefore we'll consult the Silent Partner.

"Who's he?" asks some one, way back in the rear.

Why, ourselves! Isn't that just too simple for anything—not complicated, no springs, sharp corners or long levers? You just confer with yourself. Try it. You "don't need no plans," but I'll give you the points of the compass, and then you'll have to steer your ship by the polar star of inspiration. These, then, are the points:

After the cares of the day are over, seat yourself quietly. Think harmonious thoughts. For instance, think of the time when you were a little child, lying in the tall grass, looking up into the great blue sky, and watching the white fleecy clouds waving lazily along.

Continue harmonious retrospection until your brain is youthfulized—that is, made young, calm and restful. Let none but pleasant thoughts engage your attention.

Having attained harmony, you will now tell yourself (the Silent Partner), "To-morrow will be a good day. I know it will be filled with success. Harmony is the base upon which rests all success, health and happiness. Therefore I will be in harmony with all I shall do or say to-morrow. Health and harmony are one."

Retire, resolving to awake refreshed and strong, and you will sleep soundly. No dreams will disturb your mentality, for you have WILLED that harmony shall reign supreme.

You will awaken, as you did in those days of long ago—the glorious mornings of that state of perfect harmony known as youth.

Remember how, when you were about ten years old, you awoke at peace with all the wonderful world and its people?

The laws of Nature have no changed since those mornings, and there is no reason why this tranquility should not be yours now.

Keep your spirit ever young if you would never quarrel with the Silent Partner. Youth and Disease never lived in the same house very long, and Disease was never known to come near the castle of Harmony.

Here endeth the first lesson. No collection will be taken.

E. M. SNARRENBERGER.

Galveston, Texas.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. Professor Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents in succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature, and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. Price, 25 cents.

An Interesting Vision.

Occurring in Paris to the Rev. S. H. Anderson, Congregational Minister, Lately Secretary to the Paris City Mission.

During the afternoon of the 4th of July, 1881, [says the Messenger] I was lying between life and death in a quiet house in the northwest of Paris. Unexpectedly and providentially my brother, a doctor, came in and God, "without whom not a little sparrow falleth to the ground," made use of him to prevent my sickness ending in death. I fell into a deep sleep, during which I had a remarkale dream, the remembrance of which fills me with delight and gratitude. As soon as I was able I wrote the details of this happy vision.

In my dream I found myself at the foot of a very high hill with such an extensive plain before me that I could not discern its limits. The scenery was most picturesque, and here and there were trees and rocks, flowering plants and lovely rivers. In the distance stood a magnificent palace, built of a substance that shone like diamonds. Beautiful avenues led up to this edifice. A majestic beast, like a gigantic lion, in a restful attitude, but with head erect as if on the lookout, lay in front of the principal entrance. Many luminous beings in human form, resplendent in light from head to feet, were active about the building.

I questioned a group of friendly persons among whom I found myself, as to where I was. They told me that this was the heavenly country and that the city of which I heard on earth was not "far off." They informed me I was not to stay there but to accompany them to a higher region. I felt perfectly at home with my companions, who acted as guides to me. We soon commenced climbing the beautiful mountains. As we wended upward I was struck with the resemblance of this charming scenery to some of the enchanting spots I had seen in my earthly existence. One incident gladdened me. On the left hand side of our path, a woman and child were kneeling among beauteous flowers of great variety; they were gazing upwards as in prayer. They had such a peaceful and blissful look and appeared so thoroughly human that I felt I could be quite at home in such a place and in such company. Our passing by did not disturb the praying ones. Just after this we entered a thick cloud. How long we stayed in it I cannot tell, nor how we continued to ascend, whether by walking or being carried. A spell of unconsciousness seems to have come over me then.

When we emerged from the cloud a vision that is impossible to describe, burst upon my sight. I stood facing what seemed to be a mountain of white light. I could not see how far it extended. The slope was as regular as that of a pyramid, and the substance of the mountain shone like a bright diamond. I was amazed at the exceeding number of shining beings that appeared on this mountain side. I stood filled with wonder! My contemplation was ended by my companions bidding me continue the ascent. Now we did not walk, but most pleasantly floated upwards like a balloon in the air, and our track was a broad ray of light descending from the summit of the pyramid. As we were being carried upwards I looked now to this side and now to that, to see as much as possible. On a terrace close to the foot of the mountain was a cloud of shining beings clothed in white light; some were standing and some were sitting in circles, and all making soul stirring melody. A little further on I saw spread a long banqueting table. Crystal vases containing fruits and flowers and beverages could be discerned on a cloth of silvery brightness. Very happy looking beings were seated; their robes were not snowy white like the musicians we had just passed, but were sky blue with a silvery radiance. The perfect freedom and happy converse manifested by this numerous company made one wish to linger amongst them. But we had to ascend. The next thing that arrested my attention was on coming in front of a large hall. We could see round a table a considerable number of persons assembled in council. A map was spread before them, and those, I at that time felt to be men and angels, were consulting together concerning some countries marked on it. I was surprised to see signs of anxiety on the countenances of those thus assembled. As I alluded to this one of my companions told me that those in the hall were anxious regarding the state of some of the nations on the earth. I confessed that I had never thought there could be anxiety in heaven. The color of the garments of light worn by the beings we saw here had assumed a greenish hue. We continued our journey and soon came to a place where we could see beautiful lawns and grottoes, shady pathways among trees with creepers reaching in festoons from one to the other, covered with all sorts of pretty flowers, murmuring streams and smooth green grass combined to make this spot a desirable resting place. On seeing groups walking, sitting or reclining here and there, I expressed the thought that these must be resting. One of my guides answered "Yes, they are enjoying sweet repose after having done their work."

We had now drawn near our journey's end. There burst upon our sight a scene of unexpected splendor. We stood facing a very large building emitting from all sides rays of white and golden light. Its beauty I cannot describe, for the style of the architecture kept changing as we admired. Square and round turrets, domes and spires, appeared and disappeared while we looked on, and yet the body of the building remained unaffected by these changes! We could only see the front of the palace and part of the sides. Thick luminous clouds hid the remainder from our view. A flight of shining steps led up to a platform on which was a dais; on either side of the platform were beautiful pillars of a white substance emitting golden light. Behind the platform we could see an entrance, but an overpowering dazzling light prevented our discerning anything within or beyond. At the base of this palace and on each side were seats on which were resting many beings. Many others were flitting about as if in attendance. Young people and little children were numerous here. As I stood enraptured and gazing in astonishment there emerged from this gloriously illumined entrance a most noble and divine being. He came and stood in front of the dais between the two pillars. His flowing robe looked like gold and diamonds commingled and shed forth a white and yellow radiance. His appearance was almost dazzling. His smile was blissful. I saw his hands but not his feet. What a thrill of delight filled my grateful soul as I reverently gazed at him! In a moment all faces had turned toward this kingly being. I heard musical shouts of joy far down behind me and beheld a vast company joining in the ascending song, and there was gladness unspeakable all around. After a time there was a silence and he spoke in a clear voice, which seemed to reach the whole distance, saying, "Leave everything in our hands; we shall do all things well."

I waited wonderingly, when suddenly a mass of brilliant light flashed past me and, shooting downward through the ranks of bright beings, disappeared through the clouds at the foot of the pyramidal mountain. A long trail of light lingered on its track like that seen after the passage of a meteor. Surprised and startled I inquired what it was. I was told it was a Heavenly Messenger who had been sent with lightning speed to help in some distress on earth.

I awoke, and realized that I had had an extraordinary vision and am truly grateful to God for it. In the book of the prophet Joel, it is written (Chap. II., 28 to 31) "Your old men shall dream dreams and your young men shall see visions, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come."

A STANDARD OF THINKING.

As Briefly Stated by L. R. Walker.

Having lately come into possession of nearly a year of The Progressive Thinker, I have been much interested in reading it, and would be glad of a small space in which to comment on some of the articles pointing out undesirable or disgusting portions of the Bible. I do not make an idol of the Bible, nor call myself a Spiritualist, Theosophist, Christian Scientist, nor any other, "ist," but I do claim a small share of common sense, and can see no use in pointing out the defects in a thing when the time might be better devoted to its beauties. Because one does not understand logarithms or differential calculus, there is no reason why he may not use the multiplication table.

Every city has its slums and so-called red-light districts, but visitors are not shown those parts in preference to its beautiful buildings and parks, nor driven through back alleys instead of boulevards.

From beginning to end the Bible is a book of symbols, and there is no occasion to use those not understood. If a dead dog lies in the street every passerby need not have his attention called to it; rather let it be covered up until removed.

There is a little allegory told in this connection of Jesus of Nazareth; every one who passed had a word of condemnation or disgust for the object, but when Jesus came, he looked at it and said: "How white his teeth are." Instead of calling attention to some of the chapters that have been mentioned, why not point out the ninety-first psalm, the one hundred and third, or the one hundred thirty-sixth, or the fourteenth chapter of John, or thirteenth of First Corinthians, or a score of others that are spiritually uplifting and inspiring?

Shakspeare says something to this effect: "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so," and in these days of progressive thinkers and thinking, it has come to be almost an aphorism that "one grows to be like unto what one thinks." Paul may not be considered to be a good teacher of morals, but he is credited with one of the best bits of condensed wisdom and philosophy to be found anywhere, and which, if generally followed, would make the world a better place. "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, honest, just, lovely, and whatever things are of good report—if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians, 4:8.

L. R. WALKER.

Thoughts.

As a man encounters biting serpents, and reptiles that hide amid the foliage, and the stinging insects that suck the honey from the flowers that adorn his pathway—so do adverse influences make dangerous his every pursuit in life. As there are specific antidotes for poisonous bites and stings, when timely taken, so are there influences, seen and unseen, in opposition to evil, if recognized and followed will lead to the ascendency of good.

As the plant circulates oil, sugar, and starch through its cells for its sustenance, and stores up the surplus in its cereals and kernels for future use in the development of its kind, and the animal likewise conveys the energy of substances through its system, and deposits the surplus in its solar-plexus for similar purposes, so the spirit and soul of his spiritual so the spirit and soul of man gathers knowledge through intellectual sources for the maintenance of his spiritual being, the development of his mental powers, and the reproduction of thought.

Man's fate is the result of an act wrought by his own application of natural law, not divinely foreordained, but dependent upon the specific application.

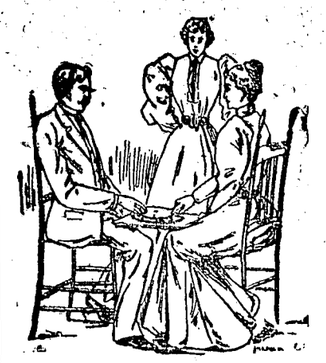
Personal kindness and attachment proceeding from benevolence and goodness of heart, are expressions of that quality of soul which ennobles and beautifies the individual, and gives him power to control opposing conditions.

As one mind transfers thoughts to another, it not only induces assimilation and development in the mental process of the receiver, but is an incentive for further elaboration in that of the giver.

J. BEN. LESLIE.

Buffalo, N Y.

"A Conspiracy Against the Republic." By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. A condensed statement of facts concerning the efforts of church leaders to get control of the government. An important work. Paper, 25 cents.



"Handy Electrical Dictionary." A practical handbook of reference, containing definitions of every used electrical term or phrase. Price 25cts.

"The Spiritual Significance, or Death as an Event in Life." By Lilian Whiting. One of Miss Whiting's most suggestive, intensely interesting, spiritual books. It is laden with rich, thoughtful spirituality. Price $1.00.

It will write in full sight—yes, in full sight and it will write more, write better, write easier and keep on doing so longer than any other typewriter.

THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO.,
200 and 203 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH
OR
Dial Planchette.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than twelve years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the FORMATION OF CIRCLES AND CULTIVATION OF MEDIUMSHIP
with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

The Development of the Spirit
After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Price, 10 cents.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic
By Charles B. Waite, A. M., author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200," etc. Price, paper, 25 cents.

BOOKS BY—
LILIAN WHITING.

THE LIFE RADIANT.—Cloth, $1.00 net. Decorated cloth $1.25. In this, her new book, Miss Whiting aims to portray a practical ideal for daily living that shall embody the sweetness and exaltation and faith that lend enchantment to life. It is, in a measure, a logical sequence of "The World Beautiful." Leading into still diviner harmonies. "The Life Radiant" is characterized by the same essential qualities that have marked "The World Beautiful."
CONTENTS—The Golden Age Lies Onward; Discerning the Future; The Ethereal Realm; The Power of the Exalted Moment; The Nectar of the Hour.

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE; or Death as an Event in Life. cloth, $1.00 A book from her pen means new flashes of insight, a revelation of Spiritual truth almost Emersonian in kind.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE WORLD BEAUTIFUL; First, Second and Third Series. Three volumes, $1.00 per volume,
CONTENTS OF VOL. I.—The Duty of Happiness; Nectar and Ambrosia; Believe in the wings; The Vision and the Splendor; The Enlargement of Relations; Friends Discovered, not made; A Psychological Problem: The Supreme Luxury of Life; Exclusive and Inclusive; Through Scorning Nothing; The Woman of the World; The potency of Charm; Fine Souls and Fine Society; The Laws of Our Country; In Newness of Life; The Heavenly visitors.

AFTER HER DEATH.—A Story of a Summer. Price, $1.00. The ideas in the book will afford comfort to many, and should bring positive aid in borrow to such as will receive its message.—Hartford Post.

FROM DREAMLAND SENT—Verses of the Life to Come. New edition, with additional poems. $1.00. Decorated cloth, $1.25. Lilian Whiting's verse is like a bit of sunlit landscape on a May morning.—Boston Herald.

KATE FIELD; A Record, with several portraits of Miss Field, including one by Elihu Vedder. Decorated cloth, $2.00

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning. With Portrait. Decorated cloth, $1.25.

Discovery of a Lost Trail
BY CHARLES B. NEWCOMB,
Author of "All's Right with the World." Cloth 370 pages. Mr. Newcomb made a distinct success with "All's Right with the World," which continues in the front rank of the Metaphysical books that are now so popular. The great number who have been cheered and strengthened by him will welcome another book by this wise teacher whose words of help are doing so much to make the world better by making men and women better able to understand and enjoy it.
"Discovery of a Lost Trail"
is a simple study of that strange and beautiful thing called life, but grand in its scholarly simplicity. It will be in demand by many who have not previously read metaphysical writings. Price $1.00. For sale at this office.

Spirit Manifestations.

They Come Spontaneously to a Home, and Are Beautiful and Soul Elevating.

You ask me why am I a Spiritualist? I was born a medium. At nine years of age I began to see spirits. Have seen them ever since. I have felt the touch of their hands and heard their voices. I have been controlled by them many times. I have been through the death scenes for many of them. I suppose that was to convince their friends.

There was one experience with spirits that made a lasting impression on me, one I shall carry with me always. It was in 1885 just a few weeks after my marriage to Mr. P., when I heard the voice of an angel over my head sing, then cry, then come close to me, put her hand on my right shoulder, and say, "Don't be afraid; I must come."

After this manifestation one Sunday evening I stepped into the kitchen to put away some dishes. I raised my arm up to put them in the cupboard. Before I could set them down a hand took hold of my arm and pulled it down. I tried three times to put them up, but my arm was pulled back; then I heard a laugh. I then went where Mr. P. was reading. I sat down beside him and said; "I want to tell you something, and I don't want you to laugh at me or call me crazy." I then told him what I had heard and felt. He said: "I would not be frightened. It will not harm you. Just be quiet and see what is wanted. Perhaps you are a medium." I repeated "I will not be a medium."

I will say right here I had no name for what I had heard or seen. I did not know a thing about mediums or Spiritualism. I had never read any Spiritualistic books or papers. I had attended two Spiritualist lectures, but I did not understand them, and did not care for them.

None of my people were Spiritualists.

While Mr. Porter was talking to me an influence began to come over me. I tried to make it let me alone. It said to me, "I must come. I will not harm you. I have a work to do that must be done. If you will help me I will help you."

My right hand began to shake. I felt so faint I asked Mr. P. to get me drink. He got it, but I did not taste it. I thought, perhaps, if I changed chairs the influence would let me alone, so I changed, and then I heard a voice say: "Please go back in the chair you were sitting in. We had conditions all right to come, and you changing chairs, have broken them."

I told Mr. P. what I had heard a voice say. He said, "I would obey the voice." I did so, and then I was controlled, and this is what was said through me, "I come, I come, I come"! The tears began to flow from my eyes, and Mr. P. said, "O, my God, this is P." (his first wife). He began to weep, and said: "I am so glad you have come, but what made you come? Are you not happy?" She replied: "I cannot rest in my spirit home and see my boy going to ruin.' He said to her: "You must be mistaken. What is he doing?"

"He is drinking, and has threatened take his own life. He must not it. You must go to him, and tell n to come here. Tell him that I control Jerry."

I will say here I knew everything as saying, but could not help myk. The spirit held me an hour and alf and told Mr. P. many things.

Tuesday, Mr. P. had his son and mily come over. Before they came began to beg of the spirit to not make me say these things. The spirit answered, "I must come." When he went to tell them to come over, he said to them, "Mother has come to Jay." The son's wife said: "I know why then."

Before the son and family got into our house the spirit had control of me. When the son came in I looked up at him, and the spirit said through me: "My son, I come. Make me a promise, but do not make it unless you can keep it." The tears began to roll down his cheeks, and he said: "I know this is mother. She said, 'Promise me you will never drink any more.'" He replied, "I promise."

We spent nearly half a day with the spirit. The son had been in business with a partner, and the partner had beat him. Mr. P. was blaming the son and would not go where he was, but the dear mother came and brought them together. This incident put a new life in all of us, and after that we set a time each day to receive her. I have been receiving messages from the loved one every since.

After the spirit had gotten through talking with the son on the day I spoke of his wife said: "I will tell you why mother came. I have been kneeling and praying for her to come and help us out of this trouble. He had been drinking and had threatened to take his life. He has been so grieved he thought father had forsaken him in this trouble. Mother came. I knew she would come."

This same spirit said to me: "Your father is sick and is going to pass over. We want you to go and see him. We will go with you. We want him to know of our coming."

At this time I did not know my father was sick. I went right away to see him. I found him in bed. I went in the house under the control of the spirit, and began to give him a treatment with my hands. I did not say a word; there was such a power I could not speak. My dear father looked at me curiously. Finally he said to me, "What is this?" His speaking to me brought me back to myself, and I replied: "Father, I have been controlled by those we call dead, and I have been asking them some questions. They said I might ask them any question about any thing I wanted to, and they would answer me to the best of their ability, so the first question I asked them was, 'Is there a God.' They said yes, but not the kind of a one you have been taught about. You will see God manifest in all life, and all was good."

I will leave this subject here as it would take too much time to relate it all, because it was a long message. While spending a few hours with my parents at that time I went through a number of death scenes of my father's relatives. I asked the spirits if my father would live six months. They said, "No, only six weeks."

I went out to see him often and got messages for him every time. I was with him when he passed over, and I am sure he was in a happy state of mind.

A minister came and prayed for him, and he said to me, "Let them pray if they feel like it. Those messages you have got for me from the loved ones do me more good than his prayers. I am not afraid of my God. I shall get just what I have lived for."

My father had a second stroke of paralysis on Sunday morning, just about the end of the six weeks. I was on my way there when I met a neighbor, notifying me that father was dying. He did not know me when I stood by his bed. This was on Sunday afternoon. The spirit told me then that his spirit would be free from his body on Tuesday morning at four o'clock, and it was.

Monday afternoon at four o'clock I heard voices singing in the room. The death rattles seemed to cease a moment in his throat, and he said: "My father, my mother, my brothers, my sisters, and Marla, are here." I took hold of his hand and said, "Father, do you see them. If you do, press my hand," and he did so. He had not stopped breathing for more than half an hour when I said, "Now I would like to hear from father." The spirits said; "He has not yet ascended from earthly conditions. If he personate through you it will make you sick." I replied, "I do not want to wait." He then manifested through me.

I will say to the friends that I never class these manifestations with fortune telling, neither do I claim to be a fortune teller. Messages from the loved ones are sacred and holy to me. The phenomena taught me of the philosophy.

MRS. J. P. McBRIDE.
Lansing, Mich.

RINGING WORDS.

Upon the Subject of Religious and Political Toleration, From the Medford, Okla., Patriot.

The republic of the United States is founded on religious and political toleration. Cuba has been unable to maintain a Republican form of government for want of this toleration. The revolutions in the South American republics arise usually through an unwillingness of the minority to submit gracefully to the majority.

When this government was established there was placed in its constitution by the first amendment, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof:"

Through this entire session of Congress a senator from Utah has been prosecuted because he subscribed to the Mormon faith. It is not shown that he has violated the laws of the United States or of the state of Utah relating to Polygamy, for he has not. Yet as the day approached for the senate to vote upon his expulsion religious meetings were held in many places where prayers were offered to the throne of grace asking God to place it in the minds of senators to vote for expulsion. Yet these same people accept the teachings of polygamy as applied to the chosen people of Jehovah. They quote the psalms of David and the songs of Solomon, two of the worst polygamists known in history. Polygamy was not right then and it not right now; and it is well that it is prohibited in the republic by statutes irrevocable. The Mormons, though, had illustrious examples for pursuing polygamous relations. Though they may have conscientiously believed it right religiously the practice is in violation of the statutes, and cannot therefore be maintained. So, instead of the churches invoking God's intervention they should apply the power that has made and is able to enforce the law. If Senator Smoot had violated the law he should have been expelled. If not he has the same right to a seat in the senate of the United States as any other citizen of the country. His prosecution was born of religious persecution and has been maintained by it. The senate did its duty when it voted by a large majority for his retention of the seat to which the legislature of Utah had elected him.

The early Pilgrims came to America that they might be free from religious intolerance; and immediately entered a persecution of those who differed from them in religious belief. Some of their "blue laws" remain upon the statutes of Connecticut to-day, though they have become a dead letter through advanced intelligence.

Religious and political beliefs are not generally of one's own choosing. They come from heredity, study and environments. The writer was born and grew almost to manhood prejudiced against Catholicism. Our father and mother's brothers were Orangemen, who religiously observed the 12th of July. As we mingled with Catholics in after years, our prejudice yielded to knowledge, as we learned that there were as many good Catholics as of other religious denominations. As for their religion, a succession of apostolic rites and teachings, it is a more formal observance of early Christianity than many other denominations. Though we may not espouse Catholicism we recognize the inalienable right of those who do worship God according to their religious faith as they see it.

THE STREET MINSTREL.

Hark! Up the street, Italian band,
A sign that Spring is in the land,
These early minstrels' tuneful lays
Give promise of bright Summer days,
And stir up hope in our breast,
And lull impulsive hearts to rest,
Helps one the ills of life endure
And makes him better and more pure.

A ravishing, mild, soulful strain,
So soothing to the tired brain,
Comes floating on the springtime air;
It eases sorrows, toil and care,
And brightens life as sunshine does,
As one along life's journey goes;
It comes an ever welcome guest,
Awakes in one all that is best best.

Now comes a bolder, wilder strain,
Which makes one feel that care is vain,
With ecstacy it lifts our souls
To higher spheres, as on it rolls;
A minor strain now sweetly wails,
And on the gentle breezes sails;
Now changing back to cadence sweet,
Its closing tones with power replete.

O, Music! restful, charming art!
Like balm thou to the aching heart;
Thy influence checks the passion's sway,
And drives despondent thoughts away.
Long live the Minstrel and his harp,
Who lift from cares that kill and warp
The countless thousands who get strong,
When feasting on sweet strains of song.

J. H. JENNI.
Chicago, Ill.

CRIME AND ATONEMENT.

The Theological Doctrine Responsible for a Large Share of Crime.

Rev. W. H. Harrington, for many years chaplain of the Minnesota penitentiary, in an address delivered at Milwaukee, asserted that the theological doctrines of vicarious atonement, that is, that a sinner's sins are washed away simply by believing in Christ, is responsible for a large share of crime. This doctrine, he says, blinds the judgment, confuses the conscience and furnishes a ready excuse to those inclined to self-indulgence, by having another ready to shoulder the punishment of guilt while they go free; makes nonsense of all laws of cause and effect, and supplants the scripture statement that whatever a man soweth that shall he also reap. The word atonement should be understood to mean restoration of relationship to the Divine—at-onement.

Observe what religion did for Frank K. Hipple whose biography says that at the age of three years the strict religious atmosphere of the home had already made its impression upon him. In school his religious scruples forbade his participation in the games of his mates. At 18 he went to work as a clerk in a gas office. To his mother he gave his earnings; his rigid religious principles increasing with time, and his widowed mother's cup of happiness overflowed Young Hipple had no time for amusements. He worked for the Presbyterian church and taught a Sunday school class.

He studied law and in a few years became an authority upon these legal subjects, and had a large practice. Never undertook a large deal without locking himself in his office, and on bended knees asked divine assistance. Became a pillar in the church, but so pious he refused to join in its entertainments.

His reputation for strict honesty spread before him and he was trusted as few men are. When the great Real Estate Trust Co. opened for business, they re-elected honest Frank Hipple as president. He threw his whole interest into the concern. More and more devoted to his church, would not ride on a street car nor in his own carriage on the Sabbath. Out of his salary he gave much to charity. The members of his church deposited their savings with "Brother Hipple," as they called him.

Imagine the terror that struck the people when his disgraceful death tore away the mask of his life of perjury and crime! The great religious Hipple is dead by his own hand and his old admirers know his memory as "The King of Hypocrites!"

The biography of Frank Hipple was copied and condensed from a Philadelphia paper. I knew a minister, a Cumberland Presbyterian, who thought it wicked to run street cars on Sunday, and would never travel on one. Slow to learn what is right or wrong, or distinguish truth from error.

MRS. C. K. SMITH.
San diego, Cal.

LONE "AMEN" NOT WORTH A D—N, STEAD, DECLARES.

Lectures New York Pastors in Peace Talk, Saying Church Is Losing Power and Should Back Up Prayers With Deeds.

"Are you American churchmen—you members of the Church of Christ in America—willing to take action to procure the enactment of this law as an international statute, and say that there shall be a moment's pause before the dogs of war are unleashed?" demanded William T. Stead, the English editor, in an address before the late New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the Hague conference, as set forth in the Chicago Record-Herald.

"Amen! Oh, nobody cares a d—n for an Amen unless it leads you to do something to put into effect your prayers," the speaker responded.

Asks Aid for Peace Plan.

Mr. Stead made an extended plea for the assistance of American Methodists in the movement for international peace which is to be considered at the next Hague conference. He especially asked support for the plan calling for the appointment of disinterested representatives of nations which are unable to agree, the representatives to make a last attempt to reconcile the nations. It is planned that while negotiations are progressing between such representatives the nations shall be restrained for a specified time from opening war.

Mr. Stead declared that in his visits to various parts of the world he has found no one who thought the Christian church was a force in the world today. Said he:

"You speak to the great men of Europe and ask their opinion of its power, and they shrug their shoulders and tell you that the Christian church has been allowed to go to the d—l.

Would Put Church to Work.

"Is the church of Christ going to do anything to help in the secular work of the nations—the secular uplift of the world? You Methodists are at least the second church in this American country. If you should decide to put your forces to work to the task that is before us, we might have great results from this meeting.

"We had a meeting at Leeds before I came over here, to consider this, and the free church announced that it was ready to act under the direction of the archbishop of Canterbury in the matter, and when I left they were considering whether it would not be better for the church of England and the Roman Catholic church to unite in joint action. I don't know whether you can do this here, but are you willing to act together?"

As the speaker sat down there were loud cries of "Yes, yes, yes," from all over the auditorium.

Thus it is that a lone "Amen" is not worth a d—n!

JUS TICE.

HAVE GROVE MEETINGS.

If you and your friends live too far from camp meetings it would be easier and cheaper to have a grove meeting for two Sundays and the intervening week.

As my wife, Mrs. Jennie Martin, 49 Dudley Place, Grand Rapids, Mich., is an inspirational trance speaker, having a strong oratorical voice for out door speaking, she could easily conduct grove meetings.

Like a pioneer, she would rather speak in new localities where she can do more good than attend camp meetings as formerly.

She has been ordained by the State Association.

Please write to us for reasonable terms and dates.

H. E. MARTIN.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Discovery of a Lost Trail." By Chas. B. Newcomb. Excellent in spiritual suggestiveness. Cloth, $1.50.

BEWARE PRICKLY BONES.

It Must Be Taken Like Fish, the Preacher Declares—Views of C. W. Tinsley.

The Rev. C. W. Tinsley, pastor of the Methodist church of Youngstown, O., but forerly of Rushville, Ind., read his paper on "The Modern Viewpoint of Religion," before the members of three of the leading literary clubs of Rushville and their guests April 13. Mr. Tinsley's paper has caused a sensations among the orthodox members of his faith on account of the views of the scientists with which he coincides.

Mr. Tinsley declared this to be the day of science, and said that the breach between the church and the educated was widening, and that the old methods and viewpoint will not answer in this day and age. The period demands a new theology along with the new intellectual world and the new theology consisted of the restatement, as our conception has changed with the age.

Speaking of the Bible, Mr. Tinsley said: "The Bible, except from the right viewpoint, is an embarrassing book on account of the many conflicting statements in it, not alone in the Old Testament, as claimed by many, but even in the New Testament," and here he enumerated a number of instances. Continuing, he said that parts of the holy book must be treated in a scientific manner, for where history is introduced it should be accepted and treated as other histories.

Bible Not Inspired Verbally.

Mr. Tinsley did not deny that the Bible was the inspired work of God, but he said that it was not inspired verbally and only through a spiritual understanding, therefore, when it was written, it was the work of man, and this he held accountable for the errors, discrepancies and contradictions.

"Your grandmother was wrong, but in theory she was right," he said, "and if you will turn to the old Bible which she used, you will find thumb marks at the Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth Psalms, and other places, where she feasted. The Bible must be taken like a fish: Let us get the flesh but beware of the prickly bones. When the different denominations that stand off hugging their own book and creed, claiming that their version is infallible, then as long will the federation of churches stand aloft.

* * * There are many fallacies which must be cut at the very root to check the powerful lessening of the church in America."

Of the divine trinity, Mr. Tinsley said: "It is bad arithmetic to claim that there are three separate and distinct persons in one; it is an absurdity in its literal meaning, and I take it that it means the three characters revealed to us, for in olden days the word 'persona' meant a mask worn by the actors for the different parts, depicting different characters. And in this instance it was symbolical, meaning the Father, as the Hebrews knew Him; the Son as He came on this earth and the Spirit as given to men.

The Immaculate Conception.

"The story of Christ's miraculous birth does not belong to the early tradition, and was not introduced until men came to ask of this wonderful Man born of woman. The immaculate conception I do not deny; it may have been a moral miracle and not a physical miracle—the virgin birth is one of the things I hang in the garret of my mind, for I have not found it to be true; neither has it been proved to me that it is not true, and I am ever ready to listen to reason on this question.

"The Adam story in the third book of Genesis I reject as an actual historical fact. Poor old Adam as a historic character is fading away, and I am sorry we can not go with Mark Twain and weep over his grave. We are all Adams in a moral sense, and fall spiritually, and the only penalty of sin is its own consequences."

Congressman James E. Watson led in a general discussion of the paper and said he coincided in many things the doctor spoke of, and commended him for his courage in speaking what he believed to be the truth. Mr. Watson was followed by several lawyers and physicians, and a spirited discussion ensued. Many leading and pointed questions were asked of the minister.

IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Who Writes W. T. Stead's Letters?

Who writes W. T. Stead's letters? He says that he needs only to put his mind in a passive state, place his hand with a pen upon a sheet of paper, to call up the name of some certain friends, and his hand then and there writes a letter addressed to himself which differs only from the letters that friend writes himself in that it is different handwriting from his own and from Mr. Stead's own, and usually is much more frank and outspoken than if it had been written by his hand instead of Mr. Stead's own. To many, says Mr. Stead, the idea may seem incredible that if you disconnect your hand as it were from your mind, and place it at the disposal of a third party, that your hand should write anything intelligible. He does not say that all persons possess this faculty. Many persons he knows, do not. But he had had it for years and was extremely surprised when he was first told that such a thing was possible. No one could have been more incredulous. He scoffed at the thought. Even if he were willing to admit it for other people, it seemed preposterous that he should be the possessor of such a strange faculty. But after a little practice he had no difficulty. His own experiences justify him in the belief that, given a little more time and patience and study of the laws that govern this system of thought transference it will be possible for us in time to communicate with each other as accurately without the aid of any instrument as we do now with the aid of the telephone or the wireless telegraph. He sometimes thinks he never really will be able to solve the mysteries of telepathy until he has the good fortune to undergo another term of imprisonment. In the seclusion of the prison cell he thinks he might find out many things impossible to him in the hurly hurly of the busy world.

"The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A Menace to American Civilization." By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, lecturer upon physical, physiological and psychic science. Demonstrator of the Molecular or Spiritual Hypothesis of Nature. Scholarly, masterly, trenchant. Price 25 cents.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

A BEAUTIFUL EXPERIENCE.

It Brought Peace and Happiness to an Anxious Heart.

Such a beautiful experience has come to me within the past six months that I feel it my duty to give it to the world. At this time, when the question of a future existence is of such vital importance, the proofs of it which have been given to me, may help some other bleeding heart, or some questioning mind.

In June, 1905, my daughter and myself left Eastern Iowa to visit the Fair at Portland, Oregon. In September she was stricken with typhoid fever and died. As I had no interest in life, and could not endure the idea of returning to Iowa, my friends persuaded me to accompany them to Los Angeles, Cal., but nothing gave me any comfort. I felt I must know of my daughter. One day a friend told me of Mr. Edward Wyllie, who was in the city, and was making spirit photographs. I had heard of such a thing, but never had the opportunity of trying, so I lost no time in visiting his studio. He made a negative of me, and there were several faces shown distinctly, but no one I could recognize. Several sittings gave the same result, but with different faces. My mind was torn with conflicting ideas. Why, if it were a truth, could not my daughter show me her face? I was convinced of the honesty of Mr. Willie, who is an earnest gentleman, and formerly a regular photographer, whose business was spoiled by spirit faces coming on the plates; and by no effort of his own, or any knowledge concerning it, I was in that tenseness of mind which demands to know, (but mentioned this fact to no one).

At this time Mrs. Orr called on me, and said, "Here is a letter for you, written through my hand, and signed 'O. B.'" It was from my brother in spirit life, telling me to persevere in sitting for pictures; that my loved ones were trying, but my attitude of anxiety prevented their success. I should sit in happy expectancy, feeling sure they were with me, and see what we would get.

I followed his direction, and my daughter's face was plainly shown. Several other spirit friends and relatives came also. One negative is especially dear to me; the exposure was made in the dark, and my daughter's face shows where mine would be if made in the light. It is a perfect likeness, and a different pose than any she ever had in life.

Since then, she has talked to me through Mr. Wyllie, telling me how to live that I may learn the lesson of life, which it seems is the object of this earth experience. She has so impressed me with the importance of this that Mrs. Orr and myself have started a Truth Student's Center, where we teach the directions for attainment as it is given us. She tells me the reason she was taken from me, was because of our selfish love for each other; that neither of us could make any advancement in spiritual unfoldment while together, for we were satisfied with each other's love, and asked for nothing else.

We find that a glove, a lock of hair, anything belonging to a departed one, will bring the same results as though you sat for the negative. I was glad to know this, because not everybody can have the advantage I had, but everyone who wishes a picture of the loved one, can send something belonging to them, and get it. Then, too, Mrs. Orr will allow her hand to be used by your loved ones, in answering your questions. I could fill pages with the instructions we have received.

Whenever we sit in the evening, she shows her "spirit light," in which we can see her face; she tells me it is the joy in her heart, mingling with the joy in my heart, which makes this light. Then all is indeed love, and thanksgiving, in place of anxiety, any more; just happiness, that there is no separation after all, and we are spiritual beings now with these bodies to work through. Any object to be photographed, or any questions to be answered, will have my personal attention, so that other work will not crowd out the calls through correspondence.

Hoping this will bring somewhat of the peace to other hearts that it has to mine, I am sincerely yours in truth.

Please address all communications to MRS. JULIA COYLE.
506 S. Figueroa St., Los Angeles, Cal.

TWILIGHT INSPIRATIONS.

Come Sparkling as the Dew From the Brain of Georgia Gladys Cooley.

When souls work in harmony much good is the result. Kindred souls seek and find each other without effort or struggle, for the laws of Nature cause a blending that generally means much to all concerned.

On our side of life we enjoy ourselves most when we are doing most for others. We grow more rapidly when we lose sight of self, watching and trying to help someone else grow.

As the flower draws substance and sustenance from the sun, earth and atmosphere, though unconscious as to its wonderful drawing power, it nevertheless has expanded and blossomed, and given beauty to the world for earth's dear ones' pleasure and comfort.

Our souls are but flowers in another form, and as we continue our growth we emit a fragrance too subtle to be sensed by the coarser beings, things and conditions of life; still it enters into the composition of many things, causing a sweetness in the lives of others and often acting as a soothing power to weary souls.

Silent as the vibrations are, they are very penetrating and enter many places too small for a human body to enter, hence we can say our thought-force and our soul-ether can reach beyond our homes, and often, like a sweet mantle of charity it, wraps itself about the weary travelers of earth, and protects them from sorrow and danger.

Heaven is near at hand to those who are pure in heart. They need not wander over mountains or plains to find it. Sometimes it is found in a most humble cottage or on the highways. It is indeed a condition and is just as possible to be one's portion before as well as after the change called death.

Live in the earnest desire to have each day an improvement on the last; to have a kind word and deed for all, thinking no evil of even the smallest or lowest, and you need search no further for Heaven than in your own heart, for it will be within and surrounding you. My love and desire to help goes out to all humanity, the human, the floral, the animal and all that now exist.

My earnest wish is to reach all who need my help, and any person or thing that can gather one ray of light or portion of strength or knowledge from me is the person or thing that needs me.

GEORGIA GLADYS COOLEY.

THE NEW FRATERNAL ORDER.

What It Aims to Accomplish for the Good of Our Cause.

To the Editor: I have just been reading over the article by President Barrett in The Progressive Thinker, No. 907, under the heading of An Important Question. I feel sure the nail has been hit on the head, when you say, "It is for Spiritualists to consider and in which there are some unpleasant truths. They are the kind that go right home and clinch on the other side. Some three months ago, Dr. Alex. Caird organized a society under the name of the First Society, F. O. O. S., and the object of this society was to do away with the idea that all a Spiritualist meeting was for was merely to hear tests and spirit messages, or to call on a brother or sister to lecture, and then thank them for their time and ability; but it is for the purpose of drawing that class of Spiritualists together, who are ever ready to listen to a lecture that will be upbuilding to humanity, and always be willing to come to the front and say that which the people have need of, let it be given them, day by day, without fail, and when they receive it, they will come forward and say: Truly the laborer is worthy of his or her hire.

President Barrett cites a number of cases where the speakers have had to suffer all kinds of hardships. Just think of a man walking 14 miles to lecture, and then have to live on the charity of his friends. May God and the angel friends forbid that the First Society, F. O. O. S., shall ever be guilty of such a crime. The best way that I know of to offset this, is for everyone of us to put our shoulder to the wheel, push onward and upward, and those of us who feel we can't give our services, let each of us donate so much per month and help make this society a spiritual success, by paying to hear of a Spiritual Spiritualism.

I am informed that those who have stated their price for their services as a lecture for this society have never been told they are too high-priced. We are going to have the pleasure of having with us Rev. Thos. Grimshaw of St. Louis on April 21 and 28. Do you think we could have him if we were to act towards him like some of those Pres. Barrett speaks of? But when he was asked if he would come for so much, he said, "Yes," and when he comes he will find us waiting with outstretched arms to greet him.

Just think of a man as scholarly as George A. Fuller, asked to give two lectures per Sunday for $5 and car fare thrown in. Is it any wonder that Christ told his disciples to shake the dust from off their feet, when they should strike a place like the one George A. Fuller struck?

I see by the calendar the First Society, F. O. O. S., is only three months old the 14th of this month, April, and in that time we have paid out for speakers more than any other society in so short a time. I think it a very good record for a three months-old child, and at present we are looking forward to the time in the near future when we shall be able to announce, through the columns of The Progressive Thinker, (which can be found on secretary's desk for sale every Sunday) that we have secured the services of some of the most talented speakers in the ranks of Spiritualism, throughout the length and breadth of the land, and are hoping that Pres. Barrett will never be able to say of this society what he has said of others, in the aforementioned article. I sincerely hope that all who join our society will do their best in carrying out the desire of our president, Dr. A. Caird, in making Chicago the greatest center of true and honest Spiritualism. Come and help us support the best speakers that our grand and noble cause can produce.

CHAS. A. THOMPSON.
Chicago.

Appreciative of the Work of Mr. Barrett and Others.

To the Editor: In your excellent paper of March 30th are many gems of truth. R. A. Dague is always interesting and instructive. I had the pleasure of listening to him at the New Era Camp last season in public and social exchange, which enhanced the pleasure and profit of the camp experiences. Mr. Barrett being the principal speaker I felt favored indeed as a listener to his inspired discourses. His article in the same number, entitled "Spirits and Investments," should give the Spiritualists a needed thought-tonic. He mentions the criticism he has received for his intense stand against Commericial Mediumship. I believe that if the Spiritualists maintain a strong, pure organic structure, which will wisely interpret our philosophy, and aid the propaganda upon progressive lines, we need not fear for the future of our glorious Spiritualism.

Mr. Barrett's presence and spiritual power upon the side of truth, saved the California State Spiritual Association from the control of the commercial element. I believe all reform movements suffer from this commercial age. We are powerless to control that element outside of our organization; then let us strive to rear an organic structure that will represented our Spiritual Cause in so beautiful a guise that the world will admire it and the Spiritualists be proud to maintain it, confident of its power to hasten the Spiritual age, when the commercial instincts of the people will not dominate through the presence of material necessities.

MRS. M. E. HAMMER.
Red Bluff, Cal.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

"Just How to Wake the Solar Plexus." By Elizabeth Towne, Valuable for health. Price, 25 cents.

UNCOOKED FOODS,

And How to Live on Them—With Recipes for Wholesome Preparation.

Proper combinations and menus with the reason uncooked food is best for the promotion of health, strength and Vitality. By Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated.

No one can afford to be without this book. Any one who tries some of the special recipes will discover that proper preparation increases the palatability of food. Learn how and what to cook in order to build and retain the highest degree of normal health by following the recipes of this cook book.

It will simplify methods of living—help to settle the servant question and the financial problems as well as point the way for many to perfect health. Price $1.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.

A Remarkable Book.

This is a remarkable work by FATHER CHINIQUY. It exposes even to the minutest details the corruption that exists in the Church of Rome. It is a work of 832 pages, and should be read as a matter of history by every Spiritualist.

Price, Cloth, $2.25.

JIM, or The Touch of An Angel Mother.

BY CARRIE E. S. TWING.

Her dedicatory lines are sufficient to show the spirit of the book as well as the author it reads, "Because my own children are all under the tender care of the angels, and my heart is hungry for the love of the young, I most lovingly dedicate this book to the children of the world." This book is full of soul elevating and interesting thought. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

Apollonius of Tyana Identified as the Christian Jesus. A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents.

WOMAN: A Lecture Delivered to Ladies Only. By Mrs. Dr. Hulburt. On the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. The divine law of true harmonial marriage, etc. Price, 10c.

THE BIBLE New and Revised Edition.

Authenticity, Credibility, Morality.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S GREAT WORK

Ingersoll's desire that somebody should at last tell the whole truth about the Bible has been brilliantly fulfilled. No Freethinker worthy of the name can afford to pass over Remsburg's book in silence. Like Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason," may it, let us hope, find admirers and translators in other languages. And again, like Paine's book, may this brilliant work bring to its author the praise of posterity.—Der Freidenker (Milwaukee).

This great work on the Bible by Mr. Remsburg is most valuable—it is an encyclopedia of information in regard to the Bible, and surpasses in importance all other works of the kind now published. It is up-to-date in every particular. Price, $1.25.

The Poetical and Prose Works BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Mrs. Wilcox's writings have been the inspiration of many young men and women. Her hopeful, practical, masterful views of life give the reader new courage in the very reading and are a wholesome spur to flagging effort. Words of truth so vital that they live in the reader's memory and cause him to think—to his own betterment and the lasting improvement of his own work in the world, in whatever line it lies—flow from this talented woman's pen.

POEMS OF PASSION.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Many thousands of this book have been issued, showing the estimation in which it is held. Presentation edition, with author's portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF POWER.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

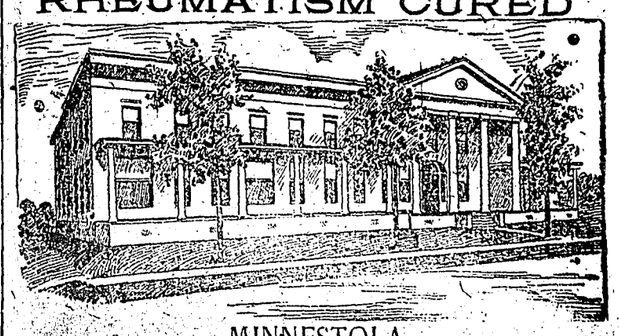
New and revised edition, containing more than one hundred new poems, displaying the author's fine taste, cultivation and originality. With portrait. Price $1.

POEMS OF PLEASURE.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

This charming collection comprises many of the best poetic creations of the author. Embellished with portrait. Presentation edition. Price $1.

MAURINE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

An ideal poem about as true and lovable a woman as ever poet created. With portrait of author. Price $1.



AROUND THE YEAR WITH ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A birthday book compiled by Ella Giles Ruddy, from the poetical and prose writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It epitomizes her inspiring optimistic philosophy with an apposite quotation for each day in the year. With author's portrait, and half-tone illustrations prefacing each month. Cloth, price, $1.

KINGDOM OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A magnificent collection of poems suitable for recitations and readings, true to the very best there is in human nature. Presentation edition, dark red cloth, $1.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year	$1 00
Six Months	50cts
Thirteen Weeks	25cts
Single Copy	5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1907.

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Age of the World, and Its End.

Sir Edward Fry, the eminent English geologist, declares: "460 millions of years must have elapsed since life commenced on this globe."

Winwood Reade, in his "Martyrdom of Man," estimates "a thousand million years have passed since the solar system, with its numerous planets and satellites, attained their present form."

Some learned writer whose name escapes us as we write, but an earnest student of Nature, gives it as probable "a million of millions of years have swept by since the universe sprang into being."

Many able writers maintain there was no beginning and there can be no ending; that change, not destruction, is the destiny of all worlds; that the hundred millions of suns, with all their retinue of planets, will continue their mystic dance in the great economy of nature, each revolving on its own axis, and around its primary, through countless vigintillions of years, and then eternity will be in its dawn.

To offset the opinions of the great scientists we have a "Thus saith the Lord," as given by the inspired Moses, making the age of the universe at this time 5,911 years, no more, no less. And 1,874 years ago the reputed son of God, sitting on the Mount of Olives, his disciples before him, declared:

"The sun shall be darkened, the moon shall not give her light, the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken." John, the revelator, with this awful vision of the "end of the world" before him, says he saw an angel standing on the sea, with his hand lifted to heaven, who swore by him that liveth forever, that "time shall be no longer."

Then Jesus came to our aid 1,874 years ago, see Mat. 24:34, and fixes the time of this mournful event, by saying:

"Verily I say unto you: This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled.

A generation, counting three to a century, closed 1844 years ago; so if the good Jesus was correct, we must be living in another world than the one this son of God declared was so near its end.

The reader has the statements of the scholars, the facts as revealed in nature, the assurance of an orthodox God, and the oath of an angel to guide him as to the termination of all things, so we shall not venture an opinion on the subject, as these are recognized as higher and better authority than The Progressive Thinker.

A Mistake Somewhere.

They who accept Paul for authority and his words as truthful, and yet believe Jesus arose with his material body, and ascended to heaven, ought to do some thinking when they read, I. Corinthians 15:50: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." This is followed by the declaration: "Behold I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, * * and the dead shall be raised incorruptible."

Is not this Spiritualism pure and simple? How reconcile these quotations with the statement that Jesus proved after his resurrection to doubting Thomas, John 20:27, that he was flesh and blood; that he lived, ate, slept, traveled, fished, counseled, and for forty days tarried, see Acts 1:3, and then, in Galilee, distant 40 miles from Jerusalem, was taken up of course bodily, and a cloud received him out of sight? There must be some mistake in these conflicting statements, and Spiritualists have no difficulty in showing that no material body, once dead, ever ascended to heaven, or ever will.

A Preacher's Views, with Our Suggestions.

Rev. Anson Bradbury, of Maine, comes to the front in the Woman's National Daily, as an apologist for the church, because of its "unrest." He says: "It is useless to deny such a fact exists," and "the cause is complex." One of the causes the dominie states for this condition of things is: "Absence of the dominant fellowship of the spiritual life." That may be true of Protestantism, and shows they need a Pope—papa—for a spiritual head. The founders of the revolting sects from Catholicism proposed to make Jesus their head; but, unfortunately, he keeps in the background, and seems to be a silent partner in the soul-saving business. But this critic, in his 3dly, hits the nail square on the head. We quote:

"The defective religious life in the corrupt character of the ministry, the prevalency of ecclesiastical politics, with preachers plotting and planning against each other, deceiving and tricking those of their own calling, with the conferences of ministers legislating and wire-pulling for their own selfish ends, and bluffing and falsifying to each other's destruction and undoing, is the spirit being transmitted in influencing and animating the pew. The spiritual character of the pulpit is transmitted to the pew which cannot produce any other condition than unrest, because the source is defective."

"The commercial spirit in the churches has created such an eagerness to obtain money it is constantly planning to increase the church funds to the last possible dollar. * * * This commercial effort makes the church a burden to the poor, who already feel unable to hold a creditable place in the denominational organizations."

Each of the several points made is well sustained by facts known to all. But there is another cause for "unrest" which Rev. Bradbury did not refer to. Possibly it was overlooked. And that is, with the wider diffusion of knowledge pulpit and pew alike are learning of the fraudulent character of the entire history on which Christianity is founded. Neither is oblivious to the forceful methods the parent church resorted to, to compel the adoption of the Christian faith. All know, or should know, of the numerous Christian sects which sprang into being in the early centuries of the system, which were put down with violence by the finally dominant Roman Catholics. A sea of blood was wasted to convert the man Jesus into a God. And forgeries without stint were resorted to to manufacture books, and to interpolate others, to sustain the senseless theory. The facts are, all the pagan religions had minor Gods, and heroes were wont to claim divine paternity, therefore Christians to be equal to their opponents must have a minor God, which later generations exalted to an equality with the Father, and still later converted that Father himself.

The Progressive Thinker would suggest as a remedy for this unfortunate condition of things that the church and their advocates, submit to the inevitable; burn their creeds; their Bibles—if they cannot purify them, and their false ecclesiastical history; substitute in place of their mortal God, with his innumerable imperfections as now taught; the Infinite Father; consign their Devil and their hell to the domain of myth; then accept the genuine teachings of the spirit world, and labor to exalt all the virtues, and fit mortality by pure lives and noble thoughts to merit an immortal life.

Rev. May S. Pepper.

A dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald says:

Rev. May S. Pepper preached her farewell sermon and reported her final communication from the spirit world at the meeting at the Church of Fraternity of Soul Communion, Brooklyn, April 28. Mrs. Pepper is the medium, the championship of whom by Rev. Dr. Isaac K. Funk caused so much excitement in psychical circles a few years ago.

More recently Dr. Funk claims to have received a communication through Mrs. Pepper from the late Richard Hodgson of Boston, until death secretary of the Society for Psychical Research. Now Mrs. Pepper is to give up her work as medium, public and private. She expects to go abroad and upon returning will make her home in a handsome $50,000 dwelling in Brooklyn.

Although ill health due to the nervous strain incident to communications with the spirit world is given as a reason for her retirement, is is reported among her congregation that the real reason is her prospects of marriage to a Mr. Vanderbilt, one of her congregation.

Herald of Truth.

It hails from Boston, Mass., and announces itself as "An Exponent of Spiritualism and its Philosophy. Published weekly, at $1.00 per year. We wish it abundant success.

Too Rich to Lose.

The little daughter of the house sat down beside the minister, and began to draw on her slate.

"What are you doing?" asked the preacher.

"I am making your picture," replied the child.

She worked away earnestly, then stopped, compared her work with the original, shook her head, and said:

"I don't like it much. 'Taint a great deal like you. I'll put a tail to it and call it a dog."

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

Nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interchange of power, pressed too far and relaxed too much.—Bacon.

The Medium Bailey.

Wonderful manifestations of Spirit Power still continue to be exhibited through his presence at Melbourne, Australia, as duly set forth in an article in the Harbinger of Light, which appears below. It is interesting know that the sitters furnish the conditions under which the manifestations occur, and not the medium.

There have been several special manifestations during the month, although the atmospheric conditions have interfered somewhat with the phenomena. One of an unusual kind was the bringing of a flower from India and the placing of it in the hand of the lady for whom it was intended, quite away from the medium. This flower was brought at the request of a young spirit—a little boy—who passed over last year. Dr. Whitcomb related an Indian legend concerning the origin of its name, "Spirit-flower." "The flower has a legend attached to it," he said. "You will note that it is like two leaves close together, small, with a seed in the center. The old Indian legend is that an Indian woman—a very holy woman, who devoted her life to the good of humanity—had a little son, who went into the jungle one morning and plucked some poisonous berries and died. The mother was distracted, and wandered about the jungle trying to find the bush, and came across this one with shut-up petals, and she was told by an old sage that it had a scarlet flower. She waited for the season of the flowers, and went into the jungle, but, strange to say, the flowers were closed up, as if they were glued together. She conceived the idea that it was the spirit of her son in the flowers, and that one day they would open, and she would be able to see him, and from that time it has been called the Spirit Flower." The light was then lowered for an instant, at Dr. Whitcomb's request, when immediately a spirit light appeared close to the medium, and moved to the lady in whose hand the lovely flower was placed. It was something of the formation of the boronia, and like the N. S. W. species, but of a deeper rose color, and consisted of a cluster of blossoms on feathery stems about three inches in height—a most beautiful specimen, and specially noteworthy as not being touched by the medium. A fortnight later a materialized hand appeared, which took up a pencil and wrote a message to a lady present. The same evening a spirit-flower, which was only visible as a light in the medium's hand, was carried round the circle.

The following is a brief record of sittings held since January 4th:

24th Seance. Jan. 11th. Address by Signor Valetti on "The Great Masters in Art of the Greek and Roman World." Phenomena. Two Babylonish tablets which Dr. Whitcomb said were from a hitherto unexplored country. A fur hat from Thibet. This was a most curious apport, the size of a large teacosy, and said to have belonged to the Thibetian executioner, made from the skin of a goat. Two more tablets.

25th Seance. Jan. 18th. Address by Dr. Robinson on "The Hittites." Phenomena. Tablet: Abdul being asked to bring a sparrow, stood up and caught one in his hand without light being lowered. Encaustic Tiles, from Roman strata in the mounds near Babylon.

Jan 25th. No seance.

26th Seance. February 1st. Creswick Night. Greville, Coppin, Glover, Olly Deering, and a number of other actors passed to spirit life were said to be present. "An Arrest for Witchcraft" was the principal recital — a composition of a most telling kind of Mr. Creswick's in spirit life, followed by "The Flight from Pompeii."

27th Seance. February 8th. Address by a Catholic priest, Rev. J. Hogan, of Clonmel, Ireland, on "Miracles in the Romish Church and Modern Spiritualism." Flower brought to lady present without contact with medium. Two spear heads in wet Lump of Clay. Manuscript on thin vellum in the Thibetian language. Bird's nest of an unusual kind lined with fur.

Address by Dr. W. E. Channing on Spiritualism, Fortune Telling and Cognate Matters.

The First of a Series.

My name is Channing. I have been most cordially invited to speak to you to-night on the subject, "Spiritualism, Fortune Telling, and Cognate Matters."

Spiritualism is very old: it is as old as truth, and truth is eternal. Spirits from the realms of light are pleased to draw night unto you to communicate with you. They desire to help you along the journey of life. Once they traveled that weary road, and they have gained experience, like the old mariner who has traversed the ocean in his ship, studying his chart of shoals to avoid and havens of safety to reach and they draw nigh unto you to direct your footsteps towards the golden city. They are commissioned to teach you and to bring conviction to the minds of the brethren and sisters yet in the flesh of the fact that after life's little day upon earth there remains a rest, a place of rest wherein all may be happy. Since the first man went to Beulah land there have been spiritual communications from the spirits. Those of you who are versed in the Old and New Testaments will readily agree with me in this without my quoting them. There are numbers of instances of undoubted spirit return and apparitions wherein angelic visitors have spoken to and have eaten with those who are yet in the flesh. That there are legions of evil spirits every Spiritualist or investigator knows; so there were in the days that are gone. Unfortunately upon your earth plane there are thousands of men and women who do not live according to the light that they have; they are deceivers, liars, and on passing to the spirit world in that state, unless they give heed to the teaching of the higher intelligences, they stay in that sad condition. They have also the power to return to earth and influence men in the flesh.

Spiritualism, rightly investigated and understood, is the greatest and the grandest blessing that has ever come down to the children of men. There is nothing that has yet been given to man so blessed, if he knows how to use it and how to profit by the advice and the teaching. There is something sublime, grand and ennobling in the teaching of the higher intelligence, and it is calculated to uplift the whole of the human race. It breaks down all the barriers that exist religiously and socially, sets all men upon a common basis, and urges them to press forward "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God," to put aside everything that would hold them back, to count the things of time and sense as dross, and to lay up treasure in heaven. The man or woman who receives spiritual teaching and lives according to the spiritual light can be truly said to dwell in heaven while on earth.

Spiritualism, then, should be a comfort all the days of one's earthly existence; it should permeate the lives of all; the home should be brightened through it; everyday life and conversation should be purified through a knowledge of its teachings and its truth; through it a man should be a good citizen and a good father—if a woman, she should be a good citizeness and a good mother, abounding in works of charity and mercy, ever ready to lend a helping hand to all organizations that are good—not stopping to ask concerning one's creed or nationality, but remembering only that every man is a brother, every woman a sister, and that God is the universal Eternal Father. This beautiful teaching was inculcated by the early Christians, and if the church had retained her primitive simplicity and power, I venture to say that the evil that is abroad among the nations of the world at the present time would never have obtained, would never have gained so much power. Man has turned his back upon the spiritual. He is grovelling in the material.

Now, my friends, permit me to say I am a plain spoken man, who loves to call a spade a spade, and I am going to tell you my thought on all that is opposed to true Spiritualism, which is often passed off on unthinking people as being genuine. Men, for filthy lucre's sake, have prostituted the best gifts that God endowed them with. Judas, called Iscariot, sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver. There are men selling holy truth for less than that every hour of the day. I have often likened Spiritualism unto a ship sailing over the ocean of time. You know as the giant ships traverse your ocean and move up and down over the great seas that they become encrusted with barnacles and other accretions, and the people of whom I am about to speak I regard as barnacles on the sides and bottom of the gospel ship.

Before I proceed I must first inquire how much you people are to blame in this matter—when I say you people I not only mean people sitting here, but the people at large—what share have you in this evil matter?

First, there is a desire in almost every mind to lift the veil and gaze into the future; it is irresistible. And it is so with all nations. That spirit intelligences have the power to forecast certain events we well know, but, as Paul once said, it is not expedient it should be so, and when it is done there is some grand object in view. As on one occasion in America, when a certain event was foretold, it was a prophecy to command the attention of the people at large, to stop them in their downward course. Note in the Scripture prophecies that the result was always for some grand object or purpose. The prophet used to go forth and prophesy against Nineveh. "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." That he was laughed at there cannot be any doubt. The grand Teacher and Master sent from God, that grand man, Jesus of Nazareth, prophesied frequently, especially concerning the city of Jerusalem, "Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee." Did he not say that not one stone should be left upon another? What man will say he did not prophesy truthfully? Titus razed the city to the ground, and that splendid temple of which the Jews were so proud passed away.

Well, then we find that in the Bible prophecies there was some special object in view, and when the veil of the future is lifted by higher intelligences it is for some worthy object or purpose. But that irresistible desire of which I have been speaking to-night that is in every heart to know something of the future, has been used by credulous persons to bring grist to their mill; hence a whole army of charlatans and impostors have come round who for a certain sum of money pretend to lift the veil that hides the future. Mark, some of these people have a little psychic power, and for that reason they are able to make some little headway. There are mediums also who have a little power undeveloped, and they go out into the world and declare that they are psychics. The result in nearly every case is disappointment to themselves and to those with whom they come in contact.

Fortune Telling.

Permit me to say that I regard the results obtained at the fortune tellers usually as frivolous, and of no value. Couched in vague terms, something like the answer returned by the oracle at Delphi, it might be taken anyway. There seems to me to be a pandering to sentiment, to the affections, to the yearning that is in the souls of people to know certain secrets or mysteries which they cannot in an ordinary way find out, and I know that I speak the truth when I declare that the preponderance of those who go to fortune tellers for this purpose are females. I desire to discriminate between a legitimate message obtained through spirit power and rubbish — nonsensical messages delivered by fortune tellers. It is not the work of the spirit world to dabble in the affairs of the mundane world. Sometimes they have to do so, or to give special advice, because that is the work of the missioners sent to your earth plane. But the spirits who have passed into the home land are not special detectives. In New York some years ago a detective made a statement which, in the eyes of all Spiritualists, showed that he knew nothing of the subject. A certain murder had been committed, and the police were unable to find the murderer, and he made a statement that if there were anything in Spiritualism the spirits should inform the authorities where the murderer should be found. Now, permit me to say that a man who would make a statement like that has a carnal, fleshly mind. The spirits of just men and women who have passed into the spirit world have entered into rest, and it is not their mission or their work to come back to earth and do the work impotent detectives should do or to bring to the gallows their brethren, even though they be guilty. There are Governments who make laws and appoint their officers to protect society at large, and they should be able to do it without calling upon those who have entered into the sanctity of rest. For a man to make such a statement as that proves that he knows nothing of the subject; that he has missed the mark.

It is not the work of the spirit world to enrich men in the flesh. Stupid, unthinking people, when talking over phenomena say, Why don't they bring a lump of gold, or some diamonds? This is the sensual in man that stands out. The spiritual man does not talk like that. He prays, "Give us this day our daily bread," and he only asks that he shall have health and strength to go forth, and with his hand and his brain win that bread that is necessary for his physical existence. But to call upon the spirit world to bring gold or diamonds to enrich a few miserable wretches, who, possibly, if they got it, would go forth and make a bad use of it, is an absurd and a monstrous thing to ask. Mark, a piece of gold or diamonds might be brought to be shown as evidence that the spirits have the power to bring such things, but they cannot and will not do it, to fill the pockets of individuals for the sake of filthy lucre.

Now to pass on. The law, very rightly I think, declares it to be an offense for these people to take money and to mislead and delude the people who go to them. But the law does not reach far enough. I have always said this in connection with the sale of drink in prohibited hours. The law has always been severe upon the publican, but a righteous and just law would also inflict the penalty upon the man who tempts the publican to sell. The publican should be fined, and the man who asks him for liquor should also be fined. So should the fortune teller be fined, and also the one who goes to tempt him to do wrong. You have no right to put temptation or to tempt anyone to do that which is wrong, and you partake of his sin when you do so. Spiritualists should be united. Whilst looking over your earth plane we see that there are divisions among you, and these are a source of weakness. You will not make much headway in this or in any until you combine — until you sink your petty jealousies and differences, and strive with one grand object in view. I tell you why this in the past has not been brought about. I am sorry to say it, but it is true—it is because you have not sat at the feet of the meek and lowly One; ye have not become as little children, but you have been puffed up yourselves, and desirous of getting the foremost seats in the synagogue. You must be humble in your mind, willing to become a vessel emptied and filled from the spirit world, then you will be full of that mighty power which nearly two thousand years ago went forth, and with mighty power and wonders converted the people.

There should be a society in which mediums should be tested. I venture to say that with the exception of the medium through whom I am speaking, and one or two others, you cannot find half a dozen in your city who have ever been tested—I doubt if you could find half a dozen. I am not saying they are not mediums, understand that. I say they have not been tested with such tests as Slade, Home and others have passed through. Every medium that claims to be a psychic should be tested, and if found to be genuine should receive the credentials of the society, and go forth bearing a certificate that they have been tested. Until that takes place you cannot be sure that these mediums are genuine. They may have power, but are undeveloped.

Again, a medium should not have to wander about to find subsistence; to look in this corner and that corner for shillings whereby he may feed and clothe himself. If the Spiritualists combined they would be powerful and influential, and sufficiently wealthy to pay accredited agents or mediums, and to send them forth. That, I may tell you, is not the order that we read of in the New Testament, of those who went forth without purse or scrip, and I will tell you why. In those days they lived a higher life; they were satisfied with sufficient to keep them in health; they were not over anxious about the future; they did not carry two coats with them, or have two or three portmanteaux or trunks filled with clothes, and live at fashionable hotels. Their thoughts were centered upon the work they had to do, and they believed that if they were true messengers of God He would somehow or other provide for their necessities.

You will gather from my remarks that I am not in sympathy with people who forecast the future. That it is possible to do so I freely admit, but I say there is no reason whatever why it should be done. Sweethearts desire to know something concerning their lovers, and the result is that if they do receive legitimate messages it is from spirits who have not advanced but who are earth-bound, and it is against such you are warned. "Try the spirits, and see if they be of God," you are told in the New Testament. Every man who is seeking to purify himself and his life, to acquire knowledge, is desirous of communicating only with these intelligences who can help him. You who have received so much good teaching will have nothing to do with this thing, and I cry to you as the old prophet cried to the people of his time. "Come out from among them and be ye separate; touch not the unclean thing. Be ye purified."

CHARLES BRIGHT.

they "the Spirit world" are but the custodians of this truth which is eternal, which was, and always will be.

Blessed are the instruments and the Spiritualists that feel and know this to be true; they are fitted for still greater truths; they have left the a b c of Spiritualism and are almost ready to receive what those wise and pure humanitarians across the way are so ready, so eager to give, THE LIGHT that will help us make HERE AND NOW an earthly paradise where liberty, justice and brotherly love will prevail, where the mind, body and soul of so many of God's children will no longer be dwarfed and starved. The higher spheres are waiting to give us our own, when we are true to the trust already given us—when by our lives, our spiritual growth and aspirations we rise, drawing irresistibly to meet us half way those angelic beings who are ever ready to come if we provide the conditions and lead us onward ever onward.

Leaving the a b c of our philosophy behind, let us go forward towards perfection.

PAUL McARTHUR.

The Progressive Thinker.

Those who glance over the columns of The Progressive Thinker each week will find every page replete with something that will deeply interest them. From no other source can they secure such a valuable fund of information on occult or Spiritualistic subjects, as in The Progressive Thinker. The ablest writers in our ranks send their contributions to The Progressive Thinker, because it reaches the largest number of readers; in fact it is their official organ. If you do not read the paper, you can not be well posted as to the status of the movement. We should have 100,000 readers each week, thus extending the sphere of our usefulness.

Impressive Thoughts.

In Reference to the Status of Spiritualism, from the Standpoint of the President of the Missouri State Association.

Leaving the A. B. C. of Our Philosophy Behind, Let Us Go on Toward Perfection.

Many of you knowing that I was at one time a Methodist preacher, will no doubt think that I am trying to ring in the old Methodist doctrine of Christian perfection on you. The text which reads (Hebrew 6-1): "Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection," has been extensively quoted by our good Methodist brethren as proving their doctrine of "Christian Perfection." With all due respect to the Methodist theologian, the passage quoted does not say they shall attain perfection, but indicates a desire to go on, to move forward, toward a higher, a more perfect plane of living.

When the children of Israel, under the leadership of Moses, fled from bondage under the Egyptians, toward the land promised them by their tutelary god Jehovah, they reached the Red Sea and were apparently blocked. The sea was before them, the army of Pharoah behind them, and they began to cry out against Moses and their God. Then Jehovah said unto Moses, "Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." They did, and according to the biblical account, were saved.

At another time in their journey toward the promised land of Canaan, Moses was instructed by Jehovah to send twelve men on ahead to spy upon the country and get all the information possible concerning it. They came back all agreed that it was a wonderful land, this land of promise; two of them brought back a bunch of grapes so large that it took both of them to carry it. But they were scared to death at the difficulties that were before them. The walls were so big and so strong, they would never be able to get over them. The inhabitants were so large that the children of Israel were like grasshoppers along side of them; and again the Israelites began to bemoan their fate and say, they wished Jehovah and Moses had left them in bondage under Pharoah.

Finally one brave man named Caleb sprang forward and cried: "Come, let us go up and possess the land, for we are well able to overcome it."

Whether we believe that the two above mentioned incidents were anything but allegorical, we cannot but recognize the inner great fundamental truth they contain. They teach so plain that he who runs may read, the great law of evolution, the absolute necessity of going forward from depth to depth, from height to height, from experience to experience, seeing the eternal law of progress in even apparent defeat, using these defeats to increase our knowledge, and to enable us to rise above and beyond them. Helping us to move onward to a higher plane of usefulness; toward the making of our belief (whatever it may be) of some practical service, here and now in the solving of some of the great problems of life as they confront us in this 20th century.

Spiritualism, my friends, as well as orthodoxy, is on trial before the world, as it never was before. Not so much Spiritualism as it has existed throughout the ages, but Modern Spiritualism as an organized cult. Don't for a moment let me be misunderstood. You can never kill real Spiritualism; you can never cut off communication between some of earth's children and the denizens of the angel world. But Spiritualism as a distinct cult may and can be killed.

I make bold to say, that in my opinion, if it is to be used only for the purpose of supporting people who have cultivated the gift of mediumship for the purpose of holding developing circles at so much per head, giving reading for the purpose of telling you what horse is going to come in first on the race track, where your lost dog, cow or diamond ring is, it had better die.

If one of the great things for which the angel world opened up communication with us, is the compounding of love powders, and the dividing of man and wife under the plea that they are not affinities or soul mates, for humanity's sake and in humanity's name let us hang up the receiver.

I know that every intelligent, right-minded Spiritualist knows that these things are false doctrine, opposed to both reason and our beautiful philosophy; but we know also that ignorance and fraud have been so long and so strongly entrenched in some of our strongholds, that they have weakened and blackened our good name to such an extent that we are considered by the world at large as unsafe, deluded, immoral, half cracked people, as fakes or dupes.

We know that this is unjust on the part of the world, but is it not at least partly merited, on account of our guilty tolerance of fraud and the criminal ignorance of so many of our speakers and mediums? Ignorance to-day (especially among Spiritualists) is a crime to the God within struggling through this cage of flesh for expression, but in the people who are the media between this world and those intelligences who are ever seeking (how often in vain) the kind of instruments that they can use to uplift and enlighten earth's children, it is the greatest possible crime, a crime against humanity. It makes you and me if we do not stand together shoulder to shoulder, protesting, and fighting if needs be, against fraud, against the placing of ignorant undeveloped mediums on our public rostrums, particeps criminis in helping to prevent the wise and practical humanitarians from over the way obtaining the kind and quality of instruments necessary for the real practical work yet to be done.

The law of demand regulates always the supply. If we as a body demand vaudeville stunts, flag waving, bell ringing, claptrap, we draw that supply from people who are spurred on by a love of the almighty dollar, some of whom may possibly be used by evil and mischievous spirits from the other side, but while this kind of (shall I say spiritual good?) may have been necessary for some in order to convince them of the truth of spirit return, is it necessary, and can they be benefited mentally, morally or spiritually by remaining all their lives in the a b c class?

There is no standstill in Nature or Nature's laws; we must either go forward or backward.

Many of the more ignorant type of Spiritualists have remained so long in the a b c class that they have become gorged, stuffed as it were with this kind of amusement and have grown cold. Others of a higher mental caliber have also become surfeited with phenomena, and seeing nothing beyond have dropped out, not because they did not believe spirit return, but because they failed to see the practical utility of it as a distinct cult. This lack of faith as to the ultimate purpose of Spiritualism per se (I might correct this and say) this lack of insight as to the real purpose and aim of the spirit world, is due not so much to a lack of mental growth as to a corresponding lack of spiritual growth.

I know some of our church hating, creed fighting Spiritualists will say: Yes, the old leaven is still working in McArthur; he can't get away from that vague something which the orthodox call spirituality.

Well, let me define the term "spirituality" and I will plead guilty. I would define it AS AN UNSELFISH DEVOTION TO TRUTH FOR TRUTH'S SAKE ONLY; an unselfish devotion to humanity, for humanity's sake only.

I would describe a spiritual person as one who was studying, working, fighting, without a thought of self, for HUMANITY, without regard to race or creed. How many do you know, Spiritualists and others, who fill that bill?

Christ, Apollonius, Buddha, Paine, Lincoln and others who lifted, through their great love, earth's children up to higher planes, are types of the rare combination of those two great forces, "knowledge and spirituality," which make man at times—a God.

Knowledge alone, has been perverted and misused.

There are educated criminals; there are commercial pirates who have selfishly used an abnormal knowledge along certain lines to accumulate gold, without a thought of pity for the multitudes they are treading under foot and starving, body, mind and soul, in order that they may accumulate still more of the wealth that they can never use. There are statesmen who possess knowledge and talents which might be used so ably to enact, regulate and enforce laws to the end that all of earth's children might have justice and a fair chance to exist. Is it nothing, think you, that because of a lack of spiritual growth, because of greed and selfishness in the world, that communication between the HIGHER spheres and this earth has almost been cut off.

Greed and selfishness have been the curse of humanity in all departments and walks of life; have caused the downfall of Nations, parties and creeds. THEY WILL CAUSE THE DOWNFALL OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM AS A DISTINCT CULT, IF WE FAIL TO READ THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.

Spiritualism came not that certain people possessing mediumistic gifts might be placed on a pedestal and worshipped as gods or goddesses; came not that forms might be brought forth from a cabinet in a dark room to a morbid crowd of sensation hunters at $1 per head; neither did it come that some amusement seekers might be amused. It came to teach those yearning for more light, for higher truths, that they must fit themselves for the reception of these truths, this light, by being true to the truths they have already received, by living them out in a life of usefulness to their fellowman.

It comes to tell us that to truth alone must we bend the knee, that the instrument is but a mouthpiece they are using to give out this truth, that

(Concluded in Fifth column.)

What Modern Spiritualism Stands For.

An Impressive Lecture in Commemoration of the Fifty-Ninth Anniversary of the Spirit Rappings at Hydesville, N. Y., in 1848.

BY DR. J. H. RANDALL.

IN HIS PRIMITIVE SAVAGE STATE MAN IS LIKE A CHILD, FULL OF QUESTIONS, HIS REASONING RUNS ALONG SIMPLE LINES. ONE OF THE EARLIEST MYSTERIES TO HIM IS DEATH. WHEN DEATH EMBRACED HIS COMRADE WARRIORS SLAIN IN BATTLE BY HIS SIDE, HE MISSED THAT FORCE OF LIFE IN THEM WHICH HE REALIZED YET IN HIS OWN POSSESSION. REASON, FEEBLE THOUGH IT WAS, TOLD HIM SOMETHING HAD GONE FROM THEIR BODIES, AND HE ASKED "WHAT HAS GONE, AND WHERE HAS IT GONE?" THIS QUESTIONING PHILOSOPHER, THOUGH A SAVAGE, KNEW ANOTHER STATE HE CALLED SLEEP, WHICH BEARS A CLOSE RESEMBLANCE TO DEATH, BUT IN WHICH HE DREAMS, AND SOMETIMES WHEN AWAKE HE RECALLS THESE DREAMS. IN THEM HE SOMETIMES SEES THE SO-CALLED DEAD; HUNTS WITH THEM; TALKS WITH THEM, AND HEARS THEIR COMPLAINTS AND PRAISES. THIS MAKES HIM REALIZE THAT HE IS COMPOSED OF TWO HALVES — A REAL SELF, AND A SHADOW OR DREAM SELF. THIS THOUGHT SUGGESTED ANOTHER, OR A HOLDFAST SELF WHICH IS THE MASTER OF THE OTHER TWO. HE MAY CONCLUDE, "WHEN I SLEEP ONE OF MY SELVES LEAVES THE OTHER AND GOES ABOUT A SPECIAL BUSINESS OF ITS OWN. WHEN DEATH COMES ONE SELF FLIES AWAY; IT IS HOMELESS; SOMETIMES WORRIED AND HUNGRY; AND GOES WANDERING A STRANGER IN ANOTHER STATE OF EXISTENCE."

Friends, we have assembled at this time to commemorate the advent of a phenomenal feature of Spiritualism; and briefly to call to mind what has been shadowed in thought by it, which it seems possible will aid mankind in the solution of great problems that make for peace, harmony and satisfaction with our existence here, and after we shall have passed through the mysterious change called death.

In the Bible Book of Job these words are found, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Many, many millions of people have been and still are very seriously concerned to obtain an answer to this question, such as will satisfy the inner consciousness with which they are endowed; and the trend of thought with many millions of the brightest intellects has been and still is to give an affirmative answer to it.

Robert G. Ingersoll, who is very generally claimed as the champion of anti-theology, anti-religion and materialism once said:

"Life is a vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities; we strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is a wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word; but in the night of death, hope sees a star, and listening Love can hear the rustle of a wing."

On another occasion Mr. Ingersoll, at a funeral said: "The play goes on. Will this drama have an end? Will the curtain fall at last? Will it rise again upon some other stage? Reason says, perhaps: and hope whispers, Yes."

The thoughts suggested by this language implies it seems to me that he who uttered them was not fully satisfied with the statement that "Death ends all."

As a student of history we designate this the Fifty-ninth Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism, because it is fifty-nine years since intellect freed itself sufficiently from superstition, and found a way to interpret certain sounds made by disembodied men, women and children, in a spiritual state of being, through which we have since learned, though dead, they are near us, and still love us in the same old way that they did when here in the body.

It is truly said that the "Hydesville rappings" took place in a haunted house. Our arisen American poet, H. W. Longfellow, wrote:

"All houses wherein men have lived and died are haunted houses."

Long years before the Fox family there was known among the Germans what they called the "Poltergeist," (meaning the noisy spirit that raps and throws furniture about the house.) It was not regarded as peculiar to any country, as mention had been made of similar phenomena occurring in Japan, Russia and Egypt.

The historian Pliny mentions the haunted house of Athenodorus, the philosopher in Athens. We are also told that in Iceland the ghost of the dead thrall Glam rapped on the roofs in the Gratti's saga. And the Dyaks, Singalese and Siamese agree with the Esths that such rapping is caused by the spirits of the dead.

It is a matter of record, inferentially, that the idea of spirits manifesting by rapping was entertained by some of the early Christians. The account of the releasb of Peter from prison by the angels, and his going to the home of one of the faithful where many were gathered together praying, when he knocked on the door, and the damsel Rhoda came in response, and recognizing his voice, she ran back and told how Peter stood at the door. And they said unto her "Thou are mad." He being as they knew in chains and confined in jail, they did not believe it possible that he had been freed. But Rhoda affirmed "That it was even so, he was present at the door." Then those present believing that he had been executed said, "It is his angel," thereby implying in their thoughts that angels could rap and make themselves known.

There are many theories extant about the dead; about apparitions, having their origin in hallucination, that are the foundation of many superstitions, but they scarcely suffice to account for the universality of the belief in spirits, and the possibility of their appearance, and intercommunion with mortals.

We cannot analyze to its first elements the confusion of thought which entered into the faith of the earlier types of mankind. We know however, that their ideas along these lines formed the basis of such religion as they formulated, and that passed into the later and refined heathenism, and philosophy of Egypt, Greece and Rome.

That mortals have certain duties to perform in the interest of, and for the happiness of the dead—the propitiation of the spirits of ancestors—is a very ancient and wide-spread belief.

Taking it for granted that the belief in the influence of the dead over the living for good or evil is a fact as good as universal in the dawn of the quality to think, the natural question is, "How was this idea obtained? There must have been a cause to give rise to it."

How is an imitation of anything to be produced unless there is a real thing suggested to be imitated?

How are the processes for the execution of fraudulent phenomena to be called into existence unless there is some feature of reality to suggest the fraudulent representation?

In his primitive savage state man is like a child, full of questions, his reasoning runs along simple lines. One of the earliest mysteries to him is death. When death embraced his comrade warriors slain in battle by his side, he missed that force of life in them which he realized yet in his own possession. Reason, feeble though it was, told him something had gone from their bodies, and he asked: "What has gone, and where has it gone?" This questioning philosopher, though a savage, knew another state he called sleep, which bears a close resemblance to death, but in which he dreams, and sometimes when awake he recalls these dreams. In them he sometimes sees the so-called dead; hunts with them; talks with them, and hears their complaints and praises. This makes him realize that he is composed of two halves—a real self, and a shadow or dream self. This thought suggested another, or a holdfast self which is the master of the other two. He may conclude, "When I sleep one of my selves leaves the other and goes about a special business of its own. When death comes one self flies away; it is homeless; sometimes worried and hungry; and goes wandering a stranger in another state of existence."

After a time one of the tribe makes these matters a study, and the other members of the tribe call him a Diviner. His opinions are revered. He discovers how to centralize whatever spiritual qualities he may be endowed with, he can induce, or produce, the trance by inhaling the odor of certain herbs, or by manipulations. He gets a reputation for seeing things, and knowing things which the intellect about him cannot comprehend that he could see and know without seeing and hearing the spirits of the dead. He saw them worried and hungry, he told his tribe he had only to ask and they were ready to sacrifice cattle to appease their hunger; if the worriment arose from the unsatisfied passion for revenge which the dead held against their enemies, human sacrifices were offered, and altars and temples were reared for that purpose.

No other conclusion can be drawn from these facts, whether right or wrong in a moral sense, so far as known to savage life, except that the dead still live, and appear to the living; and that they are beings of wants, worriments, pleasures and passions, just as they were known when in mortal life.

This belief derived from the experience of the savage is capable of extensive development. The favorite ancestral spirit of the strongest tribe absorbed the lion's share of sacrifice and the faithful attention of his worshipers; and eventually would become such a hero as Theseus was to the Athenians. Many other similar influences would produce a still higher religious idea; perhaps a circle of Olymphia, or a philosophic and intellectual monotheism. On this an early civilization was formed with its philosophers in secret holding private views of their own to control the multitude, by affording city populations grand temples decorated with hieratic splendor, while the rural people still retain in original simplicity some dread of ghosts, and believe in their power over mortals. This idea approximately being true tends to explain the identity of the ghost stories found among all types of mankind, and the conservatism of the great majority in relation to the condition of the dead and their proximity to the living. The farther we go back after the history of civilization, the simpler and more identical, and the more widely diffused we find ideas of the dead corresponding to this theory.

The earliest method for lighting fire, the first weapons used in the chase and for warfare, are not more alike than the earliest guesses of speculation and the primitive efforts of fancy. These old fancies arose from dreams of apparitions of the dead, and are preserved below the level of advancing culture, yet are insinuated into ideas of the cultivated classes, which as a rule are not seriously affected by religious or social changes.

Nothing shows more clearly the purity of ancient culture than the ab-Greeks. Yet their literature is more or less tinctured with loyalty to their divinities—the great men who had lived and died—who all their lives were divinely human, and accomplished such results in the world's affairs as to be entitled to be worshiped.

In the cloud-land of Folk-lore it is impossible to advance too cautiously. He who would realize the over-shadowing influence of the dead, in other words "try the spirits," must extend his view as far as possible into the beliefs of the most distant and alien races of mankind.

Leigh Hunt, one of England's poets, has expressed a beautiful thought along this line:

"How sweet it were, if without feeble fright,
Or dying of the dreadful beauteous sight,
An angel came to us, and we could bear
To see him issue from the silent air
At evening in our room, and bend on ours
His divine eyes, and bring from his bowers
News of dear friends, and children who have never Been dead indeed—as we shall know forever.
Alas! we think not what we daily see about our hearths—
Angels that are to be, Or may be if they will."

Modern Spiritualism has intensified the revolt started by Christianity against Materialism. Whatever there was of science, during the reign of Rome's Paganized Christianity, exposed the fallacy and fraud of many of the claims made for the maintenance of the authority of the Pontiffs over human affairs; skepticism destroyed nearly all faith in spiritual matters. Hence Spiritualism may be regarded as the forlorn hope of honest Christians and seekers after truth relating to the spiritual destiny of mankind throughout the world.

Several years ago the Chicago Daily News called upon a number of representative ministers of different denominations to express their opinions through its columns as to the cause of the widely recognized "Religious Unrest," and among them the following responses were received:

Rev. Clinton Locke, wrote: "One good thing that will come out of the Briggs controversy will be the loosening of the stifling folds of the great serpent, Calvinism, which has so long held Protestant Christianity in its deadly embrace. It has pervaded every form of religion since St. Augustine's time, and everywhere worked a deadly work. Some natures have reposed on it and thought they were the better for it; alas, how many gentle souls have lost all hope under it. My own church, the Episcopal, has suffered much from it. Its tracks are all over the thirty-nine articles, which are, however, dead letters in our church so far as I know."

Rev. Herrick Johnson, of the McCormick Theological Seminary, wrote, "Doubt is in the air. Doubt is infectious. It spreads like a plague. But through all the noxious air are the beams of the sun of righteousness."

Rev. W. F. Black, wrote: "Now, this restlessness is the inevitable consequence of things. It is the spirit of a broader, deeper, purer and better thought calling the system of all human religious domatisms to judgment and demanding a re-statement with reference to the teaching of the word of God. Humanity has grown until it can stand upon tiptoe and look over the hill of superstition and tradition and see the dawning of the New Testament Christianity as it is purpling the horizon. All human creeds and confessions are like the dresses of our childhood. We rejoice that we have outgrown them, and they are as useless to us today as an old continental almanac would be at the meridian of Chicago."

Rev. L. P. Mercer, wrote: "There is a new pressure upon the consciences of men to act out their real motives and speak out their real thoughts; and thus bring to judgment the hereditary and conventional. No institution can stand against it."

Rev. T. G. Milsted, wrote, "Never before were all religious and civilized nations in such a state of ferment and agitation as we see them today. Every denomination in America is rent and torn with discussion. Even the ubiquitous Jew is everywhere divided between the law of his fathers and the broader faith into which that law has in this century developed. This religious commotion is not a battle between warring factions, but at heart is a contest between the narrowness of systems and the breadth of truth; between the barriers set up by men and the light of heaven; between the halting spirit of mankind and the Spirit of the Almighty, which we cannot doubt will triumph."

The attitude of mind of these clergymen, and many others like them has been forced by the use of reason; and the phenomena and teachings of Spiritualism has had much to do with it.

Only a few months ago Rev. Lyman Abbott, said: "I believe in a God who is in and through and of everything—not an absentee God, whom we have to reach through the bible or priest or some other outside aid.

"My God is an ever present force, which manifests all the activities of man in all the workings of Nature.

"Science, literature and history tell us that there is one eternal energy, that the bible no longer can be accepted as ultimate, that many of its laws were copied from other religions, but were like all laws a gradual growth, and that man is a creature of evolution and not a creation.

"There is only one energy. That energy has always been working. It was working before Christ's time even as it is now."

When Dr. Abbott uttered these thoughts to the students of Harvard he said "I shall be branded as a heretic." And he was. No doubt could some of his religious critics have had their way they would have served him as Calvin served Dr. Servetus.

All religious thought emerging by virtue of the influence of Spiritualism is in harmony with the truths of Nature. It accepts the facts of history about all religions. It recognizes in Primitive Christianity nothing upon which Rational Christianity can rest, and progress in its influence upon mankind but phenomena and experiences strictly in accord with the phenomena and experiences of these times. It has antagonized only the unnatural and irrational creeds and dogmas that have been set up by ranting theologians. It stands for the deepest and farthest reaching thoughts that have been and may be inspired by the scientific knowledge and philosophical conclusions of this age.

Rev. Dr. Fischer, a representative of the Protestant Church in Gemany, at a convention in Europe a few months ago made the following statements: "The religious consciousness of former generations was based on divine revelation. It laid emphasis on miracles and signs. Divinely given interpretation was held to be the real and indispensable object of a genuine faith, so that often enough the revealed Book became itself almost God. This whole conception of revelation has now disappeared from religious thought; it was a product of religious reasoning under the form of an antique philosophy. No longer do heaven and earth stand opposite each other as two worlds. We do not now believe in a lower world of hell. There can no longer by any claim to a revelation in the old sense of the word, and the idea is not in harmony with the certain results of modern scientific research. It is undoubtedly evident that the investigations of science and history, and the unprejudiced researches into the character of original Christianity, which have been going on for about seventy years without regard to dogmas and doctrines, have made religion something entirely different from what it had traditionally been supposed to be. It has been found, too, that Christ is a historical person, and that his activity and work can be plainly understood in the light of his day and surroundings. The historical Christ, without any signs and wonders, and without the later Christology is what the religious consciousness of today must deal with. The deification of Christ has not stood the test of real, historic investigation. Such problems as those of creation, providence, prayer and its hearing, and the personality of God wear an entirely new aspect in the light of modern science. The new truths must be recognized in our pulpits and become a part of religious instruction in the schools."

These thoughts from others than those classed as Spiritualists show that the Christian ministry is honeycombed with such ideas and opinions as the inspiration of Spiritualism has been teaching since the advent of the Fox family. We have seen with Swedenborg that the Spirit of man has continued life beyond the grave. It has been given to modern mediums, as it was to him and the Apostles of Jesus, to converse with those we have known in this world, after they had passed through the change called death.

Nine-tenths of those who called themselves Christians in the days of the Fox family did not pretend to entertain any thought of a future life except that which was expresed in their creeds implying belief in "the resurrection of the body" after death. The most faithfully religious in those days as now, that attempted to gain spiritual knowledge as the same order of people did in Bible times were considered crazy, and fit subjects for insane asylums. And yet many ministers and laymen, will read as if it was very important to have it known and believed that Daniel, (see ch. x) who had a vision, ate no pleasant bread for three whole weeks, but gave himself up, body and soul, that he might get a manifestation of the spirit.

Spiritualism stands for the fact that man physiologically is the product of all orders and degrees of matter; psychologically of all essences and properties of spirit—the flower and fruit of the Universe.

Man should be studied as the Epitome of Father-God and Mother-Nature. He may obtain knowledge of the conditions that promote his existence through science as expresed in art, by music, painting, sculpture, geometry, architecture, astronomy, geology, chemistry, anatomy, physiology, psychology and philosophy.

The reason principle is the totality of love, spirituality, the flower of the intellect. A law of truth, regulating the existnce of man phsically, morally and spiritually; another word for "Wisdom," the soul's natural "Savior."

Philosophy is a term applied to the exercises of reason and intuition by well balanced intellects. Reason is the perceiver of facts; the discoverer of truths; the classifier of principles recognized by intuition, upon which rest all religions and all sciences realized by human consciousness.

Spiritualism stands for the fact that thoughts are the waves of the waters of life; the effects of cerebral motion; the children of organic sensation; the invariable signs of intelligence. That conscience is a spiritual sensibility with a dual capacity; first, innate and eternal; second, educational and temporary. The latter an artificial product of the circumstances of our existence, is youngest and most active; the natural conscience on the contrary, is first in the soul, is inmost, deepest, absolute, and less clamorous. In this may be realized the difference between tuition and intuition; and the reason why persons with opposite religions are equally devoted and ready to persecute; and why a Christian's outer conscience can justify the present Ishmaelitish system of trade and commerce.

The inner natural conscience has been obstructed. But the fact that the "the dead," our "loved ones," may "look us through and through," is making for righteousness; the principle of justice is being realized as never before—the clear voice of Father-God in the garden, concerning whatsoever is right to itself and just to all mankind is being heard around the world.

Spiritualism stands for a philosophy that is a universal harmonizer. It interferes with that phase of religion only in which its fruitful superstitions and consequent exaggeration contradict the soul's highest affirmations—a just and wholesome interference, which resembling a wise parent checking a child's impetuosity and untruthfulness, does no injury, but instead, strengthens and beautifies, and intensifies more and more the native glory of all true religion and pure humanity.

To The Spiritualist of Texas and Adjoining States.

Dear friends, do you want a State Camp Meeting this year? If so, let me hear from every one who will attend or those interested in it. I have done more than my part to secure a meeting, and I find I am unable to get it by my efforts alone. Now I want the meeting, and I feel that every one should have an interest in it. I believe many are interested.

Every one should pull for a good meeting. Let us get Spiritualism on wheels, and send her moving with power, but it will take money to secure mediums and speakers. All who want the meeting, write me at once what they are willing to give. We want to know now, so we can secure mediums and speakers, and get out our programme, and get the camp well advertised. There are already some who have promised to help in this work, but what we want is enough money to pay our speakers and mediums, and we need to have it now so we can be sure of getting them. Our speakers and mediums can not work for nothing; they have to live the same as others and I for one will do my part to help pay them. So now, good Spiritualist friends, one and all, do not let this year pass without having a good meeting in our dear old State. Let me hear from every one who will donate something to help secure workers for this meeting, and those who will attend. Address me at Box 202, Hubbard City, Tex.

VIRGIL H. MILLS.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

LETTER FROM SEATTLE, WASH.

In Which the Writer, a Prominent Spiritualist, Is Somewhat Caustic in the Expression of Her Views.

To the Editor:—I see and feel that you really need one more portrayal of things occurring in this Northwestern corner of the Universe, Seattle, and judging from what I read in the widely representative Progressive Thinker, a true picture of this section will fit the situation over the whole Spiritualistic field.

To begin, our mediums—prominent figures in the picture—our mediums here, as elsewhere, are faithfully attending Vanity Fair, and Easter hats and earliest spring costumes are loudly in evidence in our well-filled halls, and Fashion's go-cart here, as in other churches, is kept merrily moving along.

Our monthly dances are well attended, and much enjoyed, for modern Spiritualists are not afflicted with the thought that "Heaven is high and Hell is deep." No struggle through sleepless vigils disturbs our serenity; no insatiable longings for a nearer approach to white-robed Truth cause us any anxious thought. Tones from the far country fall not on our dull ears or wake within us aspirations to dwell in its splendors.

At our present development we find happiness enough in thinking that man is a very good "Patent digestor, and the stomach and its adjuncts are the grand reality." So, we drink beer and dance with the girls and boys.

We get up masquerades and cute little tamale and confetti surprises, and we are gay! True, the police sometimes cast a passing shade over our sky by the occasional arrest of a medium; but I cannot see why they do it, unless to make business for the lawyers. They have not the shade of an excuse for persecuting US. Persecutions are for those who are trying to lift the world out of its sensualism, or injustice, or inhumanity, and not for satisfied, easy-going people like us, who give so little trouble in those directions.

The children in Seattle, as in other Christian communities, toil in the soap factories, the laundries, and in whatever degrading, crushing and child-destroying enterprise will give the little waifs a chance to earn a crust.

The little "cash" boys and girls trot the long day through in the stores where we buy our fashionable finery, and I never have heard that any meddlesome committee of Spiritualists have ever attempted to make any trouble about it, or about any other of the thousand and one wrongs that make life, in so many cases, a veritable hell; so why should they persecute US? We never have opposed the Mammon God in any way. We are not guilty of even maintaining a lyceum or school for our own little ones, but we turn them over to good orthodox Sunday Schools that are maintained by people who care more for children than we do.

We are piously donning the rags and tatters—worn out symbols—which Mother Rome has found useful in holding the world tethered and haltered.

We christen the babies, though they are not at later date deemed worthy of any instruction in the truths or ethics of Spiritualism, and we ordain any medium who is ambitious of wearing the title of "Rev." O, yes, we take great pleasure in observing any of the numerous "beautiful ceremonies" that are fashionable in older churches, and can get up quite a presentable show on such occasions, only ten cents admission!

MRS. H. A. STOCKEY.

ALL THIS HAPPENS IN BUCKEYE STATE.

According to the Story, Ghost Pumps Water From a Well and Tells of Treasure — Pots and Pans Fly Around—Case That Is Exciting Believers in Spirits—Spirit Gives Her Name.

Ghostly manifestations [as set forth in the Morning Telegram of late date] in the Heeter home, three miles east of Sonora, in Preble County, Ohio, have drawn hundreds of venturesome persons to the home seeking to penetrate the mystery.

Not only by rappings in the house does the spirit give evidence of its presence, but out in the yard the pump handle moves up and down, impelled by some invisible force, while the water flows freely. A sound of thumping is heard as if on a metal wash tub, and kettles rise from the stove, float about in the air and then return to their places. One venturesome individual tells of a spirit conversation.

"I first asked the invisible visitor how long it had been in the house, and to give a rap for each month. It gave eight raps.

"How long will you stay here?" and it rapped six times.

"'Will you tell me your name? If so rap three times.' It answered yes.

"'Now,' said I 'I will begin at the top of the alphabet and name the letters as I go down, and when I come to the letters of your name, in regular order, rap once.'"

When he came to M it rapped. He then went back to the beginning, and when he spoke A it rapped again, and so it kept it up until it spelled the name Martha Donald.' No one of that name is known to have lived in the house. He then said to the spirit, "I will ask you some questions, if you answer yes, rap three times; if no, rap twice.

"'Are you in trouble?'

"'No.'

"'Do you wish to tell anything?'

"'Yes.'"

It then went on and told, by rapping, of money that had been buried, and said that it wanted so much of the money to be Mrs. Heeter's, so much to be given to her boy and the rest to pay for a monument, and if Mrs. Heeter would go out near the barn, when she was near the place it would give three raps in the house. It was midnight, and Mrs. Heeter, an old woman, was not asked to go to the barn.

It is also said that the window panes respond to the summons of the unseen influences, and reply with promptness and precision to questions propounded by visitors who are anxius to ascertain whether or not the wonderful tales that are told of the occult powers are well founded. It is said that so pronounced are the manifestations that even the most skeptical are sent away completely mystified by the inexplicable happenings about the Heeter farm. The story has been spread broadcast, and hundreds of people have visited the scene, until the Heeter family is annoyed to the point of exasperation by the notoriety unwittingly attained.

The Cause at Pittsburg, Kansas.

I have been the regular pastor for the Oriental Spiritual Society of Pittsburg, Kansas, for nearly two years, it succeeding the Pittsburg Spiritualist Society which suspended meetings, but is now opening up a hall again under the leadership of Mrs. Mabel Harris, a fine test medium. This society holds service in the afternoon, Sundays, and the Oriental in the evening, in the halls adjoining. Saturday and Sunday, March 30 and 31, were banner days in Spiritualism in Pittsburg. The evening of the 30th the Ladies' Auxiliary to the society gave a social hop, supper and literary entertainment. The literary part opened with a drill by twelve small boys in sheets, pillow slips and masks, called the phantom drill. The next number was a phantom dance by eight adults. This created much laughter, the antics of the phantoms causing some to laugh and children to shrink closer to guardians. The following took part in music, recitation and reading: Music by four young ladies; song, two tiny girls; recitation, Forest Leon and Leah Scovill; two others whose names we could not secure. Following this programme, dancing was indulged in until supper was announced. Mrs. Fannie Paul and myself were visitors and enjoyed the entertainment with the rest.

Sunday, the 31st, we visited Mrs. B. F. Able's society. This organization has never missed celebrating the anniversary for the past twenty-five years. The Association is composed of liberals and Spiritualists and is known as the Pittsburg Liberal and Spiritualists Association. This service partakes of a memorial meeting to members passed on, as well as celebrating Modern Spiritualism. Fourteen members have joined the great majority. The meeting closed in the spirit of harmony.

Mrs. Bird Ables and T. V. Blackman sung the songs they sung together years ago when the society was blessed with loved ones in the flesh which have now gone before.

Mrs. Perry, Mr. Davis and myself as mediums were permitted to witness the spirit forms of loved ones and receive messages of cheer for all present.

At A. O. U. W. Hall at night a large crowd gathered to hear Sister Fannie Paul and myself speak and give tests. A programme of music, recitation and a conference led by Bro. Baird on the subject, "Why I am a Spiritualist," assisted by Bro. L. V. Blackman. Sister Tuttle and others added to the interest of the occasion. President Mrs. Van Zandt welcomed the friends and outlined plans for the future good of the society. The friends were pleased to say that never had there been more accurate and wonderful tests of spirit return given in any Pittsburg meeting than the guides gave through Sister Paul of Joplin and myself. Sister Paul is new in the work, but I can see a great work for her to do for the Spiritual Cause, and I am glad to have one so worthy to succeed those who have grown gray and are rapidly speeding down the incline of life in this part of the spiritual field.

Joplin is, indeed, blessed with two such grand mediums as Sisiter Alice Sheridan of the East Town Temple Society, and Mrs. Paul of West Town, Joplin. There are other mediums there, but none who are actively before the public. Bro. Brown, M. D., a fine psychic and speaker, but engaged in his profession, is always ready to help the societies when called upon. His wife, Mrs. Sarah Brown, is a clairvoyant in all phases and diagnoses disease. Pittsburg has three societies and is doing a good work in all for Spiritualism and humanity in general.

Sunday, April 14, I filled my regular appointment.

The Progressive Thinker comes each week Tuesday and if delayed a day we cannot rest until it shows up. Trusting it may never grow less in substance or shadow, we are, yours in the Cause.

SARA C. SCOVELL.

Galena, Kans.

AS OF OLD THEY COME.

Proving the Continuity of Life.

Ringing back from spirit realms all the sacred friendships and tender love of human life and relationships "as of old"; so with the longing of soul for those left behind, came the following spirit message from a deceased cousin, who for a number of years was a close business associate, but knowing little of spirit communication.

The first manifestation after his transition in January, 1907, was a message in one of our public meetings proving his identity, and asking a special private interview, which was accorded him by placing several sheets of blank paper in one envelope and a letter addressed to him in another. Sealing both, we placed the first between two slates, firmly binding them together; the other we placed under the slates on the seance table of the Bangs Sisters, 654 W. Adams St., Chicago.

From the time we placed the letters and slates no mortal hand touched them until we were signaled to open the slates and envelopes for the reading of the spirit writing, when we found both envelopes between the slates; time required about thirty minutes, at 1 p. m., in full daylight. The message is a truthful reply to our written interrogatories, addressed to our cousin, Henry C. Horine, late of Los Angeles, Cal.

We subjoin the letter verbatim.

COURTNEY H. HORINE.

Chicago.

Dear Cousin Courtney: I am glad to come with these few lines today.

I have found a wonderful world over here. Each day brings to me some marvelous experience until the entire universe seems to be all alive.

I can not express my surprise and pleasure. I only wish my dear wife and loved ones could know the half that is in waiting for them; life would seem so different, so much more worth the living.

I have found that each experience is for a purpose and a benefit, bitter though it may seem at the time and unnecessary.

All has been reflected for good.

My best wishes to you and your good wife, and love to the dear ones at home.

As of old, yours,

HENRY C. HORINE.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

Eyesight Restored.

Eyeglasses May Be Abandoned.

A Wonderful Discovery That Corrects Afflictions of the Eye Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for the relief of most forms of disease, as a new method—the Actina treatment—has been discovered which eliminates the necessity of former torturous methods. There is no risk or necessity of experimenting, as many people report having been cured of failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye after being pronounced incurable, through this grand discovery.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, special agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Having used Actina for several years, I cheerfully recommend it for the cure of eye, ear and throat affections. It cured my mother of cataracts."

Susan Cardwell, Lincoln, Kan., writes, "I am 73 years old. I was so blind I could only know persons by their voices. After using Actina I can now thread a needle without glasses."

Mrs. T. F. Moyle, Waterford, Wis., writes:—"About two years ago I was taken with Trifis in both eyes and nearly went blind and it was thought an operation would be necessary. I sent for an Actina last April and it has taken all the inflamation out and my eyes are now well.

Hundreds of other testimonials will be sent on application. "Actina" is purely a home treatment and self-administered by the patient, and is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept 31PB, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive absolutely free a valuable book, Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.

Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address

DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

909

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker, as printed at the top of the first page, right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

CONCENTRATION.

A Valuable Work.

Concentration, Meditation and Inspiration. How to develop these desirable gifts according to the most approved methods of ancient and modern teachers, together with a set of six symbols comprising six months' study. By Laura G. Fixen.

A course of practical experimental lessons, of especial value and assistance to those who desire to be benefited by the development of powers of concentration of thought, clear meditation and superior inspiration.

Sent complete for 50 cents.

A Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

By Lilian Whiting.

Author of "The World Beautiful," "Kate Field," "After Her Death," "From Dreamland Sent," etc. With portrait. 16mo. Cloth, gilt. Price $1.25. The writer of this "Study of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" has thrown the book into five chapters, with sub-titles as follows:

LIVING WITH VISIONS. "Summer Snow of Apple Blossoms;" Music Flow of Pindar; Friends in the Unseen.
LOVES OF THE POETS. The Prefigured Friend; Vita Nuova; "One Day, My Siren."
IN THAT NEW WORLD. Plea and Poetry; In Casa Guidi; Florentine Days; Walter Savage Landor.
ART AND ITALY. Individuality of Character; The Clasped Hands; Kate Field's Records; Mrs. Browning's Death.
LILIES OF FLORENCE. Poetic Rank; Spiritual Laws; Modern Scientific Thought; The Consideration of Genius.

For Sale at this office.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS

A real visit with friends on the other side of life, and a familiar talk. By Spirit Samuel Bowles; Carrie E. S. Twing, Medium. Price 25c.

VOLNEY'S RUINS

—AND—

THE LAW OF NATURE,

TO WHICH IS ADDED

Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical Notice by Count Daru, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor;

Also, a Map of the Astrological Heavens of the Ancients.

Printed on heavy paper, from new plates, in large, clear type, with portrait and illustrations. One vol. post 8vo, 248 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind, and clearly points out the sources of human ignorance and misery. The author is supposed to meet in the ruins of Palmyra an apparition or phantom, which explains the true principles of society, and the causes of both the prosperity and the ruin of ancient states. A general assembly of the nations is at length convened, a legislative body formed, the source and origin of religion, of government, and of laws discussed, and the law of Nature—founded on justice and equity—is finally proclaimed to an expectant world.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price, 15 cents.

The Religion of Spiritualism.

Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By the Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price, $1.00. A valuable book for the money.

Cultivation of Personal Magnetism

A treatise on Human Culture. By Leroy Hertler, anthropologist and author. A very suggestive and instructive book. Price $1.00.

Practical Methods to Insure Success. A valuable little work, full of practical instruction in matters pertaining to physical, mental and spiritual health. Worth many times its cost. Price 10 cents.

Force and Matter By Ludwig Buechner. A celebrated book. A profound work upon a profound subject. Price, cloth, $1.00.

The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism,

A Menace to American Civilization. By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. A trenchant and masterly treatise. Price, 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The most important revelations concerning the true origin of Christianity. Reader, in bringing to your notice "Antiquity Unveiled," it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal. Price, $1.50.

Womanly Beauty

ITS ATTAINMENT OF FORM AND FEATURES

The cultivation of personal beauty, based on Hygiene and Health Culture, by twenty physicians and specialists, and edited by Albert Turner. A valuable book for women and therefore for the whole world. Price in elegant cloth binding, $1.00. For sale at this office.

MAHOMET His Birth, Character and Doctrine. By Edward Gibbon. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25 cents.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

The Psychic Research Society, of Rockford, Ill., spent a very enjoyable evening April 22. Dr. Booth made a very interesting impromptu address which was followed by an introductory address to her messages by Mrs. Mary Weaver of Chicago. Her remarks were good and her messages were remarkably correct.

Will J. Erwood, about removing from La Crosse, Wis., to Elkhart, Ind., where he has a permanent engagement, will address the society in the afternoon and evening of April 28. The society expects to do some good work from this time to the close of the lecture season.

Press Dispatch from Toledo, O., to the Chicago Examiner says: "As the result of a dream Frank Dines, rural mail carrier from Marlin, Ottawa County, saved his $1,027.23, while F. E. L. Mansfield of Los Angeles, alias Professor Eugene Lenox, psychist, occupies a cell at the Central Police Station, and probably will be arraigned to-morrow on charge of practicing a trick to defraud. Dines, who expected Mansfield could find him a fortune, turned over to the Professor three certificates of deposit, aggregating $1,027, which he agreed to indorse this morning. He says he dreamed during the night that he was about to be swindled. He confided in the police and Mansfield's arrest followed."

The Headlight of Pittsburg, Kansas, speaks as follows of that excellent lecturer, Mrs. Scovell of Galena: "There was a large audience at Workman hall last night to hear Rev. Sarah C. Scovell, of Galena, lecture on the subject of "Jesus, the Christ." A large number present were much interested in the thoughts of the lady, and the manner in which she treated the subject. Her logic was new to a great many. After the meeting many went forward and told Mrs. Scovell she had given them newer and grander ideas of the Nazarene."

Geo. W. Kates and wife are having excellent success in Cleveland, Ohio, where they will remain until the last of May. Address them at No. 1219 Prospect avenue.

Mr. Sakharam Ganesh Pandit, B. A., of Bombay, India, will give a course of nine lectures at 6558 Stewart ave., Chicago, on "The Esoteric and Mystic Meaning of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, the Christ." Saturdays and Tuesdays at 8 p. m., during the month of June, '07. 1st lecture: Saturday, June 1st, at 8 p. m. Season ticket $7.00; single admission, $1.00; Private lessons on application. This course is intended to explain various obscure questions which have arisen in the minds of earnest students, as well as clear away the doubts that have ever troubled many good Christians. For further particulars address Mr. Charles Howard, 6558 Stewart avenue, Chicago.

The Seattle Psychic Society of Washington, passed resolutions commendatory of the life and work of Mrs. Mell Spaulding, who lately passed to spirit life. In honor of her memory the society "draped its charter in the colors of the Spiritualists for the period of ten days, as a token of respect and love.

Mrs. Martha Woolsey writes from Indianapolis, Ind.: "The sea at this point has become calm, and the commotion there was for a time has had a good effect on the work here. The State Association has convened its meetings here. I had concluded to retire from the public work, but as many requested me to continue through April at least, with the view of establishing and organizing a new society, I concluded to do so. Dr. Wattles of Winchester, was engaged, and our hall has been pretty well filled at every meeting. Mrs. Frances Ruddick, the wonderful Physical Psychic, gives independent slate writing at all these meetings; most of them being received on top of the table. The month of April is nearly at a close, and now the people are not willing for me to give up the meetings, and last Sunday begged me to continue them through May, and they would support me. I could not resist, so have secured Dr. Wattles for the month of May, and Mrs. Frances Ruddick will continue her good work. The Helping Hand Spiritual Fresh Air Club meets with Mrs. Frances Ruddick today, and while we are not accumulating a big sum of money, we are silently doing a good work that can not help but live after us. I attended the Lyceum of the Progressive Society, and it certainly is doing a good work. I am preparing to go East in June, and will remain all summer, but during my absence I will not forget my many friends at home, or the work of uplifting those in sorrow and distress."

Mrs. Lula Collins writes from Lawton, Okla.: "For the encouragement of others, I would like to report to the many readers of your valuable paper, the success we are having in this new country. Through the efficient leadership of our State Missionary, Rev. Alice Baker. The Church of Spiritual Light is gaining in interest and numbers every week. Mrs. Baker is a pleasant and logical lecturer, and is attracting the thinkers. We have persuaded her to remain with us a month longer than was her intention at first. The middle of May she will have to leave us to fill other engagements in the State work. At her departure we will feel lost, but we know the good work will now continue, and as an organized body we will be strong by that time, and able to manfully ply the oars. Mrs. Baker has also helped us form a Ladies' Busy Bee Auxiliary that already promises great success. We ask for the co-operation of any in near-by towns and country, who desire to unite with us in this grand work for the uplifting of humanity."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

Dr. G. B. Warne went last Monday, to Springfield, Ill., to lay plans for the defeat or amendment of the House Bill previously alluded to in The Progressive Thinker, and which contains certain odious features against mediumship. The Doctor is always watchful of the interests of Spiritualism and mediums.

Geo. A. Letford, the noted medium, writes from Tallahassee, Fla.: "I held three circles here, Sunday, besides giving many private messages from the spirit friends to the guests at the Leon Hotel, and the people were well pleased."

Mrs. E. H. Thompson writes: "The Fraternal Daughters held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Ruth Squire, the 24th of April, and we had for our speaker the Rev. Thomas Grimshaw. Though the quantity present was small, the quality was everything that could be desired. Some of the questions asked the guides of our Brother were as follows: 'Can a disembodied spirit control a mortal a week after it leaves the body?' 'Why is it those who are so anxious for a message seldom get it, and to others they come unsolicited?' After answering these questions to the perfect satisfaction of all present, our speaker's guide gave an illustration of his passing out of the mortal body, and told us how hard he tried to send a message to a loved one on the earth plane, and he explained the source he had to come through, and the elements that he had to contend with before he accomplished his mission. It was a great joy to me to hear those present say they never were in a more spiritual and more edifying meeting than this one. It can be truly said that Brother Grimshaw is controlled by some of those higher spiritual forces that strive to give out some truth that will be an everlasting blessing to any who hear him.

Henry Daut writes from Decatur, Ill.: "The Spiritual Science Society is still in existence and is holding a meeting every Sunday afternoon at our worthy president's home. Our meetings at present are conducted by home talent, with Sister Garrow as speaker. The board of directors of the Society is the same as last year: Mrs. T. S. Kizer, president; Mrs. Garrow, vice-president; Mr. V. Barber, treasurer; Mrs. Masterson, Mr. G. R. Bicknell, Mr. Aaron Smick and Henry Daut make the board for 1907 and 8."

Samuel A. Huntington of Malden, Mass., writes of the Progressive Spiritualist Society: "The Rev. T. A. Wiggin gave his third lecture and ballot reading on Tuesday evening, April 18. He chose for his theme, "The Phenomena of Spiritualism." He gave a very scholarly and instructive address. It seems to me that if the majority of our platform speakers followed his line of thought and displayed the same noble courage, Spiritualism would soon be raised out of its present 'ruts,' and placed on the high plane where Christ left it. His ballot readings were fine as usual. He will finish his second course on the 25th inst. Sunday services, April 21. The 3 p. m. circle was interesting as usual. Mrs Carrie H. Tainter of Derry, N. H., was the speaker at 7:30. She chose for her theme the old text, 'Come Unto Me,' etc., giving a fine address, after which she gave many messages. Mrs. B. W. Belcher of Marlboro, Mass., will be the speaker on the 28th and Mrs. M. A. Bonney of Boston, on May 5."

Annie L. Gillespie writes from Battle Creek, Mich.: "I leave for Pittsburg the 29th inst., remaining only one week; then to Summerland, British Columbia, returning home to open Lake Brady, June 30. It has been a most successful engagement here, and it is with regret I close my labors for the season with the splendid workers of Battle Creek, but my word has been given to take the trip to Summerland, and arrangements have been made for my work there. May 9 will see me started on the long journey. I expect to return home in September."

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: "The Fraternal Order of Spiritualists was favored with its usual large congregations at its services on Sunday, April 21. Rev. Thomas Grimshaw delivered a brief but eloquent address in the afternoon, after which the guides of our message bearers demonstrated the phenomena by giving many satisfactory tests which were tests of their ability as mediums. Brother Grimshaw was our speaker again in the evening, speaking while entranced. The intelligence which controlled him gave us a sermon from the subject, 'Loved and Lost,' and in unfaltering eloquence explained many things relative to the spirit world and its occupants hitherto unknown even by Spiritualists, which was instructive and pleasing. His remarks were listened to with an eagerness that grew as he proceeded, and at the close of the service was the center of a group of enthusiastic admirers. Sunday, May 5 will be Mediums' Day again, and the ever-popular message-bearers will read both afternoon and evening. Come up for a visit with those who have passed away. President McDougal of the Psychical Research Society of Rockford, Ill., will be with us on May 12th, and give us one of his powerful lectures. On Sunday, May 19, President H. D. Barrett of the N. S. A., will occupy our platform. His views concerning Spiritualism are well known, and there is not a person within 100 miles of Chicago who can well afford to miss this opportunity. Do not forget the place. Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street, top floor. Good music and a good supper together with fraternal fellowship are some of the attractions we offer."

The Hyde Park Occult Society was very agreeably entertained last Sunday evening by Dr. Juliet H. Severance in an hour's address upon the subject of Spiritualism. Her remarks were logical, educative and interesting and showed the metal activity of old-times in this old worker. She was followed by inspiring remarks by the ever ready Georgia Gladys Cooley, for a few moments, and the audience felt well satisfied with the meeting. Tests were omitted, owing to the illness of the medium, Mr. Fraser.

Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley is to be an active worker during the coming season, in fact for the coming year, as will be seen from the following itineracy: The month of May at Pittsburg, with the First Spiritual Church; Meadville, Pa., June 2 to 23, inclusive; Decatur, Mich., June 30; at home in Chicago, July 2 to 12; Wonewoc, Wis., Camp, July 13 to 23 inclusive; Lake Brady Camp, July 28 (Sunday); Lily Dale Camp August 3 to 8; Clinton Camp, Ia., August 18 to 25; then to Portland in September. From there she starts for New Zealand in October, and around the world from there. She will be greatly missed in America in the meantime, where her services are so much sought and so badly needed. It is hoped the trip will be both inspiring and healthful to this excellent medium.

Etienne Feutsch writes from Rogers Park: "The Progressive Spiritual Society never made much noise, but shows the right direction to lost souls very quietly, and goes on in its work like good laborers, knowing they have them. Mrs. Hilbert, our pastor, knows the value of money or good mediumship, and tries to have someone assisting her in her Sunday evening service. Last Sunday we were pleased with the presence of Mrs Wilson, who gave us an interesting lecture—something to think of, and Mr. Temple as assistant message bearer, proved to those who have brain that Spiritualism is no foolishness, but the loveliest fact."

Ex-Priest, P. A. Seguin, engaged in humanitarian work, writes from St. Paul, Minn.: "Last year we had 228 girls of all nationalities at our home, whom we have harbored, helped and located among our best families. This is the religion I now have—more doing than talking. Your paper is growing more and more in importance and influence."

Geo. W. Kates and wife are serving the Temple Society in Cleveland, O. Address them there at 1219 Prospect avenue, until the last of May. Home address: Cheyney, Pa.

Mrs. Carrie M. Hinsdale, the efficient President of the Texas State Spiritualist Association, will lecture in Galveston until July 1. Address her there in care of Spiritualist Temple.

Mrs. Alice Sexsmith writes: "April 10 and 11 I served the societies at Genoa and Sycamore, Ill. Brother Merrit, at Genoa, and Brother Higgins at Sycamore, with a few other earnest souls are trying to hold the fort under all circumstances. There are many good Spiritualists at both places, but for the want of permanent workers there is not the interest taken that should be, and perfect harmony. While at Sycamore, I was entertained at the home of Mrs. Smith, whose house is always open to true Spiritualists. Her large parlor was filled in the evening with Spiritualists and others, all eager to learn something of the life beyond. I believe the seed of truth was planted in many hearts that will spring up in due time. March 10 and April 14, I worked for the Psychical Research Society at Rockford, Ill., and I never met more earnest, sociable people than there are in that society. Brother McDougall, the president, is a favorite with them all, and seems to be the right man in the right place. I stopped at the home of Mrs. Harriett Howe, whose home is devoted to the Cause she represents."

Carrie L. Hatch writes from Boston: "Friday, April 26, the First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual. After supper there was a social hour which all seemed to enjoy very much. The evening was devoted to the work principally of Mrs. B. W. Belcher, who had kindly consented to give the society a benefit. Mrs. A. S. Waterhouse opened the meeting with remarks; Mrs. Alice S. Whall gave a few messages, after which Mrs. Belcher spoke briefly and gave many messages. The thanks of the society are tendered to Mrs. B. W. Belcher for the assistance and benefit. Next Tuesday the usual meeting will be held. It was voted to hold Memorial Services May 31st."

Mr. Grimshaw has made many new friends by his lectures in Chicago. He is certainly capable of doing a grand work for the Cause. His lectures are eloquent, forcible, logical.

Mrs. Cooley, the lecturer and message bearer, has an engagement at Pittsburg, Pa., commencing May 1, and extending through the month. She stands high in the estimation of Spiritualists.

W. W. Kincaid writes: "Helen Stuart-Richings has just finished a series of lectures at Meadville, Pa., given under the auspices of the Independent Spiritualist Society. The speaker drew larger and larger audiences until, at the last meeting, there were nearly three-hundred people in attendance. Good work is being done only in securing for the people the best speakers in the Spiritual rostrum, but the best platform test mediums as well. The society is greatly encouraged to see the constantly increasing interest that is shown in the cause it represents, and the prospects for keeping up the good work are bright."

SPIRITUALIST CAMP BURNS.

100 Cottages and Hotel at Lake Pleasant, Mass., Fall in Flames—Loss Is $115,000.

Miller's Falls, Mass, April 25.—About 100 summer cottages and a summer hotel at Lake Pleasant were destroyed by fire April 24. The loss is estimated at $115,000.

The settlement is controlled by the Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association and is divided into two sections, the uplands and the lowlands.

Practically every building in the lowlands was destroyed, only the railroad station and five or six cottages remaining.—Associated Press Telegram.

MINNESOTA SAFE.

A Bill Inimical to Spiritualism, Did Not Pass.

To the Editor: I noticed in a late number of The Progressive Thinker a call to arms, and perhaps to fight against the unjust legislation that is now going on in the State of Illinois. I do not know if this will reach you in time to be of any service to you, but we have passed through a similar experience in Minnesota, and succeeded in having a clause added to this bill which made it acceptable to us as a State Association, and as they really were not in the legislature after the Spiritualists as a people, but AFTER THAT CLASS OF FAKIRS WHICH YOU ALSO TAKE SO MUCH PLEASURE IN DENOUNCING, I send it in the hope it may be of benefit to you.

The bill passed the House by a large majority, and was put on the calendar in the Senate and taken up in the regular order of business, and was laid on the table to be taken up later for favorable consideration, but as the legislature has adjourned, and it never came off the table, why, the matter stands as it was for another two years, at least.

Yours truly,
J. B. MAXWELL,
Pres. S. S. A. of Minn.

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's Birthday.

Last Sunday, April 21st, Mrs. Richmond reached another of those "milestones" along life's journey, the anniversary of her natal day. Many of the members of her congregation and of the Band of Harmony thought to celebrate the event at the meeting of the Band of Harmony Thursday, April 18th, so there were a goodly number present at both the afternoon and evening sessions, only to be disappointed by Mrs. Richmond's absence, she being in Milwaukee attending the Wisconsin State Spiritualists' Convention. Nevertheless the meeting was a great success and of unusual interest.

The afternoon session, after the usual routine of business, was taken up by addresses from Mrs. Mary M. Haire, Mrs. Lucinda B. Chandler, and remarks from the chairman, Mrs. H. C. Goodrich, and spirit messages to many strangers present through the mediumship of Mrs. Coombs, which were of an unusually interesting and satisfactory character. There was an unusually large number present at the supper tables, which were beautifully decorated with flowers, in honor of the absent president. The evening session was equally interesting. The vice-president of Church of the Soul, Mrs. S. J. Ashton, taking Mrs. Richmond's place, answered many questions upon deep and abstruse subjects most satisfactorily to all. After short addresses by Mrs. Ashton, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Hattie Peet and a very affecting speech by Mrs. Gage, Mrs. Riley gave a number of very convincing tests in her own inimitable way. Then the "Chief of the Moon Lodge" gave a poem in his own language through the lips of Mrs. Hill, which was interpreted by the Spirit through Mrs. Ashton. After the singing of the closing hymn, May, through the lips of Mrs. Ashton, told us Water Lily (Mrs. Richmond) was right there on the platform between Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Ashton, and knew all that was going on there, and felt all the kind words and thoughts that were going out to her. And, that Ouina was there also with Water Lily.

Sunday, being the actual date of the anniversary, was celebrated at the meeting of the Church of the Soul, by a very large attendance, many bringing floral tributes in honor of the pastor's natal anniversary. So the hall where the church services are held seemed a veritable bower of flowers. The spirit of the occasion seemed to pervade everyone present, including very many strangers. Everyone looked supremely happy and young, especially our youthful pastor, who appeared to the writer to be celebrating her twenty-fifth birthday.

REPORTER.

New Treasurer of the N. S. A.

To the Editor:—It gives me much pleasure to announce that the office of Treasurer of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States, left vacant by the transition of our lamented Brother, T. J. Mayer, has been duly filled by the unanimous vote, by ballot, of the trustees in meeting assembled at headquarters, April 16. Mr. C. L. Stevens of Pittsburg, Pa., for several years one of our honored trustees, was chosen for Treasurer. Brother Stevens is a man of experience in business affairs and also in the work and management of spiritual associations; he has been a member of the N. S. A. Board Auditing Committee for three years, and is thoroughly familiar with the duties of the office of treasurer. As the election of Brother Stevens to the treasurership necessitated his resignation as one of the trustees, the office made vacant by such course was duly filled by placing Mr. F. A. Wood on the Board. Mr. Wood is the able and well known president of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C., and well fitted to assume the duties he has entered upon in connection with the National Board.

MARY T. LONGLEY.
N. S. A. Secretary, Washington, D.C.

The Cause at Lansing, Mich.

To the Editor: We have just had a spiritual feast. We were privileged to have Brother Will J. Erwood of Peru, Ind., with us from April 14th to 21st inclusive.

In all he gave us five lectures, and at every one those who heard him felt that they had met heart to heart and soul to soul with one who was living in touch with the great Infinite Soul. It might be said of him as of one of old, "he went about doing good."

On Tuesday evening the Ladies' Aid held a reception that all might become acquainted with him. An impromptu programme was given in which each did a part toward making it a pleasant occasion. Light refreshments were served. Bro. Erwood also met with the Ladies' Aid Thursday afternoon. By request he gave a short helpful talk, and a few messages which were fully recognized and gladly received. Then there was one other service which deserves special mention. April 21st (Sunday a. m.), his subject was "In the Laboratory of the Soul," which was listened to with intense interest by all present. After the lecture there was a double christening—Irene Martha and Elizabeth Viola, children of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowser, and grandchildren of President C. A. Clement and wife. The beautiful flower service was used. As Brother Erwood took the pledge of the father and mother, and told us what the yellow, white and red flowers and green foliage meant, the yellow for spirituality, the white for purity, red for love, and green for eternal life, and closed invoking the guardianship of the angel world. There was not a dry eye in the hall. Strong men and weak women alike felt the sacredness of the hour. We cannot tell of all the good things, but this we can say, it was not the charm of splendid oratory that held his hearer spell-bound, but it was the soul of the man reaching out to uplift and aid his fellowmen that appealed to each individual who listened to him, and made them hungry for more. Brother Erwood can be sure of a hearty welcome when he comes again.

(Miss) INEZ GLUDEY,
Secretary 1st Society of Spiritualists of Lansing.

Secretaryship I. S. S. A.

To fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Dr H. A. Cross, as Secretary of the Illinois State Spiritualist Association, the board unanimously elected Dr. T. Wilkins, for the unexpired term, and the Dr. has accepted and will at once take possession of the office, with its books and other accompaniments. He may be addressed as Secretary, at 15 Park ave., Chicago, where he will make his office.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

Wm. Truesdel passed to the higher life, April 2nd, 1907, at his late residence, near Wayne, Mich. He leaves a wife, two daughters, one granddaughter, and one great grandson, to miss the physical presence, but who are hopeful that their loss is his spiritual gain. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Nellie S. Baade, No. 411 Nemert avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Callie Drake, wife of Capt. L. M. Cravens, of Milburn, Texas., passed to the higher life on the evening of April 8th, 1907. She was an ardent Spiritualist for many years. Her room was filled with her spirit friends for several days before her transition, which made her happy indeed. She has been a constant reader of The Progressive Thinker for many years.

J. D. C.

Passed to higher life, April 3, at his home in Battle Creek, Mich., Albert Britton, aged 38 years. Funeral services were conducted by Mrs. Anna L. Gillespie.

Aaron Kortright Penney, a prominent Spiritualist of Saginaw, Mich., lately passed to spirit life. Since 1868, says the Saginaw News, Mr. Penney had been a Spiritualist and there was no more devoted or more prominent member of that society in the country. He used to say to all with whom he discussed this favorite subject of conversation that with him Spiritualism was not a theory, not even a matter of faith, but of knowledge. He said he knew he was right in this question. His home was a noted gathering place for distinguished Spiritualists from all parts of the country, and each year upon the anniversary of his birth, he entertained a large company of friends which events partook of the nature of a Spiritualist reunion.

From her brother's home in Conneaut, O., March 20, 1907, Miss Louisa Baines passed to spirit life, aged 88 years. "Aunt Louisa," as she was familiarly called, was loved and respected by everyone for her noble qualities. She had devoted her life to her widowed mother, and assisted her in raising the little family left to her care. She was a firm believer in Spiritualism, and her religion consisted in following the "Golden Rule. D. A. Herrick conducted the services.

At Ashtabula, O., March 30, Mrs. Louisa Massena, passed to spirit life, age 58 years. She was for many years an invalid, was a loving mother and a beautiful character. She leaves many friends, three sons and two daughters to mourn her earthly loss, but who are coming into the knowledge that life for her had really begun anew. D. A. Herrick conducted the services. Mrs. Herrick assisting with song.

Mr. Harlow A Longshore passed peacefully to the beautiful beyond from his home at Jacksonville, Fla., on the morning of February 24, aged 73 years. He had been a Spiritualist over forty years, and a Medium twenty-five years. Among other gifts he possessed that of healing. Many wonderful cures were made through him by his faithful guide, Nemaha. For many years he was connected with the Lookout Mountain R. R., but on account of ill health he came to Jacksonville, which city he made his home for the past thirteen years. He was affectionately known as "Dad" by all who knew him. We love him for his faithfulness to the cause of Spiritualism, for his true and noble nature. Though we are assured his spirit is with us, we miss the form we are accustomed to see and love. Mrs Amy Buchanan, spoke inspirationally over the remains. Spiritualists and many who were not Spiritualists listened entranced to the beauty and grandeur of the sublime sentiments delivered by Mrs. Felicia Hemans.

Gone, dear Dad, but not forgotten,
This the tribute of our love;
On memory's page your name is written,
And friends that part will meet above.

ADDIE BURDGE.

Mrs. Florence M. Williams, age 40 years, passed to spirit life from Cleveland, O., suddenly, on April 18. She was the wife of George Williams, and both members of the First Spiritual Temple of Cleveland. She often contributed to the spiritual press items of the cause in the city. An earnest and devoted Spiritualist; a medium of much ability and use, she will be sadly missed from the ranks of workers here. As our personal friend, we shall grieve for the loss of her physical presence, with the sad-hearted husband and son. It seems wrong that such a bright and useful woman should be taken in the prime of her life, when she was gladly looking for a widening of opportunity to help the spirit's cause on earth. But she has joined the mighty host in higher realms, and will with power labor for truth and joy in mortal lives. We have not said farewell, but only adieu for a little while. The funeral services were a tender duty of her friends, George W. Kates and wife.

GEORGE W. KATES.

Wm. Hart, author of "The Candle From Under the Bushel," passed to spirit life at the home of his daughter, at Los Mochis, Sinaloa, Mexico, on the morning of April 2. He was conscious until the last, and communicated with his children after articulation was no longer possible. Had he lived until July 10, he would have been 79 years of age.

H. A. HART.

Passed to higher life, my niece, Annie Phoebe Clay.

"We need not say of her that she is dead;
Ah! No, she is alive, and doing well.
The crumbling dust has found a narrow bed,
The butterfly has merely left the shell."

ARZELLA S. CLAY.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.

Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.

Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.

Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.

Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.

Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.

Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.

Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.

Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.

Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.

Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list or titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.50.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of
FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.
CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE God and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for Organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page Illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights, Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray green raised cloth, stamped in deep old green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death or worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

dress him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

H. H. H.: Q. Barring emigration, under normal conditions, how long does it require a nation or people to double in population?

A. Perhaps no problem presents greater difficulties, and everything depends on circumstances. Some nations have remained stationary in population, as France is now doing; others like Germany rapidly increase. Among savage tribes the unsanitary conditions and constant warfare hold the population in check. The diseases engendered by civilization are destructive, and nations grow old and decay like the individuals of whom they are composed. The population of Europe after the great immigration, from the East, appear to have for centuries remained nearly stationary. War, famine and pestilence thinned the ranks, and not until the sanitary idea of living were introduced was there any great increase. The present multiplication, brought about by lessening wars, general supply of food, clothing and essentials to life, with a better knowledge of the laws and conditions of health, has no parallel in history. Not Egypt in the full tide of its splendor was as densely populated as some parts of Europe.

But under the most favorable conditions the growth of population is slow. Perhaps in no country in the world have more favorable causes operated for the multiplication of the human species than in the United States for the past century.

The increase in nearly all the nations of Europe has also been greater in the past. The average length of life being increased by the knowledge of sanitary conditions, better and more abundant food, better clothing and housing. By this means the visitations of pestilence, which with almost periodic certainty decimated the people, have been held in abeyance. Wars, by the invention of terrific engines of destruction, are not prolonged and devastating. All these causes contribute to the full result of the law of increase by arithmetical ratio.

The population of the United States according to Bancroft's estimate, in 1750, was 1,040,000; in 1780, 2,383,000. In round numbers this had become in 1820, 7,800,000. At the end of 50 years, in 1870, the population was 33,500,000. During this period 9,500,000 immigrants had landed on these shores, and with their offspring made this added element at least 12,000,000.

The average increase for each decade was about 31 per cent. From 1820 to 1830 it was 33.5; from 1830 to 1840, 32.6; from 1840 to 1850, 35.8; from 1850 to 1860, 35.6; from 1860 to 1870, 22.6. The low rate of the last decade is accounted for by the destruction of the Civil War. What is remarkable is the slight influence exercised by immigration on the percentage of increase, not exceeding 3 per cent, between the decades when it was practically nil, to those when it reached half a million annually.

Since 1870, almost four decades, the population has somewhat more than doubled. But immigration adding at least 15,000,000 to this total. If we take this from the estimated population of 1900, 75,000,000, then there is 60,000,000, or somewhat less than twice the population of 30 years previously.

It will therefore be safe to estimate the increase, free from emigration, at 25 per cent for a decade.

In this problem in the future the element of immigration will not form as large a factor, as it has in the past. It will be neutralized partially by emigration. There will be a stronger current going out of the country and weaker coming in. The crest of the wave has been reached, and European governments, seeing the suicidal policy of allowing their subjects to leave, are already strenuously striving to keep them at home. Fortunately the swarms of Asia can be debarred, else the nation would be overwhelmed, as Rome was by the hordes of the northern barbarians. The terrible conflict of an awakened Asia against the West, is for the immediate future, and the fewer the number of spies, educated among us, the better for the welfare of the western nations.

In the following estimate, of course, no account is taken of devastating war, which may come at any time, or contagious disease. The increasing knowledge of the laws and conditions of health, in a measure guards against the latter, and lengthens the average length of life. Until the population becomes more crowded, famine does not require consideration. Only when the year's product is barely sufficient to meet the demands, and there are no hoarded resources, does the failure of a harvest threaten the life of a people.

AN EXPLANATION.

A Reply to S. F. Moore's "Somewhat Critical."

Mr. S. F. Moore, My Dear Sir: I have read your article under the heading, "Somewhat Critical," in The Progressive Thinker, and an honest desire comes to me to write in explanation.

We have never published a book, and do not expect to, as we are not sufficiently qualified to do so; but the psychic powers of one member of our family is so strongly developed that I am sure I can meet your objections with a degree of intelligence.

One great trouble with mediumship is true of authorship, and it applies to the ministry as well—a desire to say something not conflicting with the accepted conceptions or opinions of the world, as their bread and butter depends upon their works being popular.

We must divest our minds of all thoughts of mysticism or supernaturalism, and think of our spirit friends in a simple natural manner.

Death is but a separation of mind from a feelingless mass of flesh and bones, for it is a well established fact that all of our sensations, whether of pleasure or pain, emanate from the mind. The mind then is simply released from the cumbersome weight of the body, but the characteristics are not in the least changed. The senses become more quickened and more keenly receptive to the emotions of the mind.

With no ulterior motive, and no ax to grind, I will tell you honestly of things, just as our spirits talk to us, for at any time I can cause our medium to be placed in a clairvoyant state when different spirits will talk to me through his electric force, which they refer to as an electric instrument; or during his normal condition they will write page after page of description relating to every phase of spirit life from the moment of transition to the present time. They tell me many things that the world is not yet prepared to hear.

I have conversed freely with the spirits of departed priests, with lawgivers, with men and women from each of the spheres, with poets, musicians and statesmen; each one comes with characteristics all his (or her) own, and with the same degrees of eloquence possessed during the earth life.

My friend, should you have faith in the truth of what I am saying, I would be very happy to have you prepare a list of questions relating to life in the spirit world, its environments, etc., anything you may choose to ask, and I will send you a reply to each and every question written by the spirits themselves; different ones to show you their diversity.

MRS. ALICE D. GREEN.

Hamilton, Ill.

REV. JULIA M. WALTON.

To the Editor:—The Rev. Julia M. Walton of Jackson, Mich., ex-president of the State Spiritualist Association, has been sojourning with friends in Detroit, Mich., during the past week. On Sunday, March 24, the Earnest Workers Spiritual Society celebrated the 59th Anniversary of Modern Spiritualism. Doctor Walton being the chief speaker of the evening. The Hall, as usual, was crowded to the doors. After a brief resume of the progress being made in the Cause, both at home and abroad, the Doctor offered a few timely criticisms of some new religious cults that have grown out of or become excrescences to Spiritualism. The brilliancy of her illustrations and the aptness of her logic, with the unique manner of presenting her subject, prove her to be a master of no ordinary proportions, and a worthy champion of the cause of a true and ennobling Spiritualism.

Rev. Mary Stein, our pastor, followed with a brief eulogy of two members of the society who have recently passed to the higher life, Brother Snider and Brother Winkler, both old and tried Spiritualists who manifested during their last hours the peace that the religion of Spiritualism brings to the soul.

Sometime before his transition, Brother Winkler's eyes were opened to behold angel friends hovering about his bedside. One of these spoke to the sick man and prescribed a remedy that greatly relieved his distress, thus illustrating the value of spirit communion. He was perfectly conscious to the last, knowing that a better home awaited him just beyond the veil.

The anniversary services were concluded by comforting and convincing messages through the guides of Dr. Walton and Mrs. M. LaDell-Fish.

On Tuesday evening, March 23rd, a reception by the Earnest Workers was given at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Fish, in honor of Doctor Walton. Though it rained all the evening there was a goodly attendance. The address of welcome by our pastor was responded to by the Doctor in her usual happy manner. It was truly a love feast all around.

Following the reception a box social was given. Brother Halfman, our genial secretary, is obtaining an an enviable reputation as auctioneer upon these social occasions. After a bountiful repast of the good things that nourish the mind and spirit as well as the body, the secretary moved for a rising vote of the assembled friends as an expression of their love and esteem for our honored guest who had so ably and for so many years, upheld the cause of Spiritualism in its purity in this State, and who had so efficiently filled the office of President of the State Spiritual Association. May this honored champion of truth be spared many years yet, that she may see the fuller fruition of her great work is the prayer of all who know her. WILSON FISH, M. D.

Detroit, Mich.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. To is how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

INCONSISTENCY!

"It seems to me, Is is the All-Absorbing Proclivity of Mortals Thus Far Observed: It is a Product of Prejudice, and Crops out at Times in Many of Us."

I am reminded of the last camp I attended just two years ago. The officials had engaged an able corps of lecturers, such, perhaps, as they hoped were one-idea men and women, through whom it was supposed we would be served pure and simple spiritual food. A blind man could see that a groove was laid out for these lecturers to follow, though the officers as well as the very children on the grounds knew they were inspirational speakers through whose powers higher and more progressed beings were to influence and inspire us in turn. This we all understood; but I have since thought that, as it is a pretty difficult process to try to curb a man's tongue, much less that of a woman (when under conviction!) how are we going to do it when we don't know just what a spirit is going to say through his interpreter? How can we direct such utterances? Surely this is a grave problem, and one to require some attention.

For such officers as I have in mind, the risk of engaging speakers is great indeed. Those other officials that would strive to realize the ideal (may their tribe increase!) are always too few to do much good. Also the inspirational speaker is innocent himself of what is to be presented through this inspirational source. Although here and there one of his number is forced to plead guilty that he is not, it does not hold good with the honest progressive ones, such as those that held forth at the camp. They were intelligent, progressive individuals, drawing from a source far above the comprehension of the ordinary bigot; and they could not descend the several spheres to the groove these officials held.

Oh, how we prate of guides and the wonderful wisdom and good they can accomplish! But as soon as an ambitious one advises us of certain idols which might profitably be set aside as useless timber, and how we must first smooth the path of this life before we can hope to make a triumphal entrance into the spheres, he is squelched. When they tell us that we are to alter and regulate social conditions, and that not by demanding a closer economy on the part of the working class, either, but by a more equitable distribution of wealth created by brain and brawn—in short, by justice—before we can ever realize decent conditions here, conditions that will make it possible for us to live now and to attain the spiritual growth it is our heritage to have—these progressive lecturers are privately condemned. Many besides myself have heard them denounced by the wise (?) officials. They try to reduce them to the low plane of conveying mere messages of condolence.

Why listen year after year to speakers who are obliged by officials of low mental caliber to toady to the whims of the uneducated minority? How can we hope to attain the culture that source affords us if the use of our boasted science is not to be employed in the harvesting of useful information? Can we help if a little of it does savor of socialism?

Not all visitors at the camp were ignorant. Many had a little sense, and they didn't come loaded to the muzzle with prejudice amounting to imbecility. These knew that we cannot progress consistently in spiritual growth so long as we continue to ridicule and controvert with erroneous and mistaken statements, that which is intended to draw out that enfeebled soul of ours. These knew that whatever emanated from those well-intentioned teachers in regard to our present condition in this life, was not derogatory to our progress. These knew, too, that many of us are not yet aware that conditions on our plane are not conducive to any great degree of spirituality, and that this question of proper conditions is the question of humanity—the question upon which depends the welfare of all. Divided as we are—two classes pitted against each other in a universal struggle for mere physical existence—how can we hope to grow spiritually?

In all this, those celestial teachers would advise us, knowing as they do, what prevents our progress. All this, the back number officials—those who have passed their perihelion—would suppress. They said it was dangerous doctrine, it was socialistic, therefore non-psiritualistic, and they sputtered about it a great deal. At last, rather than be fed on the sing-song humdrum, conventional lectures they would have, with many other of our friends, we have not attended a spiritualistic camp since.

When we think of how much good our inspirational speakers can do for humanity if permitted and encouraged, it behooves us to place no restrictions in the way of our progress. Too much discrimination cannot be exercised in the proper choice of officers. "The best always in all things," should be our motto.

ANNA STOCKINGER.

Versailles, Ind.

Interesting Transition Services Conducted by Mattie E. Hull.

On Monday, April 8, Mrs. Hull was called to deliver an address on the occasion of the passing away of James J. Southworth, aged sixty-three.

The occasion was one of peculiar interest, as the ascended brother had survived all kindred. There was not a "mourner" present in the usual acceptation of the term. A small audience, mostly Spiritualists, had convened in the pretty Chapel of the undertaking establishment of Mr. W. H. Sutch, on Figueroa St. Mr. S., though not a professed Spiritualist, was in sympathy with the service, and his management was such as made conditions exceedingly favorable for the speaker.

Mrs. Hull, wearied from the services of the previous day, including a ride of more than fifty miles, and overcome by reminiscences of the occurrence of just three months previous, when by request of her "arisen husband," co-worker and lover, for thirty-five years, she conducted a similar service, she sank into the large upholstered chair placed for her. Her appearance was that of a drooping, crushed flower, as she sat with closed eyes, face half-hidden by the head-supporting hand. When the time for opening service arrived, the organist led the audience in singing, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Then "Our Mattie" arose, stepped forward on a level with her audience, and quite near the flower-wreathed casket.

There was no trace of weakness in the woman, who now simulated a lily fresh from a baptismal shower, and illuminated by a subsequent flood of sunlight.

In place of the stereotyped prayer, an invocation to spirit friends was given, especially to those who had walked by the arisen brother's side, and had preceded him to the higher expression of life, and had recently returned to accompany the released spirit thither.

These were invoked to aid in making the services helpful to the friends who had gathered to pay their last tribute to a worthy brother.

The departed left no worldly riches, but his real wealth (an accumulation of good deeds) had preceded him to the spirit world.

MRS. JOHN R. KELSO.

Los Angeles, Cal.

DR. LEWIS BUSHNELL.

Transition of a Noble Man and Earnest Spiritualist.

Dr. Bushnell was born in Greene Co., N. Y., January 21, 1826. He was married in Peoria, Ill., to Harriet Augusta Hitchcock in 1847. They came to Chicago in 1849, where they have ever since resided.

He became a Mason in 1858, a life member since 1882. He became a Spiritualist in 1852, and was elected president of the First Society of Spiritualists (now Church of the Soul) in 1876. (That was the first year of the writer's ministrations for her present congregation.)

Dr. Bushnell held that position 19 years, and was afterward a member of the board of trustees, and always a devoted member of the Church.

He passed to the higher state of life April 19, 1907. Five children were born to this devoted couple, three of whom remain to bless and comfort their mother: Dr. Charles H. Bushnell, Mrs. S. J. Ashton, Chicago; and Mrs. Tom Yates, Negaunee, Mich. There are nine grandchildren.

It is not often that people celebrate the 60th Anniversary of their marriage, and although this occurred during the recent illness of Dr. Bushnell, still the children and grandchildren of the dear couple gathered at the home—the pastor of Mr. Bushnell being present—and all joined in congratulations and thanksgiving that the dear parents had so long been spared.

It would be impossible to tell what an influence for good Dr. Bushnell's life has been. Integrity, honor, charity, loving kindness, exemplified each day in the life of this devoted couple, and their family. Really the "Kingdom of Heaven" was on earth in that household.

Dr. Bushnell was a revered and respected Mason—but the larger Order of Humanity ever claimed him.

The writer has known most intimately the entire family, and certainly knows that they form and have formed one of the strongest bulwarks of her work and of the Cause in Chicago.

The daughter, Mrs. Ashton, is assistant pastor of our Church. The grandsons attend the Sunday-school and lead in knowledge of the Soul Teachings.

Dr. Bushnell's illness commenced (apparently) in December. He had always been a strong, healthy man, and it soon became evident that this would be his last illness.

During all the years the writer has known him he has been endowed with a wonderful gift of healing. So widely was this known and so successful was his practice that when the medical laws were passed in this state requiring that all practitioners must be graduates of and have a diploma from some medical college (legally chartered) Dr. Bushnell was exempt, and was recognized as an M. D. by the medical fraternity and by the legal authorities. The fact that hundreds of people had been cured by him should have been the only diploma needed.

The services, conducted by the guides of the writer, were first of a private nature to the family and household, and were held Monday morning at 11 o'clock, April 22, at the family residence, 489 Randolph street. The public service was held at 2:30 the same day, at the chapel in Graceland Cemetery.

At such an hour the comfort and uplifting strength of a knowledge of spirit life and of the immortality of the soul cannot be measured. The discourse was a tribute to the life of this noble man. I am sure the occasion will not be forgotten, and equally sure that the spirit of Dr. Bushnell will remain an abiding presence with us all.

CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

Items From New York.

The First Association of Spiritualist of N. Y. City and their auxiliary, the Ladies' Aid Society, celebrated the 59th anniversary of modern Spiritualism on Sunday, April 7, in Elks Hall, Columbus Circle, as they were unable to procure the hall on the 31st ult., and then only for an afternoon session, which was replete with good things.

Mrs. H. P. Russegue, who, with her genial husband had come from Hartford, Ct., to give their friends a surprise and assist in the celebration, was introduced amidst a storm of applause. She held the vast audience spellbound for half an hour by her inspired eloquence in a masterly effort upon the topic, "What has Spiritualism accomplished?" I wish your space would permit of a verbatim report, but your many readers who have been privileged to listen to her wise guides can imagine the rich treat we all enjoyed.

Mrs. H. T. Brigham, under inspiration, rendered very finely several poems from subjects given by the audience.

The best of conditions made it possible for Miss Gaule to do some very fine and creditable work in giving names, descriptions and messages from a great number of spirits, all of which were promptly acknowledged as being correct. We are pleased to note in this connection that Miss Gaule is engaged to voice messages from the unseen at Lily Dale Camp-meeting during the season of 1907, and will be a very acceptable addition to the large array of talent announced to dispense food to the hungry and thirsty for spiritual food who convene there every season. After another song by Miss Austin, the audience joined in singing the Doxology as printed in the program accompanied upon the piano by Mrs. J. Kuehnert, pianist and organist for the society, and were dismissed with a benediction pronounced by Mrs. Brigham. A large number of copies of our spiritual papers were sold and many subscriptions taken by the writer, who conducts a news stand and information bureau every Sunday.

The Spiritual and Ethical Society of New York City celebrated the 59th anniversary at its Builder's League hall, Sunday, April 14, with a lengthy program of recitations, vocal and instrumental selections, speeches and remarks appropriate to the occasion.

DR. G. W. FOWLER.

THEODORE J. MAYER.

Resolutions Adopted by Unanimous Vote of the N. S. A. Board of Trustees.

Resolutions framed by Committee, Dr. G. B. Warne, Mary T. Longley, Cassius L. Stevens, and adopted by unanimous vote of the N. S. A Board of Trustees, in session, April 17, 1907.

Whereas, The Angel of Transition has for the third time entered the ranks of the Official Board of the National Spiritualists' Association and on March 12, 1907, translated to the realm of abiding realities, Theodore J. Mayer, and

Whereas, Our Brother Mayer had served as Trustee and Treasurer of the N. S. A. for a period of twelve years, and

Whereas, He had won for himself recognized standing in the substantial business circles, and the credit of being a practical helper in the charitable and educational enterprises of the City of Washington; and

Whereas, He was unsurpassed in the history of American Spiritualism for the number and amount of his private and public contributions to aid mediums and advance the welfare of the N. S. A; therefore be it

Resolved, That we are thankful for the example of the earthly life of Brother Mayer, and point with pride to the perseverance, energy, insight and integrity which raised him from a poor boy with a capital of only twelve dollars, to a prosperous citizen of our National Capital, respected in its financial circles and commanding therein respect for the principles that dominated his life.

Resolved, That we rejoice over the Spirit of Philanthropy which led him to donate and bequeath the sum of Thirty-five Thousand dollars to the Emergency and Casualty Hospital in the District of Columbia; property valued at One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars to the Washington University, and many lesser amounts known only to their beneficiaries;

Resolved, That we are grateful, not only for the unstinted manner in which he gave the benefit of his sagacious business experience to the affairs of this Association, but also for the spirit of generosity which prompted him to the following benefactions:

Annual benefactions for a series of years of $250 towards the support of the First Spiritualists' Association, or Washington, D. C.;

$2,000 to the N. S. A. Mediums' Relief Fund; $1,000—approximately—given privately for the relief of individuals each year; $25,000, in Washington Real Estate, to the N. S. A.

While we note with feeling his abiding interest in this Association which led him on his sick bed, a few days before his transition, to pay from his private purse the full rental for the Masonic Temple in Washington, for the five days of our annual Convention in October, 1907.

Resolved, That we mourn for him as an exemplary citizen, a counsellor of wisdom, and official of unswerving integrity, a Spiritualist of unwavering loyalty and a brother beloved for his many personal virtues, and we pledge ourselves to emulate his fidelity to the truths of Spiritualism;

Resolved, That we extend to his son, our brother, T. Albert Mayer, and to all surviving relatives, expressions of our earnest sympathy and assure them that we are sharers with them in the great sorrow over Brother Mayer's transition.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
President.

MARY T. LONGLEY, Secretary.

THE GUILD WOMAN'S PRAYER.

The following satire was written by Mrs. J. B. Smith and read at a meeting of the Marshall, Minn., Woman's club:

O, Lord, I come to Thee in prayer once more,
But pardon if I do not kneel before
Thy gracious presence, for my knees are sore
With so much walking. In my chair instead
I'll sit at ease and humbly bow my head.

I've labored in Thy vineyard. Thou dost know
I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show;
I've called on fifteen strangers in our town,
Their contributions to our church put down;
I've baked a pot of beans for Wednesday's spree,
An old-time supper it is going to be;
I've dressed three dolls, too, for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we must raffle there.

Now, with Thy boundless wisdom so sublime,
Thou knowest that these duties all take time,
I have no time to fight my spirit's foes,
I have no time to mend my husband's clothes;
My children roam the streets from morn till night;
I have no time to teach them to do right;
But Thou, O, Lord, considering all my cares,
Wilt count them righteous, also heed my prayers,
Bless the bean supper and the minstrel show,
And put it in the hearts of all to go;
Induce the visitors to patronize
The men who in our program advertise;
Because I chased these merchants till they hid
Whene'er they saw me coming, yes, they did.

Increase the contributions to our fair,
And bless the people who assemble there,
May our whist club be to our service blest,
The dancing party gayer than the rest,
And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings, then
We pray that Thou wilt bless our souls, Amen. —Exchange

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us" and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Science and the Future Life." By James H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

Prayer; Its Uselessness and Unscientific Assumption. By Henry M. Taber. Price 10 cents.

VALUABLE LIBRARY
...OF...
SPIRITUALISTIC LITERATURE.

The Romance of Jude. A story of the time of Christ, given through the mediumship of Mrs. Longley. Cloth bound. Price, 50 cents.

The Selfishness of Grief. By Jenkin Lloyd Jones. Price 10 cents.

The Soul. Its Nature, Relations and Expression in the Human Embodiments. This is clearly a book on re-embodiment, or the principles of reincarnation. By the guides of Cora L. V. Richmond. Price $1.

The Soul's Song of Triumph. A prose poem by Harrison D. Barrett. Price 10 cents.

The Spiritual Alps, and How We Ascend Them. A few thoughts on "How to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it." By Moses Hull. Price, cloth, 40 cents; paper, 25 cents.

The Spiritual Birth, or Death, and Its To-Morrow. The Spiritualistic idea of Death, heaven and hell. A logical statement, proven both by facts and the Bible. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

The Spiritual Significance. By Lilian Whiting. This book is all that the name implies—a spiritual book. Price $1.

The Strange Story of Ahrinziman, the Persian Mystic Emperor. A wonderful and interesting occult story, written by the author of A Wanderer in the Spirit Land. Beautifully bound. Price, $1; postage 12 cents; paper, 60 cents.

The Talmud. Selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry and legends. Also sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polang. Price, cloth, $1.

The Unknown. By the scientific writer, Camille Flammarion. Price, $2.

The Widow's Mite and Other Psychological Phenomena. A new book of 538 pages by I. K. Funk. A most remarkable and valuable book. Price $2.

The Wonders of Life. A popular study of biological philosophy. By Ernst Haeckel, author of The Riddle of the Universe. Bound in cloth. Price $1.50.

The World Beautiful. Series One, Two and Three. Choice volumes of restful and educational reading, uniting the ideal and the real in this life. By Lilian Whiting. Price, each volume, $1.

Three Jubilee Lectures. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price 35 cents.

Thomas Paine's Examination of the Prophecies. A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old and called Prophecies concerning Jesus Christ. Price, 15 cents.

To the Women of America. By M. M. Mangasarian. Price 10 cents.

Truths of Spiritualism. This book narrates many of the striking experiences of its author as a lecturer and test medium in the earlier days of Spiritualism. By E. V. Wilson. Price $1.

Twentieth Century Guide to Palmistry. By the Zanzigs. A good book for all those interested in this study. Price, cloth, 75c paper, 25c.

Two In One. A compendium of Biblical Spiritualism. A combination of "The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" into one volume. By Moses Hull. Price $1.

Uncooked Foods and How to Live on Them. By Mr and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.

Universal Spiritualism. Spiritualism in All Ages and Among all Nations. By W. J. Colville. Price, $1.00.

Vaccination a Curse. By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Treating on a subject of vital importance to every one. Price, $1.25.

Vedanta Philosophy. By Swami Vivekananda. Price $1.50.

Volney's Ruins and the Law of Nature. This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

Voltaire's Romances. A new edition, profusely illustrated. A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing. 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50; postage 15 cents.

Wayside Jottings. Composed of Essays, Sketches, Poems and Songs, gathered from the highways, by-ways and hedges of life, from the inspirational pen of Mattie E. Hull. Price 75 cents.

What All the World's A-Seeking. By Ralph Waldo Trine. Price, $1.25.

Who Are These Spiritualists, and What Is Spiritualism? By Dr. J. M. Peebles. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 35 cents.

Why I Am a Vegetarian. By H. J. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

Woman. A lecture delivered to ladies only, by Mrs. Dr. Hulburt, on the present status of woman, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually, marriage and divorce. Price 10 cents.

Warfare of Science With Theology. Information not procurable in the libraries of the world in a half century, showing the opposition of the church to science. Two vols., 900 pages. Price $5.

Works of E. D. Babbitt, LL. D. M. D. "Human Culture and Cure." Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. Price, board cover, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure." Part Second. Marriage, Sexual Development and Upbuilding. Price, cloth, 75 cents.

"Human Culture and Cure." Parts Third and Fourth. In one volume. Part Third being devoted to Mental and Psychological Forces, and Part Fourth to the Nervous System and Insanity. Price, $1.

"Human Culture and Cure." Part Fifth. The Bodily Organs, Their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for Their Cure. Price, $1.

"Principles of Light and Color." One of the greatest books of the age. Price, $5; by mail, 32 cents extra.

"Religion." Most thoughtful, spiritual and excellent. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Postage 10 cents.

"Social Upbuilding," including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennobling of Humanity. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Womanly Beauty of Form and Feature. By Albert Turner. Price, $1.

Woman's Bible. Parts I. and II. The Pentateuch. A galaxy of scholarly comments by many of our brightest minds regarding much of the Old Testament, and the slight given the women. Price 50 cts. each.

Woman, Church and State. A historical account of the status of woman throughout the Christian ages, with reminiscences of the Matriarchate. By Matilda Joslyn Gage. Price, cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

Woman. Four Centuries of Progress. Showing her gradual rise from slavery and bondage of ancient times. By Susan H. Wixon. A lecture of great value. Price 10 cents.

World Making. A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

Zanoni. By Bulwer Lytton. Price 50 cents.

A Conspiracy Against the Republic. By Judge C. B. Waite, author of "History of the Christian Religion to the Year 200. Price 25 cents.

A Few Words About the Devil. By Chas. Bradlaugh, the great English freethought leader, with a story of his life as told by himself and a history of his Parliamentary struggles. Price, 50 cents.

After Her Death. The Story of a Summer. Pervaded with pure and sublimely spiritual thought. Something to make the reader pause and reflect almost to entrancement. By Lilian Whiting. Price $1.

Age of Reason. Being an investigation of true and fabulous theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages. By Thomas Paine. Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Ancient India, Its Language and Religions. Translations of the articles "Religion of the Veda," and "Buddhism." The Study of the Sanskrit. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Price 25 cents.

Ancient Pagan and Modern Christian Symbolism. By Thomas Inman, M. D. Price, cloth, $1.

A New Catechism. By M. M. Mangasarian. A book suited to express the thoughts of men, women and children living in the new times. Price, cloth, $1.

Angell Prize Contest Recitations. To advance Humane Education in all its phases. A book especially adapted to Lyceums. Full of enthusing ideas. By Emma Rood Tuttle. Price 25 cents.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer In Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahriziman." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, Paper, 50 cent. Postage, 12 cents.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

Wisconsin State Association.

Annual Report of the President, Geo. H. Brooks at the Recent Meeting.

To the Officers, Members and Friends of the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association in convention assembled.

It is with deep feeling of the responsibility and trust you placed in my keeping one year ago, that I now present to you my first message, in the hope that as a people we may be bound together in closer ties of fellowship, and a greater desire to aid the world in its struggle toward the light. Spiritualism is a great truth, no sane man can deny, and its value to the world can never be measured, yet to present it to the people so they can grow into its truths to see that its phenomena is of a kind and character to attract rather than to repel the thinking people.

To go out into the world and seek to build up the societies, keep them together in working order and harmonious, to impress upon them the great need of Spiritual unfoldment, is a task that few would care to undertake, and when they did, would hardly feel they were capable of retaining the office. Yet if the world progresses and the mind unfolds there is great need of teachers, not preachers, but teachers of spiritual truths that will uplift humanity and bless the world by its power and influence.

If Spiritualism is not educational and spiritualizing then it is of little use to the world, and the sooner it ceases to be the better. We have theories and dogmas enough. What the world needs is spiritual truths, and a knowledge of spiritual life. To know whether we live after the change called death is the question of the hour, and one that Spiritualism alone can answer. This is the work distinctly ours, and the work no other religion or science can demonstrate; this is the work the Wisconsin State Association is engaged in to the best of its ability.

Wisconsin is a great State, second to none in the point of richness of territory and intelligence of its people. This great Cause of ours should be well represented by large working societies in every large city in the State as well as in every village and hamlet, and I wish I could so declare that this was our condition throughout the entire State, but alas, I can not so report.

The present incumbents began the year without a cent to help themselves, worse off than nothing, and a heavy debt was their inheritance. The report of the secretary and treasurer will tell where all money came from, how much, and for what it was used. The year's work has been spent. What time I have given to the State in trying to raise means to lift the debt, I have felt that such a course was far better than in trying to build up organizations, when I could not build upon a proper foundation. While I have not lost sight of the spiritual, and have held many meetings, yet the strength has been used largely in other directions.

My first place to visit was Kenosha. There are but few Spiritualists there, I might say none openly and avowed outside of one family, hence no chance to do work. Racine I found some better, there are a few and they are held together by a good medium and worker, who has done much to strengthen the Cause. I held several parlor meetings but no organization was formed. I then visited Oakfield, the home of our treasurer, Fond Du Lac, Ripon, Madison, Wonewoc when the camp was in session; Oshkosh, Whitewater, Neillsville, Augusta, Superior, Eau Claire, Chippewa Falls, Beloit, Baraboo, Leon, La Crosse, Brookfield where were held two successful grove meetings. In Whitewater two mass meetings were held, one in the spring, the other in the fall. Two very successful mass meetings were held in Milwaukee, one in October, the other in February. The one in October the National Association sent our good brother President Barrett, whose services never cost the State Association a cent, and for said services we feel under a lasting obligation to the N. S. A. The one held in February we had the Vice-President, Dr. Geo. B. Warne, who with John W. Ring, came for just their expenses, showing by their acts their deep interest in the State work.

In La Crosse there was held the latter part of the summer a three-days' meeting, which was well attended, and good was the result. Mrs. C. McFarlin, our Vice-President, assisted me in the work. La Crosse is the banner city for financial assistance. In January I visited La Crosse again and was with them some ten days, with most excellent results. Some of the places I have visited twice and always found a hearty welcome on my return.

There was no other missionary besides myself engaged in the State, though there is plenty of room for several, for strange as it may seem, Spiritualism seems to be almost unknown in this State, and there is a great work needed to have our philosophy take its place, yet it is a hard task before one, with a mixed population, many of them with strong religious convictions, and a deep seated prejudice against Spiritualism. It is a question I often try to solve, how to place our Cause where it should be, and remove that prejudice that is so settled in the minds. I cannot understand why Wisconsin seems so far behind our sister States. Years ago Wiscopsin was one of the Banner States, there were numerous temples, strong societies, settled speakers and good lyceums, and the Cause was advancing. Now all is different. What few societies there are are struggling along under a great pressure; some of them seldom hold a session, and here in Milwaukee there is not a good strong society, well organized and in working order. There are numerous meetings held in different parts of the city, but no united effort is being made to have a strong, active society. So wherever a missionary goes, he must of necessity work practically in a new field, must be prepared to meet strong opposition and overcome it, not with hatred, but with love, and show our superiority by living on a higher plane.

I do not now know of a lyceum in the whole State, the children and young people are allowed to enter Sunday schools whose teachings are distinctly opposed to our philosophy, and they in time either become members of some church, and have no sympathy with Spiritualism, or are entirely indifferent. I am well aware of the great difficulty attending a lyceum, but without sacrifice no growth is attained, no advancement is made.

The State Association has been hampered in its work during the year. We have not felt we could put on any large mass meetings, fearing we could not meet expenses, besides at all places visited the thought has been to raise if possible some money to help meet our obligations, hence there has been no move in that direction, neither has there been any call from any part of the State for meetings of that kind.

Through the untiring efforts of the Secretary, Miss Loebel, routes have been laid out and plans evolved that have been productive of good, yet for all the great discouragements in this great work, I can but feel that with some of our financial conditions lifted, where we can pay a little more attention to holding meetings and educating the people, that with care there can be a great work done in all parts of the State.

Yet the great aim of this Association will be to further reduce the debt, in fact to lift it entirely, and then leave the field entirely clear for a great spiritual work.

One great trouble that has ever been before us has been one note of $875, that was given to free the Waukesha Camp from debt and the State Association from disgrace. Friends, loyal and true, came to the rescue then and by their kindness and generosity loaned the State Association the necessary amount. It was a great kindness on their part, and one when we came into office we fully appreciated. It was from the standpoint of appreciation of their kindness and a great love of our Cause, that I have tried hard to raise that note. The interest that was long past due was met by the present officials when we first came into office; later one hundred dollars was paid, and later I was hopeful of raising the entire note; I appealed to many of my personal friends and others through letters and giving in detail as far as possible our true condition. I was hopeful of good results which would culminate at our last mass meeting. The money was nearly all raised. But $775 is a good deal of money to raise by a handful of people, and we lacked some to complete the amount, so our anticipations were not realized, and for that we have all felt more keenly than words can express.

But let me state that ere the full business of the association is done at this present convention, the note will be met in some way; when that is met the remaining debt which is in small amounts can be more easily handled.

When the true condition of the State Association was fully realized by myself, so great were my depressions, so dark the future seemed to be, so worn out with care and anxiety have I been for the good of this State Association and the credit of our cause, that more than once I was tempted to resign. I felt the load was more than I could bear, but through the influence of friends — then he who takes the plow should never turn back—I have remained in office and am more than thankful I have done so.

Since last we met, the cause of Spiritualism and the State of Wisconsin, which I am proud to say was his home, and the State Association have met with a loss that can never be expressed in words, in the passing to the inner life of our beloved brother and friend of all humanity, the Rev. Moses Hull. The work of Brother Hull can never be measured by words. He was without doubt the finest Biblical scholar in our ranks, indeed, in any religious line he was peer of them all. The Morris Pratt School will find it a most difficult task to fill his place, but we know Brother Hull is not silent but working for the advancement of Spiritualism and the building up of humanity. Fitting memorial services were held at the Pratt Institute, and I was invited to deliver the address. The State Association sent me as their representative to express their deep loss and to give expression to their feelings of sorrow. Prof. A. J. Weaver and Judge Smith assisted in the services. At our mass meeting fitting resolutions were drawn up and sent to the school and family, expressing our feelings of sympathy and sorrow. While the Morris Pratt Institute has sustained a loss that will be hard to fill, yet no one should feel for a moment that the school will fail in its work, for it will not, it will do what it is intended to do, educate those whose opportunities in life have been meager and those who are mediumistic, and fit them to become worthy teachers in this Cause.

I would that the State Association would pay for the education of some worthy person, and keep it up forever, yet in our present state we are unable to do so, but I hope by another year we may do something along the financial lines. The school is worthy of your thoughtful consideration, and I should suggest that some plans should be laid out at this convention that will look toward building up the school, interest people everywhere, and let the world know we have such a place where our children can become educated and our mediums sheltered and protected, and all impressed with the fact there is a place where the spiritual powers are brought forth and unfolded under proper guidance. It was my privilege as well as pleasure to have a chance to see the school when in working order, and to say that I was more than pleased would but fairly express it.

The inner life has claimed some of our best workers the past season, among that number is our beloved brother and friend, the Treasurer of the N. S. A., Mr. T. J. Mayer. In his leaving earth Spiritualism lost one of its strongest supporters, not only morally but spiritually, also financially. The National Association has received a blow that it will be hard to rise above. I had the honor of numbering among my warm personal friends, our brother, and let me assure you the world seldom has within its embrace a nobler soul than Brother Mayer, and I know that this Association will feel in common with all the deep loss sustained in the passing away of Brother Mayer, and fitting resolutions will be drawn up and forwarded to the N. S. A., assuring them of our sympathy, in the hour of affliction, and our loyalty to the N. S. A. One of our old time workers answered the call, went home soon after Brother Mayer's departure, and to-day Spiritualism mourns the loss of that beautiful worker and medium, Jennie Hagan Brown. Thus they go, one by one, and in their departure impress upon us the great necessity of unfolding mediums to take their place.

Mediumship.

In some way and in some unaccountable manner there creeps into the minds of some mediums that a local or State organization is in some way opposed to mediumship, when all who are in any way identified with this State Association not only know that without mediumship there could not be any Spiritualism, and that we seek not only to impress upon all that fact, but seek in every way to surround our mediums with proper care and protection. I hope that this convention will seek in some way to impress upon our mediums these facts, that we stand for honest mediumship, and character, and that we should seek in every way to unfold all that is within us.

Spiritual Press.

Too little attention is paid by many to our own papers, to their needs, and wants, and I feel that there should go from this session some expression of appreciation of their worth and work that some way be devised whereby the circulation of our papers be largely increased, too many there are who never think of taking a spiritual paper, to their shame be it said. I feel that a great missionary work can be done by those who take our papers, if they would only send them to those whom they feel they can benefit. The N. S. A. has a series of lectures in pamphlet form that are designed for missionary purposes; let some way be devised by you who are here assembled, for a fund to be raised or a certain amount be laid aside from the income of the State, to be used for the purchase and distribution of missionary tracts.

Mass Meetings.

With the financial pressure removed in a measure, there could be held in certain localities a series of mass meetings with good results. This is a field for your thoughtful consideration, and I hope some plan will be suggested that can be presented to your board for action, and some plan outlined, places suggested, invitations sought for that would help to open the way. No one or two can do so great a work as that in connection with a State Association, but the united effort of all, the wise suggestions from friends in the State, all help, for it is in union there is strength. In these meetings held in different parts of the State there would as a consequence come societies, who as auxiliaries would be an inspiration to the State; and a route be laid out for your president, to visit these points and help to build up the societies. Then there would be an impetus for mediums and speakers to visit this State, where now there is nothing for them.

The Camp.

There are a good many camps all over the country, all doing a glorious work, all interesting places to visit, yet I feel the camp in your own State, situated most beautifully at Wonewoc, but a few hours' ride for any of you, no matter where you may reside, should claim your special attention. I wish most emphatically to impress upon all, that the State Association is in perfect accord with the Wonewoc camp, and desires to impress upon it the fact that it will in every way seek to sustain it, that some expression of appreciation of their work and influence should be expressed here, and some plans be devised whereby the camp may grow and prosper. I had the pleasure of visiting the camp for the first time last summer, and one and all did everything they could to not only make my visit pleasant, but profitable. Too long have we stood apart, some little petty differences separating us; it is high time we should grow away from all such foolishness, and realize that whatever department of our great work was benefited, all are benefited, and we should place our shoulder to the wheel, and aid in every direction.

Union of Our Scattered Forces.

No one can take a look at our movement but what they must be impressed with the scattered forces at work, and wonder why such should be. I am fully conscious of the work done by every medium, and the good done through every and all methods for the advancement of our Cause. Yet I feel there should be in this city an example set for other cities to follow, that plans be suggested and laid out, for bringing together all of our scattered forces, into one grand society, where the best talent could be secured, and the public impressed with the truths expressed. If we as a people work as the Christian works, then we can show to the world what a power we are. What is true in this city is also true of other places I might mention. There is plenty of work to do, that calls for our best thought, for when we come in convention we come to further our Cause and lay plans that will uplift the world, and better the conditions of humanity.

Our Constitution and By-Laws.

Our Constitution and By-laws should be thoroughly sifted, and a better constitution outlined. As it now stands it is most deficient, and it needs a competent committee appointed at this session to look it over during the year, and make such alterations as seem necessary, and have that before the convention next year, and bring before the people a constitution that will be more practicable.

Let me say here that the present board has worked together in perfect harmony, there has been no session but what there has been the greatest of harmony. You as a State Association owe them a debt of gratitude. I wish here to thank them as a body for their kindness and help, and never have they given me anything but the kindest and best of thoughts. Your secretary has been a tower of strength not only to myself, but to the work. She has been obliged to do a work that no one can ever understand unless they could see and know what I have known. It has been indeed a hard year. This winter she has superintended afternoon circles held in the different parts of the city, for a convention fund, so we might have some means to work on at this convention. She has ever been alert and active for the advancement of the State Association, and her life and soul have been put into the work. She seems never to weary or tire in her labors, and here and now I desire to thank her for the work she has done, for the unselfish spirit made manifest. I would her salary was more, yet it has been the best we could do, but I trust the time is not far distant when there may be a greater compensation for that work. Of our treasurer let me say it is not every society that is blest with as honest and loyal a treasurer as this Association possesses. Cashier in a bank, as he is, with a perfect understanding of business, with our money in a bank and well cared for, in the hands of a young man perfectly honest, I can assure you I have rested in mind perfectly secure in knowing the money was all right and the interest of the Association was being looked after. I express to him my heartfelt thanks for his watchfulness and care.

If different places in the State would do what has been done by the ladies in this city, for the State Association, there would be a fund for work that would surprise you all. There has been a work done in this city for the convention in raising a fund for the working of the same. That gives us an independence that assures success. The different mediums have taken hold with a will, and I can assure them it is fully appreciated. I desire to thank those who opened their homes, the mediums for their services that have been given without money and with a spirit to aid in every way possible, and the many friends who attended and thus made it a success. Fitting resolutions should be presented to this convention expressive of your appreciation.

The Press of Milwaukee.

The press of Milwaukee have ever been courteous and kind in advertising our meetings and aiding us in every way possible, and they too deserve our heartfelt thanks.

When I started out to raise money to help this State Association along, I did so not knowing what the results would be, but I have met with hearty response wherever I have been, and everywher have been treated with kindness and consideration. I thank them one and all for their help and encouragement, making the work of the State Association worthy its name.

The Resolutions.

The resolutions that are presented should include these loyal souls. I assure you I am thankful for every kind word and deed done for the State Association, no matter what it may be.

I am glad we can make a showing today, such as never has been before, all because there has been united action all through the country. To-day, so far as I know, there is perfect harmony, and a better understanding of the State Association, of its needs and wants.

While we can not number our societies by the hundreds, nor our individual members by the same numbers, yet the State Association is growing, its influence is reaching out and its work increasing, and I am hopeful of good results in time, not so great in one year, but as time goes by a better and a wider influence will be exerted by this Association. Thanks be to the powers that are, our credit is good, we can go anywhere in this city and get trusted for any amount.

I have tried to do my duty to the cause of Spiritualism and this Association. I have worked early and late, have traveled hundreds of miles, and written hundreds of letters, given lecture after lecture, sometimes to a handful of people, then to good audiences. I have, oh, so many times, been so worn out when night came it was with difficulty I could reach my room. Indeed I broke myself down in working for this Association, and was obliged to cease all labor, and much of this time confined to my bed. Work I had laid out, plans devised to further this work, were of necessity dropped, hence places I should have liked to report, people whom I wanted to reach and interest, I could not, but I know you will understand.

I close my year's labor in the spirit of love to one and all, and can say truly that while it will take a long time to work this State up as it should be, yet I can state the conditions are hopeful, the prospect good, another year if rightly directed this Association can attain a position that will make itself felt.

My final word to this Association is, that I trust whomever you may select to fill the office of president, may be one who will work for the upbuilding of this Association, in extending its influence, and work in an unselfish spirit for the advancement of our Cause. I certainly will give him whom you may select every help possible and seek to sustain his hands.

Bless you, my friends, may the spirit of peace and love rest upon you all. May we all grow in spiritual truth and understanding, until we shall rise into that higher life and claim the life that belongs to us there.

Most respectfully submitted,
REV. G. H. BROOKS,
President of the W. S. S. A.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resumé of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitaints of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 22, and closes August 26. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence July 1 and end September 2. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

City of Light Assembly.

Th eseason opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, General Manager.

Ocean Grove Camp.

This camp is located at Harwich, Mass., and opens July 8 and closes July 22, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small South Harwich, Mass.

Lake Pleasant, Mass.

Lake Pleasant Camp opens July 29, and closes August 27. For full particulars and programs address Albert P. Blinn, 8 Grove Place, Norwich, Ct.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twenty-fifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 31, and closes August 28. Progroms and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Summerland Camp.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 24. Mrs. F. Lee, secretary.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting, commencing August 24, and closing September 2. Mrs. Maud K. Gates, president, 807 North Manning street, Winfield, Kansas; Mrs. Addie McAllister, secretary, Winfield, Kansas.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 8, and continues over four Sundays. Address Rev. G. C. Love, president, 934½ C street, Tacoma, Wash.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

SunapeeLake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences July 29, and closes August 26. For programs and infirmation write to the secretary, Lorenzo Worthen, Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 15 to August 13. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 17 to 27 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins June 16 and ends September 3. Mrs. Lydia Jessup secretary, Anderson, Ind.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens July 29 and closes August 19. Any person desiring programs of information regarding camp-grounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. F. H. Lesher, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 21, extending until August 27. For programs or information write to the secretary, H. R. LaGrange, Brighton, Mich.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 30 and closes August 20. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowlden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

TheGrand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-meeting opens July 21, and closes August 21, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, or W. R. Divine of Grand Ledge, Mich.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

TheConnecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic, Ct.; season of 1807, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

Thetwenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 6, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Spross, Okemos, or D. R. Jesson, Williamston.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 12 and close August 26. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Freeville Camp.

The Freeville Camp, N. Y., opens July 22 and closes August 19. For programs write to Miss Victoria Moore, Dryden, N. Y.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 10, closing on the 27th. Address all communications to I. N. Richardson, secretary, Delphos, Kansas.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a red stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

Psychic Light

BY MAUD LORD DRAKE.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has a national reputation as a medium. The manifestations given through her mediumship have been most marvelous. She has written a book with this title: "PSYCHIC LIGHT—THE CONTINUITY OF LAW AND LIFE." It is a ponderous volume of 600 pages. It will hold your attention from the beginning to the end. It is chockful of stirring incidents. Price of this large volume, only $1.50, postpaid.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising:

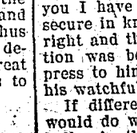
Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

Apocryphal New Testament,

Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, his apostles and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Price, cloth, $1.50.

SOMETHING'S HAPPENED! FOR WOMEN'S SAKE. SOMETHING KILLED!



READERS LISTEN SHARP, DON'T MISS—BEST THING EVER HAPPENED!
Hundred years coming, here at last, full grown—so startling will say it's impossible—but wait, don't worry—Ladies, Your Prayer Answered.

THERE'S NO MORE WASH DAY!—IT'S DEAD! LAID AWAY! WIPED OUT FOREVER!

The world's watched for the man to cut wash day in two. He lives—taken more than half—left only minutes—cut so much wash day's all over, changed—there's new way cleaning clothes—different from anything known—new principles, ideas, methods, NEW EVERYTHING. Wonderful, but true, family washing cleaned with no more work than getting a simple meal, less time—no rubbing, squeezing, pounding, packing, pressing, no injury—no drudgery—that's past. Good-bye wash boards, washing machines, laundries—throw them away—the EASY WAY is here to bless humanity. Women have prayed for death of wash day—for clean clothes without rubbing—ruining health, looks—when they could wash, get dinner, see friends, indulge in recreation without fatigue—when women thought no more of washing clothes than to get a simple meal. That glorious day has come. The world's full wash boards, so-called washing machines, yet wash day same as ever—still long, dreary day—no easier, no shorter, no better. Use wash board or washing machine, its drudgery, long hours, hard work—backache—a day no woman forgets. Invention that killed wash day, named EASY WAY—name tells whole story—easy on clothes—easy used—kept clean—handled—easy on women—makes washing easy—easy to buy and sell. Not called a machine—powers inside concealed—caution the way it gets dirt—has awful appetite for dirt—incenses more it gets—goes after all the dirt in all the clothes at same time—like, but mightier—silent, but powerful—uses no spirits, yet works in darkness. OPERATED ON STOVE—more knob occasionally—that's all—scarcely anything to do but wait between batches—child can do it. All iron and steel—always ready—sets away on shelf. Entirely unlike old methods. Verily, wash day is dead—EASY WAY settled that—woman's joy and satisfaction. Less than an hour cleans washing which before took all day—cleans all clothes, finest laces, curtains, etc., in about one-tenth time without rubbing, squeezing, packing, pressing—without chemicals to injure goods. Saves 2 days drudgery yearly—makes woman's hardest work easiest household duty—saves clothes, labor, fuel, health, looks. Surprises all—sounds strange, is strange, but listen, it's no experiment, going on daily. You can do it.

J. McGEE, Tenn., writes:—"One young lady cleaned day's washing by old method in one hour with EASY WAY. Another in 45 minutes. Everything as clean as could be." E. CRAMER, Tex., writes:—"Received Easy Way. Gave it a thorough trial. After ten minutes clothes nice and clean. Satisfactory in every respect." ANNA MORGAN, Ill., writes:—"I washed a woolen bed blanket in Easy Way in just three minutes perfectly clean." J. H. BARRETT, ARK., after ordering 80 Easy Ways, says:—"I don't understand why it does the work, but it does. You have the grandest invention I ever heard of. People are skeptical; have to be shown." J. W. MYERS, Ga., says:—"Find check to cover one dozen 'Easy Ways.' Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable wash day. Saves me turning old washer for hours. I am ready to have old washer accompany all others to the Dump. Sells itself." I. BECK, Ga., writes:—"Enclose order. Find Easy Way as represented. Worked 4 days and have 15 orders." J. T. PEAY, N. C. says:—"Been out 2 days—sold 1 dozen. For which enclose order. Everybody is carried away that sees it work." Guaranteed, everything proven. Old horse, responsible, capital $100,000.00. Price, only $5.00 complete, ready to use—sent to any address. Not sold in stores.

BEST EVER HAPPENED FOR AGENTS, SALESMEN.

MANAGERS—MEN OR WOMEN—at home or traveling, all or part time—showing—taking orders—appointing agents. "EASY WAY" best. Nothing like it. Demand world-wide—agents reaping harvest of dollars. When operated people stop, look, listen, crowd, push, squeeze, miss engagements, get excited—watch it as though a thing of life. 12 sec—10 buyers. Write today for special Agent's Plan. World unsupplied. Act quick.

* Send Postal card anyhow for famous copyright "Woman's Farewell," full description, valuable information, testimonials. All free.

Harrison Mfg. Co., 374 Harrison Building, Cincinnati, O.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 5 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

$10 Makes $150 IN 60 DAYS. A wonderful chance for a little money to make you a competency with absolute safety, without any work on your part. A positive guarantee given in our business. The best of Bank References. Address M. J. Cannor Treasurer, Block 352, Farmers Bank Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Business and Family Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

TRUMPETS:

Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal; insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark seance, T P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.

JAS. NEWTON, 423 Dorr St., Toledo, O

PHOTOGRAPHS . . . of Your Spirit Friends.

can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.

FRANK N. FOSTER.
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.50, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS.
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's viewpoint including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claims Hungarian birth and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Be Sure to Read This.

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free, worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through his mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Hary, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to A. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
230 North Sixth St.
San Jose, Cal

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—B. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.00

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 136 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth, 50c.

AFTER HER DEATH.

The Story of a Summer. By Lilian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

Paine's Theological Works.

Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

In Tune with the Infinite

By Ralph Waldo Trine.

Within yourself lies the cause of whatever enters into your life. To come into the full realization of your own awakened interior powers, is to be able to condition your life in exact accord with what you would have it.—From Title-Page.

CONTENTS—I. Prelude; II. The Supreme Fact of the Universe; III. The Supreme Fact

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

NOTE—The Questions and Answers have called forth such a host of respondents, that to give all equal hearing compels the answers to be made in the most condensed form, and often clearness is perhaps sacrificed to this forced brevity. Proofs have to be omitted, and the style becomes thereby assertive, which of all things is to be deprecated. Correspondents often weary with waiting for the appearance of their questions and write letters of inquiry. The supply of matter is always several weeks ahead of space given, and hence there is unavoidable delay. Every one has to wait his time and place, and all are treated with equal favor.

NOTICE.—No attention will be given anonymous letters. Full name and address must be given, or the letters will not be read. If the request be made the name will not be published. The correspondence of this department has become excessively large, especially letters of inquiry requesting private answers, and while I freely give whatever information I am able, the ordinary courtesy of correspondents is expected.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

Geo. Bennett: In a discussion I held that the words from which Hell is translated—Sheol and Hades—mean the grave, one preacher said Tophet was the word, and another Gehenna. Am I correct?

A. Sheol, used in the Old Testament, Hades in the New, Tartarus also used once, all in their primary significance mean the grave, but by symbolism they came to stand for the unseen world beyond the grave. They all mean the concealed or invisible spirit world.

Homer, the earliest of poets, calls Pluto god of the nether world Hades, as distinguished from Jupiter, god of the empyrean. From thus designating the god of the Shadowy World, it came to represent that world, with the broad meaning of including the entire abode of the departed, of good and bad, who entered that world through the gateway of death. There were distinctions in that world, which grew more and more apparent. The righteous continued lives of refined pleasure similar to those they led on Earth. The wicked received punishment in many terrible forms, of which flames, fire, and ever-ending pain were most dwelt upon. From these they could not escape for the only exit was guarded by the terrible Cerberus.

In the Old Testament Sheol is the equivalent word meaning the grave, and symbolically the world beyond.

The interchangeableness of Hades, Sheol, Gehenna, and Tartarus is shown by the translators. They are translated by the word Hell 31 times in the authorized revision of the Old Testament. In the New, Hades is translated Hell ten times, and Tartarus once.

Gehenna was the name of a valley south of Jerusalem in which was Tophet, where the Israelites who deserted the tribal Jehovah, erected an altar to Moloch and sacrificed human beings thereon, mostly their own children. With the revival of Jehovah's worship these were destroyed, and the place became one of abomination, where in a great pit fires were kept burning to consume the garbage of the city. The smoke constantly ascended in the clear sky, the fire was unquenched, and the loathsome, unclean valley became a symbol, its name transferred to the nether world of unclean and wicked spirits.

The meaning of these words is perfectly plain. As used they mean the "Spirit World," "The Unseen, Concealed World," and should be thus translated. To use the words Hades or Sheol, is not to translate at all, and is a trick to leave a word not translated for the reader to affix whatever meaning he pleases. In the revised or last translation, Hades is substituted for Hell, almost invariably, that is, left untranslated, and it is a question the reader must answer for himself what it means.

If Sheol is used it carries with it the meaning of the Hebrew writers, which was almost a negative of existence beyond the grave. If Hades, then the wonderful creations of Greek imagination must be received. The Greeks would have understood the full meaning of the word. It was a part of their religious belief, but to one who regarded the pagan faith as a myth, Hades would have no significance in the Christian system.

When the translators sought for an English word expressive of these, it formed Hell, from the Anglo-Saxon helan, the invisible—hence invisible world, exactly corresponding in meaning. Its primary significance was the grave. It meant to cover up, the covered way, as seen in its root and the list of derivatives therefrom, as to heal means to cover up disease; to heel, to cover up with Earth.

By what is known as a disease of language, by which what at first is a symbol becomes the real thing, Hell, the grave, became the invisible realm beyond, and as the nether world, the abode of those who could not ascend to the glorious regions of the upper or sunlit world. With the idea of the lower and concealed, came that of darkness, and what had not already been fancied by the human mind in its conception of the nether world, was supplied by the Greek idea of Hades, the flaming fires, the pestilent pits, the raging Cerberus transformed into Satan, and to fill this to complete measure, the bottomless pit of Gehenna, its everlasting smoke and fire, and Sheol, with its dazed souls walking in the outer darkness in hopeless despair.

Hell could be defined, and when used to translate Hades, stood out boldly, clearly, with menacing threat for the wicked. It made the separation of the old myth of one invisible world, distinctly into two, Heaven and Hell. By its use the meaning of the bible writers is completely and absolutely changed. For when Sheol or Hades was used by them, they could not have had the remotest idea of Hell as it exists in the orthodox mind of the present, nor of the Devil who presides over the sulphurous realm.

J. J. Galloway: It is with ever increasing interest that I study your articles on "Protista," but I desire more detailed information, and presume there are many others like me, wanting the information. Would you name the literature and text books on the subjects?

A.—The facts given in these articles are so widely scattered through papers published on micro research and books not especially devoted to the investigation, that it is difficult to give the desired information. The exhaustive compilation by Carpenter, "The Microscope and its Revelations," and Klein's "Micro-organisms and Disease," will best answer the purpose. Many of the facts and verifications are not to be found elsewhere, and the conclusions are from my own observation or given by my spirit instructors. Especially the wonderful theory of the micro-organisms as "world-builders," and the derivation of "living matter," and its culminations through these invisible beings, in higher forms, was formulated and expressed by them, and seems to me to reach the most arcane courts of life itself, and bridge the chasm, hitherto assumed impassable between physical matter and the matter expressing the energies of life.

Wm. Rauschmayer: When walking along the street I frequently meet a supposed acquaintance, but on close inspection find I had made a mistake, when immediately afterwards the real individual appears. Is this mere coincidence or is it a projection of the aura of the expected person?

A.—It is usual, with present "Psychologists," to explain all such phenomena, as illusions from "diseased mentality." It is a ready to-hand theory, and requires a modicum of thought. With our present knowledge of the aura, or widely extended thought-atmosphere surrounding every person, such facts are readily explained, in a manner which may be taken as strictly scientific, and the theory is solidified and made stronger by each recurring fact which it meets and unitizes. How often we think of friends, just before their coming, and this even is so common it has passed into a saying. It was regarded as a coincidence because there was no apparent cause.

Now it is found that there is a cause uniting all such phenomena. Every human being is a center from which radiates pulsations of thought, as the transmitter of a wireless telegraph sends out vibrations of electricity, and these pulsations when they meet a receptive mind, awaken the thoughts which sent them forth.

The thoughts of an absent friend, might be so vivid that for a moment, an approaching stranger might be mistaken for the one from whom the impression was received.

It is difficult for a receptive person to distinguish the thoughts thus received from his own, or determine when his own mentality is entirely unaffected by that of others in mortal or spiritual life.

The universal thought-ether—"thought-atmosphere" is the term used in the Arcana of Spiritualism"—vibrates with the waves they throw off by an infinitude of thinking centers, and their reception by any receiving mind is measured only by its capabilities.

AN EXCELLENT TEST.

A Proof of the Watchful Care of a Spirit Mother.

Sunday evening, April 21, I gave my usual lecture for the Temple Lodge of Washington, D. C., and while giving messages after the lecture a spirit told me she was the mother of a young lady sitting at the back of the hall.

I gave the name and description of the mother, which the young lady, a stranger to me, said was correct. Then after some message of love, the mother said that her daughter was being kept in the dark regarding a certain matter, that her friends were not all to be trusted, and she was directed to come to me privately so that the mother could fully explain what was not best to give in a public meeting.

After the meeting closed the young lady with others came to me for a card, telling me she would call at my home. On Tuesday another lady called telling me she was a friend of the young lady, and was with her when I gave the message on Sunday evening. She wished to explain to me that the message referred to a $75 ring which the young lady had lost, and which she, on Sunday night had, but her friend did not know it had been found. The ring had been loaned to the young lady, and lost the previous Friday in the street. The advertisement had directed the finder to leave it with the friend instead of the young lady herself. The man who found the ring had accepted one dollar as reward, but the friend intended to get more, as the young lady said she would give $25 reward rather than not get the ring. Knowing the young lady would come to me she had come to explain that she had, since the message was given, returned the ring, but hoped to get some reward as she had told her friend that the man charged more than the dollar, and she had paid it before he would give her the ring, and asked if I would be kind enough not to tell the young lady about it, and thus break their friendship. She said she rather let it drop and not get the money if it was to make trouble.

I told her when I was under control I was not always responsible for the message given, and the spirit would have the power to explain, and I should deem it best to let them use their own judgment.

MRS. MAY A. PRICE.

Washington, D. C.

ANCIENT PAGAN AND MODERN CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM.

By Thomas Inman, M. D. Revised and enlarged, with an Essay on Baal Worship, on "The Assyrian Sacred Grove," and other allied symbols. Third edition, with two hundred illustrations. Cloth, $1.

"HOW SHALL I BECOME A MEDIUM?"

It is fully answered in "Mediumship, and Its Laws, Its Conditions and Cultivation," by Hudson Tuttle. Price 35 cents. Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio

Toronto Junction Ghost.

It is sought by detectives—Six men, including the Chief of the C. P. R.'s force, have tried to solve the mystery of noises in the Company's Engine house—Strange conversations.

Can it be true [as set forth in a paper published at Toronto, Canada] that the spirit of some one departed from this life is hovering around the engine house of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at Toronto Junction? Such a theory is to almost every person of intellect absurd? But when a voice is heard talking at something equally invisible, and another voice comes back in answer; when strange explosions occur and leave not a trace; when screams are heard; when whistling follows sometimes as sweet as a musical instrument and at other times shrill as a pibroch, with tappings and gentle whistling as if intended to attract attention then a "Hello" of a masculine voice, in which there is a trace of sorrow, one is forced to think.

This may seem to many to be purely imaginary, or the work of a clever ventriloquest. But, whatever it is, it has caused such comment among Canadian Pacific Railway employes that the company has commissioned its chief detective and an assistant to ascertain the nature of the ghost.

Scene of the Trouble.

The engine-house at Toronto Junction is a building about eighteen feet by forty, solid cement floor, solid brick walls, containing dynamo, engine and switch board. To the east of this is another engine-room, with an engine, flywheel, etc., for day work. The building, which is one story, is on the north side of the roundhouse, and on the south side of West Toronto street. The place is guarded, and people prowling around are threatened with arrest on a second offense.

When these noises started is hard to say but they have been heard by different engineers in charge of the building for several months back, though not so pronounced as they have been during the past few weeks. The present engineer has been there five months. For the three preceding months Alvin Ward was in charge, and he heard strange noises at night, and told of how he had failed to locate anything that would give a hint of their origin. The sensation was not pleasant for him, and he found his three months long enough.

The Machinery Examined.

After Ward gave up the place five months ago Thomas Daughton took charge, and about a month later the noises became more pronounced and frequent and reports were sent to the C. P. R. officials. As a result of these reports experts were sent to examine the machinery for any possible flaws or causes that would make such noises. Everything was found to be in good shape, and still the mystery was unsolved.

Next came from Montreal the chief detective of the company to probe the matter. Suspicion, it is said, rested upon some of the employes, and a close watch was kept on all their actions, but the noises continued whether the men were there or not.

Then the chief officer went back to his duties and left an assistant to work on the case. Recently as many as six of the company's detectives have devoted some attention to the matter, and three have spent whole nights in the engine house. But they have failed to discover anything, and their theories have all been exploded. Visitors are not allowed on the premises at night, and efforts have been made to keep reports of the noises and of the investigation from becoming public.

The Engineer's Story.

Here is the story as told by the engineer, Thomas Daughton:

"The first intimation I had of anything in this line was four months ago, when there was a click on the cement floor. Thinking a cap had dropped off the oil cup I went to where I thought the sound came from, but could not find anything, and all the caps were in their places on the engine. That passed out of my mind, and for a few days I heard nothing. Then it came again, and I swept the floor to make sure nothing had dropped off the engine. From that time it commenced getting worse. Explosions, screams, whistling, and rumblings followed each other in quick succession, and I must say it was the hardest ordeal I ever went through. People laugh at me, but I confess it was no fun for me, but I lost several pounds over it. It was at this time that the detectives came.

The Voices Began.

"The talking is the latest addition to the series of mysteries. Really, I don't believe I can explain the talking. There is something so unhuman-like, although pathetic, while at times rage is apparent. The talking came about in this way. I was sitting in my chair when I heard several whistles, short and sweet, and startled I certainly was when a voice called out 'Hello, hello!' That was the start of the conversation that I had, although I have had some since that. I answered back 'Hello!' and the voice immediately came back with 'Hello, hello! is that you, Tom?' I answered, 'Hello, yes.' And then it said: 'Don't be afraid, Tom. Don't be afraid. I won't hurt you. No—r-r-r-r' and, as if sobbing or shaking, the voice became a mumbling.

"I was nervous, and I know the two detectives who were with me were also nervous, and I really believe it was nervousness on our part that frightened the voice away.

Not a Human Voice.

"The voice, I believe, was not a human voice. There was sadness in it, and when speaking it sounded like a person who was endeavoring to converse when grief was fighting for supremacy. Some of the men from the yard came in one night. One used some abusive language about the spirit, and I warned him not to do so, but he laughed. It was not long, however, until I heard the whistle, which now I believe the spirit gives when it wishes to converse. I spoke and received the 'Hello!' and also the same assurance that nothing would harm me.

Resented the Abuse.

"Then it launched off with a perfect tirade against the abuse it had received. I could not catch all that it said, but I know it said, 'I have the power of God and can blow this place to pieces.' Then the words were lost.

"Others have come in and heard the voice, and were glad to get out again.

The Explosion.

"As to the explosions, I cannot explain that either. There is an explosion as loud as a big cannon. There is nothing to be seen, no flash, no dust, or anything whereby you can trace it. You hear the report, which is almost deafening. Then it is gone. It is on the same principle as the bursting of a bubble—you see it, and then it is gone. This is followed by probably the worst of all the noises—the scream. That is enough to strike terror in the bravest. The scream is a combination of anguish and pain. It, too, does not last long, but it always follows the explosion.

No Wire to Do It.

"How about working wires to cause these explosions? Well, there are no wires around here that would do that, that I know of. And, besides, when two wires meet with electricity, there would be a spark. I do not believe that this explosion could be caused by wires, for it is here, there and some other place at very short intervals. Sometimes it goes off in the corner when I am sitting there on my chair.

Extracts Comfort From Whistle.

"The whistling now comforts me. I am getting used to it, and when I hear the whistle, no matter what one—and it has several different kinds—I somehow feel more comfortable. I do not know whether it is the assurance given me that I will not be hurt or what. Sometimes the whistling is so sweet that you could sit all night and listen; other times it is loud and shrill; and then there is what I say is 'the call.' All these I do not mind at all.

"It is out of the question to say it is a ventriloquist working this game. I don't believe it.

No Fear of Injury.

"A friend of mine told me after I had spoken to him about it that I need never fear being hurt. No matter if the building was blown up, I would escape. The reason he gave was that I had sympathy with the spirit, and to be sure and be kind to it, and I would always be safe. I have been as kind as I could to it. When I get it hard is after some one has been in and laughed at the whole affair. After they go the noises are terrible. The spirit seems to be in sorrow of some kind, and every time it wants to talk I will talk and endeavor to draw it out and tell me everything. I call it Ben now, and it always answers to it."

In Other Buildings.

Nor is the one building confined to all the noises. In other buildings the same noises are heard at times, with the exception of the talking which has, from the first, been in the engine room. The whistling, especially, has been heard in other buildings above the rumble of machinery. A night when these sounds are pronounced is not a pleasant one, according to those who have been favored with a vigil with the engineer. The Star talked to one of these, who said:

"It was on in the morning that I had occasion to go into the place and I took occasion to wait around to hear the noises, as I had heard the boys speaking about ghosts at the engine house, but never put any stock in what they were saying.

Pounding Under Chair.

"I was sitting down talking to the engineer, when there was a pounding under my feet. It gradually increased until the thumps were good and hard, but there was no more vibration than that caused by the steady run of the engine. The engineer told me that he had not heard the pounding for weeks. He informed me that there was about five inches of space under that part of the floor, and an exhaust pipe ran along there. If it was from the exhaust pipe it was the most peculiar noise I ever heard from such a pipe.

Whistle at Five A. M.

"Silence followed until five o'clock and then a shrill whistle sounded outside. I say it seemed to be just outside, but it also seemed to be a long way off. 'That,' said the engineer, 'is its whistle.' Say, do you know, I felt a little creepy. I don't know why, but I did."

A Palmist on the Scene.

Having failed to solve the mystery the detectives were open to take any suggestions from capable persons that would assist them. Last night a C. P. R. man brought out Madam Constantine from Toronto, a palmist, who spent from midnight until 2 o'clock in the engine house, but in that time the noises were not heard. She questioned the electrical engineer and the night watchman very closely, and what she learned from them convinced her that there was no trick about it.

The Star asked her what her opinion was on the matter, and she replied:

"It is no trick, and what is more, I believe it to be a spirit that is in trouble, and as someone else has told the engineer that he has shown sympathy with it, and that is why it talks. I should like to hear the noises very much."

ETERNAL LONGINGS.

The noiseless tread of the silent dead,
We sense it evermore,
But see them not in earthly spot
Among us as of yore.

We know that death is but the breath
Departing from the clay,
And yet we yearn for their return
From homes across the way.

Our heart of hearts forever smarts
With agony untold,
For one dear sound of a voice around
Our hearthstone as of old.

We hear the tread of the silent dead,
And feel the touch of a hand;
We speak in thought—it is ever caught
By those in the spirit land.

Oh, yearning soul! within the whole
All pulsing life is one,
Upreaching here to disappear
With yearning never done.

DR. T. WILKINS.

GRAND MASS MEETING.

A Grand Mass Meeting given by the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association will be held at Whitewater, Wis., at the Morris Pratt Institute, on May 16 and 17; first session on Thursday evening, the 16th. We expect Harrison D. Barrett, President of the N. S. A.' Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Dr. G. B. Warne, and others. A glorious good time is expected. Let all the towns in and about Whitewater respond and come out to this glorious gathering.

G. H. BROOKS.

Milwaukee, Wis.

AN ANGELIC MAN.

If Ever an Angel on Earth, Dr. Berthold Pirosh Was One, Though A Jew.

To the Editor: As set forth in the Chicago Record-Herald, the age of charity is not past and that the practice of the philanthropic gospel reaches its finest climax in the crowded Jewish district were propositions advanced at the meeting of the Chicago Jewish Woman's Council.

They were suggested by the story of the career of a Jewish physician, who wrote sixty prescriptions a day and died comparatively poor, when he might have been a millionaire if he had not given nine-tenths of his professional services free of charge to patients who were unable to pay.

The story was narrated by Mrs. Isador Natkin in an address on "The Philanthropic Activities of Chicago's West Side." Mrs. Natkin said the physician to whom she referred was Dr. Berthold Pirosh, who for more than thirty years practiced medicine at Maxwell and Jefferson streets, West Twelfth and Sangamon streets, and in other districts in the congested quarter.

Philanthropist Dies Poor.

He wrote over 21,000 prescriptions each year, about 20,000 of which, she said, were written free for the needy. He died about a year ago, leaving as his principal bequest to his widow and family a life insurance policy which he had taken out many years ago for their protection.

"Charity, philanthropy, unselfish service, or whatever the dedication of one's work to the good of others may be called," said Mrs. Natkin, "never has received a more glorious exemplification than in the career of the late Dr. Pirosh. It was estimated that for many years he had the largest practice of any physician in the United States, if not in the world. It was thought that he was immensely rich. Yet he died comparatively poor.

"It was not known until after his death that about 90 per cent of his prescriptions were given to poor patients free of charge. Literally speaking, he lived and died in the service of the poor of his own race in the ghetto, where there is a population of 300,000 persons who were recipients of his benefactions. The entire ghetto population were the beneficiaries of this one good man's quiet, sympathetic unrecorded, noble philanthropy."

A Bitternut, or a Peach?

How are you rating this wild world, my friend?
How is it meeting your needs?
Does the old road look pleasant which leads to the end?
Or gloomy, and bristling with weeds?

We rate things according to taste, don't you know,
And sometimes by taste of the mouth;
We see things not always the same; there's a glow
In the strawberry gardens of youth!

But what do you find in the world, anyway?
Are the things you desire within reach?
Do you hunt for the bitternuts growing your way,
Or declare, "I will find me a peach!"

If so there'll be peaches—yes, peaches and cream,
For such as demand them, and search;
And the bitternut ghouls will disparage, and scream,
To the peach-folk, "Come down from your perch!"

But they'll not be hurrying! shadows and shine
Alternate, the further we go
And if June, in her roses, seems wholly divine,
Why, in winter we tour in the snow.

I am bound to maintain while I stay here at all
'Tis a peach-of-a-world, don't you know,
And the ones who sit high on their perches and squall,
"'Tis a bitternut!" can't make it so.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

Relief Association in Chicago.

To the Editor of this paper, and to the American People:

In the midst of plenty it is well, at a time like this for us to ask ourselves plainly, once for all, Are we living, or are we dead? Are we deaf to the cry of millions of our fellow-beings now literally perishing of starvation across the water? Are we dumb at this glowing moment, this golden opportunity to respond to their silent speech? Are we blind to the mute appeal of dying thousands—yea, millions—whose wasting forms speak volumes untold, more eloquent than the combined utterances of all the libraries on earth?

Are we, indeed, human? If so, we are surely deaf, dumb and blind—all three; nay, more than this: we are rigid, stiff and cold in the icy arms of death—victims of our own indifference if we remain inactive in the midst of this stupendous tragedy.

Something Must Be Done.

It is as if the climax of a mighty contest had been reached. As if in the throes of a desperate struggle in the final conflict between the spirit of greed and graft on the one hand, and the aroused impulse of awakened humanity on the other hand, the test is now upon us and must be decided speedily.

We who live in the midst of plenty are now, for the hundredth time being weighed in the balance. Shall we be found wanting? This is the stirring question. If fools, we will remain inactive and indifferent to this terrific cry of millions to whom it is possible for us to give speedy and complete relief. If we are wise we will not flinch nor waver at a moment such as this.

Dame Nature, in giving to each of us a place on this fair earth, says to each one, as plainly as if in words, "Bear your part of the burden of life gracefully at all times, and especially when emergency arises." The vital question faces us, and will not down. How shall we acquit ourselves in this emergency?

Let there be organized at once a Famine Relief Association of Chicago. At the very first meeting of this Association (the time of its organization) let a committee be appointed whose duty and pleasure it shall be to invite each and every man, woman and child within reach, now living in comparative plenty and power to respond with a contribution, however small, and the larger the better in proportion to their means, that something may be sent to the proper destination in China with the very least possible delay.

Yours for the speedy triumph of eternal Justice, Truth and Right.

THOMAS H. B. COTTON.

San Jose, Cal.

The Warfare of Science With Theology.

A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom. By ANDREW D. WHITE, LL. D., late President and Professor of History at Cornell University. In Two Volumes. 8vo. Cloth, Five Dollars. For Sale at This Office.

In these two large volumes are combined information that the reader could not find in the libraries of the world in fifty years. It shows the constant and determined opposition of Theology to the advancement that has been made in every branch of Science. To the Student it is indispensible. Every Free Thought Speaker should have it. It should circulate in every community. It goes into minute details, citing in all cases the authority, showing the persistency of Theology in fighting new and advanced ideas in Science.

"THE WARFARE OF SCIENCE WITH THEOLOGY" is undoubtedly the most complete, careful, conscientious, able and bravely impartial history of the subject ever written. The exactness and reliability of its facts and citations are unquestioned. Its vast scholarly research is amazing. It contains just the information the student and thinker needs, and so indexed and tabulated that it is handy as a dictionary when one wishes to refer to some special point or topic.

These two large volumes, containing about 900 pages, will be sent to any address on receipt of the price, $5.00.

Ingersoll's Lectures:

44 Addresses and Answers to His Critics.

A portly volume containing reports of the noted Colonel's lectures, addresses, and answers to critics. It is spicy reading, and will give pleasure to thousands of Spiritualists and Free-thinkers, who will find entertainment and instruction combined in his incomparable presentation of the truth as it appeared to him. The book contains an immense amount of matter, and is sold at a mere nominal price.

Price, postpaid, only $1.00.

LIFE BEYOND DEATH

Being a Review of

The World's Beliefs on the Subject, a Consideration of Present Conditions of Thought and Feeling,

Leading to the Question as to Whether It Can Be Demonstrated as a Fact.—To Which Is Added an Appendix Containing Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

BY MINOT J. SAVAGE, D. D.

8vo. Cloth, 342 Pages.

After a review of the beliefs held in the past concerning life beyond death, Dr. Savage takes up the present conditions of belief and considers the agnostic reaction from the extreme "other-worldliness" which it replaced, which was in turn followed by the Spiritualistic reaction against agnosticism. He points out the doubts concerning the doctrine of immortality held by the churches and the weakness of the traditional creeds and the loosening of their hold upon the people. He then considers the probabilities of a future life, probabilities which, as he admits, fall short of demonstration. The volume includes a consideration of the work of the Society for Psychical Research and also an appendix giving some of the author's own personal experiences in this line. Dr. Savage holds, as a provisional hypothesis, that continued existence is demonstrated, and that there have been at least some well authenticated communications from persons in the other life. The chief contents of the volume are as follows:

Primitive Ideas—Ethnic Beliefs—The Old Testament and Immortality—Paul's Doctrine of Death and the Other Life—Jesus and Immortality—The Other World and the Middle Ages—Protestant Belief Concerning Death and the Life Beyond—The Agnostic Reaction—The Spiritualistic Reaction—The World's Condition and Needs as to Belief in Immortality—Probabilities Which Fall Short of Demonstration—The Society for Psychical Research and the Immortal Life—Possible Conditions of Another Life—Some Hints as to Personal Experiences and Opinions.

Price, $1.50; postage, 10 cents.

OUR BIBLE:

WHO WROTE IT? WHEN? WHERE? HOW?

Is It Infallible?

A Voice from the Higher Criticism.

A Few Thoughts on Other Bibles.

BY MOSES HULL.

Excellent as an exposition of the Higher Criticism and an analysis of the Bible from that standpoint. Of special value and interest to Spiritualists. For sale at this office. Price $1.00.

Right Generation The Key to the Kingdom of Heaven

BY DR. M. E. CONGER.

This valuable little book treats of the relation of life between men and women and strongly emphasizes the fact that for the betterment of humanity children must be well born. This book is printed in large type on good paper, with leatherette cover. Price, 40 cents.

A Work of Immense Importance.

FUTURE LIFE

In the Light of Ancient Wisdom and Modern Science.

BY LOUIS ELBE.

This is the authorized translation of the famous book which has been creating so wide a stir in scientific and religious circles throughout France, under the title "La Vie Future." It will be received with equal interest here, and will arouse very general discussion, as the subject is one engaging not only scientists but laymen in ever-increasing numbers.

The fundamental question of the "Immortality of the Soul" has disturbed the great thinkers of all ages, and for the solution of this eternal enigma humanity still seeks in vain.

This volume offers for the first time a complete presentation of all the available evidence hitherto to be found only in the most scattered and inaccessible forms. With great care and exactness M. Elbe has arranged a plain statement of the discoveries, theories, and ideas of the greatest investigators together with his own illuminating views and comments, and a mass of authentic information regarding the beliefs of the primitive races.

The book is divided into two parts, the first part being devoted to the Ideas of the Survival as considered by the Primitive races, and the second to Deductions drawn from the Fundamental sciences. With Portrait of the author. Price $1.20; postage 10c.

A New and Deeply Interesting Book

By the Author of

"A Wanderer In Spirit Lands."

"THE STRANGE STORY OF AHRINZIMAN."

The Persian Mystic Emperor.

A weird, powerfully told dramatic story of the earth life and subsequent Experiences in the Spirit World of the "Guide, Ahrizimen." Few books are more calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last, and much that is original and new will be found in the accounts given of Ahrinziman's Studies in the Domain of Magic and its relation to obsessions and other perplexing problems of spiritual intercourse. Price, cloth $1.00, Paper, 50 cents. Postage, 12 cents.

Indiana State Association.

Annual Report of the President and the Secretary of the State Association.

Peru, Ind., Mar. 29, 1907.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists, in Convention assembled:

In compliance with the Constitution and By-Laws of our State Association I beg to submit for your consideration the following report of the progress during the year closing with this Convention. I regret that our showing is not greater than will appear on the surface, but, considering the adverse conditions under which we have worked, I must feel that much good has been done—that lasting work has been accomplished, and that at a very small expense to our State Association.

The second annual Convention held at Anderson, Ind., March 9, 10 and 11, 1906, was, owing to very inclement weather, rather small in point of attendance, and it was because of the possibility of encountering the same conditions, that your president and executive board deemed it best to appoint the present meeting at the time at which we now meet.

The financial condition of our Association was not improved by the last Convention, owing to cause stated above. With the small balance on hand it was not deemed advisable to make too great venture in the employment of much talent to further the work, hence it was decided to secure the services of Mr. Will J. Erwood, of Wisconsin, in the capacity of missionary.

This was done and many meetings were held—several mass meetings being included, one at Peru, and one at Seymour—as a whole the meeting held during the period immediately following the Convention were not a financial success, as will be evident by the report of our secretary which comes before this honorable body. Inclement weather, lack of interest due to the spring work, and various other causes were responsible for this. Every effort was made to make the work a success, but it appeared to be the wrong season for work of this description.

During the summer months no active work afield was undertaken, but your president and board of trustees deemed it wise to begin operations early in the fall season; to this end the services of Mr. Erwood were again secured, and he arrived in the State early in the fall—the latter part of September. Work began at once, and has continued constantly from that time up to the present, with what success you can best judge when you have heard the secretary's and missionary's reports.

Meetings have been held at many different points in the State, Mr. Erwood speaking almost nightly. The interest has been reported by the missionary to be good, and the work generally has been carried on with very small expense to the Association. Your president would ask that your closest attention be paid to the reading of the secretary's report and also the missionary's report—particularly to the suggestions made in the latter.

Organization.

After carefully considering the matter of organization it was deemed unwise to urge the organization of societies in localities wherein it would be impossible to arrange for regular visits from competent workers who would be able to sustain the work.

This is based upon a careful study of the situation, such study having demonstrated that comparatively few societies can be sustained where they are not visited at more or less regular intervals by workers who are able to uphold our philosophy. The above is not to be understood as meaning that your president is not in favor of organization; he is decidedly in favor thereof, but deems it best to have fewer organizations and stronger, than many which are in a state of inertia. Appropos of this your president would recommend careful consideration of the suggestions made in missionary's report.

Regular Meetings.

As regular meetings are the life of the movement, I would urgently call attention to the necessity of having a permanent place of meeting in every locality, particularly wherein there is an Auxiliary Society; this is emphasized by the fact that many times our missionaries and speakers must pass you by because of the inability to secure proper places in which to hold services. It should be the duty of the officers of every local society to provide for this contingency wherever possible, and that at the earliest moment.

Where it is not possible to provide a regular speaker for a definite length of time—as six months or a year—it has been found very effective to provide for regular meetings — say once or twice a month—on the circuit plan. Your president would urge that some action be taken in this connection during the present Convention, and to this end, would call your attention to the recommendations in the missionary's report, under head of "Circuit Work."

Lyceum Work.

One feature of our work which has received but little attention during the past year, and which is still probably the most important work of all, is the lyceum work. There is coming a day in which those who have the work in charge shall have passed over to the great majority, and it behooves us to make provision for that day, that there may be workers competent to carry on the work so nobly planned and executed by the "Old Guard."

To this end your president urges that some definite measures be taken at this Convention to further that work; every locality should have a lyceum that the child mind might be instructed along the progressive and religious lines which particularly characterize our movement.

Because of the lack of funds your State Board has been unable to carry on that work, but it is one that should not be left entirely to the executive board, as every member of a society should be interested in the moral, spiritual and intellectual development of the children of Spiritualism. Spiritualists this is YOUR WORK. Will you not take it in hand?

Ordination.

The matter of the ordination of speakers is one that is just now calling forth much attention, and is one that should be most carefully considered to the end that none but the most competent and reliable workers be placed in charge of our movement. To the end that this may be more fully attained, your president would call attention to the clauses covering that point in the Constitutions of the Minnesota and Wisconsin State Associations; and would recommend that action be taken upon these points at this Convention. He would further recommend that said clauses be adopted into our By-Laws at this Convention.

Membership.

Our membership is made up of legally elected delegates from the several auxiliary societies, and while giving us legal representation, and harmonious conventions, it has been a large factor in keeping many representative Spiritualists from attending our annual Conventions.

We have a large area in which there are, as yet, no organized societies, yet, in which there are a number of ardent and thorough Spiritualists who would be glad to be identified with the work of organization. As these should be provided for your president desires to call attention to the provision made for such as these by the Minnesota State Association. Said Association having provided that individuals may become "personal members" of the State Association, upon payment of one dollar ($1) per annum, as dues, provided that the applicants live in a locality wherein there is no local society.

Your president deems the above an excellent solution of the matter, and would recommend its adoption in our By-Laws at this Convention, with the further provision that not more than seven (7) personal members be accepted from any such locality, as seven individuals constitute the necessary number for forming local societies.

Necrology.

The ranks of Spiritualism have been decimated, during the past year, by the calling away of many of its noblest workers, among whom are the Rev. Moses Hull, Jennie Hagan-Brown and others. While feeling deeply the loss sustained, your president can not but congratulate the arisen ones upon their freedom from the thraldom of the flesh. In view of the great loss thus sustained by Spiritualism, your president would recommend that a committee be appointed at this Convention whose duty it shall be to formulate suitable resolutions conveying the sympathy of this Convention to those who, having been most closely allied to the arisen ones, most keenly feel the loss of their presence and companionship.

Mediumship and Phenomena.

In view of the fact that during the past year many instances have arisen, wherein too credulous individuals have become the prey of the charlatan and mountebank, masquerading under the guise of Spiritualism, your president would urge that Spiritualists everywhere throughout the State would more thoroughly and scientifically study and investigate all the laws governing phenomena and mediumship, that they may more surely distinguish between the true and the false, to the end that the true may be exalted to its proper sphere, and the false may be relegated to its real status, and Spiritualism freed from its tentacles forever.

In conclusion, your president wishes to acknowledge his indebtedness to the secretary, Mrs. Carrie H. Mong, for her efficient assistance and to the several members of the board for their co-operation and aid in carrying on the work of the year, the board standing as a unit on all important matters pertaining to the work of the Association.

I also desire to express my gratitude to Mr. Will J. Erwood for his services as missionary for the Association during the months that he has been in the State, and in view of the success attained in his work, I wish to suggest that this Convention would do well to instruct competent workers for the ensuing year, that this work may be carried on to its logical conclusion.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. A. SCHRAM,
Pres. Ind. State Asso. of Spiritualists.

Secrtpary's Annual Report.

Muncie, Ind., March 27, 1907.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Indiana State Association of Spiritualists, in Convention assembled:

Your secretary submits the following report for the fiscal year beginning March 11, 1906, and ending March 31, 1907.

Charters.

We have only issued one charter during the year: Charter No. 19, First Spiritualist Society of Richmond. This society was organized as the result of a series of meetings held in Richmond in December, which will be shown under the head of mass meetings.

Tell City and Chrisney have both surrendered their charters owing to the fact that both are small places and so many members have moved away. Both sent in reports and Tell City paid dues on six members.

The following societies are now in good standing:

Madison Avenue Association of Spiritualists, Anderson, Charter No. 1, paid dues on 15 members.

First Spiritualists Church of Peru, Charter No. 2, paid dues on 25 members.

Progressive Spiritual Association of Seymour, Charter No. 4, paid dues on 8 members.

West Grove Association of Penn Township, Jay County, P. O. Balbec, Charter No. 5, paid dues on 40 members.

First Spiritualist Society of Tell City, Charter No. 9, paid due on 6 members.

Progressive Spiritualist Church of Indianapolis, Charter No. 10, paid dues on 21 members.

Spiritualist Searchlight Society of Sheridan, Charter No. 11, paid dues on 15 members.

Rochester First Spiritualist Church, Charter No. 12, paid dues on 10 members.

Point Pleasant Society of Spiritualists of Chandler, Charter No. 13, paid dues on 16 members.

First Spiritualist Church of Elwood, Charter No. 14, paid dues on 28 members.

Spiritual Research Society of Flint, Charter No. 15, paid dues on 10 members.

Elkhart Spiritual Society, Charter No. 16, paid dues on 10 members.

Independent Spiritualist Society of Muncie, Charter No. 17, paid dues on 13 members.

Making a total of 12 Societies now in good standing.

Last Convention.

Owing to the fact that we had the worst snowstorm of the winter at the time of our last Convention, at Madison Avenue Temple, Anderson, March 9, 10 and 11, 1906, the attendance was small and the financial returns corresponding small.

Missionary Work.

Will J. Erwood was again employed as missionary by the State Association for three weeks in June and for a part of October and all of November, and December. From the June meetings there was $38.05 due Mr. Erwood, from the October meetings there was $1.26 and from the meetings of November and December there was due $7.67, which made a total of $46.98 paid out during the year for missionary work. The different reports will show that Mr. Erwood worked hard and faithfully, and on a small salary, but that in some places the work was not supported as it should have been financially, and in others storms interfered. We feel that the missionary work has been of great benefit to the Cause throughout the State, and would recommend that it be continued as soon as the finances will permit.

Mass Meetings.

We have held three mass meetings during the year as follows:

At Peru, May 27, 27 and 29, with Dr. Geo. B. Warne and Will J. Erwood as speakers, and Mrs. Throndsen as message bearer. This was our first experiment of beginning the meetings on Sunday and closing on Tuesday, and did not prove successful. The receipts were $47.30 and the expenses $54.40, leaving a deficit of $7.10.

At Seymour from October 9th to 14th, inclusive, with Will J. Erwood as speaker and Mrs. Throndsen as message bearer. The receipts and expenses were $54.35 with no balance.

At Richmond from December 19 to 23, inclusive, with E. W. Sprague and Will J. Erwood as speakers and message bearers. There was no society in Richmond at the time to comply with the usual requirements of the Association in putting on these meetings, but those who wanted us to put them on and made the arrangements for them promised to make up any shortage that might occur, but failed to do so, and there is $29 still unpaid. It was near the holidays and the attendance was not large. The receipts were $63.80 and the expenses $92.80.

Indianapolis Meetings.

Under the direction of the board your president and secretary were instructed to put on meetings at such places and times as we deemed best. We were informed that the Spiritualist Church at Indianapolis was vacant and that some of the old Spiritualists of the city were willing to support some good worker or workers, and thus undo some of the work done against our Cause in the city in the past year.

We went down, and as we thought, had all arrangements made for the church, and were to pay the rent on Sunday night. After our audience had assembled Dr. Kingsley came in with the agent for the church and informed us that he had paid the rent in advance. We realized that this was a piece of underhand work on the part of Dr. Kingsley and the agent, but were powerless to do anything but pay for the one evening and go ahead with our meeting. A large percent of the audience voted to support us if we would put on meetings elsewhere, awaiting an opportunity to get the church. We have since been holding meetings at Orpheum Hall with very good attendance and so far they have been self-supporting but have not been a source of income to us. For the reason that the Progressive Church of Indianapolis is chartered with the State Association and we do not in any way wish to antagonize them, we deemed it best to discontinue our meetings after the last Sunday in March.

Mrs. Martha Woolsey has worked hard and faithfully for us in carrying on these meetings, and had it not been for her assistance it would have been impossible to do the work we did. Mrs. Frances Ruddick has also been a faithful worker for us, giving her services as slate-writer Sunday after Sunday for a mere pittance. Mr. and Mrs. Hayden have also done good work for us with little or no remuneration. To all of these we would recommend that this Convention express its gratitude.

Board Meetings.

We have held the following board meetings: At Anderson, March 10 and continued to March 11, during Convention. At Chesterfield June 25 and at Muncie, March 3, 1907, the minutes of which will show what business was transacted.

Ordinations.

We have issued no ordination certificates during the year but have revoked the Licentiate's Commission of Mrs. Julia A. Mills of Elwood, for cause which your board of officers deem just.

The Work in General.

From a financial standpoint the year's work has been a hard pull, yet we feel that more real work has been done than in any previous year. We have every reason to believe that through the influence of the State Association our beautiful philosophy has reached many souls that would not have been reached otherwise, and that our Cause is making rapid progress. Your secretary has received statistic blanks from the County and State and the Government, showing that Spiritualism is now recognized as a Religious Organization, the same as other churches, something that has never been done before. This is one point in favor of organization, if it were not for our organized bodies we never could have hoped for such recognition.

Again I am glad to report that perfect harmony has existed between the members of the board during the year's work, and not a word of discord has arisen. We meet and renew friendships, thus combining business with pleasure—isn't it better so? Personally I feel very grateful to every member of the board for their loyal support, all seem to feel that we have done the best we could under the circumstances, and if mistakes have been made, they are of the head and not of the heart. Not one word of criticism has ever reached my ears from the members of the board, if criticism comes it is from those on the outside who do not fully understand.

Our good president and treasurer, with whom we come in closest contact, have been the same faithful, loyal friends as before, always ready with kindly assistance and advice, for which I am truly grateful.

I must not forget to mention my sister, Mrs. Blackburn, who has rendered so much valuable assistance all the way through my work.

With best wishes for the continued success of the Indiana State Association, this report is fraternally submitted.

CARRIE H. MONG,
Secretary.

FATE MASTERED

And Destiny Fulfilled. By W. J. Colville.

A dainty book of 52 pages, bound in heavy white cover with cat-tail decoration.

Contents: Fate Mastered. Interior Force, Its Practical Evolution. Thought as a Shield. The Human Aura. For sale at this office. Price, 30 cents.

WISCONSIN STATE CONVENTION.

Annual Report of the Secretary to the State Association.

To the Officers, Members and Friends of the Wisconsin State Spiritualist Association:

One year has transpired since becoming the secretary of the W. S. S. A. Being thoroughly ignorant of the true condition of the financial condition this Association was in, it was with regret and temptation not to be connected with the work after examination of books, papers and correspondence of past work done by my predecessors.

Members and friends of this Association remember I am coming to you with a report of all work performed by your secretary, not as an expert, but as a student. Whether the work has been correctly done remains with you to judge.

Having had the heartiest co-operation of the president and all officers, I feel to say a few words for our president, as no one has had the opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with Mr. Brooks, or his work, as your secretary has had the past year. When May 16, 1906, we opened the first mass meeting at Whitewater, Wis., in the Morris Pratt Institute, we were received with a hearty welcome by one and all.

With wonder and enthusiasm I went into the field of work, determined to make our work a success, trying to interest the people not only in my home city, but also in the State, which under great difficulty and untiring work of the president and myself we finally received hearty reception.

After once out in the field we are confident of receiving a hearing. While your president worked hard in the State, as his report has told, your secretary tried to interest the people at home, which was a very good success, as this convention will prove, and all harmony brought into life among the people, not only our own converted Spiritualists, but people who had never heard the name, or did not trust to investigate into public meetings, were brought out to those afternoon gatherings called for the purpose of raising money to defray our convention expense.

Mr. President, I wish here to publicly thank the good friends who so generously opened their homes one after the other each week, the mediums who so generously gave their time, without one cent of compensation from these gatherings. Who can tell what grand work these little meetings have done to those thoroughly ignorant of all knowledge of future existence after death.

How often your secretary has wondered with thoughts almost depressive when one bill after another was received for payment, how can it be met? Then surely your president each time came to the rescue with a money order from some meeting held in some part of the State, where friends more generously kind gave a listening ear and understood the Association to be a necessary organization if Spiritualism was to grow as a movement, and Spiritualists would be recognized as a people, as good if not better than any religion on the planet earth.

Here let me say, if Spiritualism is to grow as it should and must grow, if we as a people wish to be heard and recognized, let those who are not members of a local Society affiliating with the State Association, meet once a week as the ladies did in Milwaukee since November, 1906, invite your friends to spend a social afternoon or evening, invite a home medium and give the best you are able, give the bread of knowledge to the hungry soul, build up the Cause in little ways, and by so doing you can help the State Association in a short time to be a power among you.

Give us your hand of fellowship and you will understand that no movement can live unless an organized body is there to support all good, honest and truthful work. True organization is the watchword of to-day, true banding together of people is a recognized fact of power.

The following are the financial receipts and disbursements during the past year:

Membership	$138.00
Donations and Meetings	781.62
Dance Social at Milwaukee May 26, 1906	62.25
Charter Fee	5.00
Total Receipts	$986.87

Disbursements.

By order No. 1 to No. 42 and Incidentals	$783.34
Leaving a cash balance on hand in Treasury	203.53
Members enrolled	217
Members in good standing	217

General.

The general progress of the year was very favorable. Societies' reports are interesting and show those that are in working order are doing splendid work. Societies reported and in good standing are, Unity, Charter No. 5, Milwaukee; Spiritual Society, No. 2, La Crosse; Light of Truth, No. 9, Ripon; Spiritual Society, No. 11, Whitewater; Spiritual Society, No. 14, Almond; Spiritual Society, No. 10, Oakfield; Truthseekers, No. 16, Milwaukee; Band of Peace, No. 15, Milwaukee.

Respectfully submitted,
LOUISE G. LOEBEL,
Secretary W. S. S. A.
Milwaukee, Wis., April 17, 1907.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 17, 1907.

To the Officers, Members and Friends in Convention assembled:

Following are total amounts received by your secretary for the purpose of establishing a Convention Fund:

Three Dance Socials	$106.71
Afternoon Coffees	48.67
Donations	3.15
Three Circles held by Mr. Roberts	20.75
Total Receipts	$179.28
Total Disbursements for preparation Convention	$ 22.74
Total Balance on hand	$156.54

Also a number of donations in provisions for dinners during convention have been received.

Respectfully submitted,
LOUISE G. LOEBEL,
Secretary W. S. S. A.

Psychic Light

BY MAUD LORD DRAKE.

Mrs. Maud Lord Drake has a national reputation as a medium. The manifestations given through her mediumship have been most marvelous. She has written a book with this title: "PSYCHIC LIGHT—THE CONTINUITY OF LAW AND LIFE." It is a ponderous volume of 600 pages. It will hold your attention from the beginning to the end. It is chockful of stirring incidents. Price of this large volume, only $1.50, postpaid.

LIST OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Send in Your dates and Names of Secretaries at Once.

Interest in the various Spiritualist camp-meetings has commenced, and secretaries of the same should report at once to this office, so that proper announcement as to dates and officers can be made.

Los Angeles, Cal.

The Semi-Tropic Spiritualist Association desires to correspond with speakers and mediums for engagements at Camp-meeting, to be held in Los Angeles, from August 15th to September 15th, 1907.

GEO. E. LYON, Sec'y.
1974½ E. First St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Onset Camp.

Onset camp commences its thirty-first annual meeting, July 22, and closes August 26. For full programs address the Secretary, Onset, Mass.

Ocean Grove Camp.

This camp is located at Harwich, Mass., and opens July 8 and closes July 22, 1907. For programs and information, write Mrs. Mary B. Small South Harwich, Mass.

Mt. Pleasant Park, Clinton, Ia.

The twentyfifth annual camp-meeting at Mt. Pleasant Park, opens July 31, and closes August 28. Progroms and information given to all who write to Mrs. M. B. Anderson, secretary, Clarkesville, Mo.

Summerland Camp.

The Summerland Spiritualist Association will hold its annual camp-meeting the last week in June, beginning June 24. Mrs. F. Lee, secretary.

Winfield (Kansas) Camp.

The Winfield Camp Association will hold its fourteenth annual camp-meeting commencing June 30, and closing July 14. Mrs. A. McAlister president, North Manning street, Winfield, Kan.; Mrs. M. C. Salling, secretary, 1602 South Church street, Winfield, Kan.

City of Light Assembly.

The season opens at Lily Dale N. Y., July 13, and closes September 3. For program address Laura G. Fixen, Secretary, 1047 Carmen ave., Chicago, Ill.

New Era Camp, Oregon.

The New Era Camp-meeting begins July 8, and continues over four Sundays. Address Rev. G. C. Love, president, 934½ C street, Tacoma, Wash.

Sunapee Lake Camp, N. H.

Sunapee Lake Spiritualist Camp at Blodgett's Landing, N. H., commences July 29, and closes August 26. For programs and infirmation write to the secretary, Lorenzo Worthen, Hillsboro Bridge, N. H.

Wonewoc Camp-Meeting.

The Western Wisconsin Camp Association holds its annual camp-meeting in Unity Park, Wonewoc, Wis., July 15 to August 13. For particulars and programs write Gertrude Spooner, secretary, Wonewoc, Wis.

Ottawa Camp.

Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, Forest Park, Ottawa, Kansas, August 17 to 27 inclusive. Write for programs. H. W. Henderson, president, Lawrence, Kansas; Mrs. May Cook-Pearson, secretary, Spring Hill, Kansas.

Forest Home Camp, Mich.

This camp opens July 29 and closes August 19. Any person desiring programs of information regarding campgrounds or camp work, will please write to the secretary, who will answer all inquiries. F. H. Lesher, president; Mrs. Ruth Eastman, secretary, Mancelona, Mich.

Camp Progress.

Meetings are held at Mowerland Park, Upper Swampscott, Mass., every Sunday, beginning June 3, and closing September 30. B. H. Blaney, president, 150 Elm street, Marblehead; Mr. H. S. Gardiner, secretary, 28, Cabot street, Salem.

Mich., opens July 21, extending until August 27. For programs or information write to the secretary, H. R. LaGrange, Brighton, Mich.

Vicksburg Camp.

Vicksburg Camp, Mich., opens July 30 and closes August 20. For full particulars address Mrs. Jeanette Fraser, Vicksburg, Mich.

Edgewood Camp, Wash.

Commences July 29, and ends Aug. 19. For full particulars address Geo. E. Knowiden, 955½ Tacoma avenue, Tacoma, Wash.

Delphos (Kansas) Camp.

Opens August 9, closing on the 25th. Address all communications to T. D. Rice, Secretary, Delphos, Kan.

Chesterfield Camp.

Begins June 16 and ends September 3. Mrs. Flora Millspaugh, secretary, Chesterfield, Ind.

Island Lake Camp.

Island Lake Camp, Island Lake, Mich., opens July 14, extending until August 30. For programs or information write to the secretary, N. G. Swarthout, Fowlerville, Mich. At Brighton after July 1st.

Lake Brady, Ohio.

The sixteenth annual session of this camp will commence June 30, and end September 1. For full particulars address A. G. Keck, Akron, Ohio.

Grand Ledge Camp, Mich.

The Grand Ledge Spiritualist Camp-meeting opens July 19, and closes August 17, with Mr. Oscar Edgerly as presiding chairman. For full particulars address J. W. Ewing, Grand Ledge, Mich.

Unity Camp, Mass.

Opens on Suday, June 4, and continues every Sunday until the last of September.

Mantua Camp, Ohio.

This camp, located at Mantua Station, Ohio, will open July 9, and continue to August 27. For further particulars, address F. H. Sherwood, secretary, Mantua Station, Ohio.

Harmony Grove Camp

Harmony Grove Camp-meeting Association will hold its annual camp, July 22 to August 5. This camp is located three and one-half miles from Escondido, Cal. For further particulars in regard to the camp, address T. J. McFeron, secretary, 528 Fir st., San Diego, Cal.

Niantic Camp, Conn.

The Connecticut Spiritualist Camp-meeting Association, at Niantic Camp Ground, Niantic, Ct.; season of 1907, commences June 12, and continues until September 11. For full particulars address George Hatch, South Windham, Ct.

Haslett Park, Mich.

The twenty-fifth annual assembly of Spiritualists at Haslett Park, Mich., commences August 5, and continues to September 3. For programs address E. F. Sprose, Okemos, or D. R. Jessop, Williamston.

Verona Park Camp.

The Verona Park Camp-meeting, Me., will open August 12 and close August 26. A. F. Smith, president, Bangor, Me.; F. W. Smith, secretary, Rockland, Me.

Queen City Park Camp, Vt.

QueenCity Park Camp, South Burlington, Vt., commences July 29, and ends September 3. For programs address A. F. Hubbard, president, Tyson; S. N. Gould, vice-president, Randolph, or Effie L. Chapman, Cambridge, Vt. After the camp opens address each of the above at Queen City Park, Vt.

Freeville Camp.

The Freeville Camp, N. Y., opens July 22 and closes August 19. For programs write to Miss Victoria Moore, Dryden, N. Y.

A NEW BOOK.

Science and Religion.

By Benjamin F. Loomis, 307 Pages, $1.50, Cloth.

Showing the harmony of the Sciences and their relation to Religion, or the relation of Man to the Universe.

The Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Showing the harmony between Phrenology and Astrology, or the Influence of the Planets on the Human Mind; and containing the Horoscopes of Jesus Christ and of Adam. Progress of the World explained by the principles of PHRENOLOGY.

A Cosmic View of Christ.

The Rise and "Fall" of Man

Scientifically Considered, and many other things not commonly found in other books. Address

FOWLER & WELLS CO.,
24 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL SPIRITUALISM

Spirit Communion in All Ages, Among All People—by W. J. Colville.

This work has two distinctive features: (1st) A resume of the Spiritual faith and practice of Egypt, India, Persia, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, and other ancient nations, not excepting Europe during Christian centuries. (2) A summary of recent experiences in America, Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, Italy, and other modern lands, all tending to show the persistent continuity of spiritual revelation. Clairvoyance, Telepathy, and Psychic Phenomena in general, is dealt with in separate chapters at the end of the volume, making it a highly useful textbook for all who are interested in the great question of human immortality. The Author says: "The libraries contain a large number of extremely valuable works dealing with every imaginable phase of Spiritualism and occultism, but I have searched in vain for a single portable volume, issued at a popular price, which gives a brief and lucid statement of the claims made in all ages and in all countries on behalf of the mighty truth of communion between inhabitants of earth and dwellers disrobed of flesh in the one vast spiritual universe. The enormous and ever increasing interest in "Psychic" problems and the eager, constant demand for historic information coupled with a rational setting forth of intelligible spiritual philosophy, has led me to appear once again before the public with a book." Price $1.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Having been directed to carry on the work of Editor-at-Large in connection with the N. S. A., I am desirous of obtaining all press notices for or against Spiritualism, and reliable information with regard to attacks upon our movement that may be made by preachers. I respectfully request all Spiritualists to forward the same to me at their earliest convenience.

HARRISON D. BARRETT.
600 Pa. Ave., N. E., Washington, D.C.

[Advertisement.]

WORTH A DOLLAR TO ANY ONE—COSTS YOU ONLY 12 CENTS NOW.

"Mysteries of the Seance," that little book [written by a devout Spiritualist] which has been the means of exposing hundreds of fakes, can now be had for only 12 cents. All Spiritualists and investigators should have it for their own protection. It tells how all the fake work is done, and points out the way to detect the trickery every time. Just enclose 10 cents and a 2 cent stamp to us and we will do the rest. DO IT NOW. LUNT BROS., 119 Cedar Street, Roxbury, Mass.

ETERNITY OF THE EARTH.

Electricity the Universal Force. By Daniel K. Tenney. A valuable book of 105 pages. Cloth, 75 cents.

Science and a Future Life.

By Prof. James H. Hyslop. Price $1.50; Postage 10 cents.

This work is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its ethical deductions, unanswerable in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. For sale at this office.

Works of Thomas Paine

A new edition in paper covers with large clear type, comprising:

Age of Reason.....25 cts.
Rights of Man.....25 cts.
Crisis.....25 cts.
Common Sense.....15 cts.

This is a splendid opportunity to secure these standard works, as the price is within the reach of all. For sale at this office.

Apocryphal New Testament,

Being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, his apostles and their companions, and not included in the New Testament by its compilers. Price, cloth, $1.50.

"Science and the Future Life." By James. H. Hyslop, is one of the most valuable acquisitions to the literature of Modern Spiritualism that has appeared of late years. It is scientific in its method, profound in its logic, and above all sympathetic to the truth whatever it may be and wherever it may be found. Price, cloth, $1.50. 10 cents postage extra.

"Worry, Hurry, Scurry, Flurry Cured." By the Blissful Prophet and Wm. E. Towne. Tells how to cast away worry, anxieties needless cares, etc. Price, 25 cents.

Mrs. E. M. Hitchcock will answer 4 questions by yes or no for 25 cents; business questions preferred. Send own hand writing. Full reading, $1.00. Fern Hill, Wash. Send date of birth.

NOTICE.

"If anyone has a full clairvoyant reading from W. D. Stark, Dixon, Ill. and they will forward the same with envelope bearing post mark to George Brothers, Dixon, Ill., they will receive reward for the same."

$10 Makes $150 IN 60 DAYS. A wonderful chance for a little money to make you a competency with absolute safety, without any work on your part. A positive guarantee given in our business. The best of Bank References. Address M. J. Cannon, Treasurer, Block 352, Farmers Bank Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

Astrological Horoscopes.

Delineations and Forecasts showing "What to do," "When to do it," and "How to do it," by Captain Geo. W. Walrond, 1512 Glenarm St., Denver, Colo., or Lock Box 201. His forecasts always accurate and reliable. Over 40 years' study and practice. Thirteen years in Denver. The Most Reliable Business and Family Advisor in America. Terms and Testimonials Free.

TRUMPETS:

Infallible Fibre Trumpets! Better than metal; insulated top and bottom. Tangible with spirit forces. Cardinal Enamel Color. Dark seance, T. P., $1.50; light T. P., $2.00. Self-developing Cabinet and Physical Battery Combination Cabinet. Special revised book governing every phase of development. A to Z Trumpet and Cabinet work in full. Book postpaid, 17 cents. Write for Circular.

JAS. NEWTON, 428 Doyt St., Toledo, O

PHOTOGRAPHS . . .

. . . . of Your Spirit Friends,

can be taken by mail. Send me your address and I will tell you how. Twenty years' experience as a medium.

FRANK N. FOSTER,
Box 13, Green Lake Sta., Seattle, Wash.

FRED P. EVANS,

Noted Medium for

Slatewriting, Clairvoyance, Etc.

Interviews daily from 10 to 4. Readings and development by mail may be obtained by writing to Mr. Evans for particulars. Famous book on Slate-writing, $1.20, while they last. Address,

FRED P. EVANS.
2928 Sacramento street, San Francisco, Cal.

Socialism, Spiritualism and Christianity.

From an angel's, viewpoint; including angel warnings to the clergy and the nation, by a prominent Chicago Spiritualist. Angel claiming Hungarian birth, and known as Louis Kossuth. Report of this remarkable angelic visitation will be regarded by intelligent readers, and especially by lovers of sacred literature as of great interest and value. Price, 25cts. Address DR. R. GREER, Maywood, Ill.

Be Sure to Read This,

Frances L. Loucks, one of the greatest psychic wonders living. I use the spiritual X-ray to locate all internal diseases. A trial will convince you. Nervous exhaustion and lost vigor of both sexes successfully treated, as hundreds can testify. Send name, age, sex, complexion, one leading symptom, and ten cents in stamps, and you will receive a correct diagnosis of your case free; worth dollars to you. Be sure to write your own letter. Dr. J. S. Loucks, who lately passed on, continues to treat the sick through my mediumship. Address all letters to

FRANCES L. LOUCKS,
21 Lowden Ave, W. Somerville, Mass.

PSYCHIC DEVELOPMENT.

My system will unfold either your mediumship or adeptship. It is the first and pioneer effort as a system to develop you consciously, without going into a trance or becoming obsessed. Among the public or professional psychics and teachers who unfolded by my System are: Mrs. K. Harry, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, Everett, Mass.; Mrs. W. J. Burke, Malden, Mass.; Prof. W. W. Druitt, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Jennings, Moravia, N. Y.; Mrs. H. F. Parker, Boston; Mrs. M. H. Springer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. S. J. Sears, Ft. Collins, Col.; Mrs. W. A. Whitehead, Methuen, Mass.; Mrs. A. A. Smith, Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. L. Wilson, Martin's Ferry, O. Read what some write:

"My clairvoyant experience has exceeded anything I ever thought within the range of the human."—John McDowell, Philadelphia.

"The System is surely what humanity as a whole is looking for."—Mrs. E. F. Stock, Boston.

Send stamped addressed envelope for circulars, etc., to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 24 Strathmore Rd Brookline Mass.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Give your age, how long you have worn spectacles: I will mail One Pair of $1.10 Melted Pebble Lens in a good straight temple steel frame, guaranteed to fit your eyes. Also a Vegetable Battery. Cures Catarrh, a Cold in the head. Magnetized Compound, for 4 oz. Eye-Water that will cure sore eyes. All for $1.10; if only one is ordered, spectacles sent for sixty cents. Battery 50 cents; Magnetized Compound, 10 cts.

FREE For your address on a postal card, a beautiful photo of Yermah, chief of the Atlantians; lived on earth 16,000 years ago; also illustrated circulars showing styles and prices, telling all about my Melted Pebble Lens spectacle, and my method of fitting EYES as perfectly at your own home as if you were in my office. B. F. POOLE, 157 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, Ill.

AN ASTONISHING OFFER

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

230 North Sixth st.
San Jose, Cal

IN THE WORLD CELESTIAL.

BY DR. T. A. BLAND,

With full page photograph of the Heroine Pearl from a spirit painting.

"Three things that make this book remarkable. Its authorship, the astounding claims put forth in it, and the philosophy and revelation of a future life it contains."—H. O. Flower, in the Arena.

"It will give us courage to pass through the deep shadows of death to the sun-lit clime of the World Celestial."—Rev. H. W. Thomas.

Cloth bound with gilt side stamp; price $1.03

SPIRITUAL SONGSTER.

By Mattie E. Hull. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music; for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cents, or $6.50 per hundred.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and now type; 128 pages, post 8vo. Paper 25c; cloth 50c.

AFTER HER DEATH.

The Story of a Summer. By Lilian Whiting. Pervaded with pure and beautiful spirituality of thought. Instructive and helpful to all who love and seek the higher and finer ways of spiritual experience. Price, $1.00.

Paine's Theological Works.

Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo, 432 pages. Price, cloth, $1.00.

In Tune with the Infinite

By Ralph Waldo Trine.

Within yourself lies the cause of whatever enters into your life. To come into the full realization of your own awakened interior powers, is to be subject to condition your life in exact accord with what you would have it.—From Title-Page.

CONTENTS—I. Prelude; II. The Supreme Fact of the Universe; III. The Supreme Fact in Human Life; IV. Fullness of Life—Bodily Health and Vigor; V. The Secret, Power and Effect of Love; VI. Wisdom and Interior Illumination; VII. The Realization of Perfect Peace; VIII. Coming into fullness of power; IX. Plenty of All Things—The Law of Prosperity; X. How Men Have Become Prophets, Seers, Sages, and Saviors; XI. The Basic Principle of All Religions—The Universal Religion; XII. Entering Now into the Realization of the Highest Riches. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $1.13.

Her Last Funeral Oration.

Just before her transition, Mrs. Jennie Hagan Brown was called to Arlington, Nebraska, to officiate at the funeral of Mrs. J. A. Unthank. The address which she delivered on the occasion, given below, contains many gems of thought, and will be read with great interest by her friends who reverentially remember her.

O, Thou Infinite Father and Mother, thou who hast given us the blessing of eternal life, and the brief journey of mortal existence; Thou who hast prepared the doorway of birth, and that silent entrance into the world beyond, called "Death," we approach Thy sacred presence with our hearts uplifted under the sacred and tender laws of love, and of Thee. We ask that Thou sendest Thy ministering angels to each heart that mourns and that Thou fill each heart with that psalm of the beautiful words, "that it is better further on." Lead us on, loving Father and Mother, through the dim shadowed isles of mortal disappointments and joys, to the bright beacon lights on that shore of immortality where so many of ours have entered the doors. Let us feel that we are journeying onward toward the same goal, and that by our deeds we, too, shall be recognized. Teach us with the divine aspiration for right, and let all the yearning sympathy of our souls be responded to from Thy love. Teach us that this occasional mourning is an occasion of joy for this Mother who has gone from us to the glad and sweet reunion with her loved, but never lost ones. Let us feel that in the many mansions where they cared for us, she has found her home; not only a home, but a home well filled with all the love and environment of right that could be prepared for her, and that she enters not alone, but in the companionship of the loved who have gone before. Send Thy tender and loving angels with their sympathies to these hearts and let them feel the sympathy of Thy love. Amen.

In the golden September of four years ago, I was summoned to Arlington, in this church to give utterance to the last words of honor and love above the silent form of an honored friend, Mr. Unthank.

It was the first occasion of my coming back to Arlington without his hands grasping mine, and his welcome being among the tenderest. To-day I am with you from a long journey, from the sun-kissed lands of southern Texas, to meet you in this early January, with its frost and rime upon the trees, and to say the words of affection and adieu to the mortal form of his beloved wife.

For over sixty years had he lived to the present time, they would have walked hand in hand down the broad highway. But he left her with a word of parting love, and they understood each other, and knew that they would be re-united. There were fair-faced children in the bloom of youth who had gone before them. There were those of middle age and experience who had held their hands and said "good-bye," and she was left with loving and affectionate children and grandchildren, "to tarry awhile at the cross" only four years. Now that silence and that rest has come upon her, a woman whose early years of motherhood and simple dignity as a matron come out of past memories, and shine down upon us with a golden glory of sweet example. Refined, sensitive and courageous in her convictions of right, standing before the world and smiling upon its stories in the old days, and saying, "Life is only a school through which we pass, she graduated into the higher schools beyond. Her tender hand was ever ready to give welcome, and her heart to give sympathy. My memories of this family are not as a stranger who comes from afar, but as one almost of one kindred blood speaking of my own. I love them much; I honor them greatly. I do not come here to tell you that she is dead, but I come to say as that sweet singer of poems, "I cannot say, and I will not say that she is dead. She is just away." So said James Whitcomb Riley when his favorite brother went away from this world, and so I quote him to you. "She is just away," gone out into the sunlit reception room to a world of immortality and joy, and when your hearts ache, dear friends, and when you feel that there is something gone that cannot be replaced, and when your lips whisper that sacred word—"Mother"—how much the word means— remember that she is hearing the same word from those lips on that better shore, and remember that she has just gone a little in advance of you.

Age had placed its heavy hand upon her shoulder, and her feet trembled in the pathway. Sickness and pain had wracked and injured the physical house she lived in. The germ of an immortal mind was clouded by the hours of pain and anguish, and now beyond the shadows the jewel of her selfhood, the real woman is rising transfigured in her immortal joy, recognizing the great truth that she is a daughter of the eternal God, knowing as she has never known before the triumph of an immortal soul over the shadows of death, over the weaknesses of life, over its pains and disappointments, standing with a crown of womanhood and motherhood there in the Eternal City.

Not one is here, even the fair-faced little children that would wish dear grandmother back again; no, you are glad that dear grandmother has gone into the beautiful home of the beyond to meet grandfather, and all the other loved ones, and not one of you who are older, that would for one moment recall her; but your hearts ache, and you will be lonely, and you will often think, "I will ask mother." "I will refer to her," but she will not answer you in the old tender physical voice, but we know that she will send you the reply of love across the mystic, dim shadowed existence between. Why is it deemed a shadow? Because we of the mortal have not gained that quality, that physical environment to see through the shadows. Let me illustrate:

Not long ago I was in the city of Cincinnati on a similar duty to this. I was down on Walnut street, and the clouds were so heavy, and the day so dark and dreary, that I felt deep regret, and when the funeral cortege started up over the hill side of beautiful Cincinnati, I went with sorrow because the day was so dark, and so dreary, but as our carriage climbed the long hill, we suddenly left the darkness and the shadow and came into the full burst of splendid sunshine. The clouds lay white and dim in the far-off gloom, and all the shadows were beyond me. I looked back at the reflection. The city was full of smoke and choked with blackness, but the hilltops were fair, and the lights shining. In the same way our world is; a great city of smoke and discord, and shadows and misunderstandings, and when we have climbed above these, when we ascend into the spiritual realms of comprehension of ourselves, when we gather the knowledge that we know, lo, we have ascended the hills and stand where the sunlight is, and the beauty of God's permanence, and when, after we have climbed the hills, the mountains are beyond them, and those mountains are the mountains of eternal and unending progress, all conscious of the right and conscious of love, and that triumph of love has come to her who rests here physically in the valley of peace. She stands high on the mountains of life and light to-day. She has gone away where she does not know the clamor of strife, but in the eternal mountains of light, she hears the song of love and the anthems of peace wafted to her soul. It is a great and glorious thing to love, and to live well. It is another glory of life, strange as the sentence may sound to pass through life to death. It is the triumph of soul exerting itself to find the continuance that was bequeathed it long ago.

It is not in vain that our ancient masters adorned their splendid paintings with wings, and the answer is because of the poetry of the representation and the true interpretation is that masterful word "aspiration." The soul's wings are the soul's desires. This aspiration is the white plumes that we adorn our souls with, and while we are here the children of toil and sorrow, we are speedily growing into that soul life, with its aspiration and its unfolded hand. Life becomes very sacred when we interpret it truly. It does not mean existing. It does not mean food and raiment and a place of slumber. It means all that our splendid Longfellow told us in that triumph of his art, "The Psalm of Life," and it is all perhaps as well expressed in one brief verse of that beautiful poem as in any one place in literature:

"Not enjoyment and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way,
But to act that each tomorrow
Find us further than to-day."

And this to-morrow has found her far upon the journey. It has found her beyond the environments of weakness. It has found her in the golden morning splendor where the flowers never wither, and the frosts never blight. When I look into your faces, my beloved friends of many years, and I recognize so many whom I have known, and associate the many who have gone from your hearts and homes, I speak to you as I speak to these, the kindred of this mother in Israel who has gone away, and the word of consolation for them is the word of consolation for you. Be not cast down nor discouraged. Count life as full of worth. Do not look upon its disappointments or shadows, but see how much life and truth of the infinite blessing of the real have belonged to you, and let your lives feel that each to-morrow finds you further than to-day.

Long ago, there was a beautiful story told of Arabia, a land of fragrance and blossoms. Once upon a time two beautiful maidens were standing under the soft light of an Arabian night, and standing there, a strange messenger appeared before them, and said to those daughters of that mystic land, that whatever they should ask at that special hour, should be granted them. The one impulsively said, "I would like to have two things."

"What are they?" asked the mystic messenger.

"Beauty and power."

"It is granted you," was the reply.

The other waited for a moment and then said, "and I would ask for the fulfillment of the law of womanhood and motherhood and love."

The years passed, and the request of the first was granted. Beauty of face and figure were hers. Wherever she turned the world admired her. She swayed the hearts of men and women, and held that mystic power over them for a time. But after awhile the heart grew weary, it needed something more, and they turned from her, while new and fresh pageants bowed before her. In a simple cottage upon the side of a desert dwelt the other woman. Beside her were fair sweet children, whose dark and sunny heads around her knee bowed in tender reveries. A husband loved her with all his heart, and the little home was glorified and dignified. By the strange laws of fate, of the divine laws of God, these two women fell asleep upon the same day, and she who had had beauty and power, still beautiful after many years, fell asleep alone. She sat in her regal chair as a queen, her subjects at a distance. All admired and all obeyed, but her heart was very lonely, for no one loved her. Under the simple roof of the tent the woman who fell asleep was in the arms of her daughters, and her sons, and her sons' sons, and her daughters' daughters. The man whose hair was snow white still called her by the loved names of his early youth. Tenderly her eyes were closed and her lips breathed "thanks" for the fulfillmen of the angel's gift. Awakening in a world beyond, she found life's completeness still with her, and the other soul, according to the old Arabic story, had been so starved and attenuated that it stood as a dim shadow upon the shores of life beyond.

The same angel met them again, and said, "I have fulfilled my promise to each of you."

"Yes," said the two woman souls.

"And now," said the angel, "You who have been wife and mother, and loved, and lived the law, will find your place of rest and recompense, and you who have never loved, poor soul! must seek again the world from which you come and through another experience learn the needed lesson, to fulfill life, love."

Our friend has learned that lesson. She has gone beyond us. She does not need to return, she can progress on and on. Remember, I have only given you the story of the olden times as a simile, but its meaning is true. He or she who fulfills the law of love and duty of life, has accomplished the fulfillment of the law. Love is as eternal as God. It was what Jesus of Nazareth came into this world to teach, and the new commandment that he gave us, that has changed us from the old Mosaic life into the warm, impulsive love was the new commandment, "I give unto you that ye love one another."

Oh! that we knew more of this; that we put away our selfishness; that we become a part of that mighty impulse that uplifts and sustains us. It was this love that made the Christ, and placed him as a shining light of omnipotence. It was the same great love that illuminated and glorified Gautama Buddha in the beautiful home in the palace of riches near his sweet wife and child—and he then found for the first time, that the world had been in agony and poverty, and old age and death. He loved so much, that he left all of his wealth, left his own, and went out in the highways and byways, and deserts, and gave his life and labor for that one masterful word, LOVE.

No matter if you consider him heathen, I do not, because that great song of love, that impulse that filled and thrilled, and expressed itself through him, was the same Godly expression as that of Jesus who said, in the new commandment, "Give I unto you."

There are many other characters in the history of the world who have illustrated this triumph, this dominating power of God, But there is nothing in the languages of the world that can triumph in the expression of love over the word "Mother." She goes down into the dark agonies and anguish of death to bring us into this world. She gives her best years to rear us. She watches her boy when he takes the downward path with such tears of agony as the mother of Christ shed by the cross. She watches her child when he takes the path of virtue and right with such joy and gladness as no living word can express. She loves much. This woman who spends her life with the life of a husband, who lives for the sacred altar of home, and who ever places on that altar the pure, sweet prayers of her heart. The sweet red roses of her womanhood's love grows from blooming girlhood into mature and dignified matron's life, and changes from the matron to the weary and worn woman of many years.

Beloved mother, you are one of these. You have known life's joys and its sorrows. Your soft eyes have filled with tears and your tender lips have wreathed in smiles. Your heart has ached and it has been very glad. It has lived off of its cup of sweetness, and it has drank its wormwood. You are resting now physically. In a world beyond you have awakened as a soul immortal, and are receiving what is justly yours. We do not call you back, we bid you God speed, and we give you the holiest of names, "Mother," "Wife." I have no better words in which to convey my message.

And to you who are her neighbors, and her friends who knew her years ago when the hospitality of her table, long and amply filled, was at your disposal, when boys and girls were there in her home, you who were her friends, you must not regret her going, but hope to meet her over there. To you who are her grandchildren, remember what your grandmother has been, and make your lives proud and honorable in remembrance of her.

To you who are still older kindred, keep her memory.

To you who are nearer or a little more distant, keep the ties of affection.

Live and look forward to reunion, for I have come all this distance to tell you that "Life is ever Lord of death," and that "She is not dead but sleeping."

I am going to take for the subject of my poem this afternoon, the thought suggested of Immortality and Love, carrying out the subject of my address.

Born into this world in the long ago,
Eighty-three years and a trifle more,
A little girl stood soft and low
At the masterful Great Life Door.
"Open the way," this baby said,
And looked on the world with her sweet surprise—
Dear little dainty soft tiny head,
Great large, tender, wondering eyes.
Girlhood passed as girlhood will;
Then a lover came in her early days
And filled her life with the sweet glad thrill,
And told her of joy in its holiest ways.
She put her hands that were soft and small
Into the hands of this lover tall,
And trusted him as a woman can Always trust such an honest man
To lead her along on the great broad way
Of life and trust from her marriage day.
Into their home the children came,
Each one receiving its welcome and name.
Joy and pleasure and peace were there,
With toil and struggle, labor and care.
But they loved each other, oh! so well,
And years like a mantle around them fell.
Then one by one in the shadowed day,
The loved and the dear were called away,
And the others who lived and went on in life's race
Married and started new homes apace.
Life and love still held their place,
And the days went on in the long, long race.
Old age came, but before its time came prosperity and success,
Words of peace congratulation, respect and affection.
Then he said good-bye, and he went away,
And the world for her seemed dull and gray.
Tender her children and kind their care,
But the burden was more than her heart could bear,
And the four years went along so slowly,
And then she said not to one or all
How tired she was; but it was so,
And she whispered the angels to let her go.
And so one morning, without a warning, the voice was heard.
The beckoning hand from the other shore,
The messenger opened the silent door.
She smiled and she waved her hand good-bye;
And passed away to the realms on high.
She has gone, but she leaves behind her here
The loving heart and the flowing tear,
And the memory sweet and pure and true
Of what her life has been to you.
And across isles of this present day
She has knocked at the gate as at birth's sweet day,
And her voice has called once more, asking that they let her in,
And she has gone into that great to be,
To the life of immortality
Good by to her and the mortal soul;
Good morning to life in its infinite roll.

I would like to say to the old friends here whom I knew many years ago, that I would be very glad to see you this evening at Mrs. William Cook's, if you can call for a little hour or so with me, and that I am going to stay a few days this time in Arlington. I wish to say in behalf of Mr. Unthank and family, and Mr. Cook's family, and all the relatives present, to give their heartfelt thanks to the church for its use to-day; to the chorus for their excellent and beautiful assistance; to those who have borne this tender form of our friends into this church for us here, the pall bearers, and to all of those who have assisted and to those neighbors and friends who have been kind and tender before this bereavement came, to say that their hearts are full of gratitude to you; also to thank you for the beautiful flowers.

FROM THE HOUSE ON THE HILL.

Meadville, Pa., as Seen by Helen Stuart-Richings, B. D. A.

The city of Meadville, Pa., lies in a valley, and stretches its arms up the surrounding slopes. A dozen years ago it was a somewhat sleepy town, with an indolent, self-satified, countryfied air, priding itself on its Theological Schools, its conservatism and its exclusiveness. The schools remain, its conservatism has been greatly modified, and it has discovered that exclusiveness is a two-edged blade, that, while defending in one direction, is likely to work destruction in another.

Wishing to maintain her prestige as an educational center, and the home of refinement and culture, Meadville barred out numerous plants that sought to locate in her midst. It did not require many years of this policy to secure for her the additional definition of "a dead town."

But, even as a hitherto barren plain may blossom into beauty through the introduction of some wind-blown seed, so Meadville began to put forth signs of renewed life, and civic activity.

Men of progressive ideas came to the front. New industries, one by one, were admitted, and the young blood that had been forced to seek legitimate expression in other centers, was retained in the body corporate by the opportunities thus afforded for business growth and financial development. One thriving industry in particular—The Spirella Manufacturing Company—gives employment to hundreds of young men and women. Its president, W. W. Kincaid, is also president of the Chamber of Commerce, and secretary and treasurer of the Independent Psychical Research Society. This society has been in existence about two years, its other officers being Hon. A. Gaston, president, and Mr. Chas. See, vice-president.

It has had on its platform such grand workers as Lyman C. Howe, Rev. B. F. Austin, Mrs. C. L. V. Richmond, Clegg Wright, Frank T. Ripley and Mrs. G. G. Cooley.

Many of the students at the Unitarian Theological School attend the lectures, one of their number—Mr. Wm. Morrison—being a member of the Board of Directors. The society's work is making itself felt for good in the community; and, while here, as elsewhere, the tares will get in among the wheat — some will try to pull down what other hands have builded—selfishness and ignorance will raise their faces against what threatens to destroy them—nevertheless, devotion to truth, purity of purpose, determination to overcome obstacles, and loyalty and perseverance in the face of difficulties will yet win. The tares will be kept in check, the structure made too solid for base hands to destroy, the spirit of Altruism inculcated, and spiritual knowledge spread, until selfishness and ignorance shall lose their power.

During a months service for the society, I have been entertained in the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Collier, who with their daughter, Mrs. L. Holman, her husband and two children, occupy the spacious "House on the Hill," as it is generally called, with its beautiful sweep of terraced lawn, and magnificent pines.

O, those old pines! My windows give them to my view—and how they sing to me! Softly, with gentle sighs, and tremors of ecstasy—and grandly, with diapason swell and triumphant tossing of green boughs!

And from the windowed nook where I write the setting sun may be seen, as it drops behind the hills across the valley, where French Creek winds like a ribbon of silver.

HELEN STUART-RICHINGS, B. D. A.

WHEN WE GROW OLD.

The tallest lilies droop at eventide,
The sweetest roses fall from off the stem;
The rarest things on earth cannot abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them—
We're growing old!

We had our dreams, those rosy dreams of youth!
They faded, and 'twas well. This afterprime
Hath brought us fuller hopes; and yet, forsooth,
We drop a tear now in this later time
To think we're old!

We smile at those poor fancies of the past—
A saddened smile, almost akin to pain;
Those high desires, those purposes so vast.
Ah, our poor hearts! They cannot come again!
We're growing old!

Old? Well, the heavens are old; this earth is, too;
Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet;
Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tis true
We tread life's way with most uncertain feet.
We're growing old!

We move along and scatter as we pace
Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand;
At last, with gray streaked hair and hollow face,
We step across the boundary of the land,
Where none are old.

JAMES MONTAGUE.

"The Religion of Cheerfulness." By Sara A. Hubbard. An excellent book for the culture of health and spirituality. None can read it without pleasure and profit. Price 50c.

"Immortality, Its Naturalness, Its Possibilities and Proofs." By J. M. Peebles, M. A., M. D., Ph. D., Contains the address rejected by the Philosophical Society of Great Britain, with Introduction and Explanatory Letter. Price ten cents.

A MESSAGE TO OHIO SPIRITUALISTS

Which will be read at the meeting of The Ohio State Spiritualists' Association at their meeting May 24, 25 and 26, by the President, F. D. Dunakin, and which explains the object and the work being done by the association.

Officers and Delegates and Friends of the O. S. A.:

Once more we are assembled in this, our tenth annual State Convention and I have the honor to submit to you my annual report as president of our organization.

General Interest.

There has been no lack in general interest in Spiritualism or Occultism in the State or in fact in the world at large during the last twelve months. Psychic science has been discussed, and in fact has been the favorite theme with scientists and men of learning, the village sage, the preacher and layman and the street corner philosopher during the year that has just passed by. It has been a live subject of discussion by the secular press and articles favorable to Spiritualism have appeared from time to time which have caused many who have not thought favorably along these lines to enter into the field of investigation to that extent that a large per cent of the investigators have become open and avowed Spiritualists.

Local Societies and Camps.

It gives me great pleasure to report that our local meetings and our camps throughout the State have been more largely attended than in former years. That spirit of inquiry which has taken possession of the minds of the public, along the lines of occultism have caused them to embrace every opportunity to attend any and all places where the science has been discussed or the phenomena demonstrated. At least this is true of all sections from which I have been able to secure information. To what extent membership has been increased, I am unable to state, but I am aware that there has been an increase of interest along these lines of thought on the part of the public in general.

We have chartered several new societies, and have done much to revive and encourage many of the old ones by adding new members to their numbers and in various ways have given them encouragement to go on with their work of reform and investigation, as the reports of our secretary and missionary will probably show.

Missionary Work.

In order to strengthen our local societies, and to assist in building up and strengthen our State Society, we should do all that can be done to encourage missionary work. This principle has been recognized as a truth at nearly all of our previous State conventions, but the great question that has ever confronted us, is not the necessity of this missionary work, but how to get it into practical operation with the limited amount of financial aid that has been at our command. At our last annual convention the trustees of the O. S. A. were asked to employ suitable missionaries and place them in the field as representatives of our State body. Accordingly at a meeting of the board Rev. Elizabeth Schauss, of Toledo, Ohio, one of the trustees of the O. S. A., and one who in every way is fully competent to fill such position, was unanimously elected, by said board, to take charge, and have absolute control of the missionary work of the State, but for some reason the movement has been thwarted to some extent so that we have not realized as much as we had hoped for in this direction. One thing I have learned that has hampered the movement, was that Sister Schauss has had almost the exclusive care of an aged and sick mother which has kept her at her home and hindered much in the missionary work, and yet while considerable work, with all these hindrances, has been done this past year, under our present system, I believe still better and greater results can be obtained by a change of plan for the coming year.

I therefore recommend that the missionary work of the O. S. A. be carried on along the present lines of effort, but I would further recommend to have the State divided at least into four districts, making Columbus the center and a line drawn north, south, east and west from there be the boundary lines of said districts. Then I would advise that at least one missionary be elected from each of these four districts, by this convention, and to have the ones elected by this convention to represent and work for that particular district from which they are elected. The missionaries from the four districts may confer together to formulate general plans for the general good, etc., but each one to have exclusive jurisdiction over that part of the State from which he is elected. By so doing it divides the work and places it in all parts of the State with that personal interest that belongs to everything that is successful.

Our Mediums.

We know that mediumship is the foundation of Spiritualism. Mediumship will point out, as with a finger of light, the good or sad results of use or misuse of opportunities. It is true that no neglect of ours, or opposition even, can ultimately defeat the evolutionary force of progress. We may cut short the work in righteousness and hasten its completion, for it is preeminently true that "star differeth from star in glory." It is possible for mediumship to make this difference so apparent that many sluggish souls shall be stirred up to action. Therefore mediums are worthy of every possible consideration and kindly care that we, individually, or as an order can bestow upon them. The O. S. A. is a friend to all true mediums, nor does it repudiate any phase of mediumship. Both physical and psychical phenomena are recognized as facts by it, and all worthy mediums both physical and psychical are recognized as associate ministers of Spiritualism and as such are entitled to commissions from the O. S. A.

Mass Meetings.

No mass meetings have been held under the auspices of the O. S. A. during the past year, except one at Columbus, Ohio, on Sunday, November 4, 1906, which was a great success, if not financially, socially and spiritually. The people of Columbus were very kind to us, and spared no pains to make everything agreeable and pleasant for us during our stay with them, a board meeting of the trustees was held at the same time and place, so that we managed to unite business with pleasure and was altogether a pleasant and profitable time for the O. S. A.

Numerous requests have been made for the holding of such meetings at other times and places during the year, but for some unaccountable reason we have not been able to hold any more such meetings during the year. In the past years, these meetings did the O. S. A. great good in the way of advertising and yielding a goodly sum for its treasury, after the payment of all expenses. I therefore recommend that the incoming board of trustees be given positive instructions to institute and hold such meetings at the different cities of the State during the coming year.

Our Risen Brothers and Sisters.

And just here, dear friends, it may be fitting to say a word concerning our arisen brothers and sisters that have gone from our midst to return to the home in the sphere of the soul, whence they came. They have left us when apparently our need of their service was greatest, when our cause most required their valiant defense and support. We know they are not dead; we realize that they have only made in exchange of dwelling places, to take up life's activities anew and carry on the work in the spirit world which they so well and so enthusiastically carried onward while in the mortal. In an article of this nature I can only briefly speak of but a few of the many of our dearly beloved workers and friends who have been promoted from the rudimentary sphere to a higher vantage ground of eternal progress. The first is our friend and co-worker, ex-president and ex-treasurer of our own State Order, Sister Carrie Firth Curran. More recently Sister Jennie Hagan Brown was called to give up her work here on this physical plane and about the same time our veteran worker and Biblical scholar and one probably more universally known and appreciated than any of the rest, Moses Hull, president of The Morris Pratt Institute, and last but not least was the honorable Theodore J. Mayer, treasurer of the N. S. A., who has done so much financially for our noble cause. But these are not all, only some of the more noted workers. And we can say with Brother A. B. French, "Oh! Brothers and Sisters, doubly blessed by death's sweet kiss, swing wide the gate, and let our weeping eyes behold the garden of the soul's bloom where we shall live and love forever!"

LAKE PLEASANT CAMP.

Camp Meeting Will Be Held, Notwithstanding the Great Disaster.

The second oldest Spiritualist Camp ground in the world, that of the New England Spiritualists' Camp Meeting Association at Lake Pleasant, Massachusetts, was almost entirely swept out of existence on the 25th of April by fire. The fire started by the explosion of a lamp in the cottage of George B. McKenney, on Broadway, at 5 o'clock in the morning and within five minutes the Lake Pleasant Hotel, Association Hall and the Putnam House were burning fiercely. About twenty families were living in the burning district and they had only time to escape with the clothing they were wearing. One hundred and thirteen cottages, the Lake Pleasant Hotel, Association building and the building in which the reservoir for the grounds was located, were entirely destroyed and about 40 families have lost everything that they possessed in the world. A meeting was held in the Temple on Sunday, April 28, for their immediate relief and about $100 were realized. Several societies will take up a collection at their Sunday services and if any of the readers of this paper feel that they would like to help in relieving the distress of brother and sister Spiritualists, the writer will gratefully receive for them, such sums as may be donated.

Although this disaster will seriously cripple the Association, its property being only partially protected by insurance, arrangements are already on foot to repair the damage as far as possible and the camp meeting will be held as usual, commencing Sunday, July 28, and continuing until Sunday, August 26. The list of speakers comprises such workers as J. Clegg Wright, May S. Pepper, Mrs. Tillie U. Reynolds, Rev. Albert P. Blinn, Mrs. Zaida B. Kates, Geo. W. Kates, Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, R. F. Churchill, Carrie E. S. Twing, and Edgar W. Emerson.

Already work of reconstruction has begun and Mr. Frank S. Wilbur is busy clearing away the debris from his land, preparatory to rebuilding, and others will do the same as soon as the insurance adjustors have surveyed the remains. The Highlands, upon which are 42 cottages and the Temple, were uninjured; the water plant which supplied the cottages during the summer is already in operation; 54 cottages still stand uninjured upon the old grounds, and the boats, boat-house and depot restaurant are intact, with 96 cottages, and the Association buildings mentioned as still standing, a prosperous camp meeting can be held this year—and we are going to hold it. Some of us expect to go back to the early conditions of this grand old camp and tent this summer, but those visitors who desire accommodations in hotel or cottage will be able to secure them, for the Home Comfort House, the Grove House, and probably a new hotel under the auspices of the Association will be open and ready for guests by June 15 or July 4, at the latest. We believe this catastrophe will bring about better conditions, though it seems so hard now, and we know that the Spiritualists who have visited and loved "Old Lake Pleasant" in days gone by will help now by their attendance and support.

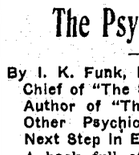
Both of the groves and auditoriums were uninjured, and speakers' stands and band stands are intact.

The camp meeting circulars will be ready for distribution by May 1st. In writing for them, please enclose stamp for postage.

ALBERT P. BLINN,
Secretary.
17 Oak St., Norwich, Conn.

"After Her Death. The Story of a Summer." By Lilian Whiting. No mind that loves spiritual thought can fail to be fed and delighted with this book. Beautiful spiritual thought, combining advanced ideas on the finer and ethereal phases of Spiritualism, leading the mind onward into the purer atmosphere of exalted spiritual truth. A book for the higher life. Price, cloth, $1.00.

"The Light of Egypt." Volumes I and 2. An occult library in itself, a text-book of esoteric knowledge as taught by Adepts of Hermetic Philosophy. Price $2 per volume.



Remarkable Invention.

AN INSTRUMENT THAT IMPROVES AND STRENGTHENS EYESIGHT.

Spectacles May Be Abandoned

This instrument, which the inventor has patented, is called "Actina"—a trade-mark word.

In the treatment of eye diseases the inventor of "Actina" claims that there is no need for cutting or drugging the eye in treating most forms of disease. Cataracts, and other abnormal growths have been removed, and weakened vision improved or restored by this new and more humane method. "Actina" has been tested in thousands of cases and has effected marvelous results, many people testifying that it saved their eyesight. So confident are the owners that this device is an instrument of great merit that they will give absolutely a free trial. They want everyone interested to make a thorough investigation and a personal test of "Actina." One will be sent on trial postpaid so that any person can give it a test.

They issue a book—a Treatise on Disease—which tells all about "Actina," the diseases it will remove, what others think of it, what marvelous results it has effected, and all about the responsibility of its owners—all will be sent absolutely free upon request. This book should be in the home of every family. Address Actina Appliance Company, Dept. 342R, 811 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CANCER CURED

WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS.
Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Eczema and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. Address
DR. BYE, Cor. 9th & Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

911

The above is the number of the present issue of The Progressive Thinker as printed at the top of the first page right hand corner. If this number corresponds with the figures on your wrapper, then the time you have paid for has expired, and you are requested to renew your subscription. This number at the right hand corner of the first page is advanced each week, showing the number of Progressive Thinkers issued up to date. Keep watch of the number on the tag of your wrapper.

The Psychic Riddle.

By I. K. Funk, D.D., LL.D., Editor-in-Chief of "The Standard Dictionary"; Author of "The Widow's Mite, and Other Psychic Phenomena," "The Next Step in Evolution," etc.

A book full of psychic suggestions, supported by startling experiences, all told in a wonderfully conservative way. It harmonizes with the judgment pronounced by The Review of Reviews, New York, on the author's previous publication of this subject: "A very sensible, cautious, level-headed piece of work all through;" and also with the judgment on the same book pronounced by the Cleveland Record: "There has never been so fair and painstaking a book put forth on this subject as this one." Price, $1.00.

THE LEADING WORKS OF E. D. BABBITT, M. D.

The Principles of Light and Color.

Superbly issued, royal 8vo, with over 200 engravings and colored plates. Price, $5.00; in massive binding, imitating half Russia, 50c. extra. "An imposing volume of nearly 600 pages. Shows a great amount of research on the part of the author. Will prove a great acquisition to Scientific Libraries."—N. Y. Herald.

Human Culture and Cure.

In six parts, five parts being already issued.
PART I. The Philosophy of Cure, including Methods and Instruments: 75 cents.
PARTS III and IV in one volume; $1.00. Part III treats of Mental and Psychological forces; Part IV of the Nervous System and Insanity. "This work discloses for the first time the chemical mystery of mental phenomena, throws the first clear light upon the nature and processes of hypnotism and all kindred psychological phenomena which have never before been explained or understood. Dr. Babbitt has here not only given the rationale of hypnotism, psychometry, clairvoyance and mental science, including the mysterious subject of memory, but has furnished abundant illustrations of their working. The subject of Phreno-physiognomy alone is of priceless value as enabling us to understand our fellow beings around us."—Prof. W. C. Bowman.
PART V. "The Bodily Organs, their Diseases and the Great Natural Methods for their Cure," aims to be the most practical work on healing thus far given to the public. Price, $1.

Health and Power.

Brief Natural Treatment for 110 Diseases. Price, 8½ cents. "Worth its weight in diamonds."
SOCIAL UPBUILDING. Paper, 15 cents.
RELIGION.—A most thoughtful and excellent work. Price, cloth, $1.10; paper, 60 cents.

Force and Matter By Ludwig Buechner. A celebrated book. A profound work upon a profound subject. Price, cloth, $1.00.

Reincarnation, or the Doctrine of the Soul's Successive Embodiments, examined and discussed pro and con, by Dr. J. M. Peebles versus Dr. Helen Densmore and W. J. Colville. Price 30 cts.

Heaven Revised A Narrative of Personal Experiences after the Change Called Death. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey. A very interesting and instructive work. Price 25 cts.

The Living Decalogue From Sinai to Zion. By W. J. COLVILLE. A series of twelve lectures, intended as simple, practical expositions of the Ten Commandments in the spiritual aspect. Price, 50 cents.

THE NEW LIFE,

By Leroy Berrier. An eminently suggestive work, of excellent tendencies, treating of the mind's relations to the physical organism, and the power of thought in the upbuilding of health and character. Cloth, $1.

New Testament Stories COMICALLY ILLUSTRATED. Drawings by Watson Heston, with critical and humorous comments upon the texts. Heston's drawings are incomparable, and excruciatingly funny. One must see the book to appreciate it; the pictorial satire cannot be told. It will make you laugh heartily. Price in board, $1.00; cloth, $1.50.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

A MASTERLY WORK.

Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth
By Prof. W. M. Lockwood.

A masterly presentation of an important subject. A powerful argument along new and scientific lines, establishing on a scientific basis the fact of the continuity of personal individual conscious selfhood after laying aside the physical body. A book of rare value. With several fine illustrations. Cloth, $1.00.

General Survey.

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Its Work, and General Progress, the World Over.

THIS GENERAL SURVEY DEPARTMENT IS ONLY INTENDED TO CHRONICLE THE ENGAGEMENTS AND WORK OF SPEAKERS AND MEDIUMS. A REPORT OF WHAT THE VARIOUS SPEAKERS SAY WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED, AS WE HAVE NOT SPACE SUFFICIENT FOR THAT PURPOSE.

KEEP COPIES of your poems sent to this office, for they will not be returned if we have not space to use them.

The Song Cards for sale at this office at $4 per hundred, by mail $4.50, are the help you need in society work.

Mrs. Mattie Burnham, Secretary, writes from Macomb, Ill.: "The third Sunday in this month our society met for the purpose of re-electing new officers. The following persons were elected: Mrs. Lida Walthers, President; Mrs. Mattie Burnham, Secretary; Leroy Frowein, Treasurer; C. M. Burnham, John Frowein and John Masterson, Trustees. We have a few earnest and faithful workers that want to see the cause grow in Macomb. While Mrs. Nellie Davis of Kewanee, Ill., has accepted the pastorate of our church, she has been unable, through sickness in the family, to fill the place as she would like to have done, she created a great interest the time she has been with us. Her remarkable gift of automatic writing with both hands, and quoting poetry at the same time, has convinced many of the truths of spirit return. It seems that the spirit world has established a post office through her where they can reach their loved ones. Many are the beautiful uplifting messages we have received through this channel. Our society is desirous of getting some good speaker and message bearer to locate here for a short or long period, according to the satisfaction given. Any such desiring to live for a time in our clean little city, will please write me to that effect at No. 518 W. McDonough street, Macomb, Ill."

F. M. H., of Detroit, Mich., writes: "The Rev. May A. Stein closed her home circles Friday evening, April 19, at her home, 59 Seventh street. For the past year her home on Friday evenings has been crowded so that many had to be turned away. Her numerous calls to Michigan City, Ind., necessitates her closing the circles sooner than usual. The patrons of her circles for the last year have been delighted and many a sorrowing heart has been soothed, and hope of a glad meeting just beyond the veil, has been implanted in the breasts of those who have listened to her messages of love and sympathy, and the noble and uplifting thoughts that have emanated from her controls. She has been ably assisted by her co-worker, Dr. Burroughs, who by the noble sentiments uttered, has given courage to many."

Samuel Golden writes: "The First German Spiritualist Society is holding meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Gartleman's Hall, 762 W. 13th street, corner S. Ashland avenue. The society has now five acres of ground, making a very pleasant place for picnics. The society will hold its first picnic of the season on its grounds known as Jestram's Grove (where the Old Home is to be built), on May 19. We hope to open the door of the home on same date."

A. W. Moore writes from Rochester, N. Y.: "The discourses delivered by Rev. Dr B. F. Austin of Plymouth Spiritual Church each Sunday are attracting a good deal of notice in this orthodox community. People are coming to Plymouth Church to hear this, to them, new and beautiful philosophy. Each Sunday there are new people in the pews, who come to listen to Dr. Austin's sermons. Many scholarly men and women are taking in the teachings of Spiritualism, who have hitherto treated the subject with contempt. In short, Dr. Austin, by his quiet but forcible methods, is gaining many converts to our cause."

Dr. Williams writes from Cherryvale, Kan.: "I see much of late said about the weight of the soul. The Soul, of course, has weight, as everything has weight, but to detect it is another matter. Now, in justice to our mediums and our cause, I wish to state that Dr. A. J. Davis, some 40 years ago, said the Soul weighed about one ounce. Come, dear Brother Davis, and tell us more about it. My health is now better, and am trying to found an Old People's Home here, and wish to correspond with friends who may help. I live in a little house alone, and I fear sickness and suffering."

Mrs. Minnie Garrow writes from Decatur, Ill.: "The Spiritual Science Society of Decatur, Ills., is still in existence, holding meetings regularly every Sunday. We have earnest workers, ever ready to spread the grand truths of Spiritualism. We have elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: President, Thomas Kizer; vice-president, Minnie Garrow; treasurer, V. Barber; secretary, Henry Daut; trustees, George Bicuell, Mrs. V. Masterson, and Aaron Smick. On April 17, the Ladies' Aid Society held a social in Fraternal Hall, and cleared a neat sum. A fine program was given. The ladies pieced and quilted a beautiful quilt, and sold chances at 10 cents each. There were games of various kinds—a fish pond and Gypsy booth furnished the amusement of the evening. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. All had a fine time. The lucky number on the quilt, 118, was drawn by Mrs. Norley, of Texas, and our president of the Aid Society will send the quilt to her. Much of the success of our Ladies' Aid Society is due to the Good work of our sisters, Mrs. Masterson and Mrs. Kizer. They are faithful workers indeed, and we are all working hard, for we want to have a speaker the latter part of May and June, and are working for that aim."

Harriet N. Craft writes from Monson, Me.: "Wellman C. Whitney, psychic, of Springfield, Mass., delivered two lectures here, followed by spirit messages, on the evenings of the 25th and 26th of April. The meeting was a great success, and we hope to have him again next October, and the following eight cold months."

G. P. Sullivan writes from La Crescenta, Cal.: "The work of the Children's Fraternal Home is progressing nicely, and the general interest in the same is growing among among our Spiritualist friends. On the 10th of March a tally-ho party of twenty odd people from Los Angeles, and a few from Pasadena, consisting of officers of the State Spiritualist Association, and representatives of various local city societies, came out to the Home on an official visit, and enjoyed as they unanimously expressed it, the time of their lives. Expressions of delight and satisfaction at what they found as to the character, condition and environment of the work and home were abundant. In response to the appeal made some months ago by Mrs. Longley, in The Progressive Thinker, we have received contributions and words of sympathy from London, England, Honolulu, Canada and all parts of the United States in amounts aggregating $46.35. We are looking forward to the time when we shall be able to enlarge the work and provide for more of the Father's outcast ones. At present we are doing to the limit of our strength and ability."

Correspondent writes: "The Psychic Research Society of Rockford, Ill., is glad to report that Sunday, April 28, was a red letter day with them. Will J. Erwood, who has no occasion to add the prefix of Rev. to his name to make himself appear a lecturer of ability, gave us two addresses, afternoon and evening, followed by messages, each one of which was fully recognized by the recipient. The addresses were models of learning, eloquence, rhetorical and logical finish, with occasional streaks of mirth and pathos. Mr. Erwood ministered for a month to the society a year ago, with very general satisfaction, but he outdid himself on this occasion. He has just removed to Elkhart, Indiana, with his interesting family, where he has a permanent engagement. Wherever employed he will add largely to the growth and prosperity of the society. The Spiritualists of Rockford will rejoice to hear from him from their platform whenever he shall travel in this direction.

Mabel D. Page writes: "The First Spiritual Church of Fall River, Mass., is in a very prosperous condition under the efficient management of the present officers. The President, Mrs. Hattie W. Wood, has been connected with the society for thirteen years as the President. The society has recently purchased and furnished a church, the interior of which will delight the soul of any medium called to its platform. The society has held many pleasant events in this church, but none have proved more successful than the Indian Peace Council held, April 22. A goodly number of mediums were present and took part in the march, which was had by its president, Mrs. Wood, followed by Mrs. Lizzie D. Butler, Mrs. Mabel Page and Miss Vera Page, of Lynn; also several mediums of Fall River, all dressed in costume. A very enjoyable evening it proved to be, and a goodly sum was added to the funds of the church. Brother McLaren has recently occupied the office of treasurer and Brother R. L. Grinnell is corresponding secretary.'

Ferd. C. Suhrer writes: "On Sunday, April 28, another large congregation attended the services of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists in the afternoon. Brother Thomas Grimshaw favored us with one of his soul-stirring addresses, after which we were treated to some exceptionally rare demonstrations of test-giving by the guides of our message-bearers in reading sealed letters, and in the circles. Our concert at 7 displayed new talent in the boy soprano, Edmund Miller, Miss Pearl English, piano soloist, and Master Earl English, violin soloist, all of whom showed marked ability, and we are pleased to announce, Edmund Miller will be with us all during the month of May. Rev. Thomas Grimshaw gave us another spiritual feast in the evening, which was enjoyed by an audience that completely filled our large hall. "The Origin and Destiny of Man" proved an interesting subject that was freighted with education, instruction and advice, and so intent were we that we forgot for the time our homes, our neighbors and ourselves. We felt inspired, strengthened and better able to say why we are Spiritualists. Brother Grimshaw's coming was something looked forward to, and his departure is a matter of keen regret. Sunday, May 5th, will be Medium's Day, and as that tests and messages both afternoon and evening we expect a crowded hall. President McDougal, of the Psychic Research Society of Rockford, will be with us on Sunday, May 12. We will benefit by this exchange of talent with other societies, and in this way build up and maintain an exchange system that will extend to every town and city, furnishing the ablest talent in the country. Be with us and help spread the gospel of sunshine. We give you the opportunity. Hygeia Hall, 406 Ogden avenue, corner Robey street, top floor."

Ada M. Camé writes from Cambridge, Mass.: "The Cambridge Spiritual Industrial Society held a meeting April 26, in Cambridge Lower Hall, 631 Mass. ave. Miss Nellie Putney was the speaker, and made many friends during the two meetings she was with the society. The second and fourth Fridays of May, Mrs. Katie Ham will be the speaker, and the meeting will close until October."

Mrs. Squire writes: "Frank Smith, the healer and medium, will continue the meetings in Van Buren Opera House, corner of California and Madison streets, Sunday evening at 7:30 assisted by the best speakers and mediums."

Samuel A. Huntington writes of the Progressive Spiritual Society: "The last of Rev. F. A. Wiggin's instructive lectures and ballot readings occurred on the 25th ult. He chose for his theme, "The philosophy of Spiritualism," giving one of his ablest addresses, after which he devoted half an hour to ballot reading. The president, Mr. Sheriff, on behalf of the society thanked Mr. Wiggin for his grand work, to which he fittingly responded. At the Sunday services, April 28, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, of Marlboro, Mass., was the speaker and message bearer. Her subject, "The more we become spiritualized the more we become harmonized," giving a fine address, and many messages. Commencing Sunday, May 5, we will hold a developing circle weekly at 11 a. m. Mrs. M. A. Bonney, of Boston, will be the speaker on May 5, and Oliver Thomas Newcomb of Boston, on May 12. Our regular monthly supper will be held on the third Thursday in May."

BEAR IN MIND that the editor of The Progressive Thinker is in no wise responsible for the views expressed by contributors. He may, or may not, agree with their respective views.

TAKE NOTICE.—Correspondents are requested when writing for this paper to use either a typewriter or a pen, with black ink. Write on only one side of the paper, and in a plain, legible hand, and thus avoid the necessity of preparing your copy for the printer. Please bear this in mind.

Boston Meetings.

The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society meets in Appleton Hall, 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass., every Friday.

The Ladies' Lyceum Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., every Wednesday.

The Ladies' Industrial Union meets in Dwight Hall, 514 Tremont street, every Thursday.

Mrs. G. Hamilton writes that Mrs. E. Nickel, 467 Wells street, trumpet medium, will hold trumpet circles on Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock, and developing circles on Monday evenings.

K. Childs writes frim Grand Rapids, Mich.: "Your paper is the very best. It must go with me to the Borderland. How can anyone accuse you of being opposed to Spiritualism, when your paper is the very mouthpiece for angels, both arisen and earth dwellers? Few papers have such a corps of interesting writers. I am proud of Brother Barrett. Standing in the position he does, yet daring to speak the plain truths he utters; but he knows he has good support in you. Long may you live on earth, a bulwark against wrong. Our cause is improving in Grand Rapids. All the Societies are once more untied, which bespeaks growth, and upliftment. This is the home of two of the finest speakers any city can boast of, Mrs. Dr. Morrell and Dr. Edson A. Titus, the former a young speaker developed here where she is known and beloved. We cannot keep her with us much of the time, for her fame has gone out, and she is eagerly sought after far and wide. Dr. Titus, once the pride of an Eastern Methodist Conference, had the courage and principle to withdraw from position, popularity, money and hosts of friends, to work for the angels, and the then unpopular cause of Spiritualism. Always a medium, years have not power to dim his intellect, or still the burning fire of his soul."

We would inform good brother Childs that the rotten fake element in our ranks, and their sympathizers, started this infamous lie that "we are not a Spiritualist." Ever since we were born we have had visions, at times seen spirits, and our own experiences prove spirit return to be a grand truth.—Editor.

E. F. writes from Rogers Park, Chicago: "Last Sunday Evening the Progressive Spiritual Society enjoyed once more the presence of their assistant pastor, Mrs. Laura Fixen, more so her lecture. She is a member of the Progressive Society, but can seldom be seen by the other members for she travels a good deal of her time. During her lecture she took the Universe to pieces, like the watchmaker his clock, not to clean it, but to admire the creator. Mrs. F. E. Larsoner was assistant message bearer to our pastor, Mrs. Hilbert."

Rev. Albert P. Blinn writes of the First Spiritual Union, Norwich, Ct.: "On Sunday, April 21, we had with us Mrs. A. J. Pettingill of Malden, Mass., and her message work was very satisfactory indeed. At the service in the morning the writer gave the invocation and the rest of the service was devoted to messages, each one being a splendid demonstration of the psychic power possessed by Mrs. Pettingill. On the Tuesday evening following, Mrs. Pettingill gave a seance as a benefit to the Union. A large audience was in attendance, and after the invocation by the writer and a splendidly rendered solo, "Lead Kindly Light," by Mrs. Frank R. Merrill, Mrs. Pettingill devoted the rest of the evening to messages, everyone being recognized. It was an unusually interesting meeting and quite an ovation was given the medium at its close. On Thursday evening, April 25, the Helping Hand gave a supper, about 125 guests being present, and following the supper a dramatic entertainment was given by the young people, which was a huge success. It consisted of recitations by Ruth and Harlow Bogue, and Mr. R. E. Mowry; a duet by Misses Hadee Blackstone and Annie Leopold, and a comedy entitled "A Picked Up Dinner," in which Mrs. Charles E. Burdick, Miss Blackstone and the writer made a decided hit. Our meetings will be held during the Sundays of May, and there is some talk of continuing our concert services right through the summer. On May 15 and 16 the young people are to present the three act drama, "Our Folks." Our attendance through the past season has been large, and now that the season is nearing its close we feel that an excellent work has been accomplished for the Cause in this city."

Kate W. Grove writes: "With the last Sunday in April Mrs. Hamilton Gill completed her series of meetings at the Van Buren Opera House. These meetings have been very interesting and successful, and with a constantly increasing attendance. This final meeting was very appropriately made a memorial service for a number of old workers who had passed on to the higher life, and for some who still linger on the earthly shore. The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers; the music was sympathetic; the lecture (subject: 'In the Father's house are many mansions"), was full of consolation and hope, and the many messages from the angel world were warmly welcomed. Altogether it was a beautiful service and deeply appreciated. Those who have attended Mrs. Gill's meetings greatly regret that they have been discontinued; but after a summer's rest it is probable that they will be recommenced in the fall. During the month of May she will be at her home, 891 West Adams street, second, where she will be pleased to meet her friends at her Thursday night circles. Later she expects to visit Michigan."

J. E. Coe writes: "The Golden Star Center Spiritual Society is holding a fine series of metings at Star Lodge Hall, 378 South Western avenue, with such workers as Mrs. Kusserow, Emma J. Hanson, Mrs. Ada Za Zalle, and Susie Thompson, and the work done is of the best. Come one and all and see. Shall continue meetings through May."

Mrs. Rose L. Bushnell-DonnElly of Los Angeles, Cal., writes of Mrs. Althea C. Briggs: "She is a grand scholar all along the lines of progression. She is a fine clairvoyant and medium."

Rev. Alice Baker will be in Oklahoma City, May 14, from 10 o'clock a. m., to 3 p. m., at the Grand Hotel, where she will be glad to see all who are interested in building up the cause in Oklahoma. She goes from there to South McArthur, I. T. Those desiring her services write to her there at once. Home address 449 Live Oak street, Dallas, Texas.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE OHIO STATE SPIRITUALIST ASSOCIATION, FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, MAY 24, 25 AND 26, 1907, AT SHERWOOD, OHIO.

Mary B. Hill writes: "The last official meeting of the Band of Harmony was held at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Richmond, where members and friends received a most cordial welcome by the pastor and family. This being also the 23rd birthday of the Band of Harmony, everyone seemed to partake of the spirit and harmony of the occasion. There were several members present who were present at the organizing of the society, and others who had been known as the "Union," so the flow of spirit and harmony made the occasion a union in the holy tie of harmony. At the close of the afternoon session the tables were spread with choice and tempting dishes prepared by the ladies and family, where all joined in sociability until the evening session was called. Several new names were added to the membership, after which was the beautiful ceremony by Mrs. Richmond, of the christening of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Brunton. This being the date for the annual election of officers, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond was elected president; Mrs. Louisa Goodrich, vice-president; Mrs. S. J. Ashton, treasurer; Mrs. Mary B. Hill, recording secretary; Mrs. Ellis, cor. secretary. Business being closed there were short but glowing and encouraging speeches made, followed by spirit messages given by Mrs. Coombs, all being recognized. These meetings have awakened the dormant thoughts within many, and have revealed the beauties and abilities within the soul, and when this is better understood, greater numbers will follow this most radiant of all Light that has ever shone upon the world. The summer social will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich, 634 East avenue, Oak Park June 6. Lake street car or other cars to 48th street; there take Chicago avenue car. Come one and all to this haven of rest."

Mrs. Henrietta Lichtig writes: "I was called to Sturgis, Mich., to officiate at the funeral of Mrs. Ann Baker, April 9. Mrs. Baker was an old-time friend, having known her from my childhood days, and I rejoiced that I was given strength to officiate on this occasion. April 21st and 28th I was called to the Spiritualist Temple, of St. Louis to fill in my humble way the place of Mr. Grimshaw, while he lectured for the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists of Chicago. The evening of April 23, and 26, with the assistance of three St. Louis mediums, Mrs. Padman, Mrs. Hary, and another whose name I cannot recall, I held message seances in the Temple. It was a rare treat to be able to work in this beautiful Temple, surrounded by uplifting influences in the way of soul-inspiring music. Oh! that the Spiritualists of this land might have many more such temples to meet in. I was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, where, with two beautiful daughters and a son perfect harmony prevails. The happy days spent there, and the many kind words given me by the St. Louis Spiritualists will long be remembered by me. June 15, and 16th I expect to assist in the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Harmonial Society of Sturgis, Mich., one of the oldest in this country. With the exception of above dates, I have time in May and June. Societies wishing my services for lectures and messages, or for funerals can address me at 4746 Calumet ave., Chicago, Ill."

C. Fannie Allyn, whose lectures are always interesting, is lecturing this month at Watertown, N. Y. She can be addressed while there at No. 627 North 7th street.

The services of James Madison Allen, inspirational speaker, etc., can be secured the present season by addressing him at once, at No. 651 S. Grant Street, Springfield, Mo.

C. L. Hatch writes from 9 Appleton street, Boston, Mass.: "The First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society met as usual with the President, Mrs. Mattie E. A. Allbe, in the chair. The evening entertainment consisted of remarks by Mrs. Alice Waterhouse, Mrs. Ida P. A. Whitlock, Mrs. Moore. Mr. Cambridge, Mrs. Sears-Hill, and Mrs. Mason. Mrs. Annie Chapman gave fine tests. Mr. Cambridge gave a vocal selection, Mrs Mary F. Lovering, accompanist. Next Friday evening a good program is to be furnished. Supper at 6:15 p. m. May 31 will be Memorial Day for this society."

The friends of Mrs. Cowan, the well known test medium, will be pained to learn that she was in the terrible fire at the Lotus Club, and is now at the County Hospital, where she was taken at the time of the fire. She is badly burned, and has a dislocated hip. Mrs. Cowan is a member of the Sunflower Club, and was always ready to assist in givings readings at the Tea Parties. We regret this trouble has come to her, and her husband.

E. I. Ripley writes: "On Wednesday evening, May 4, Mrs. Anna Coggshall of Lowell, Mass, gave a seance at the First Spiritual Temple, Boston, Mass., and all messages were recognized."

Georgia Gladys Cooley is now in Pittsburg, Pa., giving her attention to the wants of the First Spiritual Society, with her logical lectures and appreciatiable messages. She is a very busy medium, and is deserving of much praise for her honest, and conscientious work.

Mrs. Mullen has been ill at the Jefferson Park Hospital for the last four weeks, but is now improving. We hope she will soon be well. She is an excellent medium.

Members of the Sunflower Club are requested to be present at the business meeting on Tuesday, May 14; also remember the Tea Party on May 28. Come and bring your friends. A reading is given by one of our mediums with each cup of tea.

G. H. Brooks, President of the Wisconsin State Association of Spiritualists, has located at No. 257 St. Charles street, Wauwatosa, Wis., where he can be addressed in the future for engagements to lecture.

Oscar Radesy writes: "I am ever so much obliged to you for that premium book 'The Unknown Life of Jesus Christ,' by Notovitch. Very interesting indeed, and nothing but the truth! is in it."

Carrie L. Hatch writes: "The Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists will hold a mass meeting in Worcester, May 24. The best of talent is expected, Dr. G. A. Fuller, president; Mrs. Carrie F. Lovering, treasurer; Mrs. Susie C. Clark, Mrs. Maude Litch, Mrs. Alice Whall, Mr. R. F. Churchill, Mrs. B. W. Belcher, and Mrs. Juliett Yeaw, directors. Fine music. Everyone invited. Meetings free to all, to be held in G. A. R. Hall, 35 Pearl street at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.; meeting to be held in conjunction with the Worcester Spiritual Society. It will serve supper at 6 p. m."

Your correspondent attended the afternoon meeting of the Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, last Sunday, and being call upon to make a 15 minutes talk, responded in his off-hand way. The meeting was well attended and all appeared to be greatly interested in the services. The reading of sealed letters was good all through; all the mediums did themselves great credit.

Mrs. Hilbert's meetings at the corner of North avenue and Burling st., are attended by a very intelligent class of people who are deeply interested in her work. Mrs. Dr. Caird did good reading from sealed letters, as did Mrs. Hilbert, also. Your correspondent tried to interest them for about 30 minutes, and was invited to call and do so some more at another time.

Dr. John C. Wyman writes: "At the closing services of the Cathedral Conference of the First Spiritual Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., held on Sunday, April 28th, at 3 p. m., Mrs. Carrie S. Thomas (a resident of this city) delivered an inspirational address that was marked in its fervor and eloquence, as well as its logic and lucidity, and this was followed by her giving a series of important spirit messages and tests, all replete with wise counsel, encouragement and hearty good cheer to the numerous recipients. Mrs. Thomas is well known to and is held in the highest estimation by, the Spiritualists of Brooklyn, New York, Jersey City, and the Eastern States, while her record is a splendid one at the various Spiritualistic camp centers, where her services as lecturer and psychic are in great demand every summer. We can cordially recommend Mrs. Thomas to all societies desiring to have the philosophy of Spiritualism intelligently and agreeably presented from their platforms, and we can assure them that they will find her spirit messages very interesting and reliable."

Frank Ripley has been re-engaged at Conneaut, Ohio, for the month of May. He has the Sundays of June open for engagement to lecture, and give messages. He has the following camp meeting engagements: Wonewoc, Wis., from July 14th to August 12th; Clinton, Iowa camp, from Aug. 14th to the 25th. He has open dates for September. He will be at the Cleveland (Ohio) Spiritual Temple October and November. He can be engaged for December, January and February.

A STIRRING CALL.

Lake Pleasant Campers and Friends Rally for the Old Camp.

A great fire has struck Lake Pleasant, but the hearts of its friends are stout.

Let us all rally for good old Lake Pleasant. Come, every one who loves this beautiful summer home. Let us gather this season and prepare to rebuild our homes.

We can live in tents or portable cottages, until we can erect something more substantial.

We have the greatest spiritual truth ever made known to mankind. Lake Pleasant has been for over thirty years a brilliant light amid the theological darkness of this age.

The creeds are the guides of people who were ignorant of the outcome of earth life. They are not the whole truth.

The spirit world has given us the basic facts of man's destiny.

Let Lake Pleasant continue to scintillate with spiritual light.

Friends, rally, and keep open this gateway to the spiritual spheres!

H. A. BUDINGTON.

Springfield, Mass.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

[Obituaries to the extent of ten lines only will be inserted free. All in excess of ten lines will be charged at the rate of fifteen cents per line. About 7 words constitute a line.]

My husband, Geo. H. Kibbe, passed very peacefully to spirit life, March 29, at Dolgeville, N. Y. Although not a Spiritualist, he spent four weeks at Lily Dale, ten years since, receiving slate writing from his dear ones; so he knew something of this truth.

ALICE R. A. KIBBE.

Passed to the higher life, J. W. Crittenden, in Jackson, Mich. He was 82 years of age, and an ardent Spiritualist. He left the request that the writer of this should give his funeral address, which she did, on April 22. A loyal and true friend of the Cause of Spiritualism has joined the ranks of the true and the leal. He had long wished to go.

JULIA M. WALTON.

Passed to the spirit life from Jackson, Mich, Jessie Johnson, young and beautiful, and possessed of a loyal and sweet disposition. Jessie had been a favorite, and a singer in an orthodox church. Her mother said to the writer, "Mrs Walton, we could have gotten another minister, but we wanted you, and the comfort that you could give." The funeral was held April 24 at the home.

JULIA M. WALTON.

Passed to spirit life from his home, at Springfield, Mo., April 14, 1907, Edward Maston Hendricks, M. D., aged 74 years. He was one of the founders and the first president of the State Spiritualist Association with its headquarters here, and has been a faithful member of the Spiritual Science Church. A man of sterling integrity, deep earnestness and strong convictions, he was highly respected and beloved, and will be cherished in many hearts as a true friend and a faithful pioneer worker for progress and reform. J. MADISON ALLEN.

"Talmagean Inanities, Incongruities, Inconsistencies and Blasphemies." A Review of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt and Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage's oft-repeated articles upon Spiritualism. By Moses Hull. Price 10 cents.

"Materialization." By Mme. E. d-Esperance and Rev. B. F. Austin. Excellent. Price 10 cents.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us" and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"The Jesuits." By Rev. B. F. Austin, A. M., B. D. An excellent pamphlet. Price, 15 cents.

"Longley's Beautiful Songs." A new edition comprising in one volume the four parts heretofore published, to which is added part five, also a number of the author's most popular songs, including "Only a Thin Veil Between Us," and its "Companion Piece." Cloth, 75 cents. Boards, 50 cents.

"Continuity of Life a Cosmic Truth," By Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood. The work of a strong, logical thinker, on a deeply important subject. Price, cloth, $1.

The Unknown Life of Christ.

A New edition of the Unknown Life of Christ is just from the press, and we are able to supply all demands. For the benefit of new subscribers we have added thereto two remarkable lectures, one by Prof. Henry S. Olcott, and the other by Miss Elizabeth Harlow, on the "Dangers of Psychism," a very valuable, attractive and instructive addition to this excellent book, and which should be carefully read by every Spiritualist, investigator and occult student in the land. This book is gotten up in fine style, and the additions thereto will enable it to serve a double purpose. It is still sent out as an absolute gift to all who send in $1.00 for The Progressive Thinker one year, and 10 cents in stamps to pay postage on the book.

Have You Read OUR PREMIUM BOOK OFFER?

Truly, the world has NEVER SEEN the like before. Search the annals of history, ANCIENT AND MODERN; critically examine the history of Spiritualism; look here and there, in every nook and corner of the world, and you CANNOT find a parallel to the offer made in reference to these THIRTEEN remarkable PREMIUM BOOKS. They constitute a wonderfully valuable Spiritualistic and Occult LIBRARY, and are furnished at a nominal sum. All are substantially bound and neatly printed, and those who purchase them are DELIGHTED WITH THEM.

We have now THIRTEEN magnificent PREMIUM BOOKS which you can select from.

GEMS OF THOUGHT, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

Any one of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 25 cents. This is the price, remember, when you order only one book in connection with a yearly subscription. The paper, one year, and one Premium Book, $1.25. But if you order more than one Premium Book the price is as follows:

Any two of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price 70 cents.

Any three of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.10.

Any four of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.50.

Any five of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $1.75.

Any six of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.05.

Any seven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.35.

Any eight of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.65.

Any nine of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $2.90.

Any ten of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.10.

Any eleven of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.40.

Any twelve of the Thirteen Premium Books you may order, price $3.85.

Lastly, all of these THIRTEEN Premium Books here announced are sent out, all postage prepaid, for 4.15, something never before equalled in this country or Europe.

Bear in mind that every order for a Premium Book must be accompanied with a yearly subscription for The Progressive Thinker, which is $1. We repeat that the world has never seen the like of it before.

OUR THIRTEEN REMARKABLE PREMIUM BOOKS FOR $4.15.

The following is the list of titles of the Twelve Premium Books:

1—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 1.

2—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 2.

3—The Encyclopedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit World, Vol. 3. These three volumes have been prepared by J. R. Francis. They contain invaluable data.

4—Art Magic, or Mundane, Sub-Mundane and Super-Mundane Spiritism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

5—Ghost Land, Spiritualism, Occultism, by Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

6—The Next World Interviewed, by Mrs. S. G. Horn, a most remarkable medium.

7—The Occult Life of Jesus, by Alexander Smythe, a medium of rare gifts.

8—A Wanderer in the Spirit Lands. Translated by A. Farnese, a wonderful English medium.

9—The Religion of Man and Ethics of Science, by Hudson Tuttle.

10—Seers of the Ages, or Spiritualism Past and Present, by Dr. J. M. Peebles.

11—The Great Debate Between Moses Hull and W. F. Jamieson.

12—Letters from the Spirit World, written through the mediumship of Carlyle Petersilea.

13—Gems of Thought, by SEVENTEEN leading authors, is our last Premium Book.

ESOTERIC LESSONS.

This work includes "Personified Unthinkables," "First Lessons in Reality," and "A Tour Through the Zodiac." This is an interesting production of occult thought and will well repay careful study and meditation by all occultists. Price, cloth, $1.60.

THE OHIO STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Place of Holding the Convention Changed.

A majority of the members of the O. S. A. have requested the president of the above named association to hold the next state convention at Sherwood, Defiance county, Ohio. Under these circumstances, therefore, I, Fred D. Dunakin, president of the Ohio State Spiritualist Association, do instruct you, Carl A. Sollinger, secretary of the O. S. A., to call our next annual convention for the year 1907, for Sherwood. Notify all officers and delegates to meet at said place, May 24, 25 and 26, to transact the business and perform the duties pertaining to said convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge, so come and insure success, and live a few days in the country. Further information given by the secretary.

By order of

FRED D. DUNAKIN,
President O. S. A.

CARL A. SOLLINGER, Secretary,
4405 Clark Ave. S. W., Cleveland, O.

PUBLICATIONS OF HUDSON TUTTLE.

THE ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM: A Manual of Spiritual Science and Philosophy. Price, $1.25; postage, 10 cts.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOD and Christ Ideas. Price, $1.25; postage 10 cents.

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the use of Societies, Lyceums, Sunday Schools and the Home. A manual of physical, intellectual and spiritual culture, containing a collection of Music and Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for Sessions, Parliamentary Rules, instructions for organizing and conducting Lyceums, instructions in Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc. A book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

Contains One hundred and twenty of the author's best poems, embracing a wide range of subjects and versatility in composition; historic, heroic, pathetic, humorous and descriptive. They are admirably adapted for recitations. The book also contains five songs, with music by the eminent composer, James G. Clark. 250 pages, beautifully bound. Portrait of author. Price $1.00, postpaid.

ASPHODEL BLOOMS AND OTHER OFFERINGS.

This volume is dedicated: "To those whose thoughts and longings reach into the Unseen Land of Souls this handful of Asphodels, mixed with common flowers is offered, hoping to give rest and pleasure while waiting at the way station on the journey thither." It contains one hundred and thirty-nine poems, and twenty storiettes, a part of the latter by Clair Tuttle, in her most charming style. 285 pages, six full page illustrations, among which are likenesses of the author and Clair Tuttle; beautifully bound in blue, with silver embossing. Price, $1.00, prepaid.

ANGELL PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education.—For use in entertainments managed by Societies, Lyceums, Bands of Mercy, or individuals aiming to establish right over wrong, kindness over cruelty, knowledge over ignorance, and justice over all. The plan is this: Some large church or public hall is secured; several societies are invited to send their best speaker or reciter to compete for the prize medal; some prominent citizen presides; other prominent citizens act as the committee of award, and a small admission fee, ten or twenty cents, pays all the costs, and leaves a handsome balance. Price, 25 cents, postpaid.

Published by HUDSON TUTTLE, Berlin Heights Ohio.

LIFE'S PROGRESSION.

"There is no death; there are no dead."

These words stand out on the cover of Edward C. Randall's new book. They are a challenge to the orthodox world, and through all of its pages runs this challenge to those whose ideas of God, of heaven, of hell, of a future life are based strictly upon the Bible. Yet Mr. Randall believes in life hereafter, based on positive knowledge given him from the living friends passed to the life beyond. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY.

By Thomas Carlyle.

A remarkable book by a remarkable man. Marked by terse strength and vigor, deep thought, philosophy and dramatic tensity of earnestness. A notable literary effort. A fine edition in cloth. Price 50 cents.

What All the World's a-Seeking.

RALPH WALDO TRINE.

Each is building his world from within; thought is the builder; for thoughts are forces,—subtle, vital, irresistible, omnipotent,—and according as used do they bring power or impotence, peace or pain, success or failure.—From Title page.

The above books are beautifully bound in gray-green ralsed cloth, stamped in deep old green and gold, with gilt top. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

FROM SOUL TO SOUL.

By Emma Rood Tuttle. This volume contains the best poems of the author, and some of the best popular songs with the music by eminent composers. The poems are admirably adapted for recitations. 225 pages, beautifully bound. Price $1.

WORLD MAKING.

A scientific explanation of the birth, growth and death of worlds. By Samuel Phelps Leland. Ph. D., LL. D. Nicely bound in cloth. Price 75 cents.

CURED. WORRY, HURRY, SCURRY, FLURRY.

By William E. Towne. Learn how to cast away unnecessary care. This book points the way. Price, 25 cents.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The New York State Association of Spiritualists.

The annual convention of the New York State Association of Spiritualists will be held at Plymouth Spiritualist Church, in the City of Rochester, June 7, 8 and 9. There will be three meetings daily; the day sessions for the first two days are to be business sessions, and the election of officers will occur Saturday afternoon, June 8. All evening meetings and the day sessions of Sunday will be devoted to lectures, music, spirit messages, and other phases of mediumship. A large number of eminent speakers and mediums will participate in the exercises. All auxiliary societies are expected to send delegates, and all individual members are invited to come and take part.

SARAH A. WOODRUFF,
Colden, N. Y. Secretary.

The Conclusion.

With this Number of The Progressive Thinker the Discussion carried on between the venerable and distinguished Lyman C. Howe and the Students of The Great Work is closed. It has created great interest, marked ability being exhibited on both sides.

THE DISCUSSION IN THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER BETWEEN MR. HOWE AND THE STUDENTS OF THE GREAT WORK, HAS CREATED WIDESPREAD INTEREST IN THE RANKS OF SPIRITUALISM. BOTH MR. HOWE AND THE AUTHOR ARE FIRM AND ENTHUSIASTIC BELIEVERS IN SPIRIT RETURN, AND AT THAT POINT THE DIVERGENCE COMMENCES, AS EXEMPLIFIED IN THE DISCUSSION THAT HAS BEEN CARRIED ON.

IT IS WITH GREAT PLEASURE THAT WE PUBLISH THE REPLY OF THE AUTHOR OF THE GREAT WORK TO THE LAST ARTICLE BY MR. HOWE, WHEREIN HE MAKES CLEAR HIS POSITION.

HERE IS A FACT SPIRITUALISTS THEMSELVES MUST CAREFULLY CONSIDER, THAT THE DIVERGENCE OF VIEWS BETWEEN MR. HOWE AND THE STUDENTS OF THE GREAT WORK, IS NO GREATER THAN THAT WHICH EXISTS IN THE RANKS OF SPIRITUALISM IN REFERENCE TO MANY IMPORTANT QUESTIONS, SUCH AS RE-INCARNATION OR RE-EMBODIMENT, OBSESSION, PRE-EXISTENCE, ETC. ALL BELIEVE IN SPIRIT RETURN, AND THERE THE DIVERGENCE COMMENCES, LEAVING EACH ONE TO ADOPT AS TRUTH THAT WHICH APPEALS TO HIS REASON.

LYMAN C. HOWE IN DEFENSE.

Light Not the Result of A Mixture of Colors—The Awful Doom of Countless Millions!

I would not multiply words of there be no further need to make clear my position; but I think there are several mistakes made by my critics that might be misleading if left without further analysis. Mr. Butler seems to think he has settled the question of the source of light — that it is the result of a mixture of colors" — by quoting from Mr. Gage's text-book. The master stroke of this authority is in the statement that "white light is not simple in its composition, but the result of a mixture of colors." Mr. Butler need not have been to the trouble of looking up this authority; for I could have told him the same thing. I might not be accepted as authority, but I should have told him precisely that, without consulting any book. I might not be able to prove it to his satisfaction, but I could present the theory as it is held by accredited scientists. Ever since I discussed the subject in my school days, I have understood and believed that white is a compound of colors; and later knowledge has taught me that all colors are due to wave motions in the ether.

Professor Tyndall is certainly as good authority as Dr. Gage. He states it in these words: "The color of light is determined solely by its wave length." "The ether waves gradually diminish in length from the red to the violet." "The length of a wave of red light is about 1-39,000 of an inch; that of the wave of violet light is about 1-57,500 of an inch. The waves which produce the other colors of the spectrum lie between these extremes." These colors can be blended into one compound, that is pure white. When Mr. Gage combines the prismatic colors to produce whiteness he does not create the light that is thus colored, but by means of light he gets the compound expression of all the prismatic colors in one, which he calls "white light." It is not light per se that is thus created; but the compound color derived from the union of the prismatic colors, producing one perfect white.

If light is "a result of a mixture of colors," will Mr. Butler give us a formula for the production of colors without light? Place pigments of yellow and indigo blue in a perfectly dark room, and how long before they will develope a white light?

If "light is a result of a mixture of colors," then colors are not dependent upon light for their existence. It used to be taught that "color is a property of light." Mr. Butler reverses this and makes light a property of color! White light can be produced in several ways; but it is the whiteness that is a result of the combination of color motions in the ether, and of course light must accompany all colors in all their changes.

Prof. Dolbear of Tufts College expresses it thus:

"Whiteness is therefore a compound sensation." "Formerly it was thought that white was only produced by the composition of all the colors of the spectrum in the same proportions they exist in it; but the same sensation of whiteness can be produced by red, green and violet, and by blue and yellow. This is not to be understood as applying to pigments, or paints, but to light itself." (Matter Ether Motion, page 165.)

Remember that it is SENSATION of WHITENESS that is "the result of a mixture of colors." If light were caused by this mixture, then all the colors of the spectrum must have been without light. What a spectrum that would be in total darkness!

Much more might be said in support of my position; but I think this is sufficient to satisfy every logical thinker that "ordinary light" is NOT "a result of the mixture of colors, but WHITE LIGHT may be produced by uniting various COLORED LIGHTS."

Now that one light may be made to blend with another in a way to abolish both, and create darkness is scientifically demonstrated; and it is not by provoking a quarrel between various colored lights that they knock each other out. Accepting the wave theory—which I think all physicists do—the explanation is very simple. But I will not take the time and room to explain it here. Suffice it that light added to light may produce darkness; and it does not require a special kind of light, or any particular color. But any light, so related that the crest of one system of waves, coincides with the sinus of another system, will cancel each other by abolishing the waves in both. This is undoubtedly transpiring all the time, in the common light of the sun. If it be held that one truth may be so related to another truth that both are neutralized and their light turned to darkness, I have no controversy with that as a theory; but I might call for the proof if it concerned my action or my faith.

But I think I have made it fairly clear that my criticism of the author's statement that "The presence of one light does not extinguish another light," is justified; for he makes no exceptions, or qualifications. But to make it stronger he adds: "it only multiplies its intensity and effect." Mr. Butler says: I have called this a gratuitous assumption, because it is assumed that the author of "The Great Work" teaches that all chance of leaving the way of destruction ends with physical death—that on traveling the pathway, which if continued in leads to destruction will necessarily continue to travel it to the end." Who has made any such assumption? It certainly cannot be found in anything I have written. On the contrary, I have not supposed that the fatal "mile-post" was on this plane at all. I supposed of course that the whole scene was laid in realms beyond the grave. If any such parting of ways at a special mile-post were on this physical plane, I think we should all know it; and I have never seen the shadow of it.

I had supposed it might be several hundred, or several thousand years in the future.

If there is anything in the book that implies that many who have passed the first mile-post, and taken the downward way, turn back and take the other path that leads to liberty and light, I have overlooked it. I see nothing to indicate such a possibility. If Mr. Butler will point to one sentence in this book that suggests, or clearly implies, that the great majority who take the path that leads to destruction, repent, and turn back, to travel the dismal, difficult, and narrow way that leads to liberty, I will give all the credit the hint deserves. Until this is done I insist that the whole chapter definitely implies that all who start that way continue the downward course to the end.

As to free will and choice we may gain nothing by discussion; but I regard it as a question of vital importance, since the recognition of universal causation and a perfect chain of interrelations upon all planes is the magic key to all philanthropic and reformatory success. The reign of chance which is inevitable if the will is free, has nothing upon which to predicate moral restraint, or directive education.

But I rarely find one who advocates it that seems competent to grasp the truth that law and order must be quite as pronounced upon the superior planes of being as on the purely physical. That in saying the Will is never free, I do not mean that some physical giant has every soul by the throat and by special force compels every act of the individual. But I do mean that there is no break in the operation of causes, and the dynamics of the moral and intellectual realm are quite as certain and orderly in directing events and ruling human conduct, as are the automatic relations in physical machines.

Mr. Butler makes me seem to contradict myself thus, after my words that "the will is an agent by means of which desires that create motives and dictate choice execute their wish," he comments thus: "According to this, man, though at no time possessing freedom of will, does possess the faculty of desiring and choosing," and he further comments: "This is a very fine distinction, for while he denies the sovereignty of the will he admits that of desire."

O, no. Desire is no more free than will. It is not self-creative. We can no more desire to be eternally miserable than we can will it. We all desire to be happy; and without some motive looking to benefits further on we cannot desire to be miserable; and if we do not desire it we cannot will it. I do not in this discussion use the word will as synonymous with choice; but as volition, which is the passive will in positive action. No one has more confidence in the efficacy and executive possibilities of the active will than the writer. But if it were free and independent I could not trust it at all. If I wished to control and correct some bad habits, my will might refuse to co-operate, and even apply its executive energy to defeat my purpose. But if compelled by antecedent causes, and the demands of my intellect, to execute my desires, I could trust it every time.

My critics have never answered my query, how the will can act without a motive or a cause directing it? If it is free and independent, all it does must be chance—uncaused effects. It amusing to note the way my critics echo and re-echo the stereotyped assertions of the power to choose, the power to determine, the power to will, the power to select and decide; as if I had disputed any of these powers. I have definitely stated that we not only can, but we MUST choose. We cannot refuse to choose. Mr. Butler acknowledges all I claim when he says: "That which we desire we love, and that which we love we invariably will and do." Again: "If I do not keep the moral law, it is because my love for it is lacking." But why is it lacking? Is love for the moral law a chance development? Is it an inheritance? Is it a result of education and discipline? Or is it chance? In any case is this lack a crime, or sin, to be counted against you?

Mr. Butler surprises me when he complains of my unjust treatment of the book. I have supposed I was giving full credit for the merits of "The Great Work." Even did the alleged defects exist, would that lessen the reviewer's moral obligation to give due prominence to the many points of excellence of the book? This seems to me a decidedly partisan complaint. I have quoted liberally from some of the best things I found, and added my unqualified approval. If I had reviewed the whole book, "chapter by chapter," as was originally planned to do, I might have given prominence to many other good points—real gems—and analyzed such passages as seemed ambiguous or unsound, that an unbiased judgment might be rendered. The most vital error—as it strikes me, and one to which my reason cannot assent, is the horrible destiny assigned for the vast majority of the human race. Mr. Butler contends that "no such conclusion can justly be drawn from the language," and says I "could have quickly settled the question in" my "favor" if I "had pointed out just one sentence in which the author says, or implies, that once the road is traveled it is never forsaken for the right way." Here is one. "Here, at this point of divergence, the column has forever divided, the many going north into Darkness and Bondage, and only the few going south into the Land of Liberty and light." "And still the ceaseless tide of humanity marches onward and still the many go North and the few go South." If this does not imply that there is no turning back and taking the unattractive, difficult and forbidding path to the South, after the column divides, and the mile-post is passed, what does it imply? There is no hint of any such change after the division of the column and the passing of the fatal mile-post." I think Mr. Butler will have to concede that the question is settled, by his own standard, in my favor. If this book, and the "Great School," have nothing better than this for the countless millions of the human race, the delights and glories of mastership for the few present but a feeble glimmer to light the infinite darkness, or give courage, hope and promise to broad minded philosophers, and philanthropic lovers of human kind.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

170 Liberty St., Fredonia, N. Y.

The Author of The Great Work Replies to Mr. Howe.

To the Editor: I appreciate most thoroughly your courteous consideration in asking me to write a brief commentary upon the work of Lyman C. Howe on "The Great Work," the same to appear in the same issue of your paper with his closing article.

While I hold myself under obligation to you for the generous motive which prompted the suggestion, yet it is with considerable reluctance and hesitation that I am about to avail myself of the opportunity you have so kindly offered me; my reluctance is for the following reasons:

1. When I gave the manuscript of the book to the publishers, and through them its contents to the public, I anticipated that it would elicit many differing opinions, judgments and criticisms from many different degrees and kinds of intelligence. Having anticipated this result, I was entirely willing that it should be so, and that the book should stand before the world as its own and only champion or defender. Personally, I am still of the same frame of mind. My purpose was to present to a critical public a work which would explain itself so clearly and so unmistakably as not to require "interpretation." I have an abundance of evidence in my possession that my purpose in that regard has been fairly well accomplished. So far as I know it has been only the hostile critic that has found it possible to read into the text meanings at variance with my own intentions.

2. I am, perhaps, one of the busiest men within the radius of your acquaintance, and the demands upon my time and strength are of such a nature as to afford me almost no opportunity for the preparation of such a letter as I should like to write, if I write any at all.

3. I am not at all certain that my own views and impressions of Mr. Howe's elaborate criticism of the book will be of either interest or value to the readers of your paper. In this, however, I defer to your own better judgment.

4. The thought of appearing in the role of my own defender, against unjust criticism, is one that is quite out of harmony with all my present inclinations and past experiences.

As I stated to you, it is not my intention to enter the arena of disputation or debate, and I trust this letter will not be construed as a challenge of that nature in any sense. You have asked me to give you my impressions upon a definite subject, and I have promised to do so. That is all.

And here are some of my impressions:

1. Having studied Mr. Howe through the medium of his published articles on the subject of the book, I have been impressed with the conviction that his fundamental purpose has been to discredit the value of the book as far as his natural gentleness of soul would permit.

2. It has appeared to me that his contact with "The Great Psychological Crime" and with Mrs. Huntley's defense of that work, left him with a feeling that in his discussion and criticism of that book he had failed to do himself credit. His attitude toward the new book has impressed me with the feeling that he was unable to divest himself of the old grudge, and for this reason, perhaps, he entered upon his criticism of this later work impelled very largely by the determination to "get even."

3. With one single exception, it has appeared to me that his criticisms have lacked ingenuousness. In the large majority of instances they have impressed me as trivial, and in some even as puerile.

The one exception to which I refer is the interpretation he places upon the figure I have used in Chapter XVII., wherein I refer to the "Parting of Ways" and the two roads, the one leading to the North and the other to the South. I believe this is almost the only figure I have employed in the entire book. And his misinterpretation of it proves once more how impossible it is to indulge in figures of speech without opening the door to misinterpretations and mistakes. This is especially true in a work of science.

But even in this exceptional instance, (while I freely and frankly admit that it might have been better had I followed my custom and kept strictly to a literal method of expression), I am still of the impression that Mr. Howe was more intent upon finding something to criticise than he was in trying to understand the meaning of the author.

This impression is borne out by the significant fact that out of all the letters received by Mrs. Huntley, the Indo-American Book Co. and myself, from readers of the book all over the world—numbering far up into the thousands—not one has ever misinterpreted the meaning of that figure. Mr. Howe stands solitary and alone, so far as I am aware, in the interpretation he has seen fit to place upon that particular figure of speech.

If I could be certain that all those who have read Mr. Howe's criticism would also read the book, I should not hesitate a moment to entrust the matter to their unbiased judgment. But inasmuch as it is practically certain that a considerable number of his readers have never seen the book (and very likely never will), I am impelled to make the following explanation. It may also be of interest to my esteemed critic.

There comes a time in the evolutionary development of every Intelligent Soul when "Self-Control," as one of the essential elements in Nature's Constructive Process, becomes apparent. That is to say, at some time in the course of his development, each and every individual Soul comes to know that he must attain and practice "Self-Control," if he would align himself with the Constructive Principle of Nature. Such realization and consciousness may come to the individual in this life, or it may come to him after he has passed on into the spiritual life. See pp. 271-2.

When the individual reaches this point, he is at the first great "Parting of Ways," whether in this life or in the life beyond.

I believe it is the rare exception, among those who for the first time arrive at this point, to find one who at once turns from his vices and his indulgences and enters immediately upon the life of Self-Control. The many follow the path of "Self-Indulgence"—the Road to the North—long after they have come to know that it is the wrong way.

"Every individual who has arrived at the age of discretion knows how broad and smooth and seductive is the road that leads to self-surrender, self-indulgence and self-destruction. He knows that it is the way which leads downward to the valley of darkness and desolation. There is something in the essential nature of man that tells him all this." (page 277.)

Then follow a number of illustrations which are intended to show "the remarkable genius which intelligent but willful men and women will display, and the astonishing lengths to which they are ready and willing to go, in their efforts to excuse themselves for their lack of Self-Control."

A number of pages are then given to an exposition of what the Great School means by Self-Control (page 289.)

Then, beginning with page 292, an effort is made to place before the student a brief analysis and classification of "the specific lines along which it is necessary for him to exercise Self-Control in order that he may maintain within himself the true spirit and purpose of the Work of Independent Spiritual Unfoldment, and hold himself in proper alignment with the Constructive Principle of Nature in Individual Life."

The classification includes:

1. SUBJECTION.

2. FEAR, (with all its sub-phases.)

3. ANGER, (with all its various phases.)

4. SELF-INDULGENCE, (in all its varied forms.)

The chapter concludes as follows:

"The purpose of the Ethical Section of the General Formulary is to indicate to the student, as far as may be possible, the lines within which such knowledge may be obtained in such manner as to keep within the radius of the Constructive Principle and Process of Nature. Its intent is to save him as many mistakes as possible, and thus to conserve his energies for Constructive Work, as far as may be possible. In the Ethical Section of the General Formulary he has the crystallized experiences of the Masters of Natural Science throughout all the past ages of their scientific labors. If he is wise enough and strong enough to avail himself of the scientific results therein placed before him, it is possible for him to achieve the same results, and with the least possible waste of time, energy and effort, and with the minimum of disappointment, suffering and sorrow. If he is willing to travel the road they have so carefully blazed for him, he may thus save himself both the time and effort, as well as the suffering, incident to finding his own way through a strange wilderness wherein many difficulties and dangers abound."

In the same chapter reference is made to Vol. II. wherein "The Law of Spiritual Gravity" is considered at great length, and wherein also it is made clear that "So long as there remains one aspiration for good, one desire for light, one cry of conscience, one prayer for help, Nature responds and sends her messengers," etc. (Vol. II., page 334.)

This would seem to be sufficient to make clear the fact that Mr. Howe has read into the book a meaning quite foreign to that of its author.

I doubt if there is another reader in all the country who would have found it possible to draw such a conclusion from this chapter as Mr. Howe has done. The whole setting of the work, its relation to the preceding volumes, its context, and its logical deductions would have to be disregarded entirely in order to justify such an interpretation as he has placed upon the figure of the two roads. THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO ATTEMPT WHATEVER ON MY PART TO DETERMINE THE ULTIMATE RELATIVE NUMBER WHO ACHIEVE "MASTERSHIP" AND WHO FAIL.

In the preceding volume it is made as clear as it is possible to express in language, that even though there are those who in spiritual life go down to what SEEMS to be "spiritual death," it is held as an open question as to just what in reality that seeming "spiritual death" means to the individual. It is made clear that there is no intention on the part of the author or the Great School to dogmatize upon that crucial experience of the Soul. Each student is left to draw his or her own conclusions. Unless Mr. Howe is more deficient in memory than would seem to be consistent with his wide learning, he must have had all this in mind when he came to read the chapter of "The Great Work" to which reference is here made.

And now a word concerning his criticism of the analogy I have drawn between "Truth" and "Light."

His original objection was to my statement that: "The presence of one light does not extinguish another light. It only multiplies its intensity and effect." (See page 31.)

He holds that my statement is too broad. But if the reader will take the trouble to read the chapter wherein the analogy appears, (beginning with page 27), he will discover that I designated with the utmost exactness the character and number of lights. First there was the small candle. To this was added the light of an oil lamp. To this result was added the light of an electric light, and to this the light of the sun. The results are stated. Are they true or false?

If Mr. Howe would but confine himself to my illustration he would have found that the analogy is absolutely perfect. He has made it entirely clear to his readers that he does not know what light is. In view of this apparent fact, it would seem to me that his criticism on this point is manifestly an effort to confuse the mind of the reader and deflect it from an intelligent consideration of the real subject under discussion in the book.

On this subject, as well as on that of the two roads, I am entirely content to let the book stand as it is. I do not think that if I were rewriting it I should change a single point to which he has addressed his criticisms.

It is evident that Mr. Howe has his own peculiar definition of what constitutes a "free" Will. The "Independence" to which he refers is not at all the Independence to which I have had reference in the book. Just what his definition is, I have never yet been able to ascertain from anything he has said. The one clear point in his writing upon this subject is that he disagrees with the book.

He strenuously objects to my analysis of the relations between "Will" and "Desire," and if I read his criticism correctly, he holds that the Will is but an automatic instrument of Desire. In his consideration of this theme I observed that he very gracefully ignored the discussion of the subject beginning with the last paragraph of page 242 of the book.

Let me quote the part to which I refer:

"To those who insist that the power of Will is the automatic instrument of Desire, there is one way to put the subject which may help to disclose their sophistry. It is this: The Will (which all agree is the Soul's power of initiative), is either an automatic instrument of Desire, or it is not. In the very nature of things it cannot be both.

"If it is such an automatic instrument, then be good enough to explain why you hold your fellow men and women responsible for their acts and conduct. Also kindly tell us why you pride yourself on the assumption that you are Morally Accountable and Personally Responsible for your acts and conduct. You can give but one reply, and that is: 'Because we are obligated by the law of our being to control our Desires.' But by what power are we to accomplish that end? There is but one power of the individual Soul by which such an obligation can be discharged. That is by the power of Will.

"In other words, we are either Morally Accountable and Personally Responsible, or we are not. We cannot be both. If we are—which you will not hesitate to admit—then it is only because we, as individualized, Intelligent souls, possess in our own right a power by the exercise of which we may govern our acts and conduct, at least within certain limitations. We possess but one such Power. There is but one. That is the power of Will. IT IS ONLY UPON THE BASIS OF ITS SUPREMACY OVER THE EMOTIONS, PASSIONS, IMPULSES AND DESIRES, THAT WE BECOME PERSONALLY RESPONSIBLE OR MORALLY ACCOUNTABLE FOR OUR ACTIONS AND CONDUCT, UNDER THE LAW OF INDIVIDUAL BEING."

If I remember correctly, this same point was raised by Mr. Howe in his discussion of "The Great Psychological Crime" with Mrs. Huntley. I remember also that Mrs. Huntley tried very earnestly and persistently to get him to explain his position in such manner as to enable his readers to understand in exactly what particular he dissented from the position of the author. Either he was unable to do so, or did not deem the matter of sufficient importance to justify the effort. At any rate, I do not believe there is one of his readers to-day who would be able to define his position. On the other hand, I believe the position of the Great School is entirely clear to every reader who has taken the pains to follow the subject as it is elucidated in the three volumes of the Harmonic Series.

The real and fundamental purpose of "The Great Work" does not seem to have made the slightest impression upon Mr. Howe's consciousness. If so, he has surely withheld that fact from his readers.

In "The Great Psychological Crime," an attempt was made to define and elucidate "The Destructive Principle of Nature in Individual Life." In that attempt, hypnotism and mediumship (as those terms were therein carefully defined), were identified as expressions of "The Destructive Principle."

At the same time it was clearly indicated that another volume would follow in which the Constructive Principle would be elucidated with the same scientific exactness.

In Vol. II. it was shown that the "Subjective Psychic Process" involved in hypnotism and mediumship, is a Destructive process. It was clearly indicated that there is a "Constructive Process" and that the next volume of the Series, "The Great Work," would be devoted to an exposition of that Constructive Process. In that Work the author has endeavored to keep his promise, and has devoted all his energies and intelligence to the task of making clear to his readers the difference between "Mediumship" and "Mastership."

As far as might be expedient, I have outlined the "Formulary" by which Mastership may be attained, and the only one by which its attainment is possible. Notwithstanding the antithetical nature of the two processes, I am aware that there are some prominent Spiritualists who are industriously circulating the report that I am a "Medium."

In this connection I desire to suggest a challenge which will prove beyond all question that all such reports are entirely without foundation. It is this:

"I challenge the entire Spiritualistic fraternity to develop a single medium (trance or otherwise), by following the method outlined in "The Great Work" for the development of a Master."

Those who desire to try the experiment may have as much time as they desire for the accomplishment of the task. Whether it be one year or twenty makes no difference to me. If they will but follow the method outlined as being in accordance with the Constructive Principle and Process, they will find that "Subjection" is absolutely impossible. And the more time they devote to the experiment the further they will be from the Subjective state and condition of "Mediumship," as that term has been defined in Vol. II.

Apropos of the assertion of one of your leading Spiritualists to the effect that he has met me personally and found me to be nothing more than a mere Medium, I could relate an incident to which you, Mr. Editor, were a personal witness, which would place the aforsaid leading Spiritualist in a most awkward position.

If I were a medium, I know of no reason why I should deny that fact.

To my own personal knowledge, one of the leading physicians of Chicago who has been under the instruction of this School for the last five years, has, within the last three years, treated close to one hundred cases of subjective insanity (obsession), and without a single failure. Most of these cases have come to him directly from the ranks of Spiritualism.

Another leading physician of the city has taken cases directly from the State Insane Asylum, that have been pronounced hopeless, and has cured them.

These are but a few of the results that are now being obtained by the students of this School in accordance with the Constructive Principle and Process of Mastership.

With greetings and good wishes to you, Mr. Editor, and to your readers, to Mr. Howe and his many friends, and to all lovers of Truth, I beg to subscribe myself, Most cordially and fraternally,

"T. K."

Author of "The Great Psychological Crime" and "The Great Work."

THE GREAT WORK.

Mr. Charles Crane, A Man of Deep Insight in Things Occult and Spiritualistic, Endorses the Work as a Remarkable Book.

"The Great Work." Indo-American Book Co., North Kedzie avenue, Chicago. Price, $2.

This remarkable book from the pen of an unknown author is without doubt the most wonderful book presented to the reading public for many years. A new philosophy or science has been discovered, or, to be more correct, an old philosophy or science, which for centuries was "buried in the rubbish of the temple," has again been brought forth to bless and uplift mankind.

It is impossible in the columns of even a great newspaper like The Herald to adequately and justly review this Great Work. We shall therefore merely touch the high places or beacon lights, which stand out so prominently, and are discussed so fearlessly, that they instinctively arrest the attention of the reader. The author is evidently a man of marvelous psychic power, great intelligence, fearless in his utterances, because absolute "master" of the subjects which he discusses, and we are frank to acknowledge his deductions are to us unassailable and unanswerable, yet, notwithstanding the high moral status scientific value and perfect diction, an air of great modesty pervades every page.

The author is evidently a member, perhaps we should say a "master" in a great school, which he designates "The School of Natural Science — which, concisely defined, in its broadest and most comprehensive meaning of the term nature, includes knowledge of things physical, spiritual, psychical and ethical. It embodies knowledge of the laws, principles, forces, activities and processes which operate within man himself, as well as in the great world of nature without. It is the science of sciences, and is without limitations other than those which mark the ever widening boundaries of increasing knowledge."

There are twenty-six chapters in the book, each chapter complete in itself, yet so dove-tailed into each other that they form a complete whole.

The first chapter contains but four lines and is entitled "Evolution in Operation."

1. Nature evolves a man.

2. Man, co-operating with Nature, evolves a Master.

3. The Master-Man, co-operating with and controlling the forces, activities and processes of Nature, evolves a ——?

Chapter 4. "The Lineal Key," is without doubt the most marvelously interesting thesis from a Masonic standpoint ever written, and no intelligent Mason can afford to pass this book unread.

It is historical and moral, overstepping and overtopping without apparent effort every and all publications heretofore written on this great subject. It demonstrates without a scintilla of doubt that present day Masonry is but the shadow of the ancient work in its conception of morality and lofty aspirations.

The author is evidently a member of this ancient and "Venerable Association," of which present-day Masonry is but an off-shoot. This association or school is a physical entity and is "composed of men who voluntarily associate together for the acquirement and perpetuation of knowledge in the broad and unlimited field of science. They are scattered over the earth, wherever the conditions for the success of their efforts appear to them most favorable, and their students are among the most unobtrusive intelligences in their several communities."

"Their work is carried on very largely in 'the field' and its central lineage and history "cover a consecutive and unbroken chain, backward from the immediate present to a time thousands of years before the Masonic period, and the principle for which it stands, goes back to the very infancy of the human race."

The author intimates that the oldest and most authentic history of the world is in the possession and keeping of this venerable order, and then proceeds to speak of the initiation into the order, of which Jesus was also a member, how long he remained in India studying and absorbing the great moral principles which he presented to the people of India, when he returned; to be finally crucified by those to whom he came bearing the message of truth and "glad tidings." This chapter tells how the "World" was lost, and how it can be regained by the craft today if they will but "live the life." We are informed that Buddha was another member, or "master," in this great school of Philosophy, and that the "teachings of the Prince of India and those of the Prince of the House of David are identical. Their differences are those of method only, and not of substance." The author then proceeds to show how the primitive Christianity of the Nazarene became paganized and destroyed. This chapter gives a more authentic and accurate history of the "ancient craft" than any and the all other books on this subject.

On page 107 the author makes a statement that will arouse the antagonism of mediums and Spiritualists throughout the world. He says: "So far as known to the great school no physical eye has ever seen a spirit, nor looked into the spiritual realms of nature, nor sensed spiritual material in any manner or form whatsoever. In the very nature of things it probably never will."

The author speaks of the spiritual body as a material body, only differing from the physical in degree of refinement and vibratory activity.

The chapter, "Mark of the Master," is truly grand in its conception and word painting. Nothing we have ever read compares with it in beauty of expression. Speaking of these great "Masters of Natural Science," whose school was white and hoary with age when the foundations of the pyramids were laid, he says: "The Masters of Natural Science are not seeking to become popular in any sense. They have the courage to live in obscurity, without offices, honors or emoluments, that they can the more consistently carry out the great work of emancipation. They do not seek the applause of the world, nor strive for leadership. They are neither bashful nor arrogant. Never dogmatic, never arbitrary; never allow themselves to be drawn into public debates—they accept poverty and adversity with serenity and cheerfulness and pursue their purposes with an abiding sense of their personal responsibility."

The "Passing of a Master" is a beautiful tribute of love to his own instructor (a prince of India) in this most wonderful science. The statements in this chapter are so startling, so inconceivable to the ordinary finite mind, that were it not for the absolute sincerity, humility and modesty evident on every page of the book, our credulity would be severely taxed. For instance, on page 436 he says: "The most profound problem of human life, and the most pathetic cry of the human soul, throughout the ages have been the problem and the cry, 'If a man die, shall he live again?' Now and then, however, there has been one whose vision has been clear, and to whom the other shore of life has been distinctly visible. These few have been able to penetrate the darkness of physical obscurity and behold with perfect vision the spiritual world shining clear and strong beyond the dark and troubled waters. Three times within the last twenty years the writer has witnessed the phenomenon of the separation of the spiritual body from the physical in the process of physical death.

"In one of these instances the transit was that of his own and only son. He has witnessed this wonderful transition with the clear vision of independent spiritual light. He knows whereof he speaks." He then proceeds to describe minutely this transition. On page 438, in discussing the ability of a "master" to leave the body at will, and soar into realms of "light and life," he says: "That he is able to make this visual transit at any time, voluntarily and without the aid or co-operation of any other individual human intelligence, incarnate or excarnate. That he is able to converse with the inhabitants of the spiritual world as freely and as naturally as he does with those of the physical." He describes the magnetic field (or the great gulf mentioned in the scriptures), which lies between the physical earth and the first spiritual sphere. The condition of the spirit upon arriving on the other shore. "Hell, Purgatory and Paradise." The law of evolution, animal magnetism, spiritual magnetism, moral accountability, the condition of the infant upon spiritual spheres," etc., etc. The description, page 452, of the separation of the spirit from the physical body is beyond comprehension, yet so simple that a child can understand.

The tribute of love and affection to his instructor in this philosophy is the finest piece of word painting we have ever read. The book closes with a prayer that is beyond compare.

To appreciate this "Great Work" which this book in part represents, requires a personal perusal and conscientious study.

CHARLES CRANE.

MOLLIE FANCHER,

The Brooklyn Enigma.

An authentic statement of facts in the life of Mary J. Fancher, the psychological marvel of the nineteenth century. Unimpeachable testimony of many witnesses. By Abram H. Dailey. With illustrations. Price, cloth, $1.50.

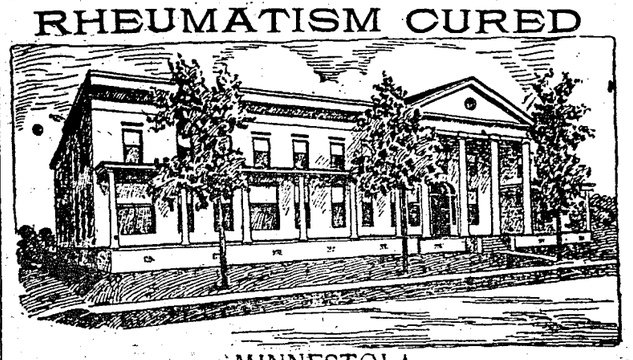
UNCOOKED FOODS,

And How to Live on Them—With Recipes for Wholesome Preparation.

Proper combinations and menus, with the reason uncooked food is best for the promotion of health, strength and Vitality. By Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian. Illustrated.

No one can afford to be without this book. Any one who tries some of the special recipes will discover that proper preparation increases the palatability of food. Learn how and what to cook in order to build and retain the highest degree of normal health by following the recipes of this cook book.

It will simplify methods of living—help to settle the servant question and the financial problems as well as point the way for many to perfect health. Price $1.



FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.

A Remarkable Book.

This is a remarkable work by FATHER CHINIQUY. It exposes even to the minutest details the corruptions that exists in the Church of Rome. It is a work of 832 pages, and should be read as a matter of history by every Spiritualist.

Price, Cloth, $2.25.

RHEUMATISM CURED

MINNESTOLA,

H. D. C. MILLS.

Opposite St. Joseph Sanitarium and Bath House. Mt. Clemmens, Mich.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER

Published Every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street.

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Proprietor

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Matter

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One Year..... $1 00
Six Months..... 50cts
Thirteen Weeks..... 25cts
Single Copy..... 5cts

REMITTANCES:

Remit by Postoffice Money order, Registered Letter or Draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so do not send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Address all letters to J. R. FRANCIS, 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

TAKE NOTICE.

☞ At the expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly write us, and any errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it has been going or the change cannot be made.

TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The price of The Progressive Thinker per year to foreign countries is $2.

SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1907

WORDS OF CAUTION.

You should not send money in a letter. You may do so a dozen times safely, and then the next remittance may be lost or stolen. Secure a postal order for five cents, and then you are perfectly safe, and will save yourself annoyance and trouble.

TAKE NOTICE.

All books advertised in The Progressive Thinker can be obtained at this office. Express charges or postage prepaid at the price named unless otherwise stated.

THE N. S. A. CONVENTION.

Full reports of the proceedings of the late N. S. A. convention in Chicago can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Mary T. Longley, 600 Pennsylvania avenue S. E., Washington, D. C.

Words of Cheer and Truth.

A lady of Chicago wrote the President of a Spiritual Society in a neighboring city conveying the news of the death of her only child, a daughter of eleven years of age. She said in her letter the loss of her loved girl had nearly taken her own life. She inquired, in substance:

"Do you think there is a possibility of getting a message from my darling? We are very anxious to gain some knowledge of the other world, and would be so glad to acquire truthful information in regard to it."

The afflicted mother-heart was visible in every line of the letter, which at our request, was loaned us after our friend had replied in his own language. There are other hearts that bleed beside this mother, so we venture our condolence to all who thus suffer the pangs of separation from dear ones.

The loved girl is not dead! It was only the tenement she lately occupied that was vacated. She went to join her kindred and friends in spirit life. When a favorable opportunity occurs she will joyfully return, and tell of the pleasures enjoyed in her new home. She will assure her parents she still lives, and that in due time she will delight to welcome them to fields of wider vision where there will be no more sorrow or painful parting, and will be freed from grief, and the anxieties of mortal life.

Those parents should not believe, as the churches teach, that the soul slumbers in the tomb to awaken at a final judgment; for it never enters that abode of darkness and silence. On the contrary, when the heart ceased to beat the immortal made its escape, not to journey to a distant heaven. That heaven is here and all around us. The material of which it is composed is not visible to unaided mortal eye.

We have in classic story a beautiful exemplification, not of our faith, but of our positive knowledge. In the drama of "ion," credited to Euripides, perhaps incorrectly, who lived 450 years before our era, the instinct of immortality, so eloquently uttered by the death-doomed Greek, finds a deep response in every thoughtful breast. When about to be sacrificed to Fate, his beloved Clemanthe inquired, "Shall we meet again?" Ion replied: "I have asked that dreadful question of the hills
That look eternal; of the flowing streams
That lucid flow forever; of the stars,
Amid whose fields of azure my raised spirit
Hath trod in glory: all were dumb;
but now,
While I thus gaze upon thy loving face,
I feel the love that kindles through its beauty
Can never wholly perish. We shall meet
Again, Clemanthe."

Here was only hope, inspired by love, of immortality. Spiritualists have not only that hope with demonstrated facts, imparting positive knowledge that what we call death does not occur with the departed breath, but that with it went the spirit that vitalized that body; that that spirit carries with it sublimated matter, which is animated with life, and recollection of its mortal past, with ability at will, under favorable conditions, to hold communion with its still earth-bound loved ones.

The spirit of dear little Ava, no longer manacled by earth incumbrances, will certainly communicate with its adored mother.

There is work that is work and there is play that is play; there is play that is work and work that is play. And in only one of these lies happiness.—Gelett Burgess.

Honest error is to be pitied, not ridiculed.—Chesterfield.

Another Ex-Christian Author.

Ex-Rev. Joseph Symes, formerly of the Church of England, whose learning and thought compelled him to withdraw from the church, in a late brochure entitled, "The New Testament Manuscripts," published in London, and just received by the writer, makes some interesting statements, which may be instructive to our inquirers who wished facts in regard to the "discovery of ancient Christian writings." A page of quotations for The Progressive Thinker could be made with profit, but space will only permit a few very pointed passages, broken from their connections, fully confirmed by the writer with sustaining evidence. We quote:

"The most eager defender of the faith has never been able to show when, where, or by whom, any of the New Testament books were written.

"It is not the poor people, nor the masses of the people, to whom we owe the preservation of the New Testament; but to the most villainous set of men ever known, and men whose prime tenets are supported by these very books. * * When we reflect upon the forgeries and lies the dominant sects have always resorted to on occasion, we shall see that anything coming from them must be regarded with the strongest suspicion until independent evidence can be obtained.

"I assert without fear of contradiction, that the whole round of the gospel is an unfounded superstition; that the gospels are frauds and forgeries; that the New Testament is a book of uncertain date; that instead of having been written by eye-witnesses of things related, no proof exists that the book is yet so much as one thousand years old.

"I assert the New Testament manuscripts now existing cannot be traced back to any known author, writer or copier; and it is impossible to discover in what country any one of them was produced. And it is impossible to fix, within hundreds of years, the date when any of them was written.

"During the last sixty years every known corner has been ransacked for New Testament manuscripts; the most strenuous efforts have been made by Christian critics, armed with all the weapons learning could give, to connect the New Testament with the alleged apostles and Jesus. All such efforts have hopelessly failed. No record, no scrap of the originals can be found; no material can be discovered out of which to construct a historical bridge to connect the oldest known manuscript with the apostles, or with Jesus."

This learned author then cites orthodox Christian authors in support of his propositions.

Mr. Symes quotes from Smith's Bible Dictionary, article, "New Testament," wherein he says: "No manuscript of the New Testament of the first three centuries remains. * * History affords no trace of the pure apostolic originals."

In comparing these quotations with the text in Smith's Bible Dictionary, our eye fell upon this passage, which we marked in a former reading; see p. 2125, Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s edition of 1889, 2d column:

"We are in a position to consider the extent and nature of the variations which exist in different copies. It is impossible to estimate the number of these exactly, but they cannot be less than ONE HUNDRED and TWENTY THOUSAND in all."

We omit numerous citations, all in the same direction, then this learned scholar concludes this division of his subject by saying:

"The New Testament must be set down as a FORGERY OF LATE TIMES. How late cannot as yet be ascertained. All the round of dogmatic theology arose and was produced in times of controversy. And it is plain the New Testament was forged by the squabbling Christians, for the purpose of defending themselves and demolishing their opponents. Yes, and the book itself is plentifully sprinkled over with evidences of this fact."

Christians meet these truthful statements of scholars with the charge of heresy, infidel, atheist. Mr. Symes was a churchman, a clergyman, when his scholarship discovered the facts of which he wrote. He voluntarily threw off his sarcedotal robes, and wrote what he knew. He is not met by scholars rushing forward to overthrow or even to controvert his statements; but persons of very limited education, without access to any literature on the subject, other than the Bible itself, are ready to combat those who have devoted a score or more years to the most critical investigation of the question in controversy, and have expended a considerable fortune in acquiring libraries which they have read with care and thought, intent only to know the truth. The investigator's task would be less difficult if the great libraries of the world had not been burned by Christians, to suppress the evidence of their frauds, just as they burnt every bold thinker who had the bravery to tell and teach the right, but,

Truth is coming up the hills of Time,
With Spiritualism in its van,
Wait a little longer.

Thoughts Breed.

Hatred, envy, malice, jealousy and revenge all have children. Every bad thought breeds another, and each of these goes on and on, ever reproducing itself, until a world is peopled with their offsprings.—O. S. Marden.

People may outgrow natural ignorance, but ignorance carefully cultivated, polished, propagated, and called divine truth, can rarely be outgrown, because it paralyzes the power of growth.—Moncure D. Conway.

Haunted Houses.

The secular papers are filled with accounts of haunted houses. The latest story of the kind relates to the home of prisoner Thaw's mother, at Pittsburg, Pa. Five years ago a woman visiting in the family, suicided. She was the wife of a Presbyterian minister of Kentucky, and relative of Mrs. Thaw. The home is known as Lyndhurst. It it said Mrs. Thaw has declined to live in the house since the hanging in the bath room, and now she offers it for sale. She wishes to escape the unearthly noises which rob the home of all enjoyment.

What mean those reports of haunted houses? Are they real? or the result of a disordered brain?

If possible, accounts of them were more frequent from sixty to seventy five years ago than now. Suspected murders were frequently revealed by them. A case of the kind occurring in a backwoods neighborhood, in Ashtabula county, Ohio, in 1840 or 1841, is fresh in the writer's memory, and, less the introduction of the alphabet by which the murdered peddler was able to tell the story of the slaughter, it has many features in common with that at Hydesville a few years later. The body was packed in a pork barrel, and wagoned to Ashtabula harbor, from which point it was shipped by lake to Detroit, where it remained a long time, without a claimant; then the barrel was opened, and the dismembered remains were revealed. The assassin fled the county before the ghostly revelations were made; but the principal assassin, under an assumed name, was hanged a few years later at Davenport, Iowa, for the murder of Col. Davenport, from whom the city derived its name. Though not hearing the noises, which led to discovery of the facts, yet the writer, with hundreds of others aided in search for the body; but finally evidence was developed by living persons, that a barrel was loaded in a lumber wagon, and was driven to the harbor as stated, by the two brothers, the morning after the German peddler was seen at the house, and was never seen alive after.

All these reports of haunted houses, if not purposely fiction, aid in demonstrating that there is a continuity of life and memory, after the spirit has left its mortal tenement, and they cannot be accounted for on any other hypothesis than that furnished by Spiritualism.

Longfellow told us:

"All houses wherein men have lived and died
Are haunted houses. Through the open doors
The harmless phantoms on their errands glide,
With feet that make no sound upon the floors.
"We meet them at the doorway, on the stair,
Along the passage they come and go,
Impalpable impressions on the air,
A sense of something moving to and fro."

Perhaps it is well for the happiness of mortality so few return to tell of the great wrongs they have suffered at the hand of violence, and from their fellow man.

Cubans Pray for Rain.

Havana, April 22.—Prayers for rain were offered in churches throughout the island Suunday. No rain has fallen in six months. The country is parched, many cattle are dying and forest fires are devastating various sections.

It may be a good thing to pray for rain. If all the weather indications for rain are favorable, then is the time to begin, and then comes direction from the head of the church to wrestle with the heavenly powers for the liquid element. It is a trick of the demagogue.

Frequently one party desires rain, or some other favor, and another party needs the opposite, so the supervisor of the heavenly weather department exercises his own choice in the premises. Let the petitioners agree among themselves as to their needs, and wait the favorable opportunity, then, possibly, the showers will come in great profusion.

Two powerful armies are about to engage in battle. Each is sure his cause is just, and the chaplains of each, ambitious to earn his salary, appeal to God for help. If endowed with human emotions he is not willing to incur the hatred of either party, so he keeps hands off until one side is victor, when he joins forces with the victors and gets a good share of the glory.

It has come to that, in these last days, other things being equal, that the strongest and best directed battalions are expected to gain the battles, as Providence is very generally enlisted on that side.

A Truthful Concession.

At the National Congress of Church Clubs in session in Washington on April 17, Mr. Butler of Pennsylvania, one of the delegates, declared, "75 per cent of the present day sermons could be dispensed with to the betterment of the church."

The news dispatch says:

"The utterance was warmly applauded. It was delivered during the discussion of the question: "Why men do not go to church."

Until the church eliminates its barbarian hell from its creed, and its doctrine of HATE, as taught by their founder, 100 per cent of the sermons can be dispensed with in the interest of good morals.

Men are often capable of greater things than they perform. They are sent into the world with bills of credit, and seldom draw to their full extent. —Horace Walpole.

The House of Pestilence and Crime.

The House of Mourning Dressed in a Sombre Garb.

There have been two HOUSES in the ranks of Spiritualism for some time—the HOUSE of PESTILENCE and CRIME, and the HOUSE of MOURNING, the latter draping itself in a sombre dress, expressive of deep regrets because the former existed sowing the seeds of craftiness, deception, fraud, spiritual blindness and degradation.

All fakes reside in the HOUSE of PESTILENCE and CRIME, and all will finally be exposed.

Read another chapter in regard to the Moores, as follows:

To the Editor:—After the exposure in Brooklyn, the "Rev." Hugh Moore, at the request of a few of his followers, moved to the now notorious 120 W. 13th st, New York City, where he re-commenced his practice of fraud on a more extensive scale. Shortly after the commencement in the new place he was joined by Daniel Manning Polseley, who graduated under the "Rev. Dr.'s" able teachings, and laterly became a trumpet and materializing medium, and from October, 1906 until the public exposure of the "Moores" took place. Polseley held his seances at 42 E. 21st street, City, and had quite a number of followers, some of whom left the "Moores" because of this "Young medium's marvellous abilities."

From the beginning of Mrs. Strickland's career as a "spirit", the number of confederates averaged from six to eight, including Polseley and and Ferdinand E. Weiboldt. They managed to escape notice by arriving at Moore's house several hours previous to the time of the seance, and and generally left there shortly before the seance was broken up, or an hour or so afterwards.

Those of Moore's followers who may happen to read this will remember the large pipe organ which sat across the angle at the head of seance room, right up against the "Cabinet." It was from behind this organ that the "Spirits" entered the Cabinet. The "spirits'" dressing rooms were situated on the third floor of the house, and there they stayed until Mrs. Moore pressed the button and rang the buzzer in the Spirit Regions upstairs, which was the signal for work.

The system that the Moore's employed was as follows: Mrs. Moore usually came down stairs from seven o'clock until eight, when she went back up stairs, to supposedly waken the "Rev. Dr." who frequently took a "nap" to fit himself for the evening's labors. While upstairs she secreted on her person the "Black Jack" which played a prominent part in the Brooklyn expose; also the door knob and bolt, the use of which I will explain later. They then came down and mingled with the people. The seance room had but one entrance, as the other three doors were "locked" and could not be used as the seats were up against them; one of the doors was right behind the organ, and I doubt if many of the people who frequented the Moore's knew of its existence. This was the door used by the spirits.

Shortly after eight o'clock on seance night, Moore would announce that it was time to commence, gave his usual lecture, at which oftentimes he assured the people that he was genuine, honest, and upright, repeating Lincoln's saying, "You can fool some of the people all the time, all the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time," or something to this effect.

After this Mrs. Moore entered the cabinet, and the room was plunged into total darkness, Mrs. Ida Cortada started the organ. Mrs. Moore then went behind the organ, put the bolt in the door, opened it, and let in the spirits, the music drowning whatever noise was made in the audience. After a little more music, and singing the green light was turned up, and the materialization commenced. Very few people thought of looking behind the organ for a door, and so for a long time, by clever talk and ingenious methods, the "Rev. Dr." duped the public. Mrs. Strickland, commencing her career as a spirit in the House of Deception about the 5th of December, 1906. She came there at the instance of the "Rev. Dr." who asked her to come and perform the duties of housekeeper in his household. Shortly after her arrival he proposed that she should become a party to his notorious tricks. Mrs. Strickland, however, did not take kindly to this proposition, but later, under the stress of circumstances, best known to herself, consented. Moore held seances on Monday evening, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and night, and Thursday evening; Friday, the Ben Schafer Physical Broad Light Seance (which I will treat in a later article, showing how the names of the dead were obtained for tests given in the Lyceum); on Sunday afternoon a materializing seance, and evening lecture and tests at the Berkley Lyceum, 44th street and Fifth avenue, City, making in all, six materializing and one Physical seance every week, and drawing on an average $35.00 per seance. You can see by these figures that the "Rev." Hugh made quite a comfortable living.

Mrs. J. W. Barker had a private seance very often, at which real Indians materialized; these Indians, two male and two female, were engaged by Moore for the Barker Seances; they belonged to the band of Indians at the Coney Island show. They frequently performed the famous Snake Dance, and many other dances which charmed J. W. and his friends. These "spirit" Indians initiated the following people into the "Spirit Indian Tribe": J. W. Barker, Mrs. L. Barker, Miss Zoe", and Mrs. Etta L. Taylor. On one occasion, one of the Indians Big Moose (his name being Dan Redeagle) e to show his marvellous powers, promised to materialize thousands of dollars worth of real gold nuggets; this, however, did not fully come to pass.

A few days before the seance at which this marvellous materialization was to take place, J. W. Barker happened to visit a Wednesday afternoon seance, which visit proved fatal so far as the "gold" nugget show was concerned. The "Rev. Dr's." father, Charles Moore, had been appointed gold maker, and on this afternoon he thought he had better begin work on the gold nuggets, and have them on hand in time. Now, as all the people were engaged hugging and kissing their "spirit" friends in the seance room, and everything nice and quiet, Charles retired to the back garden with about a couple of quarts of nice sized, clean cinders, and proceeded to cover them with gold paint. The time passed quickly and Charles had almost finished when he suddenly raised his eyes heavenward in the direction of the Library windows, which faced the back, and to his consternation there beheld J. W. Barker paying particular attention to the materialization of the gold nuggets that Big Moose promised. J. W. said something quite loud, and I suppose something to himself also, and then quickly left the house. The scene which followed between the "Dr." and his father beggars' description. Mr. Barker did not return to the Moores for some time afterwards, but when he did return the "Rev." Hugh talked him back into belief, and he continued a believer until the exposure at the Lake.

One of the many ways Moore had of obtaining money from his believers was by marrying them to the departed "spirits" of their husbands, wives, and sweethearts; on one occasion he received $15.00 from an elderly lady believer, whom he married to the supposed "spirit" of her dead husband. This is but one of the many devices he employed in separating the people who put so much faith in him, and their hard earned dollars.

Mrs. Strickland's brother was the "spirit husband" in the above case. For the exclusive benefit of Col. Chas. McArthur, I will give the instance of Mrs. Strickland's last appearance as a spirit. On the second Thursday of November, 1906, D. M. Polseley held a materializing seance in 32 E. 21st street, City. At this seance Mrs. Strickland appeared as the Colonel's wife, and he was delighted, thanked the cabinet guides, and commented on the voice and form being the same as appeared at the Moore's. Mrs. Challoner received the spirit of her sister Nellie, and also made the same remarks. Mrs. Strickland sat in the outer circle as a visitor, and when the lights were put out, entered the cabinet, and personated the spirit forms.

I have a little more to state in connection with D. M. Polseley, materializing medium, in a later letter.

R. H. CROWE.

New York City, N. Y.

Somebody Defines a Miracle as a Big Lie.

The miracle of the translation of water into wine, through the grape, is a natural process common in every age of the world, and in every grape-growing country. Is it possible some philosopher of ye olden time, fictitiously dressed up this miracle of nature—for such it is—and located the event in Cana, of Galilee, nearly nineteen hundred years ago? If so he did no more than was common to those earlier times; for exaggeration, hyperbole and allegory were almost universal among the literati of those distant ages. And it is very evident the practice is not yet obsolete. If Crishna could lift mountains, and use them for umbrellas, why not a Jesus be credited with the lesser miracle?

EXAMINE IT CAREFULLY.

Examine The Progressive Thinker from PAGE TO PAGE with a critical eye, and see the vast amount of reading matter therein of GREAT INTEREST to every reflective mind. All the prominent Spiritualists recognize the important fact that The Progressive Thinker LEADS in everything pertaining to Spiritualism. It is the OFFICIAL ORGAN of all the State Associations. It keeps you posted in everything pertaining to the N. S. A. The one who does not read it, is not competent to talk with those who do on spiritualistic and occult subjects. All this information is furnished one year for the small sum of one dollar.

Cumulative Evidence of Pagan Origin.

The title Pontifex Maximus, meaning in English, "Great Bridge Builder," applied to the Pope of the Roman hierarchy, is said to have been derived from the fact that the first bridge over the Tiber was constructed and consecrated by the high priest of pagan Rome, after which the expression was used as a figure of speech, it being the priest's omission to build a bridge for souls to pass over to heaven. Following the time of Tiberius, soon after the commencement of our era, the title was adopted as a matter of course by all the Roman emperors, as it had been by many of them in earlier centuries, Julius and Augustus Caesar being thus designated, because they were the heads of the pagan churches, as well as of civil power. This title was transferred to the Christian Pope when the old pagan power gave way to the intriguing priesthood, who, in the name of Christianity, unurped the prerogatives of the older faith. This theory is confirmed when we find the names of the minor gods of Roman Paganism in the Catholic calendar as canonized saints, and is additional proof that Catholicism in its inception was but reconstructed paganism.

In wonder all philosophy [say religion] began, in wonder it ends, and admiration fills up the interspace; but the first wonder is the offspring of ignorance, the last is the parent of adoration.—Coleridge.

What The N. S. A. Has Done.

The Good Work Accomplished by the National Spiritualists' Association has been of great value and signifieance, and we take great pleasure in presenting the statement of the efficient Secretary, Mrs. M. T. Longley.

The attention of all Spiritualists who are such from conviction and not merely for personal gain, is directed to the following facts:

In various sections of the country persons of little psychic power, or none at all, who poise as mediums, are industriously circulating the report that the N. S. A. has not done, and is not doing anything of direct benefit to mediums. In reply to such willful misrepresentations we give what every Spiritualist should know, what is shown by the financial records of our Association.

Two hundred and fifty dollars were appropriated for the defense of Mrs. Stella A. Ross and Mary K. Emmett of Seattle, which was the only financial aid given those ladies in their legal contests with the officials of that city.

One hundred and fifty dollars were given to aid in payment of fines levied upon George E. and Mrs. Maud Chesbro, well known mediums of Los Angeles, Cal.

At the present time there are eleven superannuated mediums upon our pension rolls, whose monthly allowance aggregates fourteen hundred dollars per annum.

Since June, 1902, eight thousand four hundred and forty-eight dollars and forty-nine cents have been disbursed solely for the relief of needy mediums.

WHAT IS THE N. S. A. DOING? is a question flippantly asked by captious critics. Besides the foregoing these additional figures have no mean significance.

Since November 1st, 1901, The N. S. A. has paid out two thousand and twenty dollars and forty-one cents as expenses incurred in sustaining the wills of deceased Spiritualists in several States, of which no portion has been returned to our treasury.

Up to October, 1905, eighteen hundred dollars had been appropriated to aid the Morris Pratt Institute, the same being voted by the delegates at our annual Conventions.

During the past five years the N. S. A. has paid out of its general fund five thousand eight hundred and twenty-five dollars more than its collections for missionary work, to support missionaries in the country at large.

DANGER SIGNALS in our Cause are waving in many sections. Bills hostile to mediumship have been introduced the past winter in the Legislatures of twenty different States. The same spirit of antagonism has been manifested by various city councils. Kansas City has raised its annual license for mediums to three hundred dollars. Salt Lake City has fixed its license at one hundred and twenty dollars; Seattle repealed its license ordinance, and thereby left our mediums amenable to the vagrancy laws of the State of Washington. Los Angeles has raised its license for mediums from one hundred and eighty dollars to six hundred dollars per annum.

Such grave injustice to our mediums calls for serious thought by every Spiritualist.

It is the height of folly for Spiritualists to deliberately conceal known deception by mediums, under the idea that it is better for our Cause. The daily press or the swindled victims of the tricksters will soon or late uncover the actual conditions before the public, to our lasting detriment.

IT IS SUICIDAL for Spiritualists to be ever ready to apologize for proven trickery, because that course encourages a continuance of the obnoxious practice. There was never a good Cause that suffered by publicity; never a bad one that did not thrive by privacy.

We must aid in drawing the line in our cities between genuine mediums and the hordes of advertising Madames, Professors, thinly veneered Hindoos and all other such grafters, else OUTRAGED PUBLIC SENTIMENT will do it for us in an undiscriminating manner.

Every member of the present Official Board of N. S. A. is a believer in physical phenomena, and the friend of genuine mediums of any and every phase; representations to the contrary are either made by the ignorant, or by those who seek to mask their own trickery behind falsehood and personal vilification of others.

The wisdom of changing our 1907 Convention from Los Angeles to Washington is borne out by present conditions and the outlook for the future. The probability of special rates to the Jamestown Exposition, with privilege of stopover tickets to Washington, will no doubt so cheapen transportation as to swell the attendance at Convention from all parts of the country. The great expense of the trip to the Pacific Coast would have taken over one thousand dollars from the N. S. A. treasury for the transportation thither of its official board, while the inability of State and local Auxiliaries to pay the expense of their delegates thereto, as well as of many individuals to bear the same burden for themselves out of their own pockets, would have made the Convention in Los Angeles in greater degree than ever, a meeting of proxies rather than of actual delegates.

Calm consideration and cooler judgment will convince the Spiritualists of every section that the best interests of the N. S. A. and of the Cause at large have been greatly advanced by the change to Washington.

The foregoing is submitted for publication by order of the N. S. A. Official Board.

MARY T. LONGLEY,
Secretary.

Uplifting Process Going On Everywhere.

At a meeting of the Association of American Medical Colleges in this city last week, it was declared by some of the members that three-fourths of the Doctors in this country were not fitted with the necessary qualifications to make them competent practitioners.

This age demands education, and everywhere the uplifting process is going on. Conditions our forefathers were satisfied with are now relegated into the background. A committee of the American Medical Association has watched the graduates of every medical school in the United States for the past three years, and it has secured ample evidence to prove that many of the smaller medical schools turn out a very inferior grade of doctors. The fact is that they have tried to run their schools from the sole revenue of the tuition received from the students, and this is only sufficient in these days to pay a small fraction of the expense required to conduct them in the proper manner, and therefore the teaching facilities were curtailed and inferior doctors the natural result.

But the doctors themselves, since their organization is getting stronger, are becoming more like a Trades Union, and the medical societies are used as a personal advertising method for the high priced specialists. Medical men will never fulfill their high calling properly until they comply with their altruistic motive of teaching preventive medicine and hygiene, and this they will not do until they are prompted from a religious standpoint.

In this connection it might be well to call attention to Dr. Hager's suggestion in a recent issue of The Progressive Thinker, for Spiritualists to take up this matter of a hygienic teaching in a small way, at their school at Whitewater, and thus prepare their preachers for the practical work of what must ultimately come, to teach the people how to live properly so that they may enjoy good health and live to a ripe old age.

Religion must always be something emotional, and the culture of emotion is not carried on advantageously in ordinary school-teaching. The system that is best for securing the intellectual element is not best for securing the emotional element.—Bain.

LOVE.

Fill all your life with loving deeds,
Dropping all strife, leaving all creeds,
For naught but love will bring you light,
When you have wandered into night.

There are but few who live the thought
Of what the life of Jesus taught;
His every act was one of love;
That was his teachings from above.

Some think he gave his precious life
To save the world from sin and strife;
He teaches us his life was given,
For love, to teach the law of Heaven.

Not by the blood he shed so free,
But that his earth loved ones might see
How he was slain on Calvary,
And yet could live and conscious be.

It was for love he suffered all,
It was for love he gave the call
To each to follow in his way,
And work for others day by day.

We are, as Jesus was of old,
Oftentimes shunned and treated cold,
Being so oft misunderstood,
When we but mean to act for good.

But follow close his law of love,
It sweetly leads one high above
The petty cares and ills of life,
When there is more or less of strife.

If you by one mistreated feel,
And all your thoughts are hard as steel,
Then let the light of love come in,
And soften them, cast out the sin.

For to yourself they bring but strife,
Causing unhappiness in your life;
When thoughts of love will bring to you
All that is beautiful and true.

So try to live a life of love,
Asking for help from those above,
For they have learned the lesson true,
That love is life. Dear ones, adieu.

MRS. L. M. ROBERTS.
Riverside, Cal.

TAKE NOTICE.

Mass-Meeting of Spiritualists and Liberalists.

A New York State Mass-Meeting is to be held in the City of Buffalo, at Spiritualist Temple, corner Jersey and Prospect streets, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, 1907.

Many prominent speakers and mediums, including several officers of the State Association, will take part in the meeting. A fine musical program fill be rendered at each sesion.

Each and every worker in the Spiritualist field is invited to unite with the State Association in making this will be rendered at each session.

H. W. RICHARDSON, Pres.